THE STRUNSKY FAMILY.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH.

THE name of Miss Anna Strunsky, the young Jewish writer who recently married Mr. W. English Walling, formerly of the University Settlement on the East Side, is already familiar to the reader of the HEBREW STANDARD. A sketch of her family at this juncture will, therefore, be of special interest.

Her father, Mr. Elias Strunsky, who was completely ruined by the San Francisco disaster, is now a resident of New York.

A wealthy distiller and brewer of St. Petersburg, the persecutions of the eighties drove him away from Russia, where a plant which cost 300,000 roubles was totally ruined. Finding refuge in New York twenty ago, Mr. Strunsky rehabilitated his fortune and thirteen years ago settled in San Francisco, where he carried on a very large business as wholesale wine and spirit merchant. There, in the capital of California, as elsewhere, Mr. Strunsky immediately applied himself to philanthropic work, which is part and parcel of his nature. He gave largely to all the charitable institutions and caused others to give. The name of Mr. Strunsky became a synonym for "Charity" in San Francisco. He was treasurer of the very wealthy Eurka Society, and held offices on Hospital Boards, Orphan Asylum and the numerous charitable and philanthropic organizations founded by the large-hearted Franciscans in pioneer days.

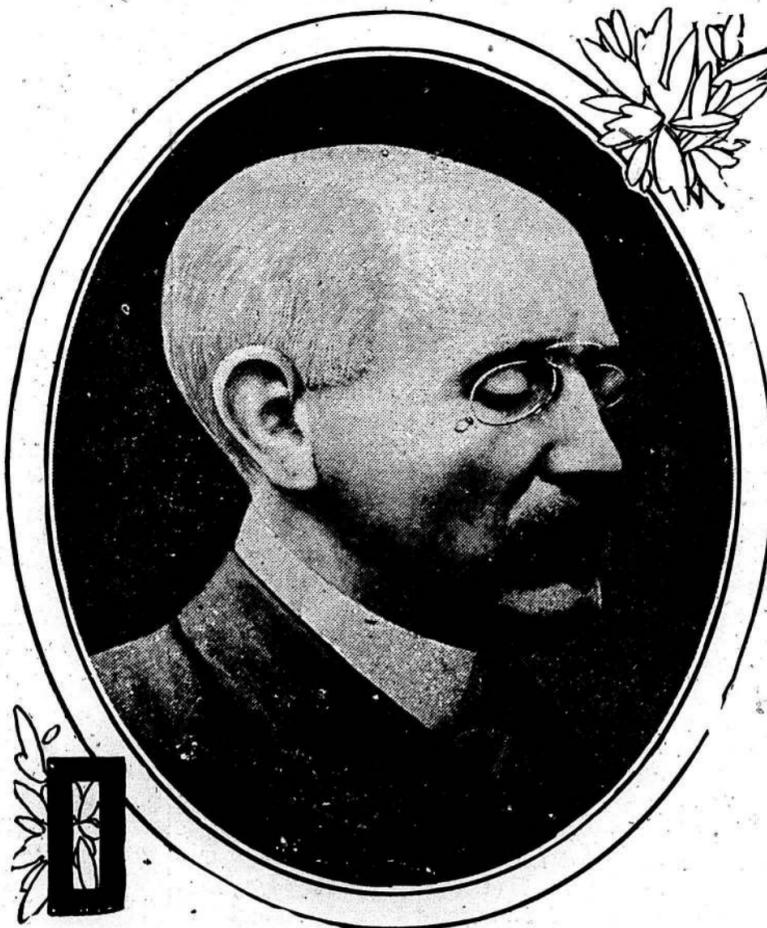

A lover of learning, Mr. Strunsky spared no money in giving his children the best and highest education obtainable at the University. Two of his daughters graduated at Stamford and Berkeley, respectively, and his youngest son became an eminent surgeon. Young Dr. Strunsky had the advantage of a wealthy father who spent $40,000 on setting him up in a well-appointed office with a well stocked library and an operating room equipped with the most up-to-date instruments. Dr. Strunsky was making a great reputation for himself as one of the foremost surgeons of San Francisco, and wealthy patients were numerous.

The Strunsky family had taken root in San Francisco. One son married into the famous Sloss family of Alaska Packers' fame, one of whose younger members is a Judge of the Supreme Court of California. The Strunskys were riding on the crest of great prosperity, occupying an enviable social position. Theirs was a solid position, on the 17th of April last, but in one minute and a few seconds on the following morning every vestige was swept away, leaving the family without food and shelter. The large business was destroyed by fire and earthquake, the homes of every member of the family were consumed by devouring flames, and Dr. Strunsky's office met the same fate. Worse of all, was the case of Dr. Strunsky, whose agent had neglected to give notice to re-insure.

For eight weeks the family was camped out on the Presidio, and during all that trying time, Mr. and

Mrs. Strunsky, who are orthodox observers of the dietary laws, never had the taste of meat, nor a drop of soup. It was a hard time. Nevertheless, Strunsky was busy on the San Francisco Charity Committee, and regardless of his own deplorable condition, was ready to render assistance to those who were still more helpless in consequence of the terrible calamity. Mr. Elias Strunsky will certainly

SPEECH BY MR. CYRUS L. SULZBERGER.

As already mentioned in last week's issue of the HEBREW STANDARD, Mr. Cyrus L. Sulzberger was one of edness—(laughter)—of the literary men to whom some 25 or 30 years ago he had sent most valuable articles on all kinds of subjects, always accompanied by a self-addressed envelope. Some of those articles had ultimately found their way back to him without the envelope—they had travelled the road so often. (Laughter.) So that from the literary standpoint there was no reason why he should propose that toast. In the third place, "literature" there meant Jewish literature, and he confessed he did not quite know what Jewish literature was.

Years ago when "Jewish" and "Hebrew" were synonymous terms, and when the sacred tongue was the only vehicle for the conveyance of Jewish thought, there could have been no doubt what was meant. But to day it was quite different. A little while ago their sweatshop poet (Rosenfeld) in America, in ecstasy of his woe, sang "Ich bin a mashin." He printed this in Hebrew characters in Yiddish. Was that Hebrew literature? He (Mr. Sulzberger) did not know. And then when that poem had been translated into English and German and carried to English and German ears, if it was Jewish literature in the first place, did it cease to be Jewish literature?

When their great master-novelist opened for them the gates of the ghetto and showed its children, its dreamers and tragedies, did he make them acquainted with Jewish literature? And if he did, when, in "The Master" and "The Mantle of Elijah," he touched the social and political conditions, and touched on them with what seemed to him (Mr. Sulzberger) a Jewish hand, was that still Jewish literature?

When his friend Oscar Straus wrote his book on the origin of European government, and showed that the European forms of government had their origin in the Bible—if that book had been written in Hebrew it would have been Jewish literature; was it less Jewish literature in English? He did not know.

When his gifted fellow-countrywoman, Emma Lazarus, had written her stirring Maccabean poems, did she write Jewish literature? And when she wrote those lines inscribed on the pedestal of the Statue of Liberty in which she called her country the "Mother of Exiles"—a title destined to last longer in the bronze in which it was written than in the country concerning which it was rise again, but the fate of the insurance policies is still hanging in the balance, and the benevolent man feels his position keenly. If there is such a thing as poetical justice in this world, Mr. Elias Strunsky deserves that fortune shall smile on him again, as there are few men who are as genuinely lovers of their race and congenitally altruistic as this eminent refugee from the stricken city by the Golden Gate.

the principal speakers at the dinner Union of Literary Societies, London. In proposing the toast of "Literature," he propounded the question, "What is Jewish Literature?" He said:

He did not know why he should have been selected, because he was not a literary man. That was not his fault but was due to the perversity or—if he might use the word that was not quite kosher—to the pighead-penned—were these lines Jewish literature or not?

It seemed to him there might fairly be one test applied to all, and it was this: That was Jewish literature which coming from a Jewish pen was inspired by Jewish idealism, that which had in it the Jewish spirit, that which had in it the doctrine of righteousness, the high moral touch which conferred the divine sanction upon Judaism—that was what made Jewish literature! Reb Yeruchem Mosheh Platzkoffsky, was the Chazan Shaynee, Baal Tekeyah, Baal Korah and Mohel of Temple Reyach Betzolim—which was a Conservative-Reform congregation with progressive-Orthodox tendencies.

They had family pews; sat up all night to learn on Hoshanna Rabba and Shvuus; had an organ and maintained the custom of Mi Shebayrach, the Secretary keeping financial tabs in the usual shoe-lace-book. During the Tishe b'Ab evening services, the Cantor removed his shoes and sat upon the lowest step leading to the Aron Hakodesh, while he plaintively recited the Echa's. The Rabbi eats ham sandwiches and smoked on Shabbas, invariably lighting his cigar as he left the synagogue, some said l'hachose, and others thought through indifference; the Parnass on that day would neither carry an umbrella nor ring the door bell, while the Gabbai, who zwick-ed his beard, openly conducted a retail clothing business, but refrained from cutting twine or tearing paper, because he would not, he said, for the world, be mechallel Shabbas.

The female members of the choir were all Christians, and their solemn responses of the Amen to the Birchah Cohanim was pronounced by all the young men as spiritually edifying, and by the young ladies as "too sweet for anything."

Their religious mentor Rabbi Azzus

Ponim, M. A., D. D., was a smooth, glib talker, quoting poetry by the yard and sermonizing with a decidedly Episcopalian twang. He read Hebrew like a Ger, (stranger) or as one of the Russian lambs of his flock naively remarked, "Er laist loшон hakodesh wie ah hund chapt fliegen" (He reads Hebrew like a dog catching flies).

