Somebody did a golden deed;
Somebody proved a friend in need;
Somebody sang a beautiful song;
Somebody smiled the whole day long;
Somebody thought, "'Tis sweet to live;"
Somebody said, "I'm glad to give;"
Somebody fought a valiant fight;
Somebody lived to shield the right.

RABBINICAL SCHOLARSHIP

II.

You, dear editor, as well as many of your readers, who are constantly finding fault with the "half baked," as you term them, may reply to this analysis of the condition actually prevailing, by claiming that the Rabbis make their congregations such as they are. Far from acceding to this, we should say "like congregation, like rabbi."

Picture to yourself a young graduate whether from orthodox or reform seminary taking charge of his first congregation. In the smaller cities the members are kept together by pressure of public opinion. The Jews wish to have something to show to the Christians and sentiment does the rest. Of religious feeling there is little. Of Jewish learning there is next to nothing. Of respect for authority, for a religious code, there is less than nothing.

On the other hand, at every opportunity, in and out of season, the Rabbi is expected to lecture on liberal doctrine, so as to include the Christian, attract his attention and have him attend the service in the synagogue. There is so much flattery implied by attendance of this kind, that the Rabbi's influence and success is gauged by it.

The "doctor" must also listen to the oft repeated and familiar cry "topics of the day," "give us the topics of the hour." In his laudable and natural ambition to succeed, the young Rabbi preaches a form of liberalism, in which ethics is the keystone, the fatherhood of God and brotherhood of man the two sides of the arch. He becomes a lecturer. In this wise there is born the preacher of general truths, of glittering generalities.

Should the Rabbi endeavor to quote Hebrew, speak of Moses too often, include the names of the Patriarchs in his discourses, he is accused of partiality for old topics, for the Bible and out of accord with the times. The young people profess not to like his addresses and the elders begin to look around for a more modern successor, according to their taste and liking.

Should he however begin to grow popular by his choice of subjects and treatment of them, he is heralded abroad as a savior of Judaism, and, of course, he is highly pleased with this designation. Can such a one who thus interprets the wishes of his constituents reconcile himself to the thought that he must court unpopularity by going counter to the demand for timely essays and beautiful lectures? He begins to lay aside his Hebrew works, he grows rusty in such branches as appear obsolete to his members and societies.

Were all men alike gifted, they could all become like Dr. Hirsch of Chicago,—great in the power of thought and eloquence of diction. But fortunately or unfortunately this is not the case, and Dr. Hirsch can still command the highest salary and be in demand at the same time, solely by the virtue of this unique combination.

The average young graduate takes his place in the line of the mediocre, or the successful ones, relying upon his individual gift to keep him in line or advance him.

The main fact to be considered however is that the people want a certain kind of discourses, and, remember, please, they are not the kind that the classic German Rabbi preached, nor yet those that the perennially invoked fathers of reform on this continent preached. An Einhorn or Hirsch would, we dare say, prove failures in the very congregations which they left before their death. We will go even further and say that they could scarcely with satisfaction to themselves or their constituents, fill the pulpits of many small congregations which the younger men fill acceptably in most cases.

Who are to be blamed for these conditions? Perhaps the incumbents of the pulpits to day? Did they produce existing conditions? Had they a hand in bringing about this state of affairs? To a very slight extent, if at all! When they appeared on the scene, they found nothing as it should be. The reputations of some Rabbis whom they displaced were a blot upon the escutcheon of Rabbi, a disgrace to the title of teacher and a reflection upon Jews generally. The Sabbath schools were in a chaotic state. The people had nothing but evil stories to tell of those whom they should have held in respect. The pulpit work was more than unattractive, repellant and of a disagreeably foreign savor. It was probably owing to such conditions that people began to distinguish Rabbis by a remark of this kind which may now and then be heard: "Well, Dr. So and So is a gentleman anyway."

