THE JEWS OF GERMANY.

By REV. DR. BERNARD DRACHMAN.

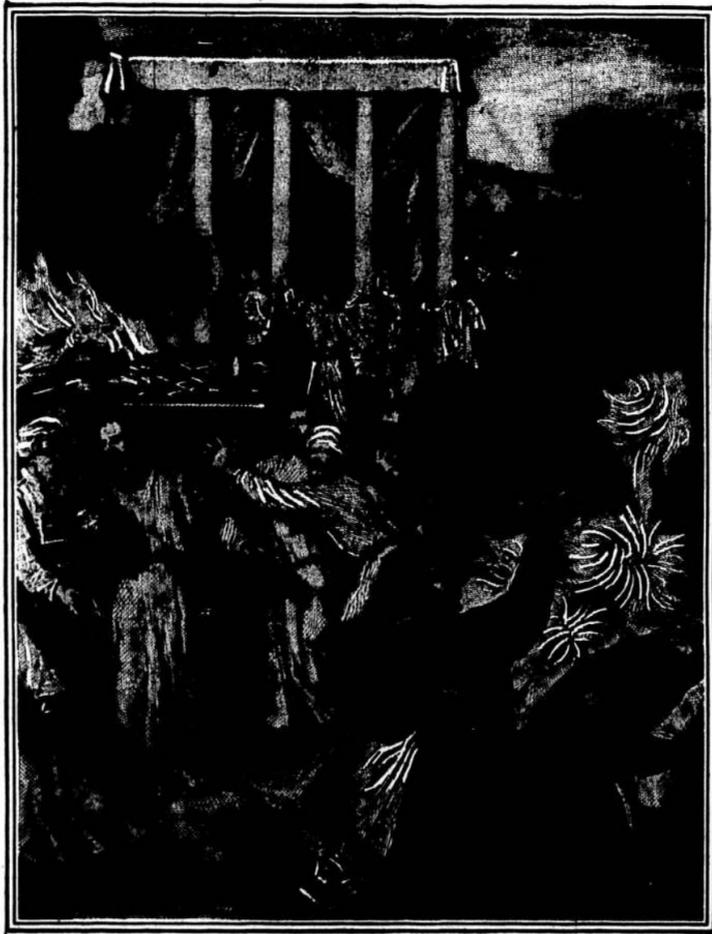

It is fortunate that my subject, as stated, is "The Jews of Germany," that is, the Jews who dwell within the boundaries of the present German empire. Had it been "The German Jews," and had there been understood under that term all those elements of our people which originate more or less remotely from Germany and use some form or other of the German language, there would have been included the overwhelming majority of contemporary Jews, and the subject would have been impossible of treatment in a single lecture. The Israelit, the well-known orthodox German-Jewish journal, in its issue of February 16th, quotes from an article, "Das Deutsch-sprachige Judentum im Ausland" (German-speaking Jewry in Foreign Lands), published by the "Verein fuer das Deutschtum im Ausland" (Society for Germanism in Foreign Lands), in which it is stated that of the approximately twelve and a half million Jews in the world not less than eleven million speak German or descend from German-speaking Jews. Of these approximately three million speak pure German and eight million the Judaeo-German dialect or Yiddish. It is extremely interesting to note that the Gentile writer of the article points out that while the Judaeo-German differs from the High German in many regards, it is nevertheless just as closely akin to it as many other German dialects which no philologist would dream of excluding from the domain of German speech. This broad use of the term is in accordance with traditional Jewish usage. For centuries the Jewish people has been looked upon as broadly divided into two elements, Ashkenazim or Germans, in which are included all who are in any way descended from the Jewish inhabitants of Germany, and Sephardim or Spaniards, which term includes all descended from Iberian ancestors or whose pronunciation of the Hebrew or whose ritual resemble those of the Spanish Jews. It would, however, be historically and scientifically incorrect to treat all these Ashkenazic Jews as one homogeneous element. The separation of centuries and the influence of differing environments have differentiated them greatly. In this way the German Jews proper and their remote descendants in the Slavic East have come to be and to feel themselves as two widely differing elements.* But even in Germany itself the Jews do not form one uniform, homogeneous element. There is a distinct and easily recognizable difference between the Jews of East. This difference extends to speech, modes of thought and demeanor, and even, to a considerable extent, to physical appearance. In the narrowest application, Ashkenaz

This is further evidenced by the fact that only in this region does the genuine German ritual, Minhag Ashkenaz, obtain. In the other sections of Germany the congregations usu-

The exact date of the first settlement of Jews in Germany is not known. It is probable that their arrival there was about coeval with their departure from Palestine after the downfall of their nation. Some of the congregations claimed an even higher antiquity, notably that of Worms, which asserted that it already existed in the days of Ezra. The first authentic document which mentions Jews in Germany dates from 321 C. E., and refers to the Jewish community of Cologne. From it we learn that the Jews enjoyed in the main the rights of Roman citizens, being only restricted in regard to the making of proselytes, the keeping of Christian slaves and the holding of public office. They were at liberty to pursue any vocation they chose; and were mainly occupied in agriculture, trade and industry. These conditions continued for a long time after the kingdoms of the Burgundians and the Franks had succeeded to the Roman rule. The Merovingian rulers were free from fanaticism and did not disturb the Jews in their civic rights. Charlemagne, too, treated the Jews with liberality. He exempted them from military service; trade and commerce became almost their monopoly, and money-lending, forbidden to the Christian by church-law, became a lucrative occupation to the Jew. This, of course, had the disadvantage of injuring their popularity, as the money-lender is always disliked. Charlemagne also made a Jew, Isaac, member of his embassy to Harun Al-Raschid. Under Ludwig the Pious, Charlemagne's successor, their status remained unchanged. Ludwig even appointed a special officer, the Judenmeister, to protect their privileges. But ecclesiasticism, always the foe of the Jew, was constantly at work to undermine their position in the state. The clergy strove to embitter the populace against them, and finally succeeded in imbuing the ignorant multitude with fanatical hatred of the unbelievers. During these centuries the Jews lived consistently and loyally in their faith. They were not at first very learned in the law, but in the eleventh century rabbinical scholarship began to flourish among them, mainly through the efforts of Rabbenu Gershon ben Judah, of Metz, in Alsace, who received on that account the appellation of "The Light of the Exile." He imbued his disciples with sincere piety and devotion to Judaism, and ally worship according to the Polish ritual, Minhag Polen. However, for the purposes of this article, we shall ignore these distinctions and consider the Jewish inhabitants of the German empire as a whole as properly included in its scope.

thus contributed much to the establishment of the profoundly religious character for which the German Jews became later celebrated.