He formed a Betzolim Guild, a Culture Centre, a Browning Band, a Ladies' Biblical Circle, an Emerson Club, a Shakespeare Hebrew Dramatic Society, a Children's Daisy Chain, a Social Sisterhood, and was active in the promotion of similar pastoral organizations and social activities.

The pulpit was not exactly "muzzled" but the Rabbi was privately informed, that if he would only refrain from preaching upon "topical typical topics," he would be permitted to quote as much poetry as he wished.

Milton Marks, an Englishman, who was one of the Trustees, remarked at a meeting of the Board when the subject was brought up for discussion, "Our Rabbi's sermons are a continual poem, in the same sense that Burke used when he said, 'Poetry is the art of substituting shadows and of lending existence to nothing.'"

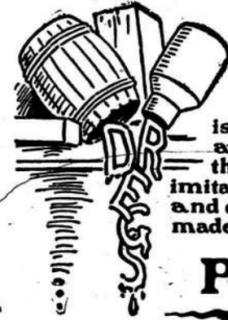

The Rabbi did not wear a Tallis but a moire antique balloon-sleeved gown; preached only on the first day of Yomtov, refusing, as he said, to dignify the second day with a sermon, which Meyer Winklestein—one of the old members—said, was an additional enjoyable reason for his observance of the second day of the festival.

The Chazan was ordered to read only one Y'kum Purkan, which, with the Shir Ha-yichud and the Pittum Haketoreess, was to be enunciated in "recitative." At the reading of the Torah the Parnass and the Vice-President wore gloves, some of the members had talayim and the removal of the hat was optional.

The Bar Mitzvah boys read their portion with the tropp and the Haf-torah in English, but were not permitted to deliver their "speech" in the synagogue. On Shvuus portions of the Akdomas were chanted by the female choir with organ accompaniment. Confirmation exercises were held twice a year on the Sabbaths when the Ten Commandments were read in the portion of the day; the catechetical examination of the children taking place in public on the Sunday afternoon preceding the event. The Rabbi received an extra allowance of thirty five dollars in lieu of a present from the Confirmation Class, who sent their "first fruit offerings" to the Orphan Asylum.

The ritual was the result of a compromise between four congregations—each too poor and too few in members to stand alone,—upon the basis "of give and take;" or as Ukoffsky the President of the Russian Congregation, said, "leolom tikkach." The Russian Congregation Tsiftsefay Darshonim insisted upon the retention of Y'kum Purkan and the Akdomas; the Bavarian Temple Sikkur Oyin would not surrender the female choir and the organ; the Herzogthum Posner Congregation Achai K'sillim, were only content with the Sefer reading according to the tropp, while the Shaary Ziemmo, composed of non-descripts, were satisfied with any old thing, as long as two or three of their well-to-do members were released from personal responsibility upon the bond they had executed when the mortgage was placed upon their synagogue building.

The Parnass, Mr. Ira Leo Ringal (formerly Yitschak Loeb Ringolowitz) was a Litvak; the Vice-President, Mr. Hugo Ochsenhaar, was a Bavarian; the honorary secretary, Mr. Gaston Leon Yard (formerly Dreyfus), was an Alsatian, and the Treasurer, Mr. Aboab Miguel Haddidi, was a native of Mogador. The members were of all nationalities of all characters and of all social positions. Attached to the synagogue was a Chebrah Tehillim and a Mikvah; in the basement there were a swimming tank and a gymnasium, which, with the athletic bouts, were under the supervision of the Rabbi, who delivered monthly lectures on Physical Culture, Muscular Judaism and The Church Militant.

The Temple services were opened by a march headed by the Sexton-Shammash, followed by the Rabbi, Cantor, Chazan Shaynee, Parnass, Trustees and the presiding officers of the various guilds and societies connected with the congregation; the choir chanting in English as a "processional," the Psalm "I rejoiced when they said unto me, let us go to the house of the Lord." At the conclusion of the services they marched out in reverse order, the choir chanting as a "recessional," Nunc dimittis, which had been specially rendered into Hebrew by Naphtali Herz Imber, the National Hebrew Poet.

There was no friction between the Rabbi and the Cantor—as is usually the case in nearly every congregation where the Rabbi gobbles up all the fees,—because the Rabbi had arranged with the Cantor; to give him a fixed sum per annum, in lieu of all perquisites which he might receive during the year. Rabbi Ponim did not pride himself upon his learning as a Hebraist or a Talmudical scholar, because he said, the trend of this progressive country was opposed to—"that kind of stuff,"—but he was a good business man and always kept his eye open to windward. The Sexton Shammash of the congregation received a commission upon all weddings, funerals, dedication of tombstones, where the Rabbi's services were retained, as did also quite a number of agents whom he employed as drummers, advertising every function he performed (with his title in full) in the local press and Jewish Bladder, and charging an extra dollar to pay for the advertisement.

legiate titles, and that their assumption by him was done, to deprive him of his official fees, to bring him into derision and usurp his ministerial functions.

At the trial, which was very brief—no lawyer being allowed to appear—the accused filed his answer, which was simply a general denial.

While admitting his patronymic change, he said that "Jerome M." was only an anglicization of "Yeruchem Mosheh," and following the sensible American custom, he had lopped off the superfluous terminology of "Platzkoffsky" and changed it into "Platt," just the same as the Parnass and other members of the congregation had done with their jaw-breaking names.

That he had not assumed any collegiate titles; the initial letters following his name being merely the designation of his official position in the congregation, thus "A. M." meant Antiseptic Mohel, and "B. T.," Baal Tekeyah, that he knew of no law which gave the Rabbi the exclusive right to perform marriage ceremonies and that although he was only Chazan Shaynee, he felt that he was second to none in the performance of those ceremonies in which a fee was involved.

The charges were dismissed, with the recommendation that both gentlemen should remove the alphabetical titles from their visiting cards and live at peace with each other.

Rabbi Azzas Ponim and Rev Jerome M. Platt have since become fast friends, having entered into a mutual understanding relative to a fair division of the perquisites and emoluments. The Congregation Reich Betzolim continues to prosper, its unique form of worship affording a brilliant example of the spirit of compromise underlying our American institutions.

Baltimore Jewish Population Growing.

In the last few months there has been a large increase in the Russian-Hebrew population of Baltimore, and every immigrant ship that arrives brings more. The old colony—bounded by Jones' Falls on the west, Hillen street on the north and Broadway on the east—is being rapidly overcrowded, and the newly arrived Hebrews are spreading out. Little colonies are being established in other parts of the town, each one with its synagogue in the most convenient place.

Baltimore is the city most sought by the Russian Jews.

Baltimore is the biggest clothing centre in the country, it is claimed, and that is one reason why they flock here. There is usually a scarcity of that sort of labor, and consequently it is comparatively easy to get a job at that trade.—Baltimore Sun.

The emoluments were the rock which split the friendship between Rabbi A. Ponim and the Chazan Shaynee. The former discovered that Reb Yeruchem Mosheh Platzkoffsky was reaping quite a harvest of fees and was materially interfering with what he dignifiedly termed, his "ecclesiastical privileges and prerogatives;" that according to Jewish law, he was guilty of Massig Gevul—trespassing upon his boundaries. The way between them became violent, and created as one said, an unpleasant odor in the midst of the Reich Betzolim. The matter finally came up before the Board upon charges filed by the Rabbi against his colleague.

The main specifications were:
 1. That he had unlawfully changed his real name.
 2. That he wrongfully claimed col-

LITERARY.

B. W. Huebsch has issued. "The City That Was; a Requiem of Old San Francisco," by Will Irwin. This account of the strange, sea-gray city appeared first in the New York Sun, and was one of those great, white hot "stories" for which the Sun is famous above all other newspapers in the world.

The author was once a member and a leading spirit in the famous Bohemian club of San Francisco. In the Summer of 1904, he wrote the "Midsummer Jinks," the annual, out-of-door performance for which this club is noted. Irwin's "Jinks" was a dramatic poem of 1,000 lines; and in its prologue are these lines, which have become a prophecy:
 "It is a dream; yet is it all a dream;
 Your cities, and your grim, gaunt giants of steel,
 Your wisdom and your striving—they are dreams.

DREYFUS TRIUMPHANT.

CONVICTION QUASHED—REINSTATED AND PROMOTED TO MAJOR—PICQUART VINDICATED.

In 1898 the late Emil Zola said: "I am absolutely convinced that Dreyfus is innocent and that justice will be at last done him, for France is always, in spite of everything, the great nation of liberty and generosity." And the prophecy of the great French author who was hunted to death by the scoundrels who dominated France for so long has at last come true.

Captain Alfred Dreyfus, branded as a traitor to his country, has been finally declared what the world always considered him to be—an innocent man.

THE DECISION OF THE COURT.

The Court of Cassation finds:
First—That the document from General Mercier's secret papers presented at the Rennes court-martial, in which the initial "D" was substituted for "P," was a falsification establishing the strong presumption of Dreyfus' innocence.

Second—That another document from the secret papers in which Dreyfus was alleged to have been shown to have delivered to Germany the plans for the railway mobilization never reached the War Department authorities, and therefore Dreyfus could not have secured possession of it.

Third—That the Rennes court-martial failed to hear essential testimony calculated to establish the fact that Dreyfus was innocent.

