What Has the Settlement Done to Judaize Its Clientele?

By Bernard G. Richards

What has the settlement done to Judaize its clientele? In the first place the settlement—and the term is used here broadly, so as to include Jewish educational institutions of various character—did not originally have it as its object to Judaize its clientele; in other words, to inculcate its beneficiaries with a knowledge of Judaism and to imbue them with the Jewish spirit. The settlement had at least no definite plan of that kind, and the policy of its activities was mainly determined by the personnel of its officers and its administrators. The purpose, generally understood or felt, which brought the settlement into existence, was to do educational and uplifting work among the people along the beaten path of the educational societies of different denominations. No particular stress was laid on the need of education of a Jewish character. New conditions arose. Thousands and tens of thousands of our people had suddenly come to these shores and, sharing the hard fate of all immigrants, they crowded the mean streets of the poorer sections of our sea port cities. Helpless, speechless and aimless in their attempts to establish themselves on the new soil, bewildered by the strange, new surroundings; they struggled against all odds. Soon the first symptoms appeared of the problems of dislocated lives, of poverty, congestion and the physical and spiritual ills that a homeless people are heir to. Prompted by mingled feelings of compassion and of a certain vague fear for their own welfare, the more fortunate Jews who were already established in this country began to do something for the new arrivals. So it was an impulse of feeling rather than a well thought out plan which led to the formation of our first educational societies. There was also a desire felt to counteract certain social theories which began to spread among Jewish workingmen.

There was work to be done; there was immediate guidance needed by those who were endeavoring to adjust themselves to new conditions, and so the first Jewish settlements and other educational institutions were established.

ance before them of the general educational activities of a similar kind carried on by other people. There was also the example of the efforts men's College in London in 1854 by Frederick Dennison Maurice and a group of Cambridge graduates, ultimately led to the opening of Toynbee

Stanton Coit. This corresponded with the period of the beginning of the great influx from Russia, and naturally gave its impetus to the work which was being planned and done in order to facilitate the adoption of the immigrants to the new conditions confronting them. For a number of reasons, each one of which would be a sufficient explanation, Judaism was not part of the programme of the new Jewish educational institutions, but at the same time it was deemed advisable to introduce here and there some Jewish features of the work, such as religious classes, religious services, occasional Jewish lectures, etc. Americanization was the slogan of the hour, and the bulk of the work consisted of furthering and hastening this process of adoption to the new conditions. Instruction was given in the language, customs, history of the United States; special attention was given to civics, the immigrants being instructed as to their duties and rights in the new land. Strenuous attempts were made to initiate the immigrants into the mysteries of the obvious rules of manners, behavior and deportment generally, and particular stress was laid on the effort to instill into the strangers a love for their newly adopted country. The exaggerated and highfalutin patriotism which was propounded in the settlement in words that were far beyond the comprehension of the hearers often verged on the ludicrous. The propagators of this "jingoism for immigrants" were, however, haunted by a strange and peculiar fear that the immigrants might continue to cherish their undying "love" for Russia, Roumania and Galicia, and so we will pass over without any harsh words our sentimental friends who were afraid that this country was not large enough nor beautiful enough nor sufficiently glorious to inspire the devotion to it of its newly adopted children without any prompting on the part of the settlement workers.

But whatever its peculiarities, this work of Americanization was in the

There was no distinct theory formulated in regard to their work, but the promoters of the different educational enterprises had the guid-made in England to uplift and improve the conditions of the workingmen. These efforts, beginning with the establishment of the Working-main carried on on a comprehensive scale, and much ability and energy, as well as time and money, was given to it. Of course, the work was carried on differently in different cities, and my own observations were confined only to New York and Boston; and the different institutions employed different methods, some engaging in more and others in less distinctly Jewish work. But everywhere the Jewish work was subordinated to the general work of Americanization. The work was very successful. Of course, the Jewish promoters of Americanization had the indirect assistance of the public opinion of the country, the American press, the schools, the governmental agencies and the economic conditions which impelled the immigrants to take on the manners and speech and customs of the country; the very atmosphere of the land, which served to hasten the process of assimilation. In fact, there was so much indirect assistance that the question occurs to one as to whether there was any need of any direct efforts being made along this line; as to whether all of this work could not have been left to the natural assisting agencies; but we shall come to that later. Suffice it to say here that everything contributed toward the Americanization of the Jewish immigrants, especially the younger people, who were caught by this rapid stream of transformation during the formative period of their lives. Americanization grew apace. The work was exceedingly successful; and that is where the trouble began.

