THE "PLEASURES" OF THE CZAR. A TRAGI-COMEDY IN ONE ACT.

BY EZEKIEL LEAVITT.

CHARACTERS: 1.) CZAR NICHOLAS—a pale person of about 38, a nervous man, with closed, half idiotic eyes that cannot rest in their sockets. He wears an official coat, behung with crosses, medals and with tiny portraits of saints. From both his sides, two swords hang down; and upon his head he wears a gold crown which shakes continually and which can scarcely stay on his head.

2.) ALEXANDRA—a fine-looking woman of thirty odd years, with the dainty manners of an aristocratic German,—the wife of Nicholas.

3.) MARIE—a dame of about 60, with small and weak eyes. Her face is painted and powdered, making her appear like a superannuated actress—Nicholas' mother.

4.) POBEDONOSTSIEFF—a bent old man with a wrinkled face and with the side whiskers of a Russian under-officer. His appearance is terrible and repellant.

5.) STOLYPIN.
6.) WITTE.
7.) DOURNOVO.
8.) YERMOLOFF.
9.) NEIDGART.

Nicholas (in anger). "Oh, oh, oh! How times do change. Who could have imagined that the pride of a Romanoff should be so humbled? Who could have foretold that our dynasty should suffer so many indignities? And from whom? (Stamps his feet and seizes both swords with his hands). From mutineers, from good-for-nothings! . . . From!! . . . (Begins to tremble with intense excitement).

Alexandra (tenderly). "Nicholas, my dear, my dear, my beloved, calm yourself! Your nerves are unstrung, your mind is mix . . . (she stammers) . . . is confused."

Pobedonostsieff (crossing himself). "May the Holy Virgin protect your majesty!"

Marie (with a pious countenance). "And the holy Athanasius, too!"

Stolypin. "Your majesty! You must have courage now. You must strengthen yourself, for without you we are powerless. The 'Muzjikes'—the two footed machines, the rusty automaton which hitherto had not dared to utter a sound—demand now—do you hear, your Majesty!—they demand, not beg, land and liberty. And what answer can we give them?"

Pobedonostsieff (in trembling voice). "Liberty in Russia? Oh, no! We must erase this dangerous word from all our dictionaries; we must stop the mouths of all the heathens who dare to mention this word."

Witte (with a cynical smile). "You are right, Constantine Petrovitch! Russia has never known of liberty, and perhaps she ought not to know it. But we must make some show before the world, too! You know the government treasury is now empty."

Dournovo and Neidgart (together). "There is still enough money for gallows and guns! For such holy purposes our Russian patriots will give away even their last groschen."

Marie (firmly). "We owe the world no explanation. Myasha, your honored father, my little Nicholas, has always sought to satisfy only himself and the Church. And yet he died until he died."

Pobedonostsieff (with tears in his eyes). "May he rest in the arms of Jesus, my good and pious pupil."

Nicholas (fixing his eyes on Witte). "What say you, Count Sergey Julevitch? Our treasury is empty? Can we, then, make no loan outside of Russia? Outsiders do not know clearly our interests. We needs must confuse their brains with imaginary and unheard-of reports; and if bad comes to worse, you can turn to 'Zjidovski' bankers. I hate them—the 'Zjides,' but their money (sarcastically)—their money is allright. And if

Pobedonostsieff. "We must build more cloisters; we must be more pious; so God will not forsake us."

Marie. "Right, right! Heresy is growing in our land, and it is the cause of all our misfortunes."

Dournovo. "We must increase the number of spies; we must punish every slight offense against us with death: let the mean souls of the terrorists leave them on the gallows, upon the scaffold. Your Majesty, we need a dictator!"

Neidgart (kissing the Czar's boots). "Give us more Dubasoffs, Kourloffs, Minins, Rennenkampfs, and we will see to everything."

Marie. "It is said that the 'Zjides' are spreading all kind of anarchistic and atheistic booklets over entire Russia; it is said that they preach free and harmful doctrines; we must teach them a good lesson."

Pobedonostsieff. "Their fore-forefathers had put our Redeemer on the Cross. This is a nation of Anti-Christians, of exploiters, of blood-suckers . . . death to them all!"

Witte. "From the moral standpoint, we might well strangle those Jews, every one of them (Dournovo quietly to Neidgart: 'And what will become of his wife?'). But from the economic standpoint, we must not do it, for it will be hard for us to get money outside of Russia. In the foreign newspapers, they make fun of us; they call us 'Barbarians,' 'Africans,' and such things weaken our credit there."

Nicholas (groaning). "Yermoloff's advice is that I should give my land to the 'mouzjikes'; Witte's advice is that I should make no more 'pogroms' upon Jews. Well, then, what remains to me in life? No land, and no enjoyment either. Oh, great spirit of my dear and beloved Ivan the Terrible. What to do? What to do?"

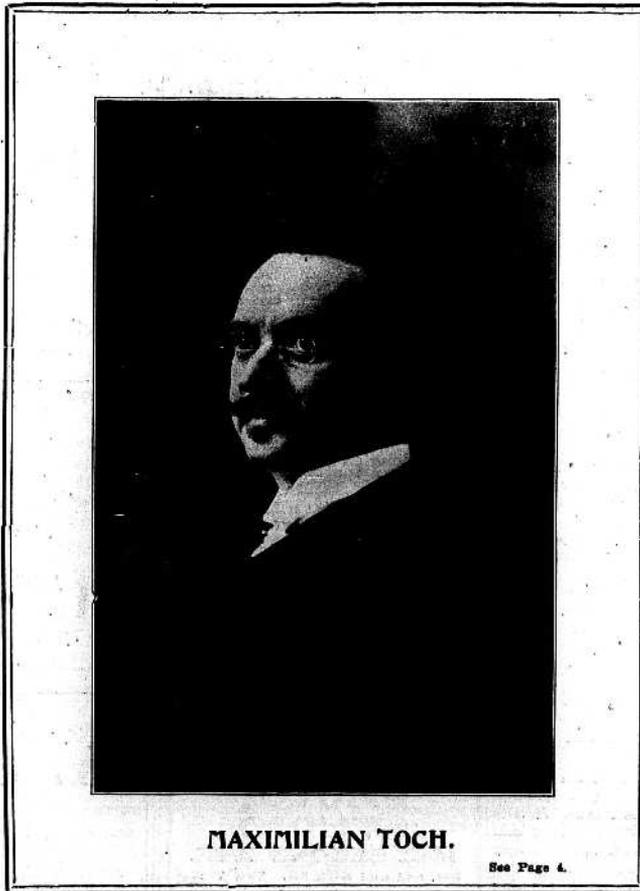

Marie. "I know, my little Nicholas, that the good news of Jewish heads cut off, of dishonored Jewish maidens, of wounded Jewish children, of the Jewish blood grown cold, makes you happier and merrier. Well, then, what is there to hinder? Have you not enough soldiers, or are you, perhaps, short in guns and knives? 'What of the foreign loans?' you ask. Oh, child, child! you are still very foolish. After the 'pogroms' have taken place, you might have it printed in the newspapers that your heart is aching, that you have great pity for the sacrifices, etc. Then you remain a kind-hearted czar, and the joy of the 'pogroms' is still yours."

Alexandra. "No, no! It is not modern to make 'pogroms.' It is not nice for the civilized world to fill stomachs with feathers, to drive nails into eyes, and besides, it is, perhaps, even a pity, too."

Dournovo. "Pardon, Czarina! As an old soldier, I know of no pity, especially when the 'Zjides' are concerned, who are a menace to us."

Neidgart. "My friend Dournovo knows the Jews better than you do, Czarina. And, therefore, he has rightly remarked that they are menace to our peace. To take pity with them! You are too good, Czarina! I swear to God, too good! I can shoot down ten Jews at once, as one shoots mad dogs. . . . I can cut up to pieces the Jewish women with their revolutionary 'Zjidkelach' (little Jews), and this with a smile on my lips—I can—"

Pobedonostsieff (with a pleased face). "We know that you can do that, dear brother. May Jesus give you new strength to crush the enemies of the Church, of the royal family—the ene-you will but promise them a good interest, they will lend you money even if they knew the money would go for preparations for 'Pogroms' for their own nation."

Witte. "Still, your Majesty, we must, at least, make some reforms, in order to put outsiders off the scent."

Stolypin. "Who cares for outsiders? We must simply have a few reforms out of fear of our own murderers, who throw bombs right and left. One of my eyes aches even yet, from that dense smoke which that bomb had made in my palace. I cannot sleep in peace; I am in fear. We are all in danger!"

mies of everything that is to us dear and sacred."

Nicholas (to one of the bodyguard). "Hey, bring 'vodka,' bring champagne, I want to drink—to drink. (Big bottles of wine are brought in, also of brandies and champagne, and they were placed near Nicholas.)

Nicholas (drinking). "It is delicious. There is nothing better than our 'vodka.' Drink all of you, drink! I am the Czar, the Autocrat. You wish to make 'pogroms?' 'Tis well! But, Stolypin, Witte! Together with the arms you will give to my faithful servants, you should also prepare letters, which you should write—in my name—that I am much hurt that my innocent subjects should be robbed and murdered. Innocent? Ha, ha, ha! They are certainly the greatest rebels, mutineers; they are the most dangerous elements in the land. They are—(drinks and yawns) a pest, a plague. 'Dumas' do they want, with Jewish representative! I will show them a 'Duma,' that—" (trembles with anger).

Marie. "My son, do not worry over it! Give but a wink to your faithful servants, and the streets of Russia will be dyed with the blood of the 'Zjidovski' race."

Yermoloff. "And what answer shall we make to the 'Muzjikes?' They scream and howl, make scandal."

Dournovo. "The Jewish blood will intoxicate them, will dumbfound them entirely, and they will be as silent as dogs."