"These facts," the decision of the court says, "without seeking for any further grounds, are of a nature to establish the innocence of the accused, and it is only necessary to examine whether the verdict of the Rennes court-martial shall be annulled without a retrial or be followed by another trial by a court-martial."

After a lengthy review of the document in the case known as the bordereau, the decision says it was written by Major Count Esterhazy and that the accusations connecting Dreyfus with the bordereau rest only on hypothesis and conjecture.

"The accusation against Dreyfus," continues the decision, "whether based on the handwriting or text of the bordereau, was completely unjustified and without motive. Moreover, Dreyfus having a large fortune, one seeks in vain for any reason for his committing such a great crime."

"The court, therefore, holds that, as all the accusations against the accused fall to the ground, there is no necessity for a new trial and consequently the judgment in condemnation is annulled as unwarranted by the evidence."

In conclusion the court noted Dreyfus' waiving of pecuniary indemnity, and ordered its decision to be transcribed on the records of the Rennes court-martial and to be inserted in the Official Journal, and also in five newspapers to be designated by the Procurator-General, and at the cost of the government, in fifty papers of Paris and the provinces, to be designated by Dreyfus.

THE HISTORY OF THE CASE.

When the charwoman employed to do the necessary housework at the German embassy in Paris was about to light the fire in the office of Count Munsted one morning late in September, 1894, she found beside the grate a sheet of letter paper torn into four pieces. It was letter paper more or less distinctive, being ruled in the small check pattern which is neither common nor uncommon in several European countries.

Had she tossed the fragments between the bars and applied a match, she had saved a great nation much of reproach and not a little of disgrace. For these four scraps of paper, later pieced together, constituted the famous "bordereau" of what afterwards came to be known as l'affaire Dreyfus.

But French charwomen employed to do housework in the diplomatic headquarters of the traditional enemy of France are not supposed to throw away or to burn documents which smell of mystery and suggest treason. Moreover, to do so is to lose much good money. And so, having lighted her fires, this particular charwoman lost no time but hurried with her find to the Intelligence Department of the French War Office.

There, a certain Colonel Henri, who had recently been placed in command of this secret service bureau, and who was destined to become known in every corner of the world for his activity in behalf of the great injustice of the century, patched the pieces together. Many hundreds of thousands of people have heard of the Dreyfus "bordereau," but comparatively few know actually what was disclosed when this patchwork was completed. Here, then, was the result:

- Sir,
Although you have not asked to see me, I send you some interesting intelligence.
- (1.) A note on the hydraulic brake No. 120, and how it is worked.
- (2.) A note on covering troops—several modifications will be brought forward in the new plan.
- (3.) A note on a modification in the formation of artillery.
- (4.) A note referring to Madagascar.
- (5.) Manuel's project for field artillery gun practice—March 14, 1894.

This last document is extremely difficult to procure, and I have only a few days at my disposal. The minister of war has sent a particular number of copies to the corps and these corps are responsible for them. Every officer possessing one must return it after the manoeuvres. If you like to take out of this what interests you, and give it back to me afterwards, I will replace it; provided that you do not require me to copy it in extenso, and to send you a copy.

I am just starting for the manoeuvres. Naturally, there was excitement in the Intelligence Department. It is not known definitely who first suggested cause of the cold," responded the young officer.

"No," asserted the Colonel, "it is because you are a traitor. I arrest you for high treason."

The police head and his assistant were awaiting the word. Immediately they took Dreyfus into custody, searched him, then saw him safely lodged in a cell of the military prison. Here the unfortunate man, who had protested loudly, but in vain, was visited several times by du Paty de Clam, who sought to trap him in every possible manner.

The first trial of Alfred Dreyfus began behind closed doors on Dec. 19, 1894, and despite the disagreement of handwriting experts, he was convicted, and sentenced to be publicly degraded, and to be transported to a desert island where he should spend the remainder of his life. The end of the year came, and with it the refusal of a new trial.

On Saturday, January 5, 1895, the sentence of public degradation was carried out in the square in front of one of the largest military schools. The captain was first stripped of every insignia of rank, the buttons of his tunic cut off, the stripes torn from his trousers, his cap denuded of embroidery, and his sword broken across the knee of a non-commissioned officer, after which he was marched all around the square where his former comrades and his former men were drawn up with hundreds of others.

Outside the gate surged a great mob crying "Kill the traitor!" Inside, the representatives of French journalism, to whom Dreyfus appealed for a hearing,

DEATH OF ALFRED BEIT.

DIAMOND KING SUCCUMBS TO MALADY IN LONDON.

A dispatch from London announces the death in that city on Monday morning of Alfred Beit, the South African financier and diamond king. He had been ill for some time.

Born in 1853 of a well-known Hamburg Jewish family of some wealth, and possessed of a university education and a thorough business training, Mr. Beit went to South Africa in 1876, like Cecil Rhodes himself a few years later, in search of health. He was drawn to Kimberley by the diamond fever, and set up as a dealer in the precious stones. He found the industry in a state of chaos. The laws were contradictory, the methods of mining were haphazard, trading was carried on without organization, and dissolute officer, over head and heels in debt. But this was not all. When all of his antecedents and this record were laid bare the head of the Inquiry Bureau thought they seemed to fit some one whom he had heard described. He was puzzled until he saw Esterhazy's handwriting for the first time. Then he remembered. The dossier of the Dreyfus case! Every particular of the possible traitor fitted Esterhazy and now the handwriting would not permit further doubt.

He began his fight resolutely, although the I. D. B.—the illicit diamond buyer—was a menace to all law and order. But, above all, there was a grave danger that the mines themselves would be ruined by the flooding of the market with gems at a disastrously low price.

To bring some order out of this confusion was the grand problem which Beit set himself to solve, and in its accomplishment he formed an alliance with Cecil Rhodes. With him was also associated the late Barney Barnato. The risk they ran was enormous and the sums they borrowed would have bankrupted the whole country if by any chance they had failed. But they did not fail, and the De Beers Consolidated Mines were formed, owning the three great Kimberley "cones" and controlling the output of diamonds throughout the world. For years it has paid 5½ per cent. on its bonds and 30 per cent. on its $40,000,000 stock, and its power has lately been seen in the steady rise it has produced in the retail price of brilliants.

Alfred Beit was by this one operation one of the richest men in the world, and he continued to add to his fortune. He became interested in banking and joined the firm of Jules Porges & Co. He did much to develop the gold mines of the Rand, with Hermann Reckstein, of Johannesburg, as his partner. He was one of the founders of the British South Africa Company, and held large interests in the Rhodesia Railways, the Bechuanaland Railway Trust and the Consolidated Company Bultfontein Mine.

He afterward joined the banking house of Wernher, Beit & Co., and purchased gold and silver mines in South America, Siberia and Korea. From Mrs. Hearst he bought her interest in the famous Anaconda copper mine, and he acquired the Oneida and Mariposa mines in California. He was also interested in electric street railways in South Africa, Mexico, Chile and Portugal.

With all his wealth Mr. Beit was a singularly retiring man. He built for himself a magnificent palace in Park Lane—the Fifth Avenue of London—but he occupied it alone. He never married, and confined his entertaining almost entirely to occasional dinners to his men friends. He is said on one occasion to have given a fancy dress ball at Johannesburg to 300 guests and to have presented each lady with a diamond of a karat weight, but such ostentation seems to have had no real attraction for him. The friend of King Edward, he never accepted any title, and the greatest match of Mayfair, he eluded every matrimonial schemer.

His principal hobbies were the collection of old masters and the support of the opera. He gave largely to charities, and only recently subscribed $500,000 for the foundation of a university in his native city, Hamburg. Among his new intimates he seems to have been popular, and the name by which he was known—The Little Man—was conferred as much in token of affection as in reference to his size.

In 1903 he was stricken with apoplexy while in Johannesburg, and had lived in London, in bad health, ever since.

In Alfred Beit South Africa has lost the second of the two men who have had most to do with shaping its present economic and political condition. Cecil Rhodes has left his stamp unmistakably on the country, but in all he did he was associated intimately with his partner in the consolidation of the diamond industry. When they landed at the Cape there was not even a railway in Kimberley and British possessions were confined to Cape Colony and Natal. Now the Union Jack flies as far north as the Zambesi and the Cape of Cairo Railway has passed the Victoria Falls.

To bring about this Beit was as necessary as Rhodes. His name will always be associated with the development of Kimberley, the Rand, Rhodesia, and Bechuanaland.

A cable dispatch from London says the British Exchequer will receive a very large sum as death dues from the estate of the late Alfred Beit, as Mr. Beit's legal domicile was in England. A friend of Mr. Beit said to-day:

"Mr. Beit's will certainly will be a far more interesting document than even that of Cecil Rhodes, his friend and business associate. It will open the eyes of some persons who have spoken of him contemptuously." It is understood that many institutions in England and South Africa will receive bequests and that the bulk of Mr. Beit's vast fortune is to be devoted to public benefactions.

that the handwriting was similar to that of a certain captain of artillery, but it is now generally believed that it was Henri himself. But whoever it may have been, there can not be the slightest doubt that the suggestion was accepted with alacrity, and, proceeding on the assumption that the accused is guilty until he can prove his innocence, the prosecutors rapidly built up a case against this officer.

For Alfred Dreyfus was not popular among his fellow officers. In the first place he was a Jew, and in the second place he had more money than most of the other members of his mess. But these were not the only reasons. He was clever—and he knew it. Apparently, this knowledge bred superciliousness and something of arrogance in his manner toward his fellow officers.