Hall in 1883. The settlement idea soon found its expression in this country when the Neighborhood Guild was formed in 1886 by Dr.

Soon there appeared evidences of conditions in the Jewish quarter which made the hasty makers of Americans pause in their strenuous labors. While valuable assistance and guidance were given to large numbers of the elder immigrants who were spiritually self-sustaining, who had themselves drawn their religious inspiration from the ancient Jewish sources; there were large numbers of the younger people who were spiritually unsettled and whose cravings for religious inspiration and for ideals were entirely neglected. To be sure, there was some ethical instruction of a non-sectarian character given to the young people, but I will leave it to you to judge of the value of instructing Jewish young men and young women in manners and morals without any regard to the ancient teachings of Judaism on the subjects. My own opinion is that if you instruct young people in ethics and morals without reference to the rules and guidance of life laid down in the Bible, the Talmud and the other great sources of Jewish lore, you do a great wrong, for in the first place you deprive these youths of the noblest teaching in the world, of teachings which would exert the greatest influence upon their lives; and, in the second place, you leave the dangerous implication that the Jews have nothing to teach on either manners or morals or of the conduct of life generally. The outer polish and rules of deportment given to young people who were lacking in the knowledge of basic, religious and ethical principles only produced a class of young prigs and snobs who, made vain and conceited by their fresh accomplishments, strutted about the streets of the Ghetto flaunting their newly acquired manners, or, rather, mannerisms, and showing nothing but contempt for their elders and superiors, whom they should have been taught to respect and revere. The young being quick to learn and the old naturally lagging behind, stimulated Americanization served only to widen the breach between parents and children. A deep gulf opened up between the old and the young. A generation grew up which "knew not Joseph"; a generation which knew not any of the patriarchs and which knew not the teachings of the Jewish sages; a generation which knew neither the old treasures of Jewish lore nor of the new literature of Jewish life. There appeared also evidences of delinquency and vice in such forms as had hitherto been unknown in the communities of our people.

Then the settlement workers paused in their labors, and their advisors began to analyze and the communal workers began to think and the officers of Jewish educational institutions began for the first time to listen to some of the things that the more intelligent residents of the Ghetto, the Yiddish writers and lecturers for instance, had been saying for years. And what had they been saying? That the work of stimulating Americanization carried on by the settlements and other educational bodies was for the most part unnecessary, that it was a duplication; not a duplication of work done by other organizations, but of work which is done by itself; a process that proceeds naturally of its own accord; that proceeds at such a rapid rate that it is rather in need of artificial slowing down than of artificial hastening. Gradually this idea, though it has not been given utterance, had been making itself felt among those interested in the work of Jewish educational institutions. Accordingly, new Jewish classes and lectures and religious schools and celebrations of the holidays and Jewish entertainments were introduced into the settlements. A revival in Judaism and in Jewish ideals originating from other sources (sources outside of the settlements) made itself felt among the clientele of the Jewish educational institutions and the beneficiaries of the settlements, as well as their friends, the spokesman of Jewish ideas in the Ghetto, began to clamor for more and more distinctly Jewish educational work. Jewish organizations either brought into existence or moved to action by different modern currents of Jewish thought, came into the settlements, holding their meetings in these buildings and arranging lectures and debates of their own accord. These gatherings often brought together audiences of such dimensions and were frequently pervaded by such enthusiasm as were previously not known in these institutions. The settlement workers came more closely in touch with the people; became imbued with their spirit. Then new workers came forward who were trained for the work, not in settlements, but real Jewish schools, whether they were Chedorim or more modern places of learning. Thus its clientele gradually Judaized the settlement.

Thus, too, a new spirit came, and is still coming over the work of the settlement which should also receive full credit for the valuable work which it has done in the past. I do not mean to berate the settlement, nor do I mean to assert with any certainty, that had its activities taken another course, it would have prevented the delinquency and vice to which I have referred. But I feel sure that it would have produced greater and better results if its work was devoted toward Judaization rather than Americanization. Judaization should have been the watchword all along. That the immigrant needed more than anything else people to help him maintain his old-time spiritual and moral integrity; to strengthen him in his beliefs and aspirations, to assure him that his ancient heritage of Jewish traditions and Jewish knowledge is as pregnant with meaning to-day as it ever was; to make him feel that his Judaism is not only in perfect accord with the ideals of America, but that in bringing his spiritual assets to this country, he has conferred a boon upon this new land; to make him feel that his customs, beliefs, language, etc., were not at all outlandish and to be ashamed of. But the spirits of the settlement is, as I have said, changing, and if we have learned late, it is better than not to have learned at all.