Nicholas (shaking unsteadily). "I am the Czar of Russia. I will annihilate all the 'Muzj'—all the 'Zjides' of my sacred land. I shall institute an inquisition, as there had once been in Spain. To think that I should suffer anxiety for such beings. I should suffer misery for creatures like these. Oh, Trepoff! Trepoff!" (weeps.)

Neidgart (kissing the Czar's boots). "Great, Czar! Everything shall happen as you wish. I lift my glass to the annihilation of all the 'Zjides.'" Dournovo. "Bravo, brother!"

Pobiedonostieff. "That is the way for a true Christian to speak."

Marie. "And a noble patriot."

Stolypin. "I will see to everything. I understand my business well."

Witte. "And what will become of the loan? There will be a terrible crisis in Russia; I see it; now, I feel it."

Yermoloff. "And who will quiet the new savagery of the peasants?"

Nicholas (yawning). "'Pogroms?' Well, very well! Crisis? Loans? Well, devil! Trepoff! Already dead, my faithful servant, dead! A bomb had reached him, too! I do not remember now. Ah, what a delicious thing is the Russian 'vodka!' Hey, bring champagne! Quick! Why do you stand like idiots! Already many stomachs' cut open! Already many Jewish corpses! Ha, ha, ha!" (falls down.)

Alexandra (frightened). "We must call a doctor, quick!"

Pobiedonostieff. "His Majesty has taken more 'vodka' than his delicate constitution can stand; that is the reason he does not feel well. But it will soon pass. Many times I have already had the honor to see him, and his honored father, in such condition. It's alright. No harm will come of it." (He makes the sign of the cross over Nicholas and mumbles a prayer.)

Marie. "When my dear Sasha used to feel ill, when a gloomy fear used to possess him, the best means of bringing him back to new life was to tell him of new misfortunes upon the hated 'Zjides.' It is the same with our son, with Nicholas. Make 'Pogroms.' Cut, tear Jewish limbs! Burn their houses and their possessions, and at once bring the good news to us. 'Tis a pleasure to hear it; it is the greatest joy we can have."

Neidgart and Dournovo arise from their places and go towards the door.

Pobiedonostieff (calling after them). "May the 'Pogroms' be a success. In the name of Jesus I bless you."

Witte (as to himself). "European opinion—the Press—oh, the devil take it all!"

Stolypin. "The Czar is in misery. He wants some happiness from 'Pogroms'—let there be 'Pogroms.' The Press—opinions—pshaw! We are the lords of our own land. No one will dare to say a word to us. We will answer at once: 'Nye uv svoji sanii nye sadis,'—'Since it is not your sleigh, don't sit in it.'"

DR. SCHMARYAHU LEWIN CHARGES RUSSIAN GOVERNMENT WITH ORGANIZING MASSACRES—ZIONISM SOLUTION OF JEWISH QUESTION.

Dr. Schmaryahu Lewin, in an address recently delivered in Baltimore, Md., accused the Russian Government with organizing the massacres of the Jews.

Dr. Lewin first discussed the condition of the Jews in Russia. Russia, he said, has a large and starving population. Their attention must be diverted from the incapacity and corrupt administration of the Government. The poor and ignorant peasants must be shown that their lot is not the worst, that there are Russian subjects more unfortunate than themselves. Hence the massacres.

"In the last twenty-five years," Dr. Lewin said, "the rest of the world has made great advances in the field of scientific activity. Russia has cultivated only one science—the science of organized massacre. To inaugurate a massacre in the most approved style, all you have to do is to press a button in St. Petersburg, and the work of destruction, pillage and murder begins at any point desired. So thoroughly has this system been developed that the number of victims of a proposed massacre can be determined beforehand—a hundred, a thousand or ten thousand, according to orders. Twenty-five years ago the massacres organized by Von Plehve resulted merely in the destruction and pillage of property. To-day young and old are indiscriminately riddled limb from limb. At first the Government made use only of the 'hooligans'; gradually it became bolder and utilized the police. Finally its dastardly crimes are perpetrated by its soldiery. Are there to be any more massacres? The answer to this question can be as certain as that which must be given to the person who asks when will Vesuvius again spout fire and destruction."

The Russian Government, the speaker stated, possesses and employs ample machinery to cover up its tracks. It tries to mislead the world into believing that the massacres result from the animosity of the Russians against the Jews, and that it, the Government, is exerting every effort to protect the Jews against the fury of the mob; while as a matter of fact, if the police and soldiery were kept away the Jews would successfully defend themselves, their wives and children.

Dr. Lewin further stated that the recent proclamation issued by the Russian Government announcing that the rights of the Jews would be enlarged was a farce, and that practically no Jew could derive any benefit from it. Under the present regime, he said, there was absolutely no hope for the 6,000,000 Jews to Russia, and that, even if the present government was overthrown, though the rights of the Jews would be materially enlarged, the Jewish problem would still remain to be solved.

He also adverted to the changed attitude of the Jews in demanding their rights of the Russian Government, "Russia," he said, "is a land of many peoples. The Jews, like the rest of them, are demanding not only equal rights, but full rights."

"And while the Jews of this country have been more than generous in their contributions to relieve the sufferings of their brethren in Russia, we should recognize that charity is powerless to remedy Russia Jewish conditions."

Dr. Lewin concluded with the statement that the only solution of the world's Jewish problem lies in the acquisition by the Jews of a land of their own, though that territory be peopled by no more than 500,000 Jews. The Zionists, who are the Jewish nationalists, he stated, do not contemplate an exodus of Jews from all lands to the proposed national centre. It is intended as a home to which Jews who are persecuted elsewhere may always receive admittance. There, hampered by prejudice and persecution, they could develop their individuality and foster their ideals to the fullest extent. With masterly logic, the speaker contended that anti-Semitism, resting on a psychological basis, would, in the event a Jewish national centre were established, entirely disappear, and the Jewish problem would finally be solved.

Dr. Lewin will address a farewell meeting on Sunday, February 10, at the Grand Central Palace.

SOME GOOD STORIES.
REMINISCENCES OF REV. PROF. D. W. MARKS.

To an interviewer of the Jewish Chronicle, the Rev. Prof. D. W. Marks, senior minister of the Berkeley Street (Reform) Synagogue, London, told a number of interesting stories regarding prominent men and women of former days. Prof. Marks, who has just entered his 86th year, is one of the "grand old men" of Anglo-Jewry.

DR. HIRSCHHELL.

"A man whom I saw very much in my youth was Chief Rabbi Dr. Hirschell. He was most kind to me, and his interest in me arose in this way: When I was about ten years of age I was a monitor in the Jews' Free School, and had the reputation of being the best Hebrew scholar there. A Mr. Reuben Keyser (uncle of the late S. M. Keyser and Mrs. Louis Cohen) died without issue, and left a legacy to be paid to a lad who was to say Kaddish for him, and was specially selected for his Hebrew attainments. The choice fell upon me, and I attended the Great Synagogue every morning for that purpose. Dr. Hirschell took notice of me, and asked me to go to his house to read Scriptures and Mishna to his wife, who was blind. Sometimes he would take me with him to the Beth Hamidrash, and indeed I was much with him till the age of fourteen, when I went to Hammersmith to Henry Solomon's school. He was a very witty man, and I heard him say many humorous things. He once took me home to breakfast after the fast of Atonement, and there were some guests from Poland. He asked them how they liked the service. They replied that it struck them as strange. They noticed that people wore list shoes, whereas at home the people wore no shoes but stood all day on כֶּסֶם (wheat). 'And our people stand on pins and needles,' rejoined Dr. Hirschell.

A FAMOUS BILL.

"I once accompanied Sir Isaac to the House of Commons during the Oaths' Bill. In front of us sat Sir Moses Montefiore and Sir Anthony de Rothschild. Mr. Newdigate was making a terrible attack on the Jews, based on Eisenmenger's Entdecktes Judenthum. Eisenmenger had written that the Kol Nidre showed that the Jews attached no sanctity to their oaths. After his speech, the Attorney General, Jarvis, came up to Sir Moses and said: 'Lord Morpeth is going to answer Newdigate's speech. Can you give us any information about the Entdecktes Judenthum?' Sir Moses was unable to, so was Sir Anthony. The latter turned to Sir Isaac, and said, 'Ask Mr. Marks' I had been reading the book just previously, and enquired if there was a copy of it in the Speaker's Library, which I could consult. A copy was secured, and I was able to call Lord Morpeth's attention to a passage in Eisenmenger to this effect: 'I am bound to say that the Jewish Rabbins assert with respect to Kol Nidre that the absolution asked for on the Day of Atonement only refers to oaths a man may take in a fit passion or madness.' Lord Morpeth made use of that passage in his speech.

"They were once discussing in his presence a certain Ph. D., who had recently arrived in London. 'What is he?' asked one, 'is he אֵלֵינוּ (with us)?' 'No,' answered Hirschell, 'he's אֵינוּ (not with us).'

"I can recollect his preaching on two Saturdays in the year in which he used to hold a discourse, and he must have been unwell on one occasion, for he constantly interrupted his course with cries of 'Ai Vey,' 'Ai Vey.'

"Old Dr. Van Oven told me that in 1814 he took a German prince, who wished to be introduced to the Chief Rabbi, to Bury Court. Dr. Hirschell asked his distinguished visitor how he liked England, and he expressed him-

"And speaking of Kol Nidre, Leopold Stein, the preacher at Frankfort, told me, when I visited him, that he wanted to expunge it from the service, but his congregation were loth to part with the tune, so he had to promise that he would compose something else which could be adapted to the same music."

"Of course, you must have made the acquaintance of many eminent Rabbis and distinguished Jews in the course of your career?"

"I once spent a couple of hours with Abraham Geiger. Frank I knew. Just, the historian, spent a few days at my house when he visited London for the 1851 Exhibition. Jellinek invited me to stay with him, and in a poetic phrase offered me—self thus: Wie finden Sie dieses Medina? Of course, the gentleman so addressed did not know what 'Medina' meant, and Van Oven had to come to the rescue.

