THE YIDDISH-AMERICAN SKETCH

SELECTIONS FROM A PECULIAR LITERATURE

By J. FUCHS

CHAIM, THE CUSTOM PEDDLER: HE RESCUES FROM OBLIVION THE RECORD OF A BENEFACTION.

By I ZEVIN.

Some time ago our Ladies' Auxiliary of our Temple Jacob had a grand affair. Every congregation has a ladies' auxiliary, but such a one as ours can't be easily found—you might find among the members the entire aristocracy of Mudhole, L. I. You ought to see the diamonds and the dresses that come together at a meeting. And our meetings are not just merely meetings only—they are always held in combination with a whist party, a reception, an entertainment or some other high-toned affair.

The chief business of our Auxiliary is charitable relief. But it is hard—thanks to the Uppermost—to find poor people in Mudhole, and our ladies have little to do. That's why they don't mind if their affairs bring little, and often the expenses are in excess of the amounts raised. Once they gave a strawberry party in the middle of winter for the purpose of founding a Jewish Sunday school. The strawberries cost them a fortune—just imagine strawberries around Chanukah—they stood them about twenty cents for every strawberry. The cakes, the decorations and the other fixings also cost a tidy sum of money, and in the end they realized a clear profit of one dollar and seventy-five cents. That was the first time that a clear profit was realized at an affair of our Auxiliary. The ladies were so delighted with the result that they resolved to make a noble use of that $1.75. They made a collection right then and there, added twenty-five dollars to the profits, and bought a pin to our worthy president, Mrs. Puppikovich, in recognition of her estimable services to the congregation and the Ladies' Auxiliary.

Slandrous tongues were saying then that the whole strawberry party was a ruse of Mrs. Puppikovich to give her a chance to exhibit to all the ladies that new tiara her husband had bought her at Tiffany's. The diamonds were generally appraised at two thousand dollars.

twelve dollars for flowers. From which it appears that the affair ended with a deficit of $10.25. The ladies of our Auxiliary had with shiny coats and trousers fringed at the bottom—but they don't want any charity. Therefore our ladies were wont to arrange affairs, and to ago, and it so came to pass that the husband lost his job just a few weeks before his wife gave birth to a boy. As soon as the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary got wind of this they sent heralds from house to house with the message: "God has aided us and sent a poor man to Mudhole, L. I." The ladies at once called a meeting and resolved to make an affair of the Berith, for the benefit of the poor parents.

A committee consisting of Mrs. Puppikovich, Mrs. Kaban, my Yiddineh known as Mrs. Zippah Yenta and Mrs. Nagelach went all over town to make a collection. A good deal of money was raised—a sight more than was ever raised through a whist or strawberry party. Tickets were printed to raffle out the ritual honors of Sponsor and Bearers of the Infant. Mr. Puppikovich bought all the tickets, reserving for himself the office of Sponsor, and selecting as Bearers my Benjy and his daughter, Miss Nellie Puppikovich.

The Berith was held in the afternoon before a small but select gathering. An extra reception was held in the evening, to which all the ladies came dressed up to kill.

Mrs. Nagelach came in a dress of black satin, a little rubbed off at the edges, with a yoke of yellow satin trimmed with black beads. She had yellow shoes on, about half a size too small. Jewelry she wore without limit: a tiara, a medallion with a heavy chain, fourteen rows of pearls, bracelets, and twenty-eight rings on her fingers. She had to hold them stiff before her, and couldn't move a hand. In her hair she had a comb studded with diamonds, and lots of feathers.

Mrs. Puppikovich wore a dress of purple silk, with a yoke of white lace. The sleeves were puffed to such an extent that you could hardly see her neck. She wore white shoes and three thousand dollars' worth of jewelry, as near as I could make out.

Mrs. Kaban came in a red dress of a flowery pattern all over. They all said that the cut of her dress was too low. Furthermore, she was a walking perfumery bottle, and all that came near her were sneezing their heads off. She was lugging around jewelry worth five thousand dollars, if a penny.

My Yiddineh came in a new dress of white silk, with green and yellow stripes—sidewise, not lengthwise. And, since my Yiddineh is short and stout, the stripes made her look still shorter and stouter. As for her jewelry, I didn't let her be put to shame—I gave her my entire stock to wear.

What greatly puzzled me was that Mrs. Puppikovich came with blond hair on her head. I was perfectly sure that she had black hair the last time I had seen her. When I told my old woman she made mock of me: "Oih," she cried, "art thou a Greener? Dost not know that blond hair is now the proper style? Next week Mrs. Kaban is also going to turn blond."

Alderman Paddy Fitzgerald came in his red automobile. He dropped in for a few minutes, left a package of baby linen, and went away—he is very busy these days.

Later on Mr. Puppikovich proposed that a report of the Berith should be sent to the Jewish papers. To the end that all Jewish-America may know of our most worthy sisters, and to serve as a good example for others.

Mr. Chapinsky, the secretary of our congregation, took his fountain pen and some sheets of paper out of his pocket and sat down to write the report. He is a beautiful hand at composition and a ready writer. What he writes in an hour would take me an entire week. When he was through he read aloud what he had written:

"Mild-hearted Matrons of Munificent Mudhole.

"The noble-hearted ladies of Mudhole, L. I., have set a good example for the whole world. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Congregation Temple Jacob has always been favorably known for the beneficent activities of its most worthy sisters.

"This week the members of our Ladies' Auxiliary once more lived up to their well-established reputation for kindness of heart. Mrs. Baranovich having given birth to an only boy at a time when her husband was in strained circumstances, our ladies took it upon themselves to arrange for the Berith at their own charge. Especial mention in this connection deserves the tireless self-sacrifice of our worthy president, Mrs. Puppikovich, and our worthy treasurer, Mrs. Kaban."

"And where do I come in?" cried Mrs. Nagelach. "How is first mention due them—didn't I work my fingers off as well?"

"Put in Mrs. Nagelach," ordered Mr. Puppikovich.

There were murmurs and whispering between the womenfolks—it was plain that a revolution might break out almost any minute.

"Put in Mrs. Fussbaenkel!" cried my Yiddineh. "She has fixed up all there was to eat, and deserves to be mentioned in the paper."

"May we all have such a good year, as you are right," Mrs. Chapinsky, the secretary's wife, supported her. "And how about yourself? And how about me? Didn't we work hard to make the affair a success? I ain't ashamed to have my name in the paper coupled with that of the wife of Chaim, the custom-peddler!"

"Bravo!" cried some of the poorer members of our Auxiliary. But Mrs. Kaban said:

"Take my name off that list." "And mine, too," cried Mrs. Nagelach. "And mine—and mine!" the really prominent members hollered. At last the secretary tore up the report and threw the pieces under the table. There I found them and pieced them together for the benefit of the readers, lest they should never hear of the noble work done by our Ladies' Auxiliary.

A Danish Jewish Drama

BY JACQUES MAYER.

It is entitled "Within the Walls," and was first produced at the leading theatre of Copenhagen a month ago. It has been played to crowded houses since then and bids fair to hold the boards for some time to come. Its author is Judge Nathanson, of Copenhagen, and it will not be long before his name as a dramatist becomes known far beyond the confines of his native Denmark.

A correspondent of the Neues Wiener Journal writes of "Innerhalb der Mauern" as follows:

The life led in our modern times within the four walls of an Orthodox Jewish family, according to patriarchal principles, is depicted most fascinatingly. In the house of the old exchange broker, Simon Levin, the old Jewish order of things still prevails. The grown-up children respect their parents, all members of the family love each other and hold together unswervingly, especially where matters of faith and religious observances are concerned. This gives this play its distinctive character, a sort of "patina," which attracts and fascinates the spectator to an unusual degree. One cannot help sympathizing with the strict sense of duty and family devotion manifested by members of the Levin family. Every Friday night, after synagogue, all of them, including the married children, meet together at the house of the parents. In these weekly reunions the older sons—Hugo the physician and Jakob the merchant—take particular pleasure. Within the walls of the parental mansion the storms of everyday business or professional life cease to be heard. There is heeded the voice and respected the opinions of the venerable father, who in his gentle way "reigns" over the family. His wishes are carried out to the smallest detail. Tradition forms the highest law.

The conflict comes in the shape of an engagement entered into by the "modern" daughter, Esther, with Dr. Herming, a clever University graduate. It is a terrible blow for the parents. Dr. Herming is not only a Christian—and no member of the house of Levin has ever married out of the faith—but his father, a prominent merchant, is a bitter enemy of Simon Levin. The elder Herming is an anti-Semite, and when Esther's father, then a young man, applied for a clerical position in the bank of which Herming was a director, the latter showed him the door, with the insulting remark that "he employed no Jews." The old man Levin finds it hard to reconcile himself to Esther's engagement, but finally his love for her prevails, and he consents to the "unnatural" marriage. He and his wife Sarah even consent to visit the house of the bridegroom's parents.

At this visit a new, and a graver, conflict arises. Not only does the elder Herming treat his Jewish guests in an insultingly condescending manner, but it transpires that Esther has promised the Herming family that the marriage shall be solemnized by a Christian clergyman and that should children be born to her they shall be baptized. When Herming, the father, tells this to Levin in a manner which does not conceal his sense of triumph, the old Jew and his wife leave the house deeply mortified. But at this juncture Esther's devotion to her family and her belief in the religion of her father becomes greater than her affection for her lover, and she declares that she is ashamed of having entered into any such agreement, which she will never be able to carry out. Terribly agitated she leaves Herming's house, overtakes her parents, and "within their walls," becomes reconciled to them.

The play ends with the Christian bridegroom following Esther, and in her home he solemnly promises to respect her Jewish faith and the love she bears for her parents. Never before, he declares, has she appeared so "grand" to him.

"Within the Walls" has been the greatest success of the Copenhagen season. The audiences are deeply impressed. It will soon be translated into German, and as its subject is of almost universal interest, will probably be seen on the American stage as well.

Modernism

BY "ACHI-YOSAF."'