What has the settlement done to Judaize its clientele? Very little. What has the clientele done to Judaize the settlements? A great deal. But a new spirit is abroad, and the settlements have at last, begun to do their own work. It is carrying on a number of activities which tend to spread Jewish knowledge, to foster Jewish ideals, to bring back the young generation which has strayed from the path of the fathers. It is working in greater accord with the spirit of the people which make up the neighborhood of the settlement. For the present it is merely imparting in a more or less irregular way, some elements of Judaism and Jewish history, and a great deal more might be said about the effect of teaching Judaism in this haphazard, selective and often apologetic way; this manner of picking out for approval, certain Jewish customs and ideas and of irreverently rejecting others. Before long, however, we shall, or at least some settlements shall it is to be hoped, approach the work of real Judaism. We shall then not only inculcate our youth with a knowledge of Judaism, but imbue it with the spirit and aspirations of the whole Jewish people, inspire it with a love for and an interest in everything that appertains to the career and destiny of Israel. Then nothing that is Jewish shall be

JUDAISM IN MUSIC ONCE MORE

By Oskar Bie.* (Translated by Jacques Mayer.)

I. Ever since the appearance of Wagner's pamphlet, "Judaism in Music," the race question comes up for discussion. Did Wagner present an actual problem? In other words: Is there such a thing as the influence of Judaism in music, or does the phrase merely signify opposition, or a method of warfare? Wagner interpreted Judaism entirely in a general way, and in order to follow him we would have to closely analyze the Jewish character. To-day we shall consider the subject much more directly. Are there specific Jewish traits in music? What do they look like, and are they dangerous? When Mahler's symphonies were first performed the question was argued pro and con, though the principles involved were not clearly shown.

It is very easy to define the characteristic trait of Italian music, which is sensuousness. Scenic effect marks the music of France, while thoughtfulness and learning that of Germany. The coloring of their national tunes and dances characterizes the music of Russia, Hungary and Bohemia. In what could a Jewish characteristic consist? Generally speaking, Jews are very musical, perhaps more reproductive than productive. They have never created their own musical speech; since the beginning of modern culture they have not kept together, with that warm racial intimacy which creates a nation, and a national manner of expression. In considering any Jewish question one must bear in mind that the Jews became a race but not a nation, and therefore were bound to enter into tragic conflicts in order that their racial peculiarities could be kept alive and active amidst the nations to which they attached themselves. Originally independent and free, their history and their racial strength compelled them to become intermediaries, in which capacity they developed extraordinary ability. Homeless, they cultivated every opportunity to reproduce. They inclined to the cosmopolitan, the capitalistic, the theatrical in every form, and accomplished a prodigious task in opening up channels for science, art and social progress. There is a history of land ownership in which they play a minor part, and one of financial predominance, wherein they maintain a commanding position. The one marks the beginning of culture, the other its object. Having attained to such prominence, they might have been reconciled to the tragedy of their position were it not for the enmity shown them in consequence of that prominence by the old-established settlers. And yet: If they desired to do so, they could point to one example of their power of productivity—Spinoza. Nothing is impossible.

We shall therefore put the question of reproductivity aside, for that quality is not a racial peculiarity, but a refuge. After all, the greatest reproductive musical artists are not Jews. We wish then to ascertain the peculiarities, whereby they can be distinguished as composers. And this is not to be done, unless we ex-

Details of the Pressburg Disaster. From the Allgemeine Jüdische Zeitung of Buda Pesth, we learn details of the recent disaster which overwhelmed the Jewish community of Pressburg, Hungary. Seventy-four houses were totally destroyed, and in all over 2,000 people found their quarters uninhabitable. The fire originated in the home of a Gentile in Nicolai street. The majority of these houses are very old and of wood and formed excellent fuel for the flames. The homeless were sheltered in the synagogues and in the barracks. No synagogues were destroyed, but the famous Pressburg Yeshiba was totally destroyed. All the Sefer Torahs were, however, saved, but all the valuable books of the library were consumed. The financial loss of the homeless was greatly increased through the work of hoodlums, who plundered right and left. The 200 students of the Yeshiba had a narrow escape from death and managed to escape with their lives.