Their loyalty was put to a terrible test during the first Crusade, in the eleventh century. The fury of the fanaticized Crusaders broke with unrestrained savagery over the easily reachable and helpless Jews. Entire communities, such as those of Treves, Speyer, Worms, Mayence and Cologne, perished as martyrs, preferring death to apostasy. About 12,000 German Jews met death then, either as victims of the murderous fanatics or by their own hands. Vast multitudes fled to the Slavonic lands, thus becoming the ancestors of the modern Russian and Polish Jews. These bloody events cast a pall of gloom over the lives of the German Jews. Their sadness finds a poetic expression in Piyutim and Selichoth, hymns and penitential prayers composed in this period, which are full of lamentations over the Jewish victims of the crusades. They also had a very injurious effect upon their social and political status. As the German adage puts it, "Wer den schaden hat braucht fuer den Spott nicht sorgen"; that is to say, whoever suffers injury can be sure of insult as well, and so the wretched Jews, having felt the cruelty of the Gentiles, became also the victims of their calumnies and false accusations. They were accused of treason, desecration of the host, ritual murder, poisoning the wells, and as many other crimes as the fertile imaginations of their enemies could devise, and great numbers perished or were compelled to flee. But their sufferings during the Crusades were as nothing to that which befell them when the Black Death swept over Europe in the middle of the fourteenth century (1348-1349). This frightful scourge of humanity, which, coming from Asia, laid waste the population of all Europe, did not spare the Jews. It seems, however, that it did not claim as large a proportion of victims from the Jews as from the Christians, owing, probably, to the more cleanly habits of the former and their observance of the Mosaic laws. This may have aroused the jealousy of the Christians and led them to consider their sufferings the result of Jewish plotting. Be this as it may, a myth arose, eagerly accepted by the ignorant and benighted mob, that the Jews had caused the plague by poisoning the wells in order to destroy the Christians. This malicious and stupid fable spread with incredible rapidity, and everywhere throughout southern and western Germany infuriated mobs fell upon the Jews, massacring and destroying without mercy. The numbers of Jews that were slain were extraordinary, in Mayence 6,000, in Strasburg 2,000, in Erfurt 3,000, and so on. In all some 375 German cities and towns are recorded in the Jewish Memor-books in which the Jewish population was practically exterminated. These records are most remarkable as showing what a great Jewish population dwelt in mediæval Germany, and the extraordinary vitality and spiritual strength of the German Jews, which enabled them, in course of time, to recover even from this overwhelming blow and to become again comparatively strong and numerous. But the effect at the time was crushing and disastrous. The wretched survivors of the massacres lived in constant fear of their lives, and were constantly plundered and driven from various towns and districts. They had become the "Kammerknechte," or personal subjects or serfs, of the German emperors, and should have received the direct imperial protection, but the high and mighty potentates were more interested in taxing them than in protecting them. This privilege of taxing and mulcting the Jew was often sold by the emperors to the lesser sovereigns and the cities of the empire. Altogether, the state of the Jew was wretched and miserable in the extreme. The only redeeming features were the beautiful family life and the high intellectual activity of the Jews. The moral status of the Jews of mediæval Germany was remarkably pure and wholesome. They were simple, whole-hearted believers, who took their moral and religious duties with the utmost seriousness. They followed the principle, "fuerchte Gott, thue recht and scheue niemand"; that is, "fear God, do right and fear no man." The family life was patriarchal. The father was the undisputed head of the house, to whom both wife and children looked up with the utmost respect, but the father exercised his authority with love and mildness, and saw to it that the children paid their mother her due meed of respect. Conjugal relations were characterized by love and loyalty, unusual in the non-Jewish circles of the time. A mediæval German rabbi quaintly states in a religio-legal writing, "It is not the custom of Jewish husbands to beat their wives." The intellectual status of the mediæval German Jews was also lofty. They did not possess the varied culture of the Spanish Jews, were not distinguished in the domains of philosophy and poetry, but in the specific Jewish branches of Halachah and Haggadah and ethical and devotional literature a considerable number of mediæval German Jews attained distinction. In addition to Rabbenu Garshom, already mentioned, Rabbi Meir, of Rothenburg; Rabbi Simon Ha-Darshon (the preacher), compiler of the Midrash collection of the Yalkut Shimeoni; Rabbi Eliezer, of Metz, author of the Sefer Yereim (Book of the Pious); Rabbi Judah, of Worms, surnamed the Devout, author of the Sefer Hassidim (Book of the Devout); and Rabbi Eliezer, of Worms, author of the Sefer Ha-Roheach (Book of the Apothecary), may be singled out as especially distinguished. Strange to say, despite the harsh treatment and cruel persecutions to which the Jews of Germany were subjected, they early adopted the language of their oppressors and became, in speech, and to a considerable extent in manners, thoroughly Germanized. This speech, owing to the isolation of the Jews, became in later times impregnated with Hebraisms and Jewish idioms, and became thus the so-called Juedisch-Deutsch, Judendeutsch or Yiddish, but originally there is no reason to suppose that the language of the German Jews differed in any way from that of their Gentile neighbors. A proof of this is the fact that in the thirteenth century, among the Minnesaengers, those renowned mediæval German minstrels or troubadours who sang of love and war and romance, there was also at least one Jew, Sueskind von Trimberg, in Franconia. He was a true German minnesaenger, whose poetic efforts bear a strong resemblance in language and style to the compositions of the masters of German minstrelsy, Walther von der Vogelweide and Wolfram von Eschenbach. But in spirit he was superior to his Gentile colleagues. His themes were nobler than theirs, owing to the strong influence of Judaism upon his muse. He sang the praises of the virtuous wife, he praised true nobility of character as the mark of the knight, and he also indited devotional verses. In appearance and demeanor he seems to have been entirely similar to other German minstrels, but nevertheless he seems to have met with scant courtesy at the hands of the nobles whose patronage he sought, in accordance with the custom of the time, and in a fit of resentment he resolved to cast away his poetic vocation and to return to the accustomed life of the Jew. This determination he expressed in a verse which I will take the liberty to quote, modernizing somewhat, however, his rather unintelligible antique German: Ich war auf der Thoren Fahrt Mit meiner Kunst zwar, Dass mir die Herren nicht wollen geben. Da will ich ihr Hofe fliehen, Und will mir einen langen Bart Lassen wachsen mit grauen Haaren, Ich will in alter Juden Leben Mich fortan vorwaerts ziehen, Mein Mantel der soll sein lang, Tief unter einem Hute, Demuethiglich soll sein mein Gang Und selten mehr singen hoefflichen Sang. Seit mich die Herren scheiden von ihrem Gute.

Which may be rendered into English thus: I went upon the road of fools— With all my art, forsooth. To me the lords will nothing give; So I shall flee their courts. Right long I'll let my beard now grow And gray shall be its hairs. The life of ancient Jews I henceforth, too, shall live. Long, too, shall be my cloak, And deep bowed beneath my hat I'll walk with humble step. No courtly songs I'll sing, Since from their proud demesnes The nobles me do drive.

Sueskind of Trimberg is a forerunner of the countless German Jews who, in later ages, have contributed their share to the enrichment of German literature, and the treatment which many of his modern successors have received at the hands of their Aryan compatriots is not essentially different from that which the mediæval German-Jewish bard experienced from the knights and nobles of his time. During the four centuries following the Black Death the condition of the Jews of Germany did not materially change. They lived, generally speaking, in a state of wretchedness, misery and insecurity, but bore all their troubles with resignation, and found comfort in their religion, its practices, traditions and sacred literature. Great changes came over the land, but left the status of the Jews unaltered. They were restricted and persecuted in numberless ways. Their residence and other rights were at the mercy of the individual states and communes. In some regions they were permitted only to live in the towns, in others only in the villages. There were numerous local expulsions or prohibitions of residence, the possession of land was prohibited, and the higher vocations were almost universally closed to them, so that they were practically limited to the poorest forms of industry and commerce. The great good fortune of the Jew was that these restrictive measures were only local; there was no general expulsion and practically no massacres. But their social condition was very low, and they were almost completely segregated from the Gentile population. This brought about the development of specific Jewish mannerisms and the Judaeo-German as a separate dialect, interlarded with Hebraisms and, to some extent, with Slavonic terms. Much of historic interest occurred during this period which the limits of this lecture preclude even mentioning. But one noteworthy incident should not remain unnoticed. In the early part of the sixteenth century a great spiritual and intellectual danger hovered over the German Jews. In the year 1509 Johann Pfefferkorn, an apostate from Judaism and a bitter enemy of his former co-religionists, obtained from the emperor Maximilian an order for the destruction of all Hebrew books. The Jews naturally appealed, and the matter was left to the decision of the renowned Hebraist, Johann von Renschlin. This latter was providentially a liberal and humane man, and his decision, which procured him the bitter enmity of his fanatical co-religionists, was emphatically in favor of the Hebrew literature. Thus a decree which would have been far worse to Judaism than any merely physical persecution was averted.

(Concluded.)

When the beadle gets excited, which happens frequently, on the least provocation, he throws himself at once into a dramatic attitude, and pushes his little fur cap onto the back of his head, only to pull it back again a moment later. He strokes his head quietly with one hand and frantically waves the other in all directions and above his head.

There is one story which he tells everyone who will listen to him, regardless of whether they already heard it or not. It is to the effect that he once aspired to the hand of a wealthy merchant's daughter. He saw no other way out of the affair but to go to the merchant and tell him.

"How old are you, little boy?" asked the merchant, after having heard his request.

"I am seventeen. Well! and what of that?" asked the intrepid Isaac.

"What of that? Nothing. That is to say, nothing only this: I would advise you to go home and grow up before you wish to marry anybody."

Two years later, he married someone quite different from the merchant's daughter, without having "grown up" an inch taller.

This is the whole story. But when Isaac tells it, he seems to be challenging his listeners to find another man in the world as clever and as practical as the merchant. He always repeats it in the same words, and in the same tone of voice, accompanied by the same gesticulations and exclamations.

On the evening when Solomon and Berre met at the mill and set out together for the House of Learning, Isaac arrived there about an hour before them. He lit a number of candles which spluttered most disagreeably and gave out the yellowest of yellow lights, and stuck them on the table which was already thickly coated with candle grease. He also filled the little brass candlesticks, the short, flat, spoon-shaped handles of which he fitted into the horizontal niches cut in the wall around the room, at regular intervals from each other. One candle for each man, and two for the Rabbi, one on either side of him, a little above his shoulders when he sat down.

Solomon and Berre were the first to arrive. They were quickly followed by the Rabbi, Jacob, a stout old man, with a round, good-humored countenance, and a pair of round brown eyes which twinkled merrily. He had a number of men at his heels. The day's work was over for everybody in the village. The tailors had put away their needles, the shoemakers their lasts, the carpenters their hammers and planes. No one can work by candle-light, and especially not by the long, resinous pine chips which most of them have to burn; for there are few persons who possess oil lamps. There are a good many who cannot even afford the candles. Everyone goes to bed so soon as the darkness falls. They can do nothing then; and they may as well take full advantage of the daylight by rising with the dawn. But when there is anything to be heard or seen, when, for instance, the Rabbi promises to give a lesson in the House of Learning, they rush quickly to hear him, forgetting that they are tired with the day's work, and that they must rise with the dawn, no matter what time they go to bed. It is the only opportunity they can get of hearing the Talmud expounded at length; for, if they came to the House of Learning to listen to the students in their disputes, Rabbi Jacob sends them away again. He does not like the students' friends to hear them. He thinks it is not good for them to be praised for their abilities. He fears that they will become proud, and consider themselves above learning the simple things, setting store only by the great and the highly complicated in which they can show their skill to the fullest advantage. He is strongly of the opinion that it is incumbent on a pious man to look upon everything that there is in the Holy Books, whether great or small, with exactly the same amount of reverence.