In the larger cities genuine Rabbis, men of character and unquestioned names, held sway. They represented either scholarship or some other claim to general recognition. But did they catch the trend of the time and attempt to fit themselves into it? Then why is that the generation which we might call their own, the generation which grew up during the period of their activity, the generation which should have been wholly influenced by such men as Hirsch and Einhorn, the most illustrious men of their day in their profession, why, we ask, is that generation indifferent to Judaism, removed from the synagogue, disclaiming their part in promoting the heritage of Israel? Their congregations came near being stranded, losing members by death, and gaining no new ones, and losing in attendance more and more every year. The annual losses of interest and friendliness for the temple in cities where the population was daily making great leaps, cannot be measured.

Was it under the administration of the younger men that the Ethical Culture Society was founded and rapidly acquired adherents, that Ingersollism began to be a refuge for the younger generation, that disbelief grew and waxed strong, that atheism and agnosticism weaned its hundreds away from the fold, that intermarriages by the score claimed its votaries among the ranks of Jews? When was all this machinery taking and the increase in congregational life arrested? Was it not under the reign of scholarship in the pulpits of American Jewish congregations?

Answer this! G.

IN YORKVILLE JEWISH SOCIETY.

To Seventy-ninth Street, the first of the several wide streets pre-empted by the fringe of our Jewish aristocracy, was given the distinguished honor of contributing the subject of these few impressions to our Yorkville Vanity Fair; and if that thoroughfare had no other claims to be featured save with this, it would still hold its high place in the esteem of the other Seventies. From the first springday they espied him walking, in his jaunty gait, Brummel-like to the Mall, they knew by the unconscious fluttering of their hearts that an important and all-absorbing chapter in the continuous serial story of "Young Men We Know," had just begun; for surely he had come; had seen and completed the proverbial trinity popularly ascribed to as being original with our Cæsar.

They—who? Why the young women of the vicinity. In the bright lexicon of T— every word seemed to be fraught with the charming atmosphere of the gentler; whether it be in the humdrum humor involved in the prosaic occupation of convincing a customer of the obvious superiority of his brand of goods, or involubly discussing the merits and demerits of the latest play; the different roles, outrageously handled by some of the players; the lamentable lack of the true dramatic spirit, etcetera.

To write down his name as Taffy would hardly serve sufficiently as a ruse for his numerous acquaintances, who would instantly recognize his mobile features here; and yet being so fair to look upon and moreover being so firmly identified with his never-to-be forgotten rendition of "Svengali" in the once famous "Trilby," there appears some plausible excuse in this substitution for the real article.

To recount his career in the histrionic field would mean a volume filled with recitations and imitations of the different celebrities of the decade; would mean to have the gentleman produce his famous collection of programme (religiously kept) of all the plays presented in New York and vicinity during the same length of time; would mean a table at Terrace Garden, his usual rendezvous, with a sitting position in front of his favorite brand for several hours: for be it here solemnly proclaimed that Taffy has not missed a single Saturday matinee in all these many theatrical seasons.

Those who have never heard Taffy recite are indeed objects of pity; (did I hear some day, envy?) whilst the unfortunate one with the courage to confess to an ignorance of his Svengali act might just as well count himself as one out of the world; yea, even as unto Oblivion. Go out where rolls the Old Ocean on the board walk shore of Astoria; in the Colonnade, the Waldorf or the West End, and they will tell you of his victories gained and conquests made on their spacious verandahs and in the Park's cozy nooks and conveniently romantic babbling books. Or ride yourself over to effective West End, Long Branch; and they will in awed whispers recount how he once in solitary triumph took possession of the ball room floor and trod the dreamy waltz with one of society's gayest ones; Taffy, having always been imbued with a Pickwickian sense of the fitness of things.

Lose yourself at the Annual Reunion of "Our own people" on the occasion of the New Year's Ball of the Ladies' Fuel and Aid Society, and you will still feel his presence and when sighted he will invariably be surrounded by a bevy of beautiful buds of Society's garden; the admired of all, the envied of the less favored wallflowers; for, next to dear Broadway from Forty second to Twenty third Streets on an Autumnal Saturday afternoon there is really no place wherein Taffy is more at home than on a ball room floor; no place where his delightful personality and gentlemanly bearing is afforded fairer scope than in the framework of a crowded ballroom, the incessant buzz of the dancers, the radiant faces of the ladies, and the bright electric bulbs overhead which seem to vie in brilliancy with his Chesterfieldian manner and grace.