On Saturday, Oct. 13, 1894, he was dining with his wife and two children, when he received an official communication ordering him to report at 9 o'clock on the following Monday morning for general inspection. It was expressly specified that he should appear in civilian dress. Arriving at the office on the day specified, Dreyfus was taken to the room of Colonel du Paty de Clam, where, to his surprise, he found also M. Cochefert, chief of the secret police, the latter's secretary, and M. Gribelin, the keeper of the records.

"I have injured my hand," said du Paty de Clam. "Have you any objection to write for half an hour at my dictation?"

"None, whatever," replied the captain, who proceeded to write immediately, without waiting even to warm his fingers which were stiff with cold.

The dictation suddenly changed, and Dreyfus found himself writing: "Sir, although you have not asked to see me, I send you some interesting intelligence."

"Why do you tremble?" asked du Paty de Clam.

"Do I tremble, Colonel? Then it is be-called him "A dirty Jew." And yet, bravely facing the mob, and as bravely defying the "yellow" writers, the convicted traitor cried ever: "I am innocent! Vive la France!"

On February 22, the St. Nazaire sailed from Rochert with Alfred Dreyfus as one of the prisoners confined in the convict cells on the forward deck. On April 13 the "traitor" began his solitary sojourn on Devil's Island, a barren rock off the Guianas, which had been used formerly for the isolation of lepers. Here for more than four years the prisoner lived in a tiny hut of stone, watched day and night by six guards who took turns of two hours each.

Then, when hope appeared to be folly and only the thought of wife and children could excuse it, came word that the Supreme Court had ordered the sentence of the first court-martial to be quashed and directed that a new military trial should be held at Rennes. A French warship carried the prisoner back to France, where he met his wife and his counsel, MM. Demange and Labori, and heard many things about the case which were new to him who had been for so long a time dead to the affairs of the world.

That this second and more public trial should have been held long before all are now agreed. But that it was held at all was largely the work of one honest man. In July, 1895, Lieutenant Colonel Picquart had become head of the Inquiry Office, and a few months later another document was brought there by one of the minor spies employed. Again the document was from the German Embassy, and this time it was a telegraphic dispatch (a petit bleu) prepared and signed by Colonel Schwarzkop for transmission to a Major Esterhazy at No. 27 Rue de la Bienfaisance.

Picquart thought it would be well to make some inquiries concerning Major Esterhazy, and these were at once set on foot. It was soon learned that he was a warned by his superiors not to allow the fact that there was a Jew more or less on Devil's Island to bother him. There followed persecution, treachery in his own office, trouble succeeding trouble. But new friends sprang up; the vice-president of the Senate, M. Scheurer-Kestner, who had been originally anti-Dreyfus, among them. They white-washed Esterhazy when at last it was necessary to stop public clamor by holding a court-martial, but that only made things worse for the War Office, for Esterhazy, fleeing first to Holland and afterwards to England, made a statement under oath in the latter country that he and no other had been the writer of the bordereau.

And yet when Dreyfus faced the new court at Rennes, and evidence in his favor was piled mountain high, they found him guilty "with extenuating circumstances"—extenuating circumstances for selling his country if he were guilty, surely the limit of confusion worse confounded.

A pardon followed, but Dreyfus was not satisfied. Said he the day after he was freed: "The government of the republic has given me back my liberty. This is nothing to me without honor. Beginning to-day, I shall unremittingly strive for the reparation of the frightful judicial error of which I am still the victim."

In connection with the above historical data supplied by the Evening Post a tribute must be paid to the late Emil Zola, the renowned novelist, whose letter, "J'Accuse," stirred the whole world, and Mr. Joseph Reinart.

Dreyfus has been reinstated into the army, and has been assigned to a crack regiment as major. Colonel Picquart has been made a brigadier general and to one more justice has triumphed. France has set herself right before the world, and a husband and father has been restored to a heroic wife and to innocent children.

Honoring Herzl's Memory.

On Saturday evening the large auditorium of Cooper Union was crowded to overflowing on the occasion of the Herzl memorial meeting, held under the auspices of the Zionist Council of Greater New York.

Mr. I. H. Fromenson, the president of the council, who presided, made the opening address, in which he spoke of the work of Dr. Herzl, declaring that he takes from the Jew "the yellow badge from his back and puts the red badge of courage upon his breast."

The Rev. H. Orliansky made a stirring speech in Yiddish, and after two recitations of poems in honor of Herzl by the well-known German actor, Egan Brecher, Dr. J. L. Magnes delivered the address of the evening.

At the mention of Dr. Magnes' name the audience broke into applause, and when Dr. Magnes himself advanced to the front of the platform he was received with a perfect ovation. Hats were thrown in the air, and it was minutes before the cheering subsided.

Dr. Magnes proved himself a speaker worthy of such a reception. In clear, rich tones now soft, now impassioned, he spoke of Zionism and its prophet Herzl.

He declared that "no tribute could be too great for the man who, through thick and thin, led the hosts of Israel toward the Promised Land; a man beautiful in his figure, beautiful in his mind, beautiful in his principles; a noble combination of Hebrew and ancient Greek."

"Herzl developed himself, just as his movement developed," Dr. Magnes said. "His ideas were not the same when he died as they were in his first book, 'Yudenstaat.' He did not intend that his first book should be regarded as a Bible by the Jews, but that it should be merely a suggestion. His first dream was that great ships might be built and the Jews taken to a land where they could live together according to their history and their beliefs; that thousands and tens of thousands might be thus transported. He lived to know that it would take years and years to accomplish such a result as that."

Dr. Magnes remarked the coincidence of the anniversary with the vindication of Captain Dreyfus and reminded his audience that it was at the Rennes trial that the inspiration of a New Jerusalem came to the gifted Herzl.

He then turned to broader topics, and quoted the sentiment of the man they mourned that "a Kishineff or any other place where massacres occur is no different from any place where a Jew suffers because he is a Jew."

J. W. Hillel C. Fromenson then sang "Fear Not, O Israel" and "Dort hri die Ceder."

The next speaker of the evening was the Rev. H. Masliansky, who was loudly applauded. He spoke of the greatness of Herzl, who he declared was "born too late and died too soon."

Eighty-eight dollars were collected for the National Fund. The proceedings closed with the singing of the "Hatikvah."

Memorial services and meetings were held in every part of the country throughout the week.

Russian Jews Panicked.

WARSAW, Russian Poland, July 12.—It is estimated that not less than 40,000 Jews, old men, women and children, fled from Warsaw yesterday. Most of the able-bodied male Jews remained to protect their property. Many of the Jewish shops are closed to-day; the houses of the Jews are empty. Intense depression prevails in the Jewish quarter, where the inhabitants have organized a system of self-defense. Armed guards are posted at the gates of all the houses and patrols parade the streets.

The authorities have taken precautions against an anti-Jewish outbreak, and the police have authorized the newspapers to issue extra editions with the view of allaying the panic.

Up to noon all was quiet here.

POLTAVA, Russia, July 12.—Hundreds of Jews left this city last night, fearing an anti-Jewish outbreak to-day, but the spirit shops were closed, and the authorities have promised to prevent any disturbances.

BIALYSTOK, Russia, July 12.—The proprietors of eight Jewish factories here are winding up their affairs, with the intention of removing to Palestine and setting up in business there.

STRONG AND LUSTY AT 76

The Honorable Moritz Ellinger, who has been prominent in literature and politics in New York City for the past fifty years, pays tribute to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, the great family medicine and renewer of youth.

Mr. Moritz Ellinger

is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic it builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart, gives power to the brain, strength and elasticity to the muscles, and richness to the blood. It brings into action all the vital forces, it makes digestion perfect and enables you to get from the food you eat the nourishment it contains. It is invaluable for overworked men, delicate women and sickly children. It strengthens the system, is a promoter of good health and longevity, makes the old young and keeps the young strong. Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey contains no fusel oil and is the only whiskey that has been recognized as a medicine. This is a guarantee.

Sold by all druggists and grocers, or direct, in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1. Insist on the genuine and see that the "Old Chemist" trade-mark is on the label. Beware of refilled bottles and spurious malt whiskey substitutes offered for sale by unreliable dealers. They are positively harmful and will not cure. Medical booklet and doctor's advice free. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Mr Ellinger was born October 17th, 1830, at Fürth, Bavaria. He now holds the responsible position of interpreter in the Surrogate's Court of New York City, and was Coroner of City of New York for 6 years.

"After over fifty years of active life, engaged in the various official positions I have filled in the civic, literary, sociological, fraternal and political organizations with which I have been connected, and the various civil positions I have occupied, during all of which time I always found myself mentally bright and physically active, I noticed to my deep regret that with advancing years I was becoming weaker and unable to perform many of the duties which required even a moderate degree of physical exertion.

"I had frequently noticed the announcements of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey which appear in the columns of the press, and naturally viewed them, as many casual readers do, as a well advertised nostrum no different from many other similar patent medicines offered to the public and paid no attention to them.

"Some time ago, at the suggestion of a valued friend, who based his representations of the hygienic value of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey upon his own personal experience, although sceptical to the extreme, I concluded to test it, and it affords me pleasure to tell you that I have been greatly benefited by its use. I find that not only is it an excellent tonic and stimulant but a valuable invigorant of the system, and tends to promote longevity, and, feeling rejuvenated, I can truly say with Shakespeare:

"Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty; for in my youth I never did apply hot and rebellious liquors to my blood; and did not with unashful forehead woo the means of weakness and debility; therefore my age is a lusty winter, frosty but kindly."