"Eighty years ago, it was customary for people to give and receive Malkuth (flagellations) on the eve of the Fast of Atonement. I saw Meir Metz, the Chazan of the Great Synagogue in those days, and likewise the Secretary, submit themselves to flagellation at the hands of Hirschell. 'Then the Chief Rabbi turned to Meir Metz and said: 'Nun, schlag mich?' The relations between Chazan and Rav were somewhat strained, and I heard Meir Metz reply: 'Was! Ich soll den Rabbiner schlagen? Nein, Gott soll den Rabbiner schlagen.'

A COUPLE OF APOSTATES.

"Let me now give you an account of two remarkable apostates whom I came across in my early life, and that must bring the interview to a close. At Liverpool I read Hebrew with Canon Hugh McNeill, who in return read Greek with me. One of his converts was a converted Jew, the Rev. Henry Joseph, who, when I knew him, was in the prime of life and full of high spirits. Many years afterwards I was passing through Strasbourg, when I was informed by the proprietor of the hotel at which I was staying, that the 'Chaplain' desired to see me. The Chaplain proved to be none other than my old Liverpool acquaintance, the Rev. Henry Joseph. But, oh! how changed from the man I had known at Liverpool. He was wasted to a skeleton, and was wearing his end. 'You have come like אֵלֵינוּ to me,' said the dying man, 'Two requests I have to make

It was he who co-operated with McCaul in writing the נתיבות שו"ת (Old Paths) and translating the work into English, edited a missionary organ called the צוּר הַנֶּחֱמָן, and he rendered into Hebrew the English Church Service and Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress. The London Conversionist Society paid him a salary of £800 a year. Professor Theodores had introduced him to me, and from time to time he called on me. The day before Passover, in the year 1848, he came to me, and begged that he might come to the Seder. He added: 'I can bear my hypocrisy no longer, henceforth I shall live as I was born—a Jew.' # Dinner to Mr. Joseph H. Cohen.

TRIBUTE TO NOTED COMMUNAL WORKER.

Impressed by the need for increased hospital accommodation for the sick poor of the East Side, the directors of the Beth Israel Hospital have been quietly working to raise a sufficient fund to double the capacity of the present institution, and so far has work along these lines progressed that the architects who have the alterations in hand expect to have a working plan of the new building ready for exhibition at the Purim ball, which takes place at Madison Square Garden on Wednesday evening, March 13. The report of the superintendent that more than 1,100 worthy applicants for hospital accommodations had been turned away during 1906 owing to lack of room caused a number of directors to hold a private meeting several days ago, at which plans for a greater Beth Israel Hospital were discussed. The directors were a unit in the opinion that the hospital should be enlarged so as to provide ample accommodations even to meet the extra demands made upon the institution by the increased immigration.

It was found that the cost of enlarging the hospital, which is estimated at $53,000, could be met with very little difficulty, provided the public continued its support of the institution and were made to appreciate the necessity for the increased accommodations contemplated.

All of these matters were divulged at a surprise dinner tendered last Saturday night at the Tuxedo to Mr. Joseph H. Cohen, President of the hospital, by the Board of Directors and Medical Staff of the hospital. The dinner was an actual "surprise," and was marked by a remarkable display of love for Mr. Cohen and enthusiasm for the hospital on the part of the ladies and gentlemen present.

At the proper time the toastmaster, Mr. Abraham Nelson, opened the post-prandial exercises and introduced Mr. A. E. Rothstein, the First Vice-President, who declared a meeting of the Board of Directors in session. Mr. S. J. Silbermann reported on the plans for the Greater Beth Israel, and then the following resolutions, which were adopted with cheers, were offered:

"Whereas, in its management and in the accomplishment of its beneficent work the Beth Israel Hospital has proven itself worthy of whatever sympathy and support it received from the friends of humanity, and has made for itself a record of success which is extremely gratifying to all those interested in communal activity, and which has placed the hospital in the front rank of charitable institutions, and

"Whereas, The Beth Israel Hospital has increased its beneficent and usefulness to such an extent that the great demands made on the institution have outgrown by far the capacity of the new building erected a few years ago so that the extension of its benevolent mission to a broader and wider field has become an absolute necessity, and

"Whereas, The members of the Board of Directors realize that the success of the hospital in recent years is in a large measure due to the untiring efforts, the sympathetic care, the zeal, and the devotion bestowed upon the hospital by the broad-minded, public-spirited, and noble-hearted President, Mr. Joseph H. Cohen; be it

"Resolved, therefore, That the Directors of the Beth Israel Hospital cordially express to Mr. Joseph H. Cohen the assurance of their heartfelt congratulations and profound appreciation of his noble and sterling qualities as a man, a colleague, and leader; and be it further

"Resolved, That in recognition of the eminent services rendered by Mr. Joseph H. Cohen to the Beth Israel Hospital, and as a testimonial to his philanthropy, his self-sacrificing efforts on behalf of the hospital and his devotion to the cause of suffering humanity, these resolutions be spread on the minutes of the Board of Directors; and be it furthermore

"Resolved, That a suitable testimonial be erected in the halls of the hospital to serve as an example for others."

M. Nathan Hutkoff, nevertheless, protested against the erection of the proposed tablet on the ground that it was highly improper that tablets should be erected in the hospital unless the institution derived immediate benefit therefrom. Immediately a $1,000 gold certificate was produced as the gift of the Board of Directors for the privilege of erecting this tablet, and Mr. Hutkoff withdrew his protest.

To the surprise of all present, the lights in the banquet hall were extinguished at this moment, only to be turned on again to reveal a large marble tablet inscribed: "Erected by the Members of the Board of Directors, in appreciation of the services rendered by the President, Joseph H. Cohen, 1907."

Mr. Cohen responded to this display of love and admiration in a short but emotion-laden speech, at the conclusion of which he announced the donation, by Mrs. Joseph H. Cohen, of the sum of $5,000 for a maternity ward in the enlarged hospital. Mr. Harris Cohen followed with a donation of $2,000 toward the enlargement of the hospital; Dr. A. E. Isaacs $500 for a life-bed in honor of the bar mitzvah of his son; Mrs. Myer Vessel $5,000, Mr. Simon Weinstein $1,000, Mr. Joseph S. Marcus $5,000, Mrs. I. Saperstein $500 for a maternity life-bed, and Mr. Louis Rosenberg $1,000 for a bed in memory of his late son Isaac.

Addresses were delivered by Dr. A. J. Ladinski, Prof. I. Adler, S. J. Silbermann, Nathan Hutkoff, and Raphael Hurwitz. Among those present were Dr. and Mrs. I. Adler, Dr. Brook H. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. D. Ansbacher, Mr. and Mrs. N. Astor, Mr. and Mrs. David Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. Harris Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fischel, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hutkoff, Mr. and Mrs. Raphael Hurwitz, Dr. and Mrs. A. E. Isaacs, Dr. and Mrs. L. J. Ladinski, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Marcus, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Marcus, Mr. and Mrs. David Orently, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Nelson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Pasinsky, Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Barsky, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Roggen, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. Himowich, Dr. and Mrs. David Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. I. Pearlstein, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Rubin, Mr. and Mrs. R. Sadowsky, Mr. and Mrs. I. Saperstein, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Shidlovsky, Mr. and Mrs. Myer Vessel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Zelenko, Dr. and Mrs. Myer Rabinowitz, and others.

Mr. Joseph H. Cohen announced that his invitation to Gen. Grant and staff at Governor's Island to occupy his box at the Purim ball, at Madison Square Garden, March 13, had been graciously accepted, and that he had been assured of the presence of the distinguished military gentleman.

AN APPEAL.

The following appeal has been issued by the above society:—

The cold dreary days of winter are at hand and many a home before long will be in dire want for the necessities of life. It has been, and always will be, the aim of our society to relieve all those who in their affliction knock at our door and in order to do this we have decided to give an "original musical comedy" and dance, the proceeds to be used for this noble work. Will you assist us with all your power in command to obtain our principal aim? And not alone help us to make this a social, but also a financial success.

We have done much good in the past and no doubt will be called upon this year to distribute charity with open hands. Therefore we trust that this appeal will be taken up by you and that you will endeavor to do your utmost in the furtherance of this noble work.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

A meeting of the Executive Committee was held at 256 Second avenue on Sunday, January 27, 1907. There were present Hon. Mayer Sulzberger in the chair; Louis Marshall, Cyrus Adler, J. Leon Magnes, and Cyrus L. Sulzberger. Excuses were received from Hon. Julian W. Mack, Isidore Newman, Harry Cutler, E. W. Lewin-Epstein and Adolf Kraus. Two sessions were held; from 10 a. m. to 1.30 p. m., and from 2.30 p. m. to 5.15 p. m.

The minutes of the meeting held on November 25, 1906, were read and approved.

The resignation of Mr. Nathan Barnett was accepted with regret and the secretary instructed to notify him to that effect. Judge Greenbaum having declined to serve on the committee, his declination was noted with regret.

The committee considered measures for arousing public interest in the enormities of the case of Hilsner, imprisoned for life in Austria on a charge of ritual murder.

Mr. Abraham Galante submitted a project for the colonization of the Sudan which was referred to the Jewish Colonization Association, the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden, the Zionistische Central Bureau, and the Jewish Territorialist Organization.

The following resolutions were passed: "Resolved, That it is the sense of this committee that the noble efforts of the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden to promote in Russia the growth of a sentiment in favor of religious liberty should be assisted by the Jews of this country, and it was further

"Resolved, That this resolution be communicated to the Committee for the Relief of Sufferers from Russian Massacres with the suggestion that they consider the advisability of appropriating a reasonable amount from their fund for this purpose.

"Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to co-operate with a similar committee to be appointed by the Board of Delegates on Civil and Religious Rights and such other organizations as said joint committee may select, to recommend such action as shall be deemed advisable in the matter of the recognition of the American passport in Russia."