The trail of shattered hopes and what might have beens doth in sooth extend from Long Acre to Madison Square, and there it marks a turn and proceeds northward again on the other side to Thirty-fourth Street.

These and more could be narrated of the gentleman with the saccharine cognomen; how on a recent visit to Tannersville, that Elysium of Matrimonial Aspirations, where his fame had preceded him, he allowed himself to be coaxingly inveigled to a scheme for an alleged entertainment. "To oblige," was the work of an instant, and he accordingly sailed in, with true dramatic fervor, to several selections from Robespierre after Irving (very much after); an act or two of the Fool's Revenge in imitation of the late Booth followed. Virginius and Becket, Svengali and Shylock, Marat and Mathias, then came in quick startling succession to the intense and speechless enthusiasm of the audience who marvelled that such a brilliant exponent of the Drama had so long been left to blush unseen. They insisted with more convincing though less subtle arguments than "tongue can tell," that he proceed to blush "right out in meeting" for the sins of wasted opportunities; for his might have been a stellar career instead of one of common drudgery.

And still the dramatic soul of Taffy yearned for higher ideals, nobler victories and more fashionable victims. Like the ambitious gentleman of another age he sought for other worlds to conquer. His breathing apparatus had become impaired in the narrow confines of Hammels, Averne and the like. So he recently hid himself to the mountains—not those "where Zion may be speedily rebuilt in our days," but the range further North; and when he returned his friends were regaled with tales of joyous romantic adventure, brimful of recitations and rides, monologues, minstrels and moonlight entertainments, etc., all for Sweet Charity's Sake as he averred; himself the brilliant solitaire in the golden circle of femininity (apparent reference to their prospective dowries is unconscious and unintended). This was indeed the last straw and with one accord they raised their hands in despair and with a gesture which meant, "Oh! what sins are committed in thy name," exclaimed in tones intended for reproachful admiration.

"Taffy, you are a peach!" I E.

CONGREGATION AT ATHENS.

Although the number of Jews in Greece is comparatively small, they are divided, according to their origin, into five sections each with a ritual of their own. The Jews in Athens are mostly Germans and Austro-Hungarians, who settled there during the reign of King Otho. The ritual is that of the Ashkenazim. In the Ionian Islands, the Jews who have lived there from the time that the Islands belonged to Venice, are of Italian descent. Their language is Italian and they follow the Italian Minhag. In Thessaly and East Epirus, which were ceded by Turkey to Greece after the Russo-Turkish war, the Jews are Sephardim. The most interesting section of Jews are undoubtedly those living on the Island of Eubœa, who nurse a tradition that their ancestors were established there even before the destruction of Jerusalem. In language and custom they have become thorough Greeks. Through persecutions in the times of the Greek Emperors, the Crusades, and the domination of the Venitians their numbers have greatly diminished. They are almost exclusively agriculturists and intermarry among themselves. The fifth division of Jews are the New Greek Communities.

In the midst of the Mediterranean Sea is the Island of Rhodes, a landing to which cannot be effected during a heavy sea. Yet in this out of the way place there is a fairly large and prosperous Jewish community. The young men are intrepid boatmen, and no matter how rough the sea may be, they will in their little vessels bring visitors first to a sand bank and then on their backs to the shore. They have a synagogue which is well attended on Sabbaths and holy days, when these Jewish islanders completely abstain from all manual labor.—Jewish World.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

The fall activities of the Association have already set in. The gymnasium classes are in full operation, and the enrollment in the same is very heavy. Beginning Oct. 1 the educational classes will open in addition to the regular classes in Bookkeeping, Stenography and Typewriting, Spanish, French, Hebrew and Jewish History. There will be a number of new classes, comprising Civics, Mechanical Drawing, Oratory and German. A normal class in Jewish Literature, under the direction of Rev. Dr. Raphael Benjamin, will also be organized. This class will be composed of young men and women who desire to take up the study for the purpose of preparing themselves as Sunday school teachers.

Mr. David Galewski, counselor-at-law, with offices at 280 Broadway, who has been appointed executor under the will of the late Mrs. Julia J. Cherey, is advertising for claims against the estate through his attorney, Mr. Herman I. Lurie, of the same address. It will be interesting to our readers to note the unfortunate manner in which Mrs. Cherey came to a premature and violent death.