A Ballad of Vegetables.

A potato went out on a mash
And sought an onion bed;
"That's pie for me!" observed the squash,
And all the beets turned red,
"Go 'way!" the onion, weeping, cried:
"Your love I cannot be;
The pumpkin be your lawful bride—
You canteloupe with me."

But onward still the tuber came,
And lay down at her feet;
"You cauliflower by any name
And it will smell as wheat;
And I, too, am an early rose,
And you I've come to see;
So don't turnip your lovely nose,
But spinachat with me."

"I do not carrot at all to wed,
So go, sir, if you please,"
The modest onion meekly said,
"And lettuce, pray, have peas,
Go, think that you have never seen
Myself or smelled my sigh;
Too long a maiden I have been
For favors in your eye"

"Ah, spare a cuss," the tuber prayed;
"My cherryed bride you'll be;
You are the only weeping maid
That's currant now with me."
And as the wily tuber spoke
He caught her by surprise,
And, giving her an artichoke,
Devoured her with his eyes.

Vows and Oaths.—The Division of the Land and the Cities of Refuge.

Numbers xxx.—xxxvi.

FROM THIS WEEK'S SEDRAH.

IN the first part of the two Portions of the Law of which I tell you this week, Moses gives the people God's directions concerning vows and oaths. He shows them the solemn obligations of a promise, and how a responsibility must not be lightly undertaken, nor lightly abandoned. Rash promises made by young people—their parents disapproving at the time—were not to be binding; but every vow pronounced seriously and thoughtfully as becomes such solemn things, "with the lips," was to "bind the soul."

In moments of difficulty or danger impulsive people might be apt to make wild offers, which, when the moment of release came, they would be loth to discharge. You remember the story of Jepthah, and the sort of condition he made with God in case the victory were given to him over the Ammonites.

Coming back successful, he vowed to sacrifice the first object he met on his return; and one can fancy what his feelings must have been, as he beheld his daughter in advance of all others, running forth to meet him with words of happy welcome on her lips. It was to guard against such rash vows being made, to ensure promises being thoughtfully uttered and religiously kept, to make men and woman honorable in their obligations to each other, that the injunctions in this 30th Chapter of Numbers were given.

The next incident in the history of the wanderings is a successful battle against the Midianites, in which Balaam was slain. To guard against the contamination which these heathens might bring into the camp of Israel—for moral diseases are to the full as infectious as physical ones—Moses commanded that no captives, even among the woman, were to be spared, except those who were too young to know evil. Of the spoil, a part was reserved for God's service, which included His priesthood and His poor; and when this was all righteously settled, the officers of the army drew near to Moses and brought the booty which each had secured for himself, and gave it to him as a free-will offering for the treasury of the Lord.

An act like this must have given Moses new courage and hope, and it is pleasant for us to read of it, as showing that our ancestors had their impulses of generosity and good feeling as well as of impatience and idolatry, which we have so often to hear about. Then two tribes—Reuben and Gad—came before Moses with a petition that they might have their possessions in the land of Gilead which was already conquered, and that they might not cross the boundary line of the river Jordan. And Moses, who thought he saw in this request cowardice and faint-heartedness, reminded them of the sin of the spies, who saw only difficulties and disagreeables in their path, and were punished for their want of faith and courage. Then the spokesman of the tribes explained that their hesitation to cross the river did not spring from such unworthy motives: that they were willing and eager to join their brethren in the war of extermination which should presently commence, and only wished to leave their wives and little ones in these safe cities of Gilead, and that they would not themselves enter into possession till their fellow-soldiers, helped by them, should also have lands allotted to them. So Moses was satisfied, and willingly agreed to this arrangement.

"By the commandment of the Lord," we next read, "Moses wrote all the journeyings of the Israelites from the very beginning, when they went out of Egypt with a high hand, in the sight of all the Egyptians." Then followed the division of the land, Eleazar the high priest, and Joshua the son of Nun, being appointed to the responsible office of superintending the division. There seems a beautiful fitness in thus making the representatives of religion and honest manly courage undertake the duty.

The condition of inheritance was impressively repeated, that they should "drive out the inhabitants of the land, destroy their pictures, their molten images, and quite pluck down all their high places." That all incentives to sin should be removed was the reason of this absolute and unconditional command, and to make it yet more impressive the threat is added: "If ye will not drive out the inhabitants of the land from before you, it shall come to pass that those which remain shall be pricks in your eyes and thorns in your side, and shall vex you in the land wherein you dwell; moreover, it shall come to pass that I will do unto you as I thought to do unto them." It seems strange that such emphatic words should have failed to have an effect.

In the division of the land which ensued, the Levites were given a special inheritance of their own—walled cities and pleasant suburbs—in which they were to dwell without toil or strife, pursuing only their holy labors of love, ministering to the moral and educational wants of the people, softening, refining and elevating their natures as is the mission of all truly religious leaders.

Among the forty-two cities thus peacefully set apart from the toils and troubles of the time, were six "cities of refuge," as they were called, and their object beautifully illustrates the divine mercy of this inspired code of Laws. Hither the rash, impetuous sinner, the one who sinned from quick impulse or sudden passion, and who longed to atone for the moment's crime by a long lifetime of remorse, could flee, secure from the "avenger of blood," and pass the days left him "in alms deed and in prayer."

Premeditated sin, that is wrong thought of and planned beforehand, was to be judged and punished; but the sin born of heedlessness, or accident, or impulse—the sin for which even human judgment might make allowances—was allowed by God these six harbors of safety in the land, where alone, separated from family and friends, taken from old influences and old temptation, the sinner "might turn from his evil ways and live."

Rare-B'ts of History.

As Goliath sank to the earth a great shout of exultation went up from the Israelites.

"A knock-out! A knock-out!" cried they. "Hurray for Kid Davy, the son of Jesse!"

Over in the Philistine's corner a glum crowd gathered around the fallen champion. When Goliath heard the cheers for David his lips moved as if to speak. The scribes, with their mallets and chisels, stretched their necks forward, in an effort to hack verbatim the last words of the dying man on their slabs of stone, and forward them, upon a week's notice, by chariots, to their respective yearlies on newspaper row.

"I—I—" gasped Goliath, in a voice scarcely audible and trembling from weakness.

Whack! whack! went the mallets of the scribes on their tablets.

"I—w—want—it—d—dis—tinct—ly (whack, whack) — un—der—s—stood that—I—am—s—still—the—heavy—weight—champion (whackety—whack.) He—is—a—feather—weight. If—I—had—rained—down—he—would—have—missed—me—by—a—block. (Whack—whackety—whack—whack) We fought o—out—of—class—and—there—can—be—no—decision. I—I—" but poor Goliath's breath was gone.

Is Murder a Crime?

BY NAPHTALI HERZ IMBER.

Poets of yore, have sung of the golden age of mankind, when the celestials were entertained by the mortals, and the latter paid a visit of courtesy dashing with an automobile, a chariot of fire, to pay respects to the immortals.

It must have been, indeed, the golden age, the poets longed for.

But alas, it was some time ago, of which even history has no recollection. Modern poets, impelled by their own misery, are singing the song of "Hope," when the same golden age will return, and the great family of Adam's children will celebrate the reunion of mankind with divine nature. I, as a religious man, do not know that there was once a golden age, for the simple reason; that if it was such an age, why did it go out of existence?

For the promises of the modern poets, who are lulling me with the song of "Hope" I do not give a continental, for they are the most unreliable men, they deceive others and themselves too.

I know that the first man born was a murderer, and I believe that the last one will be a Cain too, and if he will not kill somebody, he will kill himself. The thirst for blood is natural, for scratch the skin of a man, and you will find the beast. The thirst for blood is something of human nature, for nature itself is a regular slaughter house. The spider weaves a net round the fly to suck its blood, and the whole creation is doing the "killing business" on a large scale, even the plant life is attacked by the many bugs which require an Encyclopedia to mention their names. But the sweetest liquid is the human blood. The tiger likes it as well as the mosquito, and the lion is delighted to quench his thirst.

There is a law of the Ten Commandments which commands "Thou shalt not kill," but there is a law which reverses the law and fosters to go on and murder. The calls for soldiers and what are they? Privileged murderers.

Even science is in the conspiracy of the "killing trust." The doctors with a diploma in their left hand, kill with their right, and nobody can complain. I am in despair when thinking of that killing business, when it is supported by nature, government and religion, for each religion preaches "Thou shalt not kill," but as good Christians their right does not know what their left does.

The same preacher who spoke from his pulpit "Thou shalt not kill," the same inaugurated the slaughter of so many thousands of Jews.

The killing business will go on as long as we will live. But my own consolation is: that the first man was a murderer, and the last one will commit suicide. Blood is a kind of Sap-olio, which cleans the dirt of nations. Individuals clean themselves with water.

Nations only with Blood.

The White Lady of the Dreyfus Case.

Parisians have forgotten the White Lady who has made her reappearance with the retrial of the Dreyfus case, and ungallant though it must sound, I admit that I, too, have forgotten her name. She has always been something of a mystery. She is a rich and attractive woman, who must now be about thirty-five, and for the last twelve years she has not missed a single one of the greater or lesser trials of the Dreyfus case. How she obtains a ticket for admission to court is as great a mystery as herself; but she is always present, and always dressed entirely in white. Her jewels are remarkable, and she attracts, or rather, attracted, so much attention that on several occasions she has been asked to sit in a quiet corner of the court, where she would not be quite so prominent a figure. On the first day of the Rennes court-martial in 1899 the White Lady was the only woman on the platform where the judges sat. Three or four distinguished people, the ex-president of the Republic, M. Casimir Perier, among them; had been allotted seats behind the judges; but the presence of a woman there and of a woman dressed in white and glittering with jewels, created something of a scandal. The uproar made in court was such that, although the White Lady was found to be in possession of the pink card, signed by the Minister of War, entitling her to sit upon the platform, Col. Jouaust, the president of the court-martial, asked her to leave her prominent position, and provided her with a seat elsewhere.—St. James's Gazette.

