The Eye of the Storm.
 Fear not that the whirlwind
 Shall carry thee hence,
 Nor wall for its onslaught
 In breathless suspense,
 Nor shriek from the whips
 Of the terrible hail,
 But pass through the edge
 To the heart of the gale,
 For there is a shelter,
 Sunlight and warm,
 And faith sees her God
 Through the eye of the storm

The passionate tempest
 With rush and wild roar
 And threatenings of evil
 May beat on the shore,
 The waves may be mountains,
 The fields battle plains,
 And the earth be immersed
 In a deluge of rains,
 Yet the soul, stayed on God,
 May sing bravely its psalm,
 For the heart of the storm
 Is the center of calm.

Let hope not be quenched
 In the blackness of night,
 Though the cyclone awhile
 May have blotted the light,
 For behind the great darkness
 The stars ever shine,
 And the light of God's heaven
 His love shall make thine,
 Let no gloom dim thine eyes,
 But uplift them on high
 To the face of thy God
 And the blue of his sky.

The storm is thy shelter
 From danger and sin,
 And God himself takes thee
 For safety within.
 The tempest with him
 Passes into deep calm,
 And the roar of the winds
 Is the sound of a psalm,
 Be glad and serene—
 When the tempest clouds form;
 God smiles on his child
 In the eye of the storm.

(From the Reform Advocate.)

The Maggid and the Beautiful Jewess.

(Concluded.)

"As soon as Sam and his wife were again alone, they discussed seriously the events of the day, and both confessed having fully deserved the cruel object-lesson of two hours ago. For the first time in their life they felt, so to say, on their own bodies the old, old 'Juden-schmerz'; they discovered to their melancholy surprise that although having given up, long ago, the custom of frequenting the synagogue, although Dietary Laws, Tefillin, Sabbath keeping, etc., were known to them only in the shape of historic and literary reminiscences, that, in one word, in spite of their systematic aloofness from the sphere of Judaism they had been thrown back into it well—in less time than I need to tell you this story!"

The broad shouldered scholar with the flowing beard and the spectacles on his forehead sat down in the midst of a painful silence, which was at last broken by Mr. Lowenstein himself, who began the tale of his life, of his youth passed in the pious house of his parents in Brody, his struggles as a poor clerk in Lemberg and Vienna, of his arrival in this country, 34 years ago, of his wife, who died shortly after the Bar Mizwah of their only child.

The beautiful hostess of the house, intensely interested in the proceedings provoked by herself, received, however, a hint from her husband to stop this all too serious discussion and to land on somewhat lighter ground.

At that moment a nervous ring of the bell was heard and in came, in great excitement, Milton, the eighteen year old son of the house and a student of law at Columbia. His mother suddenly forgetting all about the Jewish question, and Messrs. Lowenstein, sen. and jun., took him in her arms and anxiously questioned him about the reasons of his nervousness.

"Nothing serious, mamma," replied Milton, trying to escape to his room on the second floor. But his parents, his sister and the two bankers belonging to the family insisted so earnestly upon knowing the truth that Milton, stamping his foot on the velvet carpet of the floor, broke forth:—"Well, mamma, the story in a nutshell is that I was black-balled in the Savigny Club, one hour and thirty-five minutes ago."

"For heaven's sake, why, my darling? Had you a quarrel with the boys?"

"Well, since we are among ourselves, I can speak frankly. After the meeting, my chum, John Carroll, gave me to understand that it was exclusively on account of my religion."

able fully to realize the charm of the Jewish family life of yore. Only old people like Mr. Lowenstein and myself can imagine the awe which the Yom Kippur had inspired to our parents and grandparents. In this country, native born Israel enjoys his three square meals on the Day of Atonement as does any good Goy —."

Here one of the bankers interrupted the old scholar, who spoke in apparently great earnestness.

"Tell us frankly, dear Dr. —, since you are here among friends, and are safe in laying off at least part of your official reserve. Do you not consider the banishment of those charming but antiquated traditions as a mighty step toward the solution of the Jewish problem? I confess I was somewhat sorry when he delivered on the 4th of December, 1894, at New Orleans, at the Council of American Hebrew Congregations, on the very subject that occupies us this evening. And I do not hesitate to confess that it was the souvenir of that very oration which caused me to interfere in this discussion."

"Joe," interrupted the beautiful hostess, her cousin, "you need not excuse yourself; I, for my part at least, thank you from all my heart for having relieved me from my difficult position. For it is, indeed, for a woman with my enormous Hebrew scholarship far easier to start a discussion of this kind than to continue it with success. I felt myself in the position of the Zauberklehrling in the famous poem of Goethe. But before, taking my seat as a simple listener, may I ask you, cousin, to tell us the topic of that Louisiana address?"

"With pleasure. In the Menorah for July, 1887, my friend addressed an open letter to the rabbis of America, setting forth in his own behalf, and in that of thousands of Jews, who were similarly situated, the difficulties under which we laymen are suffering, having no authoritative guide to lead us from our religious perplexities to a clear perception of our duties as Jews. His pertinent question: 'Rabbis, tell us; what is Judaism?'—received no satisfactory answer. Attacks, insults, menaces, suspicions, vague oratory—you know, ladies and gentlemen, the customary vocabulary of untruth in its fight against truth. After seven years' waiting, my friend tried to solve the problem for himself, and the outcome, was that splendid study in American Judaism which, as I understand, will find its place in his Collected Essays and Speeches, which one of the downtown lodges of the I. O. B. B. is preparing as a literary monument to their lamented chief and friend."

"I exceedingly regret," interrupted our great scholar, who had meanwhile arranged his plan of procedure, "not to have read the speech of Mr. Levi, and I thank you very much, indeed, dear friend, for having called my attention to the same. But as far as I can remember from my reading the numerous necrologies which were devoted, in the second half of January, to the great leader of the B'nai Brith, he was a lawyer by profession and knew very little Hebrew, and still less of Jewish literature."

"Here, now I have you, dear Dr. —, Do you really mean that Judaism is only intelligible for Hebrews, and that we business men have no other functions to fulfill than to listen to the sermons of our rabbis, and to pay our dues? From almost every Jewish pulpit, Reform and Orthodox, we are wont to hear our shortcomings and sins inspired into and condemned. Our want of piety and virtue is rebuked, and we are asked by our spiritual advisers to make our practices consist with the faith we profess. We are publicly denounced, and we have to hearken, with never an opportunity to say one word by way of rejoinder. Leo N. Levi, ten years ago, had the first courage to 'talk back.'"

"Do you mean, Mr. —, that the sermons of our rabbis should be discussed by the congregation, immediately after their delivery?"

"Why not? I am really astonished that you, dear Dr. —, who passed your youth in the old country and know the history of Jewish homiletics better than I do, object to this genuinely Jewish procedure. Did our parents and grandparents not discuss on the spot the Dera-shot of their rabbis? And even at the

SAMUEL REPROVING SAUL.—I. Sam., xiii., 43-14.

Here he laughed ironically. "And you know, papa, how much I possess of that stuff."

Milton did not see the famous scholar and appointed guardian of the religious interests of American Judaism. His sister's pinching of his right arm convinced him that he committed some sottise, but only when his mother clearly offered a glass of Rhine wine to the guest of the evening Milton understood.

"Never mind, madam," replied the famous scholar and Maggid, who quickly had grasped the embarrassment of his beautiful hostess.

"Do you perchance believe, I do not know the religious, or rather the irreligious stand taken by our Jewish youth? We have alas! dear madam, reached in this country a point that would have satisfied St. Paul, the Apostle of the Heathen, himself. All that for thousands of years has been held sacred by our ancestors, has been abrogated by frivolous hands, and our beautiful and charming religious customs, and traditions have been relegated to the 'Rumpelkammer' of Jewish antiquities. My heart is bleeding, but can I close my eyes against brute facts? None, unless he have been brought up in the old country in the house of strictly Orthodox parents, is most influential leaders of the community, and who knows not only his Hebrew Bible, but is also quite at home in Jewish history and literature. Dr. — felt that his authority, as living oracle of American Judaism, yea, his social position were at stake. This time he could not contemptuously shrug his broad shoulders, as he was wont to do when ever a poor Maskil dared dispute his Talmudic scholarship; he had to accept the provocation, unprepared as he was for the emergency.

"Excuse me Mr. —," he began with an embarrassed smile; "would you not be kind enough to repeat in a more definite form the question, or rather the questions on which you expect my decision? Although it were by all means preferable to discuss these delicate matters in the intimacy of the study, where you have all literary sources at your elbow, I will not hesitate, Mr. —, to give to every one of your queries as clear an answer as my scant knowledge permits."

"You know, Dr. —, that I was a great admirer of my friend, the late acceptance speech I chose the text to which you, dear professor, will undoubtedly offer us a splendid Perush—ladies and gentlemen, I meant commentary. I never will forget the remarkable address risk that you should class my example as Chukkat Hagoy, I wish to remind you that the new auxiliary bishop of the Catholic Archdiocese of New York, Dr. Cusack, leads in his church contradictory discussions on any religious or ethical topic proposed by any member of his congregation, and even by strangers. We Jews pride ourselves to be a people of free thought and free speech; we, at least officially, do not recognize any ecclesiastical authority."

"That is, indeed," interrupted the scholarly Melz, who began losing ground in seeing with what earnestness his interlocutor went into the matter—"that is, indeed, one of the cardinal principles of Judaism."

"Then, Doctor, it is our duty as it is our privilege, when we have reached man's estate, to catechise those who have catechised us. We are entitled to know what we are asked to believe and why. We are entitled to know what our teachers believe. Alas! precedents prove that our spiritual advisers follow in this regard rather the example of the irascible Shammal than that of the gentle rabbi Hillel."

"Did I not ask you, dear Mr. —, at the outset, to put definite and clear questions so that I may give definite and clear answers?"

"All right, my dear Dr., I begin. Do you believe in the divine origin of the Bible?"

"Why, of course."
"Do you actually and literally believe that God himself wrote the Pentateuch—or, to use the Talmudic expression, that the Holy One dictated and Moses wrote?"

At this juncture the scholar stood up in nervous excitement, and asked his beautiful hostess for a glass of ice water. He walked up and down the dining room and the adjacent parlor, opening the window to let the fresh night air in.

The whole assembly rose in a jiffy to inquire after the health of the guest of the evening. A physician brother-in-law of the banker took the Maggid in hand, and after a few minutes the latter was restored to his pristine health and vigor.

At this moment Milton, an enthusiastic friend of the Japs stormed in with an extra edition of the "Evening Herald," announcing the precipitate departure from Port Arthur of Viceroy Alexieff and Grand Duke Boris, and the definite bottling up of this supposedly impregnable "Gibraltar of the Far East."

The Jewish question was completely forgotten; the Russian-Japanese war formed for a couple of minutes the exclusive subject of discussion. Everyone of the guests excepting the Maggid himself, who, partly owing to his origin, partly from a kind of intellectual Waiverwandschaft, sympathized with Russia, was an admirer of that little Japanese admiral Togo, who fearlessly dashed into the straits of Pe-Chi-li, until the proud commander-in-chief and his beardless chum, Boris, had to give up the fight, taking to their heels in the gulse of Chinese cooks. The golden moonbeams, set in brilliants, which Czar Nicholas II. presented, February, 1902, to his former favorite, had been buried under the Golden Hill, from whose heights Viceroy Alexieff so often had looked down with contempt and pity upon the little Japs who represent in this holy war liberty against slavery, progress against darkness, the Occident against the Orient.

When our banker reached home he took from the upper shelf of his library the only English book which had been published by our Maggid. After re-reading the preface he put the book back with a melancholy smile. Almost at the same hour, Dr. — was leaning over his check book, to balance his April accounts. When he wished to lay back this financial supplement to his literary labors he suddenly trembled, and the precious booklet fell on the floor. "Simon Ra," he exclaimed with melancholy forebodings for the future of his position in the United States.—Barzilai ben Amittal, in "The Jewish World."

In the Jewish World.

At the Memorial Day services in the Jewish cemetery at Richmond, Va., Gen. Fitzhugh Lee and Rabbi E. N. Calisch were the speakers.

The Russian minister of education has recently decided in a particular case that a Jewish graduate of a commercial college had the right to open a school, but that this pedagogic license entitled him only to the teaching of Jewish pupils.

Isaac Frankel, a Russian Jew, who was manager of a printing office in Meshed, Persia, was killed by a fanatic Parsee, who was provoked to see a Jew handling a holy Persian book. He left a widow with five children, from five months to eleven years old, in great need.

The Prussian province of Brandenburg has been invaded by an anti-Shehita movement. Shortly after the City of Angermuende, the City of Kuestrin comes out with a prohibition of ritual slaughtering, and after a decision by the Supreme Court such a prohibition is final.

Grand Duke Sergius, the governor general of Moscow, has issued a circular which in these critical days will certainly prove of great benefit to the Russian army. He has prohibited the wearing of Zizith to the Jewish soldiers. As there is no reason given for this peculiar order, it may be assumed that the various miraculous ikons sent to the front could not prove effective, as long as such terribly superstitious practices were tolerated in the army.

