OUT OF THE GHETTO—WHITHER?

By REV. DR. M. H. HARRIS

Our Festival of Redemption is canonized in the first of the Ten Words: "I am the Eternal, thy God, who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage." This was the first of many needed redemptions from servitudes to which Israel has been subject in its checkered pilgrimage across the stage of history. Therefore, in the very service of the freedom festival, it was always necessary to temper the paean of liberty with the restricting refrain "this year we are still slaves, but next year we hope to be free. This year we are still in exile, next year we hope to be in Zion." The later servitudes under which Israel chafed in its long Middle Age were both political and social. The term ghetto, actually and metaphorically, has come to stand for the mediaeval Egypt—whether the Yudengass in Teutonic or Pale of Settlement in Slavic lands, whether political disability, economic barrier or social ostracism. We use it still as applied to any of Israel who lead a narrow life within social confines of their own making, oblivious of the great world. So, changing the word Egypt for ghetto, Israel has had many a time reason, in its career, to reiterate the first command to indicate liberation from bondage.

Whether "out of Egypt" or out of the ghetto, the statement is clear as to the place of departure, with no definite information as to place of destination. Terminus a quo, but not terminus ad quem. Mark that emergence from thrall always brought with it new peril and new obligation. The enslaved Israel that cried under the taskmaster's whip, was succeeded by the freed Israel that cried at the taste of the bitter waters of Marah. When the iron law of Pharaoh was removed, obedience to the moral law of God replaced it. Freedom never meant absolute irresponsibility, but only a change from a lower to a higher duty. Next when Israel emerged triumphantly from the exile, it was first exposed to the perils of intermarriage, that would have spelt disintegration, and had finally to face the rigorous Ezra, and submit to his uncompromising code of the Thorah.

of paganism and again directed to their religious obligations by the Maccabees. The modern era of eman-Revolution and reached its climax in the Nineteenth Century. (It is significant that this year 1912, is the latest emancipation, when Israel's integrity was endangered, it has not yet been followed by re-enforcing of religious consciousness. Yes, endangered—for when Mendelssohn opened the gates of the ghetto to give to his people a broader light, social, literary and religious, many went from the Yudengass to the Church of Rome, his own daughters leading the way.

Yes, we are out of the ghetto, but Sinai, as our goal, is not yet in sight. In fact, we have lost our way in the wilderness—the wilderness of sin—not with a capital, but with a small s. Like that first generation that emerged from Egypt, we too may be swallowed up in the desert, we too may be absorbed by assimilation. No pillar of fire is guiding our path, Sinai and the Law, but rather a will-o'-the-wisp that may lead us to the quagmire of dissolution.

Yes, we are out of Egypt; out of the ghetto. But very many are out of the synagogue also. What the tyranny of Pharaoh the Egyptian, Antiochus the Syrian, Hadrian the Roman and Ferrer the Christian monk could not compel, the seductive influence of the air of liberty may bring about. The ghetto was a protection as well as a prison. I speak not only of the New World, but of the Old. Here are statistics of the hour. In Hungary, mixed marriages between Jews and Gentiles increased from 400 to 700 a year, from 1905 to 1910. In Hamburg 61 per cent. of alliances are mixed marriages. In America, the difference only is that many of our brethren cease to be Jews, without becoming Christians. In the example of the Sabbath, which is religion's bulwark, the average Jew has not the self denial to keep the seventh day, nor the courage to adopt the first.

I hear on many sides certain comforting comparisons. "See the counterpart of this state of things in the corresponding decay of influence of the Protestant Church." The comparison is illusory. The Church, losing in the cities, is constantly reinforced from the faith of the country

So in the widened life of Greek re-cipitation began with Moses Mendels- centennial of the removal of Jewish gimine Israel was exposed to the peril shon, expanded under the French disabilities in Prussia.) But, in our places. Christianity has further the strength of numbers, with even this ansectarian Republic adapting its calendar to the institutions of the Church. They proportionately lose fewer, while we have fewer to lose. Everything is grist to the mill of the majority. Even the latest schism, known as Christian Science, depletes the Jewish ranks, while adding yet another sect to the Christian. Yes, we are "out of Egypt," "out of the ghetto," out indeed—in the cold.

In the Seder Service that commemorates this festival of liberty, four types of children are portrayed, asking questions with regard to the Passover, in accordance with their varied characters. At the top is the wise child, who, knowing the general, seeks specific information. At the bottom, the ignoramus, who asks nothing. The situation is reversed. It is now the wise son who asks nothing. He rather avoids information about things Jewish, unless disagreeably forced to face a Jewish issue in encountering religious prejudice. The second group were called the wicked, the rasha—who contemptuously asks "what is the value of all this observance?" We cannot call that group the wicked any longer, because there are too many of them, to be so stigmatized. The third group only remains the same—the simple youth, who vaguely asks "Why is this?" Perhaps, elaborating his question this wise, "What is this Jewish muddle, why are we ostracised? What purpose is our distinctiveness serving in the world?"

How significant then it is that we celebrate departure, but not destination. How far we have departed—we, once called the people of God, the revealers of a righteous divinity to man, religious pioneers, the parents of the great faiths of mankind! There is nothing I could say of the modern Jews more severe than that we have ceased to be a religious force in the world. We are said to be a great commercial force, though Prof. Sombart and others have grotesquely exaggerated our power there. We are acknowledged an intellectual force, though the bulk of Israel are forfeiting that title, to the lower one of intelligent, since we are more interested in material things than in ideals. But whatever service the Jew may be rendering in the communities among which he is living to-day; whatever varied contributions he may be making in the different realms of human activity, his warmest defenders no longer single him out as a religious influence among the nations. Even the anti-Semite doesn't find it necessary to say this, because no one is really claiming it to-day. Yet, was not that always our modus vivendi? Then this day would really intimate, not our coming out, but our going out—our exit.

II.

A new goal is now presented, a new solution of the Jewish problem. It is Zionism. Its declaration is—Israel never ceased to be a nation. It only awaits restoration to its pristine home. As Zangwill rhetorically puts it: "Give Palestine, the land without a people, to Israel, the people without a land." Very many do not believe in Zion as Israel's goal. But we can hardly condemn a movement that has reached many who had been unchurched, or rather estranged from the synagogue. Where nothing else in our faith and tradition has appealed, this project has met with an enthusiastic response. Many American youths, brought up in homes bereft of any Jewish observance, who continued Jews in name only, have found in Zionism, their touchstone. It is near, it is tangible. It seems to have put a distinct and concrete purpose into Jewish life and aim.

Many thoughtful Jews, patriotically attached to their respective fatherlands, could not accept this new doctrine, yet are willing to approve its latest phase. We hear now little of political Zionism, but much of Cultural Zionism. The realization depends not on the external acquisition of a distant territory, but on the internal point of view. Cultural Zionism is a Jewish state of mind. After all, the political aspect really depended upon the will of Turkey, and was a reckoning without its host. Cultural Zionism can attain fulfillment within all the different lands of Jewish settlement. It revolves on the question of the Jews being a race. Very many who do not believe in a Jewish race, may yet believe in a Jewish people, created not by an ethnic difference of blood, but a people created and differentiated by a wondrous history. So, while some may believe in fostering a Jewish race, all will believe in strengthening a Jewish consciousness, which may be a fair summary of Cultural Zionism. Its programme is the cultivating of everything distinctive in the Jewish tradition—its customs, its language, its religion, its literature, its art and its life. While few of us may care for a revival of Hebrew as a spoken tongue of the Jew, all will endorse a revival in the study of the history of the Jew, making our three thousand year record of Israel, part of the training of every Jewish youth. Let our sons and daughters know as much of our warriors, the Maccabees and Bar Kochba as of Napoleon and Kitchener. Give them a glimpse of the philosophies of Maimonides and of Philo as well as those of Descartes and Kant. Let them know that Menasseh ben Israel opened the doors of a new nation to his people as well as Garibaldi to his; that Rabbi Akiba was a saint as worthy of reverence as Francis-d'Assisi. Let them recite the poems of Yehuda Halevi, as well as those of Milton, and become acquainted with the epic of Job as well as with the tragedies of Sophocles. Aye, let them be aware that Ezra and Ben Zakkai were great religious reformers, like unto Savonarola and Martin Luther. Just as Lowell re-adapted the experience of the Pilgrim Fathers to a later era in America, so we too, having Israel's tradition in mind, may also quote his words:

"Lo, before us gleam her camp-fires! we ourselves must Pilgrims be,
Launch our Mayflower, and steer boldly through the desperate winter sea,
And [Nor] attempt the Future's portal with the Past's blood-rusted key."

So far for the past. What would Jewish culture mean to-day? It is not enough for the artist to be Jewish, the theme must be Jewish also. Furthermore, Jewish genius has often been limited to Jewish appreciation, but lost to the world at large. General literature knows not of our mediaeval philosophers, our Spanish poets, our Bible commentators or our mystics. The Jew contributed to and for his own. Secondly, many gifted sons of Israel have contributed to the enrichment of the literature and art of many lands, without their contribution being recognized as a Jewish product. Sidney Lee is the greatest authority on Shakespeare. Jack London and Miriam Michaelson are novelists. George Brandes, a great critic, Zangwill, inventor of a universal language, Esperanto. Mr. Ginsberg reminds us that the Jewish sculptor Anatolsky chose Russian, rather than Jewish subjects. While the many scientists that are going forth from Jewry to-day, from the very nature of the case, could not give a Jewish character to a general discovery in astronomy or medicine. All such are instances of culture of Jews, but not Jewish culture. I believe in Jewish culture, but I think the time has come when the world in general should be made sharers in Jewish product. Too long have we hidden our light behind a bushel. Too long has Jewish genius languished in the ghetto or restricted itself to tongues unread by the world. Mr. Zangwill was among the first to make pictures of Jewish life subjects of general interest. The new school of Jewish art should choose its themes from the rich storehouse of Israel's heroism and display them in the galleries of the nations. It is time that they should know we are not only concerned in trade. That a Jewish drama, a Jewish poetry and a Jewish philosophy are being produced from the ghettos, which deserve place in the schools and in the universities at large.