Mrs. Cherey was the wife of a druggist, and was about 29 years of age. On the afternoon of the 13th day of July last she was returning from a pleasant outing with her husband, which they had taken to celebrate the third anniversary of their marriage. They were driving down Broadway, and had just reached Spring street, when their horse was frightened by the clanging of the gong of a Broadway car. The animal dashed down Broadway at a terrific speed, scattering the crowds of passengers right and left. Mr. Cherey vainly endeavored to stop the horse or drive him against the curb. Before he could succeed in either, Mrs. Cherey, crazed with fright, had jumped from the vehicle, her dress caught on its step, and for more than two blocks the unfortunate woman was dragged over the stony pavement until the horse was stopped, and she was picked up unconscious and with a broken skull. She died before the least aid could be offered. Mrs. Cherey left no children, and under her will her husband is the sole legatee.

While the material used may go a long way toward making an attractive suit yet without good stylish cutting and fitting the effect is almost absolutely lost, and vice versa. Mr. A. Wollman, who has just opened a merchant tailoring establishment at No. 2705 Broadway, is a man who in his product combines both, for an experience covering many years with our largest and most fashionable tailors has amply demonstrated the fact that he is an absolutely up-to-date cutter and fitter, while his stock of goods comprises none but the latest effects in foreign and domestic fabrics. Patrons will find Mr. Wollman young, energetic and reliable and his prices just right.

New Song Hits.

"I Dreamed of a Lover Tall and Fair," Poem by Maybury Fleming, and music by Albert E. Wier, composer of "Song of Triumph," which has just been issued by Messrs. Jos. W. Stern & Co., is an episodal love song, replete with powerful sentiment. The poem is a magnificent specimen of vivid expression, and the music, different for each verse, teems with characteristic themes, which portray strongly and truthfully the emotion of the poem.

An instrumental hit from the same publishers is Max Witt's "Phyllis" waltzes, which will undoubtedly prove a still greater success than the previous works of the same composer, "The First Violin" and "Robespierre."

F. F. Proctor's Theatres.

At Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theater, week of Sept. 17, the features are: Joseph Hart and Carrie De Mar, Harry Watson and his comedy company, Press Eldridge, Josephine Gassman and her cute pickaninnies, Hamilton Hill, Sullivan and Pasquelena, Fred Brown and the Kalatechnoscope, now in its second year at this house.

At Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theater, week of Sept. 17, the headliners include Robert Hilliard and his company, Gertrude Haynes and her "Choir Celestial," Harley Case, Howard and Bland, Alexander, Post and Clinton, and others.

At Proctor's Palace, East 58th street, week of Sept. 17, the programme lists attrice, Amelia Summerville, Carta and Jirtziana, John D. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Esmunde, and a dozen more.

At Proctor's 125th Street Theater, week of Sept. 17, the "big type" number embrace Bert Coote and company, Smith and Campbell, Sig. A. L. Guille, Ben Jarney Trio, Silvern and Emerie, La Belle Rita, Terry and Elmer, and the Kalatechnoscope, which has become quite a fad in Harlem.

Irving Place Theatre.

Mr. Conried's plans for the coming season, recently announced, show that the policy hitherto pursued by him will be continued. The best new plays, and occasional incursions into the field of the classical outlines the projected campaign. In another place I have spoken of this play-house as "the literary theatre par excellence of the Metropolis," and judging by the list of pieces acquired by Mr. Conried, which range from Sudermann and Schnitzler to Blumenthal and Kadelburg, the line quoted will continue to be correct. Among the newly-engaged artists, the most prominent is Kathi Frank, for some years tragic heroine of the Frankford Stadttheater. Kathi Frank will debut in Schiller's "Bride of Messina" some time in October. For the opening night on the 29th inst., Schnitzler's "Das Vermächtniss" has been selected. Helen Odillon's star engagement next Spring should prove unusually attractive, for aside from the actress' proved ability, her repertoire is exclusively modern. J. M.

Borough of Richmond.