A letter from Mr. Hollander suggesting that the Executive Committee define the work of the committee on statistics was referred to the committee on Statistical Bureau. The same action was taken on a letter from Rev. Dr. Stolz, suggesting co-operation with the Central Conference of American Rabbis in the matter of the collection of statistics.

It was decided that under the general regulations the Executive Committee had no power to act upon Mr. Siegel's suggestion that some one be designated to fill temporarily the vacancy caused by the absence of Dr. Voorsanger.

The report of the treasurer was read and accepted.

It was determined to hold the next meeting of the committee in Philadelphia at 10 a. m. on February 24, 1907.

He is at present a special lecturer on chemistry in Columbia College, in the New York University, and in the College of the City of New York. He has written several works, the most important one published recently on the "Chemistry of Paints," which work is a standard in the paint industry.

He received a silver medal at the recent banquet and reception tendered the eminent chemist, Sir Wm. H. Perkins.

Jewish Endeavor Society.

Last Sunday night, the Hon. N. Taylor Phillips delivered a very interesting lecture on "Jews as Financiers," before the Jewish Endeavor Society in the assembly hall of the Home of the Daughters of Jacob.

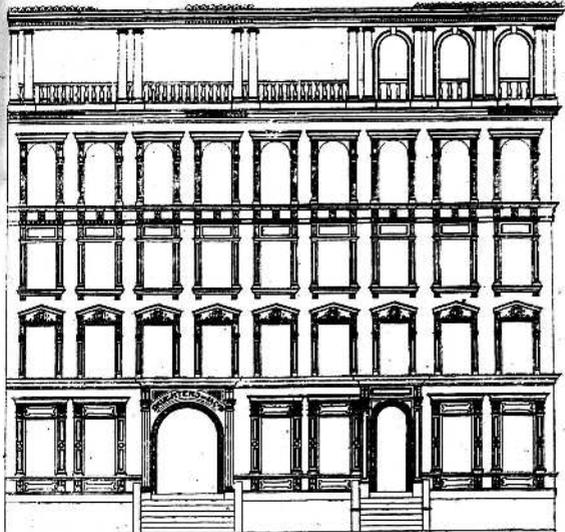

Mr. Phillips called attention to the fact that history shows that only during persecutions were the Jews found to be the great money powers, and that at other times the Jews did not, as commonly believed, control the money market. He pointed out that at the present time in the Stock Exchange of New York, out of a total membership of more than a thousand, only ten per cent. were Jews.

of $65,000, of which only $7,000 are in hand. With a view of raising additional funds an entertainment and ball will be given on Sunday evening, February 10, at the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue and Forty-third street.

The home is worthy of every support and should receive liberal contributions toward the building fund. The new wing has become an absolute necessity, as the number of applicants is much larger than can be at present accommodated.

For Sweet Charity.

The entertainment, musicale and tea, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children, located at Rockaway Park, Long Island, was given at the Waldorf-Astoria on Friday afternoon, January 25, as already reported in last issue of the Hebrew Standard.

This society was organized at Arverne and Far Rockaway during the summer of 1905, by Mrs. Isaac Doehm, for the purpose of aiding the Sanitarium at Rockaway Park, which is the only charitable institution of its kind in America.

The object of the Sanitarium is to furnish medical care, trained nursing, long vacations, daily excursions as well as nourishment and care to mothers and children who are in need of such ministrations. The activity of the organization is confined to the summer months—30,000 mothers and children having been cared for during the past summer.

Upon the resignation of Mrs. Boehm from the presidency in October, 1906, Mrs. S. Freeman, the present incumbent, was elected. She has put her whole heart into the work of helping the helpless. In this she is ably assisted by an able corps of conscientious officers. It is the ambition of the present administration to enlarge the sphere of activity of the Sanitarium so that the institution can remain open during the entire year. An entertainment to secure additional funds was decided upon, and a committee appointed to make the proper arrangements. This committee was composed of the following ladies: Mrs. C. F. Bernstein, Mrs. L. Boehm, Mrs. D. H. Hyman, Mrs. S. Marks, and under the brilliant chairmanship of Mrs. E. I. Wilson, whose strong commercial and executive ability, merit the appreciation of all who attended, and were so admirably entertained. The choice of such a committee commends the judgment of the president, Mrs. Freeman, for the society achieved a most artistic social and financial success. The programme was a treat to the very large select audience that attended, and the excellence of the efforts of the artists who participated was properly praised and applauded.

Mlle. Regine Arta (permission of Mr. Oscar Hammerstein), Miss Estelle Liebling, soprano; Mrs. Henrietta Featherston, Warner, vocalist; Miss Margarete Hebbard, violinist; Miss Rose Ford, violinist; Signor Guglielmo Pagnani, baritone; M. Andre Benoit, pianist; Mr. Henry Truax, tenor; Mr. Charles Dickson, recitations.

Refreshments were afterward provided in a manner that brought forth great praise for the promptness, speed and facility with which each guest was served.

Though in existence only eighteen months, the society has a membership of over a thousand prominent Jewish women. Much credit is due the worthy president, Mrs. Freeman, and the chairman of the arrangement committee, Mrs. I. S. Wilson and their assistants, whose untiring efforts truly merit the grand success attained. The cause is a most worthy one.

The gratitude of the society is accorded to its many guests and to the kind artists whose charitable aid assured them of the public appreciation.

Mrs. MARK D. GOODMAN.

By RE HENRY.

The Lord is One, the Lord is One,
We need no intercessor;
His Hand is stretched out over all,
He hears our voices when we call,
He punishes the transgressor.

The Lord is One, The Lord is One,
His mercy never endeth;
Although we know not of His ways,
We know 'tis He alone we praise,
'Tis He alone befriendeth.

Our God is One, Our God is One,
Sole Lord of all creation;

Without beginning, without end,
Our Help and our Salvation.

David's Grave.

KING DAVID is not dead. He only lies in deep slumber in some cavern, hidden from the eyes of man. Thousands of years have elapsed since he lies thus, awaiting the day of his awakening. Then will he rise and venture forth with his unsheathed sword, to avenge the innocent blood of his people.

Once, two young Talmudical scholars were discussing the whereabouts of the cavern in which King David lay, and they resolved to try and discover it. Although the task presented itself as very difficult, they at once set out, journeying day and night. They came across a leafless date tree upon which was perched a dove, sitting disconsolately and weeping. The two young men asked the dove if it could tell them where King David slept. At first the dove continued to weep, and then said:

"An eagle, a wicked eagle, has robbed me of my young ones. It even drove me from my nest, which it destroyed, and . . . . Oh! do not trouble me with your questions; go and ask the brook higher up."

The students proceeded to the brook and repeated their question. The brook replied:

"An eagle, a wicked eagle, came and washed his paws, which were covered with the blood of his prey, in my clear waters, and . . . . Oh! if you wish to find the cavern of King David, go to the mountain. There you will discover the track."

At the mountain an old man, with long white hair, and eyes sparkling with Heavenly light, came to meet the young men.

"Peace be unto you, our teacher," said the students.

"Peace be unto you, my dear disciples," said the old man. He led them to an iron gate, at which he knocked three times with a key, crying, "Open ye gates."

The gates slowly opened. "Go on and fearlessly," he said,

"until you see a large stone. Remove this and you will find yourselves at the opening of the cavern. Descend and behold King David at rest. He will stretch forth his hands. Take then the bottle, which you will see there, and pour the water in it upon the King's hands. Know ye that this is pure, clear water, of the first which Adam drew in the Garden of Eden. On pouring out this water, you will see wonderful things. The King will rise and proceed forthwith to Jerusalem, which city he will enter in triumph. Then shall the Children of Israel be gathered together from the four corners of the world under his standard."

The young man stood amazed. The old man stopped abruptly. A huge sheet of fire sprang up before him. It enveloped him, and when it died away the old man had disappeared.

In bewilderment the two young men gazed at each other.

"This must have been Elijah the Prophet," they said.

Closely they followed the directions given by the old man. When they entered the cavern they were struck with awe at the marvellous sight which met their gaze. The whole place was full of resplendent gems of every description. On a golden bed lay the King. The Shechinah, the Presence of the Almighty, moved in the air. By the King's head lay a sword, and a bottle of water; at his feet was a wax candle, on the wall the harp, and on a table the Book of Psalms.

The King stretched out his hands. But the men! Their first impulse was to admire the splendor of the surroundings, the diamonds and precious stones attracting their attention. The old man's instructions were completely forgotten.

King David sighed, and withdrew his hands.

Then suddenly, remembering the old man's words, the two students turned towards the King, just in time to see him withdrawing his hands.

It was too late, too late! The Shechinah wept, the harp trembled, and the vision disappeared like a stone that is thrown in the ocean.

Legends of Alexander the Great.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT was one of the world's great conquerors, although he died when he was thirty-three years of age, and a great many wonderful legends are told about him in the Talmud. In fact, his life there reads like a story in the "Arabian Nights."

Alexander the Third, of Macedon, was born 2262 years ago, and when only a boy he showed himself to be unusually courageous and ambitious. The great Greek philosopher, Aristotle, was his teacher, and he trained the boy in every branch of learning, especially in matters relating to the government of the country, and also in athletics.

Alexander was an extraordinary youth. When he was only sixteen years of age; his father, Philip of Macedon, left him in charge of the country, whilst he went to make war on Byzantium, which is now known as Constantinople. Two years later, he displayed remarkable bravery in a battle in which he defeated the Sacred Band of Thebans, and he was not twenty years of age when his father was assassinated and he ascended the Throne.

The first thing he did was to punish his father's murderers. Then he carried on a number of great wars, conquering the Persians and also Phoenicia and Egypt. Afterwards he marched on India, then only known by name. He got as far as the Ganges and returned to Babylon.

A magician warned him that he would die in that city, but Alexander, who was cruel and a drunkard, laughed at this. Nevertheless, it was in Babylon, while making plans for the future, that he was taken ill at a banquet and died. His body was taken to Alexandria, in Egypt, which city he had founded and named after himself.