Every now and again we hear of some preacher startling his audience and the community at large by advocating certain so-called revolutionary ideas. Very few, however, succeed in leaving a permanent impression. For the time being they may perhaps rival in popularity a notorious divorce case, but, like the latter, they soon die out. Some years ago a certain Rev. R. J. Campbell, well known in non-conformist circles in London, began to preach his "new theology." He almost immediately made a "hit." The London papers were full of him; all England was speaking of him. The clergy of England, headed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, uttered a public protest. Scientists, led by Oliver Lodge, were loud in their praises. Whether for him or against him, it all tended to make Campbell more conspicuous than ever. And—here's this man's most remarkable quality, and one that makes him comparable to Roosevelt—he has managed to keep himself in the public eye ever since. His services at the "City Temple" are filled to overflowing, and his adherents are forever on the increase. This would go to show that he is really moulding the thought of a certain section of the English people, and that his views are destined to have no small influence in the religious world. What are some of the more salient features of this "New Theology"? Let us quote Rev. Campbell himself:

"The starting point of the New Theology was belief in the imminence of God and the essential oneness of God and man. There was a tendency to think of God as a sort of master or lord or lawgiver, who set things agoing and was watching, and every now and then letting them know He was there. The New Theology put it in quite a different way. They believed man and the universe to be one form of the self-manifestation of God. They believed that every one was one means of the self-expression of God. They believed that the word God stood for the infinite, primordial reality whence all things sprang. There was only one source of life, and that was God. God was, so to speak, the very foundation of being. The spark in them was a spark from the divine fire. The divine essence was in every man, and God lived his life in every man."

If we examine the above very closely we find it all pretty shallow. That which pretends to originality has been stated and restated many times, and with far more force. But what is well worth noticing is this: That here is an apparently devout Christian—he states this time and time again—advocating views that tend to estrange him from Christianity altogether, and tend to bring him, if anything, nearer to Judaism.

If there is "essential oneness" between God and man, there is the same oneness between Christ and man. Christ and man are divine in the same way—the difference being merely one of degree. Mr. Campbell on this point is explicit. "Every man," he says, "is a potential Christ." As Christ was divine, so, too, are we.

The essence of salvation is to make each man a Christ-man. But what has become of "the only begotten Son of the Father," co-equal and co-eternal with God, both God and man, and therefore transcending man beyond all thought? The two doctrines are absolutely impossible to reconcile from the Christian standpoint, but become quite feasible from the Jewish point of view. And this view is further strengthened by the fact that Mr. Campbell rejects the Virgin Birth. "It creates," he says, "a moral difficulty. It means that Jesus was not like other men; that he was abnormal; and that, therefore, the life He lived was not a criterion of what ours should be." Evidently this passage implies that Jesus was a man, divine only as men are divine; the essence of God, Christ, and man being, according to the "New Theology," one and the same.

The doctrine of Atonement takes a new shape with Mr. Campbell. He says:

"That man is saved who is trying to live for God, that is for love, that is for the common life instead of for self and material gain. Imbue a man with this spirit, and forthwith his life becomes a part of the Atonement, the uplifting and ingathering of the race to God. He becomes a saviour, a sin-bearer, a burden-lifter for mankind. Divine love acts through him, and can never cease acting until sin and sorrow are done away."

Sin, which has in many circles been regarded as something more than mere disobedience, is unhesitatingly denounced as "selfishness." "It is that which makes lifewardness for the race. It is offense against the God within, a violation of the law of love. All the soul's activities are between two poles, self on one hand and the common good on the other. To live for all is to live from our own true center; to live the individual life in terms of the whole is the true self-fulfilment."

Many of the thoughts, as may be gathered from the specimens presented, are somewhat mystical, and those which are not have been expressed before. One may well ask himself, what is there in this "New Theology" that would warrant so much talking about? Why, indeed, dub it New Theology? And it isn't easy to find an answer.

Take the following as another ex-

HAVANA ANTON MOSKOWITZ, of No. 208 E. Houston Street, the well-known manufacturer of HIGH GRADE HAVANA CIGARS, has opened a Harlem retail store at No. 188 W. 116th St., bet. Lenox and 7th Aves., where he will specialize in selling cigars by the box at Wholesale Prices.

ample of the mystical and the hackneyed:

"The 'New Theology' believes in the immortality of the soul, but only on the ground that every individual consciousness is a ray of the universal consciousness, and cannot be destroyed. It believes that there are many stages in the upward progress of the soul in the unseen world before it becomes fully and unconsciously one with its infinite source. We make our destiny in the next world by our behavior in this."

Such are a few of the leading tenets of the "New Theology." It is easy to understand from them that his view of revealed religion is opposed to that of the churches, and that he repudiates altogether the view that the church is the fiduciary of a body of doctrine, committed to her charge as a sacred gift for the instruction of the world. So with the Bible. In Mr. Campbell's view it is not complete. Neither is it infallible, because the men who wrote it were not infallible. But where it is true and where it is not true each man has to decide for himself.

Campbell's preachings are but an indication of the restlessness that exists in religious circles.

A Woman Schochet.

The Jewish Daily News relates in a recent issue of the somewhat startling incident of a Rabbi granting a woman authority to become a Schochet and wield the traditional knife for the slaughtering of all kosher animals for Jewish consumption.

Commenting upon this peculiar piece of news, Dr. Gotthard Deutsch of the Hebrew Union College has the following to say in the News of June 18: "In your issue of June 9 you mention a Reform Rabbi in Slavonia who sanctioned a Jewess to become a Schochet. The Rabbi, it appears, conformed with the Orthodox laws and regulations, as far as the slaughtering of fowl and animals concerns. It is indeed an open secret in the Mishna, that the process of slaughtering of animals for consumption by scrupulous Jews may be performed by every one, with all instruments and at all hours (Hulin 15, b). The Schulchan Aruch, likewise, is inclined to license women for the function of killing animals for domestic use, though, customarily, women refrain from this singular proceeding. I, nevertheless, want to call your attention to the Rabbi Nissim, Pessahim, first chapter, folio 133, a, published in Vienna, who admits the daily occurrences of women killing animals and preparing them accordingly so as to be used in Jewish households. And the famous savant, Hayim Joseph David Azuloi, in his Birkei Joseph Sheyrei Berachah, legal appendages to the Shulhan Aruch Jus Canonium, 1 par, mentions an authorization for the performance of slaughtering given to a woman in Mantua, in the year of 5336. There are hosts of rabbis who permit women to do the killing of the animals, but they are too numerous to dwell on their lucubrations and research, while one's time is very limited in addition."

Now comes Rabbi B. Cohen, of Harrison, N. J., who replies to Dr. Deutsch as follows: "Grant me a few lines in your paper for an answer to Professor Deutsch concerning his indorsement of the license given to a woman for the practice of Schechitah by a Reform Rabbi. Admitting the leniency exercised by the first and foremost law makers, the Ramban, Rosh and Tur, towards women and their participation in Schechitah functions, we, however, are not Karaites, and the present laws and regulations are based upon the decisions and judgments of the later-day saints, the Ramo, Rashai and other contemporaries, who openly expressed themselves against woman's Schechitah, refraining rabbis from these sanctions and franchises."

Your correspondent added, likewise, his own share to the general controversy, assuring Rabbi Cohen, himself, perhaps, a Schochet, that the Slavonian woman will never migrate to America, invade New Jersey and turn competitor to the Harrison incumbent. His mention of the Karaites is unfortunate, indeed, and out of place. Followers of Nachmanides, Oschri and Rabbi Jacob of the Turim may never deserve the epithet of Karaites. The latter turned declining and showed signs of decay in the days of Saadiah Gaon and his contemporaries, hundreds of years before the advent of Ramban, Rosh and Tur. And as for the sweeping statement of the Jersey rabbi (?) that we cannot deviate from the instructions and teachings of Isserles and Lurie, the Rev. Mr. Cohen forgets or he never knew that these latter worthies are but strict adherents to and continual followers of the compilers of the Tosphoth, marginalia to the Babylonian Talmud. The latter, in the beginning of the treatise of Hulin, sanction and order the killing of animals by women. While the Talmud itself says among others, that the Schechitah may be done by women (Sebahim, f 31, b). After all, the discussion is academic, pure and simple, the Hebrew Union College will never graduate any Schochtim, etc., male or female, neither will Dr. Deutsch confer upon them Kabbalah. A German anti-Semitic publication, the "Deutsch Sociale Blatter," recently attacked the German Emperor, stating that "he was a slave to rich Jews whose only aim is to exploit the country, and in so doing was only following the late King Edward, who not only was a slave to the Jews, but at the same time the greatest enemy of Germany." The press of all shades protests against this reference to the late King Edward.

According to the text of the bill on the colonization of Portuguese Angola (as adopted by the Portuguese Parliament), every Jewish settler will receive from 60 to 100 hectares of land, with the prospect of getting the area doubled after successful ten years' work, showing that at least three-quarters of the first gift were utilized by him. After ten years, such successful colonists become the owners of their land. All ships bringing at least a hundred settlers, or material and necessities for the latter for the first twenty years, are exempt from all payments and duties, and the colonists are not expected to pay any taxes for the first five years. After two years' residence in the country every colonist must become naturalized, and his sons, who at the time of naturalization are under ten years of age, will be expected to serve in the army. Should a colonist prove unsuccessful, his land would revert to the government, and he would have no right to claim compensation for any improvements introduced by him in his property. The government, on the other hand, pledges itself not to issue any new laws in Angola for twenty years.

The Baseball Rabbi.

[Note.—The cornerstone of Ebbets Field, the new park of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, was laid on Saturday morning, July 6, at 10.30. The ceremonies lasted until noon, and Rabbi Nathan Krass, of Temple Israel, delivered the principal address. According to the Brooklyn Eagle, Rabbi Krass displayed an acute knowledge of baseball.]