It may be said that this awakening of the Jewish consciousness need hardly be given the distinctive label of "Cultural Zionism." The term Jewish is all-sufficient and comprehensive. It is not a new doctrine that any one would assail. It surely must immediately meet the indorsement of all who are Jewish enough to be concerned in a higher welfare of the Jew. But we need not quarrel about terms. It is a refreshing contrast, indeed, from those in our midst who are leading prosaic, superficial, vacuous, tawdry and indulgent lives. These indeed are the ones who can only be negatively described as "out of Egypt." They belong neither to the ghetto, nor to Zion, nor to the Church. They have no goal. The political Zionist has at least a distinctive aim and the courage of his convictions.

among them, are some of our very best. But Zionism as such, is not necessarily religious. It has unconsciously transferred its central concern from Judaism to the Jew. Seemingly, in the ghetto, they may be further removed from it than any. Let us not confuse the tremendous influx of Jewish refugees as a revival of Judaism, though it may bring to the front more vividly the observance of Jewish ceremonial. Let us remember that cultural Zionism does not necessarily involve the culture of Judaism. It is a call of a return to Zion, but not necessarily the Zion "whence goeth forth the Law." Let us endorse a movement toward culture, but only as a means toward the religious end. As culture purely and secularly, it no more appeals to our conscience and our moral obligation than culture in general, in its broad and educative value. As an artistic, linguistic or literary movement we would have the right to choose classic, Teutonic or American culture. We know that many who are ardently Zionist are not believers in the Jewish religion. It is almost a transfer from the worship of the God of Israel to the worship of Israel itself. We cannot consent to the change of our obligation from Judaism to Jewishness. Would not this be offering strange fire on the altar of the sanctuary? The cultivation of Hebrew as a living language can meet with the disapproval of none. If it replaces Yiddish, the patois of the ghetto, as Asher Ginsberg hopes, it is a distinct good. But when so many of the young are becoming the prey of the missionaries, must we not direct our emphasis rather to the simple presentation of the cardinal principles of our faith,

JEWIS AND MEXICO

By E. A. H. ENDRES

Mexico's latest political problem, wherein the principal factors are certain insurrectos and President Madero, is now in process of working itself out through the operation of the inexorable law of evolution. From a Jewish point of view the present situation in Mexico is interesting for more reasons than one, but especially on account of Mexico's persecution of Jews during past centuries and the enormous Jewish capital now invested in Mexico.

When Mexico was a stronghold of the Jesuits that country was uncompromisingly hostile to the Jews. At one time he who wrote or read in the Hebrew language in Mexico was punished by death. In Mexico was held the first auto da fe ever witnessed in the new world. That was in 1574. The most distinguished of the Mexican Maranos was Luis de Carabajal, who for some time was Governor of one of Mexico's provinces. In 1590 he was charged with Judaizing and became a victim of the Inquisition. His nephew, of the same name, was executed, at an auto da fe in Mexico on September 8, 1596. Also Cyrus Adler has written how Jorge de Almeida was tried by Mexico's mendacious and bloodthirsty priests (who have kept Mexico's population in ignorance and are directly responsible for the present revolution).

Jewish history in Mexico also tells how Rivera, Perez, Nunez, Silva, Olivera, DaCosta, DeCastro, DelBosque, Rodriguez and Sobremonte were persecuted by priests. Of these Thomas Trebino de Sobremonte was kept in prison for several years, finally suffering a martyr's death on April 11, 1649, or at a time when Lima, Peru, was busy burning Jews at the stake.

The great auto general of April 11, 1649, marks the apogee of the Mexican Inquisition. A month in advance the solemn proclamation, published everywhere at the same time, was announced in Mexico. In every city gorgeous processions marched to the sound of trumpet and drum. Everywhere the Mexican public made a welcome holiday and cheered such parades lustily; always encouraged by the clergy—of course. For a fortnight in advance of the appointed day, crowds began to pour into Mexico City, some of them from a distance of two hundred leagues. The historians and eye-witnesses of that time exhaust their eloquence in describing the magnificence of the procession of the Green Cross. This took place on the afternoon preceding the auto, when all nobles of the capital and their women folk, in splendid holiday attire, took part; and the gorgeous standard of the Virgin was borne by the Count of Santiago, whose grandfather had done the same in the great auto of 1574, and his father in that of 1601.

A double line of coaches extended through the streets from the Inquisition's prison to the Plazuela del Volador, where the ceremonies were to be performed; and so anxious were the occupants not to lose their positions that they remained in the coaches all night and until the show was over. All classes of devout believers in the Virgin were thus assembled to demonstrate the ardor of their faith and to gain the indulgence which the Pope bestowed on those who were present at those crowning exhibitions of the Church Militant.

The hero of the above occasion was the Jew Sobremonte. His mother had been burned at Valladolid and nearly all his kindred, as well as those of his wife, had been the unfortunate victims of the Inquisition. On his way to the quomadero Sobremonte made audible assertion of his faith and of his contempt for Christianity's methods in trying to make converts. Undaunted to the last this brave Jew drew the blazing brands towards him with his feet and his last audible words were, "Pile up the wood, how much my money costs me!"

"It was a wild revel of prosecutions and condemnations," writes Lea. "Medina Rico, the visltador or inspector, who came to Mexico in 1864, reported that, in reviewing the proceedings, he found that no attention had been paid to the defenses presented by the accused." Can anyone who is able to read its bloody history have a spark of respect for a church that permitted such outrages? And yet, sad to say, there be Jews to-day, who, for the sake of worldly advancement, forsake the religion of their forefathers.

The inquisitor-general, Arce y Reynoso, on October 15, 1649, congratulated Philip IV. on the triumph of the faith "which had been the course of joy and consolation and universal applause," he said, trying to please his empty-headed royal master. History tells how the pious hollow-hearted king expressed his entire gratification.

In view of the above, can one blame John Lewis Geiger, F. R. G. S., when he describes the Mexicans as "degenerate descendants of a people, originally too weak to avoid admixture with the Spaniards; he says further: "Everywhere the dark, superstitious, idolatrous creed which a corrupt and crafty priesthood has for generations engrafted on the hearts of a feeble and yielding people."

Also we read in "Bulletin No. Nine, Bureau of the American Republics—Mexico," published by the United States Government: "The three orders of the Franciscans, Dominicans and Jesuits were the most prominent in firmly fixing the power of Spain's church in Mexico. But the absorption of so considerable a portion of the colony's wealth by the church and the blocking of the channels of trade, consequent on the licking up of capital, brought about the suppression of Mexico's religious orders. The Jesuits were finally expelled from Mexico in 1856."

However, let us look at modern Mexico. Why has a reign of terror followed the revolution which drove Porfirio Diaz from Mexico?

Mainly because progress and enlightenment—in Mexico as elsewhere throughout the world—are moving to the unmasking and destruction of criminal privilege and will not be withstood. Mexico is to have a new alignment; the bloody landmarks of a cruel, bigoted and tyrannical rule which has for agonized centuries oppressed the Mexicans, are being swept away. Broad-minded religious toleration is stepping forward, fanaticism, bigotry and hypocrisy are falling back. New ideals among the people are mainly responsible for Mexico's present sporadic manifestations of discontent and lawlessness.

Zapata could no more have created the present revolution than the froth on the crest of the wave could have drawn from the bosom of the ocean the billow which supports it. Let me explain this:

General A. Figueroa, governor of the State of Morelos, recently, while on a train en route for Cuernavaca, said: "While Zapatas' prime motive in rebelling is defeated personal ambition, he is also an idealist. He desires that the lands of the Indian village dwellers be returned to them by the predatory rich who, in many instances, rob the uncivilized Indians of them."

"Is Madero alarmed about the revolution? It seems not. Long before he became President, Madero said, 'The large estates accumulated by Diaz' followers will be bought by the new government and sold to the poor people on the installment plan; for one of the reasons for the general discontent is that the greater part of the Mexican people own no land and have no opportunity to buy any.'"

By the above, spoken months before Zapata was ever heard of, it should stand plain to even dimmest eyes that Madero is a just and wise President. To get back those lands is the whole burden of the Zapatists' song. It is their moral backbone. The uneducated Mexicans are too illiterate to await the gradual reversion of the land to them through due process of law as planned by Madero, hence the present revolution.

Also, there be signs and portents that Madero is being enmeshed in a strong and finely woven plot in which a mysterious and mighty money power is exceedingly active. Some say this power is Mexico's church. Others claim it is Diaz. Be that as it may, Speyer & Co., the New York bankers, are ready to loan President Madero all the money he requires to stamp out the insurrections directed against him.

How serious Madero's predicament is can be seen from the following: General Orozco, flushed by several victories, has decreed death to Madero and his family. Orozco's manifesto means that the reign of terror which Mexico has been expecting is about to break and will mean death to hundreds of innocent persons. Can Madero keep Diaz from resuming control at the next election? The gates swing open to conjecture, the bars are down to prophecy.