A Frisco Home Replaced.

The Hebrew Home for Aged Disabled, of San Francisco, Cal., which was formerly located at 507 Lombard street, and which lost its home during the recent catastrophe, has been successful in opening new and commodious quarters for its inmates. The Board of Directors was fortunate enough to secure the premises at 2910 Franklin street, where the inmates are now comfortably housed, after having spent several months at the Presidio. With the exception of one death all the members have returned in comparatively good health. The institution is in a flourishing condition, and will shortly erect its own home on its lot at the corner of Clement street and Nineteenth avenue.

Love may make the world go round, but it takes money to lubricate the machinery.

ORGAN ESSENTIALS.

ONE of the objectionable features of many of the organs used for Divine worship is the complex mechanism used in their construction.

SIMPLICITY is one of the essential characteristics of a good instrument and is the principal thing sought after by experienced performers.

In the purchase of organs the financial question is often one of paramount consideration, and its

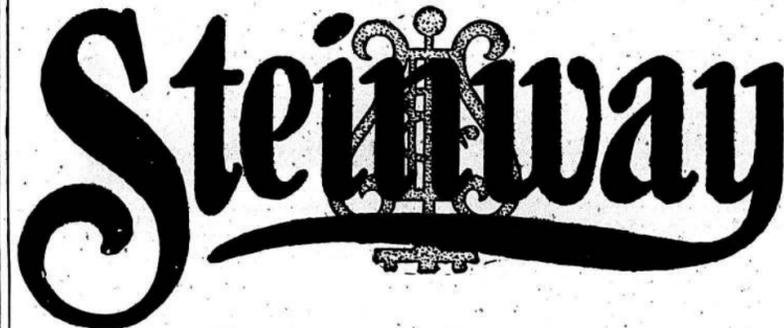

DURABILITY for many years enters largely into the calculation of the purchasers. After a fair investment has been made, it is but natural to expect that no outlay will be required for repairs and the necessity for the purchase of a new instrument be apparent for many years to come. There is, however, an important fact in an organ which cannot be overlooked and that is the ABSOLUTE RELIABILITY of the instrument, which depends not alone on the accuracy of the mechanism but in the perfection of the tone, quality and touch, so as to fully realize the soulful conceptions of the organist. SIMPLICITY, DURABILITY and Absolute Reliability are the salient features of the organs manufactured by

The Sun very often defects its rays in an unseemly manner. In its brief biographical sketches of the candidates for the Judiciary presented by the Bar Association, attention is directed to the fact that John Frankenhimer is of Jewish parentage.

If it is intended as a compliment, why not have traced the descent of Michael H. Cardoza, whose forbears were the first Jewish settlers in the United States. If it was meant to designate his religious belief, why not have referred to the Catholics and Episcopalians on the ticket; We are afraid that "the Sun does not shine for all."

France Rights Herself,

FRANCE has rehabilitated herself. She is now once more La Belle France. The story of the martyrdom of Alfred Dreyfus, is, too, the story of a nation sunk to the lowest depths. The traitors of France were not Dreyfus, Picquart and Zola, but the men who, by their intrigues, debased the country which gave them birth.

The personality of Dreyfus need not be considered. He was merely the instrument by which the French enemies of France sought to bring about her ruin.

After twelve weary years of suffering and shame Justice has triumphed. Dreyfus can once more look stright into the eyes of his children and say: "Your father is an honest man."

Picquart, the noble Picquart, has won in the good fight he so valiantly fought. Joseph Rinach may be proud of his share in the setting right the wrong. Zola is dead. Seheurer Kestner has passed to another world, but their names and their deeds will never be blotted out.

There is but one consolation and that is the Dreyfus Affair has convinced many Jews that they must always remain faithful to their people.

A Distinguished Career.

HON. LEONARD A. GIEGERICH who is but now entering his fifty first year of age, has had a very busy career. At little over thirty years of age he began his political career as a Member of the Assembly, in the midst of his term he was appointed by President Cleveland to the important post of Collector of the Third Internal Revenue District of this city. Three years later Governor Hill appointed him to fill a vacancy in the City Court.

At the election following this appointment he was elected Clerk of New York County. Judge Giegerich was known to have a desire to "go up stairs," and felt that a judicial career would be more congenial to his inclinations. His desire was soon gratified by his appointment by Governor Hill to fill a vacancy on the bench of the Court of Common Pleas, caused by the death of Judge Allen. In 1862 he was nominated by the Conventions of both political parties to fill a full term of fourteen years upon the Common Pleas Court.

Under the new Constitution of the State the Common Pleas Court was subsequently merged into the Supreme Court, and Judge Giegerich was thus translated to the Supreme Court bench, and is now finishing the 14th year of his term.

He took quite an active part in the Constitutional Convention of 1894, of which he is a member. This is a kind of activity of which any man may feel justly proud. His political preferment came to him spontaneously. He has at all times during his official career enjoyed the confidence and good will of, so to speak, the whole public, and has enjoyed its approval irrespective of party lines. As a member of the Supreme Court bench he has been eminently fair and just, and as a jurist enjoys the respect and esteem of the members of the bar in a high degree.

It seems to be a foregone conclusion that he will be retained upon the bench, receiving the nomination of all political organizations, as well as the endorsement or nomination of the committee of the Bar Association.

By the Way--

HOW to write an appreciation of a book you have never read is a seemingly impossible task. Judging from the following story, however, which Mr. G. W. E. Russell tells in his "Collections and Recollections," it presented no difficulty to Lord Beaconsfield.

The famous statesman was asked on one occasion by a lady to read and say something nice about a book which had been written by a young protegee of hers. Beaconsfield replied with a groan:

"Ask me anything, dear lady, except this. I am an old man. Do not make me read your young friend's romances."

"Oh, but he would be a great accession to the Tory party, and a civil word from you would secure him for ever."

"Oh, well, then, give me a pen and a sheet of paper," and sitting down in the lady's drawing-room he wrote: "Dear Mrs. —, I am sorry I cannot dine with you, but I am going down to Hughenden for a week. Would that my solitude could be peopled by the bright creations of Mr. —'s fancy."

THERE are a number of people who are still imbued with the Ma Jafees spirit and who would have the Jews in Russia calmly stand by while the pogromtchiks are killing and plundering. Emanuel is right when saying;

If liberty cannot be gained without fight, and if the Jew expects to become free, then the Jew must fight as well as suffer. The Russian Jew's reputation for non-combatancy is passing away. Since he fought with Suwaroff in the Napoleonic campaigns, since he stood behind Nicholas on the parapets of Sevastopol, since he died at Plevna and his bones bleached in the Manchurian valleys, he is no longer non-combatant. Soldiers of the Czar, they know now that the sword that strikes a blow for the love of country and the honor of a sovereign may strike another blow against injustice and for the honor of one's own manhood. That is no crime, that is virtue. And so has it come to pass in the evolutions of Justice that the Russian Jew wears a gun and understands the use of it in defense of the right and his own manhood. And this, too, has happened in Bialystock. The young Jews defended themselves against their enemies. The spirit of the Maccaheans is upon them and it matters after all very little how a tottering government interprets this spirit. The world will understand that the Russian Jew is alive to his destiny, and that according to the high and holy articles of that destiny he is to give the tithe of his blood and substance, for out of the earth drenched with his blood must spring forth the flowers of liberty. It is a great and wonderful mission, which will have its reward when Russia shall be free. For the blood of the Jew will not go unrecognized nor shall its color fade before the tears of an afflicted people shall have mingled with it.

SCORES of young lawyers, medical men and merchants in Syracuse are bachelors. New York Shadchonim and match-making mothers have evidently gone out of business. The Syracuse bachelors are really fine boys, well educated, well built and they also have the means of keeping, at least, one wife each. Moreover, New York girls need not be afraid that Syracuse is a dull city. There are theatres and "The White City" to amuse them in the evening.

MR. SAALBURG whose death is announced in San Francisco, was a prominent member of the B'nai B'rith and the founder of the oldest Jewish weekly newspaper in California. Last year he celebrated the jubilee of the Jewish Times and Observer. Latterly, Mr. Saalburg became associated with the Rev. M. S. Levy in the conduct of the orthodox weekly, Mr. Saalburg retaining the editorship of the German section, which has been discontinued since the earthquake. Mr. Levy is now the sole proprietor of the Jewish Times, which is published in English only.

IN the course of an interview, Principal Veith of Public School No. 1, Catherine and Henry Streets, on the lower East Side, bore eloquent testimony of the eagerness of Jewish immigrants desire to gain knowledge. He said:

"To show you how eager foreigners are to have their children educated, let me tell you of an incident of the last registration.

"We were registering all newcomers, when a group of young Russian Jews came along and indicated that they desired to be admitted.

"Through an interpreter we asked for their names. These were given and duly recorded.

"Where do you live?' was the next question.

"Don't know—got no home,' they said.

"But where do you sleep and eat?' we asked, for it was important that they be located.