Saturday morning at half-past ten
Is just about the time when
A good Jew
And a rabbi, too,
Should be in Shool.
But in Brooklyn they're more up to date,
And this tale which I want to relate,
Gives the lie
To what you and I
Always imagined a rule.
For if we believe in reports,
One of the best posted "sports"
In 'that town'
Of religious renown
Is, alack, alas!
Rabbi Nathan Krass,
Of Cincinnati's Rabbinical School!
July 6th was the set day,
With Ebbets Field in gala array,
A brass band
Was on hand
To supply music of the popular rage.
Baseball dignitaries there
Gathered on a platform where,
Pretty soon
Before noon
The cornerstone
Would be shown
To those in the select assemblage.
And when the stone was set in place,
Who was it told the populace
That knowledge
Obtained in college
Was very often commonplace?
Who was it spoke so knowingly,
Praised Brooklyn's team so glowingly?
Said that before another year would pass
Brooklyn would win,
And above the din
Let flow his oratory? 'Twas Rabbi Krass.
He showed he was no baseball "sucker."
He spoke of the prowess of Nap Rucker,
Who when, right
Could put to flight,
All "300 hitters."
He would back
Pitcher Stack
To fool them with his "spitters.
Barger's curves they were deceiving
Erwin "was there" with his receiving.
Daubert was king at first base,
Even superior to the mighty Chase,
And to tell
About Hummell
Would be a waste of space.
Cutshaw, the new man, was a "find,"
Tooley outshone all his kind.
Northern and Wheat
Were as fleet
As any in the base-stealing race.
Rabbi Krass you are a wonder,
Didn't make a baseball blunder.
But what do you know of the Torah?
What's your knowledge of Gomorrah?
How familiar are you with Rashi?
Tell us who's the Haham Bashi?
An examination in Hebrew could you
pass,
Tell us, please, Rabbi Krass?
Are you really a good Jew?
If so was this what you should do?
Don't you think it was a desecration
To have participated in this dedication?
Has your Judaism gone to decay
That you could find no other day?
For your part Judaism can go to grass,
Your only concern seems Rabbi Krass.
S. J. W.

Tens of thousands of Russian Jews have been deprived of their rights to vote, in the coming elections for representatives to the fourth Duma. This decision was made public by the Senate a few days after the third Duma had been dissolved. The motive of the government is pretty obvious. They are alive to the fact that the Jewish vote would go to the progressive parties, and by denying the rights of so many thousands of votes they hope to destroy the chances of the progressive candidates in some large cities, and thus be safer in returning even more real Russians to the fourth Duma. Needless to say, the decision of the Senate has cast a deep gloom over the Jews of Russia. It is reported from various big Russian centers that the progressives are considering the advisability of boycotting the coming election, as a protest against the decision of the Senate.

Lena Invalid Aid Society.

The Lena Invalid Aid Society bazaar in aid of its convalescent fund will be held shortly. This fund is used to enable poor convalescents to obtain a few weeks rest and recuperation so that they may be fit for work in as short a time as possible. The value of this kind of charity is of the highest. Persons discharged from hospitals when they are hardly able to walk and in a weak condition suffer agonies and frequent relapses on account of their attempts to resume their vocations before their strength has returned to them. The hospitals cannot be blamed for this condition, as their beds are so continuously in demand that the cured must give way to the immense number of cases waiting for empty beds. The Lena Invalid Aid Society has found in this work wonderful opportunity for deserving charity to the community in general. A vacation for a week or two for these weak convalescents with nourishing food is a God send to them and their despondent families.

Donations to the bazaar are earnestly solicited, and may be sent either in cash or merchandise to the president, Mrs. Sielig, 56 West 127th street.

Dr. Hertz Back.

Rabbi Dr. Joseph H. Hertz arrived in New York city on Tuesday per S. S. Kaiser Wilhelm II. Dr. Hertz was abroad for the past two months, in which time he spoke in the Duke's Place, Bayswater, Philpot Street, Hampstead and Dalston Street Synagogues in London; in the Great, Higher Broughton and Central Synagogues in Manchester; Prince's Road Synagogue, in Liverpool, and the Great and New Briggate Synagogues in Leeds.

The Mogador correspondent of the London Morning Post writes that daily reports from Marrakesh by letter and verbally by runners confirm the impression that the disorder in that city is growing more menacing from week to week. The real secret of the trouble is the furious rivalry between the two most powerful chieftains of the great Atlas, El Glawi and M'Tugui, who are each striving for the supremacy. Early last week Mulai Hafid's letter appointing El Glawi's brother Madani as Governor reached Marrakesh, and, according to custom, should have been read in the principal mosque on Friday, but M'Tugui filled the building with armed men, and the letter was not read. Meanwhile the scum of the populace turned out, their prime object being to loot the Jews' town, which, fortunately, was saved from plunder by a strong force of military and police under orders from the Bashaw, Kaid Mennou.

Israel, the Baal-Shem.

Though there were others preceding Israel, known as Baalei-Shem or Gutte Jueden, to mention but Adam the Baal-Shem, Yoel the Baal-Shem and Solomon the Baal-Shem, yet all pale and dwindle into insignificance before Israel, who towers above them from his shoulders upwards. The name of Israel is indeed the universal shibboleth among all sorts of Israelites in all parts of the world. Russian Ukraine, Wolyhnia and Podolia, Austrian Galicia, Bukowina and Hungary, Turkish Palestine, Egypt and Tripoli, as well as numerous States of the Union and provinces of the Canadian Dominion harbor and shelter thousands of Jews and Jewesses, who know of the great achievements of Israel, the Gutte Jued, the Wonder Rabbi, the Baal-Shem Tove. Israel himself was, perhaps a product of his age, and offshoot of surrounding conditions, a son of the French Renaissance, the Great Reformation and Martin Luther's Protestant schism. Simhah Pinsker, father of Dr. Leon Pinsker, the author of Autoemancipation and predecessor of Herzlian Zionism, in his collection of writings, named L'kutel Kadmonioth, demonstrates the fact that Israel in all times and climes, periods and seasons, lands and habitations adopted prevailing environments. Thus, with the launching of Christianity among heathen nations, there arose a schism in Israel, the Sadducees, at the formation of the Islamic cult there appeared on the surface the Karaitic division, and with the introduction of the Lutheran secession the Hassidical sect of the Jews made its presence felt, under the guidance of leadership of Israel the Gutte Jued.

Israel the Baal-Shem might have posed as a Reformer, had he lived in the age of Geiger, Holdheim, Wise and Einhorn. He strove with his might and soul to liberate his people from the Talmudic fetters and Rabbinic manacles. He abhorred medieval casuistry and traditional hair-splitting, detesting customary ceremonies and lifeless functions. He, indeed, introduced songs, declamations and chanting among his followers, during prayers, services and devotional gatherings, openly condemning the hoary lamentations and time honored mourning weeping and wailing. He discarded chauvinism, blue blood and patriotic methods, turning rather democratic in his actions and doings, which tendencies and traits have been continually adopted by his followers to this very day, the rich never exercising any licentious privileges and the indigent never displaying any genuflection, timidity or hackneyism.

The following legend may illustrate Israel's preference for the mundane affairs at the detriment of the spiritual pursuits and his regard for the present needs at the sacrifice of the past and the future alike. Sunday preceding the lunar New Year is devoted to penitence, prayer and devotion, pious Jews and Jewesses rising early, at 2 in the morning, and going to synagogue for meditation and prayer. Israel, however, was missing all the while. All quests and searching turning fruitless and futile. Dressed in a coarse peasant's jacket, fastened with a rope and armed with a big ax, Israel the Baal-Shem, returned from the neighboring forest, carrying a heavy load of wood on his shoulders, bound toward the hut of a poor widow, who was sick and helpless, lacking the means for the purchase of fuel to warm up the dwelling for herself and her afflicted children.

Israel Baal-Shem gave indeed material for both Elijah, the Wilnaer Genius, and Moses Mendelson, the great philosopher, the constructive forces of the former and the destructive efforts of the latter deriving, likewise, from identical sources and uniform resources, differing but in this particular ways, the school of the Wilna prelate modifying, but the system and method of the Talmudic teachings in accord with the modern elucidations and the novel applications; Mendelson's school, however, dispensed with the Talmud entirely, following, rather, the Karaitic or Sadduceean ways, in which instances they are bound to decay, as the cases are in France, Italy and great portions of Germany, where assimilation and conversion reap Jewish harvests, time and again.

Plus X. and the Jews.

During the nine years in which the present Pope was chaplain in Toinbolo he gave lessons during several summers in a Jewish family occupying a villa near the village as a country home. In 1867, when he was called as priest to Salzano, he stood there in friendly relation with the Jewish manufacturer, Romanin Jacur. He was often a guest in Jacur's family circle and often asked and received help of him for his poor. The manufacturer preferred to have the friendly priest dispense his alms to doing it himself. When Sarto became canon in Treviso this close relation with Jacur ceased, but as bishop of Mantua, the city that has a large Jewish congregation, Guiseppe Sarto found there Romanin Jacur again, who had removed to that city, and the old relations were renewed. Advanced to position of Patriarch of Venice, Cardinal Sarto dispensed alms so zealously that he often found himself in embarrassment. Then he always turned to a rich Jewish business man, who willingly helped him out, so that the noble priest could continue his good deeds. When Cardinal Sarto ascended the papal chair, Romanin Jacur,

A LEGEND

Appropriate to Tisho b'Ab.

"תשעה באב"

BY RABBI S. FYNE.

When the Jewish nation was about to be dispossessed of their own land and sent into exile a second time, the Angel of Peace "שר שלום" with a countenance expressive of deep sorrow and great concern came and prostrated himself before the throne of mercy and said, "Lord God of Israel, Merciful Father, have pity upon thy hapless children. I hear," said the angel, "that a decree had gone forth from Thee that Thy people shall lose the possession of their own sweet home and be banished into exile. But how will they be able to exist in the land of the stranger when they are so quarrelsome, when there is among them neither brotherly love nor unity nor harmony or peace? Why, between the unfriendliness from within, and the positive hatred from without—between these two destructive agencies there will be but very few left of them! Here, in their own land, they were unable to agree upon any national policy. Instead of remaining one 'united nation' they, after the death of Solomon, soon split up into two hostile kingdoms, and since then their disunion, disintegration and disruption has grown apace, gone from bad to worse, the spirit of disunion has begotten so many children that there are among them, at this day, as many sects as tribes. There are the Pharisees, the Sadducees, the Essenes, the Therapeutae, the Hellenists, the Zealots and the Sicarii—all warring against one another, all plotting against each other and all indirectly fighting more for the enemy than against him—fighting more effectively for the Romans than the Roman legendaries themselves. What one sect declares as 'Kosher' the other avers as 'Trepah.' What one affirms as 'Osur' the other asserts as 'Mutter.' What the one pronounces as 'right,' comes the other and says it is 'wrong'—there is no unanimity upon any question of importance they do not even agree to differ! And, how, my Lord, will a people, with such a disposition to fight among themselves, be able to exist in a hostile environment? Here, in their own land, though fighting one another, they can yet occasionally forget their own differences and unite to fight their common enemy, as was the case during the Maccabean period—particularly under the benign rule of Queen Saloma—because they had, after all, a common land to fight for. But in the land of the stranger, where they will have no land of their own to fight for, and where their enemies will be the 'many' and they the 'few'—where they will have no chance at all to fight their common enemy, why, there, their disposition to fight will find its only outlet among themselves.

