It Rests With God.
 So many worlds, so much to do.
 So little done, such things to be.
 How know I what had need of thee,
 For thou wert strong as thou wert true?
 The fame is quenched that I foresaw.
 The head hath missed an earthly wreath;
 I curse not nature—no, nor death—
 For nothing is that errs from law.
 We pass; the path, that each man trod
 Is dim or will be dim with weeds;
 What fame is left for human deeds
 In endless age? It rests with God.
 O hollow wreath of dying fame,
 Fade wholly, while the soul exults,
 And self infolds the large results
 Of force that would have forged a name.
 —Tennyson.

"It is time to act for the Lord; they have made void Thy law."

Jewish Ministers?

BY THE REV. MELDOLA DE SOLA

V.

I ask for a thoughtful perusal of the following extract: "I have believed Him (the Almighty) just and I have believed Him unjust. I have believed Him merciful and I have believed Him cruel. If God's will be done, why must that will be so unreasonable? I looked upon the Bible as a book of direct revelation, until a recognition of its many contradictions, its impossible narratives, its accounts of vice and crime shook my faith in it to its very foundation. I wondered what God had possibly to do all the day long (now that the work of creation was finished, that the age of miracles had ceased, and the task of bringing into life and taking from it had been assigned to respective angels) beyond carrying on an intricate system of espionage, beyond judging mortals and listening to their praises!"

It would not be unreasonable to credit this blasphemous utterance to some avowed free-thinker, to some frank admirer of Ingersoll or Tom Paine. But no; the author of the blasphemy is not an avowed free-thinker. He claims to be a Jewish minister. Nay, more, he is recognized as one. He is the Rev. Dr. Krauskopf, of Philadelphia, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis!

This frightful blasphemy is truly enough to make the loyal Jew shudder. But let it not be inferred that it is an isolated instance of Krauskopfian irreverence.

In one of his discourses Dr. Krauskopf declares: "We discard belief in a God who is man magnified, who has his abode somewhere in the interstellar spaces." In another discourse he speaks of "the obliging complacency of the Bible," and asserts: "The God of the Pentateuch has, it is true, ceased to be a tyrant, but only to become an Oriental potentate. He is blindly partial to peculiar individuals and to a particular race, and unjustly severe on others of His creatures."

These quotations from the published utterances of Dr. Krauskopf require no comment. They bear their clusively God-given religion. I discard the peculiar Oriental conception that we alone, out of the hundreds of millions of people that inhabit our globe, have been selected to be God's own and peculiar treasure. I discard the belief that the Bible was written by God or by man under the hostility to the Bible. One of these discourses bears the suggestive title, "Myths in the Bible." In another he asserts with charming frankness: "We have laid aside miracles and supernaturalisms, myth and legend, impossibilities and irrationalities. We have dispensed with the burning good book, and that all knowledge is a revelation of God. He ridicules the belief that there is nothing false in the Bible, and speaks of "the inspiration theory of the Bible." In another discourse he declares: "We no longer go to the Bible for revelations of God; we go to it only for revelations of mankind's gradually unfolding conceptions of Him."

In yet another lecture he advocates the abolition of all festivals and rites that are distinctly associated with our former national life. And he characterizes the rite of Milah as "heathenish, barbarous and repellent."

In an article published in a secular journal Dr. Krauskopf asks, "How shall we account for this indestructibility of Israel? The old-time explanation, that of miraculous Divine intervention, does not satisfy us in these critical days."

Not only would Dr. Krauskopf degrade the Bible, but he would actually dethrone Providence. Utterly dead to every sentiment of reverence, he would lay his impious hand upon the Holy of holies!

After one of his characteristic outbursts of heresy he exclaims: "This is Judaism. It is true, it is not the Judaism of the past; neither is it Judaism as conceived by nine-tenths of our brethren to-day. Yet Judaism it is."

Dr. Krauskopf may consider the remaining one-tenth qualified to brand his infidelity "Judaism." I do not think that anyone who reads the foregoing quotations from his published utterances will hesitate to agree with me when I declare that Dr. Krauskopf should be considered an exponent of Scepticism, Rationalism, Heathenism—any Ism but Judaism.

There are men within our camp who have abandoned nearly all the fundamental doctrines of Judaism, but who at least manifest a little decent Jewish pride. Dr. Krauskopf sinks even below their level. He is not above selecting his texts from the New Testament. In one of his lectures he applauds intermarriage; he places Jesus on the same plane as Moses and the Prophets, and he maintains that Christian and Israelite must together celebrate Easter as Independence Day and Martyrs' Day. In other words, Israelites are to honor an institution which emphasizes a denial of the unity of God; they are to render homage to the founder of a religion based upon such denial, and to participate in the adoration of a human being!

If all of this be not treason to Israel's faith, if it be not tantamount to apostasy, then I fail to grasp the meaning of treason and apostasy.

And Dr. Krauskopf is president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis!

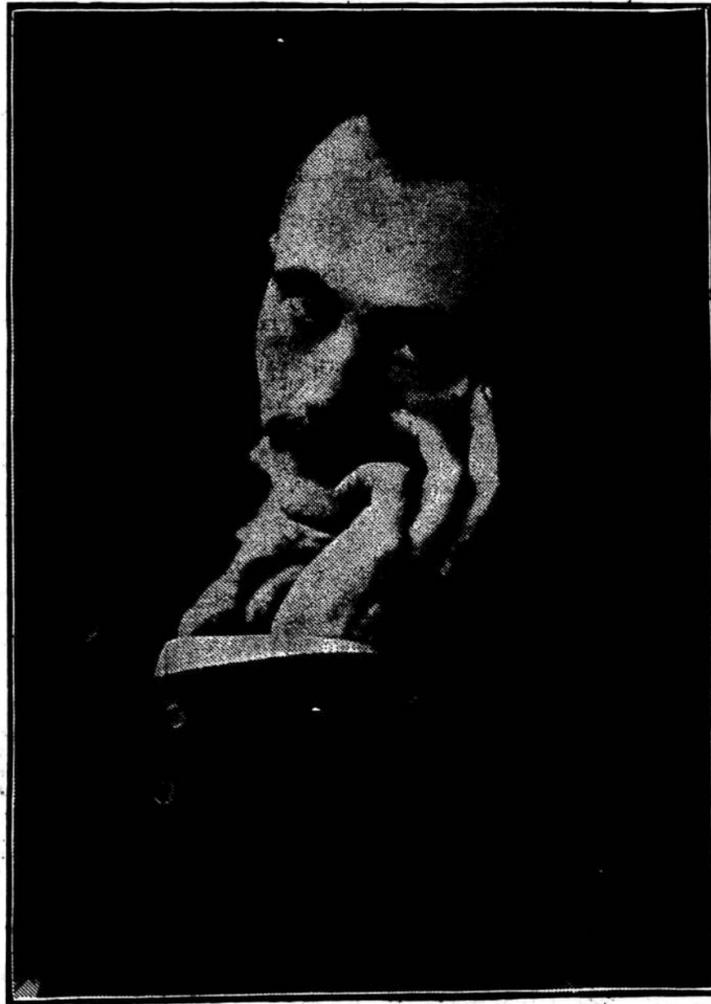

own condemnation. And they effectually dispose of Dr. Krauskopf's claim to be considered a teacher of Judaism or a Jewish minister.

Indeed, it is difficult to understand why Dr. Krauskopf should wish to be considered a Jewish minister, in view of the following reply from him to the question, "What is it to be a Jew?": "I refuse to look upon Judaism as the absolutely perfect and ex-immediate dictation of God, and that its teachings are therefore infallible and binding upon all men and all ages. I give it an honorable place in our services and in our homes. I nevertheless do not hesitate to admit that it is the work of man and shares all the faults that characterize religious writings of bygone ages."

In his lectures Dr. Krauskopf has furnished conclusive evidence of his thorn-bush and the destructive plague, with the dividing of the sea and with the fiery mountain, and find that we are the stronger and healthier for having parted with them." In a third lecture he maintains that there are deficiencies and inaccuracies in the Bible; that it contains much that no longer satisfies the requirements of truth; that the Bible contains the revelation of God, and so does every

Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt is the well-known Hebrew and Russian poet and writer, whose contributions have delighted the readers of the HEBREW STANDARD. In another portion of this issue will be found another interesting article from his pen.

Parrot Gods and History's Judgment about Them.

By Ezekiel Leavitt,

Translated by Dr. Louis A. Alexander.

Several years ago, while still a small child, I read in the history of antiquity, where true facts are tied together with senseless tales, highly poetic legends are twined together with cynically phrased stupidities, a little story which became engraven into my memory. Closely observing with open eyes all what I see and hear, I said often—very often—to myself: "All what occurred long ago is also now occurring and will occur in the future too."

The story I read is a short and simple one. Caligula, the third Roman Emperor, who was a great tyrant and desired that the Roman nation should become one large head, in order that he might be able to chop it off all at once, all of a sudden got a desire of a light matter: All should recognize and worship him as a god. * * *

Of course all made fun of the simple fellow, the mad and impudent mortal being, who had such an enormous arrogance, such a barefaced demand.

But what did he do? He hit upon a plan; he bought a large multitude of parrots, shut them up in his house and continually repeated with them the words: "Caligula is a god! Caligula is a god!"

As soon as the parrots knew perfectly the two phrases he set them free and brought others into their place, which he instructed in a manner similar to the former ones.

After having let the parrots out, he gave orders to his servants not to allow them to remain on one spot, but to chase them from place to place, especially to drive them to far-away parts. The servants did as ordered and the parrots, while running, were shouting: "Caligula is a god! Caligula is a god!"

The idiotic Caligula thought that the parrots will deify him by their squeaking and succeed in persuading the whole people that he is a god. * * *

But history, the right judge, who weighs men with their deeds on true scales, did not only not recognize Caligula as a "god," but refused to crown him even with the name of "man," because he was a barbarian, a beast, an outcast. * * *

If, however, Caligula did no good to himself by his trick, he did a service to many, many creatures, similar to him, who are looking for parrot means, in order to be deified, honored and beloved by the people. * * * One, for instance, writes dramas which are as far from art as is the *Woloszin Talmudical Academy from the Cincinnati "Hebrew Union College. * * * The "drama-maker" has, however, enough courage to think that they are real gems and he, their composer, is the god of the stage. * * * But as the critics say, "positively no good," he, the dramatic god, sends out parrots, two-legged parrots, with whom he studied the words: " * * * is the god of the stage," and they are running around like poisoned mice telling to every one what he instructed them. * * *

One, for instance, writes rhymes, some times not bad ones, but for the most part very bad ones, which taste as the life of our brethren in Russia or as Zangwill's Uganda plan. * * * The poetaster has, however, quite a different opinion of his "poems," and he looks for parrots of every description and studies with them many times the words: " * * * is the god of Parnassus! Long live the king of poets!" * * * And the parrots are flying around shouting in a loud voice the doctrine of their teacher. * * *

One, for instance, plays in theatre. He does not possess great abilities; of art he does not understand more than Czar Nicholas the second understands the spirit of the age. * * * But for honor he is looking as a true, pious Jew is looking for the performance of acts of faith and benevolence. Well, he hits upon such a plan; he finds out a few parrots (in his idiom they are called "simpletons"), with whom he repeats the phrase " * * * is the god of the theatre!" And the simpleton-parrots squeak in one voice the studied phrase until they succeed in persuading a few simpletons like themselves that their words are true and earnest.