Herr and Frau Jodisohn have given 50,000 marks to the Jewish Old Age Insurance Society.

Professor Georg Landsberg, Heidelberg, has been appointed Professor of Mathematics at the University of Strasbourg.

The President of the Republic, in a decree published in the Journal Officiel, has confirmed the election of M. Honel Meiss, Rabbi of Nice, as Grand Rabbi of Marseilles.

The Geographical Society of Paris has received from Madame Edouard Foa, widow of the distinguished explorer, a sum of money sufficient to produce every two years 1,500 francs, which, together with a special medal, is to be awarded as a prize for the best works on geography.

A Central News telegram from Amsterdam states that Dr. Cohen, the famous specialist of that city, has been called into consultation with regard to the treatment of Queen Wilhelmina, who is suffering from an abscess in the ear.

The Lisbon correspondent of the Morning Leader telegraphed on Tuesday: "The great Jewish colony in Lisbon has finally obtained permission to open to-morrow their rich and splendid synagogue in one of the most fashionable streets. The opening will take place with a solemn inauguration ceremony. The event may be taken as a proof of the liberal spirit of the present government, as hitherto a license has been forbidden to all non-Catholic places of worship. Spain even yet does not allow the building of a single synagogue."

The Court of Aldermen of Berlin has recommended the City Council to accept the offer of 1,000,000 marks by the Jewish community for a site on which to erect a new Jewish hospital.

Dr. Alex. Dowle, head of the much advertised "City of Zion" is now devoting his activity to the East End, and his agents are paving the way to gaining new adherents in that quarter of London. Posters, printed in English and Yiddish, announce a series of lantern lectures on the subject of Dr. Dowle's scheme. No special appeal is made to Jewish Zionists.

In all Algeria, with the exception of Mascara, the anti-Jewish party has been defeated. In Algiers, the offtadel of anti-Semitism, the Liberals were returned with 6,369 votes, while Max Regis only obtained 4,317 votes. The Mayor, M. Altairac, presented a list of 36 candidates, out of which 33 were elected at the first ballot, but M. Altairac himself had to stand for the second ballot. This personal defeat of M. Altairac is explained by the fact that as he had not invited any Jews to the three balls he gave last Winter, the Jews voted for his list, but struck out his name. The Mayor, having thus received a dignified rebuke, was elected at the second ballot. The Liberal party, without exception, voted for him in order to assure the total defeat of the anti-Semitic candidates.

By a decree of the President of the Republic, Colonel Valabregue, Commandant of the 11th Artillery Regiment, has been appointed Chief of the Cabinet of General Andre, Minister of War. The Colonel, who was born in 1852, entered the Polytechnic School in 1871, was appointed Chief of Squadron in 1889, and promoted Colonel in 1902. In 1896 he held an appointment in the Cabinet of General Boulanger.

This is the first time that so an important a post has been confided to a Jew. The fury of the anti-Semitic papers, who declare that France and the Army have been given up to the Jews, and assert that the new Chief of the Cabinet is cousin to the "traitor Dreyfus" can be imagined. "From to-day," says the Libre Parole, "Valabregue is the real head of the army. We shall soon see him Minister of War, and Dreyfus Chief of the General Staff. He is also the cousin of General Naquet, that other Jew who, in a certain measure, is Grand Master of Artillery." M. Drumont's paper mournfully prophesies the approach of the day when all the Jews in the French Army will be provided with posts in Paris.

Cardinal Newman of Jewish Descent.

According to the latest biographer of John Henry Newman, Mr. William Barry, the Newmans were of Jewish descent. John Newman, father of the Cardinal, was chief clerk and afterward partner in a banking firm, a Freemason of high standing, an admirer of Franklin and an enthusiastic reader of Shakespeare.—He quotes from T. Mozley that this elder Newman was of a family of small landed proprietors in Cambridge, and had an hereditary taste for music, of which he had a practical and scientific knowledge, together with much general culture. Mr. Barry adds: "These particulars * * * will prepare us for the fact that in an earlier generation the family had spelt its signature 'Newman' that it was understood to be of Dutch origin; and that its real descent was Hebrew." The talent for music, calculation and business, the untiring energy, legal acumen and dislike of speculative metaphysics, which were conspicuous in John Henry, bear out this interesting genealogy. A large part of his character and writings will become intelligible if we keep it in mind. That his features had a strong Jewish cast is evident from his portraits, and was especially to be noted in old age. It may be conjectured that the immigration of these Dutch Jews to England fell within a period not very distant from the death of Spinoza in 1675. But there is not the slightest trace in Newman of acquaintance with modern Hebrew literature or history." Cardinal Newman's mother was a Fourth Printer, of a Huguenot family. It were much to be desired that Mr. Barry had given his evidence in detail.

Montreal.
 Mr. Joseph Cowen, the prominent English Zionist, has been visiting the city. He attended the Sabbath service of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, and the Rev. Meldola De Sola preached a forcible sermon upon Zionism, in the course of which he dwelt with much effect upon the good work already accomplished by the movement. It had united the Jewish communities of the world; it had practically created a Jewish Parliament; it had interested in Judaism and in Jewish affairs men who had drifted away from everything that was Jewish. If Zionists would only be true to Judaism; if they would only be loyal to the institutions of Israel's faith, the success of the movement would be assured.
 On Sunday evening Mr. Cowen addressed an immense Zionist assemblage in the King's Hall. The chair was taken by Mr. Clarence I. De Sola, president of the Canadian Zionist Federation. On the platform were seated the Rev. Meldola De Sola, the Rev. Meriman Abramowitz, Messrs. J. S. Leo, M. Markus, H. Bernstein, Mrs. Clarence I. De Sola, Mrs. Leo, Mrs. Manolson and other officers of the various Zionist societies. Mr. Clarence I. De Sola formally introduced Mr. Cowen to the audience, and he was accorded an enthusiastic reception. His address was an able exposition of the aims of Zionism, and it was interspersed with witty anecdotes. He was repeatedly interrupted with hearty applause, and was tendered a cordial vote of thanks upon the motion of Mr. J. S. Leo, seconded by Mr. Shapiro. The Montreal Daughters of Zion subsequently tendered Mr. Cowen a reception. Excellent music was provided by Silverston's orchestra, and it was midnight when the gathering broke up.

The Rise of the Jew.
 The prominence of the Jew in the national and international life is again evident in the proposition to establish in New York an immense Jewish university, which shall be the peer of any educational institution in the United States. The plan is put forth by the New York branch of the Jewish Theological Seminary, and contemplates the establishment, also, of Jewish high schools in New York.
 The project, if attempted, will undoubtedly be successful, for Jews of the class to which the promoters of this enterprise belong, put brains, energy and wealth into whatever they undertake, and almost invariably make for success of a high order. The proposed university will have ample financial support, for the Jews, with characteristic race loyalty, may be depended upon to put up all the necessary money; it can also command the highest order of mental training and ability necessary to the fulfillment of such an institution's fundamental functions, and there will be no lack of business knowledge and experience to guide it through early storms to a successful accomplishment.
 The proposed university is but another evidence of the wonderful progress that has been made by the Jews, and the great part the race is playing in the progress of the world. The Jew has risen through persecution, scorn and hatred to a position of eminence, by his own indomitable courage, splendid ability and persistent endeavor. Handicapped from the very beginning by everything which could be summoned to aid the world's fight against them, the Jews have passed through an ordeal of fire to achieve what they to-day possess. They have made the names of Jews honored and respected in every line of art and industry; they have given to the world some of its greatest thinkers, statesmen, diplomats; they have crossed the seas to our own country, and thriving in its atmosphere of freedom and justice, have taken high positions in our industrial world, have been called to responsible official positions in the city, State and national governments; they are numbered among the powers of the financial world, and have made their worth felt and recognized in every sphere of human activity.

 And all this has been done unobtrusively, quietly, without ostentation. It has been accomplished by a combination of ambition, bravery, natural ability and faithful application to the work in hand, whatever that might be. The Jew—that is, the worthy Jew, of whom alone we essay now to speak—gives to each new generation of world's workers a magnificent lesson that points what can be accomplished, by right endeavor, even under the most adverse circumstances.
 It is not strange, then, that the ancient prejudice against the Jew is slowly, perhaps, but surely passing away. The world may be too busy to hunt for and exploit merit; but is always ready to recognize and applaud it when it is forced upon the world's notice. And the Jew has compelled the scornful, prejudiced, merciless world to accord to him the great measure of respect and honor which he has fairly won by his own efforts. The world has been benefited greatly by the Jew, and the Jew has been tremendously benefited by the world. This mutual improvement process is going on day by day, and will so continue until the Jew will have been so thoroughly absorbed into the world's life as to obliterate the last remaining traces of the old-time bitter prejudice, now happily diminishing.

 Life is too short to waste it in "knocking." Give credit to whom credit is due; and the world should not forget that the Jew has splendidly earned its respect, applause and encouragement.
The Eternal 7
 The speculative theory imposed upon the divine appellation of Jah by Mr. De Castro in a current edition of the Hebrew Standard can hardly be accepted by Bibleists, theologians and philologists.
 The absorption of the masoretic mapik or the traditional apostrophe by the vigorous dagesh on the vertical point will be opposed to by versed grammarians.
 The usurpation of the mystical form of abbreviation, the arrogance of the casuistical method for abridgment, and the adoption of the secular system of יהוה for the Deity shall not be tolerated.
 In fact, if one is inclined to agree with the correspondent upon Jah being literally composed of two other Godly terms, then the second paragraph of the thirty-fourth section of Aboth of Rabbi-Nathan would become ambiguous, its authority doubtful and the decade of the Lord's titles recorded therein, reduced to a novenary. The Talmud, however, treating "Ei" and "Jah" (Shebuoth 35, b) in a likewise manner, furnishes a clue for the meaning of Jah and its metaphorical design.
 The Lord is noted as Ei on account of the latter's significance of "power" (Genesis xxxi., 29) and reputed as Jah, which stands for "abundance" (Psalms cxviii., 5).

The State Bank in Harlem.
 Another instance of the progressive spirit dominating the officers of the State Bank is shown in the opening of their Fifth avenue branch, between 114th and 115th streets, at No. 1385 Fifth avenue, where the facilities, accommodations and security of the main institution in Grand street will prevail. The new branch is in charge of J. Milton Cohn, manager, who has been with the State Bank thirteen years, rising from year to year to positions of trust and responsibility. In his new position he can be relied upon to meet the most sanguine expectations of the State Bank. The Fifth avenue branch is located in a district where there was need for such and it will prove a profitable venture for the bank and of great convenience to the people in the central section of Harlem. The State Bank is one of the most solid financial institutions in this city, having deposits aggregating more than $5,500,000.

Adolph Lewisoohn's Gift to Columbia.
Adolph Lewisoohn, who has long been interested in educational work and is well known in the financial world, will present to Columbia University a new building. It is understood that the gift is in the interests of young men of the East Side who have much natural talent, but have been denied a college education for financial reasons. Mr. Lewisoohn would not discuss the matter, but admitted that he thought the time had come when the great East Side should be looked after along higher educational lines.

He has been very much interested in the work of the Educational Alliance, which has done much for Jewish immigrant children, and has carefully watched the progress of the young who have been given the opportunity of preparatory education in that institution.
Although the directors of Columbia refused to discuss the matter, it is known that Mr. Lewisoohn had had many conferences with them, and that the project is about ready to be announced officially.

Mr. Sinai Nurses Graduated.
Graduation exercises for nine trained nurses were held in the classroom of the new Mount Sinai Hospital last week. Justice Charles F. MacLean of the Supreme Court made the chief address. The valedictory was delivered by Miss Laura Rebecca Logan. Others in the class were Misses Lila Bland Turner, Flora Seltzer, Rosamond Smith, Elona N. Underwood, Hilda Loscombe, Julia K. Cohen, Elizabeth Eva McMath, and Louise Fredericka Arnold. Miss McMath took the first prize, and the second went to Miss Loscombe.
Among those present were Jacob H.

Schiff and Henry Morgenthau. Before the exercises began the following officers of the hospital were elected: President, Kalman Haas; vice-president, Walter E. Beer; secretary, Louis Auerbach; treasurer, Emil Berolzheimer. Directors—Isaac Wallach, Edward J. Detsch, Simon Rothschild, Albert Stein, Max Nathan, David Wild, Henry R. Ickelheimer, Isaac Stern, Emil S. Levi, and Albert W. Scholle.

Jewish Endeavor Society.
The society concluded its course of lectures for the season, with a well-attended and very ably delivered lecture on "Karaite, Falashas and Other Sects," by Isidor Hershfeld, Esq., who received a unanimous vote of thanks from his grateful audience.
All who attended the society's lectures regularly, unite in commending the taste and judgment displayed in the happy and successful selection of both speakers and subjects, which, as all agree, was unusually good, yet the society may safely assure its members and friends that its course of lectures for the coming season, soon to be announced, will not only equal, but be an improvement over its predecessors. Meanwhile the society's various other activities are being faithfully and tirelessly pursued. The Bible classes held every Saturday evening at the Educational Alliance by Mr. Abraham M. Hershman, of the Jewish Theological Seminary, is being very successfully conducted, with an increased attendance, whose interest once aroused, has been fostered and developed.