In Mexico you cannot grope into a financial or commercial affair without finding enterprising Hebrews cutting the ripest melons. Take, for instance, the Guggenheims. Meyer Guggenheim, after working himself up from the humblest beginnings and earning several fortunes, founded the firm of Meyer Guggenheim & Sons. This concern today has enormous holdings in Mexico. Full of Jewish enterprise they built the first complete smelter at Monterey. It has a capacity for treating over 30,000 tons of ore monthly. The smelter at Aguas Calientes, Mexico, has also been built by the Guggenheims. Everywhere throughout Mexico they have been eminently successful and are now looked upon as the most important silver smelting crowd in the world. I say crowd advisedly, for Meyer Guggenheim being the tree, his seven sons are the fruit thereof—of these one sits in the United States Senate.

Now just a word about the Guggenheim methods. They believe an employer is somewhat responsible for the welfare of his employees. Therefore, in Mexico, they have built clean, healthy and comfortable residences for their numerous workmen. Also a building containing library, reading room, billiard tables and bowling alleys. All this trouble was taken to keep out the unscrupulous native saloon keepers and gamblers. These powerful Jewish capitalists even took time to "run an up-to-date, fair and square" American store for the benefit of their employees. Thus we see that the Guggenheims believe in looking after the welfare, moral as well as physical, of their workmen. All the above was done before these rich

Henry B. Harris

Henry B. Harris is one of the most prominent of our producing managers, as well as one of the most successful. He was born in St. Louis, Mo., December 1, 1866, and began his theatrical career as a programme boy at the old Howard Athenaeum in Boston, Mass. A little later he was made treasurer of the Columbia Theatre in that city and within three years he became the business manager.

His first theatrical venture was as half owner in the tour of May Irwin, which netted him a large amount of money. He then became identified with several of the Frohman, Rich & Harris enterprises, acting as manager for Lily Langtry and Peter F. Dalley in "The Good Mr. Best," and "The Country Sport." In 1901 he became an independent manager, his first attraction being "Soldiers of Fortune," with Robert Edson as the star. In 1903 he became the lessee and manager of the Hudson Theatre, one of the finest playhouses in the world, and which he now owns. In 1905 he produced Charles Klein's famous play, "The Lion and the Mouse," which made him an independent fortune. The same year saw him launching Rose Stahl in James Forbes' comedy, "The Chorus Lady," which immediately sprang into the foremost of the season's successes. He then presented Robert Edson in "Classmates," Ruth St. Denis in East Indian and Egyptian dances, launched Elsie Ferguson as a star in "Such a Little Queen," then presented Robert Edson in "Where the Trail Divides," Helen Ware in "The Deserters," and James Forbes' comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," which ran for almost an entire season in New York, and Charles Klein's play, "The Third Degree." Season 1910-11 he presented James Forbes' comedy "The Commuters," and Edgar Selwyn's big comedy success, "The Country Boy," three companies of which are now playing on tour.

Season 1911-12 he launched Frank McIntyre as a star in "Snobs," Elsie Ferguson in "The First Lady in the Land," then came Rose Stahl in Charles Klein's play, "Maggie Pepper," which had a six months' run at the Harris Theatre, New York; "The Quaker Girl," now in its sixth month at the Park Theatre, New York; Helen Ware in George Broadhurst's play, "The Price," and Marion Fairfax's successful play, "The Talker." Besides these, Mr. Harris has now three companies of "The Country Boy" on tour, "The Commuters" and "The Traveling Salesman." He is also manager and owner of the Hudson Theatre, the Harris Theatre (formerly the Hackett), and the Fulton Theatre, New York, and lessee and manager of the Walnut St. Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

(Exclusive Correspondence to THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

Jewish Board of Guardians and the Jewish Poor—An Interesting Convention—How the New State Insurance Act Will Affect Jews—Helping Jewish Girls in London—Sir Matthew Nathan Opens Synagogue for Jewish Soldiers in the British Army—How Jews Have Fought for England—Jewish Neglect of Jewish Art—Strong Appeal by Eminent Jewish Art Critic.

London, March 29, 1912. The annual meeting of the Jewish Board of Guardians is always a stirring and thought-provoking convention in this country. The convention on March 24 was well up to average and showed tremendous progress in the system of Jewish relief. Referring to the annual report President Leonard Cohen said there had been a reduction of 320 in the cases treated during the year. Five years ago the total number of cases dealt with in their relief Department was 5,584, and last year it was 4,039; while the number of new cases who applied to the board in the year of their arrival was 124 at the beginning of the quinquennium, and twenty-four last year. Though those figures were satisfactory, there was one disquieting feature. Nearly 60 per cent. of their new cases were drawn from foreigners who had been resident here seven years and upwards, and nearly 80 per cent. of the total number of all cases had been settled an equal length of time in this country. Making all necessary allowances, the figures confirmed the view that the struggle for existence which the foreigner had to make when he settled here was a very hard one, and is his health failed him, he had, in spite of his careful habits, to have recourse to charity.

Upon the way in which the new British insurance Act will affect the Jewish poor the president made the following remarks: "As the majority of cases with which the board is concerned are aliens (the proportion of native cases has not varied materially from 12 to 15 per cent. of the total during the last few years), it is with the provisions of the act affecting that class that we are primarily concerned. The outstanding fact in regard to aliens is that only those who on May 4, 1911, when the measure was introduced, were members of a society which shall become approved, and have been resident for five years in the United Kingdom, will be treated exactly as other people. All other aliens, who have not this qualification, although they will be allowed to join an approved society, will not get State contribution, and all such aliens, whether members of an approved society or not, will get smaller benefits of all kinds towards none of which any moneys be provided by Parliament. I know of the very great efforts which were made to attain in a more favorable result, and every credit is due to those who exerted themselves, but having regard to the limitation of the qualifying residential period to the date mentioned, far the larger proportion of the alien population will find themselves in the unfavorable position I have mentioned.

"I am reluctant to prophesy what will be the effect upon the board when this measure comes into force. Much depends upon the solution of the medical problem, upon what will be the effect of the arrangement which may be made between the insurance committees and the hospitals, and upon the clearing up of other uncertainties that it would be imprudent to come to any definite conclusion now. As far as I can see, however, having regard to the position under the act of the bulk of the alien poor, there will be very little diminution in the demands made upon the board. Quoting the experience of Germany, Dr. Loch apprehends an increase of dependence and consequently of poverty."

One important feature of the insurance act is, of course, the provision of sanatoria and sanatorium benefit for consumptives, and this matter especially interests the Jewish Board of Guardians, which for many years has put forth efforts to combat this dread scourge. Upon this, Mr. Cohen said: "It is a satisfaction to find that the Legislature has accepted the proposal to devote a very large sum to the treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis. It will be observed that the act speaks only of the treatment of the disease, but it seems possible to give a wide interpretation to what is called, for the purposes of the act, sanatorium benefit. Although the policy of the Board of Guardians has been clearly enunciated as directed towards preventing the spread of the disease and not to treating it, some of the recommendations which our health visitors are empowered to make, for instance those which result in that part of the expenditure of the board analyzed under the heading 'Medical,' may be held to be of the nature of treatment. In this connection it is pertinent to quote the authority of the local Government Board itself, which in its circular of November last affirms that the prevention of infection and the treatment of the patient frequently cannot be separated. Be this as it may, when the principles regulating what are called the arrangements are defined, if there should arise the opportunity for making representations on behalf of the board, we should not hesitate to do so. The work of our department is well known, and it should not be difficult to impart that knowledge, through the Advisory Committees which are to be set up, to the Insurance Commissioners, who are to have control of the $5,000,000 available, I believe, every year, for the treatment of the tuberculosis. It would be unwise to be prophetic at this stage and imprudent to raise hopes of obtaining from the act, especially having regard to the unfavorable position under its provisions of the majority of the alien population." Mr. Cohen concluded by making an earnest appeal for funds and workers.

It is never difficult to understand the keen interest aroused in the annual meeting and display of the West Central Jewish Girls' Club, which has as its president the Hon. Lily Montagu. Four hundred and sixty-eight members are now on the books of the club, and $875 was earned last year in grants from the Board of Education. Through its employment bureau—one of its many helpful sides—the club has found, during the past year, work for 170 members; while country holidays have been organized for 245 people, 212 have been sent to convalescent homes, and forty-one are resident in the Emily Harris Home. The function on March 24, at the New Theatre, was characterized by an excellent display of games, drill, singing and acting, all carried out with a quality which proved how thorough is the training given. In an address Miss Montagu drew attention to the varied character of the work carried on, and pointed out how they sought to bring about self-development in their girls by social service. On a small scale they were a social settlement, with its manifold activities in different directions. They had their religious work, too, for that, she said, gave meaning to all the rest. She concluded by appealing for more workers, and for money to enable them to extend their work on lines which opened up infinite possibilities; $50,000 was the sum they needed.

Sir Matthew Nathan, secretary to the Postoffice and chairman of the Board of inland Revenue, and formerly in turn Governor of Natal, Hong Kong and the Gold Coast Colony, opened a new synagogue at Aldershot on March 24, upon a site presented for the purpose by the military authorities. Hitherto the Jewish soldiers and civilians of the town alike have worshipped in a small room, but the large increase in the number of Jews who have lately joined the army necessitated increased synagogical accommodation. The new place of worship, which will be open on Sabbaths and festivals, is a modest wooden structure, but it has one striking adornment, given by Sir Isidore Spielman. Affixed to one of the walls is a replica of the war memorial placed outside the Central Synagogue in Great Portland street, London, bearing the names of the 114 officers, non-commissioned officers, and men who fell in the South African War. There was a large congregation at the simple ceremony, included in which were Jewish soldiers representative of many branches of the army, General du Cane, representing the Aldershot Headquarters Staff, and Mr. Philip Ornstein, representing the Visitation Committee of the United Synagogue, which has lent its assistance in the work of opening the synagogue.