In short, wherever we go or wherever we stand, whether in the literary world or in the smaller one of physicians, lawyers, merchants or even among those making monkey business, we see Caligula's trick.

Of late many people began employing parrots for two-fold missions—both to praise themselves and abusing others.

For instance, a few uptown Jews caught a whole army of parrots and instructed them to repeat continually the recital: "The uptown Jews are honest merchants, great philanthropists, wonderful scholars and great of every description * * * but the downtown Jews are cheats, robbers, boors, arrogant fellows and low creatures of every description." And the parrots are running around from one end of the city to the other, from west to east, making noise, shouting and squeaking the words of their "teachers" and "instructors."

And the teachers themselves, as well as the parrots, whose task is repetition, have eyes and see not, or cover them with golden eyeglasses, in order not to observe how hard the downtown Jews are working in order to earn bread and a dish of croats; they don't want to confess that very often more honest, legitimate business is made in Hester street than in Wall street; they don't want to confess that very often, in dark cellars and top floors, are living men who are much more educated, much more honest, greater idealists than they are, and have better, warmer and more feeling hearts than theirs. They don't want to understand that the downtown Jews are even more charitable than they are, because it is harder for the downtown Jew to spend one dollar for charity than it is for the uptown Jew to spend one hundred dollars; and yet the downtown poor Jew gives his dollar with more zeal, contentment and with less noise than the rich uptown Jew his hundred dollars, and, in fact, also more often.

The uptown Jews persuaded themselves and, by medium of their parrots, want to persuade the whole world, that they are not like us, poor, darkened and tired out Polish-Russian Jews.

They demand that we shall deify them; they demand that we shall bow down and bend the knee before them; they demand that we shall muffle our "ego," our feelings, our groans, our tears, continually dance according to their playing, sing a modern hymn for them and allow them to spit in our faces.

The uptown Jews persuaded themselves, and by their parrots they want to persuade all, that to them belongs the first place because—they live in a more beautiful dwelling, with finer furniture, on the Fifth avenue, while we are living in very small rooms somewhere in Broome street, or even in Cherry street. They demand—they want—they ask. But what does it matter? Parrots cannot make them for gods, as Caligula's parrots could not deify him, and, poor thing, he remained in history as a great tyrant, terrible egotist and wonderful fool.

The tax books submitted to the Board of Aldermen by the Tax Commissioners on Monday last show a smaller number of wealthy residents of the city of New York than ever. It seems that all the rich men, with few exceptions, are giving a statutory residence elsewhere for the purpose of evading the payment of personal taxes. While maintaining large establishments in this city, filled with millions of dollars worth of personal property, which the city is paying to protect, they pay their taxes on personal property in some small town where they have a residence for this purpose. Probably the city authorities will come to a realization of the fact some time or other that nearly two per cent. tax on personal property is more than people will willingly stand.

Grace of Oriental People.
 Passing us occasionally, going to Jerusalem with butter and eggs and little jars of leben that showed their thick creamy throats as they were held up to us, were small companies of women in single file. As one blue procession went by, the leader called to us: "Why should you ride and we walk? Why is your lot better than ours?" Given the opportunity for leisurely argument we would not by any philosophy have made satisfactory answer. We could only admit the fact as they saw it, and recognize the universal world plaint of discontent. They carry themselves, these women, like figures on an antique frieze. As they stride along, holding in sure balance on their heads their jars and baskets of homely produce, they tread the stony paths with the grace and largeness of action that we of the Occident have grown to regard as belonging only to the age of Praxitelles. The men are also admirable in the simplicity of their gestures, the big lines of their attitudes, the swing of their draperies, I saw a youth fling his mantle over his shoulder and fold it about him exactly in the manner of the classical Greek, sculptured in his finely unconscious pose. God save the day when these sons of Canaan clothe their limbs in our ungainly garments!

Zion or Uganda?
 (For the Hebrew Standard)
 Israel Zangwill pleads for a Jewish State in Uganda, and lo and behold, a number of people hail him as the new Joshua. It was ever thus with Jews. No sooner does a man who has made a name for himself say something than the pronouncement is regarded as divinely inspired. Particularly is this the case when the writer or speaker happens to be either a Christian or a Jew who is far removed from everything Jewish.
 The author of the "Children of the Ghetto" is undoubtedly a writer of note, but he little understands the Jew. For centuries every true child of Israel has yearned for Zion, and suddenly he is asked to go to East Africa.
 Naturally, strong protests have been entered against this policy. One of the most emphatic is the one made by Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt, the well-known Hebrew and Russian poet. An old Zionist, he rightly interprets Hebrew sentiment when, in his Hebrew poem "To Uganda we shall not go," he holds forth against the East African Scheme. Mr. Leavitt points out that Uganda can never replace Zion in the affection of the Jewish People.
 "In order to convince the people that the prophets of Baal were false and that God of Israel was the One to be worshipped, Elijah assembled these prophets and the erring Children of Israel, and made it clear to the latter that the "Lord He is the God." It is necessary to-day to drive out the false prophets who would lead the people astray. Mr. Leavitt has shown the way, and let all true lovers of Zion exclaim "To Uganda we shall not go!"
 I. L. BRIL.
 The East African Commission has departed to examine the territory offered by the British Government to the Zionists. The next Zionist Congress might, with the hope of far better results send an expedition to America.

Different Missions.
 God has given to different nations different missions. He has given to Rome the mission of teaching the world the meaning of law; to Greece, the meaning of art and philosophy; to the Hebrew race, the meaning of religion. He has given this race this message: "Tell the world what you can learn of God and His relation to men. The Hebrew people have added nothing to the architecture, the art, the philosophy of life; but they have been a prophetic race—discoverers of God. In this race there were pre-eminently religious men, who saw God more clearly than their fellows, and God's relation to mankind more clearly, and God's relation to human events more clearly, and told their fellows what they saw. And, from all their telling, natural selection says the scientist, providence says the theologian—I say the two are the same—elected those that had in them the most vital truth, the most enduring, the most worthy to endure. Thus we have in the Old Testament something like two score of writers, the most spiritually-minded of a spiritually-minded race, telling us what they have discovered concerning God. This is the Bible. It is the gradual discovery of God in the hearts and through the tongues of prophets who were themselves members of a prophetic race—Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D.
 The following anecdote is related of Dr. Arne the celebrated music composer of the last century.
 Two gentlemen having differed in opinion which was the best singer, it was agreed to leave the case to Dr. Arne, who having heard them both observed to the last gentlemen that sang: "Sir, without offence, you are the worst singer I ever heard in all my life."—"There! there!" exclaimed the other, exultingly, "I told you so!"—"Sir," said the doctor, "You must not say a word, for you can not sing at all."

A Jew who Provisioned Port Arthur.
 The exploit of Mr. Ben Weil in provisioning Mafeking in time for the famous siege is recalled by a story published in the press recently. It is stated that it was a Jew—M. Guensburg—who poured provisions and coal into Port Arthur before the war broke out. Guensburg is said to be an Odessa Jew, of the original name of Mess. Drawn in the conscription some twenty-four years ago, Mess shortly afterwards deserted, and escaped from the country. Business affairs prospered, and he eventually attained a distinguished commercial position at Nagasaki, under the assumed name of Guensburg. Some seventeen years ago, owing to a disagreement between the Japanese and Russian authorities in the Far East, the Russian squadron ran short of coal, the Japanese authorities refusing supplies. In this serious quandary Guensburg volunteered his services. He had much influence with the Japanese Government, and ultimately succeeded in obtaining the necessary Japanese coal for the Russian ships. Guensburg then confessed his identity to the Governor of Vladivostok and Russian admiral, and a petition was forwarded to the Czar. Guensburg not only received the Imperial pardon, but the thanks of the Czar, a monetary reward, a decoration, and the right of trading in Russia. Since that time Guensburg has been the chief caterer in the Far East for the fleet and volunteer ships.
Wisdom.
 All the wisdom of man consists in this alone—to know and worship God. This is our doctrine, this is our opinion, and this, with as loud voice as we can, we testify, profess and proclaim. This is what all the philosophers during their whole life sought, but could never find out, comprehend, nor attain to, because they either retained a corrupt religion, or had none at all. Let them all then be gone who do not instruct but disturb human life. How can they teach others who are not instructed themselves? How can they help the sick or guide the blind?

"The Subway."
 The criticism which is indulged in daily by correspondents in the daily press and by the press itself of the subway and its service is nothing new in the history of rapid transit and transit improvement in the city of New York. It will be remembered that from the first day that the elevated railroad service began the same character of criticism took place, and the fault-finding has not ceased yet. The same may be said of the trolley and cable systems. The crowding, the lighting, the heating and the general service all came in for harsh comment. This is but natural with all undertakings of this character. The constant pounding has brought about improvement after improvement, and the accommodations have been extended. If it were not for these continual expressions of dissatisfaction with the service rendered by the management of these public roads, the improved facilities would unquestionably not have been provided which the subway has offered. A vast improvement over all present transit service, the management will have to contend with the same sort of comment which has been made upon other lines. And there can be no doubt but the service will be continually improved. When we look back to the old horse car service and the horrors of a snow storm, we ought to be satisfied with present conditions, but that we are not is the best evidence of the progressive spirit of human kind.

Hebrew Technical School for Girls.

The annual meeting of that excellent institution, the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, was held on Sunday morning at the Hotel Savoy. The large banquet hall was filled by ladies and gentlemen eager to listen to the interesting report. Mr. Nathaniel Myers, the indefatigable president of the school occupied the chair.

The chairman presented the annual report, of which the following is an extract:

"Your Trustees, while always intending to do a large volume of good work, proportioned to the amount of money expended therefor, have also steadily tried to improve the quality of the work done. The last school year was prolonged at additional expense to eleven months instead of ten. The manual course was this year extended from one to two years, so as to improve and heighten the character and quality of its output. In a year great progress has been made in all directions, and the only unpleasant fact to be noted is that, out of 545 applicants for admission this school year, we were compelled, for lack of room, to close the door on 375.

"In each case of the 545 applicants an examination was made as to intellectual attainments and as to the financial and other condition of the family, the endeavor being to select those whose personal and home condition was the most necessitous, and who at the same time were intellectually most likely to profit by the short school course.

"It will interest you to know that, upon admission to the school last September, the girls averaged fifteen years of age; that 67 per cent. of them were born in the United States, 21 per cent. in Russia, and the remaining 12 per cent. in other parts of Europe; while of the parents only 4 per cent. were born in this country. Of the 535 girls who have been educated by your society and who are now at work and are in regular correspondence with us, recent written reports from them show that they are now together earning $252,805.80 per annum, or an average of $39.37 per month each."