"Go away, my good people," he says when the villagers come to hear the students. You can all come to hear the boys when they are grown up. Some of them will surely become rabbis after me in this village and in the villages around, when they will expound the Talmud specially for you. If you do not hear them, your children will, or your children's children, as God wills. Therefore, go away now, all of you. Good people."

They turn away with disappointment at their hearts; for the Rabbi's words have reminded them that life is short—shorter even than the grass that grows wild in the fields. They are saddened by the reflection, yet they are satisfied, too; for they feel that they have been brought face to face with the vanity of existence; and desire is chilled within them.

The little house was soon packed to the door. It was a difficult matter to find seats for everybody. The beadle fussed about, talking and in a quick voice, and giving innumerable directions here and there.

The Rabbi began to read in low-pitched nasal tones, shaking himself backwards and forwards and from side to side, as if the contortions of his body were an additional testimony to the truth of what was written in the Holy Books. Every now and again he paused to explain what was too subtle for the lay mind. First of all he read the comments and notes which were printed around the text, on the same page but in smaller type. This done, he proceeded to give his own interpretation in a monotonous drone, as he stroked his beard and gazed dreamily from one face to the other around him. He interspersed his remarks with apologies to his audience for his inability to express himself as clearly as he would wish; and also, in some cases, for presuming to express an opinion at all.

Everybody listened most attentively; but at the same time they could not forget that they had risen with the dawn, and that they were worn out with the day's work. Sleep was coming over them, and try as they would, they could not shake it off. Their eyes began to wander off the Rabbi's face, and even his words—the golden words of wisdom—began to fade away in the distance. One by one they laid their arms on the table. Their heads sank lower and lower.

The Rabbi did not feel offended at this; for the same thing happened regularly every evening. But Berre, the son of Hirshe, the Alsotten tailor, being a stranger and thus not knowing that it was an established custom in the village, was full of anger against the men.

"How can you go asleep while the Rabbi is in the middle of reading and explaining?" he shouted aloud, waking up Solomon who had fallen asleep by his side. He stirred a little and said: "Sha-ah, Berre, let us sleep. We are tired."

The Rabbi went on reading. He was accustomed to staying awake far into the night, and so did not feel sleepy in the least. He stretched out his hand and took away the candles from before the sleeping men and extinguished them. He went on reading in the same nasal tone of voice as before. Every time he happened to look up, he met the same eyes fixed on his face. They belonged to a thin sickly man, sallow and careworn and prematurely old, Berre of Alsotten, who had sat rigid and immovable all the evening. In his secret heart the Rabbi felt deeply grateful to the strange young man for the compliment he was thus paying him by forcing himself to keep awake in order to listen to his words. He thought it was a great pity the others had fallen asleep, as much on account of the extra pains he took to make everything clear as because he would have liked them to recognize the honor thus paid him by one who was a total stranger to the village.

But Berre, too, was tired and sleepy. He tried to keep himself awake so that he might reap the full benefit of the good fortunes which Jewish Community (Kehillah) of New York City.

(Communicated.) A well attended meeting of the Advisory Council of the Jewish Community (Kehillah), of New York city, was held in the Educational Alliance on Sunday, June 18. The chairman, Mr. Isaac Allen, presided, and a number of questions pertaining to the work of the Kehillah were discussed by the members present. The secretary, Mr. Joshua Sprayregen, read a report of the last meeting of the Executive Committee. This report referred, among other things, to the formation of the permanent Board of Rabbis which had recently taken tangible shape, and which is now giving attention to the regulation of the matter of Kashruth. At a recent meeting it was decided that the city be divided into forty districts, and that an investigation be made of the conditions that are now prevailing in regard to the sale of kosher meat. A subcommittee of rabbis was appointed for the purpose of arranging a meeting between the complete Vaad and the Poultry Schochtim of New York. The object of the meeting was to work out plans for the proper organization of the Poultry Schochtim looking to a better regulation of Kashruth.

The office of the Kehillah had followed up the matter of the bill introduced into the Legislature by Assemblyman Heydon, with the object of preventing Jewish children from attending any of the mission schools.

The question of providing kosher lunches in the high schools was also a matter taken up by the Kehillah. It was found, upon investigation, that such a variety of food was served, that the Jewish pupils who wished to observe the dietary laws could do so without any difficulty.

The Kehillah recently gave attention to the question of caring for delinquent Jewish girls, and of the treatment of Jewish patients in city hospitals, which formed the subject of a preliminary investigation made by this organization.

Doctor S. Benderly, director of the bureau presented a report which showed that the bureau had made great progress in introducing new methods of instruction, and in establishing relations with all the educational institutions of New York. The text books and charts which he has published aroused much interest, and there is a great demand for them.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

With the completion of the annex for men, several new departments have been thrown open. The swimming pool is very popular with all gymnasium classes and a special swimming pool membership has also been initiated for those who are not actively interested in gymnastics. The dormitories, dining rooms, music room, billiard and meeting rooms, constitute the other features of the annex; and the indications are that they will be busy centres of activities during the coming season.

A large number of young men have already registered for the vacation camp and a jolly crowd is expected there over the Fourth, being representatives from the various Y. M. H. A.'s, also members of the Educational Alliance, Emanuel Brotherhood, New Era Club, and Brooklyn Educational Society and also non-members. The camp, which is conducted jointly by the association, and the Educational Alliance, accommodates 100 young men weekly, and is situated at Surprise Lake in the heart of Fishkill Range, six miles from the Village of Cold Spring on the Hudson.

Following an annual custom, the Y. M. H. A. will conduct patriotic exercises this July 4 at Grant's Tomb. A number of members will march up to the tomb at 2 p. m., when Mr. Morton D. Davidson will deliver a short address and then place a wreath of flowers on our great commander's sarcophagus.

The procession will be led by Brevet Captain Julius Sigelman and Captain Lawrence Lindner. All members are invited to be present.

Young Women's Hebrew Association.

Registration is now going on for the fall classes in stenography, typewriting and bookkeeping. In the future, the day commercial classes will begin on the 15th of September and extend over a period of eight months. This department is equipped with an excellent staff of teachers, and no pains are spared in giving the students thorough preparation for entrance into the business world. Commercial English, spelling and arithmetic are included in the course. Special efforts are made to place the graduates through the Free Employment Bureau. At the end of the second month after graduation, some of the girls have earned from $10 to $12 per week. It is advisable to register as soon as possible, as the classes fill up very quickly.

A large crowd of students and graduates of the commercial classes gathered in the auditorium on Sunday afternoon to participate in a reunion of the alumnae girls. A very enjoyable program was rendered, which consisted of several songs by the members of the present class, a Spanish dance and a play which was written by one of the girls. This was very humorous, and provoked much laughter as it dealt with scenes and personalities connected with the school.

Cheers of enthusiasm greeted the announcement that the new building would soon be a realization.

Third Annual Convention of Young Judaea.

Young Judaea, a league of the national Jewish Youth, held its third annual convention on Saturday evening, and all day Sunday, June 24 and 25. The opening session was held on Saturday night, at the Educational Alliance, with the Rev. Joseph I. Gorfinkle in the chair.

After welcoming the delegates, and the reading of greetings from various out of town councils, the secretary, David Schneeberg, read the annual report of the Executive Committee.

During the year, nineteen new circles affiliated with Young Judaea, bringing the total number of circles affiliating and co-operating with Young Judaea to 135. The report enumerated the various celebrations held for Jewish festivals in each of which one to two thousand children participated.

The report of the delegates from the Massachusetts Junior Zionist Council showed the existence of fifteen junior clubs in and about Boston. The Junior Council of Connecticut reported the existence of thirty-two clubs in the various cities in that State. Reports were also made by delegates of the Junior Councils of Lower Manhattan, Harlem, Brooklyn and Newark, N. J. The Pirchei Zion Organization reported the publication of a Hebrew quarterly, and the Dr. Herzl Zion Organization reported on their large Hebrew performance given at the People's Theatre some weeks ago.

The principal work of the session on Sunday morning was the adoption of changes in the plan of organization. It was furthermore planned to divide the work of the organization into five departments, in charge of five directors, on education, organization, publication, director for Palestinian and Zionist institutions and a managing director of the Young Judaea.

At the Sunday evening session a number of resolutions were passed. The election of officers was then held. The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mr. Solomon Lowenstein; vice-president, Dr. Joseph I. Gorfinkle; secretary, Mr. David Schneeberg; treasurer, Mr. A. Shiman.

Dr. Gorfinkle, by virtue of his office, is the chairman of the Executive Committee. The Advisory Committee is constituted as follows: The officers of the organization, and Prof. Israel Friedlaender, Dr. J. L. Manges, Mr. Samuel Strauss, Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, Dr. S. Benderly, Rev. H. Masliansky, Rev. D. de Sola Pool and Rev. Jacob Kohn.

Roumanian Federations Unite.