The first relief came from Buda Pesth in the form of 15,000 kronen. Pester Loyd, the great Hungarian daily, collected 17,000 kronen. Emperor Franz Josef sent 20,000 kronen from his own private funds, and the government sent 10,000 kronen.

The Ohav Zedek Congregation of New York city have sent 2,000 kronen and will send a further contribution when other committees report.

New Beth David Hospital Dedicated.

On Sunday last, in the presence of a large gathering, the building of the Beth David Hospital, situated at 113th street and Lexington avenue, was dedicated. A stand had been erected in front of the building, from which the addresses were delivered and a band rendered selections during the afternoon. Addresses were delivered by the president, Samuel Kanrich; Dr. Abraham Jacobi, Hon. Edward Lauterbach, Abraham Rosenberg and Adolph Lewisohn. Cantor M. Aronoff and choir opening the ceremonies with a hymn. It was announced that ex-President Abraham Rosenberg had donated a Sefer Torah to the institution.

President Kanrich gave the history of the hospital from the time of the purchase of the old Yorkville Hospital on Eighty-second street. Dr. Abraham Jacobi, speaking for the medical profession, said that he was not enthusiastic over the idea of a ten-story hospital, and that if there was $10,000,000 to spend it would be much better to build twenty smaller hospitals than to put the whole $10,000,000 into one large building. He said he would like to see a chain of small hospitals, one to about every fifteen or twenty blocks, throughout the city. He thought the small hospital was better for the patient and for the doctors.

Edward Lauterbach said there were 30,000 Russian and Polish Jews who had come to America since 1882. The hospital, he said, had been built by these people themselves, and was a fitting monument. He said Mount Sinai Hospital had just as small a beginning, and predicted a great future for the Beth David Hospital.

Vice-President Abraham Rosenberg made an address in Yiddish.

Samuel Zuckerman, chairman of the House Committee, presented the key of the front door of the new building to Adolph Lewisohn, who, with a few words of congratulation and encouragement, threw the door open, and the crowd was invited to enter and inspect the building.

The ceremonies continued during the week and the closing exercises will take place on Sunday next, when it is expected that Revs. Dr. M. H. Harris, Samuel Dorf and Samuel Kanrich will deliver addresses. The music will be rendered by the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band.

The building which was erected at a cost of $125,000, will accommodate eighty patients. The officers are: Samuel Kanrich, president; David Trautmann, secretary, and Jacob Carlinger, treasurer.

City College Menorah Society.

The final meeting for the season of the Menorah Society of the College of the City of New York, was held at the College, Thursday, May 30, at 8 p. m. The meeting was addressed by Prof. Gotthell of Columbia University, who delivered an eloquent lecture on the needs and requirements of a "Jewish Centre." A lively discussion followed.

From the reports of the officers it was shown that the current term was a very successful one, for during the present semester the society more than tripled its membership. The current administration was unanimously endorsed and the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, Mr. Leonard Abner; first vice-president, Mr. Leonard Kohns; second vice-president, Mr. Nathaniel Held; treasurer, Mr. Morris Leichtman; corresponding secretary, Mr. George Horowitz; recording secretary, Mr. Moses H. Gittelson. The following were elected to serve upon the executive committee, together with the officers: Messrs. Golub, Martinband and Roeder.

Convention of the Federation of Galician and Bucovinian Jews of America.

The tenth annual convention of the Federation of Galician and Bucovinian Jews of America was opened last Sunday morning, June 1, at Tammany Hall, in the presence of a large gathering of delegates representing about 500 branches and friends of the Har Moriah Hospital, which is maintained and supported by the federation. At the opening session the Rev. Dr. Gustav N. Hausmann offered a prayer in Hebrew and the president, Mr. William Fishman, read his message, which was replete with facts, showing the good work done in the past year and full of hope for the future. The Har Moriah Hospital has maintained its high standard of efficiency and helpfulness. The number of patients received and treated at the hospital was 1,303, while there were over 1,000 patients who were denied admission because of lack of room. There were 24,744 outdoor patients who were treated in the dispensary of the hospital.