It was about nine years before he died, and after he had besieged Tyre that he marched through Palestine, and a beautiful legend is told concerning this. The High Priest received warning of his coming in a dream.

He went to all the other priests and told them to put on their robes of finest linen, and he also told many of the citizens to follow him. In the early dawn, outside Jerusalem, Alexander met an imposing procession of priests and leading citizens who had marched through the night carrying torches.

Alexander, to the surprise of his followers, left his chariot and bowed low to the High Priest.

"I have seen this holy man in my dreams," he explained. "His image has always been with me in battle, spurring me on to great deeds and to victory"

"Every day in our holy Temple we pray for you and your Empire," said the High Priest, and Alexander accompanied him to the Temple and offered up sacrifice.

He granted the Jews the right to live in the full enjoyment of their laws, gave them certain privileges and removed some of their taxes.

Messengers came from Egypt to Alexander and asked him to compel the Jews to return to them the gold and silver which, as stated in the twelfth chapter of Exodus, they lent to the Israelites when they were delivered from the land of bondage. The spokesman of the Jews, a humble hunchback, answered them from the same chapter in Exodus.

"We served you for four hundred and thirty years, therefore give us our wages first, and then we will consider your claim."

"Let us have three days to consider our answer," pleaded the Egyptian messengers, and Alexander said, "Be it so."

But when the three days were past, it was found that the Egyptians, unable to find a satisfactory reply, and fearing Alexander's wrath, had fled.

Of the many adventures which are said to have befallen Alexander, one tells of his journey to the Land of Darkness in Central Africa. He travelled on mules which had the power of seeing in the dark, and he arrived at a country peopled only by women.

"If you kill us," they said, "you will be accused of murdering women, if we slay you, people will say: 'He was a puny king, who was overcome by woman.'"

So Alexander did not make war on the women, but asked them for food. A golden table was placed before him and on it was a loaf of gold.

"Do you eat golden bread?" he asked, in great surprise.

Musical and Dramatic Comment.

Pinero says that "England is the suburb of the world." If the author of "Iris" ever comes to New York he would find there the parish of that suburb.

It must be over four months since Mr. Conried's decision to produce "Salome" became known. Since October orchestral rehearsals were held, and Olive Fremstad studied the repugnant role even before that time. A dress rehearsal of the opera is given, then a public performance, whereupon the representatives of the stockholders of the opera house protest against any further performance of it.

If this does not illustrate parochialism—our four millions of inhabitants notwithstanding—I should like to know where to find a more striking example.

In spite of its obnoxious subject—or rather because of it—I am sure that without the wide-spread notoriety given it by the directors, it would not have filled the Metropolitan on any one representation.

Although desirous of hearing "Salome" more than once, my keen disappointment will not cause me to harbor any resentment against the directors. Without the generosity of these gentlemen and the people whom they represent, it would be impossible for us to enjoy the great performances which nowadays are the rule at the Metropolitan. And when a princely patron of the arts like J. Pierpont Morgan sees fit to object to the story of an opera, even those of us who cannot agree with him should respect the opinion of a man to whom every art-loving New Yorker must always be grateful.

Old Hazlitt, quotes Mr. Chase in the Sun, a hundred years ago was saying of Mozart what men say of the iconoclasts now. Listen:

"A grand serious opera is a tragedy wrapped up in soothing airs to suit the tender feelings of nurrlings of fortune—where tortured victims swoon on beds of roses, and the pangs of despair sink in tremulous accents into downy repose. Just so much of human misery is given as is proper to lull those who are exempted from it into a deeper sense of their own security; just enough of the picture of life is shown to relieve their anguish without disturbing their indifference. Truth becomes a fable, good and evil matters of perfect indifference, and there is hardly a vice for which the mind is not thus gradually prepared, no virtue of which it is not rendered incapable."

Certainly nothing more dissimilar than "The Barber of Seville" and "Pagliacci" can be imagined. In content, style and method the music of one is that of a hundred years ago, and of the other that of yesterday. An opera company capable of doing ample justice to both works on a pretty high artistic plane. Mr. Hammerstein is fortunate in having a conductor whose interpretative skill is not confined to any particular school. To Rossini's ideal musical comedy he imparted the sparkle of champagne and singers like Bonci, Pinkert and Arimondi made these "Suesse Rosinen" taste as sweet as ever. Another capital performance at the Manhattan was that of "Pagliacci," in which the new baritone, Mario Sammarco, proved himself an artist of high rank. Bassi, as Canio, acted with convincing sincerity and his singing was intensely dramatic and fervid. Madame Donalda was a comely Nedda, and she sang beautifully. In Leoncavallo's opera as well as in the preceding "Cavalleria" the chorus and the orchestra were a delight.

In a short time Mr. Hammerstein will produce Saint-Saens's one-act opera, "Helene," with Melba (Helene), Donalda (Venus), De Cisneros (Pallas) and Dalmore (Paris).

For the rest of this week the repertory comprises "Faust" this evening, with Meiba; "Mignon," to-morrow afternoon, and "Aida" in the evening.

Although "Madame Butterfly" is announced at the Metropolitan for next week and other operas of Puccini are sure to be repeated, very soon Wagner will again come into his own. Madame Galski is to impersonate "Isolde" for the first time here next Wednesday and on Washington's Birthday "Parsifal" will be sung with Herr Burgstaller, and the incomparable Fremstad as Kundry.

Schumann's third symphony received a carefully rehearsed performance at the New York Symphony Orchestra's concert at Carnegie Hall last Sunday. A welcome novelty was the romance for orchestra, "The Festival of Pan," by Prof. Converse, of Harvard. While his thematic invention is not remarkable, the young American composer displays many tints in his palette of tone colors, and his orchestration is decidedly ingenious, without ever being overlaid. Mr. Converse's model seems to be Humperdink, and a very good model he is. It was a pleasure to hear again Edward Elgar's "Variations on an original theme," well played by the orchestra. Mr. Walter Damrosch conducted. His explanatory remarks prefacing the variations were apt and felicitous. The orchestra played admirably.

The last week of "Der Blinde Passagier" is announced at the Irving Place Theatre. It will probably be followed by "Salome," with Hedwig von Ostermann and some of Mr. Conried's best actors in the cast. As Wilde's play does not take more than an hour and a half in the performance, another one-act piece will be given on the same evening.

Federation of Jewish Organizations.
 (OFFICIAL.)
 Synopsis of important points taken up at the meeting of the Federation of Jewish Organizations, held at the Educational Alliance, Saturday, January 26, 1907. Meeting specially called for the purpose of discussing criminality among the Jews and the coming mass meeting.

First, in communications, the following letter was read:
 "T. A. Bingham, Commissioner of Police, Mulberry street, New York.
 "Dear Sir—From an article which was published in Harper's Weekly of December 29, 1906, and written by Frank Marshall White, entitled 'New York's Ten Thousand Thieves,' we learn that about 2,000 pictures were added to the Rogues' Gallery, and that out of the 2,000 pictures added 1,200 were Russian Jews.
 "This is very surprising, and we write you to inquire if this report is accurate."
 "SECRETARY."

And the following reply:
 "Dear Sir—Replying to yours of January 9, I am directed by the Police Commissioner to inform you that the report from which you quote is substantially correct. Very truly yours,
 "D. G. SLATTERY,
 "Secretary to Police Commissioner."
 The delegates discussed these letters both in Yiddish and English. Much patriotism and love for yellow-Jews was evinced. It was decided unanimously that each delegate carries this discussion into his own lodge or society, and hear the opinions of their fellow-members so as to be able at the next meeting of the Federation to discuss the matter more intelligently and practically. It was reported that a monster mass meeting will be arranged, the purpose of which was better explained by the following communication from Hon. Edward Lauterbach, president of the Liberal Immigration League, some of the extracts from which are as follows:

"From the reports received from authoritative sources we are aware that the enemies of immigration are hard at work in Washington endeavoring to force at an unexpected moment the passage of the Gardner-Dillingham bill. It is our duty to oppose this bill by manifesting the public opinion. With this point of view a mass meeting will be held."
 Mr. Lauterbach further invited us to help to make this mass meeting a pronounced demonstration, which he hopes will bear its fruit in the defeat of the Gardner bill. Much spirited and enthusiastic discussion followed, and the delegates pledged themselves to do their utmost for the success of the mass meeting.

Rev. H. Macliansky addressed the delegates of the Federation on the necessity for uniting, and he congratulated the delegates upon the good work already accomplished, and predicted for us a glorious future.

ODESSA Jews in Panic—Cable despatch. Nothing new. The panic is chronic.

ROSH Chodesh Adar falls on Thursday and Friday of next week. The first of Adar is on Friday.

IT is only a poor sort of happiness that could ever come by caring very much about our narrow pleasures.—George Eliot.

WHEN you are inclined to criticise Jewish laws and customs, read this week's Sidra, Exodus xxi, 1, 1—xxiv, 18, and reflect.

CONGREGATIONAL leaders should remember that the synagogue should net only be for the old, but the young have also some claim.

SYNAGOGUE OPENS WITH A WEDDING—Newspaper caption. Good example which should be followed. Far too many synagogues open with squabbles.

TO-MORROW is Parshath Shekolim, ע' שקלים. Be numbered among your people by contributing your portion to some charitable or philanthropic institution.

WE call attention to Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt's sketch, "The Pleasures of the Czar," which appears in this issue. He has grasped the situation in Russia admirably.

EVERYTHING happens on the lower East Side. On Saturday last the New York Socialist Sabbath School Association opened its first school at 237 East Broadway. The socialists are wiser than the leaders of our synagogues, they do not neglect the young.

Go to the East Side and you will be astonished at the progress which the Jews are making. Their children are in school and are refusing to speak Yiddish at home or at play. As a rule they are an industrious, frugal, and law-obeying class of people. They own things, or will, either merchandise or some little business, and as men of property they will be conservative citizens.—Isaac N. Seligman.