The Federation of Roumanian Jews of America, and the Alliance of Roumanian Jews, who have been working in opposition to each other for a period of about four years, united at the annual convention of the Federation of Roumanian Jews of America held at Arlington Hall, on June 18, 1911, and formed themselves into one general organization under the name of the Federation of Roumanian Jews of America.

This result was brought about through the Peace Committee representing the Federation of Roumanian Jews of America, the chairman of which, was Hyman Pouker, Esq., and a Peace Committee of the Alliance of Roumanian Jews, the chairman of which was Dr. P. A. Segelstein. The arbitrator was Rev. Dr. J. L. Magnes, representing the Kehillah.

The following agreements were enacted:

First.—That the convention of the Federation resolve to aid in the establishment and maintenance of the Old Folks' Home in Staten Island, as proposed by the Alliance of Roumanian Jews. The work for the home shall take precedence over the work for the Educational Institution.

Second.—That the convention resolve to urge its constituent societies to aid the Roumanian Hebrew Aid Association as far as in their power lies.

Third.—That the Alliance agrees to aid in the establishment and maintenance of the Educational Institution proposed by the Federation.

Fourth.—The name of the organization shall be the Federation of Roumanian Jews of America.

Waldman.

As has already been stated, the work of the Board of Patronesses consists in making each member responsible for the welfare and improved social condition of a particular family.

Much interest was shown in the results of the movement up to date, and the $2,000 more which were subscribed for special work among the families now under the care of the Board of Patronesses makes a total at present of $5,000 for this purpose.

Among those who made subscriptions were Mrs. J. B. Greenhut, Mrs. Selmar Hess, Mrs. Sol. Friedman and Mrs. Charles A. Wimpfheimer.

Mrs. Sol. Friedman acted as treasurer pro tem, owing to the absence of Mrs. Isaac Friedenheit, who has gone abroad.

A new B'nai B'rith Lodge has been instituted at Lansing, Mich.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Rabbi Joel Blau on the Warpath.

Editor, HEBREW STANDARD:

In your issue of last week Rabbi Joel Blau reached out a longing hand for my scalp.

Rabbi Joel Blau feels that my address, three weeks ago, on Zionism is, "If correctly reported," in your issue of the 16th inst., so much this, that and the other that he "ought hardly to refer to it."

Nevertheless, Rabbi Joel Blau proceeds to refer to it in a brief onslaught of over a thousand words and refers to it "hardly" (very hardly) and hotly.

Rabbi Joel Blau, himself a preacher, might know that a sermon which occupied over half an hour in delivery could scarcely be "correctly reported" in the few inches of space you could allot to it. But, brief as was the resume furnished by the excellent honorary secretary of our congregation, it contained the gist of my main contention.

(En passant, the secretary in question—a gentleman of no mean attainments and literary ability—possesses to a remarkable degree one faculty which Rabbi Joel Blau may well envy him: that of lucid condensation.) As I always preach extemporaneously the reporter has to trust to his memory. In this instance a very possible slip of memory has led to a somewhat incorrect reading of what my fantastic friend and assailant dubs my meteorologically fanciful exegesis—whatever he may mean by that.

Rabbi Joel Blau is vehement, incoherent, and aggressive in his argument. It is therefore rather difficult to follow the current of this turbid rush of turgid illogicalities which sweeps him out of his depth. There is much nonsense about universalism and particularism which I confess myself unwilling to analyze.

But let me ask it is quite decent that Rabbi (Cincinnati-College-Rabbi) Joel Blau should so slightly refer to "our Reform brethren" and their "shallow cosmopolitanism?" Everybody who has the advantage of an acquaintance with Rabbi Joel Blau must concede that he is an accomplished Hebraist. He will know—few better than he—that there is much force and value in the Talmudic direction: "Cast no clod into the well from which thou drankest water."

Now if Rabbi Joel Blau will permit me to brush aside all in his argument, that is, to use the well-known legal phrase, "incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial," there remains due to him a simple statement of the thesis I maintained.

1. I hold that "Political Zionism" is a mischievous, impracticable scheme—the idle phantasy of a visionary, who was Jewish only by descent.

2. I hold that that intense inward yearning inseparable from the real Jewish consciousness to which the learned Rabbi refers and which Dr. H. Pereira Mendes aptly terms "Spiritual Zionism" is the blessed active principle of survival and growth in Judaism.

3. I hold that this is not only true to-day, but has been true for twenty-five centuries. These opposing tendencies—the narrow local pride which would stifle Judaism and the broad humanitarian feeling which keeps it vigorous—my critic apparently wants to cherish side by side. I do not. I want God's vital spark in civilization—which I call Judaism—to be guarded and fanned into a bright light for the world.

One last word. Rabbi Joel Blau's concluding paragraph is infused with an intolerant and dictatorial spirit which is very unbecoming in a rabbi.

A Student's Remarkable Achievement.

Editor, HEBREW STANDARD:

At the commencement exercises held at Clark University, Worcester, Mass., on June 15, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy (Summa Cum Laude) was awarded to Mr. Solomon Lefchetz, a co-religionist. Before coming to the United States some three years ago, Mr. Lefchetz studied at a university in France. Arriving here he secured work in Pittsburg, Pa., where he met with a most unfortunate accident—an explosion, which caused the loss of both of his hands. Discouraged for a while, but soon plucking up courage, he determined with the help of the Almighty to make the best of it. With artificial hands, he entered at Clark University and what he did was this: In just one year he completed a course which it takes the vast majority three years to finish and on top of this he received the highest honor within the gift of the university, that of Ph. D. (Summa Cum Laude), granted for the first time since the establishment of Clark University in 1887, and then to a Jew, and to what a Jew. Let us give honor to him to whom honor is due.

Respectfully yours,
SAMUEL W. HIRSCH.

Mr. Rabiner picked his talent almost entirely from among the members of the league and furnished a surprisingly interesting and pleasant entertainment to the three hundred people who were present.

Congressman Wilson on the Passport Question.

The following letter is self-explanatory: HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.

Washington, D. C., June 21, 1911. Hon. Joseph Goldstein, 138 Chester Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—Your communication bearing date of June 10, 1911, is received. In answer I desire to state to you that the very sentiments which are contained in your letter are my own sentiments, and I have always believed that citizens of the United States should have the privilege of going into any country and should have a passport that would be recognized by any country, irrespective of creed, race or religion of the holder. I was a member of the Fifty-sixth, Fifty-seventh and Fifty-eighth Congresses, and supported all of the Gold-fogle resolutions bearing upon this passport question with Russia. In July, 1902, myself, Mr. Sulzer, Mr. Ryan and Mr. Simon Wolf accompanied Mr. Goldfogle to President Roosevelt and strongly requested him to take executive action and require Russia to recognize her treaty obligations or enter into new treaty stipulations to uniformly recognize the passport. This interview was referred to in a speech of Judge Goldfogle in the House of Representatives, April 4, 1904, Fifty-eighth Congress, second session.

I believe that not only in my own district, but throughout the country generally my record concerning this important matter is well understood, as it should be, because I have always given it conscientious support and believed that the recognition should be given. You will see by the enclosed joint resolution on April 4, 1911, the first day of the present session, Congressmen Goldfogle and Harrison introduced the resolution now pending for the abrogation of the treaty with Russia. That resolution will not be acted upon until the regular session next winter. I expect to do my duty and take part with Mr. Goldfogle, as we have always considered that he had the right to take the leadership in this important matter, and I expect to be of as much assistance to him as possible.

Yours very truly, F. E. WILSON, M. C. Fourth N. Y. District.

Jewish Ministers in Convention—Dr. Adler Regrets Absence of Leading Provincial Rabbis — Unanimous Adoption of Arbitration Resolution — Ritual Murder Lie Denounced—Plea for Anglo-Jewish Authorized Version of the Bible—Demand for a Council to Lighten the Labors of Chief Rabbi—Jewish Attitude Toward Conversionists—Problems of Anglicization.

London, June 16, 1911.
The long anticipated second annual convention of Jewish ministers opened on June 12 in London in the presence of a large gathering of delegates from all over the country. In his opening address the chief Rabbi, Dr. Adler, said that of all the questions that would claim their attention the most momentous undoubtedly was that of Sabbath observance in view of the Shop Hours bill now before Parliament. Should the bill be passed in the form proposed by the Grand Committee, the gravest hardship would be inflicted on their poorer brethren, and the temptation to violate the sanctity of the Sabbath would become acute. The Board of Deputies, aided by some members of Parliament, was putting forth its most strenuous efforts to amend the measure. He hoped also that facilities for Sabbath observance by Jews might be secured in the Civil Service, municipal institutions and other public bodies. Happily, the offices of Postmaster-General and secretary to the postoffice were each filled by a brother in the faith. Might they not anticipate that it would be possible to enter the post-office and to compensate for absence on the Saturday by giving such Sunday work as the general and branch post-offices demanded.