The traditional circuits of the new place of worship having been made, to the accompaniment of the prescribed psalms, rendered by the choir of the Central Synagogue, the Rev. Michael Adler, the Jewish chaplain to his Majesty's Forces, who officiated, delivered an impressive address to the soldiers.

An appeal is being made to the community here for a more generous recognition of Jewish artistic talent. These are great days for artists of most kinds in this country and England gives a ready hearing to every new school of art that comes along, even to housing the crazy, though perhaps beautiful, conceptions of the post impressionists and still later the futurists. If these things are possible in a country which perhaps is not overwhelmingly artistic in its soul there is certainly room for a protest against the neglecting of those sterling artists that the Jewish community here is producing. Jews without egoism can claim that they have contributed more than their share to the artistic life of the world, yet the community is very far from encouraging those artists it has. It is true that many successful and distinguished painters are Jews, but they have had to fight their way with no help from the people whom their work honors.

Marion H. Spielman has started a discussion under the title of "Jewish Art and Jewish Neglect," and he appeals for more encouragement from those wealthy members of the community who too frequently, when they desire a portrait painted, give the commission to an outsider. He mentions four prominent and wealthy Jews who are at present sitting to a clever young painter who is not a Jew. The young painter is not begrudged his good fortune, but it is very properly stated that if Jews in whose power it is to encourage their young brethren would put forth a little effort there are men who would willingly respond and would reflect credit and good name on the community. Instead they are left alone in their struggle to stand or fall—and unfortunately too often to fall. Marion H. Spielman is eminently qualified to speak on questions of art. He has been art critic and founder of several of the most famous London illustrated papers. For seventeen years he was editor of the "Magazine of Art," and has written biographies of many great painters like G. F. Watts, Millais, Ruskin, etc. Also he is sectional editor for art on the Encyclopedia Britannica. He is the younger son of the late Adam Spielman. His elder brother, Sir Isidore Spielman, is a noted communal worker and a member of a knightly order. He also has had a great artistic experience and has organized art exhibitions at various great international expositions in Paris, Glasgow, Brussels, etc. He was appointed in July, 1908, by the president of the Board of Trade to be honorary director for art for Great Britain at all international exhibitions.

In order to insure the insertion of communications in the current issue of THE HEBREW STANDARD they must be in this office not later than Wednesday 10 a. m. of the week in which they are to appear.

It seems as if Professor Mandelstamm, the Russian Itoist, is now really dead.

We have received a letter from the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, written at Nice, France, in his well-known firm hand. We gather from this that his health is greatly improved, a fact which will no doubt gladden many of our readers.

Zionism is one form of the Jewish national consciousness which has survived and persisted throughout the centuries, despite all the persecution to which the Jews have been subjected. In so far as it is intertwined with the world-old ideals of the Jews it is inspiring.

Lord Wandsworth's munificent bequest, to which we referred some weeks ago, is designed for orphans of all creeds and races in England. Thus the dead financier alleviates the distress of humankind in a broad manner, well worthy of the highest traditions of the Jew.

Jewish conditions in Finland have not mended, have even worsened, according to the latest reports. But, what would one expect of a people, persecuted and oppressed, residing in the midst of another people, persecuted and oppressed, trodden under foot by the most cruel and barbaric of the tormenters of history?

Dr. Marcus Brann, the well-known Breslau scholar, says that we must stand together against the "Reforming mania" which would destroy the holy past of our people and its ideal future." What an appropriate subject or text these words might furnish to the preacher of the conference sermon at the "annual picnic" opening to-day in Baltimore!

The value of the printed report of the conferences held by the Talmud Torah principals in New York City is beyond question. These gentlemen devoted their meetings to considering the problems in their educational work, and to formulating succinctly the conclusions at which they arrived with respect thereto. The result is a well-printed and carefully elaborated document, issued by the Bureau of Jewish Education, which has done useful work in behalf of the Talmud Torahs.

Fifty years and more have passed since Commodore Uriah P. Levy, U. S. N., was gathered to his fathers. It is almost equally long ago since the law has had to concern itself with a determination of the validity of his testamentary benefactions. The courts having decided that the commodore's projected home for aged sailors and the orphaned children of our seamen was invalid, why should there be any attempt made at this late day to rewrite in terms of our latter-day knowledge and experience the legal standards and decisions of an earlier day and generation?

We call attention with pleasure to the fine record of the Jewish Sabbath Association, whose annual meeting was held at the Educational Alliance last Wednesday evening. Despite slight assistance and manifold discouragements, this society has toiled day in and day out for the past five years to promote the cause of Sabbath observance in this great metropolis. It has met—considering the circumstances—with very creditable success, and we congratulate it upon its good work and wish it continued success in the future. Our Orthodox and Sabbath-keeping brethren in general should rally to its support and thus enable it to accomplish even greater results.

Hermann Bamberger, whom the world knows so intimately by his Magyarized name of Arminius Vambery, was eighty years old last month. This naturally was made the occasion of numerous laudatory notices of the distinguished traveler in the pages of the Jewish press. His sympathy with Zionism seems to be lively, and yet he finds it necessary to say, or to let his biographers point it out for him, that in spite of all temptation to belong to any other nation, he remains a Jew. Is not this statement eloquent of all the sorts and conditions of Jews the Zionist movement in its political aspects has drawn around its banner? May such a cause figure among loyal Jews as Jewish to the core?

GERMAN LOVE OF THE JEW

THE recent commemoration of the granting of Jewish emancipation in Prussia, which occurred one hundred years ago last month, was the stimulus for a restatement of their position toward the Jews of Germany by the organs of the Conservatives. Necessarily the party which has traditionally regarded the Jews as the exotic element in the national life could not be expected to change its attitude in general toward them. Besides, the very recent Reichstag elections, and the steady decline of the influence of the Conservatives in politics during the last decade, were not calculated to make their media of public opinion friendly to German Jewry.

While from time to time it has seemed to competent observers that anti-Semitism in Germany was in great part a fact of history, the renewed attack on the Jews by the reactionary press shows us that the beast of Judaeophobia there is but slumbering, not dead unfortunately. The Jews are blamed for the successes of the Radicals and the Socialists in the last few years, and, are chided because of their desire to sustain their own ascendancy in political life. To the anti-Semitic elements this last circumstance is as inexplicable as it appears to them to be uncontrollable.

We do not believe that the German Jews are attempting to gain the ascendancy in German political life, for they could not do this if they would. What they are doing, and this with altogether sufficient propriety, is to defend their position by means of the ballot. That this is quite regular and essentially correct is apparent when we reflect that Jews in the German Empire are in every respect the equals of the non-Jews before the law, and that, despite this theoretical emancipation, few or really no Jews reach the rank of ordinary professor at a State university, while their proportion among the members of the lower divisions of university teaching bodies is unduly and unusually large.

The foregoing is but one instance illustrating how German emancipation of the Jew in theory has not worked out justly in fact. Shall we permit the anti-Semitic press, then, to reproach our co-religionists for making use of their only weapon as loyal and law-abiding citizens of the State in their effort to achieve justice for themselves?

In commenting on the recent demise of Arthur Sassoon, the wealthy English-Hindoo Jew, who was the friend of the late Edward VII, The Jewish Chronicle becomes unduly pessimistic. Perhaps its editor felt that latterly conditions in England have not been all that may be desired, so far as the Jews are concerned, for he wrote: "Whether it be (the friendship enjoyed by the Jewish subjects) of the Kaiser, our present gracious sovereign, the Emperor of Austria; the King of Italy, or the Tsar of Bulgaria, our people have experienced nothing but the most cordial good feeling from the throne. If only the throne, in all these cases at least, meant the country!"

London has a new Yiddish theatre which, as is customary with the English, was opened with considerable pomp and ceremony. The initial production in the new playhouse was made with splendid lavishness, and all its features were the work of our co-religionists. There is no reason why the Yiddish theatre should not meet with material and artistic success in the English metropolis. London has a large Jewish population, and its East End is very much like our own East Side. The English Jewish district may not be as large as that of New York, but it is of course much nearer geographically to the great Jewish centres of Russia and Roumania than our own. If New York supports scores of Yiddish theatrical enterprises of every nature and description, why cannot London make one Yiddish theatre worthy of the name pay as a venture?

Although some of us may take exception to the methods of publicity which the Young Women's Hebrew Association's Campaign Committee has sanctioned in the present "campaign" for an endowment fund for this institution, there can be no room for doubt as to the worthy character of the organization itself, and the excellent work it performs in this community. In these days of advanced notions in advertising, perhaps everybody is more or less enamored of the ways of the dealer in legitimate publicity, and so the persons interested in charitable endeavor make use of such knowledge and practices. The result will be awaited with interest, and those who are persuaded, in spite of all advances made by the world in all directions, that olden methods of raising funds for a charitable object are the best, may be convinced that publicity in its modern development has its uses after all.

In 1911 the Industrial Removal Office distributed 3,950 persons among 1,388 cities of this country. In 1901, 1,830 persons were so "removed." The high-water mark of the organization's activity was reached in 1907, when 7,586 Jews and Jewesses were scattered up and down this country, away from the congested centers of the Jewish population. The Executive Committee, in presenting the eleventh annual report of the Industrial Removal Office, take occasion to explain the apparent decline in the effectiveness of their work as follows: "That the year 1911 did not result in as many removals by the society as the friends of the movement had hoped for, is due to the fact that there has not yet been a full recovery from the industrial depression of four years ago. . . . Had there been the same opportunities as existed a few years ago, the number of removals would have been many times in excess of the number sent away."

WASTE—A SEFIRAH HOMILY

"To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the Heaven." (Ecc. iii, 1.)