The work of the Sunday schools at 185 Chrystie street and 257 Division street is especially gratifying and productive; so much so that it is found necessary to secure larger quarters for the annual graduation exercises to be held in the latter part of June. The showing of the year's work promises to be highly satisfactory, and Miss Rose Wolbarst is busy training her choir to rise to the occasion.
At a Board of Directors' meeting held Tuesday evening, May 24, at the residence of Miss Katz, Miss Ida C. Mearson, principal of the schools, requested that a sum of money be appropriated to defray the expenses of the graduation and the children's outing to be held in July, which request was unanimously granted. Prizes of books and medals to the number of fifteen were also donated by the directors individually for the bright and diligent scholars. Toward the close of the meeting the attention of the board was called to the sudden death of the late Hon. Myer S. Isaacs, who had been a friend of the society, and resolutions were unanimously adopted deploring this loss.

The Synagogue Committee reported that the foundation it has laid for a young people's synagogue seems to be a good and stable one, and that it may, with a little support, hope to start building operations in the near future. The Missionary Committee has accumulated much material and information, and hopes soon to be in a position to permit the society to call a Third Anti-Missionary Conference.

The children's Friday evening services have been conducted by Abraham Schepper, Esq., the brilliant young lawyer of the East Side, whose forensic eloquence appealed so strongly to the children as it does to their adults, and a deputation of admiring and thankful youngsters waited upon Mr. Schepper and requested his presence for succeeding Friday evenings, which Mr. Schepper, busy man though he is, could not find it in his heart to refuse, so he is booked by the youthful president, Sadie Lowenkron, to speak for several Friday evenings.

Mr. Julius Diamondstein, president of the Harlem Branch, reports a year of hard and earnest work faithfully performed, and announces that the election of officers for the ensuing year will be held during the week. The success of the Harlem Branch adds materially to the prosperity of the society as a whole. The Harlem Endeavorers are preparing for their outing to be held in the very near future. Announcements will be made later.

Columbia Street Sewing and Religious School.
Last Thursday an exhibition of the children's work was held at 120 Columbia street.
Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, Hon. A. S. Solomons, Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, Miss Sarah Lyons and many other friends who were present expressed their pleasure at the progress the school is making.

Montefiore Home.

At the last monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Montefiore Home, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff presented the home with an excellent oil painting of the late Louis Gans elegantly framed. Mr. Schiff said that he deemed it a privilege to thus perpetuate the memory of one who had labored so earnestly in behalf of their institution, and whose charitable ministrations were always dispensed with a bountiful hand indicating his large heart and depth of feeling for the poor and distressed. Mr. Henry Solomon accepted the picture in behalf of the home, and in a few well chosen words referred to the good taste of the donor, as well as to his feeling expression toward the deceased. M. Walley Platzek, Esq., also made a few remarks.

At the Bedford Home twenty children were confirmed last Sunday, receiving their instructions from Mrs. Rosenberg, the wife of the superintendent, who had voluntarily devoted her services for that purpose. A dispatch regretting his absence was received from Mr. Schiff and addresses were delivered by Mr. Henry Solomon and Mr. Isaac Blumenthal, chairman. A very pleasant time was passed by the visitors.

Golden Jubilee of the Chebrah Bnec Salem.

On Sunday, May 29, the Society Bnec Salem celebrated its fiftieth anniversary at Terrace Garden. The brethren with their ladies assembled at 6 p. m. The banquet, to which 600 persons sat down, started at 6.30. The Rev. Daniel Loewenthal opened the ceremonies with a prayer. The chairman, Mr. Emanuel Mendelson, then introduced the president of the society, Mr. Emanuel Meyer, who welcomed the guests with a neat speech. Other addresses were made by the vice-president, Mr. Isaac Gans and Mr. Jacob Ullman, who also served as toastmaster for the evening. Among the ex-presidents we noticed Israel Altmayer, Leopold Ullman, the soul of the society; Simon Levy, Moritz Gerber, Joseph Hahn of New London, Conn.; Sussman Reinhardt, Rev. D. Loewenthal, Morris Rosenzweig and Benjamin Fleischer. The Hall was beautifully decorated and the words "Society Bnec Salem, 1854-1904" greeted the eyes on entering the banquet hall. Every lady received as a souvenir a golden clock. After the banquet Prof. Luster's band took care that every one enjoyed himself at dancing. The following officers received each a token for faithful services rendered: Mr. Emanuel Meyer, a gold watch, chain and locket; Mr. Leo Ullman, a diamond ring; Mr. Isaac Gans, a locket; Mr. Ferd Loewenbaum, a watch; Mr. Isaac Well, a watch; Messrs. Simon Levy, Isidor Fuhs and Sam Kahn, a locket. The society consists of 296 members, and is in a flourishing condition.

On May 25, an A. I. U. organization meeting was held at Hoboken, N. J. Asher Cohen Fisher was chosen president; Jacob Shapira, secretary, and Rev. Nathan Wolf, treasurer.

The Elmira A. I. U. branch at a meeting held on May 22 adopted resolutions calling on this government to obtain from Russia such uniformity of treatment and protection as may tend to secure the honoring by the Russian Government, of American passports, irrespective of the religious faith of their bearers.

The Elmira Gazette, in reference to the Alliance's activity, says the following:

"The Elmira branch has been organized only about a year, but during that time they have been engaged in active work. A short time ago Senator Lodge introduced in the Senate a bill relating to immigration, in which provision was made that only a person who had been a citizen of this country could be instrumental in bringing in the country other persons from abroad. This was obviously unjust in the case of young men, who came to this country with the expectation of making this their home, and who desired to send for their wives and children as soon as their circumstances would permit. President Levy (of the A. I. U. Elmira branch), communicated with Senator Lodge about the matter, and when he had pointed out the injustice that it wrought, that particular instance that Mr. Levy cited was greatly responsible for the Senator's change of mind on the subject."

Memorial Service at Temple Beth-El.

The Independent Order Free Sons of Israel held memorial services at Temple Beth-El on Sunday evening, May 29. The Temple was filled to its capacity. The programme was a magnificent one, both intellectually and musically, the entire choir, under the direction of Dr. Silverman, being present. Addresses were made by Emil Tausig, Grand Master of District No. 1; M. S. Stern, United States Grand Master; Rev. Dr. Silverman, of Temple Emanu-El; Rev. Dr. Grossman, of Temple Rodoph Scholem; Rev. Dr. Lyons, Rev. Dr. Greenfield and Rev. Dr. Thorne. The following was the programme of the evening. We also take pleasure in printing in full the masterly oration delivered by Emil Tausig, Grand Master of District No. 1. The committee in charge of this affair, under the chairmanship of Mr. Eugene D. Klein, deserves great credit for the elegant programme arranged, and the very precise manner in which it was carried out.

Address by Grand Master Emil Tausig: My Brothers, Ladies and Gentlemen: We are assembled this evening under auspices of the District Grand Lodge No. 1, Independent Order Free Sons of Israel, representing 10,000 American Israelites of the City of New York, to commemorate, the departed brethren of our association, and to observe the national day of mourning, which marks in all its entirety the sublime epoch, when fidelity to the republic triumphed over the dangers of secession and all the perils of the Civil War.

This is a day for memory and tears. A mighty and grateful nation bends over the graves of its honored dead, and pays the tribute of love and gratitude. A united brotherhood, with hearts filled with sorrow, true to its principles of friendship, love and truth, remembers the departed co-workers, among them some of its best leaders.

On this day we recall the history of our country's life. We recount the lofty deeds of vanished years, the toil, the suffering, the defeat and victories of heroic men. Men who made our country free. We remember the disasters, the poverty, the hunger, the sufferings, and above all, the glories of the Revolution.

We also remember all the heroes, all the generous and chivalric men, who came from other lands to make ours free. From every land, of every speech, driven by want and lured by hope, exiles and emigrants sought the mysterious West. Year after year, the colonists fought, toiled and suffered. They began to talk about liberty—reason of the rights of men. There was a dawn of a new day—they began to dream of Independence. Of the many thousands who shared the gloom and glory of this sacred war not one remains of the first battle of this nation, but the nation they founded still remains, and will remain forever and ever. Our great country is free and independent, and seventy millions of free people remember with gratitude the heroes of the Revolution. The heroes of other wars for the preservation of our rights, and humanity sake. The heroes of civil life, that stood in our legislative bodies and heralded forth their cry for liberty, and by the fearless expression of their true, patriotic sentiment, placed their lives in jeopardy. All laid to rest, leaving behind them a nation the foremost of all the world.

Among those thousands of the emigrants who came to this dear country of ours, especially we citizens of Jewish faith, should be grateful and faithful for all the privileges, liberties and equal rights which we enjoy here, and for which those noble men died. When religious intolerance, hatred and persecution compelled us to flee from our old Fatherland, we found here in this God-blessed land, a new country, new and happy homes, religious liberty, freedom of speech. Here in the land of the brave and the home of the free, we found our Zion, our Palestine. Here we found the best and truest friend of the Jew; the glorious American flag, wherever it waves, we are free and independent.

And so remember we to-day the departed founders and co-workers of this great brotherhood of the Independent Order Free Sons of Israel, who in early years recognized the necessity and importance of the Jewish Unions. We remember the leaders who very wisely made it one of our principles and objects, to educate and to make our members better Jews and better Americans, who united Americanism and Judaism in one virtue, "Freemasonry." We remember all those who, devoted to our cause, worked for us, and with us, to make our brotherhood one of the greatest, strongest, best and noblest among all the kindred organizations.

The lesson which this day teaches us above all others, is that no matter what difficulties may arise, no matter what dangers may threaten our institutions, the American patriotism is sufficient to solve every question and surmount every difficulty. And so with our race, in no other nation has the identity of a scattered people been preserved through centuries, traditions and religious ceremonies maintained under adverse surroundings and unity preserved. The Egyptian, the Babylonians, the Persian rose and passed away; the Greek and Romans followed and they are gone. The Jew humiliated, persecuted for centuries and centuries still remains—and as long as we will be united, will live forever and ever. As long as we will remain true to the principles of our brotherhood, true to our teachings, true to friendship, love and truth, true to Americanism and Judaism, the Independent Order Free Sons of Israel will exist, and will always keep the heroes of our nation, our leaders, and co-workers in sacred and everlasting memory.

Yorkville Lodge, of this city, held a memorial service in honor of its late brother, Nestor A. Alexander, who was also a member of the Executive Committee of the Order. Addresses were delivered by M. S. Stern, Grand Master of the Order, Emil Tausig, Grand Master of District No. 1, Dr. Rudolph Grossman, William A. Gans, who presented the resolutions passed by the Executive Committee, M. S. Keller, who presented resolutions on behalf of the Lodge; Prayer was offered by Mr. Pollack, President of the Temple Hand in Hand, in the Bronx. Vocal and musical selections appropriate to the occasion were rendered. Among those present were State Senator Hawkins, M. J. McGuire, Deputy Grand Master of the Order A. Finkenberg, Benjamin Blumenthal and Ralph Rosenberg, of the Executive Committee.

A meeting of the Building Committee of District Grand Lodge No. 1 was held at the office of the Order on Sunday last.

Forty-five new members were initiated into the Lodges of Chicago during the last month. A new lodge is also about being organized.

The People's Culture Club.

The People's Culture Club will hold an open meeting in the University Settlement on the corner of Livingston and Eldridge streets, on Sunday evening, June 5th, 1904, at 8 p. m. sharp. The committee arranged a fine musical programme and a debate on Woman's Suffrage. All ladies and gentlemen are invited.

Decoration Day Celebration.

Four hundred little boys and girls, children of immigrants who have not been in this country more than six weeks, gave a remarkable exhibition last Tuesday of their ability to master in a short time the English language and conform to the customs of this country.

In the auditorium of the Educational Alliance Building, at East Broadway and Jefferson street, the Baron de Hirsch English classes for immigrant children held a Decoration Day celebration. The little ones spoke and sang in excellent English, and listened to addresses by the superintendent, David Blaustein, Adolph Lewinsohn, A. S. Solomons of Washington, D. C., and N. Taylor Phillips.

Abraham Pissnitz, a little fellow who left Russia three months ago, delivered the address of welcome, and urged in quite a statesman-like way a continued friendliness between this country and Russia.

Superintendent Blaustein, after each one spoke, asked the boys questions about school life on the other side.

One twelve-year-old youngster said that he had gone through the Chumesh and was studying Mishnaoth. He spoke perfect English and said he was anxious to become a good citizen of this country.

About one thousand children are graduated from this preparatory school every year and enter the various public schools of the city.

In his address Superintendent Blaustein said that the object of the preliminary training is to discover talents in the children and to instruct them along the lines which appear to best suit them.