"At that stage the interpreter labored hard for several minutes. His gestures and his juggling of vowels and consonants were comical. When he stopped to report he said: 'These boys really have no homes; they have just landed from the steamship, and were brought to the school by one of a company of immigrant agents, while another of these hustlers is out with their parents looking up a home for them.'

THE King of England has created Mr. Edgar Speyer, head of the firm of Speyer Bros., of London, and a member of the New York banking house of Speyer & Co., a baronet. Sir Edgar Speyer, Bart., is noted for his philanthropy.

GOLD has been discovered in the Jewish cemetery of Butte, Mont., and the discoverers say that "a few graves should not stand in the way of digging for gold." In the mad rush for money even the dead are not permitted to rest undisturbed.

MR. Budget Meakin the distinguished traveller and authority on Moroccan affairs who died the other day in London, always championed the persecuted Jews of Morocco. He was a frequent contributor to the Jewish Chronicle, and wrote some valuable articles for that journal during the Algeceiras Conference. Mr. Meakin has lectured before various Jewish Literary Societies, and one of the last lectures he gave was to the East London Jewish Communal League last month.

APROPOS of the recent death of Grand Rabin Zadoc Kahn of France, the Paris Gil Blas prints the following squib which is a sharp ridicule of French Anti-Semitism.

"At a social gathering, the other day, the question of M. Zadoc Kahn's successor was discussed and some one asked: 'I wonder who will succeed him.'

"You will see,' replied a rabid Anti-Semite, 'that a Jew will be appointed. These people push themselves forward everywhere.'

IN last Sunday's issue of the New York Herald there appeared a highly interesting article on the Jew as a soldier, which reflects great credit upon the editorial management of that paper. The subject is not new, but the author, Mr. Fritz Morris, has handled it with consummate skill. Mr. Morris writes upon Jewish topics for the leading papers and magazines, and being a Jew himself, he naturally is a position to speak authoritatively. Whatever Mr. Morris writes is always interesting and instructive.

"WHO wrote Dante's Poems?" Under this caption Mr. Israel Abrahams says in the London Jewish Chronicle:

If Shakespeare did not write Hamlet, why should Dante have written the Divine Comedy? So we need not be astonished if our Baconian cranks find their equally grotesque parallels abroad. Such a one is Michael Sinowitz, who has published quite a little series of booklets to prove that the author of Dante's poems was the Jew, Chasdal Crescas.

Let not, however, the reader think that this is the end of the sensation. Profiat Duran—another Spanish Jew—had his share in the mystery. For Duran and Crescas together wrote the works of Dante, Petrarch Baccaccio, Thomas Aquinas and Albertus Magnus, "and so forth," as Michael Sinowitz comprehensively ends the list. If the writer means the whole as a joke, it is sorry wit. If he is serious, then he is an interesting psychological study. His latest pamphlet is published by Cleener, of Zurich, under the title, "Weitere Beweise zu dem Schlüssel von Dantes Alighieris Werken."

IF there are any people who still doubt the culpability of the Russian Government in the massacres of Jews, the following proclamation which has been widely circulated and which bears the stamp of the Ministry of War and the legend: "Authorized by the censorship, Jan. 14 (27.) 1906. Printing Office of the Odessa Military District," should convince them to the contrary.

"And do you know, brothers, what is Zionism? It is an invention of the Jews. The Jews had their own kingdom, named after Mount Zion. They lost it, and it is now Turkish territory. Since then the Jews have been wanderers, seeking to seize upon another kingdom and to call it Zion. So this, brothers, is the meaning of Zionism. The Jews now want to seize upon our mother Russia and to make it, not a Russian kingdom, but a Jewish Zion. That is why they shout, 'Long live Zionism.' And, brothers, they have also unfurled their colors in Russia—the Red Flag—and are assembling underneath it all the dark people, some by promises, some by bribes, and are driving them against our Little Father the Czar, in order to deprive him of the strength of Russia, and then to proclaim in Russia their own Jewish Kingdom of Zion. And then, brothers, they will also violate our Christian faith, just as they murdered Christ.

"No, brothers, you must not surrender Russia to this Jewish foe. Spit on all their promises of a Jewish kingdom. The devil offered all the kingdoms of the earth to Christ in the Wilderness, but Christ said, 'Get thee behind Me, Satan'; and you, brothers, follow in the footsteps of Christ. Shout with one voice and spirit, 'Away with the Jewish kingdom! Away with Zionism! Away with the red flag! Away with the red Jewish freedom! Away with the red Jewish equality and brotherhood! Away with all these hostile Jewish innovations! Russian soldiers, up and at the enemy! Forward! Forward!'

Coroner Julius Harburger started yesterday on five days' vacation. It is the first holiday he has taken in thirty-four years of public life. The Coroner needed it. He has gone to White Lake, Orange County.

Coroner Harburger has always been a hard worker, but for the last few months he has been keeping at it particularly hard. Not only has he been working every day, but he has frequently had two or three calls a night. The manner in which he has stuck to his duties, in fact, has not pleased some folks, who are not used to that kind of a Coroner.—New York Times.

A higher tribute could not be paid to any public official.

THE Jugend of Munich, that great German satirical paper under the caption of "A conversation overheard in Bialystock," prints the following:

First Jew—"I must say I am no longer happy in Russia; for three weeks there has been no massacre of Jews, and where is there such happiness to be found as Second Jew—"How would it answer if we should kill the priest?"

First Jew—"That would not do. We must infuriate the Christians to the point of losing their senses. Think of the disappointment if after killing him we should not be massacred!"

Third Jew—"What if we should set fire to the church?"

Second Jew—"Even that would not be certain to cause our death."

First Jew—"But if we should throw a bomb into a procession?"

The Others—"God bless you for this thought! What joy! I already feel my eyes being torn from my head. I see a bloodshed never before equaled. Heaven be praised that we can at last induce these miserable Christians to slaughter us."

Dr. Theodore Herzl.

Written on the day of his Yahr-zeit Tamuz 20, 5666.

HERZL'S Yahr-zeit, recalls to my mind, the greatness of the man. His tall, majestic figure rises now before me; and as I look at him, I find in his clear facial features, in his long black beard, in his coal black glittering eyes, always looking afar in the distant future, in his clear and high forehead, and in his erect statute,—the true, genuine, and born Jewish leader.

At this moment, I review within my mind all the great men, that our people had produced at different periods in order to find one with whom I can compare him, and the man, whose events and experiences in life as a national leader, almost form the very beginning of his career down to the very last day of his life, that bear striking resemblance to the life of Herzl—is the first figure in the history of the world, and that is—Moses. Both of them have had but one purpose in their lives, the redemption of their people from slavery, and their restoration to the promised land.

Moses came to his people from without, while yet a child, he was adopted—according to tradition—as the son of the daughter of Pharaoh, and he was brought up as such,—as an Egyptian Prince—amid luxury and revelry. He dined at the king's table, he was surrounded by princes and courtiers, he associated with the servants and sorcerers of Egypt,—for Egypt was then the centre of civilization—he led a gay and merry life, he knew no wrong, he saw nothing around him that could bring a tear to his eye, the cries of his oppressed brethren could not penetrate through the massive walls that surrounded the castles of the Pharaohs.

What caused Moses, to visit the ghetto, all of a sudden, to emerge from the court, and appear among slaves, tradition does not tell us. It relates but that, when Moses grew up he went out to his brethren, and looked on their burdens. And here his eyes met, with an unusual scene—which has become historic ever since—"an Egyptian smote a Hebrew, one of his brethren. That arose his anger, that was the first time he had witnessed an injustice done to a fellow-man, and, of course, he could not refrain himself, and he acted speedily.

After this occurrence, he determined to become more familiar with his people, and his visits had become more frequent. Daily did he wander about the streets of the Jewish quarter, and looking about him he saw the miserable condition, and the horrible situation, in which his people found themselves.

"Slaves! actual slaves, who knew nothing but the brick and the mortar that they worked in for the building of Pithom and Raamses. Day and night, Moses was busy in finding means how to ameliorate the sufferings of his people, how to improve their conditions both material and spiritual. But in order to help them it was necessary to find out the cause of their degradation, and what had made them sink so low mentally. Servitude, accounts for that, but there were many who did not work, had they no influence upon the mass? Are they doing nothing for the purpose of elevating the young generation, and to raise them to a higher plane, which might ultimately lead them to independence? Those were the thoughts in which Moses was absorbed, until another incident had occurred, which gave Moses a better insight into the life of his people, thereby revealing one of the causes of the undesirableness of his people.

On one of his visits to the Jewish camp, he beheld "two men of the Hebrews strove together; and he said to him that did the wrong, wherefore smitest thou thy fellow? And he said, who made thee a prince and a judge over us?"

And Moses fled for fear of his own people, and he had undoubtedly determined then never to return.

But his conscience gave him no rest. A voice from within called unto him Moses! Moses! go and redeem the people of Israel, from the house of bondage, and Moses could not resist it. He went straight to the people, told them his mission, but they did not hearken unto him, for anguish of spirit and for cruel of bondage, slaves for more than four hundred years, can not be aroused to national consciousness by mere words.

A people which bore for scores of years the yoke of servitude, can not be awakened to self independence by the mere promise of an individual, signs, proofs, were necessary, something visible, something tangible was needed, by which the people could realize that independence is not at all impossible. Moses had given those signs and proofs, the people began to believe in what he said, a series of interviews at the court of the Pharaoh followed, thus strengthening the belief of the people, and the Geulah was at last realized.