לכל זמן ועת לכל חפץ חחה השמים:

AND now comes the Sefirah with its lessons. Let time—this asset that is best realized in the spending—be employed to useful purpose; let human efforts be wisely and nobly engaged in fruitful works; for Waste is harmful—Waste is sinful; and the most harmful, most sinful kind of Waste is misdirection of our energies, involving as it does the waste of the choicest gifts of God to man.

A little thought will make it plain to us, that it is not so easy to eliminate waste from human life. Waste—a hollow-ringing word, forsooth—seems writ large across the very face of the earth. It is almost raised to the importance and the dignity of a natural law. Nature has its creative moods, but it has also its wasteful moments. Nay, singular though it may appear, Nature's creative efforts are very frequently accompanied by frightful amounts of waste, so that we are almost safe to suspect that nature cannot work without wasting, cannot produce without squandering. Who knows not of the fact that of the spawn deposited by any fish, but a miserable few succeed to life, light and love? Think of the appalling choking off of unnumbered possibilities of sentient life involved in this and similar instances. It seems, in fact, as if Waste were inevitable, inwoven in the fabric of life—the seamy side, perchance, of existence.

Indeed, there are those who from this ever-presence of Waste argue against the goodness of God; for—quoth they—if God were good, how could He allow, how could He ordain, such a horrible prevalence of Waste? But the truth is, that in so far as Waste is bound up with the struggle for existence, it is beneficial and hence far from evidencing an indifferent or cruel God. Millions and millions of beings are thrown at every moment into the lowest pit of existence there to squirm and struggle until they can muster enough strength to climb out and up unto the heights. Millions and millions of weaklings must needs perish in the struggle, in order that the few may come forth all the stronger for the battle, with keenly-whetted zest for life and work. So that in the end the very death of the millions is a glorious contribution to the fullness and richness of life. Thus, this inevitable natural waste compensates itself and is, therefore, no waste; or, at any rate, it is a Waste that in itself is fruitful of the finest results for life as a whole and may therefore be regarded as a provision of God's creative wisdom.

Applying these thoughts to human life and human endeavor, we find that here, too, a modicum of waste is unavoidable. Consider that the amount of effort expended in the attainment of any desirable purpose is always larger than the result actually attained. Never does the fullness of our effort get embodied in the fruit thereof. Some part of our energies, even when well-directed, must needs be wasted. Not even the finest genius succeeds in converting all his creative energies, all the mighty impulse of his soul, into tangible achievements. The best poems are never written. The best paintings are never spread on canvas. The best songs are never intoned. The best speeches are never uttered. Moses, the Midrash tells us, found that after he had written the words of the Law there still remained some ink in his horn. There still remained, I take it, some unused creative energy in his intellect, bound over to Waste. There still remained some thoughts struggling for expression that were inevitably, by the laws of human effort, doomed never to be set down in ink. And then, Midrash continues to say, Moses dipped his pen into the unused ink and wiped it on his brow, and forthwith the rays of heavenly glory, of which the Bible tells, beamed forth from these ink-spots. That is to say, the transcendental excellence of genius but shines forth in a spiritual halo with which the heaven-crowned brow is wreathed, but it does not appear garbed in some visible earthly shape. The most luminous sparks of genius never penetrate into the life of other individuals of lesser worth. They cling to their source. In a measure they are wasted.

Fancy would fain revel in the picture of a Michael Angelo standing before the finished statue of Moses. Most men would imagine him joyous and proud in his creative delight. I fancy him sad. For though the marble received much of the impress of his genius, it did not receive all of it. It does not tell the full tale of Angelo's efforts. Does it tell the full tale of Moses' efforts? Impossible!

When we turn from the work and waste of genius to the work of the average man, it becomes a matter of everyday experience how much effort must necessarily go to waste in the worthiest undertakings. The admonition of the Sefirah is therefore not directed against such inevitable, natural waste; it is directed against avoidable, unnatural, wanton waste. The tale of the latter kind of waste is a tragic one and too long to bear telling. Examples of such waste abound round about us. How many lives are there whose story could be compressed in the ominous word: Waste! How many tombstones there are that could be most fittingly engraven with this hollow-ringing word: Waste!

Let us therefore distinguish between natural and unnatural, avoidable and unavoidable, waste. Let us avoid what is avoidable. And let us not get discouraged by what is unavoidable. It is true that our life, even as all life does, comes perilously near to waste. But even as said above concerning the life of nature, so concerning human life it holds true that Waste is on the whole beneficial. We are placed in the dangerous neighborhood of waste so that we might be on our guard against it. God placed us on the verge of a precipice, and the name of that precipice is—Waste. We are made to walk along the dizzy edge of this abyss and taught to know that it is easy to fall into it. This knowledge gives spurs to our ambition and enables us to come forth victorious from the struggle for existence. The hair-breadth escapes are many as we edge along this dangerous road; but such escapes improve us and call forth our finest efforts. And thus we progress from Waste to Work, from Escape to Salvation! But wital it is true that this is the road of which Scripture says: "The just shall walk therein, and the transgressors shall fall therein!"

When one attempts to judge of the fidelity to traditional Judaism on the part of English Jewry by the Pesach advertisements in the communal press, one is manifestly on very unsafe ground. Year after year, in every Jewish community, no matter how heterodox, with each recurring Passover the purveyors of palatable delicacies and toothsome tidbits endeavor to attract trade to themselves by stocking their shelves with the things that are seasonable and reminiscent of historic traditions. Many people in our community there are, to whom the synagogue (sad to say) does not make much of an appeal, to whom the holidays in large part are nothing and to whom Judaism is really (in the words of Heine, the scoffer,) a misfortune. Yet, to scores of these Jews a year in one week of which Matzoth did not replace bread, where there were no Kleiss and, no Slivovitz, were unthinkable. But one would scarcely hazard the opinion that, because these persons fancy the traditional Pesach delicacies, Pesach is an institution of their lives and traditional Judaism a guide for their daily practice! Advertising may have become a profession, but it is not yet an index to the characters of men.

CORRESPONDENCE.

No Miracles, No Israel.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

The sort of exposition of Pentateuchal lessons which Rabbi Joel Blau gives your readers, might now and then, better suit the columns of the Reform Advocate, of Chicago, than those of the HEBREW STANDARD, of New York, and it surprises me not a little that a paper of your professed tendencies continues permitting the thing.

A marked sample of such "exposition" is contained in your latest issue, where in flowing rhetoric and magniloquent expression we are told that the belief in miracles represents "a faith naive, and unreasoning to be sure," worthy of being called "the loving faith of little children," and naught else; that "reason protests in the name of its own dignity, against such beliefs," and that "the Finger of God" is not perceptible in history, nor even in Israel's miraculous preservation; that the "Kerith Yam Suf began after Israel crossed the Red Sea," and a great deal more of similar statement.

Well, is is nothing new now-a-days to deny what even the old Egyptian priests and astrologers of Pharaoh were ready to admit; it is nothing new to hear and to read infidelity preached by and from the pulpit, per se. It sounds very pretty, this reading of Rabbi Joel Blau's disquisitions, but when the whole thing is simmered down, please tell us what is there left of Jewish history, and of the authority of the Jewish belief? Why need the Passover, if it is but "a golden mirage floating in the hazy distance of childhood's days?" Why observe it, or the Seventh Day in particular, if the event recorded in our Holy Books, is either an idle fancy, or an outright lie (perchance, another "golden mirage.") The Shirath Ha-Yam is then also a fig-

SOCIETY.

What is society nowadays, what constitutes it and what is, or seems to be its aims, are its gatherings for intellectual or social intercourse, or is it but bent upon the mere killing of time, without any striving for the aims which imbued our grandfathers and our grandmothers? Does it come up to the old social standard, in which sparks of intellectual fire would scintillate and give character to a gathering or does it even vie with the old Koffee-klatsch—redundant with the relating—and retailing of all kinds of gossip?

I refer to those gatherings made up of men and women who have or appear to have accumulated some wealth that they are "it." Possession of wealth is compatible with a whole lot of attributes which will fail to make either men or women sparkle intellectually or socially—but only intrinsically—from the wearing of diamonds galore. If society, notably of women, is constituted of those with the latest designs of robes of the richest quality and character, and the embellishment of jewels of rare value and of great quantity, then there is an amplitude of it: for never in the history of the City of New York has there been such numbers of the female sex decked out in fabrics and jewels as modern gatherings give proof of. It's a down-right show of the jewellers shop, and the art of the dressmaker that one is up against.

A reception was given recently which brought together a large assemblage of men and women; as the guests arrived and exchanged the courtesies of entree with the host and hostess, the men with few exceptions repaired to the card room to play games of hazard with large stakes, and the women also to another card room to play cards as well, and there the whole gathering was engrossed with the cards, without relaxation, until after midnight, when refreshments were served and after this the party dispersed. Is this an exceptional instance of modern social gatherings, or is this largely the rule which obtains? I believe those who are capable of expressing an opinion in this direction will say it is the rule with rare exceptions.

It seems to me that these gatherings serve markedly for the exhibition of the latest modes for women, and extravagant display of precious stones. In this they are an unqualified success. But is this society?
L'AIGLON.

Our Philadelphia contemporary is never aught but staid and serious in its editorial comments, and hence the undercurrent of sarcastic levity in the following is as inexplicable as it is unusual. "The convention (of the Central Conference of American Rabbis) will not prove as exciting as the other one that will be held in Baltimore two months later, nor will the conflicts be as bitter or intense." Our distinguished contemporary makes a veiled allusion to the coming Democratic national convention at Baltimore, in June, and we would demur to the appositeness of this reference. Knowing the participants at "annual picnics" of the past, we are sure their convention will prove as exciting, if not even more so as any political convention, and the different learned rabbis will doubtless struggle for the ventilation of their views on "great and momentous issues" with as much intensity and bitterness as rival political bosses and party candidates. And then, after all, is there any difference between the annual meetings of the Central ment of the imagination, and all its surroundings belong to the same class as the Trojan War and the founding of Rome.