He regretted the absence of the leading rabbis of provincial congregations, for it was sincerely desired that all sections of Jewry be knitted together in the bonds of brotherhood; there must not prevail any unworthy suspicion or any craven isolation. Of all the papers to be read very important was that bearing upon the future government of the community. A measure of decentralization had become requisite. The Jewish population of the United Kingdom had greatly expanded. New congregations were continually springing up, needing places of worship and organization for religious instructions. A local Beth Din (House of Judgment) should be established in connection with each district, consisting of qualified rabbis and numbering able and sympathetic ministers among its assessors. The superannuation of ministers and the convocation of a synod were the other subjects referred to by Dr. Adler.

The Rev. Morris Joseph (London) submitted a resolution of the Standing Committee, namely: "That the conference hereby expresses its profound sympathy with the movement, aiming at the substitution of arbitration for war as a method of settling international disputes and pledges itself to promote that movement by every means in its power." The motion was adopted with enthusiasm.

On the proposition of the chief rabbi, it was unanimously resolved, "That the Jewish rabbis and ministers of the United Kingdom, in conference assembled, have learned with profound concern that the fable of ritual murder has been recently revived in Russia. They beg to tender the assurance of their deep sympathy to their brethren who dwell in the dominion of the Tsar. They entertain the fervent hope that all men of humanity, education and influence in that country will put forth their utmost efforts to make it known that these blood accusations constitute a foul and unfounded slander, an allegation the falsehood of which has been proclaimed not only by Jews, but also fully acknowledged by eminent heads of the church and proved by the most learned Christian scholars."

At the afternoon session in a paper entitled "A Plan for an Anglo-Jewish Authorized Version of the Bible, with Commentary," the Rev. J. Abelson asked whether it was not a shameful anomaly that with all the vaunted achievements of their co-religionists in literature and science they still had to go to the non-Jew for the key which unlocked the spring of their own religious teachings. It was admitted that the authorized and revised versions reached a high level of correction and were beyond reproach as regarded style and general literary flavor, but praise either version as much as they liked it was not really their Bible, but the Bible of the English church, and no Jew was among the translators. It could be made a truer reflection of Jewish belief and practice.

In an able paper the Rev. J. F. Stern dealt with the future religious government of the community, urging the formation of a council or consistory to help the chief rabbi at arriving at solutions on the many important subjects referred to him.

Such a council has long been demanded, and its establishment would satisfy one of the most pressing needs of Anglo-Jewry.

On the second day a paper on "The Jewish Attitude Toward Conversionists" was read by the Rev. Dr. Salis Daiches. He argued that in trying to make converts among the Jews those responsible for the work ought to consider that while they put a premium on a Jew's disloyalty to the ancient faith for which his fathers had bled and to which he was unconsciously tied by the most sacred of ties, their success could only go as far as the destruction of any faith that was left in him, but it could seldom, if ever, be the means of providing him with a new faith. Moreover the endeavor to win the good will of those to be converted by putting them under an obligation or by impressing them with a display of kindness and charity could only induce the candidates for conversion to ignore the truth, to disregard the promptings of their hearts and to embrace hypocrisy and lip service. They all knew how much such methods were abhorred by Englishmen in all other spheres of human thought and activity. They knew what the British citizen and British law thought of the men who tried to convince his fellowmen of the truth and soundness of his political views by offering them material aid and monetary assistance.

Even when it was impossible to prove or to assert that a display of generosity and the rendering of material aid had in any way influenced a British citizen in exercising his franchise, the fact alone of his having benefited by the kindness of a candidate for Parliament, or having been assisted by his agents, was sufficient to justify a charge of corruption and bribery and to annul the political verdict of a constituency. If purity of motive and integrity of action were such indispensable factors in the political life of a nation, how much more ought that to be the case in the religious life of a community or an individual, and how much more ought every action on the part of those who were endeavoring to inculcate new religious doctrines and tenets into their fellowmen to be free from anything that savored of bribery and looked like corruption? Ought not their religious life to be at least as pure as their political and social life? Why was there one law for the kidnapping of the body of a child and another for the kidnapping of its soul? Did not parents whose children were enticed to abandon their religion or to join in another faith sustain a greater loss than those whose children were stolen from them bodily and were for a time taken out of their control? He went on to show that a very large sum of money was spent for promoting Christianity among the Jews, and suggested that an incomparably larger amount of good could be done if that money was spent for the thousands of poor, ignorant and irreligious people who nominally professed the Christian faith. "A Jewish organization," he proceeded, "ought to be formed with the avowed object of frustrating and counteracting the conversionist activity among Jews. The creation of such a body seems long overdue. The Jewish community can no longer face such a passionate activity with folded arms and allow the conversionist work to go on without check or control. Preventive action is urgently necessary."

The Rev. D. Wasserzug, dealing with "Methods of Dealing with Conversionist Activities," said that while the motives which inspired Christian missionary effort were beyond criticism the methods employed were not; many of them were, indeed, questionable. It was no doubt justifiable from the Christian standpoint to endeavor to persuade Jews of the superior beauty of their faith, but it was not justifiable from any standpoint—either of religion or of morality—to tempt a class of people whose spirit had been debased by poverty and persecution to sell their religion. It was not justifiable from any standpoint to entice suffering men and women to seek to restore their physical health at the expense of their spiritual health, or to lure children from the care of their parents by ministering to their craving for sensation or desire for recreation. The speaker suggested that the best way to combat the conversionist machinations was to appeal to Caesar direct—the supporters of the missions, the great majority of whom were totally ignorant of the means which were employed to compass their ends.

A discussion followed and resolutions were passed expressing regret and concern at the manner in which the workers in British missionary societies endeavored to make converts to Christianity from among poor and destitute members of the Jewish faith, and requesting truly religious Christians who supported the conversionist activity among Jews to recognize that the highest principles of true religion and morality were in no way furthered, but were violated by the methods of their agents.

The conference concluded on June 14, and during the concluding sessions several interesting topics were raised. The Rev. H. S. Lewis read a paper on "The Public Elementary School as a Centre of a Jewish Minister's Social Work." He said it was difficult for Jewish ministers to copy the parochial system which was in vogue in the Anglican Church. He suggested that by becoming managers of elementary schools the Jewish clergy could get into contact with a larger number of Jewish children and their families, thereby bringing themselves into touch with many varieties of social work.

The Rev. G. Prince expressed disagreement with Mr. Lewis in regard to a matter he had introduced as to house-to-house visitation. He mentioned that he with a colleague had called on a Joseph Klein, who turned out to be a Roman Catholic. But Mr. Klein had referred them to a man named Christian, across the road, who turned out to be a Jew.

The Rev. S. Levy (London) in dealing with "The Problems of Anglicization," said there were two and a half millions, or one-fourth of the Jewish population of the world, anxious to make their homes in English-speaking countries and enjoy religious freedom. Judaism showed its reality and vitality by producing a higher percentage of virtue and a lower percentage of vice than any other religious denomination. The decrease in general alien crime was reflected in a decrease in Jewish crime. Yiddish was a waning language in this country. At the recent census it was found to be quite unnecessary to institute a house-to-house visitation to help their foreign brethren to fill up their forms. In ten years they would have to minister to congregations who had been taught in English schools and whose bent of mind was English. Even in Russia the fountain of Yiddish was beginning to dry at its source. They must foster a feeling of fellowship between the English speaking and the Yiddish-speaking sections of the community and combine to discourage the tactics of the few extremists on both sides—the English Jew with an anti-foreign prejudice and the foreign Jew with an anti-English bias. Many difficulties would vanish if both sides would practice the virtue of conciliation and cultivate a saving sense of humor. The religion of the Jew must be the only mark of difference from his neighbor.

In the discussion, the Rev. A. Feldman said they must see that in the course of Anglicization Yiddish should not be forgotten.

Subscribers leaving the city may have their papers sent to their country address by giving notice to this office. Please send city as well as country address.

The Evening Mail, of this city, is rendering a distinct service to the Jewish cause by publishing Creelman's excellent articles on the Russian passport question.

Apparently Sir Rufus Isaacs, the present Attorney-General of Great Britain, was the only Jew, prominent in the community, who received a coronation honor. What has become of all the prospective peers whom the Anglo-Jewish press referred to, in such guarded and veiled language, a few weeks ago?

Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, accompanied by his wife and two sons, sailed for Europe on Tuesday in the steamship Rotterdam. The doctor, while improved in health, has been given a long vacation by his congregation, so that his full activity may be restored to him. The good wishes and prayers to the Almighty of many thousands are with him.

It is no surprise to read that Russia is continuing her fiendish policy of repressing, persecuting and expelling her Jews this spring. So long as the present government of that country continues to exist, so long as the Czar and his ministers are privileged to carry on their apology of ruling by the nations of the world, just so long our brethren in the Russian Empire will suffer. Can the world not be ridded of this monstrous outrage on government? "May it be speedily accomplished in our days!"

Rabbi Samuel Schulman will very likely be chosen as president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis at the "annual picnic" next week. The choice is an excellent one, for Rabbi Schulman has learning. In spite of his faults—and what man is free of defects—Rabbi Schulman can never be accused of lack of learning in Jewish fields. The pity of it is that his talents are not devoted to the upholding of traditional Judaism. He would have a glorious opportunity in orthodoxy, better than any now open to him, to shine before his fellow men.