He told of how several of the boys and girls were remarkably clever at drawing, although two weeks ago they entered the art gallery of the school with fear and trembling, thinking that it was a place of worship, where the second commandment was being broken.

The children sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," and "Sweet and Low" as very few American girls and boys can sing it.

"It is remarkable," said Superintendent Blaustein, "how quickly these little people can learn. They appear to be hungry for knowledge all the time. Public School principals tell me that they are always near the head of their class."

Children's Class Clubs.

It is some years now since Pereira Mendes instituted Children's Class Clubs in the downtown religious classes, which he established in 1888 to offset certain missionaries. These classes are all composed of poor children, yet they willingly practice self-denial and are thus trained in practical philanthropy.

Class Club A, "Young Folks Society." Dues were two cents, which were to be given to the "Home for the Daughters of Jacob" in Gouverneur street. Several times during the season the members visited the Home and recited and sang for the old people, also taking them presents of fruit and various other things.

They were always warmly welcomed at the Home and enjoyed going very much, and when they visited it for the last time they had five dollars to give them.

As a closing for the season they gave a social and invited several of their friends and the teacher.

P. S. We also made pictures and cards which were sent to the Brightside Nursery.

Class Club B, Dr. Mendes' "Charity Club."

During the past term we have had talks on reading the lives and works of Oliver Wendell Holmes, Benjamin Franklin and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

We saved our pennies and paid a visit to the sick in Lebanon Hospital, taking toys for the children and flowers for the grown people. We also saved $4 for the crippled children or any other place which Dr. Mendes may suggest.

We also contemplate visiting the Old Folks Home in the near future.

Class Club C, "Little Workers."

We have collected $3.10 to be given toward some charitable purpose, which may be suggested.

Class Club D, "United Circle."

We visited the Lebanon Hospital, taking toys for the children and flowers for the grown people. We also saved $4 for the crippled children or any other place which Dr. Mendes may suggest.

We also contemplate visiting the Old Folks Home in the near future.

Class Club E, "Little Helpers."

For any charity work, we have collected $3.03.

are unable to practice agriculture. The realization of this plan is, however, still remote, as the Association has, for the time being, enough work in hand with the extension of its colonization programme in the Argentine, where 200 families are settled annually.

Supplanting the Talmud.

"The Jewish Tribune of recent date transcribes one of Malmonides' sections into 'Hilchath Ovel,' which is fallacious. Ovel, technically, would signify 'mourner,' while the treatise under discussion treats mourning in all its various shades and details, in which instance the term should have been differently worded, if one could volunteer to undertake the task, and pronounced 'Ebbel'."

This from Nachman Heller's letter in the Hebrew Standard, May 6, 1904.

Mr. Heller is grossly mistaken:

1. As "mourning in all its various shades and details" cannot exist without a direct or indirect "mourner," consequently the laws about mourning concern the mourner, and therefore "Hilchath Ovel," "the laws of a mourner," is not fallacious but perfectly correct.

2. If against all logic we would consent to Mr. Heller's supposition, that Malmonides wrote the laws of mourning we, nevertheless would say that "ovel" does not always "technically" signify "mourner," sometimes it signifies "mourning" and is interchanged with "eivel."

"And when the inhabitant of the land, the Canaanites, saw the mourning (eivel) * * * and they said this (is) a grievous mourning (eivel) * * * wherefore they called it name the mourning (ovel) of Egypt" (Genesis 1, 11). Here is perfect interchange of "eivel" with "ovel," both meaning the mourning, and

3. None "could volunteer to undertake the task" and pronounced "Ebbel" because (a) it is "ovel," and (b) the "h" in "Ebbel" is superfluous.

"We would close with this explanation, but as we noticed that Mr. Heller wrote 'visiter' to the tune 'and 'v'afst od.' 'I' in (the Talmudist) and none else beside me, we find it incumbent upon us to debar him that as far as his letter concerns, he proves to be a very deficient Talmudical student, and is wanting in logic. Here are our proofs. He writes: 'The sermonette 'Creed and Deed,' in a recent edition of the Hebrew Standard referring to the moon, the luminary that complained before the Creator for having bestowed equal splendor upon two kings, credits the Midrash with the authority of this allegorical fable.

"Why not direct the reader to the better known, more authoritative and genuinely authentic Talmud, which bears upon the subject at issue in one of its numerous tractates, namely, 'Hulin 60, b.'"

If Mr. Heller would acquire a better knowledge of the Talmudical literature he would learn to distinguish "Hagadah," which is found in the Talmud, and "Midrash" found in Midrash Rabbah, Midrashic sayings found in the Midrash Rabbah are more authoritative than Hagadah in the Talmud. (Rosh Yoseph on Orach Chaim, chapter 550). The reason being that as the Talmud records specially halachah, the hagadah found in it is not reliable. Even halachah in the Talmud, if not especially recorded (only derech agav), is not reliable. (Rashba on Nedorim 165, glossaries Rabbas, vol. 1, chap. 3).

The above arguments fully justify the Hebrew Standard in giving credit to the Midrash, and Mr. Heller instead of finding fault should better be more conversant in the Talmudical literature.

Illogical is also Mr. Heller's "kick" against the Jewish Exponent for crediting the New Testament with the saying: "All things whatsoever ye would that man should do unto you, even so do ye also unto them." Mr. Heller asks, "Why not name Hillel, who fathered it?" Our answer is, because the sentence quoted by the Exponent Hillel never fathered; as Mr. Heller began his letter with a quotation, from Dr. F. Myers' Gems of the Talmud, we will quote Hillel's saying from the same gems:

"Whatever hateful is to you, Unto your neighbor never do!"

Hillel's saying is a negative injunction, and the sentence quoted by the Jewish Exponent is a positive injunction. The question is not which quotation is better, but whom to credit with each of them? And certainly we cannot credit Hillel with a sentence which he never said.

The only excuse we have for Mr. Heller's blunders is because he wrote his famous letter on "Lag b'Omen" just in a time when an orthodox Jew feels between and betwixt, a little sorrow for Rabbi Akiba's disciples and a little joyous because of Rabbi Simon ben Yochoel's joyful day; and when a man is not settled, he is not responsible.—Jewish Tribune.

Another anti-Semitic outbreak is confidently expected in Kishineff (says the Westminster Gazette), and the reason of the present discontent is curious. The "ishvoshtchiks," or cab-drivers in the autumn are wont to pawn their wheeled carriages in order to buy new ponies for the sleighs. They obtain about forty roubles ($10); and, of course, when the snow disappears are unable to repay the principal and interest. The Jews then hire out to them their own carriages at the rate of one rouble per day. Our contemporary says that this works out at a high rate of interest per annum, but to our minds the question arises whether it is not (if charged in fact) a premium paid for a short loan, and for insurance against the risk of total loss of money and terrible physical violence.

A Jewish Settlement in Brazil.

Herr Feinberg, the representative of the Russian Central Committee of the Jewish Colonization Association, has published interesting particulars respecting the first Jewish colony established by the Association in Brazil. Each colonist receives 25 hectares (about 62 acres) of land, a cow, two horses and oxen, and a house, 8 metres long and 4 metres wide. The colonists themselves have to erect their sheds and stables, but the wood is provided for them by the neighboring forests. The soil has been prepared for cultivation by non-Jewish laborers at the cost of the Association, but in future settlements the colonists will be expected to clear the ground. The Colonization Association contemplates the formation of a large Jewish centre in Brazil, which will serve as a home for a considerable number of Jewish immigrants, including those who

Annual Meeting of D. G. L. No. 2 Held at Indianapolis, Ind., May 22-3-4.

District Grand Lodge, No. 2, I. O. E. B., convened at Indianapolis last Sunday morning, at Hotel Claypool. President William Ornstein called the meeting to order, and after organization read his message. In it he commends the removal work of the Industrial Removal Office, which, during 1903, sent over 5,500 people from New York to various towns in the West and South, and recommends the appointment of a committee from among the members of the lodges of the smaller cities, preferably, to cooperate in this work. The convention approved of this by a unanimous vote. He commends social settlements, and asks the order to help in their establishment.

I am informed that in certain sections there have been organized political clubs known as "The Hebrew Republican Club," or "The Jewish Democratic Club," etc. I can not too strongly deprecate the mixing of our religion with politics. This can do our faith no good, but, on the contrary, may result in ridicule and unfavorable comment, and is likely to engender animosity and race hatred, and in many instances work to the great detriment of the efforts of our co-religionists, who are working with might and main to eliminate all ill-will, race prejudice and class hatred. I would earnestly recommend to every member of our Order to use his best efforts to see that people of our faith do not allow the name "Hebrew" or "Jewish" affixed to any political organization.

Among the notable deaths those of Leo N. Levi and Lewis Abraham are mentioned.

All of the recommendations were favorably acted upon.

The District has now the largest membership of its existence. On April 30, 1904, it had 3,568 on the roll, a net gain during the term over losses from all cases of 263. There are over 200 petitions pending. During this administration 663 new candidates were secured.

The D. G. L. disbursements for the year 1903 (less the amount of C. G. L. dues and amount received from the Executive Committee for propaganda purposes and transferred to the Propaganda Committee) were $2,808.66, as against $2,897.80 in 1902.

The Sinking Fund of the Covenant Endowment is reported at over $400,000. The endowment has been examined by a professional expert, and pronounced to be perfectly solvent.

One of the notable events of the meeting was a vote unanimously in favor of an amendment to the constitution providing that every lodge room should be decorated with Old Glory. In the discussion which preceded the voting the delegates declared that the impression which this decoration would make on the many foreign Jews who join the order each year would be most favorable to the order and to the nation.

Hon. Simon Wolf, the Grand President, was present at all the meetings, and delivered several eloquent addresses, making strong pleas for the highest civic ideals and for membership and active work of every Ben B'rith in Jewish affairs.

A pleasant incident of the banquet was the presentation of a magnificent silver loving cup to the retiring president, Mr. William Ornstein, under whose administration District No. 2 has broken all records for increase of membership and work accomplished. Mr. Jacob Furth made the presentation address, and his glowing eulogues were an echo of the thoughts of all present.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Leon Block, Kansas City, Mo., president; Harry I. Schloss, Terre Haute, Ind., first vice-president; Milton Anfenger, Denver, second vice-president; Victor Abraham, Cincinnati, secretary; Abe Bloch, Cincinnati, treasurer; J. M. Ray, Cincinnati, sergeant-at-arms; Joseph Mayer, Cincinnati, messenger.

Delegates to Constitution Grand Lodge—Martin A. Marks, Jacob Furth, Cleveland, O.; Nathan Drucker, William Ornstein, Jacob Trost, Victor Abraham, Cincinnati; Samuel Bowman, of St. Louis; Leon Block, Kansas City, Mo.; Sol S. Kiser, Indianapolis; Alfred Miller, Myer Friedman, Denver; Nathan M. Uri, Louisville, Ky.

Alternates for C. G. L.—F. S. Spiegel, Max D. May, Charles Wachtel, Cincinnati; A. Brentano, Phil W. Frey, Evansville, Ind.; A. S. Fersheim, Kansas City, Mo.; Fred Lazarus, Columbus, O.; A. Resolutions.

At a special meeting of the North American Relief Society held this day at the office of Harry N. Kohn, 55 Broadway, in this city, President Hezekiah Kohn, Esq., in the chair.

The President announced with deep sorrow the sudden demise of the Hon. Myer S. Isaacs, our associate on the Board and Treasurer of this Institution, on Tuesday, May 24th, 1904.

Whereupon it was proposed to record the following expression of our sad regret at the great loss which this Institution has sustained in the demise of our beloved colleague. A personal friend of all the members of this board, we have always felt proud of his counsel and assisted with the highest regard his able and conscientious advice, ever diligent and energetic in promoting the welfare of this Institution.

He has succeeded his father, the Rev. Samuel M. Isaacs, in filling the office of Treasurer of this Institution, of which his father was one of the founders, fifty-one years ago.

Hon. Myer S. Isaacs possessed all the qualifications of a true and faithful friend, whose energies and broad-mindedness were ever enlisted in the cause of relief to his fellow men and in the promotion and welfare of charitable and religious institutions.

A prominent member of the legal profession, an able counsellor and conscientious adviser. His energies have always been fully centered in promoting the object which he represented.

The members of this board all feel the sad personal loss in the demise of our associate, and extend to his bereaved family their sincere sympathy and condolence.

Resolved: That the Board of Directors attend the funeral in a body and that a copy of the above expression be spread upon the minutes of this Institution and a copy thereof, suitably engrossed, be presented to his afflicted family.

HEZEKIAH KOHN, President.

S. T. MEYER, Hon. Secretary.

IN THE THEATRES.

Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre.