I know I incur a great risk in daring so to write; Rabbi Joel Blau may again dub me a "heresy-hunter." But nevertheless, I face the danger, and dare moreover to say that rabbis of such a type, who are neither disciples of Rabbinitism nor of Judaism as received, who equally throw overboard Moses and the Sages, are the chief factors in our religious dismemberment, giving the un-studying and unthinking multitude carte blanche to follow the ways of unbelief, which culminate in un-Jewishness, disloyalty and treason to the one God of Israel.

Very truly yours,

Jews and Genealogy.

The first regiment raised in New York city for the Revolutionary War was composed of Hebrews. Consequently the descendants of these soldiers were among the earliest members of the newly developed patriotic societies based upon descent. Aside from this, the Jews have a genealogy of their own. Many orthodox members of the faith claim to trace their pedigrees all the way back to Abraham, but these records are disputed—especially by the members of the Reformed Jewish organizations. It is doubtful if positive proofs of any particular families go back beyond the destruction of the temple of Herod I.—Frederick J. Haskin in New York Globe.

Out of the Ghetto—Whither?

its poetic beauties, and its moral imperatives; its demand for social justice, that pervades not only its Prophets, but the Law? We are facing an issue different from that ever presented before us—strenuous Jews, without Judaism. Nor can I feel much enthusiasm for the recrudescence of the dietary laws in our communal institutions, when alarming stories are brought to us of the drifting of the daughters of Israel to the paths of sin. The ghetto at its worst, was chaste; the sanctity of the family remained inviolate, so that the teaching of domestic virtues by the example of Jewish life in itself was a mission worthy of our preservation. The ghetto of to-day is the quarter of the Jewish poor, exposed to the many moral temptations that are ever involved in poverty. We must therefore concentrate and direct all our energies less upon the separation of meat and milk, more on the separation of right from wrong; less on the preservation of the Hebrew tongue and more and more upon the saving of the Hebrew people from degeneration. Es laasoth adonoi heferu sorosacho. "It is time for the Lord's work; they are frustrating Thy Law." We do not love Hebrew less, but Judaism more. We must not lose the great in the small.

Culture must be directed towards religious revival. Religion has always been our function, our excuse for being, the explanation of our survival. Some Zionists retort, "shall we be merely a religious community?" If we are really religious, they will not say merely. If we can develop an idealism that will make its influence felt in the world, becoming, so to speak, modern Puritans and defenders of the submerged exemplars of social justice and morality—that will give us a new repute as the lineal descendants of the great Prophets. We have come out of Egypt, out of the ghetto; we have emerged from many stages of servitude. Hearken also to the Prophet's cry to "return O, backsliding Israel!" I would say to the Jews, at the one end, we cannot be saved by assimilation. I would say to the Jews at the other, we cannot be saved by culture. Let us listen again to the old summons, "Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, the servants whom I have chosen, to open the eyes of the blind, to bring from the prison those who sit in darkness to be a light to the Gentiles." As a mission we need ask no more than that; with less than that let us never be satisfied.

Jews and Mexico

Jews, in 1900, entered into a combination of smelting firms—known as the American Smelting and Refining Company—in which the Guggenheims have retained a controlling interest.

Contrast the above with the terrible and cruel treatment Mexico's enganchado or laborers receive from their pious Christian masters. The Spanish labor contracts read "In all things the enganchado shall receive from the administrator of the plantation or mine the gentle treatment a father would accord to his child." Gentle treatment for-sooth!

I could tell of dark and secret graveyards out in Mexican jungles, provided to avoid exposure of the frightful plantation death rate; of twenty miserable men left after only six months out of a draft of one hundred sent from Mexico City; of lopped fingers and hands raised to protect heads from keen machettes; of unspeakable moral outrages publicly committed; of strong men fearfully beaten (for asking to be sent back after their contract had expired) till the manhood went out of them with a wild shriek; I could tell how insane, broken in body and spirit, they crawled around, dumb and dull, till death overtook them. Such is the Christianity of Spanish and Mexican Captains of Industry who sneer at the Jew and call his Old Testament cruel.

Primitive methods still prevail in many mines of Guanajuato and Guerrero. One owner of an American mine had the luminous idea to lighten the work of the poor native miners, who carried heavy loads of ore on their heads; he would import a lot of wheelbarrows. The master went North for a month and the wheelbarrows on their arrival were distributed among the native miners. Not one of the poor brutalized cargadores knew how to handle these new-fangled yanqui contraptions. With much difficulty each at last managed to hoist his wheelbarrow full of heavy ore on his head, and so they patiently bore their double loads day after day until the master returned. He actually had to show them how to handle a wheelbarrow. Thanks to the foreigners, Mexico is advancing in every direction.

New towns like Coatzacoalcas are creations of such mechanical geniuses as Sir Weetman Pearson. This man in 1902 obtained a concession from the Mexican Government allowing him to establish an electric generator in the mountains of Pueblo at a cost of $12,000,000 to transmit electricity, 82,600 horsepower, to the City of Mexico. Could the spirit of the one-legged General and President Santa Anna return to Mexico City he would find there one of the most remarkable of modern engineering works—the capital's great drainage canal, completed in 1898. He would also find that Germany controls most of Mexico's trade, and that Mexico is seeking larger loans from Germany who refuses to lend another mark. England also hesitates to loan more money to Mexico. Already Mexico is said to be largely in the hands of mortgagees. Of these the chief three are Germany, England and America. Should America, through Morgan and Guggenheim Bros. and Speyer & Co., ever establish a protectorate over Mexico, Germany and England will unite to keep us there. Because Americans would help business. Gigantic American enterprises in Mexico embrace a total investment of over $80,000,000, at least that is what Diaz stated in 1908. He added that this investment was increasing at the rate of $50,000,000 a year. It would be unfair to imply that Diaz has done nothing to uplift Mexico. The lately accomplished nationalization of Mexico's railroads are due to the sagacity of Diaz and his ministers. This one tremendous achievement almost outweighs all of his other shortcomings in government. The old soldier would not allow himself to be beaten by an American business man. Therefore, Mexico owns and operates her railroads.

This progressive move by Diaz was caused by E. A. Harriman's expansion into the Mexican railroad field. He alarmed Diaz, whose ministers knew that the Yankee had designs on the two Mexican trunk lines, the Mexican Central and the Mexican National.

This checking of Harriman in Mexico proved that Diaz, as we shall see later, was no match whatever for Harriman, who had entered Mexico through the extension of his Southern Pacific Railway from Nogales in Arizona, southward along the west coast with a view toward connecting with the Southern Pacific Railroad properties in Guatemala. One of the links in this big project is the Pan-American Railroad, which ex-Ambassador Thompson lately acquired in connection with Mr. Paul Morton, ex-Secretary of the Navy.

If it were not for England and the wideawake Yankees Mexico would not have any factories, puffing locomotives, trolley cars, or jangling telephones. Instead of steam ploughs there would still be the ancient Aztec forked branch, drawn by bullocks. Instead of up-to-date stamp mills there would be old Spanish arreas turned by blindfolded oxen nosing around their ring. Instead of sending freight by rail through blasted tunnels and over caputerver bridges, pack mules would still carry all burdens over the zigzag narrow trails of the Sierra Madre.

All this economic progress in Mexico has meant untold labor, the expenditure of millions of dollars and human life. Not a mile of steel rail but represents a dozen fatalities, not a bridge over a great river but includes several dead men in its cost. Along some parts of the Continental Mexican the unmarked graves of obscure laborers are almost as numerous as the ties. At present Mexican railroads have a total mileage of 14,920 miles. Railroad building in the tropics must be seen to be appreciated. The natural difficulties in Southern Mexico are appalling. Once a railroad was built through this marshy, hot country, cut up by innumerable rivers and water courses. The line is somewhat less than three hundred miles and has more than three hundred bridges. The biggest of these was one over the Papalopan River. As soon as this was finished the government subsidy was to become available. Every effort was bent toward completing the bridge, but before the last of the cantilever spans could be swung there came a tropical downpour; the water in the river rose above the tops of the piers and the work of months was undone. It was the coup de grace for the American company. After the smash the Mexican Government took over the road from the receivers and completed it, thus saving its subsidy. Of Mexican railroads 9,900 miles were constructed by Americans at an investment of $267,600,000.

The English have also had their troubles: Englishmen have at present large mining interests in Mexico. To establish a paying mine in the wild wastes of Chihuahua or of Sonora, it is necessary to ship heavy mining machinery on the backs of slow but surefooted burros. These have to cross rough narrow trails, thousands of feet above the valleys. When this costly machinery finally reaches the interior this is what sometimes happens: Because Diaz has made no efforts to educate the population outside the cities, Gringos are hated. Therefore English and American miners have been cruelly murdered by illiterate Mexicans. Under Diaz these tragedies were usually suppressed so as not to scare new foreign capital from entering Mexico.

An intolerent church has been Mexico's curse. Certain districts are eloquent with abandoned shafts, forsaken mills and rusting machinery, which was laboriously imported from the States or England. Individual Americans (usually Protestants or Jews), have abandoned Mexican mines and valuable machinery year after year, fearing murder. Some distance out of La Escondida, in Lower California, stands an old rusted Ameri-

Absolutely the Purest Table Water

In all the world there is no other known spring like the great, never-falling

SUN-RAY

Spring in the side of a two thousand-foot mountain at Ellenville, New York.