Brother Isidor Kutscher walks along now minus his full beard. He looks ten years younger and handsome, but we are afraid he lost his pull with the fromme people. He is, however, all right in our eyes, and suits us O. K.

Our handsome friend, the Secretary of the Ladies' Society, Mrs. M. Klauber, is just as enthusiastic for the cause of progress as she ever was. Mr. Adolph Neurad, her brother, spent a week in the hospitable Klauber home, and will spend the holidays on the Island attending services in our Temple. We hope Mr. Neurad will seriously consider the idea of permanently settling on the Island. If so, we already rejoice in securing a useful addition to the Jewish community.

The Synagogue last Saturday presented a holiday appearance. The oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Bernstein, of Port Richmond, celebrated his Bar-Mitzvah. Young Saul Bernstein acquitted himself splendidly. He read the Maffir portion from the Thora and the Haphtorah, and delivered a speech replete with noble sentiments and thoughts. We congratulate the parents heartily, and wish them all the blessings of Heaven for the future of their excellent son. Ah, what a delight it is to see new branches shoot forth from the old tree of Judaism.

Our esteemed friends, Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Strank, will celebrate the tenth birthday of their daughter, Stella, on Tuesday next. The little miss is a pupil of the Hebrew school. We offer our heartiest congratulations.

Do not forget the meeting of the Congregation Sunday, Sept. 16, at 7.30 a. m. Nomination of officers will be in order, and the rental of seats for the holy days will take place. Whoever desires seats will do well to appear in person or authorize some member to secure seats for him.

Alfred Friend, a son of the lawyer of that name, has adopted the vaudeville stage and will be seen in a Hebrew character sketch this season with Harry Bailey. The team is under the management of Edward Rosenbaum, Jr., who has already booked the young men for a long term.

The meeting will be held in the B'nai Israel Temple, at Third and Main streets, the use of which has been tendered to the Lodge. A carefully selected and meritorious musical and literary programme will be given in connection with the memorial addresses, and altogether the meeting will be one of the most notable the Jews have held here for some time.

Worcester, Mass.

Rapid strides in the naturalization of the Hebrew voters of Worcester, Mass., have been made during the past month, and more than 75 names have been added to the voting list. This work has been done through the efforts of the Maccabee Social and Literary Club, is entirely non-partisan and the members propose to keep at it until the bars are down for the fall election.

It was at first thought by the member that it would be a good idea to invite the congressional candidates to be present at a meeting, but at a recent meeting at the new club house on Providence street, it was decided to give up the project.

A complete set of the Encyclopædia Britannica was presented to the society by ten members. Four new members were initiated, and two propositions for members were received.

Owing to the absence of many members of the Young Men's Hebrew Association the Maccabees did not go to Providence last week. It was planned to have a joint debate between members of both societies, but as a cadet company from the Providence organization is in New York, the debate was postponed. The dedication of the new house on Providence street will be in October, and will be in the nature of a lawn party.

New Bedford, Mass.

Last Sabbath, Master Abraham, son of Mr. Max Levy, who is one of New Bedford's most prominent merchants, celebrated his Bar Mitzvah. The Jewish community were interested in the event because on no previous occasion had there been a celebration of this kind for which such elaborate preparations had been made. The confirmand read the Sedrah and Haftorah in a masterly manner, after which he delivered an excellent address, all of which reflected credit upon his preceptor, Rev. Joseph Schlerman. A reception followed at which there were guests present from Boston and nearby cities. Large donations were made in favor of the congregation and a collection was taken up in aid of the suffering Roumanian Jews for whose benefit a large sum was realized.

Montreal.

The marriage of Mr. S. A. Jacobs and Miss Miriam Silverman was solemnized last Wednesday. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Messrs. Kaplan and Goldstein. The wedding reception was attended by a large number of the friends of the bridal pair, and dancing was kept up until an early hour.

Master Ross Levi, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Levi, was Bar Mitzvah last Sabbath. He read a portion of the Torah in the Spanish and Portuguese synagogue, and acquitted himself most creditably. The Rev. Meldola De Sola addressed him in suitable terms upon his duties as a Bar Mitzvah.