"They will fight one another from 'within," and the common enemy may be relied upon to fight them all from 'without," with the inevitable result that Thy people, upon whom Thou hast spent such a force of stupendous miracles, on whose behalf Thou hast displayed the wondrous deeds will be entirely wiped off from the face of the earth in a very short space of time! Have pity, therefore, O Lord, and send them not into exile—if only because of their fighting propensity," so prayed and pleaded the Angel of Peace.

GOD'S ANSWER.

"My dear angel," answered God. "I have heard your prayer on behalf

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

(Exclusive Correspondence to THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

Anniversary of Dr. Adler's Death and His Successor Still Unchosen—Signs of Bitter Feeling Arising Out of a Prolonged Controversy—Plans for Further Delays—Jewesses and the Dowager Queen of England's Great One-Day Street Hospital Collection—Her Majesty's Thanks—Big Jewish Tailors' Strike Ends—Further Tribute to the Historical Scholarship of Elkin Adler—The Ito Conference.

London, July 5, 1912.

Twelve months have almost elapsed since the death of Dr. Adler, and that his place is difficult to fill is only too well known by the fact that we are still without a new Chief Rabbi. The exact anniversary of the death is July 7. The community still labors its way towards an appointment, but the only definite things so far to be recorded are the appointment of delegates by the various syndicates and the production of a list of names of candidates. The last of these is Rabbi Dr. B. Drachman, who will shortly arrive in England as a candidate upon the invitation of the Select Committee.

Troubles and difficulties, however, seem to multiply rather than diminish and the latest news is of a distinctly bitter discussion between the chief Jewish newspapers in this country. Insinuations have been made by one journal that a compact had been entered into between Dr. Hyamson and the Hampstead synagogue in order to secure his election as Chief Rabbi by means which are not open and above board. The charges were made in an anonymous letter in the journal in question and does not perhaps necessarily compromise that journal. The full ventilation of all grievances is generally a good thing, but probably also there are times when some things might be left unsaid or expressed differently.

The committee of representatives of the synagogues of Manchester has passed a resolution expressing its opinion that the Chief Rabbinate conference recently held erred in restricting the area of selection by geographical and national boundaries and in so doing has failed in its duty of providing the best candidates obtainable. The desire is further expressed that the whole question should be referred back once more for further consideration.

Against this very strong protests have been put forward against further delay and against the aimless results of nine months' deliberations. With the holiday season approaching, however, further delay is inevitable, and it is doubtful whether the subject will be reopened really seriously until the fall. The Select Committee cannot be said to have adopted a very bold course at recent meetings or we should have had a definite selection of one of the two learned gentlemen whose names have been put forward conditionally for election.

The offer to Dr. Drachman has aroused much interest, and presuming his qualifications are such as we understand they are on this side it is suggested that it is an error to have opened up the possibility of an election when his selection might eventually turn out to be the most obvious way out of the trouble. A large number of the members of the community would prefer the immediate selection of a Chief Rabbi even if he were not all that could be desired rather than a further prolongation of a regrettable controversy.

The Queen Alexandra one-day street collection for the London hospitals was the biggest success ever achieved in the way of such functions. A large number of Jewish ladies took their share in seeking donations in the streets during the day chosen, and Sir Adolph Tuck, a well known member of the community, has received a special letter of thanks from the Queen Dowager through General Sir Dighton Probyn in the following words:

"The total sum collected by Lady Tuck and your daughters, assisted by the kind help of your local committee of ladies, amounting to over $6,200, is simply marvelous, and I write, by Queen Alexandra's command, to ask you to convey to Lady Tuck and your daughters, and through them to the ladies above referred to, her Majesty's best thanks for their exertions and her congratulations on the success of their labors."

Lady Tuck had charge of the collection in two London districts and secured $6,200 in a day. It will be noted that all the money was practically collected in pennies. The amount of work involved will be understood.

Completely overshadowed by the trouble among the London transport workers, little has been heard of the strike of some 10,000 Jews and aliens in the east end of London, engaged in the ladies' costume and mantle making trades. After being in progress for over seven weeks, this dispute originally declared as a sympathetic movement in connection with the recent strike of west end tailors, has just terminated.

The strikers are employed by master tailors, most of whom are in a small way of business, and make for the large city and west end wholesale and manufacturing houses. The majority of the latter supported the masters against the men, being convinced after investigation, that the workers were fairly remunerated, and at a recent meeting over $3,000 was subscribed by the wholesale firms in under ten minutes on behalf of the smaller master tailors.

A few of the city houses, however, went behind the backs of the master tailors who supplied them, and signed the men's conditions, and even set some of the men up as "masters" in competition with their former employers. As a consequence, the master tailors were compelled to give way, and the men have come to terms with the masters individually, securing in practically every instance all their demands.

These were: A rise in prices; union labor only; a shorter working day, and the abolition of the "dual system"—the latter an important technical point which had been keenly contested. Delegates from the men's union have called upon the individual employers, and if the master tailor has not immediately conceded all the demands put forward, he has had to pay each man in his shop $1.85 for every day that elapsed before he gave way. As a result it is estimated that the prices of the cheaper grades of ladies' costumes and mantles will have to be advanced about 25 per cent.

Elkan Adler, the younger son of the late Chief Rabbi, was on July 1 elected president of the Jewish Historical Society. Mr. Adler was born in 1861 and is a lawyer and a member of the Incorporated Law Society. He has played an important part in the discussion of many great Jewish questions and was a vice-president of the International conferences held in Berlin in 1891 and 1903. He has traveled in the East, in India and in North and South America, and has featured historical study and investigation. He is a member of the American Jewish Historical Society and of the Royal Academy of History of Spain. He writes well both in English and in French, and is a great contributor to home and foreign learned periodicals. His book, "Auto de Fe and the Jew," will always be a valuable source of reference to investigators of Jewish history.

From the reports of the Ito conference in Vienna which have reached this country, it is clear that a series of lively and interesting sessions were held. Zangwill's address as president was a valuable historical survey of the movement, and he declared that fresh information secured by him from engineers made him regret more than ever the historical mistake made by the Zionist Congress in 1905 over the question of the establishment of an Itoland in East Africa. He reviewed the Cyrenaica project and its abandonment, and referred to the high hopes aroused in connection with the Mesopotamian alternative. A Jewish homeland is still impossible there, although the country is now being developed under Turkish auspices and with British capital and probably Indian labor.

Mr. Zangwill also commented upon the Mexican and South American schemes for Jewish land settlement. Joseph Fels, a wealthy soapmaker and a colleague of Zangwill's, has interested himself very largely in these schemes. Especially has he bought land and set up works in Paraguay, which, were it not for the fact that the country is seething with civil war, might afford employment to Jewish immigrants and provide the nucleus of a colony. Zangwill further reported that on June 27 the sixty-ninth party of emigrants, numbering 200 people, was dispatched for Galveston.

During the more confidential sessions of the conference Zangwill made a statement which dealt with the already known proposal of the Portuguese Government to allot to Jews an extensive mileage of country for settlement in Angola, on the lower West African coast. With regard to this proposal, the delegates passed a resolution to the effect that in consequence of the unregulated, unsurveyed and even dangerous state of the country, as well as in view of the climatic difficulties and the high cost of living and wages, it was not possible to recommend individual emigration there. The task could only be carried out successfully, if at all, by an organization invested with the necessary guarantees and powers. A commission was elected to examine the Angola scheme more fully and to draw up some proposals.

Later sessions of the conference were devoted to the question of reorganization. Although heavy was exhibited at times, in the end the common enthusiasm led to a series of friendly compromises.

Philadelphia may now rejoice that it has a rabbinical cause célèbre.

The new Zionist executive for this country is practically the same as the old. This shows that the American Zionist leaders have found themselves.

Although Nathan Straus has openly expressed his appreciation of the claims of the Zionists, it is a far cry from this to making him out to be an avowed adherent of the movement.

The American Israelite appears to be tired of new national Jewish organizations. Why? More have been fathered by the Reformers than by the followers of traditional Judaism. The organizations of the latter are truly national, without the need or the pretense thereof.

At last has The Jewish Review and Observer, of Cleveland, awakened to the desirability of doing altogether away with the temporary synagogues. We have protested against these miscegenated, ephemeral bodies for countless years. Of course, temporary places of worship in suitable and dignified surroundings may be justified; but the strange halls which resound with the solemn chants of our ritual at the period of the high holy days are quite indefensible.

The Jewish Exponent in a recent issue devotes considerable space to the subject of the ostracism of the Jew in some summer resorts and then at the end of the discussion admits that the matter does not deserve extended consideration. If the Jews can secure the discontinuance of the odious legend, "No Hebrews accommodated," in various forms of summer resort advertising, they may rest content. For, self-respecting Jews carefully avoid such places as will undoubtedly be uncongenial abiding places, if only for a summer holiday.

The Eastern District Council "stands for partisans, for personal animosities." If an orthodox organ or leader had made this statement, at once would the hue and cry be raised that the effete (?) Judaism of the East is trembling for its very life! But this declaration emanates from one who calls Isaac M. Wise the "greatest organizing genius in American Judaism." Through the Eastern District Council, let us hope, the rout of Reformed Judaism in these parts will be rendered all the more complete. And so our community owes (1) a debt of gratitude to the organizers of the council.