It was first tapped, long before the Revolution, by a prospector, who tunneled five hundred feet into the mountainside.

Then, for more than a century, it was lost, and in its stead there seemed to exist nothing but a legend of a spring of wonderful purity.

In 1905 it was rediscovered and in 1906 the property surrounding the spring was acquired, the finest and most sanitary water plant in the world was erected, and the water, in still and sparkling form, put on the market at a moderate price.

It is bottled ONLY at the spring, but is on sale everywhere.

Sun-Ray table water is delicious and absolutely the purest in the world, and can be drunk in any quantity with positive benefit.

MUSIC NOTES.

For the final orchestral concert of the season to be given by the People's Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall on Sunday afternoon, Conductor Franz X. Arens has arranged an all Wagner programme which will include the "Rienzi" overture, the "Lohengrin" prelude, Wotan's Farewell from "Die Walkure," the Rhine Journey from "Siegfried," the "Parsifal" prelude, the Evening Star from "Tannhauser" and the prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin."

Theodore von Hemert and Gertrude Bianco gave a joint concert at Carnegie Lyceum last Tuesday evening and a large audience enjoyed the varied programme presented. Miss Bianco is a dramatic soprano possessing a beautiful voice of exceptional sweetness and ma," from "Cavalleria," and M. Delibas' aria, "O mer ouvre-tol."

An extra concert is to be given by the Barrere Ensemble, at the Belasco Theatre, Sunday afternoon, April 14, at 4.30, in response to the numerous requests received by Mr. Barrere for such a concert, at a time when those music lovers whose business prevented their attending the regular subscription matinees, could go. The Ensemble has been most fortunate in securing the services of M. Andre Caplet as its assisting artist upon this occasion; interest is added by the fact that it is M. Caplet's first appearance before a New York audience. M. Caplet will preside at the piano in several of his works, a quintet, written in 1900, which won the first prize of the Societe des Compositeurs de Paris; it is scored for piano, flute, oboe, clarinet and bassoon.

A Famous Place.

There is a place in New York that is unique. Travelers from all over the United States come to see and obtain suggestions from its fascinating equipment, and its fame has spread not only from coast to coast, but to Europe as well.

The sales and demonstration rooms of Sol Bloom, Inc., at No. 366 Fifth avenue, offer a world of surprises. The spacious concert room on the ground floor is decorated and furnished in Louis XVI. style, and is a perfect specimen of the decorator's art. But it is in the eight demonstration rooms below the street level that the originator displayed his ingenuity and taste. Each of these rooms is designed and decorated in a different style.

There is a Greek room with pillars and columns through the Ionic portico of which one catches a vision of the Aegean Sea, with the Acropolis in the distance. The Japanese room shows through its arbor of wistaria a fascinating view of Japan's sacred mountain, with its picturesque slopes. The Egyptian room is a perfect specimen of Oriental architecture, pregnant with suggestions of Pharaonic days. The rustic garden transports one to the open country. Flowers, vines and a wide stretching landscape make the illusion complete. A ship's cabin, with a view of mermaids through the portholes, is a favorite room with globe-trotters. A club room appeals to the man about town, and a well-equipped nursery caters to the tastes of the children that visit the establishment. On any afternoon these rooms are crowded with lovers of music who come here to listen to the new Victor records and make their selections amid congenial surroundings.

Sol Bloom, Inc., are the most widely known distributors of Victor talking machines. They carry a stock comprising every style and variety made by the Victor factory, and by their conscientious dealings and reputable service have won the best patronage in New York.

In spite of the brilliant and attractive display rooms, the prices for Victors and records is no higher than in the less desirable shops. Every machine is carefully tested, and our repair department is always ready to respond to any call.

Mr. Milton Goldsmith, the manager, is well known in New York Jewish circles, and is a thorough musician and popular entertainer. His advice in the matter of the proper selection of Victrolas or records is of value to purchasers. If you are not already acquainted with the beautiful store of Sol Bloom, Inc., we would recommend a visit, if only to see the marvelous arrangement of their rooms.

Where a comparatively few years ago grand opera was a luxury for the select few, millions now enjoy it every day in their own homes on the Victor.

This wonderful instrument not only brings to you the masterpieces of opera, but they are rendered by the self-same artists who are captivating hosts of opera enthusiasts in the leading opera houses—the world's greatest artists who make records only for the Victor.

And the next moment you can be listening to the gems of song from the sparkling musical comedies, or be entertained by the leading funmakers.

It is only a step from grand opera and the classical to the lighter forms of music, for the Victor is wonderfully versatile and changes at will from grand opera to ragtime, from minstrel show to sacred music, from vocal selections to instrumental numbers; the very music you like best at the very time you want to hear it.

Sol Bloom, Inc., at No. 366 Fifth avenue, is the home of the Victor—the place where grand opera and good music flourish and there you will find the best the world of harmony has to offer.

Kinemacolor at Garden Theatre.

New York has gone "Kinemacolor Crazy," as the great crowds which visited the Garden Theatre last week to witness the second edition of the Durbar will testify.

Many new and heretofore unshown scenes are a part of the new Kinemacolor offering dealing with the visit of King George and Queen Mary of England to India for their proclamation as Emperor and Empress at the great Durbar.

As an added feature is that most thrilling chapter of recent American history, "The Burial of the Maine," reproduced perfectly in natural colors and motion, with all the impressive naval ritual that marked the final sinking of the famous hulk in the deep waters off the coast of Cuba. The procession through the city of Havana and the last military honors paid to the dead in Washington, furnish a fitting finish to the last chapter of this great historic tragedy.

The big seating capacity of the Liberty Theatre is proving inadequate for the accommodation of the record-breaking audiences attracted by Henry Miller's big hit, "The Rainbow," now rapidly approaching the third month of a run that will continue far beyond the present season. Mr. Miller has produced a great many brilliant successes, but no play in which he has appeared since he became a star has ever struck the big note of popular appeal that is sounded in "The Rainbow." The Thomas play is certain to be Henry Miller's starring vehicle for three years or more after it has run its course on Broadway.

As the father in "The Rainbow," Mr. Miller is giving the most delicately shaded stage portrait he has ever created on the American stage. He makes the role of Neil Sumner live and breathe—the faults and all the fine qualities of a real man who is as lovable as he is human. Even the most hardened theatregoer cannot escape the realism of the big scene of the play when Mr. Miller, as the father, is telling his little girl good-bye. It is a scene that rings true, and in which Mr. Miller's great acting ability is shown to wonderful advantage.

The mammoth Durbar circus and series of spectacles "Around the World" at the Hippodrome appeal to every class of theatregoers. The scenic trips made to every country on the globe are full of interest to would-be travelers, who must stay at home and can only see foreign lands through their opera glass. Both Orient and Occident are represented in the Hippodrome's great scenic symposium this season. One travels from the banks of the Hudson to England, Ireland, Italy, Spain, India, where the great Durbar pageant and circus are witnessed, Egypt where there occurs a mighty sandstorm, Switzerland in the shadow of the Alps; not forgetting the wonderful imaginary realm which introduces the great aquatic finale and in which the big Hippodrome tank is used for the further exploitation of marvels, such as have made its fame.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

A very interesting programme has been arranged for the Young Men's Hebrew Association for Sunday evening, April 14, 1912, at 8 o'clock, in the Auditorium, 345 Ninth street. Supreme Court Justice Irving Lehman, of Manhattan, will deliver an address, which will be preceded by a fine musical entertainment. Max Margolies, conductor of the Y. M. H. A. orchestra, will render violin selections, and Miss Clara Auwell will give harp solos.

Temple Ahavath Achim.

Rev. Dr. J. D. Spear, who has been connected with the Temple Ahavath Achim, of Brooklyn, for over nine years with but one interruption of two years, while serving the Congregation Ez Chaim, of Yorkville and Temple Israel, of New Rochelle, and whose term expires next year, was unanimously re-elected at the last general meeting of the temple for a term of five years, with substantial increase in salary.

Hebrew Educational Society.

Events to come are as follows: Saturday evening, April 23, dramatic entertainment by the Fireside Literary Society for the benefit of the Building Fund. Sunday afternoon, April 14, final junior declamation contest.

Beth Shalom Congregation of Bensonhurst.

A most beautiful Seder service for and by the pupils of the Sabbath school was given under the auspices of the Beth Shalom Sisterhood on Tuesday evening, April 2. The time-hallowed Haggadah, with its soul-stirring melodies, was recited by the children, and the "Knoed-lech," no less traditionally made, were rendered by the good sisters, who gave their personal service to the minutest details, from the buying of the stuff to the cleaning up of the dishes. There were over 130 children present, and everyone of them was made to feel that it was good to be there.

The service at the Temple on the seventh day of Passover, which, for some reason or other, had been abandoned for several years past, was reinstated this year by Dr. Jacob Goldstein, who conducted the regular holiday service and gave an inspiring address on the present day problems of Judaism. On account of the unfavorable weather he postponed his intended lecture to the young folks on "Play" to a date to be announced later on.

Arrangements have been completed by which the several Jewish inmates of the Sunshine Home for the Blind will be brought within the sphere of influence of the Beth Shalom Sabbath School. A visiting committee consisting of Dorothy Brand, Evelyn Velka, Isidor Gottlieb and Herman Schwartz was appointed, and Mr. Greenhoot will go to the home every Sunday afternoon to give religious instruction.

Congregation Bnai Sholaim.

Hon. Edward Lazansky, Secretary of State of New York, will deliver a public lecture at Temple Bnai Sholaim, on Ninth street and Fifth avenue, this Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, on the subject: "The Jew in Public Life." A musical programme will precede the lecture. Admission is free, and all are welcome.