The B'nai B'rith News for June is on the warpath against a silly statement in an absurd article in The Daily National Hotel Reporter that Jews are looked upon as poor-paying guests by the majority of the hotel keepers in this country. It publishes the opinions of the proprietors of most of the leading hostleries in the great cities of the country in disproof of the assertion. Thus The B'nai B'rith News dignifies a contemptible libel by bringing all its batteries of fire against it. There are a number of attacks upon our people which we can well afford to overlook. They do not spell the truth and none who knows the Jews of this country believes them for a minute.

We are curious to know what has become of that bill, designed to give observant orthodox Jews in this State the opportunity of attending to their daily vocations on Sunday, which was introduced into the Assembly early in the present legislative session? If we mistake not, the measure is in committee and has had the advantage (or disadvantage) of a public hearing for the benefit of its advocates and opponents. Nothing seems to have been heard of it at all, and, while our lawmakers at Albany have certainly been busily occupied with their official duties for some months now, we think a few minutes could have been spared for the advancement of such a salutary measure as this.

The letter from Congressman Wilson, of Brooklyn, which we give in another place in this issue, deserves wide dissemination. Many of our people do not know, or knowing care not to remember, that Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle, that steady and vigorous champion of the cause of his co-religionists in the halls of the national legislature, has been advocating the abrogation of the present treaty of 1832 with Russia for many years. His joint resolution on the subject of the passport became law on March 4, 1909. In its first form it provided for the termination of this treaty, but, as finally signed by the President, that feature had been removed by amendment. Congressman Goldfogle has been active on this matter at this special session of Congress, and it may be well to remind our readers in this connection that on April 4 of this year, the first day of this session, he and Representative Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, introduced a resolution with the same object in view.

FATUOUS.

WE sincerely trust there is no foundation of fact in the newspaper report that the other night the orthodox Jewish congregation of Washington D. C., indorsed President Taft for renomination for his present high office next year.

President Taft for his public utterances and professions, especially for his splendid action in the recent Bloom case, deserves well of American Jews. But our gratitude ought not to make us confound our duty as American citizens with our sense of gratitude as Jews. We remember our friends and those who act in such a manner as to wish us well. This should not be taken to mean, however, that because President Taft has shown himself to be a sincere friend of our people we should immediately rush in and make him "our" candidate and standard-bearer for 1912.

Our remarks apply to any association or body of Jews and, in a heightened sense, to Jewish congregations. A body of Jews united for religious worship should be the very last to mingle politics with religion. An orthodox or a reformed Jewish congregation should never, through the medium of congregational action, attempt to indorse candidates for political office in this or any other country.

The newspaper report to which we have referred states that Rabbis M. Z. Margolies, of this city, and B. L. Levinthal, of Philadelphia, attended the meeting in question and, by inference at least, lent their support to the action then and there taken. We hope for the fair name of these learned gentlemen and for the honor of Jewry at large that both the rabbis have been quite misrepresented. It is not the custom of rabbis, especially not those whose theology is in accord with our traditions, to dabble in matters political. The minister cannot play the politician's role with any degree of success.

Let the Jews of the United States, no matter how transcendent the services of President Taft to our cause have been, take heed of this bruited action of the Washington congregation! We pray them not to follow it! Action of this sort would injure our cause far more than it would help it. It would rob the intervention of our constituted authorities in matters like the recent Bloom case of that very quality which most commends it—disinterestedness and love of innate justice.

A JEWISH GOVERNOR, PERHAPS.

THERE is talk that Harry Cutler, of Providence, may receive the Republican nomination for the office of Governor of the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations, to give the ancient title in full, this year. This is an interesting rumor and we hope it will be realized in fact, for in Rhode Island the Republican nomination for any office is, as a rule, equivalent to an election.

Harry Cutler is not a native of this country; he came here from Russia at a very tender age, and has grown up to be a full-fledged adopted son of the Republic, proud of his Judaism and his citizenship and sternly anxious to do all that duty requires from a citizen of the State. He is a prosperous merchant of the most important city in Rhode Island, a militia officer of prominence and a member of the present Legislature of the State.

From the Jewish side his activity and influence have been no less remarkable. He has been president of District Grand Lodge No. 1 of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, the author of an early legislative resolution on the subject of the American passport in Russia and ever ready to help any good cause and movement among his fellow-Jews.

If Mr. Cutler becomes the standard-bearer of his party in the little New England State this fall, and if he succeeds in securing a majority of the suffrages of the voters at the polls, it will be the first time in Rhode Island, where the Jew is not objected to because of his faith, but largely because of his foreign origin, that one of our co-religionists will sit in the Governor's chair.

We hope that Harry Cutler's name will be that of the next Governor of Rhode Island. His friends' ambition for him is a most laudable one, and we wish them strength and power in the work upon which they have entered.

DR. MACARTHUR'S OPPORTUNITY.

WE LEARN that Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur will soon sail for Europe, and while there he will visit both the Pope of Rome and the Russian Tsar; that, moreover, he will advise them both that this is not the fifteenth but the twentieth century, and that their "backwoods" policy is viewed askance, if not with horror, by the civilized world. Dr. MacArthur may reach the head of the Romanoffs, as his passport can be vised by the Russian consul over here with impunity, since he can claim no kinship with our Jewish race.

But Dr. MacArthur is an enlightened, learned and liberal clergyman; he is known, too, to possess that thing so painfully lacking in many, and called "backbone." He surely will not miss the opportunity to tell the even before the fifteenth century Tsar that the latter's treatment of the Jews, whether they be his unfortunate subjects, or full-fledged American citizens, is an outrage upon humanity, and that the ruler (who, by-the-by, claims, as all of them do, to be Divinely appointed) who continues such a policy opposed to everything Divinely ordained and humanely practiced, does an offense which "smells to heaven for vengeance."

Dr. MacArthur has the chance to tell this. Will he let it pass by? We hope not.

JEWISH INDIVIDUALISM.

רב-לכם כי כל-העדה כלם קדשים ובתוכם ובתוכם ד' ומדוע תתנשאו על-קהל ד' :

"Ye take too much upon yourselves, seeing that all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them: wherefore lift ye up yourselves above the Congregation of the Lord?" (Num. xvi: 3.)

בקר וידע ד' את-אשר-לו ואתהקדוש והקריב אליו ואת אשר יבחרבו יקריב אליו :

"Even to-morrow the Lord will show who are his and who is holy; and he will cause him to come near unto him; even him whom he hath chosen will he cause to come near unto him." (Ibid, verse 5.)

YE ought to acknowledge occasionally that, the Gentile politician notwithstanding, we are possessed of not a few grievous faults. One of our worst traits, which has brought us so often to grief in our national life, is our extreme individualism. We are not easily amenable to being led or governed by a leader of our own race. We lack the ability of co-ordinating and subordinating individual forces with and to the powers of a leader. Hence our finest attempts at organizing ourselves into homogeneous bodies have always resulted in failure—much to our undoing.

The classic example of Jewish individualism and its attendant disaster will always be furnished by the story of the insubordination of Korah and his party, as told in this week's Sidrah. I have chosen the above texts, for they contain, respectively, the arguments for and against this exaggerated individualism. Korah's argument in support of his refusal to submit to the leadership of Moses and Aaron was: "All the Congregation are holy!" That is to say, it is the old mistaken notion of those who believe that Democracy extends beyond the voting booths; that since "all men are born equal," they necessarily remain equal; that, consequently, there can be no distinction, created by peculiar fitness and higher attainments, between one man and another. Moses' answer to this was that leadership is divinely appointed. There may be an equality of rights; there can be no equality of endowments. God having endowed one man with qualities of heart, mind and soul that render him superior to his fellows and fit him to guide them for their good, has Himself established the claims of benevolent authority by virtue of which this man is entitled to the consideration due to a leader among men.

Midrash (a constant inspiration to such as know how to read it aright, though much neglected by our "modern" preachers) further illustrates this thought in the following manner. Our rabbis acutely remark on the word "boker," used in our text to express the idea of "to-morrow" instead of the more usual "mochor." Now, "boker" means the morning, the break of day. Based upon this nicety of expression, is their following very remarkable saying:

א-ל משה נבולות חלק הקב"ה בעולמו: יכולים אתם לערב יום ולילה? כשם שהבריל בין האור ובין החשך בשביל תשישו של עולם כך הבריל אהרן: אם יכולים אתם לערב אותה הברילה בין האור ובין החשך אתם יכולים לבטל את זו :

"Moses said unto them, God hath set up sharp boundary lines within the domain of nature. Could you cause the night to encroach upon the day? Just as He hath separated light from darkness, and this for the welfare of the world, even so hath He set Aaron apart from his fellows. Not until you can obliterate the distinction between light and darkness can you set at naught this distinction between the leader and the led."

equality. There is light and there is darkness, there is the equality. There is light and there is darkness, there is the dawn and there is the sunset. High above the valley is the tapering mountain-peak; towering above the mighty ocean are the awesome waves; exalted above the field and meadow are the heavens that shed their light upon them. These differences, moreover, serve the good of the world; they are part and parcel of the "tashmisho shel olam"—the economy of nature; and their abolition would entail great harm. What is true of the world of nature is true of the world of man. Here, too, necessary lines of demarkation exist—for the good of mankind. There are men who walk in darkness; and there are men who are like "boker"—who, like the dawn, shine upon the horizon of human life. These are the born, the divinely appointed, leaders who shed the light of their soul far and wide, even into the coming centuries. Paying homage to such leadership helps to spread the light whose reflector it is; disregarding the claims of such leadership means obscuring this light, means placing before it opaque substances.