We are surprised, to put it mildly, to find that the Sea Gate Sisterhood of Coney Island are holding their summernight's festival this year on our holy Sabbath. The columns of the daily and Jewish press give us this information and we can but hope it is incorrect. For an organization that calls itself Jewish to give an affair on our Sabbath—on Friday evening—is nothing less than a profanation of our sacred traditions. We trust the Sea Gate Sisterhood will make promptly the amende honorable and hold their summernight's festival on another day.

One of the most inspiring and beautiful services of our ritual of worship is that utilized for the Fast commemorating the Destruction of Jerusalem. Nearly nineteen centuries have come and gone since Titus and his Roman legionaries laid waste the great Temple on the Mount of Olives and the fair site of the city of Jerusalem, and despite this great lapse of time, the Jewish people preserve intact the great tradition of their splendor. Those of us to whom our traditions and ceremonies signify something real and true still exclaim sincerely, "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, may my right hand forget its cunning!" Only in the haunts of our Reformed brethren is Tisha b'Ab looked upon (by some strange, obscure process of reasoning) as a day of rejoicing. How can so solemn and portentous a day have aught in common with a "mission" of Israel, the missionaries of which are out of joint with our history and traditions?

THE APPROACHING STRUGGLE

THE problem of the election of the new English chief rabbi has now developed new problems. The organ of the London community is intensely dissatisfied with the prospect that the electors will have to take their choice between Rabbi A and Rabbi B. It insists that this is not the way to select a spiritual head for the most important and influential Jewry of the world. It would have the way smoothed by an inner committee charged with the implicit duty of first eliminating all candidates but the successful one.

We, for our part, cannot appreciate this point of view. What injury will an election of one rabbi over another work, provided the electors are honorable men who are anxious to do their duty? An election for high office takes place here every four years, and the republic has not yet fallen because of this recurring struggle, at times acerbitous beyond the point of endurance almost.

The difficulty with the Londoners then would seem to lie in the British character, as this has reacted upon Jewish souls. English Jews are forever prating of their independence of leaders, of the willingness of every soldier in the communal ranks to do his full duty. But, when the world without is about to be treated as it were to a display of the hidden communal forces, when canvassing—so terrible is this idea to our English brethren—is to go on openly, then the warning note is sounded.

After all, will not the orderly process of election result in the call of the man best fitted for the position? We think it will. Anglo-Jewry in part is so distressed at the thought that so many men of various talents and different abilities will elect their future chief rabbi! Aye, there's the rub! Better have the inner council, against whom one has always fulminated in the past as autocratic and dictatorial, do the selecting than a promiscuous assembly of electors gathered from all sections of the community. For, if the choice of the inner council were to turn out a failure, the dear British Jewish public could be regaled week by week with attacks on those who are deemed responsible for the impasse.

Interesting the condition is. What will the outcome be?

In The American Leader for the 27th of June former Congressman William S. Bennet has "An Analysis of the Dillingham Bill." His ruthless and destructive criticisms of the proposed measure show what a faulty piece of legislation it is. He sets out that the bill contains some incorrect definitions of the matters it attempts to regulate. And his remarks concerning the literacy test of the bill are luminous and apposite. They explain the inconsequential nature of this portion of the bill. For instance, the test requires the alien to be able to read some twenty-five words from the Constitution of the United States, and these extracts must be printed in double small pica type. Congressman Bennet well says: "I should like to see Greek, Arabic, Turkish and Hebrew in double small pica type." So should we. Finally, the English in certain parts of the bill is ungrammatical, and thus litigation and confusion in administration will be effectively stimulated if the Dillingham bill should ever be enacted into law. It will be well for our legislators at Washington to carefully consider Mr. Bennet's words in this article. "A stitch in time saves nine."

We have ever held muscular Judaism, so-called, in high esteem. We have never been so narrow and so prejudiced as to maintain that rabbis in Israel have no right or license to take an interest in athletics, or in any form of sport which is manly and dignified. Therefore, if a rabbi joins others of his fellow citizens in dedicating with some appropriate ceremonies a field to be devoted to the playing of baseball or football or similar divisions of athletic endeavor, we should be the very last to venture upon a criticism of his action. But, when a rabbi, a teacher in Israel, thinks it is of a piece with his sacred office to assist in dedicating a baseball field on the holy Sabbath, we think the time to cry "Halt!" has come. Our remarks are rendered pertinent by the action of Rabbi Nathan Krass, of Brooklyn, who acted thus on a recent Saturday morning when the cornerstone of the Ebbets baseball field in that borough was laid. Rabbi Krass is, of course, a Reformer, and may retort that the Sabbath has been practically abolished by his school. As long, however, as he continues to occupy a quasi-public position, his actions may be laid on the scale of public Jewish opinion, and criticised when necessary.

Hermann Struck, the Berlin artist, having returned to his home by way of London, has been giving a reporter of The Jewish Chronicle the benefit of his impressions of America. The distinguished co-religionist finds that the social rishus in this country is far more strongly marked than in Russia. Sad to say his words ring true. In Russia very probably among the upper classes Jew qua Jew is not despised. But in free America, with our immortal Declaration of Independence guaranteeing to every citizen the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, anti-Semitism of the social stripe is most deeply rooted. Yet this condition is not discouraging; on the contrary, so competent an observer as Herr Struck proves himself to have been finds in it a factor of great promise for the future well-being of Judaism in America. If there were not this social ostracism of Jews present here, opines Herr Struck, our Jews would not employ themselves as they do to the benefit and advantage of their fellow-Jews. And in the field of our religion in this country this condition, as we have ever been at pains to point out, has worked well. In the flux of ologies, in the heterodoxy of American life, it is just this social ostracism of the Jew that has preserved the present generation of Reformers to their attenuated synagogue.

OUR NATIONAL JAHRZEIT

ויקרא אדני אלקים צבאות כיום ההוא לכבי ולמספר ולקרחה ולחגר נגד
And in that day did the Lord God of hosts call to weeping, and to mourning, and to baldness, and to girding with sackcloth. (Isa. xxiii., 12.)

TISHO-B'OV—our national Jahrzeit, a day of doom and gloom, the blackest day in the Jewish calendar—how shall we observe this day? In despair or in hope?

According to a pathetic Midrash God Himself put this question to His Ministering Angels. The angels pointed out the manner in which human beings mourn for their dead, whereupon God followed out in every particular the human analogy. As human beings drape their doors with sackcloth, so did God wrap the heavens in blackness "and made sackcloth their covering." As human beings put out the bright lights in their dwellings, so did God cause sun and moon to be darkened "and the stars to withdraw their shining." As human beings sit on low "mourner's benches," so was the very Throne cast down and thus "did the Ancient of days sit thereon" weeping. . . .

This picture of God mourning in heaven is, as we may readily see, the product of an imagination deeply stirred by grief. There is naught else that so awakens our imagination as does grief. In sorrow our vision is dilated. We see things by the brighter light of the spirit, while the lesser light of the body is dim with tears. And therefore, this picture is an eloquent testimony to the deepfelt sorrow of the Jewish heart over the loss of Zion. Dark as the picture undoubtedly is, there gleams through it the celestial light of the true Jew's love for his ancestral home. And therefore, this picture furnishes a reply to our query. Let this day be observed in a sad yet hopeful spirit. For does not the light of this tender love shed its brightness upon this very day of mourning and sackcloth, relieving its sadness, offsetting its gloom?

My meaning is that sincere sorrow is its own comfort, its own compensation. When we mourn for the loss of our beloved, our very act of mourning strengthens our love for them. Our very act of mourning holds vividly before our mind's eye that which, by the decree of the True Judge, has been withdrawn from our bodily sight. Hence in very truth, they are not really lost over whom Love, faithful beyond the grave, loudly laments. Pity not the dead upon whose tomb tears fall in abundance like dew from heaven,—pity the dead, who solitary in life, are forsaken even in death, over whose bier none fall prostrate, and upon whose resting place none plant the ever-blooming flowers of Memory! For the dead are kept alive, in a very real sense, by our tokens of grief. The tears of the living are the immortality of the dead!

With this thought in mind, I ask: Is Zion, too, one of the Unwept Dead? If so, then Zion is dead indeed. If the memory of Zion, if sorrow for her downfall, is but perpetuated in Jewish Literature and not in Jewish Life, through poetic figures such as those quoted from the above Midrash and not through pulsing hearts of men and women, if but printer's ink and not scalding tears are shed for her, then her destruction is completed—not indeed by the hand of the Roman but by the heart of the Jew! But Zion mourned is Zion Remembered, and Zion Remembered is Zion Resuscitated; Restored, Immortalized!

But where shall we look for evidences that Zion still lives in the heart of the Jew? Surely not upon the fashionable beaches that dot the Atlantic coastline, where a modicum of summer-religion is being cultivated by those who love to indulge, even at this season, in boisterous summer enjoyments. These prosperous sons and daughters of Israel, whose religion is abbreviated like their bathing costumes, know not of Zion. And surely not among Theologians of a certain well-known brand, who maintain that Tisho-B'ov, far from being a day of sadness, is a day of gladness when Israel entered into its "larger" heritage as "Prophet to the Gentiles." Who has the patience to argue with these business-theologians who have their eye upon the main chance and whose theology pivots around the question of worldly success for the Emancipated Jew?

Look for those evidences elsewhere. Look for them not among the minority but among the majority of our people. Look for them among the so-called masses. Look for them wherever the Song of Zion is still chanted soulfully, appealingly. Look for them wherever the name of Zion still awakens passionate thrills of love, ineffable pains of consuming yearnings. Look for them, above all, wherever, under the White-and-Blue flag of Zion, new works are being instituted looking towards the rehabilitation of our religion, our language and our land. And if you have found these evidences, these numerous palpating proofs of the true Jew's undying passion for Zion, will you deny that Zion lives forever? Will you deny that the very sorrow for Zion is a source of life, of light, of joy?