The spectacular new Herbert comic opera, "The Enchantress," will be the attraction at the Montauk next week, with beautiful Kitty Gordon, the English prima donna in the stellar role. The piece comes direct from its highly prosperous run at the New York Theatre, New York, with the entire original company of 100. Upon its Metropolitan opening early last fall many of the critics said that Mr. Herbert had never done anything better, and recalled that he had written such delightful successes as "The Serenade," "The Red Mill," "Mlle. Modiste," and "Babes in Toyland." Certainly more melodious songs and lilting dance music has never rippled from his pen.

The second season of the Aborn English Opera Company was successfully inaugurated at the Academy of Music last week when Puccini's masterpiece, "Mme. Butterfly," was presented during the week to large and enthusiastic audiences. For the coming week Massenet's "Thais" is announced. "Thais" as interpreted by Mary Garden, Maurice Renaud and Charles Dalmores was probably the most successful French opera produced by Oscar Hammerstein, and the Aborns promise that their production will meet every requirement. The cast will include Misses Helena, Kristoffy, Riggers and Conrad, and Messrs. Ad-kind, Royer, Bernard and Horodoo. Popular prices will of course prevail.

Unleavened Bread.

From a Passover Sermon by Rabbi Harry Weiss, of Macon, Ga.

Sun-dried and brittle, the bread of discipline is with us, the thin wafer of the desert. Fashioned in haste, it is yet a lasting memorial, the bread of poverty, it yet tokens a wealth of spiritual meaning. How splendid the juxtaposition of fine banqueting on the eve of freedom, with the unsweetened, unfermented cake, symbol of bondage and the hard pilgraming of our forefathers. To me it appears that the lesson of this antithesis is not only that utmost joy should be soberized with a counterpiece of this nature, but that utmost joy is actually built on trial and suffering. The mansions of hope rest upon pillars of agony, the gifts of freedom upon the sufferings of slavery, the blessings of courageous effort and achievement upon long struggling. For this we are named Israel, the Wrestler, who struggled against odds and prevailed. What higher glory than to say, "Lo, he struggled with men and with the things of darkness and from both he won a blessing, from one recognition of men, and from the agonies of night and meditation, he won the guiding hopes of the world, the pure idea of God. The fleshpots of Egypt are left, their ample meals, for even though their sufferings may have been great in Egypt, they had not the solitariness of the desert, its uncertainty of wood, its endless avenues, its seemingly hopeless vistas. The columned aisles of Egypt's palaces good to look upon; they leave the far off sound of harp and psaltry they leave; the spectacle of nobles in finery, all the fair scenes of the land of the lotus, they abandon for the apparently empty promises of the desert. But the desert shall flower with the tree of Life, the Torah, that shall yield them substance more lasting than any gained from material bread. For well as it has been said that not bread alone do men live, but by all that proceeds from the mouth of the Lord. The bread of haste, the sun-dried morsel, shall symbolize spiritual nutriment, seemingly meager to sustain, yet actually the only conserving element in the economy of any people. Why agony should be the hand-maid of glory we do not know, but it is a fact proved by centuries, that prosperity surfeits and cloys, weakening and ultimately deadening the higher sensibilities of man. Israel, as a people, has suffered; for that reason it is great. It has hardness of soul. Tried in the crucible of persecution, its spiritual fiber is toughened with a thousand martyrdoms. The great fear of to-day is that we will forfeit the bread of discipline with all its intimations of restraint amid plenty, with its lessons of idealism and self-surrender in an age of materialistic outreach, and thus forget the Lord, when we eat only honeyed bread. O, bread of affliction, watered with many tears, you were the food of all the prophets, of Elijah, whose presence sips the brimming cup that is offered this evening at every Jewish home. Man of the desert, keeper of Israel, the cup is thine, the bread is thine. The cup for which the doors of Jewish homes are opened upon the darkness, in token of the fact that out of the darkness shall we ever pluck hope of good tidings. How splendid the Seder eve, the awe, the strangeness, the open door, the night, the growing children, that cluster about the lone cup of wine which marks this evening, when the bread of the desert, the thin wafer of discipline, is eaten.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Late Dr. I. K. Funk.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

It is an unusual thing for a conservative Jewish paper to publish a necrologue in honor of a Gentile. But Dr. Funk was an extraordinary man and the history of Jewish literature contains not many examples of a Christian publishing house standing ready to devote a fortune to the production of a work of the character of the Jewish Encyclopedia. The inner history of the latter has not yet been written, but the time has come now that Dr. Funk is dead, he who not only was the chairman of the Editorial Board of the Encyclopedia itself, but also the member of the publishing firm being mainly responsible for its publication, to lift the veil for an inch or two so that at least part of the heinous misconceptions regarding the deceased be done away with once and for all.

When I presented my plan to Funk and Wagnalls Company in the latter part of 1897, I was a נר בא-ין נכריה

None of the powerful men in our community introduced me to the firm, pleading my cause, my only מליץ יושר וטוב

In the textual sense of the word, i. e. interpreter, was the late Moritz Ellinger, whom I took with me to the decisive conference of the executive committee of the firm, not being quite sure of my capacity to follow a necessarily intricate debate in the English language. I will never forget that memorable afternoon when Dr. Funk helped Ellinger and me overcome the many counter arguments of the other members of the firm. In one word, without him American Judaism could not point to-day to one of its literary triumphs.

That Dr. Funk, personally, had even one single bacillus of the virus of Antisemitism in his system must appear ridiculous to those who knew him personally as I did. Still less founded is the accusation launched against him in certain quarters that it was missionary zeal which induced him to publish the Encyclopedia and the famous appendix to "Tarry Thou Till I Come." Dr. Funk was too deep a thinker and several miles beyond the dogmatics even of the most advanced Christian churches to believe for one moment that it is possible to make a rationalistic American Jew of the twentieth century swallow the cabalistic metaphysics of the council of Nicea and other councils.

But better than I am able in these lines, hastily thrown upon the paper in the first excitement, the following few paragraphs from his speech at the Judean banquet given May 21, 1901, at the occasion of the publication of the first volume of the Jewish Encyclopedia, will give the reader a fair idea of the character of the Christian clergyman and publisher who was mainly instrumental in inaugurating the great epoch of Jewish Renaissance in the United States:

"While your president (Dr. Henry M. Leppziger) was speaking, I was asking myself what were the reasons that led us to listen to the siren 'Singer,' some three years ago and fall into this temptation? I wondered and thought, was it money, commercial? No, and yet we as a business house, had to see that the financial side was all right, because in the commercial world two and two make four, and two from two leave nothing. That is not always the golden rule, for it is the rule of gold anyhow (laughter)."

"The commercial was scarcely the principal reason, not the chief reason. If it were, I think you would find our executive committee pretty sad when they came to look at the pay-roll of Volume I; they will have considerable sympathy with that Virginia publisher who, when he ended his newspaper, said: 'Six months ago, when I began this paper, I thought there were millions in it. Now, at the conclusion of my six months' experience, I know that the millions are still there.'"

"But passing that by, one chief reason that prompted us was this: we believed that the time had come, was fully here, when the Jew should be permitted to tell his story, his whole story, and tell it in such a way and have it so presented before the world, that the world would be compelled to listen to it."

Very truly yours,

ISIDORE SINGER, PH. D.

Jews and Mexico

can locomotive that was abandoned by an American engine-driver, who suddenly quit his job years ago, after being severely knited by a Mexican during a religious quarrel. No one could be found to take the Gringo's place, so the engine was simply left to rust. All this is typical of modern Mexico's natives and their bigoted religious hatred against Protestants and Jews. I have said that Diaz was no match for Harriman when Mexico, through Diaz, obtained control of the railway stock. This is the reason: Pierpont Morgan and his associates hold what is infinitely more important, the railway bonds; $16,525,000 is the amount Mexico has pledged herself to pay each year in interest to these Americans. Can Mexico do it? No. The Mexican Central is thirty years old, yet it has never paid a cent in dividends. The Mexican National is five years younger, yet it has paid less than two per cent. It looks as if Diaz was tricked, and tricked badly by Mr. Harriman, the late "railroad master" of the United States.

Jewish financial interests in Mexico are enormous. The Mexican National had been financed by Speyer & Co., who had admitted the Mexican Government into partnership in the control. The Guggenheims are interested in the International Rubber Company which produces crude rubber in Mexico from the guaquele plant. This company also controls the Continental Mexican and the Compania Ganadera y Textil de Cedros, with a half interest in the American Congo Company. "Some day the United States will annex Mexico," say the Elijahs of politics. The vast amount of American wealth in Mexico to-day justifies the above prediction. It may be years before Mexico is annexed, but it seems highly probable. Mexico has no military or naval resources to successfully resist American interference in case of a rebellion. Mexico's fighting force of 20,000 odd and three old gun-boats are a negligible quantity. Her treasury is empty and she is living on a suicidal policy of a crushing excise system, stifling internal commerce by enforcing her people to look to other lands for countless manufactures which they could do themselves. Everything points to the extinction of Mexico as a separate State. Her Yankee neighbor, after the war of 1846, was ceded the provinces of New Mexico (including the greater part of the present Arizona and New Mexico, all of Utah and Nevada and a part of Colorado and Wyoming) and Upper California. In 1854 Uncle Sam purchased from Mexico a large strip of territory, the Gadsden purchase, included in the present Arizona and New Mexico. By the Nicaraguan Treaty, five miles of each side of the Panama Canal are already definitely annexed by Uncle Sam. Yucatan (which wished to cede herself with Texas in 1845), Guatemala, Nicaragua, all will be absorbed by the United States, say the political piercers of the future.