Mr. Clarence I. De Sola, president of the Federation of Zionist societies in Canada, has just returned from Europe. He attended the Congress in London, and received the distinguished honor of being elected a member of the Executive.

(ONE.)

State of New York,
 Office of the Secretary of State,
 Albany, July 27, 1900.
 Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen, of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of Chapter nine hundred and nine of the Laws of eighteen hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to article six of the Constitution of the State of New York is referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next General Election of Senators in this State, to be held on the sixth day of November, nineteen hundred.

Amendment Number One.—Concurrent Resolution, Proposing amendment to article six of the Constitution relating to the election of additional justices of the Supreme Court.
 Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That the sixth article of the Constitution be amended by adding thereto the following section:

Section 24. At the general election next after the adoption of this amendment, there shall be elected, and thereafter as the offices shall become vacant through expiration of term or otherwise, by the electors of the Second Judicial District three justices of the Supreme Court, in addition to the justices of the court now in office in said district. The justices so elected shall be invested with their offices on the first day of January next after their election.

State of New York,
 In Senate, March 27, 1899.
 The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof.

By order of the Senate,
 TIMOTHY L. WOODRUFF,
 President.

State of New York,
 In Assembly, April 5, 1899.
 The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof.

By order of the Assembly,
 S. F. NIXON,
 Speaker.

State of New York,
 Office of the Secretary of State, ss.
 I have compared the preceding copy of Concurrent Resolution, proposing an amendment to article six of the Constitution, with the original Concurrent Resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript thereof, and of the whole thereof.

Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State, at the city of Albany, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred.

JOHN T. McDONOUGH, Secretary of State.

(TWO.)

State of New York,
 Office of the Secretary of State,
 Albany, July 27, 1900.
 Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article thirteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section seven of Chapter nine hundred and ninety-six, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to article three of the Constitution of the State of New York, is referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next General Election of Senators in this State, to be held on the sixth day of November, nineteen hundred.

Amendment Number Two.—Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section eighteen of article three of the constitution, relating to exemptions of real and personal property from taxation.

Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That section eighteen of article three of the Constitution be amended to read as follows:
 § 18. The Legislature shall not pass a private or local bill in any of the following cases:
 Changing the names of persons.
 Laying out, opening, altering, working or discontinuing roads, highways or alleys, or for draining swamps or other low lands.
 Locating or changing county seats.
 Providing for changes of venue in civil or criminal cases.
 Incorporating villages.
 Providing for election of members of board of supervisors.
 Selecting, drawing, summoning or empaneling grand or petit jurors.
 Regulating the rate of interest on money.
 The opening and conducting of elections or designating places of voting.
 Creating, increasing or decreasing fees, percentage or allowances of public officers, during the term for which said officers are elected or appointed.

 Granting to any corporation, association or individual the right to lay down railroad tracks.
 Granting to any private corporation, association or individual any exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise whatever.
 Granting to any person, association, firm or corporation, an exemption from taxation on real or personal property.
 Providing for building bridges, and chartering companies for such purposes, except on the Hudson River below Waterford, and on the East River, or over the waters forming a part of the boundaries of the State.
 The Legislature shall pass general laws providing for the cases enumerated in this section, and for all other cases which in its judgment may be provided for by general laws. But no law shall authorize the construction or operation of a street railroad except upon the condition that the consent of the owners of one-half in value of the property bounded on, and the consent also of that local authority having the control of that portion of a street or highway upon which it is proposed to construct or operate such railroad be first obtained, or in case the consent of such property owners cannot be obtained, the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, in the department in which it is proposed to be constructed, upon application, appoint three commissioners, who shall hold a public hearing of all parties interested, whether such railroad ought to be constructed or operated, and their determination, confirmed by the court, may be taken in lieu of the consent of the property owners.

Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the foregoing amendment be referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next general election of Senators, and that in conformity to section one, article fourteen of the constitution, it be published for three months previous to the time of such election.
 State of New York,
 In Senate, April 26, 1899.
 The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present.
 By order of the Senate,
 TIMOTHY E. ELLSWORTH,
 Temporary President.

State of New York,
 In Assembly, April 11, 1899.
 The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present.
 By order of the Assembly,
 S. F. NIXON,
 Speaker.