After the report had been adopted Mr. Myers read a letter from Mrs. Julius Kauffman, offering a check for $5,000 the interest of which is to be devoted to the education of two poor girls each year. The scholarship will bear the name of Mrs. Kauffman's dead daughter Jessie.

On behalf of the Board of Trustees, Mr. Adolph Lewisohn announced that in recognition of the great services Mr. Myers had rendered to the school, the board had endowed a scholarship for one girl to bear the president's name.

Interesting addresses were made by Attorney-General Julius M. Mayer, who spoke of the work that was being done to make the young self-supporting, and by Mr. St. Clair McKelvey. He said:

"The Jew and the Gentile are both becoming better, broader, and finer. We need to overcome the arrogance which our ancestors bequeathed to us from conditions which it is not the genius of this Republic to perpetuate. Some of you need to overcome the suspicions and the jealousies, the furtiveness, the indirectness, and the prejudices which were at once the product of injustice shown to you abroad as well as your defense against much of that injustice. America can be made the home of a grander Israel than Palestine ever knew, or than Europe or Asia ever made possible."

The following were elected trustees:—Mrs. Henry Zuckerman, Mrs. Simon Hirschback, Mrs. George Blumenthal, Mrs. Leopold Cahn, Alfred Lauterbach, Adolph Lewisohn, Mrs. Louis Loeb, Mrs. Nathaniel Myers, Mrs. Henrietta Solomon. Henry Sonn and Jacob Wertheim.

Nearly 13,000 were taken to the seashore at Rockaway Park, over 5,000 were taken down the bay on the all-day boat excursions, and 1,500 were treated in the hospital at Rockaway Park for the diseases incident to child life during the heated term.

It was suggested to enlarge the institution, in accordance with the recommendations of the State Board of Charities, by building a substantial annex, as many thousands of applicants were refused admission last Summer for want of room, and the board appeals to the public for subscriptions to carry out this undertaking.

At the Wednesday session of the convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, held in Chicago, President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hay were warmly commended for efforts to obtain civil rights and the issuance of passports for Hebrews in Russia. The question came up in a report made by Simon Wolf, chairman of the Board of Delegates on Civil Rights. A report was made on the collection of the $500,000, Isaac M. Wise, memorial fund. It was stated that $450,000 had actually been collected, and that the balance of the money had been subscribed.

Now in Harlem.

Mr. H. Grohs, who for the last five years has been proprietor of Cappelle's Deutsche Conditorei, established in Division street since 1876, purchased the bakery of H. Thomas, 1409 Fifth avenue, near 116th street, which he will conduct in the same manner as the Division street establishment. The new place is opened by Mr. Grohs to meet the wishes of many of his friends and patrons, who now live in Harlem. At the same time it is an opportunity for Mr. Grohs to enlarge his business. He will serve his customers at their residences regularly with his popular Vienna bread, rolls, cakes and confections, by delivery wagons, and will also serve the celebrated coffee in the store, the same as in Division street. The new store is fitted up exactly like the original place. His patrons will feel perfectly at home in the new store, while those who have never seen it will be pleased by the handsome appearance of the place, being, as it is, the most elegant Deutsche Conditorei in Harlem.

New East Side Cigar Store.

Herzog Bros. have opened a first-class cigar store at 50 and 52 Canal street, corner Orchard street. They are wholesale and retail tobacconists and carry a large stock of cigars and cigarettes, tobacco, etc., which are sold on the small profit plan. The store supplies a long felt want in that neighborhood. Prompt attention will be given to customers.

The New Year of the Trees.

MY DEARS:—
To-morrow, the fifteenth day of Shebat, the seventh month of the Jewish year, is the New Year of the Trees

רשח השנה לאילנות
You will remember that only a little over three months ago we celebrated our New Year, the day on which God judges mankind, and decides the destiny of every human being. So to-day, we are told, the trees come before the seat of judgment. Their virtues and their failings are carefully considered, and it is decided whether spring shall see them blossom forth once more or whether they shall be destroyed by the ruthless storm of winter. Of course, this is merely symbolical, but it has a deep significance and we can learn many a valuable lesson from this New Year of the Trees.

In the first place, a tree is very much like a human being. There is the tiny little tree, which like a baby has to be carefully nursed and tended; the gardener must watch it just like a loving mother cares for her little child. The tree grows and its future depends upon the training it receives while still young. Will the tree rise heavenward and be an object of beauty, or will it be stunted and dwarfed? Will it, if it be a fruit-bearing tree, give forth luscious fruits, or will its products be unwholesome ones? Like the child, the tree grows and becomes older and both are known by their fruits—both are judged by the good they bring to the world.

The tree continues to grow and its green branches throw their cooling shadow over the earth; the fruits give nourishment to man and the tree is rich and powerful in its own way. And then Autumn arrives and the leaves wither and fall to the ground. Winter succeeds Fall and the tree is deprived of its glory. A storm comes and the tree snaps and lies useless on the ground.

It is the same with human beings. You see men great and powerful. Others pay them every respect and homage. They are rich and influential. "They are," we are told in Job, xx, 24, "exalted; in but a little while they are no more; and they are brought down low; like all others are they gathered in, and like the top of the ear of love are they cut off." If the tree has been a good tree, if its fruits have been a delight, we are sorry. When a good man whose character is noble and who labored for the welfare of his fellowmen is brought down to grief, we generally sympathize with him when he has lost all.

Sometimes trees are torn up by the roots, due to the storm's violence. The same fate often overcomes human beings. They are utterly destroyed and forgotten. Their wickedness, like the storm, proved their undoing. It happens, however, that the winter's blast has not altogether destroyed the tree; there is still life and you know dear children, "while there is life, there is hope," as the Bible tells us "There is hope of a tree though it be cut down that it will sprout again and the tender branches will give forth leaf." And Spring comes and the leaves sprout forth again; it gathers new strength. The Summer's sun supplies the needed warmth, the tree drinks the earth's moisture and it stands there again clothed in its former beauty.

Every man has good and bad times. Business is bad, sickness comes, and little by little he loses all. But God never forsakes his children on earth. The man is assisted, his fellow human beings stretch out a helping hand, and in time he becomes once more self-supporting, and behold! the good times have once more returned; all is gladness and joy.

A tree shaken by the wind is compared to the trembling of a man's heart. You may be expecting some news. A dear friend of yours may be sick and you become anxious, your heart trembles within you.
I could go on and on and point out to you how much a tree resembles a human being. When you walk in the park watch the trees. See the gardener cut down the rotten branches which otherwise would affect the rest of the tree and in the course of time, the whole tree will become bad. If you have any evil within you, if you do what is bad and corrupt, lop it off, mend your ways, for unless you do that at once, your whole life will surely be spoiled. Honest men and women will avoid you, will shun you. The tree is beautiful so long as it is good, the apple is wholesome unless a worm has made it bad for human consumption. Take care to pluck out the worm and have it remain beautiful. Your features may not be handsome, but your souls can be beautiful and clean.

You see what great lessons this New Year of the trees teaches us. Everything in this world has its purpose. The life of the tree shows us how to regulate our own lives so that God and our fellow human beings will delight in us.
Be true to God and you will be true to yourself.
Look at the sunny side of life, it makes existence so much the brighter.
When you are miserable think of how many are still unhappier than you are.
Always remember that the other man is as much entitled to his opinion as you are to yours.
Help others according to your means and you will be giving as much as the millionaire.

Hard Wear.
"I should like to look at a stove-pipe hat," said the man who was guided by his wife in his shopping tour.
"He thinks," explained the wife to the salesman, "that he will look great in a stove pipe hat."
"We have quite a range of styles in them," said the salesman as he flue to open the boxes.
"This one doesn't suit him at all, do you think?" asked the wife when the man had tried on the first.
"I think it is a nice fit," slangily declared the clerk.
"I suppose the high price is because of the skillet takes to make the hat," ventured the husband.
"Yes," answered the salesman, "and then you see, this hat is not even ordinary shape."
"I'll take it," announced the husband, "if you'll cash a draft for me."
"The boss wood-fire me if I did," replied the clerk.
"Then that puts a damper on the wool's scheme," asserted the wife, taking her husband by the arm and leading him away.—Judge.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

Mr. Conried's Publikum-Barsescu-Traumulus.

In the neighborhood of Union square and Fifteenth street various rumors have been current recently regarding the future of the German theatre. It has been asserted with some supporting circumstances, that Mr. Conried will, after next season, abandon the playhouse, with which his name has been so honorably associated, and wherein his extraordinary abilities as a manager and a producer of plays have found so influential and brilliant a field. Giving up the Irving Place would, we infer, signify his exclusive devotion to musical matters. Whatever truth may attach to these rumors will probably soon be known, but no one who has regularly attended the theatre recently would be at all surprised if Mr. Conried were to give up what has become a rather thankless and not very profitable task. Having to deal with a class of people whose pretensions to culture are as large as their inclination to spend more than a dollar for an orchestra chair is small, and who think they have munificently patronized art when they have witnessed a serious drama perhaps twice a season, the manager is, moreover, confronted with the one problem of finding new plays which local audiences will understand and appreciate, and the other of engaging a company with a salary list so modest that the patronage to be surely reckoned upon will enable him to make both ends meet.

As we of late frequently pointed out this year's company is capable and well rounded, and in spite of one or two weak spots its performances are decidedly better than those offered a year ago. The desertion of a prominent member weakened it somewhat, but the addition of Herr Walden and the special engagement of Fri. Barsescu strengthened it materially.

Nevertheless the pretentious, ignorant and boorish people who usually constitute nearly one-half of a local German audience, have not yet awakened to the fact that Harry Walden is an actor of extraordinary talent, with a method whose naturalness conceals the most finished art, and that Agathe Barsescu, while by no means a genius, is an artist capable of giving well wrought embodiments of the heroic roles of classical tragedy, as well as those of modern drama.

What we have written above found an apt illustration last Thursday night, at the premiere of "Traumulus." This play has chiefly to do with the idealistic director of a high school, wrapt up in his calling, who believes in the gentle methods of discipline and whose tragic end is brought about by the disgrace of a favorite pupil, taken advantage of by his enemy, a cynical and malevolent government official. Such a subject, especially when treated with eminent theatrical skill by the authors, Arno Holz and Oscar Jerschke, requires sympathetic attention, but on Thursday night many in the audience could only find in it food for laughter. The interruption of the most serious scenes by laughter is a regular feature at the Irving Place when serious plays are produced. Indulged in by a minority, it nevertheless serves to annoy and distract the cultivated and critical portion of the public.

Sudermann's "Heimath" was repeated on Saturday afternoon. The performance was in every way a creditable and satisfactory one, the whole company acquitting themselves well of their tasks. The main feature, of course, was the Magda of Fri. Barsescu, which reached a very high artistic level and roused the numerous audience to an unwonted pitch of enthusiasm.