A number of current dramatic successes have been presented at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in the past few weeks, and to that number must be added "The Cowboy and the Lady" next week, in which Mr. Nat C. Goodwin originally scored a distinct success at the Knickerbocker Theatre. S. Miller Kent, who succeeded Mr. Goodwin, will play the principal role. Others in the cast will be George Bryant, Lotta Linthicum, Leo Hawley, Lucretia Healy and other favorites. In the vaudeville section Matthews and Ashley, who differ from most Hebrew comedians, will head the list.

Proctor's 125th Street Theatre.

"Needles and Pins," a satirical comedy adapted from the German by the late Augustin Daly, and regarded by authorities as one of the best examples of his skill in localizing German plays, will be given an elaborate production by the permanent stock company located at Mr. F. F. Proctor's Theatre on One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street next week. Among those who are given special prominence in the cast are Wallace Erskine, N. J. Butler, Albert Veazie, Julian Reed, Edwin Fowler, Adelaide Keim, Mathilda Deshon, Estelle Earle.

Proctor's 23d Street Theatre.

"The Magic Kettle," which proved a most sensational novelty, will be retained at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, where the surprising accomplishments of this unique utensil have excited great comment during the past seven days. Wright Huntington, who will be assisted by Florida Kingsley in Chas. J. Bell's sketch "A Stand Off," will give the first presentation of this play in New York in some time. Ben Welch will present a type of Hebrew originally made known by his brother Joe Welch.

Sabbath Portion of the Law:

בשעולותך

When you go on your vacation, carry your Judaism with you.

Have you visited any of our communal institutions? If not, why not?

Dr. South says: "The tale-bearer and the tale-hearer should be hanged up both together—the former by the tongue, and the latter by the ear."

Troubles are like hornets, the less ado you make about them the better, for your outcry will only bring the whole swarm upon them.

When you go to the Temple to morrow take a microscope with you and see how many of the boys and girls who received the "rite of Confirmation" are there.

Thousands are seeking the bread of spiritual life and the wine of religious progress, and yet the Sunday services in our Reform Temples have been discontinued. 'Tis too bad!

The Pope having interdicted the employment of female singers in the Church, the Reform Rabbis can now claim that it is not Chukkas Hagoy to have Christian girls in their choirs.

Before you go to the country for your health send your donation to the Hebrew Sanitarium, so that when the "hot days" arrive the sick children of the Jewish poor can find relief from the stifling atmosphere of the tenement house.

Certain people are always complaining of their hard lot and poverty. They go about with disaster written on their faces; they are walking advertisements of their own failures, their own listless, nerveless, lifeless inactivity; they are always talking, but never doing.

That face looks good to us through which genuine goodness looks at us. The real looking of a face is not from what is on it of color or form, but from what is behind it, looking out of it. If good is behind a face, it is good looking. Good looking out makes good looking at. Isaiah bore witness to this by the opposite, when he said of the evil dwellers of Jerusalem that "the show of their countenance doth witness against them."

"Beautiful faces are those that show Beautiful thoughts that lie below."

Divine Justice.

האל יחן משפט. "And Miriam was excluded outside of the camp seven days; and the people did not set forward till Miriam was brought in."

Mercy is the sublimest word that language can express and the divinest attribute that the human breast can harbor. When the wicked who have committed grievous wrong are in our hands to deal with, and it is in our power to mete out condign punishment, and we yet compassionately extend mercy to the wrong-doer, the angels in heavenly spheres must smile benignantly upon us. How much more merciful is God whose attributes are all love, all mercy, all loving kindness! Conscious of this great and beautiful truth, can we not put ourselves in the hands of our merciful Father if we have acted wickedly and pray for His tender mercies, for His pardon of our sins, for forgiveness of wrongs? And would God's pardoning grace disappoint? This is the subject of which our Sidrah to day treats, affording us a vivid example of God's justice.

The three persons highest in the camp of Israel were Moses, Aaron and their sister Miriam. Moses was the teacher and governor, Aaron the priest and counsellor, and Miriam was the prophetess, the priestess, the guide par excellence among the women. Concerning what had passed between the two brothers and sister we probably are ignorant, as no one had peeped behind the family curtain, for we can scarcely believe that Miriam and Aaron would have spoken ill of their brother, even though it was between themselves, (except perhaps some gossip the result of dislike for Moses' wife); but they did speak ill of Moses. They did say: "Hath the Lord spoken only with Moses? Hath He not also spoken within us?" And the Lord heard it. We can only surmise that even these two great personages, Aaron and Miriam, were not free from envy and grudge, that they, too, were envious that their brother should have stood higher than they, but he not only stood higher in rank but higher in character.

He hears himself traduced by his own brother and sister, yet his lips are silent: they neither utter rebuke nor self-defence, but the Lord requites the wrong, and lets the culprits know their iniquity, at the same time Miriam is stricken with leprosy. Aaron immediately turns to Moses (not to God), whom he had not, directly at least, offended—as it should be—and confesses his guilt and begs for his sister's recovery. Moses, void of vindictive feeling against his erring sister, cries to God: "O God, heal her!" And the Lord answers his prayer, Miriam is healed, but He said: "Let her be shut up for seven days outside the camp, and then let her come in again." She was not to be let off scott free. The high estimation in which Miriam was held is evident from the action of the people, who did not set forward till she was brought back to camp again.

This is to teach us a valuable lesson. We know and understand that God is gracious and merciful, that when we sin He will turn to our prayers if sincerely uttered, but we must not think that we can wrong or injure our fellow-man, then turn to God and pray for His pardon and forgiveness and immediately obtain it. It were merciful to obtain God's pardon, but were it so to the man or woman whom we have maligned, traduced and wronged! To him or her the Lord would not manifest the mercy we pray for, but as the Lord is merciful to all, we cannot expect God's mercy for evil done to our neighbor, unless reparation accompanied by contrition is made—divine justice would not be so faulty as that. We are all human, liable to err and capable of doing wrong, but if we have in any way injured any body we must first make reparation, then turn to God with sincere prayer, and though He may punish us, He will also show us His mercy.

Standing Aside.

"How to advance gracefully," read one half in amusement, half contemptuously, from one of the lighter journals of the day which devote whole columns to grave advice concerning the most trivial matters. "How to stand aside and let others advance would be a much more important subject to most of us. It is a much harder thing, and it seems to be what we are oftentimes called upon to do."

The words held a touch of bitterness not unnatural, for the speaker had come to one of life's standing aside places and found it hard. They are indeed nearly always hard. Even when we have grown weary and conscious of our own inability, and when the one who advances does it tenderly and is someone dear to us, there is still a conscious hurt. The mother can scarcely resign to her daughter her own accustomed place without a pang. But usually the standing aside is at the behest of circumstances that are unwelcome, perhaps of conditions that are felt to be unjust, and then to take second place where one has been wont to lead, to hear another praised for the work that has been one's own—that is a hard position to take gracefully. Taking it in some wise, however, is one of life's inevitable, and the only thing that can rob it of its bitterness is the truth too often forgotten—that, however the standing aside may seem dictated by human selfishness or forced by cruel circumstances, beyond all these it is the Father's ordering, or it could not be. —The Young Woman.

Roses and Thorns.

We wonder what this world be to us if throughout our lives we reposed on a bed of roses. Should we, in reality, feel more happy than when, under the present social dispensation, we frequently feel a sharp thorn in our sides, and a score of keen-biting points starting up against our heads in the night-time, as if so many little imps were holding a carnival among the feathers of our pillow? We have often asked the question both of ourselves and of others, but have never obtained a satisfactory answer, and being obliged to take refuge in the court of experience, we very soon discovered that appearances were invariably deceptive, and that the roses and thorns of life mingled promiscuously together; that they were inseparably united one for a stimulant to man, the other as a reward to him during the natural pauses between his exertions.

Child Thieves and Their Ways.

IV. Halting the Enemy BY THE SENTINEL.

It cannot be contended that the enemies of our faith are guilty of "putting their light under a bushel." The claim that is put forward by most of them, is, that the moral and social tone of those among whom the Settlements are located, is lower than is compatible with the requirements of our ordinary civilization, and that as the Jews do not do anything to improve this tone, it is the bounden duty of good citizens, not to say of good Christians, to undertake the task.

Whenever the retort courteous is given to these friends so solicitous for our welfare, whenever their own gospel: "Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote of thy brother's eye," is urged, there are other ingenious reasons offered for the continuance of the "labor of love." For instance: One head worker explained that their Settlement had been established in its location when the neighbors were mostly German Christians. These had now to a great extent moved away, and the children attending the place are exclusively the children of immigrant Jews. Naively, said she: "We would gladly induce the Italian children to come instead of the Jews, but it seems we cannot get them, while we cannot keep the Jewish children out."

As subtly as the serpent that encompassed the fall of our first parents, the efforts "to keep the Jewish children out," include the offering of every petty bribe that can appeal to human nature—especially to a child's nature. Treats, toys, candies, outings and "good times" of every kind are arranged. Money is never lacking for all these things, provided by those, who in the language of their gospel, "preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling block!"

Another head worker openly expressed her desire to convert the Jews to Christianity. "It was the highest duty of a Christian," said she. This lady whose manner is most charming and ingratiating, said that, "She did not see what the Jews had to grumble at. At most, their mission could influence 500 children a year. There were at least 3,000 Jewish children within three or four blocks of the Mission House. Why did not the Jews try to instill Judaism into the lives of the 2500 who were not being taught any religion by anybody?"

And this is a pertinent question and one that the Jewish community of New York will do well to ponder over.

Still two wrongs never yet made a right. The missionaries themselves describe the field in which they work as "A large slice of the foreign missionary field lifted and left upon our own doorstep." It is difficult to understand how the workers of a church that "has been praying to God to open the doors of heathen lands to her," arrive at the conclusion that "God is bringing heathendom into our own ports." It is a fact however, that this is a quotation from one of the brochures sent broadcast through the length and breadth of the land. It is one of the assertions that is used to open the pocket-books of those who encourage this predatory larceny. Why is what is stated in the gospel of John not true to-day? "He that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber, but he that entereth by the door is the shepherd of the sheep."

We have been charged with many things, including the charge of neglect of the religious instruction of our little ones, as mentioned above, but as the New Testament says, "every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them!"

Egypt, Babylon, Greece, Rome and Spain are to-day only memories. In their days they, too, stood solid as rocks in their pride and insolent assertion of being the only custodians of the gate of wisdom and salvation.

The Sentinel calls "Halt!" to those "whose throat is an open sepulchre; with their tongues they have used deceit; the poison of asps is under their lips." Halt!!

The simple sentence, "For now I know that thou fearest God" (Gen. xlii 12), has found numerous explanations among Jewish commentators. Maimonides expresses the opinion that it is to be interpreted, "Now I have made known to all." R. Joseph Albo compares this sentence with the remark of Abraham to his wife on entering Egypt: "Now I know thou art a beautiful woman;" not that he had been ignorant of it before, but seeing now Egyptian women, his previous opinion was confirmed. Aben Ezra takes the word ירא, here in the sense of pity, and translates "Now I pity because thou fearest God."

Henri IV. of France once sent, owing to his knowledge of languages, a Jew to Spain as ambassador. The official's return was inordinately delayed, and upon again presenting himself to the monarch the latter addressed him very brusquely and said he should have returned at least a week earlier. The ambassador excused himself, giving as a reason that on his arrival at Madrid, he was asked to ride on the back of a donkey which he refused to do. To this excuse the king sarcastically exclaimed: "Well, it would have been quite fitting for an ass to ride on a donkey." The ambassador quietly replied: "Sire, I was compelled to represent your august person!"

Amruz, a little village in the neighborhood of Tripolis, is inhabited entirely by Jewish blacksmiths. The clang of the hammers is heard from morning till night. Esru, the rabbi of the place, was formerly a smith. The chief product consists of swords and daggers, which are highly prized by the Arabs and Moors. At the close of the day, the workmen assemble in a large synagogue for evening prayers. According to the legend, Amruz was founded by Jews shortly after the destruction of the second Temple. The territory was given to them by the Romans, who at that time reigned over North Africa.

The Man in the Observatory.
XXVII.

A man who has been eminently successful and built up one of the greatest business houses to be found in any part of the world, is Benjamin Altman.

Mr. Altman is a self-made man in every sense of the word. He had no one to give him a boost. He had to do this himself. Beginning as a humble clerk in a Sixth Avenue trimming and fancy goods store at very humble wages, he started out for himself and in a very short period of time developed a business which spread out larger and larger until at the present time, as above stated, it is one of the greatest marts found anywhere. Not only did his business through great energy and enterprise become enlarged, but with its growth the house of B. Altman "achieved" a reputation of which any man may well feel proud.

The addition of one building after another marks the progress of this house, and it now presents a handsome store. For exclusive goods and exclusive and original designs in fabrics and garments, this house became distinguished.

Having himself begun at the lowest rung of the ladder and as an employee for others, Mr. Altman was ever considerate towards his employees. He was the first one to introduce the Saturday half-holiday and begin the same in June, and still further, close his establishment at five o'clock during the summer months, thus allowing his employees to enjoy an enlarged vacation.