Herzl, too, came from without. At no time did he bear the yellow badge of the Ghetto. At no time was he made to see that he was a member of the oppressed and persecuted people of the Ghetto. Far, far away from them did he live and labor. His talents opened for him the doors of the wealthiest people in Paris and Vienna. His success as a dramatist made him the centre of an admired circle of literary men. Honor, fame, wealth, all that a young journalist is striving for, he acquired in a comparatively short space of time. He rose gradually but rapidly to the pinnacle of fame and to the summit of fortune. His beautiful countenance, which always radiated love and affection; his noble profession, that gave him access into all public assemblies, and his dramatic talents which brought him both comfort and popularity, made him beloved by his friends, honored by his associates, and admired by all those who ever came in contact with him.

What had occurred in 1896 that had brought about the publication of the Judenstadt?

The Dreyfus case!
"Eine alte Geschichte, aber immer neu."

איש מצרי מכה איש עבר
An innocent man was made the scapegoat for a gang of rascals; a model officer was conspired against and tortured for years on the Devil's Island. A loyal citizen was branded with a red-hot iron as a traitor to his fatherland, and only because he was a Jew. This woke him up. His keen eye hid nothing from his sight. His sagacious mind comprehended the situation in a moment. He began to notice things and people that he did not notice heretofore. He saw the poor emigrants, with their bags in their hands, in Vienna and Paris, knocking at the doors of de Hirsch, begging for help, so that they may continue their journey, a wretched people a miserable lot, a poverty-stricken folk. His heart stirred up within him, and a voice from within called to him, go and redeem thy people! He could not resist it. The Jewish spark, which had been dormant within the innermost part of his heart, had turned into a flame; a flame which consumed nearly the body and soul.

He went straight to his people. He issued his "Jewish State." That was the trumpet-signal for his people to rise and get in line. But the people did not want to listen to him. Two thousand years in exile had rooted out the national spirit in them. A people which had been accustomed for hundreds of years to bend its knee, to bear the yoke, to kiss the rod that smote them, would not listen to mere words. A nation which had been oppressed and persecuted at all times and in all lands, whose history is but an unfinished narrative of massacres and slaughters of the most horrible sort, can not believe in the words of an individual; signs, proofs were necessary, and Herzl gave those signs and brought those proofs. Interviews at the courts of kings and princes followed, and everywhere he was received cordially and honors were conferred upon him. The people began to believe in his words, and many of them began to join his ranks. Day and night, night and day he toiled and labored to bring the movement one step further and nearer to its goal. And he succeeded, the movement grew rapidly, the Zionist institutions, the Colonial Bank, the National Fund, and the Congress, will remain everlasting monuments to their founder, and above all, the real Jewish national spirit, the true genuine Jewish consciousness was awakened. Back to Zion, Palestine is our home, has become the motto of the Jewish people.

At the Sixth Congress something had happened that gave Herzl a better insight into the life of the Jew. A split in Zionism, a division in the ranks, a collision between two parties enunciating two different principles, had occurred. Here Herzl had experienced the bitter fight between two Hebrews. He foresaw the danger, and he tried to rectify the error he had made. He succeeded in reconciling the two parties. But the reconciliation did not last long.

Many of us deplore the end of Moses, and we feel keen pain whenever we think about it.

For forty years had he stayed with the people in the wilderness, burying the corpses of former slaves, and training the free-born for the entrance into the promised land. The great leader was looking forward to the day when he will cross the Jordan at the head of his people and conquer Palestine. The two and a half tribes who desired to remain on this side of the Jordan and organize a territory, had to promise that they will help their brethren to conquer Palestine first. Now all were satisfied.

The last day of the forty years was approaching, and a smile passed over the lips of the leader as he reviewed his camp. A few more days and the purpose of his life is achieved, his task is done, now he will harvest the fruit of his toil.

The last day had arrived. Moses went up to the top of the mountain and a beautiful sight appeared before him. The land of his destiny lay before him, there the people whom he had redeemed will dwell, but, alas! he will never enter that land.

The people waited, but Moses never came down from the mountain.

As Herzl was lying on his death-bed, feeling that his end was near, he was inquiring about the work done and the progress made in the Zionist movement during his illness. The great leader had undoubtedly felt, that with the weakening of the beating of his heart, the beating of many hearts might be weakened. But when he was assured that the work was done satisfactorily, and that everything was in good shape, his face brightened up. He might hope then that the work which he had begun will be continued, even after he had passed away, and the purpose for which he had sacrificed his comfort and his wealth, might be accomplished by his successors, then, his many days of hard labor and toil, the many sleepless nights that he had spent in foreign countries, the irony and the grief which had sapped his vitality were not in vain. He had raised an army which will carry on his work; he had endeared himself to the people for whom he had sacrificed everything that he possessed—even his life.

And as the dying moment was approaching, he repeated the oath he had taken at the Sixth Congress.

עם אשכנח ירושלים תשבה מיני
With the words still on his lips, the wonderful man breathed his last.

So long as men can breathe, or eyes can see, so long lives Zionism. And this gives life to thee.

ALEXANDER COHEN.

DEAR SIRS—The Model E runabout, purchased of you in May, 1905, has given entire satisfaction. I have run it about 3,000 miles, over all kinds of roads, and have not had any trouble with the machine to mention. I have not spent one cent on it for repairs. It is a wonderful and powerful little machine, and for the money IT CAN'T BE BEAT.

Your spark plugs are the best ever. I am using the same one that was in the car when I got it, and have not even cleaned it—it still works to perfection.

Very truly yours, (Name on application.)

This is the kind of car Mr. — ran Three Thousand miles without a cent's worth of repairs. It is the best liked runabout in America because it is so perfectly reliable under all conditions. Wouldn't you like one?

I want to send you a complete ten days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about ten cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Stools and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use. Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all women's diseases, and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. ## IN THE THEATRES.

The bill at the Union Square Theatre next week is a splendid indication of how alive to the exigencies of the hour are Messrs. Keith and Proctor as regards their patrons' demands for the best in the vaudeville market. The star feature is Marie Wainwright and others; almost equally as well known in the stellar lists are Harry Davenport, the Rappo sisters, and the four Rianos.

There is scarcely an act at Keith and Proctors Twenty-third Street Theatre next week that could not be utilized as a headline feature. First place is given to Milton and Dolly Nobles in "Why a Walker Reformed." Bedini and Arthur, Merri Osborne, Fred Karno and Company, and Besnah and Miller are capable assistant associates.

Guida's "Moths," which in book form, has never lost its potency, will be the attraction offered by the Keith and Proctor Stock Co. at the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre next week. Beatrice Morgan and Paul McAllister assume the leading roles.

New York is protesting against "undesirable immigrants." Still, New York's most serious troubles have been caused by undesirable immigrants from Pittsburgh.—Washington Post.

Standard Scintillations.

It takes centuries of higher living to refine an instinct; it takes less than years to degrade it.

For my own part, I think a dinner is one of those things one may accept even from an enemy.

Many a woman imagines that all her troubles are due to the fact that she is misunderstood.

It's an easy matter for a man to break out of the unknown class after inheriting a big fortune.

Leisure is the few seconds' rest a man gets while his wife is hunting up something else for him to do.

When a man does a fool thing that gets him into trouble he is sure to say that "accidents will happen."

Women are creatures of moods—and many a man has discovered that his wife's mood is the imperative.

It is said that there is a right way to do everything, but nobody has ever found the right way to be a sot.

The impecunious nobleman is willing to humble his ancestral pride in the dust—if the heiress will supply the dust.

George A. Blumenthal's plan to keep a stock company in Harlem at the West End Theatre during the summer has proven to be one of the surprises of the season. When the manager of the West End Theatre announced his intention of keeping the West End Theatre open all summer it was generally considered that to try such a thing in Harlem on the west side was out of the question. Mr. Blumenthal has proven by his indefatigable efforts that his judgment was correct, and the business at the theatre during the past four weeks has simply been astounding. The S. R. O. sign is a regular fixture now at the daily matinees. Next week Manager Blumenthal will give his patrons Leonard Grover's well known comedy drama "Lost in New York." The play will be cast with the full strength of the company, and new and handsome scenic effects are promised.

Has the Spanish Queen Jewish Blood?

Le Monde Moderne, of Paris, has the following story to the effect that the new Queen of Spain has Jewish blood in her veins. The paper says:

"First cousin to the Emperor of Russia, to the German Emperor and to the heir to the throne of Great Britain, Princess Ena of Battenberg, is almost as nearly related to a far humbler family circle.

"Toward the beginning of last century a Polish Jew, Hauke by name, entered the service of the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt, and occupied a very subordinate position at the little court. His daughter, Julia Theresa, born in 1825, was, at the age of 26, married morganatically by Prince, Alexander of Hesse, two years her junior.

"Renouncing the faith of her fathers, she was baptized into the Protestant Church, and by the reigning Grand Duke was accorded the title first of Countess of Battenberg and subsequently of Princess.

"Prince Henry, the third child of this union, became the husband of Princess Beatrice and, of course, father of Princess Ena, King Alfonso's bride. So little was he considered as belonging to the inner circle of European royalty that when Queen Victoria conferred upon him the rank of Royal Highness protests arose on all sides.

"Formal notifications were made by the courts of Berlin, Vienna and St. Petersburg to the effect that Queen Victoria's son-in-law, issue of a morganatic union, could not be recognized as Royal Highness elsewhere than on British territory. Twenty years later the daughter of the man on whom this affront is put becomes Queen of Spain and treats on a footing of perfect equality all the reigning monarchs of Europe!"