It was a fine piece of acting, giving the impression of great native force held within due bounds by correct training and afforded a fresh illustration of the value of moderation and repression. Fri. Barsescu need not shun comparison with the great actresses who have made this part famous. Her Magda made so deep an impression as to warrant its being repeated on Wednesday of this week. This evening the Roumanian actress will appear in Grillparzer's "Sappho," a play not seen here in many years.

For the rest of the week "Traumulus" may be seen. In the title part Herr Haenseler, suddenly called upon to take the place of Herr Meyer-Eigen, acquits himself most creditably, and the students' scene in the third act is given with so much animation and verve, that one can hardly praise too highly Herr von Seyffertitz, whose talent for stage management is again conspicuously in evidence.

GOTTHOLD FREIBERGER.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

THE BUTLER'S PANTRY.

How It Should Be Equipped For Efficient Work.

The kitchen by first right is the cook's domain. The butler's pantry—so called—and the dining room are the field of the waitress' operations. The duties of the dining room are carried on in public, and their perfect accomplishment depends in a large measure upon the preparation made beforehand in the privacy of the pantry. The well equipped pantry is furnished with a small refrigerator and a gas range as well as with the usual cupboards, sink, etc. In one of the drawers beneath the cupboards for china and glassware a box of paper in various styles should be kept, each of which has a distinct and proper use either in the kitchen or the pantry. In this box is a light, soft, silky paper for polishing cut glass and silver; nonabsorbent paper, in which uncooked meat and fish may be wrapped; paper for lining cake pans, ice cream and charlotte russe molds, and waxed paper for wrapping sandwiches and food prepared for luncheons and picnics. This box contains also envelopes holding different sized rounds of paper of various sizes to cover jelly and jam glasses, stoppers to take the place of those lost from milk bottles, paper plates to hold food that is to be set aside in the refrigerator, and absorbent pads, on which fried articles may be drained. After a picnic or luncheon has been sent out the rolls of paper will need to be replenished.—Boston Cooking Magazine.

LABOR SAVERS.

Small Devices That Often Prove Savers of Many Steps.

I always covered my cupboard shelves with newspapers, and when anything was accidentally dropped or spilled upon them I had all the trouble of removing everything and replacing the papers with clean ones until a happy idea struck me, and that was to have the shelves and the sides as well enameled with two coats of white enamel. This is so easily kept clean, and the cupboard is so inviting looking; no danger of ants creeping in by way of the cracks either.

Sometimes a very small device saves many steps. This is true of a small table or stand fitted with casters, since it can be easily moved to the stove or wherever it is needed. Cover it with enameled oilcloth. When cooking, the culinary utensils can be placed upon it and wheeled up to the stove, thus saving the cook many steps. In baking it will also be found handy.

A cupboard built in the wall back of the stove has proved to be the most handy thing about the kitchen. Here are kept all the utensils, and other things are neatly painted or covered with oilcloth, and plenty of books are put on the sides and at the back on which to hang up lifters, stirring spoons, dippers, etc. One shelf is devoted to lids and pot covers. This arrangement saves many fatiguing steps.—Exchange.

TOILET TIPS.

Massage should always be across the line of conformation.

The use of witch hazel in moderation on the face is not harmful. It is a vegetable astringent.

Skin foods and creams are best applied at night, as the skin has then more time to absorb them.

Sage tea if used constantly will darken the hair. A curler may be made at a time, steeping in the same manner ordinary tea is made.

For a rough skin lather the face well with a good soap and a drop or two of glycerin, rinse off and dust the face with oatmeal, rinse again and dry with a soft towel.

For a good camphor mouth wash try the following: Take a pint of hot water and dissolve in it two drams of powdered borax. When the water cools add one dram each of spirits of camphor and tincture of myrrh.

For Mother's Pleasure.

The middle aged woman or one whose children have grown past the destructive age should get all the comfort there is in the pretty things that she has accumulated. It is folly to hoard the embroidered table decorations, keep her linen wrapped in cotton flannel bags or the sofa pillows put away lest they be worn out. Now is the time to enjoy them. If she thinks that it would be better to keep them for the children she should remember that when these things fall into their possession they will be out of fashion, but not antique enough to have any value beyond the sentimental one that "they were mother's." Most grownup children take pleasure in seeing their mother's home kept in the present fashion, and if they do not they certainly do not deserve as a legacy what might have made their mother's life more comfortable and more enjoyable.

Cutting Cookies.

Realizing the fact that the "cutting out" of round cookies was the main part of the work because it necessitated handling and rolling part of the dough over and over again, as well as making hundreds of other useless motions, I decided that an easier way was good enough for me and abandoned the "cookie cutter" at once and forever. Nowadays I roll the dough into a thin sheet and with a thin knife cut it into bars or squares. The cookies are certainly as pleasing to the eye, as easy to bite or break and in every way as desirable as the round ones, while they have the advantage of requiring less space when put away. The change from round to square cookies proved the biggest help toward saving time, strength and patience I have found in a long time.—National Magazine.

The Bathroom.

Nothing is so hard to keep in perfect order as the bathroom, and nothing requires more constant attention. Pipes are the most important part. If anything is wrong with them the whole family is in danger, for half the disease contracted in winter, the time when people are more or less closely housed, may be traced to bad pipes and drainage. Bathtub and basins should be kept immaculate, not just ordinarily clean, as a servant usually leaves them. They should be cleaned and cleaned with good soap and a brush and then given a final cleaning with the woolen cloth good housekeepers always keep ready for just such work, for woolen cloths are the only things that will surely take away that little dark ring that forms, no matter how careful you are.

Be Amiable.

A writer says: A dear lady of my acquaintance confided to me an excellent piece of advice when I asked, "Now, tell me, how do you manage to keep so unruffled a temper?"

"Ah," she replied, "there are very few things in this world worth being angry about, so when I feel annoyance rising within me I ask myself quite judicially, 'Is this worth being angry over?' and in nine hundred and ninety cases out of a thousand my common sense answers, 'Oh, dear, no!'"

If you want your husband to love you to his life's end, if you want him to turn to you as his best friend, if you want to keep him your devoted lover, if you want to make him a thoroughly happy man, be amiable, even if it is rather an effort and does not come to you by nature.

Table Embroideries.
Table embroideries, such as centerpieces and doilies, should never be allowed to become very much soiled before being washed, as they ought never be rubbed very hard to remove spots. Wash such articles in warm soap lather. Never rub the soap on the linen, as it will ruin the colors of the embroidery, but pat gently and after rinsing squeeze them as dry as possible without wringing. Then spread out smoothly on a clean cloth, lay another cloth over them and while wet iron with a hot iron, keeping the cloth between the iron and the embroidery until the latter is nearly dry to prevent the colors from running, and even then the iron should never touch the right side of the embroidery piece.

Mr. Levenson says he thinks he may contest Judge Goldfogle's election to the next House. We would like to have Mr. Levenson leave it at the "thinking."

Excepting Chauncey M. Depew, we believe that no man in the country receives more invitations to dinners than the Hon. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who seems to be a guest at every function in Washington.

"It is the fools," says Rabbi Bachye, "who think they know everything, and in their pride neglect the study of the world and man, which would compel gratitude to God, and life devoted to His service and the doing of good works."

It is to be regretted that the conference for bringing about a federation of Jewish Charities, held at the instance of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn did not conclude successfully. Perhaps time and place were at fault. A business meeting on Shabbas afternoon with a luncheon at Delmonico's afterwards, and Jewish charity do not somehow mix very well together.

The daily newspapers are constantly publishing letters from their readers protesting against the high rate of the telephone service. Some of the correspondents are urging municipal ownership of telephones as well as gas and electric light plant. Who can tell whether the future may not bring forth a Municipal Ownership Party of great power!

Prepare for Life.

ידו בשלח פרעה את העם ולא נחם אלהים דרך ארץ פלשתים כי קרוב היא כי אמר אלהים פן ינחם העם בראותם מלחמה ושוב מצרימה. ויכב אלהים דרך המדבר ים סוף. "And it came to pass, when Pharaoh let the go, that God did not lead them the way through the land of the Philistines, because it was war; for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and return to Egypt. "But God led the people about by the way of the wilderness" to the Red Sea. -Exodus xiii, 17-18.

At the first glance it seems hard that after suffering centuries of persecution and oppression, when the promise made to Abraham was about to be fulfilled, the children of Israel should still not be allowed to take possession of the land which God swore to give to Abraham's seed, but should be compelled to sojourn in the wilderness. A second and more careful consideration of the circumstances attending the exodus from Egypt and the conditions under which the Israelites lived will convince us that God in His wisdom did what was best for His people.

How could a people that had not yet learned to trust God serve Him? They were unprepared to be a priest people and, therefore, had to be patiently taught and instructed.

The Sedrah of the week not only tell us of occurrences of bygone days, but every event recounted therein bears a message to mankind throughout all the ages.

The child comes into the world helpless and weak. It needs the fostering care of a loving father and the attention of a tender mother. The path through life is long and weary, there are many snares and pitfalls for the unwary, and every care must be taken that the babe shall be able, when arriving at years of comprehension, to discern the good from the evil and to select that road which leads, through righteousness, to goodness and consequent happiness.

It was God's desire that the Children of Israel should become a great people, a power for good to the nations of the earth. On leaving the land of the Pharaohs they were still in a state of infancy and lacked the qualities that make for a virtuous and clean life. They were as yet unworthy of the Promised Land; therefore God led them through the wilderness until the realization came to them that to attain the goal for which they strove, they must deserve the glories in store for them. Even so is it with mankind in general. We are born unprepared for life, and it is only by knowledge and experience that we are able to come into our inheritance.

During the sojourn in the wilderness the Children of Israel purged themselves of the Erev Rav, the idle, good-for-nothing camp followers who followed in their wake; before entering Palestine it was essential that the idolatrous customs and practices of the Egyptians should be forgotten so that they should be in a position to serve God with a pure heart. No man is perfect, but we can all strive to reach the pinnacle. Men and women will be better, and the world will be brighter because of our efforts to come nearer the ideal.

Prepare for Life by knowing "wisdom and instruction." Let it be our object "to comprehend the sayings of understanding; to accept the instruction of intelligence, righteousness and justice and equity"; and let us say with the sage in Israel, "I will praise the Lord throughout my life: I will sing praises to my God while I have my being."

Two Contrasts.

The missionaries on the lower East Side are working as assiduously as ever, and to some extent the community is counteracting the pernicious influence of these soul-hunters. One of these agencies is the Jewish Sewing and Religion School, at 120 Columbia Street, called into existence by that inveterate foe of the Meshummodim, the late Mr. A. Benjamin, better known as Ish Yemini. Since his death the school, which is maintained by a committee, is in charge of Mr. Lewis B. Michaelson. Altogether some six-hundred children are reached through the various classes on week-days and the services on Sabbath days. It is doing excellent work and saves many a Jewish girl from the clutches of the missionaries. But its sphere of influence might with profit be extended did the community give the School that measure of support it so richly deserves.