Mr. Altman is also a large contributor to charities, and his bounty is enjoyed by many. His career has been eminently successful, and is an evidence of the possibilities awaiting those who have the energy and ability to grapple with the chances open to them.

The Grace of Silence.

This grace of silence under trial is one of the most rare and difficult graces; but it is one of the most pleasing to God and most conducive to strength and beauty of religious character. None of us loves to suffer and we all shudder at the sight of the probe or the amputating knife. But when the infinite Love is engaged in cutting out a selfish lust or cutting off a diseased limb, our duty is to submit. "Keep still, my friend," says the surgeon to the patient in the hospital; "for restlessness may produce false cuts and aggravate the process." If the brave fellow is wise, he will say, "Doctor, go as deep as you choose; only fetch out the bullet." Ah! the battlefield requires less courage than the hospital! The onset of service, with drums beating and bugles sounding, does not so test our mettle as to be thrown down wounded, or to be commanded to lie still and suffer. To shout a battle cry at the mouth of a cannon is easier than to put our hands on our mouths and be silent because "God did it." If he is silent as to explanations of trying providences, let us be silent in our filial submission. God knows what is best for us; that is enough.—Selected.

We often live under a cloud, and it is well for us that we should do so. Uninterrupted sunshine would parch our hearts; we want shade and rain to cool and refresh them.

Subscribe for the HEBREW STANDARD.

The Mirror.

It appears that notwithstanding the repeated hammering of the HEBREW STANDARD, that all the giddy nonsense and rank t mfoolery has not yet been eliminated from the "administration of the rite of Confirmation;" I cannot understand why our modern sensational Rabbis do not appreciate the fact, that if the Confirmation is to have any effect in moulding the lives of the future standard bearers of Judaism, the solemn spirit of religion should accompany the exercises, in order to make a serious impression upon them, and that all attempts at theatrical display only tend to deservedly bring the "rite of Confirmation" into contempt.

From an exchange I pick up the following specimen brick:

"The services were unusually solemn and impressive, especially beautiful being the flower offering by the confirmands, each of whom deposited a bunch of six white roses at the altar. The six blossoms deposited by the children, as explained by Rabbi —, were symbolized by the letters of the word 'Israel.' One rose from each child was deposited in the tabernacle; one was given to their parents; a third to the rabbi himself; a fourth to some poor or sick child; the fifth to their teacher, and the sixth and last to be kept as a reminder of the loyalty which each confirmand must have for the right."

Now this was very "bootiful," but let me suggest that in order to save time and to be practical they should have selected four "daisies," to symbolize the letters of the word "BORN." One large one to be presented to the Rabbi (for he certainly is a "daisy"); one to the Cantor, one to the Parnass and one to the Shammash (although a night blooming cereus would be more practically descriptive).

A Western rabbi editor goes into "perfect conniptions" in his description of the ceremony. In giving an elaborate account of the floral decorations, he says:

"From the centre arch were hung nine evergreen wreaths, symbolical of their everlasting faith in God. These were entwined with white ribbon, and the entire group was crowned in the centre with a floral star, which seemed to convey the thought expressed in the phrase 'Aupice Astra' (Aim at the stars)."

Then follows a glowing statement of the maids of honors bearing roses, the solemn and dignified procession of the President and Trustees, etc. "There the rabbi Dr. — raised the veil and displayed to the reverential gaze of the class the sacred Torah." Now isn't this too lovely for anything!

"A unique and original idea which has been introduced during the past few years by Rabbi —, is a class-word, which is given to each confirmation class, the class-word containing the same number of letters as there are confirmands, and each letter representing a noble quality. Each confirmand represents one of these words. The word chosen by the rabbi this year was 'Reverence' and Dr. — used this word in his address to the class, discussing upon the significance of each word contained in the following acrostic:

- Responsibility
- Endeavor
- Virtue
- Education
- Refinement
- Earnestness
- Nobility
- Charity
- Equity

Let me suggest as the word to be chosen by the rabbi next year (if he does not believe in race suicide) and he can discourse upon the significance of each word upon the following acrostic:

- Happiness,
- Union,
- Matrimony,
- Births,
- Uncles,
- Grandmother,
- Hem
- Underwear
- Make
- Bread
- Understand
- Groceries,

or if he wishes to voice the sentiments of the young ladies of his confirmation class, he can use this:

- Help
- Us
- My
- Boys
- Unfortunate
- Girls

For the benefit of my Reform Rabbi admirers I would state, that I am in a position to furnish upon timely notice every Rabbi connected with the Central Conference a significant acrostic word for next-Confirmation Day.

Referring to the Central Conference of American Rabbis (†) which meets at Louisville, Ky., on the 18th inst., I stated in a former reflection of the Mirror, that the slim attendance of only thirty out of two hundred Rabbis had filled the present chiefs of the colleges and the active propagandists of Reform with dire forebodings and dismay, I called attention to the schnorring appeal issued by them to the congregations, that they should pay the expenses of their Rabbi for the purpose of attending the Conference, thus filling up the ranks and presenting a bold front to the opposition.

I thought that aside from the Chutz pa of some of them in posing as Rab pira and self-respect, impelling them to spurn the money thus wrung from his, that there still remained a spirit of credulous congregations, in order that they might have an enjoyable time.

Now I can appreciate the fact, that the Rabbi of a country congregation whose meagre salary would not permit him to bear the expenses of this ecclesiastical jaunt, might be justified in accepting the money thus obtained, but that a respectable Rabbi of a respectable congregation drawing a respectable salary should stoop so low as to accept alms thus offered, passeth human understanding.

I understand that about twenty five "free grafters" have pocketed their pride and their pelf, but up to date I have only heard of one Rabbi in the City of New York who will appear in the "Beggars Opera," and as he draws a salary of five thousand dollars per. and perquisites, I frankly say, if he is not ashamed of himself, he ought to be.

With thousands of poor Jews in this metropolis, the demands of our Homes, Hospitals and Educational Institutions, it appears to me that his congregation could have devoted the money to a nobler use.

But although my Chief admonishes me to mind my own business, I am so constituted that I cannot help "speaking right out in meeting."

the further it recedes from view. With the present it has less sympathy, and it feels that it is fast slipping out of its place, so it is only natural that it should abhor and resent all attempts made by younger rivals to accelerate departure to a sphere of comparative inactivity and obscurity. It is a question whether the world does not suffer by the attitude which age adopts, and the light which it is regarded by people generally. Who can tell what services youth might render to the community if it were not persistently snubbed and held in check?

room. A Jewish teacher read the Book of Ruth with his pupils, explaining the story as he went along. Among the episodes commented on was that narrating how Naomi with her husband and her two sons, went to sojourn in Moab to escape the famine in Bethlehem, and how her two sons married in this country. After the lesson was over, the teacher examined his pupils, and asked why Naomi left Bethlehem. Not a hand was raised. Evidently all had forgotten, and the teacher was in despair. At last one bright youngster extended his paw, and the teacher, with renewed courage, called upon him to inform his inattentive brethren of the simple reason. "She went to Moab to get shidduchim for her sons," cried the lad, triumphantly.—Jewish Spectator.

ASPAKLARYA.

The Tyranny of Age.

Age is inclined to be selfish and tyrannical in its dealings with youth. It likes the latter to come before it as a suppliant; it cannot patiently brook its appearance upon the field in the character of a rival. It swears by experience, and knowing that its experience is its most effective weapon, it is everlastingly bringing it to the front. Independent thought is good, perhaps, in its way; but evidently, in age's opinion it is possible for youth to indulge in it to an absolutely dangerous extent. Most certainly it does not like youth to strike out original lines of action. Dolorous becomes its tones as it dwells upon the lamentable fact that things are not what they used to be, and that people have changed for the worse. Ties of old association bind it to the past, so that it is not surprising that the past should grow more and more beautiful, in its eyes.

How.

WELL TO REMEMBER.

How Old Mattresses May Be Made Over at Home.

Perhaps all housekeepers do not know that old mattresses can be made over to be almost as good as new, says a writer in the Christian Work and Evangelist. If they are filled with moss, hair or cotton they can be renovated nicely, but the excelsior and other cheap fillings must be thrown away. After emptying the contents of the tick through a ripped seam in the middle of the top the dust should be thoroughly shaken from the filling. Cotton may be laid on a flat surface—the porch floor is a good place—and whipped with a limber stick to raise the dust, then well shaken. This treatment also lightens the fiber of the cotton and is good for hair and moss.

Moss is much better for a good washing if very dusty. Use a tub of tepid suds. Plunge some of the moss in and swish it around awhile, then wring through a wringer into a tub of clear water. After rinsing it is wrung again and spread on the grass to dry in the hot sun. It should be turned and shaken a few times while drying. Either moss, hair or cotton should be pulled apart until perfectly light before returning it to the tick.

The tick should be well washed and boiled if necessary, then starched on the inside and well straightened out before drying, as it is difficult to iron it very well. In stuffing the mattress spread it on a clean floor and fill the corners first, then the ends, and so until the middle is reached. Be sure to have it very full in the middle, where the most wear will come, else there will soon be very uncomfortable valleys in the bed. Sew up the seam in the top and proceed to tack the mattress, using a long needle and stout twine. Put small pieces of cloth on the twine at each side of the mattress to prevent the twine breaking through the tick.

After the first row of tacking around the edge of the mattress it can be raised upon chairs or a slat bed to make the work easier. It is hard work, but if one has more time than money it will pay to renovate the old mattresses, as they are so much more comfortable when finished.

How to Freshen Kid Slippers.

White or colored kid slippers often become shabby in appearance because the kid has been peeled off the heels. If the slippers are otherwise in good condition the heels can be made to look like new by cutting from the top of an old glove of the same color a piece of kid large enough to stretch and paste about the heel. The upper edge can be securely pushed under the sole of the shoe and neatly trimmed at the bottom. If not worn until perfectly dry the result is most satisfactory.

How to Clean Veils.

Referring again to the fashionable white lace veils, perhaps some of you may like to have a few hints as to how they may be cleaned at home, for the process is by no means difficult, says a writer in Paris Fashions. Put a good sized piece of soap in a basin of boiling water and make a thick lather. Have the lace rolled round a bottle or glass plaque, and put this into the suds. Let it soak for half an hour at least. If very much soiled, the lace may be left in a great deal longer. Then put it into a fresh hot lather and afterward rinse it thoroughly in cold water. When the veil is spotless spread it out to dry on a clean cloth, pulling it gently into shape. When dry, stiffen it by dipping it into a little gum water (half an ounce of gum arabic to a quart of water), then press it while still damp, having pulled it out nicely each way to keep it in the right shape.

How to Make Banana Salad.

Cut four bananas in halves lengthwise, then cut each in half again. Put these in a glass dish and grate over a very little lemon rind. How to Make Zwieback.

sugar, one cup of butter, two eggs and a pinch of salt, cinnamon to taste and a pint of warm milk. This may be half water. Work all together as you would bread and let it rise again. When risen make it into a long, thin loaf. Let it rise once more and bake. The next day cut the loaf into slices and let them dry in the oven. If this is put away in jars it will keep for a long time.

How to Remove Fish Scales.

The marketman does not always scale fish thoroughly. A cloth wrung out of cold water and dipped in cornmeal is excellent for removing the last scraps of scales. Rubbing ducks and geese with cornmeal after plucking them is also advised. The down disappears like magic.

How to Make the Cheeks Red.

Do not attempt to gain red cheeks by the use of rouge. Give them a daily cold bath and rubbing with a coarse towel. Take a great deal of exercise in the open air; breathe deeply; keep the digestion in good order by a wholesome diet of meat, vegetables, fruits, good bread, cereals and milk. Be energetic in all that you do. The cheeks will brighten as the result of this healthful living.

How to Polish Stair Rods.

Tarnished stair rods are easily cleaned. Wash them with soap and water and then polish with a slightly oiled cloth dusted over with finely powdered rotten stone.

How to Clean Wall Paper.

Grease spots may be removed from wall paper with the aid of a blotter and a hot flatiron. Put the blotter over the stain and press it with the hot iron. By this process the stain will be transferred to the blotter. Other stains may be removed from wall paper by rubbing them with a piece of bread a day old or with a piece of flannel dipped in dry oatmeal.

How to Clean With Salt.

Salt is a most useful though humble friend of the housekeeper if she would but realize the fact. Damp salt will rub off the discolorations left in cups by the sediment of tea and coffee. Salt will set dyes of black and colored articles if a little be added to the water in which these are washed. Salt mixed with lemon juice removes the stains of ink, tar or paint from the hands. Salt and water applied to basket and straw work and rubbed in with a soft nailbrush is a most efficient cleansing agent. Brass ornaments may be kept bright by rubbing them occasionally with salt and vinegar. Salt thrown upon the grate will soon put out a fire in the chimney.

How to Make Nut Frosting.

Nut frosting is always liked by children, and little plain cakes spread with the following mixture will be an addition to the party menu: One cupful of confectioner's sugar mixed with a cupful of cold water, almond flavor. Add at the last moment half a cupful of finely ground nut meats.

How to Wash Chiffon.