The East Side Jews, it is well to remember, are immigrants.

IN the January number of Mode von Heute, writing of Jews and Judaism, Carmen Sylva says:

The persecution of Jews is therefore not a matter of religion, but of race. The Christians, apologizing for their Jew-baiting, plead the crucifixion of Christ. Let us be quite honest to ourselves! What would the Christians of our day do if Christ appeared again? I am afraid they would not as much as cry Hosannah, but would pronounce him a dangerous socialist and would at least have him confined in a lunatic asylum. The Jews are the only people that do not live to see a decay. They remain firm, strong, united, helpful to each other, healthy, and prolific. And all this they owe to one man, the greatest ruler the world has ever seen, to the King of Kings, the wisest physician, the greatest psychologist and physiologist that ever existed—Moses. Who could live upon a throne without bending his knees before Moses? He was a ruler who did no less than create his people and who gave it such a structure as to enable it to weather all storms. If the world had adopted the Mosaic laws it would have been spared tuberculosis, cancer, diphtheria, and other infectious diseases.

Do King Carlos and his ministers ever read what the Queen of Roumania writes?

Recognition at Last.

FOR many years two East Side Institutions, the Hachnosas Orchim and the Home of the Daughters of Jacob have done noble work, not merely for one section of the community, but for every portion of New York Jewry. They had to contend with financial difficulties and their usefulness was thus very much impaired. Notwithstanding this woeful lack of funds, these homes did more than many similar institutions richly endowed.

Beginning very small and at first housed in insignificant quarters the Hachnosas Orchim and the Home of the Daughters of Jacob can now boast of beautiful and well managed buildings. It is, therefore, gratifying to state that the community in general is rallying to their support. As announced in another column of this issue, Mr. Schiff has wiped off the mortgage of the first mentioned institution, and there is no doubt that the latter will soon be in a position to carry into effect the erection of the much needed new wing.

The Hachnosas Orchim has been sheltering immigrants, and the Home for the Daughters of Jacob has been a refuge for the homeless aged and helpless. Both institutions have been true to the objects for which they were founded—and are, therefore, entitled to the most liberal support.

The recognition of the great services they have rendered has been long in coming and now it should be complete. There is only one way of paying a tribute to the good work they have done, and that is by contributing generously to their funds.

Is Judaism Decaying?

I.

THE separation of the State and the Church in France, has called forth an interesting discussion as to the future of Judaism in that country, and the statement has been made that French Judaism is in a state of decadence.

The Chief Rabbi of England has too, on many occasions, called attention to the fact that his flock is not as deeply imbued with the love for our faith as their fathers were. Coming nearer home we are told that the number of agnostics among Jews is growing daily.

The questions may, therefore, rightly be asked: Is Judaism decaying? Has our religion, handed down from generation to generation for thousands of years, ceased to have a hold upon our people?

The answer will immediately be forthcoming that the number of new congregations and synagogues refute the assertion. All over the country, indeed in every part of the globe where Jews dwell, they are uniting for religious worship, and erecting splendid edifices in which to offer up prayer and praise unto God. Regarded only superficially this answer might be accepted as correct, and would lead one to believe that all is well with Judaism. A deeper consideration of the whole question, however, will cause the careful enquirer to pause for a moment and seriously ask himself: Is it really well with Judaism? and the reply must be in the negative. Synagogues, Temples, do not make Judaism, nor does mere attendance at service indicate satisfactory conditions.

Some people pray because it is a habit, others are desirous of appeasing the wrath of a Higher Being, and still others hope to obtain some reward in another world for the formal prayers they mutter here below. Jews subscribe to Jewish Institutions; but this can hardly be called Judaism; a few contribute because their hearts are touched; the great majority give because they wish to keep up appearances.

The situation is critical. Judaism is decaying and no synagogue whether free or otherwise can supply the remedy.

Speaking of the decadence of French Judaism Dr. Nordau places the finger on the weak spot by declaring that the decadence can be checked only by arousing the Jewish consciousness of the Jews. Prof Schechter in one of his addresses to the graduates of the Theological Seminary said: "The Rabbi must not be strange to any thing which is Jewish." We would go a step further and say "The Jew whether he be rabbi or layman, must not be strange to any thing which is Jewish." In order to save our faith from decaying it must be a vital factor. It must be lived in order to be real.

Consideration for the Stranger.

A stranger thou shalt not vex and thou shalt not oppress, for ye have been strangers in the land of Egypt."

Exodus xxii, 20.

EXPERIENCE is the best teacher. Froude said: "Experience teaches slowly, and at the cost of mistakes," yes, and at the cost of suffering; like Byron has it! "Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried!" When we then read the sidrah of this week, full of useful injunctions, of statutes, משפטים, teaching and fostering justice in every act and dealing, the one injunction that heads this sermonette must have appealed to the Israelites above all others. Not to vex the stranger and not oppress him, particularly appealing to their feelings, "because ye have been strangers in the land of Egypt." Aye, they must have felt an approving sensation when that clause was read to them, thinking of the time when the taskmasters in Egypt were standing over them with the oppressive rod, vexing and torturing them, and that was handed down to posterity as one of Israel's loving trait, to be kind to strangers. Indeed, no people of any nation was ever more hospitable, more kind to the stranger than the Jewish people.

The very first precept that Moses laid down for the guidance of his flock after they vacated their homes of oppression and vexation—they were yet on Egyptian soil, only out of reach of the tyrant—was "One law shall ye have to the home born and to the stranger" (Exodus xii, 49), which he repeated again and again, so as to impress it deeply upon minds and hearts.

People other than Jews saw the sublimeness of our book and adopted it as their own, and they have learned many beautiful lessons from it, they have drawn inspiration from its contents and obtained hope and felicity in the consciousness that their ultimate salvation depended upon the teachings of that book; yet that one injunction: Oppress and vex no stranger, they could not well embody in their otherwise examples of humanity. Why? because they went outside of the book. They may claim that they went forward one step, but actually, they went backward many steps.

Any dogma, any creed, any theology that takes more than the One God vouchsafed His people to take, steps back to the ways of idolatrous people, who had no regard for strangers, and everybody who did not believe with them was a stranger. Some would feel offended to be called idolatrous people, yet they support the doctrine: "Whosoever believeth (as they do, of course,) shall be saved, and whosoever believeth not, shall be damned," and they do the damning.

Not long ago the Lord's Day Alliance introduced in the Parliament of Canada a bill for the better observance of Sunday—they call it Sabbath—the bill was so unjust, so oppressive to the Jews particularly that they protested, and the president of the Alliance, a good Christian (?), came out with an open letter, calling the Jews an anachronism, a people not worthy of consideration: and when the Rabbis de Sola, Jacob and Weiss gave him their retorts in doses of logic, reason and Bible precepts, he, like a good Christian, held his peace, extending his left cheek to be smitten after the right had been slapped, because—he was beaten and downed, but had not the manhood to acknowledge his mistake.

In spite of all, there are others again who will be actuated by the same spirit, the very man himself, will repeat the same thing, because they consider the Jew a stranger, an anachronism.

An Oscar Straus, a Simon Wolf, a Goldfogle, a Baynor, a Guggenheim, a Lord Mayor of London, a Montefiore, a Touro, a Schiff and other noble men are anachronisms.

Many who have lived in the land a half a century and more, some who were born here and helped to make the country and raise its prosperity are anachronisms, and an ignorant man, wearing vest and coat buttoned up to the neck and the collar behind, new in the land, with never a service for the country, is the beloved of God! He owes to the Jew his God and his savior, yet the Jew is to a stranger, and a stranger merits not his consideration.

How much more beautiful is Judaism that is solicitous for the stranger. How sublime is that faith resting upon such laws that make incumbent upon its constituents to love the stranger, not to vex or oppress him. If he believes differently, let him settle that with God, our duty is to do for him what we can, for we were once strangers in the land of Egypt.

Things A-booming.

WE hear, and have heard for a long time of the real estate booms.

In the greater city and in the suburbs, in Long Island, and in all the vicinage which is said to be affected by the tunnels, and other railroad improvements and extensions, real estate by the acreage has been gobbled up by speculators and investors.

In some of the Long Island soil which has passed from the more or less primitive owners to those who have laid it out in building plots, our co-religionists have formed settlements which are bound to increase in size and prosperity.

Take, for instance, Brownsville, in the 26th Ward of Brooklyn, or better known as a part of East New York. In 1876 the Lott farm, consisting of a parcel of land which was laid out into about nine hundred and fifty lots, was sold to settle the estate of the owners after whom the town of New Lots was named.

The lots sold at that time from $28 00 for 25x100 on the streets to $115 for corner lots on the avenue. About fifteen years later the pioneer settlement of our co-religionists in that region began. Real Estate speculation began co-ordinately with the increase of the Jewish population. All kinds of industries developed, and business of every nature began to thrive, and the history of the development of Brownsville is known. With a vast population it is now one of the most thriving of Jewish settlements. Lots which were sold in 1876 at $28, are now worth $10,000 to $12,000, and the corner lots on the avenue which were bought at $115, are now valued at $20,000 to $25,000.

Away from the Greater City and distant by rail from three to five hours, in the mountains and throughout the counties wherein mountain ranges abound, another vast boom in realty is now in progress. Every available centre is being gobbled up Jewish hotel-keepers and shop-keepers. Greene County, Sullivan County and Ulster County have had the aggregate valuations quadrupled.

In towns like Tannersville in Greene county land values have risen immensely during the past five years, and the Jewish activities have wrought wonders in this locality, and the boom there is just beginning. Centerville, Mountandale and other places in Sullivan exhibit the same prosperous advance.

The Catskills are really in their infancy, and their development in Jewish hands is going to bring about wonderful changes in that region. Hotels which formerly would not admit Hebrews, and nearly all other hotels are now either owned by Hebrews or are under control of Hebrews. Business has been made to boom because of this and the Gentile farmers and producers, and laborers in these localities are delighted by the change.