The School conducts its work in a building, the lower part of which is run as a saloon, and while the children meet to pray unto and praise God, drinking goes on merrily below. The character of the place is not one conducive to good morals and in regard to cleanliness leaves much to be desired.

Not many blocks away, in Rivington Street is a mission-hall the managers of which evidently believe in the adage: "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." The very appearance of the place is inviting. Little wonder then that the children are only too eager to go there.

No. 120 Columbia Street is the reverse of clean and is unattractive; the Rivington Street Mission Hall is neat and pleasant.

However much we may regret the state of things, the situation urgently demands immediate and strong action. It is absolutely necessary that in order to have the children stay away from the mission halls, methods and means, similar to those made use of by the missionaries, must be called into requisition. The community must not permit the men and women engaged in the anti-missionary campaign to do less than the missionaries because of a lack of funds. Aye, the Jews of this city cannot afford it.

At least twenty thousand Jewish boys and girls on the lower East Side, and seven thousand in Upper Harlem, are without any religious instruction whatever. Both down-town and up-town the missionaries are able to pervert the minds of our children because the community has not yet awakened to its responsibilities.

The Jewish Sewing and Religion School is situated in a district the population of which, the authors of "The Better New York" say "consists chiefly of Hebrews, living in such small and dismal quarters that the children find more comfort in the streets than in their cheerless homes." Right in the heart of this maze of tenements the New York Mission and Tract Society maintains "an English and Jewish Sewing School, various boys' and clubs, women's meetings and children's hours. . . . In the midst of a neighborhood where the downward path, morally and spiritually, broad and easy, this church has for years been proclaiming and pointing out a better way, and its cross-crowned spire, pointing heavenward, is symbolic of its mission." Near this church are the University and College Settlements and the Alfred Corning Clark Neighborhood House, distinctly non-Jewish institutions. In the face of such conditions some of our down-town "Jewish" schools pride themselves upon being "non-sectarian."

Some time ago an East Side missionary said that if the Jewish community failed to do its duty, they, the missionaries, would not stand idly by. The man was right.

And what is being done to combat the Christianizing and demoralizing influence at work among Jewish children? Practically nothing. We are glad, however, to note that the Union of Orthodox Congregations is bestirring itself in the matter; but the mere passing of resolutions and the appointment of a committee will not suffice. Words must be followed up by deeds.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Go in unto Pharaoh and speak to him, thus saith the Eternal, the God of the Hebrews Let My people go that they may serve Me"

Have Jews fled from oppression in Russia and Roumania, from Galician misery to forsake the faith for which their fathers laid down their lives, only to be less Jewish in the land of the free?

"My son," says the wise King, "forget not my teaching, and at thy heart keep my commandments. For length of days and years of life and peace, will they increase unto thee."

The future of this, the largest Jewish community in the world, depends upon the Jewishness of our children. Shall we break faith with the Lord?

Who is to Blame?

In a recent number of the Emanuel, an excellent Chanukah article appeared, in which comparisons are made between the old and new methods of celebrating Chanukah, and the writer says, "briefly, in thousands of Jewish households Christmas has taken the place of Chanukah." Chanukah is completely forgotten. That is the fault of the parents, not of the children. That is the fault of the people, who allow their social life to entirely replace religious life. That is the fault of callous, selfish, race Jews, who have no sentiment and to whom the success of the hour is all sufficient.

The editor seems not to have taken into consideration the malign influence of our progressive rabbis towards producing this religious disintegration. He has forgotten that in season and out of season, the Jewish people have had ding-donged into their ears the glories of progressive Reform and the superstitions of Orthodoxy.

They have derided the Kiddush and Havdolah as imitations of Pagan libations.

The use of Hebrew as a vehicle of prayer and praise has been pronounced unnecessary. The Sabbath lights have been denounced as a heathen custom. Years ago the great leader of Reform stated that the Succoth Feast had gone into innocuous desuetude and could never be resurrected on American soil. Every custom sanctioned by age, every ceremony hallowed by long observance, every rite dear to the Jewish heart, has been derided and ridiculed. The use of leaven food on Passover has been permitted, the Abrahamic covenant has been pronounced a barbarous rite, the custom of fasting on the Day of Atonement unnecessary, and the rabbis have set an example of irreligious libertinism and agnostic nihilism which has been gladly followed by their followers. Nothing has remained to them of the wreck, but Kaddish and Yahrzeit, the Jachin and Boaz set up at the entrance of the porch of the ruined temple of Judaism.

The Late K. H. Sarasohn.

By the death of Mr. Kasriel H. Sarasohn, the father of Yiddish Journalism in this country, the orthodox section of the community in particular and the New York Jewry in general, has suffered a severe loss. For more than thirty years, Mr. Sarasohn, through his newspapers The Jewish Daily News and the Jewish Gazette, labored for the preservation of traditional Judaism in this country. Personally the deceased was a very charitable man. He called into being a Home for the Stranger and Aged at a time when no such institution existed down-town, was a generous supporter of the Machzikei Torah and subscribed to every Jewish charitable institution in the city. In addition he gave privately a large sum every year.

Especially to East Side Jewry is the demise of Mr. Sarasohn a severe blow. He declined to move to other and more fashionable districts, because he believed that there was still work for him to do in that much maligned portion of our metropolis.

In his estimate of the deceased the Rev. H. P. Mendes says: "We have lost in him an industrious, earnest worker and one who has done much for the welfare of his people." No greater tribute can be paid to any man. Mr. K. H. Sarasohn labored well. He has gone to his reward.

Ostracized Metcalfe.

The vote to exclude the man Metcalfe of the illustrated paper called "Life," which was passed at a convention of Theatre managers in this city representing forty-seven theatres must certainly be a justifiable act, or it would not have been passed.

The theatrical managers of this city have at all times been recognized as men of generous nature, of liberal ideas, and we might say that no set of men in any profession or business are more public spirited. They are however evidently human. The fact that they took such drastic action against this man Metcalfe, excluding him from admission from forty-seven theatres that they control, is the strongest evidence that the offensive articles which this man has written have gone beyond the limits of just and honest criticism, and have been the outpouring of a spleenetic mind charged with intense bigotry. For a long time his bigoted writings have been tolerated, and it was only when the unjustifiable attacks upon the managers became too offensive, that they took the action in excluding him from their theatres, for which action they deserve credit.

Fighting Vice.

The Jewish community in particular and the city in general, owe a debt of gratitude to Messrs. Jacob H. Schiff, Isaac N. S. Ligman and Adolph Lewisohn for the efforts to break up the cadet system flourishing once more on the East Side. Within recent months, hundreds of Jewish girls have been ruined by the machinations of these beasts in human form. Stories, the details of which are too horrible to print, are told of the manner of which this gang has plying their trade.

Jews have always prided themselves upon the purity of their women and nothing should be left undone to maintain the high standard of virtue for which the daughters of Israel are famed.

We are betraying no secrets when we state that the Educational Alliance has been and is actively engaged in this anti-vice campaign. The pity is that there are but few such Jewish institutions on the East Side interested in the welfare of the growing generations.

New York Jewry owes a duty to those who come here in search of a home and every assistance should be given to the gentlemen who have so courageously undertaken to drive the cadets out of business.

LIX.

Among the specialists who have won a high reputation as masters of their art none stands out more prominently than Dr. Emil Mayer, who is now a recognized authority as a Laryngologist. Though scarcely fifty years of age Dr. Mayer has had a long and famed practice. As a doctor of medicine in general practice he enjoyed a lucrative practice, and, when many years ago, he became a specialist for diseases of the nose, throat and ear, he soon became known for his ability and success in this branch of surgical science.

The Doctor is not only an active practitioner but a close student, devoting much time to scientific investigation and giving the results of the same in papers prepared and read by him at the medical societies and general conventions of physicians and publishing the same in medical journals to which he is a constant contributor.

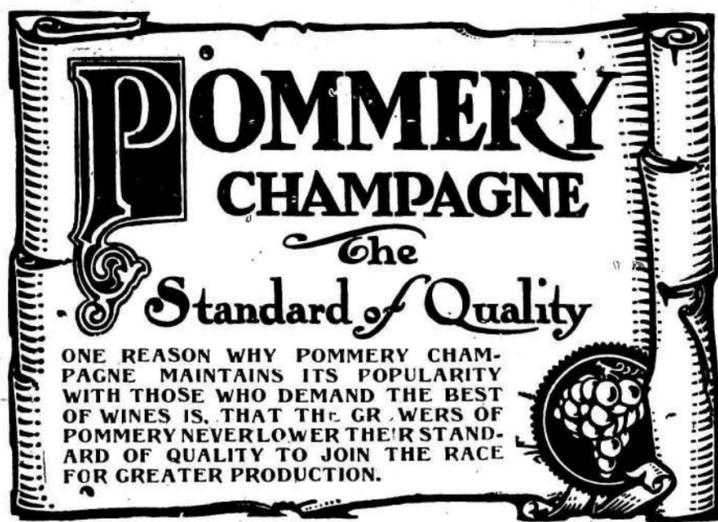

Doctor Mayer was born in this city in 1854, and was educated in its public schools and College of the City of New York. He graduated in the College of Pharmacy in 1873 and received his diploma as M. D. in 1877 from the New York University.

He has been a surgeon in Throat Department in the New York Eye and Ear Infirmary since 1873. He is the adjunct attending laryngologist in the Mount Sinai Hospital. He was chairman of Section of Laryngology and Otology of the American Medical Association from 1898-1899; of Section on Laryngology, in New York Academy of Medicine, in 1902; Chairman, 1901, and subsequently Vice-President of Fifth District Branch New York State Medical Association. Member of the House of Delegates American Medical Association, 1902-1904. He is also a member of a number of other medical societies.

Dr. Mayer is the originator of tubes used in nasal operations and other instruments. He is the American editor of the Internationales Centralblatt fuer Laryngologie, and a contributor to American and European medical journals. He is also one of the authors of Text Book on Diseases of the Nose and Throat.

Doctor Mayer is a man of handsome presence; a most gifted and fluent as well as entertaining speaker.

A contemporary tells its readers that "there are more Hebrew than Irish millionaires in New York." That editor must have been reading an up-to-date edition of Arabian Nights. To believe some immigration restrictionists, we thought, that these were more Evyonim, "poor people" than those possessing Ashirim, "riches" in New York. Eerhaps the paragraph is the product of the new Irish humor.

Correspondence.

Dr. Drachman on the Anti-Raines Law Hotel Movement.

EDITOR, HEBREW STANDARD:

Dear Sir:—In your issue of last week you comment upon the alleged fact that I have become a member of the Anti-Saloon League and desire to know whether I am jealous of the laurels of the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst.

Permit me to set you right in the matter. I have not become a member of the mentioned organization, nor am I desirous of starting any crusade a la Dr. Parkhurst. What I have done is to co-operate in a movement to free our city from the horror and infamy of the so-called Raines Law Hotels. It is surely superfluous to point out what vile dens of iniquity many, or perhaps most, of these alleged hotels are. They are snares for the innocence of youth, furnishing all too ready opportunities for the gratification of base desires, and it is scandalous to think that the law should tolerate, indeed, encourage the existence of such pest-holes all over our fair city.