Wash chiffon, especially white, and it can be made to look almost like new. Make a lather of best yellow soap and let it stand till lukewarm. Soak the chiffon in this for an hour. Shake it gently round and round in the suds, but do not rub. Squeeze out carefully and rinse in two or three lots of cold water. Dissolve a little gum in a teacupful of water, add a few drops of vinegar. Dip in the chiffon and do not squeeze, but lay between the folds of a clean cloth and pat with the hand. Pull out carefully. Cover with a piece of tissue paper and iron with a moderate iron.

How to Mend Wall Paper.

Wall paper, if a patch is needed, should be torn off in an irregular line at the place where it meets the old paper. If this is done and it matches accurately, the join will scarcely show.

MODERN VERSE.

Slipping Away.
They are slipping away, the sweet, swift years,
Like a leaf on the current cast.
With never a break in their rapid flow,
We watch them as one by one they go
Into the beautiful past.

As silent and swift as a weaver's thread,
Or an arrow's flying gleam,
As soft as the languorous breezes hid
That lift the willow's long golden lid
And ripple the glassy stream;

As light as the breath of the thistle down,
As fond as a lover's dream,
As pure as the flush in the sea shell's throat,
As sweet as the wood bird's wooing note,
So tender and sweet they seem.

One after another we see them pass
Down the dimly lit stair.
We hear the sound of their steady tread
In the steps of the centuries long dead,
As beautiful and as fair.

There's only a few years left to love,
Shall we waste them in idle strife?
Shall we trample under our ruthless feet
These beautiful blossoms, rare and sweet,
By the dusty way of life?

There's only a few swift years—ah, let
Noxious taints be heard,
Make life's fair pattern of rare design
And fill up the measure with love's sweet wine,
But never an angry word.

The Open Fireplace.
Some like apartments warmed by steam.
Some claim the furnace stands the test.
Some say in comfort they can dream
When rattling pipes tell them to rest.
They add, "To sleep it gives a zest."
And makes them happy as can be,
But these to me are not the best—
The open fireplace for me!

Before the grate I sit and gaze.
The pictures there fill me with joy.
They bring back to my mind the days
When I was just a careless boy,
When foolish doubts did not annoy,
When life seemed ever gay and free,
With pipe and furnace I won't toy—
The open fireplace for me!

When night is here, and lights burn low,
I watch the flickering shadows play
Upon the floor. They come and go
As do one's thoughts, now grave, now gay.

Contentment mine? Well, I should say!
Life's better than I thought 'twould be—
And more delightful every day—
The open fireplace for me!

L'ENVOI.
Yes, though on most things I'm not right,
This statement's true, you will agree—
Soft coal costs less than anthracite—
The open fireplace for me!
—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Sea.
I stand upon the summit of my life,
Behold, the camp, the court, the field, the grove,
The battle and the burden; vast, afar
Beyond these weary ways, behold, the sea!
The sea, o'er-swept by clouds and winds
And wings.
By thoughts and wishes manifold, whose breath
Is freshness and whose mighty pulse is peace.

Pafter no question of the horizon dim—
Cut loose the bark! Such voyage itself is rest;
Majestic motion, unimpeded scope,
A widening heaven, a current without care,
Eternity! Deliverance, promise, course,
Time treads souls salute thee from the shore!
—Brownlee Brown.

"Old Sweethearts Are the Sweetest."
Old sweethearts are the sweetest,
As all true lovers know,
Old comforts are completest
In sun or shade, in snow,
Say, sweetheart, is it so?
In gray and golden weather
We two go on together.
Old sweethearts are the sweetest,
As all true lovers know.
Old sweethearts are the sweetest,
As all true lovers know,
Young lover, as thou grestest
Thy sweetheart tell her so,
Ah, tell her, tell her so!
Time, ties a golden tether
As we go on together.
Old sweethearts are the sweetest,
As all true lovers know.
—Wendell Phillips Stafford.

A Song of the Summer Time.
Let's sing a song of summer time, no matter
If the blast
Of twenty blizzards freeze the Singing lines at last!
Let's sing of hills an' dells
Where music heavenward swells—
The silver tinkle of the thrush—the tinkling
Cattle bells.

Let's sing a song of summer time! The Winter stayed so long
We're weary for a summer sun to shimmer
In a song,
To wander where the breeze
Shakes the tresses of the trees
An' the lily's heart is honey to the golden,
Thievin' bees!

Let's sing a song of summer time! Let's
Sing an' ring it sweet
As the music of the waterfalls, the wind
That waves the wheat,
While love, in meadows green,
Enraptured views the scene,
The roses for love's recompense and summer
Sweet his queen!

MISS CLARA GRAEËEN.

The Bright Young Clerk of the Treasury Department.

There are a number of women employed in various positions of responsibility in the different departments in the national capital, but perhaps the most remarkable position held by any woman under the government is occupied by Miss Clara Graeëen, who is the law clerk of the treasury at Washington. A mere girl, slight of figure, with fluffy blond hair, one would never imagine that she could be an expert writer of legal opinions for one of the executive departments. Yet such is her business, and she obtained her place purely through merit and superior ability. It pays $2,000 a year and is the only position of the kind under the government that was ever held by a woman. Miss Graeëen went to Washington from Kalgaska, Mich., some eight years ago. Though still in her teens, she was a proficient stenographer and, by passing highest in a competitive examination, secured employment as a typewriter in the treasury. Before long she earned for herself the reputation of the most rapid shorthand writer in the department. Her evenings she spent in studying law, and after a while some of the cases that came into the comptroller's office were referred to her for decision. She showed such lucidity and legal accuracy in the preparation of such papers that when, a few years ago, the place of law clerk fell vacant, it was given to Miss Graeëen by Secretary Gage.

Study Your Own Style.

The scolding locks at the back of the neck are beauty's greatest ornament if the pretty woman only understands how to utilize them.

Very few artists are bold enough or daring enough to paint the female neck bare of curls, and there is hardly a famous ideal head in the picture galleries with the ears exposed.

The tips of the feminine ears may be as pretty as pink shells; but, all the same, the artistic eye loves to clothe them in soft ringlets, and no matter how graceful or swanlike may be the back of the neck it is much more artistic to dress it in small curls, be the curls ever so tiny, or, as one woman expressed it, ever so straight.

If the hair does not grow prettily at the back of the neck try to train the locks down so that they will curl. If this cannot be done then use a few artificial curls. Maybe the hair grows so wickedly at the back of the neck that the artificial curls cannot be used with good results, and in this case there is nothing to do but to dress the hair low.

The woman who wants to please will surely not neglect to make a study of her hairdressing.

Pretty Dishes.

Pretty dishes is the desire of every housewife, and it is not always necessary to pay a big price to get them. Real beauty is not always governed by expense.

Blue and white is always safe and satisfactory, and even if one does not wish to the herself entirely to this color it has no equal for breakfast or luncheon. One can buy the dainty fragile Japanese blue and white or, better yet, the genuine heavy but always good Canton. Then the onion and the willow pattern can always be found in different grades of ware.

For dinner sets it would be really better to choose pure white thin china than some of the decorated sets. The man who did not like to carve his slice of rare roast beef on a bed of roses or see dainty violets peeping between the boiled onions was consistent. An ice might be served on a flower painted bit of china, but never the earlier and heavier part of the dinner. A simple band of gold or if this is too expensive substitute a delicate green band, and the choice will always prove satisfactory and harmonize with any decoration.

Asbestos Table Mats.

Have you ever used asbestos table

mats? Not you really should, so let me tell you how to make some that are pretty as well as useful.

Take a piece of butcher's linen (either square or oblong) the size desired with allowance for suitable width hem. Draw threads for hem, turn it and hemstitch it all around. Next, take another piece of linen a trifle larger than the square inside of hem on other piece. Turn edges, hem across one end and baste to hemstitched piece so you can hemstitch the two together, leaving hemmed end of smaller one free. When finished slip a sheet of asbestos in between the two pieces of linen and see what a neat mat you have and one that by removing asbestos can be washed as often as necessity demands. Embroidering one's initials in the center adds to the beauty of the mat.—Brown Book.

The Dress Scrapbook.

A scrapbook of one's gowns is one of the wrinkles to which young women are lending themselves. Every dress the maker of the scrapbook ever wore, with samples of the trimmings, buttons and linings (if fancy), is pasted into the pages, the result being a little biographical sketch, so to speak, of one's wardrobe for life. Beneath each dress are written the date when it was first donned and any interesting data concerning it that one can recall. A girl's confirmation frock, her graduation gown, the gown she wore when she was proposed to, her wedding dress—these find a place sooner or later in the dress scrapbook.

Lines Between the Eyes.

In removing the lines between the eyes a piece of moderately stiff court plaster will prove valuable. First massage with cream, rubbing across the lines; wash in warm water, as the plaster will not adhere if placed over the cream. Cut the plaster in little strips and moisten well, applying lengthwise across the wrinkles. Stretch the skin slightly so no wrinkles will be left beneath the plaster. Leave on for thirty minutes or an hour, and after they are removed massage again with cold cream.

For the Cook Book.

A convenience when one is cooking is a wooden cleat nailed to the wall just above the cooking table. A strip of elastic is nailed to the wall a few inches above the cleat, and the cook book, open at the right place, rests on the cleat and is slipped back of the elastic, which holds it in place. Thus one may glance repeatedly at the cook book without touching it with the fingers or having it on the table, where it is apt to become soiled.

Kitchen Aprons.

The best work and kitchen aprons are those made out of blue and white seersucker. One of their most excellent qualities lies in the fact that they require no ironing. They may be washed and shaken out in no time—in fact, a dozen of them may be shaken out in the same time that would be required to launder half the number of gingham or calico aprons. If desired, seersucker may be had in plain white as well as in the familiar stripes.

Use For a Blackboard.

On the wall of our kitchen, says a housekeeper, is a small blackboard. As children we used to think it great fun to play there while mother was at work, and later we grew to appreciate the value of the little corner chalked off and reserved for orders for the "butcher and baker and candlestick maker." It was so much more convenient than the easily mislaid pencil and paper.

To Hang Pictures.

When hanging pictures people often spoil their walls by driving nails haphazard, only to find the nails bend because they are being hammered against bricks. The right method is to pierce the wall with a darning needle to find the crevice between the bricks and then drive in the nail.

Crystal Anniversary.

The Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent Society of the 23rd Ward, Brooklyn, celebrated the fifteenth anniversary of its existence by a banquet held on Sunday, May 29, at the Elysium. About fifty couple sat down to the feast, which Mr. M. Cahn, the well-known caterer, of 667 Willoughby avenue, provided in his usual highly creditable manner. The president, Mrs. P. M. Sachs greeted the guests by an eloquent address of welcome and after the removal of the cloth the secretary, Mrs. J. Frankel, read a detailed report of the progress of the society, and in a feeling manner alluded to those whom death had withdrawn from the ranks. Mrs. A. Denonn, who was the first secretary of the society, acted as historian and recalled some facts of its incipency, and also took occasion to present, on behalf of the organization, a cut-glass bowl to the president, Mrs. P. M. Sachs, and one to the treasurer, Mrs. B. Midas, who have held their respective offices since the start. Mr. Julius Frankel was the toastmaster, and the following responded to toasts: Ex-Charity Commissioner Bernhard Midas, Dr. A. G. Meyersberg, Messrs. H. Sacks, I. Traube, L. Krieger and L. Druckerman. The ladies received pretty souvenirs. Miss Carrie Gold entertained with some well-received recitations. A reception and dance followed the dinner, in which the young folks and friends of the society participated. The following are the officers and Arrangement Committee: Mrs. P. M. Sachs, president; Mrs. A. G. Meyersberg, vice-president; Mrs. J. Frankel, secretary; Mrs. B. Midas, treasurer; Mrs. A. Denonn, Mrs. M. Gold, Mrs. M. Bookman and Mrs. I. Traube.

Money Still Coming In.

When the counting of the subscriptions received from numerous small contributors in aid of the new Jewish Hospital was concluded last Tuesday, nearly $23,000 was on hand. The late mails yesterday and those to-day brought more returns, so that the $25,000 it was started out to raise has been secured with many extra dollars. This makes sure the gift of $25,000 which President Abraham Abraham declared would be forthcoming when a similar amount was raised by the society. The generous friend who made the offer is none other than President Abraham himself. This fact was made known this morning by Secretary Jonas, who has charge of the fund. He further stated that money and pledges were still coming to him with every mail. The society has on hand $30,000. With the conditional gift and the money raised by popular subscriptions, it will have $80,000 to pay for the new wing which will be erected to the present structure, and for running expenses. The present structure was purchased by the Jewish Hospital Society for $96,500. Work on the new wing will be started within a few days, and it is hoped that the structure will be ready for occupancy by the first of next March.

Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum Notes.