After all the whole country is young. A little over a hundred years will embrace its whole existence, and merely a few years of push and vigor have brought about changed results formidable to all. Give our co-religionist a chance, and he will hew his way by dint of push, pluck and industry. There are mighty few drones amongst them. We read of the immense increase of land values everywhere; not a little of this condition may be attributed to the activity of our co-religionists.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Takes Exception.

EDITOR HEBREW STANDARD.

Sir: While the Dedicatory Sermon by the Rev. H. P. Mendes, which you recently published, is commendable as a whole, it must be permitted me to take exception to his remarks that "One ounce of home example is worth a ton of Talmud Torah. One ounce of parental sincerity is worth ten thousand tons of Sunday School efforts." Anyone with a little experience is aware that numerous children of exemplary parents have gone astray through the lack of religious knowledge. There is a rabbinical maxim that a fool cannot be a pious man. One ignorant of the Law stands in the same category because he is devoid of the requisite knowledge. If he is the son of poor parents, he is likely to argue that religion brings no material comforts; and if the son of well-to-do parents, he might argue how much more enjoyable his life would be but for the burden of religious duties.

Living outside of the ghetto, the many false doctrines and worldly temptations that beset him make the avoidance of sin no easy task. Yet even when Israel was less exposed to these evils, the first time a child was taken to school was celebrated as the most important event of his life. Therefore, more specially in these days, I would vouch for it, the truly religious, because intelligent parents will not hold home example as so far superior to Talmud Torah as to mark the latter a negligible quantity, which would be the result of Dr. Mendes's comparison.

We can emphasize the duty of practice in home life without minimizing the study of the Torah. The orthodox Jew is expected to repeat in the morning service of every day that the study of the Divine Law is superior to all other duties, because it embraces both precept and practice.

These must go hand in hand. The matter is a weighty one; wherefore I cannot let the suggestion in the quotation which I have made my theme, go unchallenged.

The fall of the Jewish State is attributed to the impoverishment of the people by the Roman domination which deprived the children of religious education. And Judaism in this free and prosperous land of America is suffering from the inefficiency of the Sunday schools of the past generation.

As an example of the truism that "A little learning is a dangerous thing," I need only cite a sentence in the article "Be no coward," in your current issue, reading: "Make your Sabbath a labor day rather than depend on human charity." Detached from its context, it is sometimes used as an argument for Sabbath desecration; and in this instance the writer of this article distinctly states that "the Talmud itself says of it. 'One who is pressed for sustenance for self and family.' A novice coming across this assertion might be led to believe that he is justified in slighting his parent's example of keeping the Sabbath day holy if he is thereby earning a precarious living. In reality the subject under discussion in the Talmud was that of honoring the Sabbath as a feast day by indulging in better food than on week days, and the decision was to make the Sabbath a week day rather than be dependent on charity for luxuries wherewith to celebrate the day. Work was not under discussion because the bible is too emphatic regarding the Sabbath rest, and too emphatic regarding kindness to the poor to render such discussion likely. But to do honor to the feast of the Lord by providing better food and appearing in better dress than on week days, is an appreciation which is everywhere enjoined in scripture; and therefor, being a spontaneous token of sanctification, the Talmud decided that it is not to be indulged in at the expense of making ourselves dependent on others for the means. On the other hand the unlawfulness of the Sabbath labor is so well recognized that it has always been considered a mitzvah to assist the poor that they shall not go hungry on account of the Sabbath. And in the Hoshannah said on the Sabbath of chol-hamo'ed (middle days) of Suco't we pray that "A people --- who open their hands to those who unite in keeping the Sabbath, --- may continually inherit the future world, which is to be one entire Sabbath."

I trust I have proved how essential is a thorough knowledge of Judaism; and that in that will be found sufficient apology for my taking up so much of your space.

Anent Free Synagogues.

EDITOR, HEBREW STANDARD.

Whilst such great sensational advertising is being given to a so-called free Synagogue movement, it is well to inform the public that there are already the following well-established and flourishing Free Synagogues:

- o wit, those of
- The Educational Alliance.
- The Emanu-El Brotherhood.
- The Emanu-El Sisterhood.
- The Young Men's Hebrew Association.
- The Young Women's Hebrew Association,
- The Free Synagogue of the Emanu-El Brotherhood deserves special mention, as it is crowded to the very doors every Friday evening. During the year 1906 no less than 20,760 young men and women attended the Friday evening services of the Emanu-El Brotherhood.

JUSTICE.

Protests.

Editor, HEBREW STANDARD:

I am surprised that you would print an article so grossly unjust to the Catholics, as in your issue of January 25th, by Dr. Silverman, on Church and State.

The Catholics have enough of their own people to support and educate in their own faith, without bothering to proselyte and pervert people with an established belief.

You must look to "The Protestant Episcopal" Church, which is not content with looking after their thousand of non-church goers — but must pervert every one within reach.

Only last week they opened a chapel in the midst of your people and dedicated it to two Hebrew Saints.

Why should the Catholics be blamed for the religious pictures and symbols? The Catholic teachers as a body and individually never speak of religion to their pupils. They have known so long religion intolerance from Protestants that they believe every one has a right to "The Faith of their Fathers"

It's a little too much that Jews must begin to take up the cudgels against them, especially as Jews know what it is to be persecuted for religion sake.

dulled and poisoned and incapacitated for work, as was the case when you and I went to school. We believe that this matter of fresh air is vital, and that it is impossible to give too much attention to it.

He then spoke to some extent of the two departments of the school, manual and commercial, giving an example of a girl, 15 years of age, who preferred the commercial department to the manual department. He read the audience her essay, in which she gave various reasons, among which was that she thought the commercial department offered many more benefits than the manual.

He gave another example of a girl who was very anxious to be admitted, and said that her mother was in the hospital and her father was too old to work, her brother being the sole support of the family. She said her brother, who was engaged, would postpone his marriage one and one-half years if she were admitted.

The Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society has four of its girls here now, and I am very glad to say that a special report shows them to be, all of them, girls of whom we can be proud. And we keep the superintendent informed of their progress and of opinions of their various teachers. He is to have three more of his girls admitted the approaching term. If they are worthy they will have a preference, and we have informed the Hebrew Orphan Asylum that we will be glad to take some of their girls if they are worthy.

When we first took charge of the school the term was ten months. Our term now is one and one-half years—eighteen months. The hours are the longest in the city. We begin promptly at 8.45 and we close at 4 p. m. We will prove by statistics that the health of our girls will not suffer. We have a vacation in the summer. The vacations are here in the school and I will show what we will do in summer in a little while, and I think it will interest and satisfy you that we are doing well to have long hours and have no summer vacation. If we have made a mistake we will say so and we will change our course, but I feel confident that this is not a mistake and the result will justify what we are doing.

He spoke of every effort that was made to improve everything for the benefit of the girls. They have the best gymnasium in the city, and where, as in most schools, the pupils are not enabled to go into the gymnasium more than twice a week, we have arranged things so that every pupil in the school has the benefit of the gymnasium each and every day. We also have a summer roof garden, which will serve to develop the health of the children.

The trustees of the school in order to avoid further expenditure, have personally and individually contributed a fund for the building of a swimming pool for the further physical development of the girls, and particularly in the summer time, for they will be here all through the hot season. The plans are now being drawn, and we expect everything to be ready this July, which will be a great help.

We are about to introduce a system of giving our girls proper refreshment about 10 a. m. They will be served with a cup of warm milk or pure cocoa, and at noon they will be served with good homemade soup to supplement the lunch which they bring with them. This will be served by themselves, making it part of our instruction, and will be a very pretty spectacle when it is under headway. So that we propose to give the girls not only pure air and instruction but proper nourishment. All the girls who can afford it will pay 2 cents a day and those who cannot will be well taken care of.

We are careful to have such changes in our intellectual work, for we believe that change is the greatest rest.

We have also a medical department, established by Dr. Sidney D. Jacobson, whose place has been filled by Dr. Emil D. Barringer. He spoke in the highest terms of the good work done by Dr. Jacobson toward the development of that department.

He also said that Dr. Wiener has been exceedingly helpful, and spoke highly of his work. He said the same of Dr. A. M. Strauss and Dr. J. I. Hart, the latter doing the dental work for the school gratis, except an outlay for material.

He said that the girls were taught music, drawing, and also how to take care of different rooms. He said they were given practical knowledge regarding making beds, cooking, how to sew, and wait on a table, and also laid some stress on the fact that every room in the

HEBREW TECHNICAL SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.
ANNUAL MEETING—INTERESTING REPORT OF PRESIDENT NATHANIEL MYERS.

(Concluded)

It may interest you to know something about the nationality of our pupils and their parents. Of the pupils eighty per cent. were born in this country, the rest in Europe. The average age of the pupils coming to us is 14 1/2 years. Of the parents only ten per cent. were born in this country; the rest were born abroad. It will interest you to know that of our pupils, four of them are full orphans, 22 have no fathers, and 3 no mothers.

We will admit on the first of March next about 150 new pupils. Already we have about 400 applicants for those vacancies. The public schools have their graduation at the end of this month, January. Next month, February, will witness the coming here of great numbers of additional applicants. They now come every day 5, 6, 7, 8, 9 and 10 for admission, and have been coming in substantial numbers for several months past for admission March first next.

When they apply they are examined thoroughly in English and in arithmetic; and are also personally examined in respect to the financial condition of their parents and families, to enable us to select out of the vast number those who seem to be most in need of our help, and who are most likely to profit by the help they receive in the short eighteen months they are with us. Besides the written examination in arithmetic, we dictate several articles to them which they write out in long hand, and they are also called upon to write an extempore essay upon some subject given to them at the moment, to enable us to form a judgment of their mental make-up. That being done, they are further carefully examined, one by one, as to where their parents live, how many rooms they occupy, on what floor the rooms are, what monthly rent they pay, what their father does for a livelihood, what they would do if not admitted here, why they want to go into one department rather than in another, how many brothers and sisters they have and their ages and what each one of them does. The notes of these examinations are reduced to writing; and no preference is ever given through any personal influence. Although I have been here seven years in charge of this institution, I have never had one pupil entered here at my request; and I think I may say the same of every other member of our board.