Were this a matter which did not directly affect the Jewish community, I should still feel it my duty, as an American citizen, to do what I could to bring about the abolition of these abominable resorts, but it is only too notorious that our Jewish youth suffer also under their deleterious influence.

Altogether, the moral problem is the gravest one by which we are confronted to-day, and I can only hope that our Jewish brethren will do their full share in solving it in the right way, so that this vast metropolis may be great, not only in commerce and finance, but also as a city of righteousness, where true, pure and virtuous home life may flourish, and where those foul vices which dishonor human nature shall not be permitted to lay audacious snares for the unsuspecting or weak.

Yours truly,
BERNARD DRACHMAN.

The Spanish Jews.

EDITOR, HEBREW STANDARD:

Sir: In your report of the dedication of the Seventh St. Branch of the Machzikai Talmud Torah School it is said that Mr. Jacob H. Schiff told his hearers that "When we German Jews first migrated here, we found our Spanish and Portuguese coreligionists. They repelled our advances with haughtiness; they refused to unite with us. They bitterly regret it, but it is too late. Therefore, it is my constant cry to our coreligionists, that they should take warning from the lesson taught by the Spanish Jews, and live united with all their coreligionists, and thus I say to you of downtown, 'Follow our example,' etc. If this had been repeated to me by one of the audience, I might have doubted its correctness; but appearing in your paper I must accept it substantially. I am not sufficiently acquainted with the ancient history of the Spanish and Portuguese congregation to be able to judge whether the first part of Mr. Schiff's assertion is authentic, or how much blame is attachable to either side for inability to work hand in hand in religious communion. But coming down to facts as seen at the present day, I think I can in all truth assure Mr. Schiff that there are many Sephardic Jews, as also Ashkenazie Jews who have united with them, that are thankful that the congregation has not yet embraced the pseudo religion of the German-American Jews which has bred infidelity to the God of Israel, under the guise of promoting "reform" in worship, and has opened the door for the disappearance of large numbers from the Congregation of Israel. The people censured by Mr. Schiff must also pray that it is not too late to save the congregation from the dangers that beset it, remembering at the same time that while faith is the guiding principle of Judaism, to work as well as pray for its preservation is sound Jewish doctrine. Probably Rev. Meldola de Sola's articles now running in THE HEBREW STANDARD, will show that not the least of the dangers that threaten the congregation lies in its minister's fraternization with avowed "Hellenists"; and perhaps this may partly vindicate or give a clew to Mr. Schiff's insult.

The Mirror.

In proportion to the number of Jews there are perhaps more meskummodim in Hungary than in any other country. The following story told of a Hungarian apostate will certainly be of interest. He had occasion to be a witness in court and in reply to the judge said his name was "Stefan Attia Hortobagyi, your honor." "What is your religion?" the judge continued. "Catholic," was the response. "Can you read and write?" "Yes—but only Hebrew."

Max Regis, the erstwhile French Anti-Semitic leader, has married a Jewess. Some people object I don't see why Regis should not have the same right to marry into the faith as Zangwill had in going out of the faith in search of a helpmeet.

It is a good thing that the Indians who once owned this country were not as civilized and progressive as we are to-day, or they might have established an Ellis Island and deported the Pilgrim fathers.

Some people have implicit faith in their rabbis, but then the latter can't have come all the way from Cincinnati. Sometimes this trust is misplaced, as the following story for which the London Jewish World is responsible, shows:

"A wealthy timber merchant in Russia who had great faith in the efficacy of the prayers of his village Rabbi, called upon that functionary to offer supplications for snow during a coming winter. Said the man of commerce: 'Timber transporting is greatly aided by a smooth icy surface. I want 333 pieces of money,' claimed the miracle worker, 'according to the numerical value of (שלל) snow.' That is a very fair request," answered the wooden gentleman, 'here is the money.' As he left the Rabbi's house, the Rebbetzen also claimed a gift. The visitor gave her 10 pieces of money.

"Eventually the winter turned out very wet. The mud and rain lay thick on the ground. Transport was seriously impeded, and the trade proved very bad. Almost frantic with vexation, the merchant asked the Rabbi for an explanation. 'Are you sure you gave me 333 pieces of money?' queried the Rav. 'Certainly I did.' 'Did you give anyone else any money?' 'I gave the Rebbetzen 10 pieces.' 'Ah, that accounts for it, for those 10 pieces changed שלל (snow) to שלש (3), The numerical value of שלש is 343."

An up-town swell Reform Temple, in advertising for a congregation, tells the Jewish public that its "seats" are "free" and that "all are cordially welcomed." Is it so difficult to get a Minyan on Fifth Avenue—Central Park? Might I suggest that the trustees offer mezummen, including a free luncheon, especially Sunday mornings when the saloons are closed.

I am glad to learn that Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, the apostle of Chicago, who has been very ill, is on the verge of recovery. The doings and sayings of the Western Apostle certainly add to the gayety of the nations. May he flourish until one hundred and twenty years.

I see that the Southern Rabbinical Conference commenced its proceedings very smoothly, but will some one inform me why the Rev. Dr. M. Samfield who was not elected for president of the Conference was afterwards ousted?

It would be well if before the next conference is held, the Rabbis of the S. R. C. make it plain not that "No Irish need apply" but that "Orthodox Rabbis need not apply." Are they afraid that they have too much Jewish learning?

Oh these Rabbis, these Rabbis! The Rev. Dr. J. Krauskopf, D. D. President of the Conference of American Rabbis and Directeur Generale of everything in particular, who by the way ought to be a press agent for some soubrette, has been holding forth on the greatness of Wagner's "Parsifal" while another, Rabbi Enelow of Louisville, Kentucky, to wit, tells of the greatness of Christ. Oh when will these "spiritual guides" enlighten their congregations upon some Jewish topic. The question is can they do it?

Hon. H. L. W. Lawson, eldest son of Lord Burnham, better known as Sir Edward Levy Lawson, a Jew, the son of a Jew, has been elected a member of Parliament as an opponent of alien immigration. In the course of his campaign, Mr. Lawson explained that though he had Jewish blood in his veins, he had been brought up as an Episcopalean. In other words, his father transformed him into a Mesummed and of course apostates have always been the most rabid of anti-semites.

How to Relieve Various Ills Without Calling the Doctor.

A bit of iron can be removed from the eye with a magnet. Never rub the eye when it is affected. If the particle causing the disturbance is on the upper lid, draw out the upper lid and drag the lashes of the under lid across the inside of the upper lid. Reverse the action if the dirt is on the lower lid. A grain of flaxseed often takes out a speck of dirt. If tears flow, dry the eye by wiping it gently toward, never away from, the nose. If some one is at hand to help, let him roll the lid over the point of a pencil and remove the speck on a bit of cotton wound about the point of an orange stick or the blunt end of a hairpin.

If a child is injured or stunned by a fall or a blow take him at once to the open air. Lay him flat on his back, the head slightly higher than the body. Put cold water or ice about the head and prepare a hot mustard bath for the feet. If the child remains in a stupor it may be necessary to apply warm water to the body. The same treatment should be given to an adult, though the treatment can be more heroic.

If a child chokes, turn him quickly and not too gently upside down, patting him sharply, but not hard, upon the back. In case of an adult bend the body forward, face downward, and slap smartly upon the back. If the obstacle will not come up, jerk the arms above the head and force patient to hang his weight by his hands. This treatment may start the obstacle downward.

To pack the nose with cotton soaked with lemon juice will relieve nose bleeding. If the bleeding is not too severe a wash of lemon juice will have the desired effect. A small syringe can be used to force the lemon juice into the nose.

One of the quickest emetics is mustard flour and plenty of warm water. The patient should be made to drink cup after cup of warm water until the mustard has produced action.

The easiest way to relieve a fit of fainting is to lay the patient flat upon his back, loosen the clothing, admit plenty of air, using a fan if convenient, and sprinkle the face with cold water.

How to Renew Old Gloves.

A black glove may be quite renewed by covering it with ink and when this is dry rubbing it well with a polishing cloth. It is not at all undesirable to use, on such gloves ordinary shoe polishes which are black, and some, more economical and cleverer than the rest, contrive to transform their old white gloves to black by the same method. A great deal more can be done with convenient dyes than is dreamed of by ordinary people, but then they must be carefully treated.

How to Get to Sleep.

Nervous people who are troubled with wakefulness and excitability have usually a strong tendency of blood to the brain, with cold extremities. The pressure of blood on the brain keeps it in a stimulated or wakeful state, and the pulsations in the head are often painful. If these symptoms occur in your case you should rise and chafe the body and extremities with a rough towel or rub smartly with the hands to promote circulation and withdraw the excessive amount of blood from the brain, after which you will probably fall asleep in a few minutes. A cold bath or a sponge bath and rubbing or a rapid walk in the open air or going up and down stairs a few times just before retiring will aid in equalizing the circulation and promoting sleep.

How to Cure Influenza.

It is not generally known that equal parts of new milk and limewater constitute one of the best cures for influenza, surpassing whisky, which is so much used, and in cases where there is fever the white of a raw egg will not only strengthen the patient, but will soothe the pain. Do not give the yolk, as that would increase the fever.

How to Make Chestnut Croquettes.

Boil a pint of chestnuts to a pulp, removing the shells first. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and season to taste with pepper and salt. Beat two eggs well, stir in and whip all until very light. Form into balls, roll in beaten eggs and breadcrumbs, then again in egg and again in breadcrumbs,

How to Make Sweet Potato Pie.

Cook the potatoes in boiling water and mash very fine. To one pint of the potato add one-quarter cup of sugar and two well beaten eggs and enough milk to make a quart in all of the mixture. Pour into a deep pie plate lined with paste and bake until the center is firm.

How to Preserve Bric-a-brac.

Delicate pieces of bric-a-brac are often broken by upsetting them with a dust cloth or by accidentally touching them when reaching for something else on the same shelf. Prevent this by weighting down every vase or jar that is not heavy in itself with sand or small shot. It will not require a great deal in each piece and will often save one from being broken in consequence of some slight jar. You will find this especially useful where there are small children who have not been trained not to be meddlesome.

How to Clean Soiled Books.

Grease marks can be removed from books by sponging the soiled leaf with benzine, placing it between two sheets of blotting paper and passing a hot iron over it.

How to Make a Safety Pin Holder.

Take a piece of fancy silk—a Dresden design will be prettier—twelve inches long and eight inches wide and a piece of white satin the same size, basting lightly to each piece of silk a piece of cotton batting the same size. Sprinkle the cotton generously with violet sachet powder and fold all evenly together so that the silks are on the outside. Take satin ribbons of the color predominating in the fancy silk and about an inch and a quarter wide and bind all four edges neatly together, mitering the corners and joining the ribbon neatly under one of the miterings. Stick the white satin side full of black and white safety pins of different sizes, placing them in rows. Fold in three folds, and on the edge of the ribbon of the last fold sew on a piece of the satin ribbon the same as the binding, long enough to go around and tie in a pretty bow holding all together. This case, being very compact, will make a most useful addition to one's traveling bag.