A touching incident during the reading of the message occurred when Mr. Fishman made a reference to the loss of his only son. His voice was choking with emotion and only the exercise of the strongest will power enabled him to finish reading his message.

The following sessions were enlivened by hot arguments over the point whether the secretary should be elected by the convention as was done heretofore, or be appointed by the executive board. The convention decided in favor of the old practice. Among the visitors who addressed the convention were Dr. Jacob Tarslau, M. Richter, Bernard Semel, who has been president of the federation for several terms, and Commissioner Joseph Barondess, who so enthused the delegates that they raised the sum of $2,500 right on the spot.

The following officers were elected: Dr. A. I. Schoenholz, president; Bernard Turkel, S. Nadler, S. Thau, vice-presidents; M. Kittenplan, treasurer; Friedrich Baron, comptroller; David Blutrreich, secretary; L. Grill, recording secretary; D. Kornbluch, counsel; Ch. Eisenstark, chairman, Advisory Board; J. Stadler, secretary of advisory board. Other chairmen of various committees are David Charak, S. Ashkanazy, B. Burkan, O. Reiner, Louis Lelman, Ch. Altenberg, D. Saltpeper and Louis Lelman. The trustees are Rev. S. Binder, S. Kamerling, H. Syrup, I. Steinholtz and J. Bleiberg.

Bernard G. Richards.

Bernard G. Richards, the well-known journalist, whose paper before the recent conference of the National Association of Jewish Social Workers on "What Has the Settlement Done to Judaize Its Clientele?" created quite a stir and roused much comment before that body and who has recently been re-elected for the fifth consecutive year as secretary of the Kehillah, has had a very interesting career, and is a fine example of the possibilities of the immigrant Jewish youth in this country. Mr. Richards was born on March 9, 1877, at Keldan, Province of Kovno, Russia. He attended Cheder in his native town until he was fourteen years of age. He came to America in 1886, returning to Keldan at the end of ten months and coming again to America in 1891. He has lived in New York, Boston and Denver, supporting himself as peddler, clerk in a dry goods store, English teacher and Yiddish journalist. He was for a time the Boston correspondent of several New York Yiddish dailies, the editor of the Boston Israelite (Yiddish); a reporter on the Boston Post and for the Boston Journal and contributor to the Boston Evening Transcript. Since coming to New York in 1903, he edited the English page of the Jewish World for a time and the New Era Magazine. He also edited the Chronicle, working at the same time for the New York Globe and several magazines, and for a time contributed to these columns a department under the head of "Points of Order."

Mr. Richards is a member of the executive committee of the Federation of American Zionists and has been one of the moving spirits of the Zionist movement for the past six years. He has likewise taken a very active interest in Jewish educational work in New York city, notably in the part he has played in the proposed establishment of the Jewish Institute, which is intended to become a centre for the Second avenue and Tenth street district, in connection with which he organized a lecture course which has been running for some time at Kessler's Theatre on Sunday mornings. He is also the author of a very interesting volume, "The Discourses of Keldansky."

Federation of Orthodox Synagogues.

The next meeting of the Federation of Orthodox Synagogues of Greater New York will be held on Sunday, June 8, at 2:30 p. m., at the Synagogue Nachlath Zevi, 65 East 109th street. Twenty-four congregations are already affiliated with the movement.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

On Sunday evening, in the auditorium, there will be an interesting contest for the Wolbarst trophy. Various members of the literary clubs will be the participants. The public is cordially invited. The Alliance-Y. M. H. A. camp was open as usual over Decoration Day and Saturday and Sunday. The weather was superb and the attendance of young men better than anticipated, and by far the largest crowd which ever took advantage of this holiday at camp. The general sentiment was that the opening was most auspicious, and everyone present registered his intention of coming again during the regular season.

She was a member of over thirty charitable organizations, and was particularly interested in the work of the Home of the Daughters of Jacob, and the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society.

Her funeral, which was held last Sunday, was a very large one. The cortege left her late residence and proceeded to the East Side. Eulogies were pronounced from the steps of the Jewish Daily News office (her husband was the founder of this publication), the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, and the Daughters of Jacob Home and the Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue. The interment was in Union Fields Cemetery.

JUDAISM IN MUSIC ONCE MORE.

amine some of their prominent representatives, leaving out entirely such questionable cases as Bizet or even Wagner.

II.