Our scheme of education involves a development of the physical, the intellectual, the practical, the moral and the aesthetic; and we make it a special point also to endeavor to create a right attitude on the part of our pupils towards those interests and principles which play an important roll daily in the usefulness and happiness of the individual and which go far towards determining the safety and the progress of the State. And first as to the physical. We have a very costly plant whereby there is introduced into every class room and into every room in the building a large current of fresh air from without, and whereby the foul air is being constantly withdrawn. In this beautiful auditorium in which we are assembled there is being introduced at this moment, 15,000 cubic feet of fresh air per minute; in our gymnasium, 9,000 cubic feet per minute; and in each class room, 750 cubic feet per minute. By this means, we not only promote the general health of our pupils, but keep the brain constantly nourished, so that it does not become building had plants, which they took care of while in school and when they left these plants were given them.

Referring to the order department, Mr. Myers said that some of the graduates would enter this department, of which Mrs. Hirshbach is in charge, and where they received pay for their services.

The number of girls who had graduated since the school was founded was 705, who are now earning over $400,000 annually, an average of $560 per annum each.

He announced that they had secured the services of Miss Anna C. Hedges, director of the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, as superintendent of the school, and who would assume her duties on July 1.

Mr. Meyers read a letter from Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, accepting the chairmanship of a newly formed Educational Committee, which is to act in an advisory capacity to the school.

Mr. Myers dwelt eloquently on the uses of wealth and the necessity for the proper understanding of its significance on the part of all students who may through their efforts acquire wealth as well on the part of those who now possess wealth. Much of the class feeling which now exists and creates so much personal and public discontent is due to a wrong attitude on the part of the masses toward wealth. By their adoration of worldly goods they foster the ambition which already exists among the wealthy that the obtaining of riches is the paramount aim in life. The acquiring of wealth should be paralleled by a knowledge and increasing wisdom of how best to use it.

Mr. Adolph Lewisohn spoke briefly. He paid a high tribute to the work and personality of Mr. Myers.

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff also spoke in praise of the good qualities of Mr. Myers. Referring to the use of money he said that the accumulation of money for educational or other good purposes was a thing to be praised.

Col. Samuel P. Colt said that Americans had a good advantage over any other nation. He spoke in eulogy of Mr. Myers.

Mr. Myers then stated that Mr. Colt had given him a check for $1,000.

The following directors were elected for the term expiring January, 1908: Gustav Blumenthal, Sandford Friedberger; for the term expiring January, 1901: Henry C. Bernheim, Mrs. Jacob N. Bloom, Louis Blumgart, Myron I. Borg, Maurice Brill, Mrs. Samuel Hammer-slagh, Mrs. Simon Hirshbach, Abraham M. Kridel, Miss Olivia Leventritt, Nathaniel Myers.

HEBREW FREE LOAN ASSOCIATION.

FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING—GROWTH OF THE INSTITUTION.

(Concluded)

"When our generous people will hear of the good work we are doing no doubt they will help us to pay off, at least, the $10,000 we owe over the $25,000 first mortgage.

"After we had been burned out on Grand and Orchard streets we moved temporarily to the Educational Alliance and from there to 153 East Broadway, and after fixing our beautiful office had been there only one year when the build-was sold.

"To prevent this recurrence and in order to have a permanent home where people can always find us, and to bring We have fortunately been able to reduce our expenses over last year by $3,008.65, and increase our income over previous year by $2,991.53, in addition to the $13,108 contributed to our building fund, which makes a total of $19,108.18 over our income of last year, besides contributions of material to our new building.

Furthermore, our investment in the building has almost doubled its value, since we bought and improved it, as it brings us about 18 per cent. or sufficient income to cover our losses.

We have at present 3,478 members, against 2,746 last year, a gain of 946 members, 83 patrons, 9 donors, 12 life members, total of 1,050, against a loss of 318, leaving us net gain of 732 this year.

The activities during the year, 1906, were: Loans to individuals—34 of $5, $170; 3,269 of $10, $32,690; 801 of $15, $12,015; 854 of $20, $17,080; 1,175 of $25, $29,437.5; 2 of $30, $60; 3 of $40, $120; 606 of $50, $30,300; 27 of $75, $2,025; 520 of $100, $52,000; 12 of $150, $1,800; 97 of $200, $19,400; total, $372,035, or since we started, 102,992 loans amounting to $2,285,226.

Perhaps we could have accomplished more than we did last year, but we were more than six months without a proper home. We were in the new building while the whole construction was going on, as we expected the building to be completed much sooner, and were thus handicapped.

Where do you find another society of this kind which adds year by year to its capital?

Every dollar we ever received as donations we still have to-day, and it is loaned out perpetually. As the membership dues pay our small expenses and our losses, and still adds to the loanable capital, therefore, we ask you to help us further our cause is so worthy, and your investment so safe, we could then do more good to more people, and perhaps could loan larger amounts, or make the repayments easier.

We have changed our mode of collection membership dues, as we are mailing out our bills instead of sending them through collectors, and it has been quite successful, and saved us much money.

But we still have a number of members who pay monthly or quarterly, for whom we have to have collectors, but we hope the time will soon come when these people also will have a bank account and send us their check, and save us the collector's expense.

Special mention is certainly due to one man here, who does not, however, permit me to give his name—who devotes his whole life to our society, as well as to our worthy first vice-president, who attend daily during the construction of our new building, and who investigates all our real estate indorsements.

Some of our directors attended the meeting of the Hebrew Charities of America in Philadelphia, this year, and President Mack, of Chicago, said in his address that he finds the best work is done by the Hebrew Free Loan of New York.

We are continually receiving inquiries from all parts of the country as to how the society to a still sounder basis, even people each gave $1,000 bought and presented the building to the Hebrew Free Loan Association.

"The income during 1906, including $5,000 from Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, and membership dues was $20,009.48. The expenditures were, together with $3,359.50 lost in loans, $9,992.98, thus leaving $10,165.50 to the loanable capital. The total assets of the association amount to $102,215.32."

We conduct our society, and after giving them the desired information, receive many responses that they have started similar societies in their respective cities—which is most gratifying to us all.

Thus, there is fulfilled for us the old promise that Mitzvah Gorreres Mitzvah One good action will create innumerable others.

Brief addresses were made by the Rev. decided to run the article in two parts, Prof. J. M. Asher and Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, who congratulated the society for the good work accomplished.

The latest play from the pen of Charles Klein, author of "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Music Master," and other famous successes, will receive its first presentation in a struggle existing between capital and labor. He has presented both sides of the question so skillfully and with such impartiality that capitalists go away believing that they are in the right and the laboring class find that their arguments have been impartially presented.

Young Folks' Montefiore Society.

The Rev. A. Basel, of the Montefiore Congregation of the Bronx, after untiring efforts, has at last succeeded in establishing a junior organization to be known as the Young Folks' Montefiore Society.

The scope of the organization will include the creation of literary, social, dramatic, musical, and other circles, whose purpose will be to promote the social welfare and cultivate the minds of its members along the lines of music, literature, drama, etc.

The work of the respective circles will be confined to the masterpieces of the literary, musical, and other geniuses of the Jewish faith.

It is Dr. Basel's idea to assist this society as much as possible in enabling its members to become conversant with the tradition of our race and works of art of its masters.

At the last meeting the following officers were elected:—Mr. Joseph Brandenburg, President; Miss J. Kramer, Vice-President; Mr. A. Pollack, Treasurer, and Mr. H. Lietner, Secretary.

The meetings will be held in the vestry rooms of the Temple, on Hewitt Place, the second and fourth Tuesdays of every month.

Forty-Seventh Anniversary.

The forty-seventh anniversary entertainment and ball of the United Hands Mutual Benefit Society of the City of New York will take place at the Alhambra, 126th street and Seventh avenue, on Saturday evening, February 9.

With the Tin Woodman, the Scarecrow, the roaring Lion, the comical Cow, and a half-hundred pretty girls, "The Wizard of Oz" comes to the West End Theatre that evening. In addition to the features mentioned above—and, of course, a person would expect to see all of them with "The Wizard of Oz"—an abundance of novelties is promised with this year's production.

Another Link.

Another link in the Huyler chain of stores has been opened to the public at 272 Broadway, near 104th street. This makes the sixteenth store in Greater New York which is operated and owned by the famous Huyler Company. The store is roomy and on one side is an up-to-date soda water counter thirty feet in length, where will be served Huyler's well known fountain drinks. The syrups used will be made by the Huyler Company, and they will be prepared with the same regard to purity and deliciousness that has made Huyler's confections the standard of the world. Opposite is the candy counter, which will be heaped with Huyler's wonderful chocolates and bonbons, the secrets of whose making resulting in such remarkable success are retained by the manufacturer. A host of Huyler's is bliss to any girl; the greater the donor, for none has ever yet become so blasé that Huyler's did not appeal with eloquent force. Beauty and originality have been sought in the decorations of the store. Soft tones of blue and gold in the blue and white tiled ceiling and equipment combine harmoniously and the floor is of mosaic pattern. The counter bases are all made of mahogany and set off with the rest of the store. Splendid glass and silverware will be used in the displaying and serving of goods. But it is not of the artist's mere making and fittings that the Huyler Company and fittings that the Huyler Company makes its chief boast. The absolute purity of its candies and drinks, the care and scrupulous regard for absolute cleanliness, the daintiness of appearance and the deliciousness of the work are the features the company lays stress on? And what a Huyler guarantee none may gainsay. Of course you will see a great display of novelties, including satin boxes, many handpainted, embossed and decorated candy receptacles of more shapes and designs than can be enumerated. This store will be kept open evenings, and everybody is invited to inspect the greatest display of dainties ever displayed.