Fry in smoking hot fat until a golden brown. Dress seasoned hot washed potatoes through a colander. Let the dish be a hot buttered one. Arrange the croquettes in the center of the mashed potatoes, garnish with parsley and send to table very hot.

Cook the potatoes in boiling water and mash very fine. To one pint of the potato add one-quarter cup of sugar and two well beaten eggs and enough milk to make a quart in all of the mixture. Pour into a deep pie plate lined with paste and bake until the center is firm.

How to Serve Orange Jelly.

Care and a little time are needed to serve orange jelly in the following way: Select even sized oranges and cut them in halves. Carefully remove the pulp, leaving the compartments unbroken. Fill every other space with a thin orange jelly, poured in with a spoon, and put the shells on ice until the jelly is firm. Then fill the empty compartments with stiff whipped cream and serve.

How to Make Ginger Nuts.

Three eggs, a cupful of brown sugar, a half cupful of butter, a cupful of molasses, a half cupful of sour or butter milk, a teaspoonful of baking soda, a scant teaspoonful of cinnamon and ginger and flour enough to handle; mix, roll out, cut out with a thimble and bake, putting them so far apart that they will not run together in the baking.

How to Fit a Sleeve.

The long shoulders of the moment sometimes give a lot of trouble to the amateur dressmaker. The correct way to fit them is to put the under part in first. Tack the full portion of the sleeves into small plaits and make them perfectly fit the size of the armhole. The effect is prettier if the plaits are loosened after the bolero is fitted; but, if desired, they can be left stitched for a few inches from the armhole. There are many devices for obtaining the long shoulder effect without actually cutting the long seam, which is so difficult. For example, embroidery and lace can be arranged so as to have the puffs running down over the top of the arm, and this will be found very effective.

How to Manage Lamp Wicks.

If a lamp wick sticks or will not move up and down easily, draw one or two of the threads from one side. In extinguishing the flame of a lamp never blow straight down upon it, but across it, says the Gentlewoman. The wick should first be turned far down. Again, when trimming the wick do not cut off the brown tinder, as it helps in relighting. Merely rub a cloth along it to remove any loose bits.

How to Make Camphor Cream.

A very good preparation to try when the hands have become rough is made of two ounces of spermaceti, two ounces of white wax and two ounces of sweet almond oil. Melt the three ingredients together over a gentle fire and add an ounce of camphor in shavings. Remove it from the fire when the camphor is dissolved and stir until the mass concretes.

How to Make Paste That Will Keep.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of alum in a quart of water. When cold stir in flour enough to give it the consistency of thick cream, being particular to beat up all the lumps. Stir in as much powdered rosin as will lie on a dime and throw in about six cloves to give it a scent. Pour the flour mixture into a teacup of boiling water, stirring well all the time. In a few minutes it will be of the consistency of molasses. Pour it into an earthen or china dish. Let cool and stir in a small teaspoonful each of oil of cloves and of sassafras. Put a cover on it and set in a cool place. When you need it for use you can take a bit and soften it with warm water.

How to Can Sweet Potatoes.

Prepare a rich sirup in a kettle. In another kettle boil the potatoes, which have previously been peeled and sliced. Use tin cans, fill with the slices of potatoes, and pour the sirup over them, filling the can to the brim. Wipe carefully, put on the top and seal with sealing wax, being careful to cover all air holes. These are delicious.

How to Clean Kid Gloves.

White or light kid gloves may be cleaned at home with very little trouble. Rub the gloves first of all with cream of tartar, leave them for an hour, then rub them with fuller's earth and powdered alum mixed in equal proportions. Leave the gloves again until the next day, when they must be brushed until all the powder is removed. The next process is to rub them with oatmeal to which a little powdered whitening has been added. Wipe all this off with a dry cloth, and the gloves are ready to be worn again.

How to Dust a Room.

Soft cloths make the best dusters. In dusting any piece of furniture begin at the top and dust down, wiping carefully with the cloth, which can be frequently shaken. Many people have no idea of what dusting is to accomplish, and instead of wiping off and removing the dust it is simply fluffed off into the air and soon settles back again on the dusted article. If carefully taken up on a cloth it can be shaken out of a window into the open air. It is much less work to cover up furniture while sweeping than to be obliged to clean the dust out afterward. The blessing of plainness in decoration is appreciated by the thorough housekeeper who attends to her own dusting.

How to Cut Brown Bread.

A steaming loaf of brown bread requires a remarkably sharp knife to cut it successfully, and the best of knives become rapidly clogged with the adhesion of the hot, moist substance. Victorious the housekeeper who keeps her temper through the entire loaf! A most satisfactory substitute is the "string cut," accomplished by means of a piece of common twine and no trouble at all. Slip the string around the loaf, cross the ends, pull tight, and the result is a clean, even cut.

How to Walk.

There is no virtue in a dawdling saunter. The slow and languid dragging of one foot after the other which some people call walking would tire an athlete. It utterly exhausts a weak person, and that is the reason why many delicate persons think they cannot walk. To derive any benefit from the exercise it is necessary to walk with a light, elastic step, which swings the weight of the body so easily from one leg to the other that its weight is not felt and which produces a healthy glow, showing that the sluggish blood is stirred to action in the most remote veins.

How to Manage Lamp Wicks.

If a lamp wick sticks or will not move up and down easily, draw one or two of the threads from one side. In extinguishing the flame of a lamp never blow straight down upon it, but across it, says the Gentlewoman. The wick should first be turned far down. Again, when trimming the wick do not cut off the brown tinder, as it helps in relighting. Merely rub a cloth along it to remove any loose bits.

YOUR VOICE.

Learn to Pitch, Moderate and Manage It Properly.

Harper's Bazar, referring to the voices of Americans, makes these pertinent remarks: "In spite of the vast amount of perhaps kindly meant criticism which has been made in all quarters of late years regarding the American voice it certainly does not improve. It is the exception to find, especially in the middle west, an agreeable voice, and women are more faulty than men in this respect. It is urged that the rattle of the ears and the noises of all descriptions make it impracticable to use a smooth, pleasant intonation. One has to force a nasal tone, we are told, in order to be heard in the tumult which 'civilization' has raised around us. When one considers the charm which a sweet voice gives to its possessor one wonders at the general neglect of measures to obtain it. Complexions fade, dentists ruin beautiful mouths, the eyes lose their glow, the chin and the neck crease and bulge—but the speaking voice shares with the nose the distinction of earthly immortality. It may weaken or crack somewhat with advanced age, but a thrilling speaking voice never wholly loses its power. Every one should determine that she will learn to pitch and modulate and manage her voice properly. Nearly every one has it in her power if she only chooses to attend to it."

COOKING OLD FOWLS.

Dishes For Which They Are Better Adapted Than Young Birds.

Almost every housekeeper has been mortified and annoyed by a fine, plump fowl turning out so tough that the carver has found it next to impossible to serve it in the usual way, but not so many of them have discovered that if properly cooked an old bird is much better in some dishes than a young one. For soup, croquettes, timbales, rissoles, fricassée, pie or pates an old fowl, having more flavor and substance, is much better than a chicken. For curried fowl, too, the bird no longer in its tender days is to be preferred, but the meat should be very slowly stewed until tender before using it in any of these dishes. Occasionally one prefers to serve the fowl whole, and even in this way it is quite possible to make a toothsome dish of it if it is cooked with judgment. Have it trussed as for roasting, put it into a saucepan and cover with cold water, let it come slowly to the boiling point, skim well and let it cook very slowly for an hour and a quarter or an hour and a half. Take it out of the water, and let it cool a little, and then stuff it in the crop with any preferred forcement.—Boston Cooking Magazine.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Coarse salt and vinegar will clean enameled ware that has been burned or discolored.

Do not drop dirty, greasy dish towels in hot soapsuds. It only sets the grease. Wash them first in lukewarm water.

An old bookcase set on the kitchen table, back to the wall, makes a very respectable imitation of a kitchen cabinet and saves many steps.

The range should be so located as to escape a draft sweeping over it. A gas range should always have a firm connection. A hood placed over the range is a great ventilator.

The Uses of Responsibility.
Every mother should remember that the making of her daughter is of far greater importance than the administration of things in her house, and every daughter should realize that she can learn to avoid mistakes only when she sees them. She enjoys most seeing her mother's mistakes and resolving that when she has a house she will "never do so." A beginning may be made with a small and comparatively unimportant responsibility, suggests Woman's Life, and it is to be remembered that responsibility and not mere work is the great thing. a hardy one, to begin with, but system and neatness may be practiced in its care to great advantage. If the plant should be a blooming one a small vase for the breakfast table would give an additional bit of care and pleasure to both child and parents.

Coffee, Chinese Style.
The Chinese method of infusing coffee in cold water is said to eliminate the tannic element. This method may be tried as a culinary experiment. The coffee will be found very strong and of a rich flavor. Put the usual amount of coffee, ground very fine, into cold water in a glass fruit jar. Cover tightly and let stand overnight. In the morning loosen the cover and set the jar in a vessel of hot water. Let the water boil until the coffee is piping hot, when strain into a hot coffee pot and send to the table. If wanted for after dinner coffee make the infusion early in the morning.

Teach Girls to Work.

Every daughter, no matter in what class she is born, ought to be taught all household duties to make her capable of household command. Marriage is too generally looked upon as woman's sole profession. Every girl should be taught an industry of some sort, according to the bent of her inclinations, which will render her independent of matrimony.—Violet Tweedale.

King Carlos a Crack Shot.

King Carlos of Portugal is generally known to be a crack shot with the revolver, but most people have forgotten that he once won a prize at a competition after shooting off a tie with the best shots of this country and England. This feat he performed in 1880 at Wimbledon, England, his American competitor being Mr. Winans. The Englishman was Mr. Ellicott. Carlos, then duke of Braganza, carried off the prize.

Relaxation.

A famous specialist said once if girls and women would make a practice of throwing themselves on a couch three or four times a day in the careless way in which a child flings itself down there would be fewer cases of nervous prostration to treat. Resting this way, even for ten minutes at a time, with every muscle relaxed, does an untold amount of good.

Beating Butter.

When beating butter to a cream, scald the basin for a minute or two, and wipe dry quickly. Put in the butter at once and beat it thoroughly. Add the sugar by degrees. The warm basin will not hurt the butter in the least, and the process is far quicker than usual.

White paint when dirty should be washed in milk. Colored paints may also be treated in this way.

This congregation has purchased the property at the corner of Harrison street and Tompkins place for a new synagogue. It is an excellent location and is easily accessible to the Jewish residents in the neighborhood. It is proposed to build a synagogue with a seating capacity of 1,500.

Hebrew Educational Society.

The annual meeting of the society will take place on Sunday evening, Jan. 22, at the institution, Pitkin avenue and Watkins street, Brownsville. Justice William J. Gaynor and Dr. Lee K. Frankel of the United Hebrew Charities will be the principal speakers.