How often we have brought distress upon ourselves by just such korahitic policy of obscuring the light of our leaders, history tells. The Staff of Aaron, sublime symbol of God-inspired leadership—leadership that blossoms into the fairest flowers of thought and ripens into the finest fruition of action—we have oft failed to place into the inner sanctuary of Jewish life. We have preferred each his individual staff. We have allowed individualism to run riot with us. The individual staves, bare of flowers, barren of fruit, have become our national scourge; and therefore is our sanctuary desolate—therefore is our life a howling waste. RABBI JOEL BLAU.

Rabbi Harry H. Mayer, of Kansas City, was wise in moving the erstwhile Young Men's Hebrew Democratic Club of that place to change its name to the Progressive Democratic Club. He was right in utterly condemning the connection of "Hebrew" with "Democratic." We do not know whether Rabbi Mayer was affected by our campaign against hybrid organizations of this ilk or not; at all events we rejoice to see the new spirit that has come over some of our Jewish politicians.

NEW YORK

Collegians Forscoth!

IF it be an evidence of enlightenment to deny one's religion, or, at least, to scoff at Jewish laws, about nine-tenths of last week's graduates of the College of the City of New York can claim the palm. At the coronation of a British monarch the presence of a few Jewish nobles is respectfully noticed in a banquet so prepared that all may partake thereof. At home President Tatt and his wife, at the celebration of their silver wedding last week, provided such refreshments in the White House that the most orthodox of Jews might partake of without scruple.

But these young know-all's of the City College are "enlightened" forsooth; their "classical" knowledge has enabled them to discount Moses and his laws; hence, they sat down to a dinner where viands proclaimed as abominations were served and of which they partook with gusto. If these youths, now budding into manhood, are the kind to represent Jewry in America, alack the day! The self-respecting Gentile always does, and always will, despise the weak-kneed invertebrate craven, who, though a Jew, looks low on his lineage and wants—if it were not for his marked visage—to make apology for his kindred and his faith. Shame on such false Jews.

We are asked, through the medium of The American Israelite, admitting our superior qualification in this respect, to right an insult to American manhood. It seems that a private boarding house on West 124th street, in this city, makes known in its advertisements that Jews are not accommodated there. The time when this sort of thing was common is fast disappearing, but there are still a few newspapers which admit advertisements with the objectionable clause in them to their columns. The conductor of a private boarding house may have a right, questionable though it be, to decline to accommodate Jews. A journal of the age and standing of The Atlanta Constitution, containing the present insult to American manhood, ought to be censorious in, and surely above, accepting such statements for its publicity section.

Children at Summer Resorts.

If one will take but a look into the hotels and boarding houses at the summer resorts he will be convinced that there need be no fear for the population of the future. In many of the houses the children seem to be masters of the situation. They are on hand in full numbers; they own the parlors, the piazzas, the little shady nooks, and nearly every available place in the vicinity of the house to which one would look for quiet and comfort. They tyrannize over the hammocks and prefer those which belong to mamas other than their own; that is to say, that if possession gives ownership, then the title is complete in the youngsters.

But children will be children, and he or she must be hard-hearted indeed who begrudges them the fun and sport adapted to their youth. But there are children, and there are children. Who is there who is not delighted to watch the play and antics of well-behaved youngsters?

But all youngsters are not well behaved, and it is wrong to blame them for their shortcomings; that should be charged up against their parents or their legitimate guardians.

Some parents—yes, a great many of them—turn the hotel piazzas, the diningroom and the lawns into training schools and nurseries. Neglecting to pay a proper attention to their manners and ways at home, they expect their offspring to be au fait in all the proprieties in public; but they are not. Then comes the public chastisement. The children are scolded, and often receive corporal punishment before an admiring audience. "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." If parents will pay more attention to the bringing up of their children at home they will save themselves the mortification which they are sure to reap abroad.

Besides, parents have no right to use the public piazzas and dining-room of the hotel for schools of correction for their unruly children. People who go to the country for the summer have some rights and do not bargain for this. They have a right to expect at least a fair share of peace, as even the best behaved children will romp and disturb the total quietude of the best resort, but Buy Your— against these and their method of enjoyment no sensible person will object. As I have noted, it is against the yelling of mothers, at their misbehaved youngsters, and the turning of every public place in the country into a school of discipline that people do, and have a right to rebel.

I love to see well-bred children. Who doesn't? Any one can pick them out, and then they stand out like nuggets of gold in their drossy surroundings. I repeat that parents should look after the deportment of their children at home, and not make themselves nuisances by leaving this important part of their duties until they reach the school of real life in the country resorts.

L'AIGLON.

Odessa has been startled by the news that the famous M. Pelecan, General Tolmatcheff's assistant and the leader of the anti-Semites of the Municipality, failed this year to secure his election on the Executive of the Municipality. His defeat will greatly endanger his office of comptroller of the Jewish communal funds, which he recently acquired with the aid of the Prefect.

The Tunis Zionist Association, founded at the beginning of this year, consists entirely of native Arabic-speaking Jews, and has displayed considerable activity. The society has its own premises in which the members meet every evening for lectures and discussion on Zionism and general Jewish subjects. A reading room has also been fitted up, in which Hebrew, Arab and French newspapers are kept and a Jewish library is also shortly to be added.

perintendent Simon Abramson presided. The Sunday school is one of the oldest and largest of the Jewish Sunday schools in this borough. The officers and faculty are as follows: Harry G. Anderson, superintendent; Simon Abramson, assistant superintendent; Rev. Israel Goldfarb, principal; S. Rose Hartman, treasurer; Sadye Eckert, secretary; Robert Barko, assistant secretary; Eli Shapiro, financial secretary; William Kohen, registrar; Harry Curley, assistant registrar.

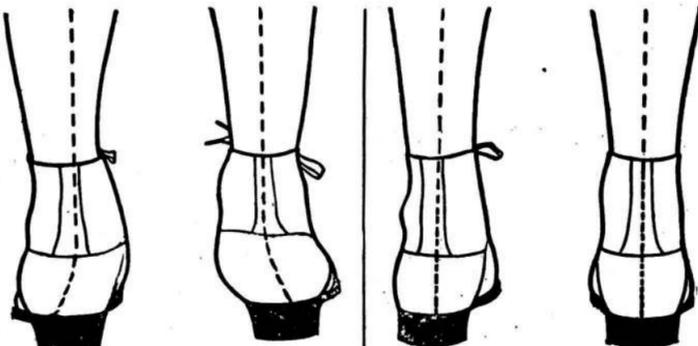

Temple Beth Sholom, Bensonhurst.

Sunday was a happy day for the tots as well as the older pupils of the Free Religious School of the Temple Beth Sholom, for their parents and friends had turned out in goodly numbers that afternoon to attend the closing exercises of the school. After the officers of the congregation and the sisterhood as well as the chairman of the School Board had complied with the request of Rabbi Goldstein to take seats on the platform, the formal exercises opened with a prayer (original) by Adolph Greenhoot, followed by the singing of the Sh'ma by the kindergarten class; a Hymn by the school choir; address by the chairman of the School Board, Eli S. Schreier; Twenty-third Psalm, Anna Berlin; recitations by Marian Nelke and Joseph Lachman; song by Charlotte Nelke; quotations by Marian Lachman, Beatrice Schreier, Thelma Meister, Cecile Cowen, Anna Tuckler, Dorothy Maier, Beatrice Stahl, Muriel Pinover, and Ralph Marks; addresses by President Ehrlich; violin solo, Leonore Ehrlich; "The Children's Hour," Sylvia Popper; "Little Orphan Anna," Ruth Goldstein; song, Gertrude Alexander; "Captain, My Captain," Mark Goldstein; "What the Choir Sang About the Bonnet," Louise Zemansky; song by the choir; address by Rabbi Goldstein; report of the Guild, read by Robert Cowen.

At this part of the programme Mrs. Bachenheimer on behalf of the sisterhood, presented each of the teachers, including Mr. Abraham and Rabbi Goldstein, a souvenir of appreciation. This was followed by the distribution of prizes. The exercises concluded with the singing of America by the entire assemblage, and the Benediction by Rabbi Goldstein, everybody going away with the feeling of having spent an enjoyable afternoon.

Among the novel features recently introduced in the sisterhood is a series of so-called dollar-and-a-quarter luncheons, the cost of the entire luncheon for ten persons being limited to that amount, each of the invited guests paying a specified charge which goes into the treasury of the sisterhood. On Tuesday of last week, the president, Mrs. P. M. Goodhart, gave such a luncheon for fifteen persons, which was as successful as any of its predecessors, and served as a happy precursor of the enthusiastic meeting which followed. At this meeting the final arrangements for the fresco whist were completed. Wednesday, July 12, was selected as the date for the outing to be given to the pupils of the Religious School, and a committee was appointed to co-operate with the one of the Beth Sholom League.