Strange to say, even while I am writing these words, the postman hands me a card from Jerusalem bearing the picture of the Wailing Wall and beneath it a message from a New York friend now touring Palestine. And while I am endeavoring to express the thought that sorrow compensates itself, my far-off friend puts the whole paradox in an apt phrase: "The sight of the Wailing Wall makes a sensitive heart ache with joy." Yes, "ache with joy"—that's the word! In the tears that are shed for Zion there is just as much joy as there is pain.

Do you not remember in this connection the story of Rabbi Akibah and his fellows? They visited together the ruins of Jerusalem and saw in the frightful desolation the literal fulfilment of the evil prophecies concerning it. The other rabbis wept, but Rabbi Akibah laughed out aloud. Thereupon his companions indignantly asked for an explanation. But Rabbi Akibah said that the very cause that fills them with sorrow fills him with joy and hope. But, evidently, his companions did not understand that Rabbi Akibah was—aching with joy!

Time was when no one but the policeman "on the beat" troubled himself as to the "welfare" of the poor pushcart peddler, and the policeman's trouble usually spelt woe for the peddler. Now, with our Board of Aldermen and our own communal organizations giving thought as to his condition, one may hope that his future will be bright and "regular." The last word is the most important: let the peddler know and understand what he may regularly do.

The third annual report of the "great and glorious" Kehillah is a neat little pamphlet. It contains the address of the chairman at the convention and the reports of the different bureau chiefs. We miss, however, a financial table of the work. It would have been interesting to the wider community to learn what the Kehillah has done with the comparatively large sums entrusted to it; what it proposes to do with the unexpended balances still under its control. In the address of Dr. Magnes, the chairman, one part particularly attracted our attention; it is that where he devotes his remarks to the abortive attempt made to incorporate the "great and glorious" Kehillah. So specious is his argument that we beg leave to give it here in full for the benefit of our readers:

An attempt was made by us at the last session of the State Legislature to secure articles of incorporation for the Kehillah, the Jewish Community of New York city. This attempt was unsuccessful because of the opposition of various elements of the community not as yet included in the Kehillah. Some may be of the opinion that it is too soon for us to claim a legal title to the name Kehillah. But why too soon? We are the one attempt to form a central Jewish organization. We have brought together a larger number of Jewish societies than has ever before been brought together under the auspices of a central body in New York city. Our societies now number, including those of the federations, over 675. We have representatives of every kind of Jew in the community. We have the adherence of most of the principal organizations of the community. The leaders of the community, as represented by the rabbis, the theological schools, the teachers, the social workers, the newspapers, are associated with us. No organization has ever been more representative of a community. Not even the government can be said to represent every individual in the State; no more can the Kehillah ever think of satisfying every single Jew. But why were we opposed? Is it because we are not, in fact, the community? Or is it because of lack of knowledge of our purpose and of our activities? Whatever it be, I am glad to say that just as we have outlived the dire prophecies of the past three years, so shall we grow from strength to strength until we shall have acquired what is much more important than a legal title, namely, moral authority in New York city.

"A GOOD WAY TO CELEBRATE."

That was a novel method adopted by a well-known playwright and war correspondent, who recently married a well-known actress. Instead of feasting a large number of wedding guests and indulging in the usual festivities which are a part of these feasts, the newly-married couple chartered one of the Coney Island steamboats and gave an outing to five hundred East Side mothers and children.

All of these were taken to the Sea Breeze pavilion at the island and treated to a feast of good things, dips in the surf and various games were indulged in on the beach, and the mothers and the youngsters had a gay old time.

The newly-weds must have enjoyed to the full, as hosts, the immensity of the pleasure thus afforded their guests, old and young, and felt that they had done a novel but a good thing.

This is a splendid example of how to celebrate and might be followed with much satisfaction to others. Who will be next?

L'AIGLON.

A young man was introduced to a young lady as Dr. Bleibein. "What kind of a doctor?" asked the girl "from Missouri." "An allopath, homeopath or osteopath; a dentist, veterinary surgeon or chiroprapist; philosopher or perhaps rabbi?" When told that she had finally guessed his profession, she continued: "What lucky dogs you rabbis are. You don your vestments but once and you are being "doctored"

Absolutely the Purest Table Water

In all the world there is no other known spring like the great, never-falling

Spring in the side of a two thousand-foot mountain at Ellenville, New York. It was first tapped, long before the Revolution, by a prospector, who tunneled five hundred feet into the mountainside. Then, for more than a century, it was lost, and in its stead there seemed to exist nothing but a legend of a spring of wonderful purity. In 1905 it was rediscovered and in 1906 the property surrounding the spring was acquired, the finest and most sanitary water plant in the world was erected, and the water, in still and sparkling form, put on the market at a moderate price.

It is bottled ONLY at the spring, but is on sale everywhere. Sun-Ray table water is delicious and absolutely the purest in the world; and can be drunk in any quantity with positive benefit.

all your life long, even if you had not had the most elementary school education. You even don't have to resort to the methods of your predecessors, the "imported rabbis," who all pretended to hold doctoral degrees from German universities, or of that theological professor of yours who by plagiarizing a French writer recently cheated a German university out of a degree."

The rabbi on his way to Sunday school on Sunday mornings would meet a number of Catholics, who were on their way to the early mass, and who at first mistook him for a Catholic priest on account of his high collar and big black tie, which had the appearance of a clerical vest. The children would lift their caps and wish him "Good morning, Father," and one morning a young girl half awake and in doubt as to his priestly office, summoned up courage and greeted him. "Good evening, Father." To which he replied: "Good morning, daughter of mine."

The Reform Jewish congregation of — re-elected its rabbi at a substantial increase in salary, so runs the newspaper notice. It was nothing more than right. He had absolved them of all religious obligations except that of paying their dues. He excused them from rising at Borechu and Shema, and of joining in the responsive readings. He even reads for them the silent prayer. They will soon expect him to excuse them from attending services, too, and in exchange again raise his salary.

Beginning at the Right Place.
With the cry everywhere about the high cost of living, the inventive and economic bumps on men's heads have been expanded on various devices, and panaceas are offered the public as a result of their brains being put in motion.
If the cost of living pinches anywhere it is at the table, so why not begin just where the living business begins—the cost of napkins, for instance. Well, you can trust America and Americans to do things, and even napkins are not too small to demand their attention, so we have "Nipkan Napkins," a mercerized cotton napkin made and finished as beautifully as the most expensive linen that ever came across the pond, and they cost only about one-fourth as much as even ordinary linen napkins.
Nipkan Napkins, be it remembered, are intended for every-day wear, and are so economical that people who never use napkins at their tables may use them at all meals; the original cost is so small that aristocracy is put out of business so far as exclusiveness is concerned—thanks to Nipkan Napkins. These napkins are finished in the best manner, perfectly hemmed and joined at the corners so as not to unravel and of the most artistic designs such as appeal to the fastidious. Hotel keepers, boarding house owners, restaurant proprietors and the proud possessors of a family should ask to see these Nipkan Napkins at all dry goods stores. They are identified by a gold label with the word "Nipkan Napkins" forming a parallelogram—a trade-mark composed of the word Napkin and reversed spelled Nipkan, so this is a secret it is well to make public—makes the memory better and easier. When ordering napkins, just reverse and you get "Nipkan" Napkins. See.

Elstone Park Hotel.

Hundreds of thousands of people have been visitors to the Rockaways, and it can be justly said that they have never seen the most attractive place there, the Elstone Park Hotel, at Bayswater, the extremity of Jamaica Bay.

Here is a hotel that all New York can be proud of, as are patrons of the place who go there from year to year.

The Elstone Park Hotel was made for luxury-loving people, its verandas, Italian gardens, dining rooms, etc., rivaling any in or near New York, are not surpassed even in Newport, where the famous Casino is the chief attraction as a public place.

This season it is under new and competent management, Messrs. Herndon and Saunders having leased the hotel for a term of years and who are providing the best of everything for their patrons.

All the features characteristic of a first-class hotel are to be found here amid landscape gardening, ocean breezes and bayside coolness that should make the Elstone Park Hotel the foremost summer establishment in America. The new management is exerting itself to accomplish this result, and after all, the rates are within the reach of all.

Kiamesha, N. Y.

The Lake View Hotel, Kiamesha Lake, N. Y., is the newest addition to Sullivan County's many summer hotels, and is most delightfully situated on a knoll overlooking and commanding an unsurpassed view of Kiamesha Lake and surrounding country.

The Lake View Hotel is a revelation to all who are familiar with hotel construction in the mountains, and presents many novelties in construction. The dining room, with seating capacity for 300, is in the front of the house, unusually reserved for parlors elsewhere, and this feature alone gives this hotel an individuality that does credit to its designer, the owner of the house, Mr. Louis Margolin. The wainscoting and ceilings are of metal in ornamental patterns that give decorative character and fire proof protection, that is extended to all parts of the house, and in every room. The distinguishing feature of this hotel is to give its guests the most orthodox kosher cuisine, and to which the careful and alert attention of the management is directed. It is a matter of pride with Mr. Margolin to give orthodoxy the refinement of a perfectly modern building, combined with strict observance of the dietary laws, so that the old and the new are harmoniously blended and must redound to the credit of the management and to the complete satisfaction of the guests. The Lake View House has in all 175 rooms, newly furnished throughout.

The Arverne Casino, restaurant and hotel, corner Vernam avenue and Boulevard, has been remodeled, renovated and put in first class condition this season by its new proprietor, Mr. J. Rudin, who leased the property for a number of years.

This is the original Arverne Casino and is splendidly equipped with all the amusement and recreation facilities, and in addition has elegantly furnished rooms for families, with or without board. The restaurant out of doors is a feature of the Casino, to which special attention is given, service being a la carte, at popular prices, only the best food prepared by a competent chef is served here. A first class cabaret and musical entertainment is given every evening and is drawing immense crowds. Mr. Rudin is an enterprising proprietor and gives promise of making the Arverne Casino as glorious as in the past when it was the social center of Arverne.

Sharon Springs, N. Y.

The Union Hotel, under the management of Joseph and Ida Garsony, is up to date in every particular, including electric lights throughout the entire house. Mr. and Mrs. Garsony formerly had the Hiller House, and there, as in the renovated Union Hotel, made a reputation for keeping a strictly kosher establishment. Their patrons continue as guests from year to year, and the growth of their business is commensurate with the increased facilities afforded by the larger house they now conduct to such satisfaction to all concerned.