Mt. Carmel Hospital.

The work of the Mt. Carmel Hospital Association is progressing and mass meetings held recently in aid of the organization were very successful. The association was organized for the purpose of erecting and maintaining a Jewish hospital in Brownsville which is in need of such an institution. The officers are: Dr. Herman, president; Mr. Ohrliner, vice-president; Henry Eisenstadt, financial secretary; Dr. Shapiro, corresponding secretary, 1845 Pitkin avenue, who will give all further information; Miss Ella Schneider, treasurer.

At a meeting held last Saturday evening at Tobac's Palace Hall, it was announced that two sites as well as considerable financial aid had been offered. One of the organizations uniting in the work is the Auxillary Alliance, which is composed of Jews and Christians and already has a membership of four hundred.

Council of Jewish Women.

The Brooklyn section of the Council of Jewish Women held their January meeting last Tuesday afternoon in the State street Synagogue. There was a very large attendance. President Mrs. Kempner conducted the proceedings, which were enlivened by some excellent music. Rev. Raphael Benjamin, M. A., of Keap Street Temple, lectured on "The Jewish Home." Rev. Dr. J. Leon Magnes lectured on "Yiddish Literature," with some elegant extracts from Professor Wiener's new book. Among those present was Mr. Nissim Behar, of the Alliance Israelite Universelle. The session was highly enjoyed by all present.

Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum.

Rev. Dr. Magnes addressed the children last Sabbath on "Lessons from the Life of the Late Mrs. Croner." The Rev. Jacob Schuman, the sweet-voiced chazan of the Temple B'nai Sholom, of Brooklyn, chanted the prayers very beautifully.

Rev. Raphael Benjamin, M. A., of Temple Beth Elohim, will be the speaker next Saturday afternoon. Services at 3.30. Visitors are welcome.

Mrs. B. Croner.

The funeral services on the death of Mrs. Benjamin Croner were held in the synagogue of the building on Friday morning, January 13, and were largely attended by the many friends of the deceased. Rabbi J. L. Magnes and Alexander Lyons officiated and the musical portion of the services was rendered by the quartette of the Temple Beth Elohim, State street, Brooklyn. The services were very impressive throughout. The deceased was an active member of a number of organizations which were all well represented at the services. She was president for the past eleven years of the Women's Auxillary of the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylums to the excellent fulfillment of which position she gave her whole heart and soul. The deceased was the wife of Benjamin Croner, a trustee of the Institution. The interment took place at Salem Fields Cemetery.

Dorshie Zion, Brownsville.

Perhaps the most successful and enthusiastic open meeting and entertainment of Brooklyn was held Sunday evening, January 15, 1905, in the lower auditorium of the Hebrew Educational Society Building, Pitkin avenue and Watkins street, Brooklyn, under the auspices of the Dorshie Zion of Brownsville. An audience numbering between seven and eight hundred filled the hall to overcrowding. The speakers of the evening, Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes and Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman, who for the benefit of the Yiddish speaking element of the audience, addressed the meeting in German, were warmly applauded.

The chairman of the meeting, Rev. Dr. L. Magnes, inspired the assembly with his brilliant exposition of Zionism. Among the numbers of the excellent programme were two which were conspicuously prominent for the appreciation they received from the audience. They were a vocal solo in Yiddish entitled "Elegie on the Death of Dr. Herzl," rendered by Miss Rebecca Weinzimmer accompanied by Miss Bertha Finkel and Yiddish sketch of his own creation enacted by Mr. David Feigenbaum.

About $6 was collected for the national fund and 60 new members were enrolled.

The next meeting of the Dorshie Zion will take place on Sunday evening, January 22, at 7.30 sharp, in the Hebrew Educational Society Building. An excellent programme has been arranged which will include an address by a prominent Zionist, a paper by N. Finkelstein, a reading by S. Henri Finkle, Wit and Humor from the Talmud by H. Bernstein, and a vocal solo by Miss Minerva Telsey.

Moses Mayer.

Moses Mayer, who has lived for twenty-five years in Brooklyn, died at the age of 80 years at his home, 116 Jefferson avenue, on Jan. 12. He was a native of Germany and came to this country in '49, when the gold fever was at its height, and went to California, where he amassed a comfortable fortune in the gold fields. He went back to Germany for his bride, Ernestine Mayer, now his widow, and on his return established himself as a chiroprapist. He was a member of the Masonic Order, the Odd Fellows, Jacob's Sons, and B'nai B'rith of Temple Beth Elohim. The funeral took place Friday morning. He is survived by a widow and four children, Pauline Levy, Harry Mayer, Sophie Mayer, and Lillie Rosenberg.

Where Men Are Scarce.

In Paraguay the women are in the proportion of seven to one as compared with the men. The consequence is that the men are taken the greatest care of, and everything which is unpleasant or might be risky to the life of a man is done by the woman. The streets are cleaned, ships are loaded and oxen are driven by them.

An Impatient Philosopher.

The philosopher Cleombrotas, after reading Plato's "Phaedon," killed himself in order that he might at once enjoy the sweets of the future life so vividly described.

The wages bill of the Salvation Army in Great Britain alone is £300,000 a year.

An Animal Perfume.

Civet is a greasy and intensely strong secretion of the animal of that name. As sold by the dealers in essential oils it is yellow in color and of about the consistency of honey. Like musk, it is not used at its full strength, but is diluted and dissolved in alcohol or used as an auxiliary to other perfumes.

The Tragedies of the Stage.

A good action is never lost. It is a treasure laid up and guarded for the doer's need.—Calderon.

Finnish Brides.

In rural Finland a bride wears to church a curious combination of wedding veil and wedding bonnet. It is a great cap with ribbon streamers behind and in front a fall of lace which shadows the face. Over her dark cashmere dress she ties a handsomely embroidered white apron.

Quickest Growing Plant.

The Beneficiary.

When the air is gray and sappy
And the snowflakes moistly squirm,
Then the only thing that's happy
Is the gay pneumonia germ.

"Foreinst" is a Good Word.

There is no such word as "forninst." "Foreinst," sometimes pronounced "forninst," is an excellent word formerly in general use, but in modern times rarely employed except by those who speak the Scottish and Irish dialects. It means "over against" or "opposite."

That Mirror.

In the room
Of your soul
Hangs a mirror
Whose reflections you
Cannot escape.

The thing's indestructible, and though
You may try, by greasing
Its surface
(W! the suds of soft soap),
To render its task unavailing.
Behold, sir, the grease will not stick.

That mirror
Is Conscience,
And, mind, it preserves
Distinctly each picture
It ever has taken
Of you and your deeds.

Turning your eyes
Away from it helps you
Not in the least,
Simply because your
Eyes will not stay turned
Thus, but instead must
Yield to the mighty
Glass attraction,
Face it and see.

What makes the mirror's
Pictures so fearful
Is that they show all the
Sins of you nude,
Bare of the clothing
Custom and tolerance
Kindly have lent them
Out in the world—

Show all the sins of
You shorn of the background
Of other men's sins.
Out in the world here
Surely this background,
Being of color
And substance alike,
Tones down and dwarfs
Your own villainy's figure.

Only the mirror,
Conscience, that hangs
In the room
Of your soul
Gives you no background,
Gives you no clothing,
Gives you reflections
Terribly naked—
Gives you reflections
You cannot escape.

are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "fresh as a daisy." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, reguother causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Be SELECTED VERSE.

The First Snowfall.
The snow had begun in the gloaming—
And busily all the night
Had been heaping field and highway
With a silence deep and white.
Every pine and fir and hemlock
Wore ermine too dear for an earl,
And the poorest twig on the elm tree
Was ridged inch deep with pearl.
From sheds new roofed with Carrara
Came chattering's muffled-crow,
The stiff rails were softened to swan's down
And still fluttered down the snow.
—Lowell.

"Johnny on the Spot."
The world has many golden gifts 'tis eager to bestow
On enterprising mortals who are not too
shy or slow
To step right up and win their share of prizes when they can,
But, oh, the world's too busy, quite, to seek the absent man!
And those who mean to do so much next week or month or year,
Away off in some misty clime instead of
now and here,
May some day rouse themselves and find a score of them have not
As much true "get there" as has one brisk "Johnny on the spot."

When shy Miles Standish sought to win
the fair Priscilla's hand
By courting her by proxy, 't isn't hard to understand,
The comely Plymouth maiden said she really would prefer John Alden, who possessed the spunk to come and speak with her.
That old, oft quoted piece of fudge which says that "Absence makes
The heart grow fonder" must be classed with those absurd mistakes
Which blunt, slang using folks would say are all a bit of "rot"—
The chap that wins the lady is the "Johnny on the spot."

The men who framed our nation fought against tremendous odds;
They never could have won had they been slow, weak hearted clods.
Each mother's son of them seemed glad to risk his precious neck;
Wherever duty called him, there it found him, right on deck.
Brave Washington was at the front, his country's course to guide,
With Adams, Franklin, Jefferson and
Hancock at his side.
No proxies could have done the work for
that immortal lot
Whose every man was what you'd call a
"Johnny on the spot."

In love or war or politics or whatsoever
you will
The wisest man is not the one to send a boy to mill.
Oh, no, he takes the grist himself, and,
like a prudent man,
He makes the miller give him back the best return he can.
And "genius" properly defined, so sages
all declare,
Means being at the proper "when" just at the proper "where."
So, of the many varied gifts the gods to men allot
The rarest ones are sure to fall to "Johnny on the spot."
—Success.

The Race.
The race was on! With voice and whip
Each rider urged his steed
Around the course a score of times
At most tremendous speed,
And to the end my jockey's horse
Was always in the lead.

My jockey rides his prancing steed
With perfect ease and grace.
My heart beats high with love for him;
I watch his eager face;
It wears a most determined look—
He's bound to win the race!

With ringing voice he rushes on;
The race is nearly done.
The steed he rides strains every nerve;
This work for him is fun.
One more leap and then—hurrah!
My jockey's horse has won!

My bright faced boy, just three years old,
Was this successful groom;
The course whereon the race was run
Was in the sitting room.
And, strange to tell, the horse that won
Was mamma's kitchen broom.
—Thomas Holmes in Trenton State Gazette.

Stains.
The three ghosts on the lonesome road
Spoke each to one another,
"Whence came that stain about your mouth
No lifted hand may cover?"
"From eating of forbidden fruit,
Brother, my brother."

The three ghosts on the sunless road
Spoke each to one another,
"Whence came that red burn on your foot
No dust or ash may cover?"
"I stamped a neighbor's hearth flame
out,
Brother, my brother."

The three ghosts on the windless road
Spoke each to one another,
"Whence came that blood upon your hand
No other hand may cover?"
"From breaking of a woman's heart,
Brother, my brother."

"Yet on the earth clean men we walked,
Glutton and thief and lover;
White flesh and fair it hid our stains
That no man might discover."
"Naked the soul goes up to God,
Brother, my brother."