 *SOLOM J. LIEBESKIND, Grand Master; ABRAHAM HAFER, Grand Secretary; A. E. KARLESEN, Grand Treasurer.

The annual entertainment, reunion and summernight's festival of District No. 1 took place on Wednesday, June 21, 1911, at Manhattan Casino. It was one of the largest ever held by the district, and it is expected that about $2,000 will be realized. The talent was highly appreciated by those present, and the rendering of the selections by the band of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society induced the order to send the following letter to the society:

To the President and Board of Directors of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society.

Gentlemen: We feel that it will be of interest to you to know that the picnic and midsummernights festival of the Independent Order Free Sons of Israel, held on June 21, proved to be the most successful undertaking of this character held under the auspices of our institution. One of the many forces which operated towards the gratifying outcome of our affair was the aggregation of players known so widely and favorably as the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society Band, who you so kindly permitted to play at our function.

We are very happy to acquaint you that the talent of the organization was conspicuously displayed and thoroughly enjoyed by a huge audience.

With many thanks for your kindness in this direction and assurance of our appreciation, remain,

Very respectfully yours,
 SOLOM J. LIEBESKIND,
 Grand Master.

ABRAHAM HAFER,
 Grand Secretary.
 The dance music was furnished by I. Wessel, a member of Levy Lodge No. 5. The proceeds will be distributed to the various charitable institutions of the city irrespective of creed. Brother Gus Paul was chairman of the Arrangement Committee and to him credit is due for the success of the affair.

New Haven Lodge, No. 46, initiated two candidates in the $1,000 class at its last meeting, and it is gratifying to note the enthusiasm which prevails among the members for the interest of the order at large.

Judith Lodge, No. 33, of Hartford, Conn., under the leadership of Moritz Wieder, initiated seven at the last meeting and it is sincerely hoped that the efforts in that direction will continue for some time to come.

We have learned that all the amendments sent to the lodges recently have been defeated with the exception of holding the next convention of the Grand Lodge at Rochester. Notices will be issued in due time apprising the members as to the exact day.

Levy Lodge, No. 5, at their next meeting to be held on July 19 except to initiate four candidates and the members of the order are invited to be present to witness the work of the team.

Grand Master M. S. Stern, accompanied by the Executive Committee, paid an official visit on Monday evening to Mt. Vernon Lodge, No. 71. A large gathering was present, many speeches were made and Brother Jacobs, while commencing late finished early in the morning. A collation which was enjoyed by all present followed.

Palestine Lodge, No. 36, at its last meeting on June 22 was addressed by Brother Henry Lichtig, who spoke on Freeonism and told the members that to-day the order is the strongest institution in the city and that it has a fund of $1,090,000.

Isaacher Lodge, No. 7, is working harmoniously and Brother Morris Kraus has received the thanks of the Grand Master for his prompt attention in investigating mortgages, etc. He is one of the most valued members of the Endowment Committee and no doubt his lodge will send him to the next convention at Rochester, as a delegate.

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Neighbors.

Dear Children:

WE will now consider the ethical teachings of Nitai the Arbelite, who said, "Withdraw from an evil neighbor and associate not with the wicked, neither flatter thyself to escape punishment."

The story that is told us by this week's Sedrah which is called Korah is a striking example of the necessity to be ever mindful of the above maxims.

Korah was a very rich man of the tribe of Levi. Dathan and Abiram, the sons of Eliab, and On, the son of Peleth, of the tribe of Reuben, were his neighbors.

He was very jealous of Moses and Aaron because all the Jews honored them, and especially angry at their choice of Elizaphaw, the son of Uzziel, as the prince of the division of the families of Kehath. "I belong to the older branch," said he, "and I ought to be the prince, not Elizaphaw of the younger branch of the family."

Woe to the wicked and woe to his neighbor! If Dathan and Abiram would have been wise enough to withdraw from Korah, their evil neighbor, when he began to quarrel with Moses they would not have been swallowed up by the earth as Korah was, but they did not have sense enough to keep away from him. But there was one man who was blessed with a good wife, and it was she who saved him from the destruction that would have overtaken him together with his bad neighbor Korah. This man was On, the son of Peleth. He came home and said to his wife, "Isn't it a shame the way Moses treated that rich neighbor of ours, Korah, who should have been made a prince, and not Elizaphaw, who is of a younger branch of the family, and I think we will all unite to overthrow Moses and his entire family, to whom he has given so much power."

"Pooh! pooh!" said his wife. "What right have you to interfere in this quarrel. If Aaron will be the High Priest you will be his inferior, and if Korah will be the High-Priest you will be his inferior. In either case you gain nothing yourself by taking up the quarrels of others."

She was a very wise woman, and, not contenting herself with merely coaxing her husband to withdraw from his evil neighbor, she hit upon the following plan to keep him at home, far from Korah and his rebel band: She prepared a fine supper for him, and gave him more than his usual share of wine; the wine made him very sleepy and soon he was laying in bed fast asleep, forgetting Korah and all the world besides.

The next thing to do was to prevent Korah and his men from calling him, for her husband had told her that he had sworn to join the conspirators when called, and an oath must be kept.

She hit upon the following plan to keep the callers away: She and her daughter sat in front of their door and she unloosed her hair while her daughter was dressing it for her. Now, you must know, dear children, that no Jewish man would go near a strange woman when her hair was disheveled; therefore, when the conspirators came to call On, the son of Peleth, to join them in their plot against Moses and Aaron, they beheld from afar a woman with disheveled hair sitting at the door of his house, and they would not go near to call him, but turned back—and thus did that wise woman not alone save her husband's life, but his honor also, as, not having been called, he was under no obligation to join the conspirators, hence did not break his oath.

Dathan and Abiram not alone did not withdraw from their evil neighbor, but they associated with the wicked and foolishly took up Korah's quarrel, although it did not concern them in the least, for Korah was the richest man among the Jews at that time, and they flattered themselves, like many a "hanger on" who fawns upon the rich, no matter how wicked they are, that they would escape punishment, thinking that the possession of wealth makes one a "privileged person" who would never be punished for his wickedness and that it is therefore perfectly safe to associate with him in all his evil ways. But you can learn in this week's Sedrah what a great mistake they made, and their terrible fate serves as a warning to all generations.

CONUNDRUMS.

Why is a dishonest bankrupt like an honest poor man? Both fail to get rich.

Why is a black man necessarily a conjurer? Because he's a negro-man-sir (necromancer).

What city is like an habitual drunkard? Berlin. It is always on a spree.

What is the difference between an engine driver and a schoolmaster? One minds the train, the other trains the mind.

Why is an industrious tailor never at home? Because he is always cutting out.

had befallen him in being able to gratify his thirst for knowledge. He could not help it when the Rabbi's word sounded fainter and fainter in his ears, though it was beyond dispute that he was reading louder than before. For a long time he tried to keep awake; but at last he felt that he must give in; and he cried out in anger and despair: "Rebbe, Rebbe, what do you want of me? What have I done that you force me to keep awake by reading louder and louder every minute? Am I less tired than those who are asleep? Or what—or what?"

The Rabbi gazed at Berre with astonishment. He was waving his hands about him in an excited fashion. "Why do you look at me like that?" he asked. "I have done no harm to you or to anybody else. You know that; and yet you do not let me go asleep. It is just as if I were being punished for my sins. Let me alone, Rebbe. I beg of you to let me alone, for I tell you, I am tired unto death."

Almost before the words were out of his mouth his head was resting on his arms which were stretched out across the full width of the table. He fell asleep with an angry scowl on his face.

"One never knows these strangers," murmured the Rabbi. "One knows only one's own people."

He shuffled over the yellow pages of the big book, lit another candle, and began reading the tiniest print in a soft undertone, wrinkling his forehead when he was perplexed, and striking his earlocks and beard when he was pleased. Now and again, he varied the monotony of the proceedings by pushing his little black velvet skull cap onto the back of his head and then drawing it down over his forehead, lower than he had worn it before, almost covering his eyes.

Towards morning, the beadle pushed open the door of the House of Learning. He awoke the men with a shout of: "What is this? Why are you all asleep? It is broad daylight."

One after another, they yawned and stretched themselves. As they were struggling to get out, Solomon whispered to Berre: "How did you like it, how did you like it?" "To harass me, too?" he replied sul- lenly. "Let me alone. Are you wishing

"Ah!" thought Solomon within himself, "I knew the moment I looked at him that he was neither a scholar nor a philosopher. A tailor's son must have a tailor's soul. It cannot be otherwise. I always knew that tall thin women were bad tempered, and useless for anything. I see now that one may say the same of tall, thin men. I will not forget to warn everybody I come across to have nothing whatever to do with men of this description."

By this time they were halfway through the village, shivering in the chill air of the morning. The horn lanterns some of them carried hardly saved them from even one of the puddles of water which distinguished the streets of the villages of Lithuanian Russia from the streets of anywhere else in the whole world.