Lake Mohegan House.

For those who do not wish to go too far from the city and who would enjoy the combined advantages of mountain and seashore, the Lake Mohegan House, Peekskill, N. Y., is the ideal place. Situated on the lake from which its name is derived and one of the many beautiful lakes in the State, the Lake Mohegan House offers every amusement and recreation to its guests and a splendid strictly kosher cuisine. Mr. L. Wasserman, the capable proprietor, gives his people the best attention in a modern house.

A LEGEND

of My people. I listened attentively to all your pleadings. I am fully aware of that unfortunate trait in My children's character. I know that they are so quarrelsome, so pugnacious—they lack that racial cohesiveness that national cement which should have rendered them that formidable force as to keep their enemies away. I know their failing, but just because of it I have decreed to send them back into "golus*" Just because they have persistently refused to learn that nationally essential lesson at home, that I am bound to send them back into 'golus.' Just subjection, adversity and constant ill-will from without may teach them this very lesson of unity, which independence and prosperity had ever failed to inculcate.

I had them lodged in this beautiful land for a thousand years once before, but I became weary of their mutual antagonism and internecine strife and I sent them out for a time. After fifty years I allowed them to return, in the hope that the bitter experience they had gained in 'golus' had opened their eyes to see the criminal folly of quarreling among themselves—through which they fell a prey to their enemies. I had hoped that they had turned a new leaf—turned their hearts toward each other in amity and would this time make a united people to scare away the enemy. But alas, a bitter disappointment! They are now more disunited than ever. Instead of splitting up into two camps they are now separated into all the prismatic colors of the rainbow! My heart goes out unto them in pity, but their conduct left Me no choice but to send them into exile once more—and this time for a much longer period, in the hope that their longer term of 'golus' may bring about that desired result which the shorter term had failed to accomplish.

"The very subjection, perhaps the humiliation, the oppression, the isolation, the constant fear of attack from the enemy 'without' may throw them into each other's company for mutual protection, for reciprocal sympathy and thus teach them how necessary, how indispensable it is to live in peace and harmony among themselves. There, in the long 'golus' they may learn to sink their petty differences, their silly squabbles, their senseless wrangling over the shadow of 'Kovod' at the expense of the general ruin.

"My people," God continued, "are nationally sick. They suffer from that dreadful disease of 'disunion,' and I, as their physician, am bound to prescribe for their malady, and the only medicine that can at all cure this distemper in exile. This medicine they will have to take for generations, until they become entirely cured of this destructive disease.

"Go, therefore, my dear angel, and tell My people all you have heard from Me—tell them that the length of this 'golus'—how long it will last is a thing that I have no decided, and can not decide, as this will entirely depend upon the time it will take the medicine to effect the cure—this will depend more upon the constitution of the patient than upon the doctor. But this much you can tell them in My name: That the sooner they are cured of this disease the sooner they will be allowed to dispense with the medicine. The sooner they will learn to live in peace and concord among themselves, the sooner will this 'golus' come to an end!"

Question—Are we cured now after taking the medicine for the last eighteen centuries.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A League for the Promotion of Traditional Judaism.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

On the 28th of May last, a conference was held at Kattowitz, Silesia, attended by nearly 300 delegates from all parts of Europe.

The proceedings at Kattowitz have been widely reported in the Jewish press and, apart from a few hostile expressions of opinion, the new organization has been enthusiastically welcomed as supplying a pressing need of the whole House of Israel.

The Kattowitz Conference unanimously passed the following resolution:

"This gathering of representatives of traditional Judaism from all parts of the diaspora assembled in Kattowitz, having heard a report read resolve to found the 'Agudas Yisroel' and pledge themselves to promote the development of the organization by all the means in their power.

The seed having thus been sown, the Provisional Committee now desire to call upon all loyal sons and daughters of Israel to help in gathering the harvest.

We venture to appeal most earnestly to your readers to join the new organization and to become active workers in its behalf.

Yours obediently, (KOMMERZIENRAT) LOUIS FEIST, (For the Provisional Committee of the "Agudas Yisroel.)

Arverne Synagogue Service.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

Keep up the good fight you are making against those who foolishly think that the synagogue service can be made attractive by stripping it of the Hebrew prayers and making it more and more like that of our Christian neighbors.

How different from the audience in high-toned Reform temples, where the people in self-conscious dignity, sit, like so many Sphinxes, motionless and mute!

The cantor, the Rev. H. Meyer, conducted the service in a most dignified and impressive manner. He is free from that affectation which often mars the best efforts of some cantors.

the heart and lifts up the soul. I would rather hear him than the highest paid quartette, the members of which generally have never heard of the Shema Yisroel until they were engaged to sing it.

The cantor was assisted by a boys' choir, who did so well that I was greatly surprised when I was told after the service that it was only two weeks since the choir had been organized.

The impression left on my mind by the Arverne synagogue service may be summed up as follows: The old-fashioned order of service may go hand in hand with perfect order and decorum, and even if it does not come up to high standard of the Reform temples Jewish interests will be better served by a synagogue full of life than by a dignified but lifeless Reform temple.

Very truly yours, A PASSER-BY.

The Stage Jew and the Real.

Within the last few months Sir Herbert Tree, considered by many to be the leading actor-manager of his generation, has presented to illustrious audiences at His Majesty's Theatre, London, the stage Jew of Shakespeare, Du Maurier and Dickens—Shylock, Svengali and Fagin.

A representative of the London Jewish Chronicle put the question to Sir Herbert Tree:

"Is the stage Jew the real Jew?" "Let me answer at once," said Sir Herbert, "that the great trio, Shylock, Svengali and Fagin, are not representative of the real Jew. What is worst in our common humanity is exaggerated in all three; but the noblest qualities of the Jew—his 'applied altruism,' his devotion to art, his love of home—are, except in the case of Shylock, hardly indicated at all.

Whereas, Gustav Basch, of the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of New York to have a certain instrument in writing, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Otto T. Canotto, late of the County of New York, deceased, and each of you are cited to appear before me, the Surrogate of our County of New York, at his office in the County of New York, on the 18th day of September, one thousand nine hundred and twelve, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of the said last will and testament.

of charm. He is the hypnotic man with his worst traits in mastery. But he has that love for, and appreciation of, Art that is more characteristic of the modern Jew than of any other race. He cannot, of course, be compared with Shylock in character; but he has his place, and he will live while men realize the force of personal magnetism.

And Fagin, "the Jew that Dickens drew."

"Fagin, like all the great characters of Dickens, is an out and outer; in popular phrase he is a wholehogger. Like Heep; for example, he is wholly bad. But on the stage I have tried to make him human by touches of humor—if not savory at least, I hope, artistically palatable.

"What, then, on the whole, of the Jew on the stage?"

"This: the perfect type has yet to be created. If Shakespeare wrote his sublime comedy to-day what would he make of Shylock? I leave the question to all who may read it. But this is certain: the Jew on the stage always interests. I feel that fact in Shylock, in Svengali, in Fagin—the Jew, however he is characterized, dominates his audience. The subtlety of the Jewish intellect—the intellect of the scholar and the teacher—penetrates the plastic mind of the actor and reaches out to and holds the audience. At all events, the actor who portrays the Jew must always interest; for he has all the advantages of dominating character."

Sir Herbert Tree, in conclusion, paid a tribute to the magnificent support of the Jewish patrons of Art.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Hebrew Educational Society.

The final debate of the Junior Clubs of the Hebrew Educational Society took place on Sunday afternoon, July 14. The subject was: "Resolved, That the Suffrage Be Granted to Women in the United States on the Same Terms as to Men." The affirmative side was defended by the Loyal Alliance and the negative by the Young Comrades. The judges decided in favor of the negative. Medals presented by Mr. Edward C. Blum were given to the two representatives of the winning side, Nathan Bass and Davis Smith. The debaters of the affirmative side were Nathan Joseph and Alexander Bernstein. Mr. Horace London presided and acted as one of the judges. The other judges were Messrs. Charles S. Bernheimer and Harry Silverman.

Hebrew Free School Dedication.

It has been decided to dedicate the new building of the Hebrew Free School now being erected at 414 Stone street on Sunday, September 1.

The school building will have twenty-four classrooms and six reserve rooms for cases of necessity. Each room is 18 feet by 22 feet and 12 feet high. There will be a large auditorium and synagogue on the first floor, and a roof garden to be used in summer will be an additional feature.

The directors hope to make the building a communal center.

Ozar Yisrael, Volume VII.

Every new volume of Mr. J. D. Eisenstein's Hebrew Encyclopedia is a very welcome guest in all the homes where Jewish learning, admiration for our sages, loyalty to our traditions and love of our ancient culture and glorious past are still demonstrated and cherished. The seventh volume, as all the previous ones, is really a treasure of information for the real seekers of "Chochmath Israel."

Among the articles which deserve special mention are: Prophecy (Nouoh), Mardeioh, Nurenberg, Punctuation (Nikud), Simonim, Sinim (China), R. Saddia Gaon, the Modern Hebrew Literature (Siphruth Hachadosho), Iebur, Shonim, Ibirth, etc.

The article "Notaricum" misses the bibliography; besides, its writer should have mentioned Edelman's book, "Haschkofos Hatalmud Behoolom" on which almost the whole article is based. The article "New York" is written more in the style of correspondence than of a scholarly article for an encyclopedia; in many instances it is also too subjective. In the article "Nefesh" the author makes too many hypothetical and very risky calculations in order to show that the belief in the immortality of the soul has its foundation in the Ho'y Scriptures, while it is not so at all; besides, the writer failed to mention a very instructive book on these lines by the late Slonimsky, published in 1865.