The brass band and the cadets, under the command of the major, Paul N. Lazarus, participated in the Memorial Day parade on Monday. Great enthusiasm was created by the boys, especially by the little fellows in the last platoon, some of them being much smaller than the guns they carried. Our boys always have the place of honor at the head of the tenth division. This division is made up of all the boys' brigades and first place in the line is considered something to strive for. Thus far our boys have held that place. The epidemic which caused the postponement of the Confirmation exercises is now completely under control. For some time past there have been no new cases, and it is hoped that the quarantine will soon be raised.

Seeing Distances.

About 200 miles in every direction is the distance a man can see when standing on a clear day on the peak of the highest mountain—say at a height of 26,008 feet, or a little over five miles above the level of the sea. An observer must be at a height of 6,067 feet above sea level to see objects at a distance of 100 miles. The distance in miles at which an object upon the surface of the earth is visible is equal to the square root of one and one-half times the height of the observer in feet above sea level. Some allowance has to be made for the effect of atmospheric refraction, but as the refraction varies at different heights and is affected by the various states of the weather, no precisely accurate figures for general purposes can be given. Probably from one-fourteenth to one-tenth of the distance given by the formula would have to be deducted, owing to the refraction of the atmosphere.

Dutch Noses.

A study of Jan Steen's pictures of Dutch home life some 200 years ago proves to conviction that in his day the noses of his country folk were quite as fantastic as they are now. Without their pendulous, heavy, mirth inspiring organs of snuff, the artist's tippy kidders and peasants, quack doctors and housewives would not make one smile half as much as they do. It is well that the average Dutchman is a good natured fellow. No matter whether his amiability be due to his phlegmatic temperament or to the reasoned discipline in his soul, the result is the same to the outer world. If he were naturally disposed to be a prey to his passions, there would be something horribly discordant in the broad comedy of his face.—Chambers' Journal.

From the Chinese.

Here is a famous passage from the writings of a Chinese philosopher. More than twenty centuries ago it gained the author the sobriquet of "Butterfly Chung." The philosopher tells of a dream: "Once upon a time I, Chung Tzu, dreamed I was a butterfly, flitting hither and thither, to all intents and purposes a butterfly. I was conscious only of following my fancy as a butterfly and was unconscious of my individuality as a man. Suddenly I awakened and there I lay, myself again. Now, I do not know whether I was then a man dreaming I was a butterfly or whether I am now a butterfly dreaming I am a man."

The Speed of Sense.

Hirsch proved that a touch on the face was recognized by the brain and responded to by a manual signal in the one-seventh part of a second. The scientist also found that the speed of sense differed for different organs, the sense of hearing being responded to in the one-sixth of a second, while that of sight required only one-fifth of a second to be recognized and signaled. In all three cases the distance traversed was about the same, so the natural inference is that the image travels more slowly than sound or touch.

The Oak.

The oak chooses a horizontal direction for its limbs so that their whole weight may tell and then stretches them out fifty or sixty feet so that the strain may be mighty enough to be worth resisting. At 90 degrees the oak stops short. To slant upward another degree would mark infirmity of purpose; to bend downward, weakness of organization. Other trees shirk their work of resisting gravity. The oak defies it.—Dr. Holmes.

RADIUM.

Have you heard of radium? Latest, greatest thing on earth; More than coal the stuff is worth; One ounce brings a corking sum;

And the things that it can do Easily would fill a book; Anything but boss the cook If the tales we here are true.

With diseases it has fun; Cures consumption while you wait And in manner up to date Slaughters microbes by the ton.

Wrinkles, patches, freckles, tan, Cannot in the house remain If you have a single grain Of this newest friend of man.

Burglars it will hold at bay, Strange dogs frighten from the yard, Always keep the butler hard Coax the wayward hens to lay,

Neatly cut the children's hair, Wash the windows, scrub the floor, Run on errands to the store, Daily scour the silverware.

Firmly, but with girly intent, Fire agents through the gate, Keep the family record straight, Hustle round and pay the rent.

Thirty millions, not a sou Less for one grain, C. O. D. But it's worth the you can see, If the tales we hear are true.

Heroic Methods.

Their course of true love had been rough and stormy. It had run along over bricks and bumps and uncharted rocks until at times the man had despaired of ever reaching the cozy haven of matrimony.

Never had there been so contrary a girl since Eve lightly told Adam that there were others when he was inclined to get gay.

She was as hard to please as the guest at a fashionable boarding house. Whatever he did was wrong, and the things that he neglected were just what she was dying for.

Rivals did not see why he fooled around after a girl who treated him so, but the worse she treated him the more he loved her.

But now it was all over, and he had her where he was, theoretically, boss of the job. They were married.

"Darling," he said, "why did you treat me so?"

"I don't know," she replied, "but I will never do it again."

She did know, but the secret was locked in her breast and she had lost the combination. She had treated men kindly before and had discovered that it did not work.

To Give Him a Chance.

"What became of Tough Eddie, who who went west to grow up with the country?"

"They planted him."

Didn't Apply to Him.

"What do you think of this theory that we eat too much?"

"It never originated at my boarding house."

A Warped View.

We eat to live, Not live to eat, But still at times A man you meet Who seems to think We live to drink.

For Joy?

"Mr. Banks, I'll scream if you kiss me."

"Will you be so delighted as all that?"

Just a Joint.

"At what cafe do you eat?"

"Not at any. I only have enough money to eat at a restaurant."

How to Keep Ferns Fresh.

There is a new way to care for ferns that has been found very successful. Once a week they must have a Turkish bath. Put them in a bathroom, shut the windows and doors to exclude every particle of air, then fill the bathtub with scalding water and allow the plants to steam for three or four hours. The room should be gradually cooled before the plants are removed to a cooler atmosphere. This process does away entirely with the laborious work of washing and spraying the leaves and is much more satisfactory.

How to Remove Ink Stains on Books. To remove ink stains from the leaves of a book dampen them with a little oxalic acid or tartaric acid diluted with water. This will destroy the stains without injuring the print.

PLAINT OF THE GRAFTER.

If this isn't a state of affairs Where's One to be found? Where are we at? And what's the use Of living if our goosie Is cooked? Brothers in misery, and fellow grafters, We are booked For a season of storm. The reform Refuses to blow over. Our clover Has turned to ragweed. Adcock It is a cold and cheerless outlook. What's the use of being a crook Of high grade If one is not to be allowed to work at one's trade?

That is man's inhumanity to man— Tryin' to can To our graft. Brothers of the craft, Have we no vested rights? Are the knights Of plunder To be turned under As though they were slaves? These wavers Of reform give me a pain, I feel like taking a train For Timbuktu Or some place where the reformer gets his due.

Which same is the ax When he backs Up against the untutored monarch of the woods With his namby pamby goods. Of course I don't care, But on the square Is it right to ask a man to live on his graft by alone?

When it has been shown That it wouldn't keep him in drinks? But your reformer thinks He should go dry. Just let little Willie boy try That game and see how long he would last.

Vast Bottomless oblivion would swallow him So suddenly that it would make his head swim. No, what is right is right, And unless I am not bright, Graft is right if properly placed. A man would feel disgraced With nothing but his salary to spend And have no end Of annoyance. If this rule is to apply, I'll have to quit and earn an honest living, and that's no lie.

Revenge.

"Beefsteak, rare," said the thin, hungry looking individual to the waiter.

"I thought you were a vegetarian," remarked his friend.

"I was, but a horrid cow chased me this afternoon, and I am bound to have revenge."

Success or Failure.

If with success we must endure Dyspepsia that scorns a cure, A tired back, an aching head, Feet that seem weighted down with lead, And several other patent ills That will not yield to drugs or pills, Then let the others keep their wealth And give me failure and good health.

Couldn't Be Worse.

"His wife is a cooking school graduate, and he did not know it until she told him."

"Yes, but he lived ten years in a boarding house."

A Fish That Could Talk.

A natural curiosity captured on the coast of Africa on May 5, 1854, by Signor Cavana and exhibited in all the great cities of Europe during the years 1854, 1860, 1861 and 1862, where it was advertised as the "talking fish," was in reality a species of the African seal, well known to naturalists on account of its wonderful powers of mimicry. This particular animal was about twelve feet in length and weighed something over 800 pounds. It had a fine, doglike head and large, beautiful black eyes, which seemed to sparkle with intelligence whenever the creature was spoken to by any one. It was very docile and when told to dance would roll over and over in its bathtub, with first tail and then head above the water, all the time chattering as though enjoying the sport as much as the spectators did. It soon learned many odd tricks and, it is claimed, learned to articulate at least three words very plainly—viz, "mamma," "papa" and "John," the last being its keeper's name. When told to pray it would clasp its flippers in the attitude of supplication and put on a sanctimonious look.

An Important Moment.

Mr. Newlywed (in the kitchen)— What are you cooking there, my dear? Mrs. Newlywed (excitedly)— Don't bother me now. There's the cookery book. I'm making recipe No. 187 on page 396.

It is a miserable state of mind to have few things to desire and many things to fear, and yet that commonly is the case of kings.— Bacon.

"WHERE TO BUY"

Classified List of reliable firms and business houses who carry in stock complete assortments of goods in their respective lines at the lowest prices.

Shoppers should consult these columns for their wants.

In Hard Lines.
Pause, stranger, drop
A tear for the Delaware peach crop.
Not dead, you say?
Go away!
It has been killed thirty-six times or near that amount
By actual count.
If it is not dead yet
It is a safe bet
To say
That it will be killed several times a day
Until the crop is ripe
Unless the pipe
Goes out.
And it must be a good, stout,
Husky peach crop
That will not drop
Out of the game
Or at least walk lame
And feel
Limp and all used up after such an ordeal.
But that is the way.
Just as soon as the peach crop begins to feel gay
"Bite"
Says Jack Frost, and it is knocked stiff.
And even while its friends gaze
On the remains and the band plays
Slow music it is killed again.
Five, ten,
A score
Or more
It must
Bite the dust.
It is hard to die young,
Unwept, unhonored and unsung.
But the peach crop is resigned.
It doesn't mind
A little thing like that;
It thrives and grows fat
On killing.
It is willing
To do that much to add to the gaiety
of nations.
Never fear, you'll find its smiling face
Blushing as of yore in the market place.

Ought To.
"You understand railroading?"
"Yes."
"Tell me, then, does a mulatto ride
on a half fair ticket?"

He Understood.
"Miss Jenks has such a sweet face."
"If you had purchased as much candy to stow away in it as I have you would know why."

Very.
A little bird sang in a tree,
Ah, me!
But wouldn't it have been absurd
Suppose a tree sang in a bird?

Sharp Bargain.
"I wish I knew how to get something for nothing."
"Can't you trade your thoughts for a penny?"

Clear Gain.
"No young man should live beyond his means."
"But isn't he just that much ahead?"

Even Worse.
Man cannot live by bread alone,
Though some bad men would choose
At once, could they but have their way,
To live alone on booze.

Something as Warm.
"One swallow does not make a summer."
"Depends on what it is a swallow of."

How to Give Castor Oil.
Pour a little hot milk into a wine-glass, then pour the oil into the center of the milk and carefully pour a little more milk on top. If the whole is drunk without stopping, the oil will not be tasted at all.

How to Meet Strange Dogs.
If a strange dog chances to cross your path speak kindly to him instead of using the boot. The magic power of the voice may save you from a bite.
And never shrink from a dog that jumps toward you. That would be an exhibition of fear that he is apt to take advantage of. Stand your ground, greet him kindly and, above all things, never run away from him.

How to Take Quinine.
It has often been given as an excuse by people ordered quinine that the taste is so nasty when dissolved in acids that they cannot digest it in wine.
Milk is not generally recognized as a solvent of quinine, but it is, and it also wonderfully disguises the bitter taste.
A dose of five grains of quinine can be taken in four tablespoonfuls of milk without being unpleasant, and if taken in a tumblerful of milk the bitterness disappears entirely.

How to Improve Milk Toast.
Milk toast is improved by the addition of a little grated cheese just before serving. Grated cheese is also a pleasant addition to a dish of mashed potatoes.

JAPANESE JOTTINGS.

The uniform of the Japanese soldier is mostly of German pattern.

The Japanese celebrate their victories by processions in which each one carries a lantern made of gay paper held aloft on long poles.

Along the line of route of the trains bearing troops the people have erected flags and assemble to cheer the soldiers as they pass, the latter responding heartily with shouts of "Banzai!"

There is no swagger about the Japanese soldier. He goes stolidly about his business, with an air of quiet determination; he is intensely patriotic, but not reckless, but prepared to do and dare whatever is ordered for him.

Sharks in Europe.

Superstitious people, if any such remain, will probably hold that it is as a portent of the war that sharks have once again appeared in the Baltic sea after an absence of nearly 150 years. Sharks are still to be met with in the Mediterranean, but in the northern seas we have long been rid of them. But now fishermen report that in the narrows of the Cattegat and the Belt these dangerous fish are once more to be seen and that they follow the boats to attack the nets as they are being hauled in. It is also said that some of the fishermen have had narrow escapes of their lives. There are shoals of sharks in the North sea, and along the coasts of Germany and Norway they are to be found in considerable numbers.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste, it softens the gums, always all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP.