In the article "Mossim" (Travelers), he mentions Israel Halevy instead of Joseph; Elkan Nathan Adler is a brother of the late Dr. Adler, not a son, as the writer asserts. The article "Natzruth" (Christianity) is written more in the Jewish spirit and appeals more to the Jewish reader than the same article in the Jewish Encyclopedia. In the article "Noshim" (Women), he mentions among those who distinguished themselves some biblical names of whose distinction there is no mention whatsoever in the Bible. In the bibliography of the article "Nituach" (Anatomy), he didn't mention two most important books on this subject, one in Hebrew and the other in Russian, by Dr. Kazenelson, and another good article by Rabbi Bierachovitz, in his book "Oiker Rov," 1903. This article has a special value as it comes as a reply to Dr. Greenbaum's assertion (Hazelfrah, No. 184, 1901), that the Talmudical sages were ignorant of the science of medicine.

While I believe in the Latin proverb Amicus Plato, sed magis amica veritas, I must say that Mr. Eisenstein, who leaves out in his encyclopedia the biographies of many great living scholars and writers, had no right to mention, and at some length the biography of N. Slouschz, who is but a quasi-scholar, and whose "famous" book, "The Renaissance of Hebrew Literature," was justly named by Rabbi Pool, in the columns of the HEBREW STANDARD, as a fiddle-faddle production.

The writer of the article Satire is, it seems, not very well acquainted with the satirical Hebrew books, for he failed to mention a good many well known satirical Hebrew books of the modern, as well as the olden times.

Among the best articles in the seventh volume are also Sphorim (books), Sphorim Chizonim (Apocrypha) and many others which I cannot cite on account of lack of space.

In conclusion I want to say yet that the end of the article Ibrith, though right in its conception, is written more in the tone of polemic than in an objective scholarly manner. I wish also to call the attention of the worthy editor to the many grammatical and typographical errors, which now and then appear in this volume.

But all these little foreseen and unforeseen shortcomings minimize but little the real great value of Mr. Eisenstein's Encyclopedia, which can be looked upon as a great monument to American Jewry, and which is the result of real zeal and devotion and enormous energy of one man, who does not believe in words but in deeds.

"The War God," by Israel Zangwill, a tragedy in five acts. The MacMillan Company, 1912. Price $1.25. Zangwill's fame as an author already rests upon many books, but I can hardly think of any one which entitles him to this name more than his latest production, "The War God." This book possesses an absorbing and pathetic interest. Its contents fill our heart with the warmest sympathy for all those who oppose war in all its forms, and with terrible hatred to the inhuman human beings who for the sake of ambition and under the mask of patriotism demand sacrifices to the modern Moloch. Almost everyone agrees that the seeker of war and the prophet of peace are personifications of Bismark and Tolstoi, and each one of them is depicted in such a way as only a Zangwill could do. The whole book is filled with the brilliancy of Zangwill's characteristic humor, in which, after close analysis, could be seen the grim, specific humor of Zangwill's race, whose prophets were the foremost missionaries of peace, of liberty and of freedom. Zangwill's book teaches a noble lesson, and it is desirable that this book should bring nearer to us the message of Isaiah: "Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, and they shall not learn any more war."

EZEKIEL LEAVITT.

The Expulsion of Genius.

In an article contributed to the "Russkia Vedomosti" Prof. Metchnikoff, the famous bacteriologist, raises the Jewish question in a particularly striking fashion. In describing his investigations into the cause and cure of old age he pays a generous tribute to a young Russo-Jewish doctor, M. Volman, who has been working on the subject for a number of years at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and to whom he assigns the merits of having actually discovered the friendly microbe that is to make us all die young. M. Metchnikoff then proceeds to say that he owes the acquisition of so talented a colleague in Paris to the fact that Dr. Volman is a Russian Jew, and that in consequence a scientific career was impossible for him in Russia itself. If he had remained in his native country he would have dragged out a miserable existence, and would not even have been given access for the purposes of research to the University laboratories. "It is thus," observes the professor, "that we get rid of talent in Russia." M. Metchnikoff might have quoted other instances of the same kind. There is Dr. Haffkine, also a Russian Jew, and also a student at the Pasteur Institute, whose genius, spurned by Russia, has been enlisted with remarkable success by the British Government. And there is actually M. Metchnikoff himself, who nearly thirty years ago was compelled to withdraw from his chair at Odessa University because he is a Jew on his mother's side. In these and in countless other instances, of course, Russia's self-imposed loss has been the gain of other countries. M. Metchnikoff would be doing his native land a valuable service if he would only discover some beneficent microbe to act as an antidote to the poisonous activity of the government bacillus.—Darkest Russia.

A Russian correspondent states that at Verki (near Wilna), last week, the well-known General Rennenkampf displayed the heroism of which he was found wanting in the Russo-Japanese War by attacking a Jewess and wounding her, at the same time threatening to beat all the Jews for allowing a Jewish child to play in the road and obstruct his course. The incident has created a painful impression in the entire district.

Rabbi Victor Caro, of Milwaukee, died at Baden Baden, Germany, where he had gone to recuperate his health. His body was brought to the United States on the S. S. Amerika, and funeral services in New York were held under the auspices of the United States Grand Lodge at No. 1494 Fifth avenue, the chapel of Brother N. Z. Morris, chairman of State of the Order. The principal address was made by Grand Master Samuel Dorf, who spoke very feelingly of the good work Rabbi Caro had performed in his lifetime. The body was shipped to Milwaukee, where joint funeral services were held by the Milwaukee O. B. A. Lodges in conjunction with many civic and communal bodies with which Rabbi Caro was affiliated.

City of Boston Lodge, No. 324, celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary on July 14, the Grand Lodge being represented by Abraham Heller, chairman on Endowment.

On July 18, 1912, Unity Lodge, No. 45, of Boston, will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary.

The Grand Lodge is about to issue charters to new lodges to be installed at Cleveland, Ohio, and Unionport, Pennsylvania.

Feeling gives better tone to prayer than rhetoric.

Seeking to amend the Scriptures never amend's one's life.

Some folks remember their faults not to mend them, but to excuse.

We never know how good the world is until we practice goodness.

STAGED BY JULIAN MITCHELL.

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Rabbi Jochanan Ben Zakkai

Dear Children:

When Vespasian heard the good news he had just finished putting on one shoe, and he was going to put on the other, but try as he would, he could not get it on; he then tried to pull the other off, but with all his striving he could not get it off. "What can this be?" quoth he. "Let this not worry you," said Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai, "the good news that you have received has caused it, for it is written, "A good report gives marrow to the bones." But what is the remedy? Let some one who is displeasing to you pass before you, for it is written, "A depressed spirit dries up the bones." He did so, and was able to put the shoe on. Vespasian, greatly pleased with the wisdom of the Jewish sage, asked him what favor he could do for him. "Spare the city of Jabue and its sages," pleaded Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai, "also Rabban Gamliel's princely family, and send a doctor to cure Rabbi Zadok." Little did that proud Roman dream, when he granted the rabbi's request, that from that city of Jabue and its sages a new and eternal fountain of everlasting life would spring forth whose living waters, flowing to the uttermost recesses of the earth, would refresh the crushed and downtrodden seed of Israel and cause them to grow up and flourish into glorious communal life long after the Roman empire lay crumbling in its ruins.

Therefore is was for naught that our sages have likened Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai to our great law-giver Moses—Moses proved that the Torah was the life of the Jew, Rabbi Jochanan ben Zakkai proved that it was his resurrection!

Truly did Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai say, "If thou art well versed in the Torah, do not pride thyself thereon, for to that end wast thou created." Yes, Israel was created for the Torah, and the Torah was created for Israel, and none knew it better than Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai, for there was a certain family in Jerusalem, the members whereof died in their eighteenth year, they came to Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai and informed him of their tragic fate. Said he to them, "Perchance, we are of the family of Eli, of whom it is written, 'And of the increase of thy house shall die as vigorous men.' Go and occupy yourselves with the study of the Torah and live." Accordingly they went and occupied themselves with the study of the Torah and lived. The family was thereafter called "the family of Rabban Jochanan" in honor of Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai.

Before the Holy Temple was destroyed there were certain great religious national ceremonies that could only be performed in Jerusalem. After the destruction of the Holy Temple, Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai directed that these ceremonies be performed wherever there is a Beth Din or Jewish tribunal, for wherever they were in the entire world they represented, by the power of the Torah, that which was best and holiest in Israel.

It was said of Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai that he was thoroughly learned in the Holy Scriptures, in the Mishna, the Gemara or Talmud, the Halacha or Jewish Code, the Aggadah or Jewish Tradition, the exegesis of the Torah, and Rabbinical prohibitions, logical deductions, parallelism, astronomy, acrostics, and the numeral significance of words, Washermen's proverbs and fables of the foxes, converse of the spirits and botanical wisdom, converse of the ministering angels and also from the greatest thing, the Divine Visions of Ezekial, to the smallest—the discussions of Abaye and Rabba, besides all the worldly knowledge that it was necessary to possess to qualify one to be the head of the Synhedrian—for he was the head of the Synhedrian despite the fact that he was a very old man at the time, and it was against the rule to appoint a very old man as the head of the Synhedrian, but they made an exception in his favor on account of his great wisdom and extraordinary piety, for in neither summer nor winter was he ever divested of his tephilin, which he wore all day, and never was there a man who greeted Rabban Jochanan ben Zakkai first, for he was always the first to greet everybody, even the Gentile, in the public square.

William: "I say, Jack, while in a restaurant the other day I noticed two fathers and two sons at lunch. The charge being 25 cents per head, what do you think the bill totaled to?"

Jack: "Well, there is no difficulty in that bill. Why, of course, $1.00."

William: "You are wrong, Jack; the bill only amounted to 75 cents."

Jack: "How do you make that out?"

William: "Why, there were only three persons—father, son, and grandfather; three at 25 cents per head is 75 cents."

"My son is not what you would call musically inclined," said the fond mother, indicating the languid, poetic young creature who lolled beside her, "and yet I am anxious to have him take piano lessons."

The Dean of the Conservatoire rubbed his chin thoughtfully as he surveyed the sad young man.

"You see," she continued, "Percy's so delicate, I think the exercise will be good for him."

THE REAL REASON
For the big success of M. Herbst's Sanitary Rye Bread is because it is made on first principles. We buy our own rye on the farms where grown; we grind it ourselves and bake it in the best manner. Watch this space for explanation.