Mendelssohn's peculiarity is a clear plasticity, a trait not otherwise to be regarded as particularly Jewish. He was not demoniacal, metaphysical, lyrically melting, learned or Talmudically hair-splitting. A certain elegance, carried to the point of shallowness, distinguished him from the much more intimate, but also very prolix Schumann. And yet as a lad he composed the "Midsummer Night's Dream," which in its feathery-light romanticism appears to us as German as a poem by Heine. As a human being he was as fine and as noble as one can imagine.

III.

Meyerbeer strove for effects, that is quite true. And it was not perhaps an accidental thing that the historical operas which succeeded so sensationally in Paris were chiefly the work of two Italians—Rossini and Spontini—and two Jews—Meyerbeer and Halevy. But none of them were either Italian or Jewish products, but owed their origin to the Parisian love for dramatic situations, scenic magnificence and imposing pageantry. As, aside from comic and ballet operas, the French did not possess their own style of stage music, the foreign composers found it much easier to gain a foothold in France than in Italy, where coloratura music prevailed, or in Germany, the land of romantic melodies. That condition of things was highly fruitful to Meyerbeer's genius. He himself was an amiable and not at all Napoleonic sort of man, but when at work composing an opera he certainly thought of success. His character naturally inclined in that direction. Thereby an element of the artistic immoral entered into the genre, but that was what characterized the entire genre itself. It was on that account very easy to attack.

IV.

Halevy is usually judged by his "Jewess," in which a scene of Jewish coloring occurs. (The Jews in their divine service never understood the art of genuinely cultivating their national music.) But the "Jewess" by no means shows Halevy at his best. In other less known operas he wielded a much finer and more elegant pen. Above all, his little comic opera, "Lightning," is an exquisite play of wit and fancy. No one could ever discover in his music the stamp of the specifically Jewish.

V.

In Offenbach there was a conflict between the lyric and the satirical. That may be regarded as Jewish, but there's nothing wrong in it, and it certainly bore fruitful results. He created a style which only the stupid found frivolous, whereas other people admired it for its musical merits and its original and spontaneous wit. At all events, with him as with Meyerbeer, there was a direct road leading in the one case to clothed or concealed seductions, and in the other to seductions quite unclothed. It is quite clear wherein dwelt the greater genuineness.

VI.

If we place Mahler alongside of these composers we find that he had something in common with all of them. A fine intellect-like Mendelssohn, striving plastically like Mendelssohn, then again seeking external effects after the manner of Meyerbeer, together with a secret love for all sorts of operetta, he became the tragic bearer of those qualities which are not specifically Jewish, but to which Jews are particularly susceptible. His naivete is reflective, and his depth popular. His was a noble, idealistic and lofty mind, but there dwelt in him a concealed opera whose sins he could not altogether resist. But is not this all very uncertain and far-fetched? In his eighth symphony depends largely upon its "effects," the ninth is the most direct, genuine and unaffected product of his powers. It reveals also the least influence of Beethoven, who was his chief source of inspiration. For the musical judge of souls, there remains an insoluble residue of that tragic conflict, existing between the deepest feeling and the desire for worldly recognition which constitutes the finest possession of the creative Jewish artist.

VII.

To what result have we arrived? Jewish musicians possess qualities that do not contradict the Jewish character. But there exists no general or always conclusive characterization. The Jewish streak may be present in the way of powerful receptivity, or unusual striving for effects, but it is by no means an infallible indication. Berlioz surpassed Meyerbeer in his "sense" of orchestration, and Handel's plasticity was greater than that of Mendelssohn. Although the creativeness of the Jews is somewhat greater in music than in poetry (due probably to their internationality) that has not been to their injury, or has it been harmful to the rest of the world. That they do not quite conceal themselves, is not only their privilege, but also their strength.

I would speak, although at the beginning I had intended to avoid doing so, of the questionable cases of Bizet and Wagner, not because they prove anything, but because they really prove nothing. If Bizet was a Jew, one will point out the cosmopolitanism of his exotic melodies and perhaps the "operetta" style of "Carmen" in order to show his Jewish origin. If he was not one, his inventive genius will be extolled. If Wagner was the son of Geyer, his prodigious activity; his arrogance, his many-sided mental agility, will be dealt with according to the point of view, either as a racial reproach or as a matter of unimportance, and contrariwise his creative power. These are sophistries. The Jewish composers have written fewer symphonies than operas. If you like, that may be Jewish. But the greatest opera composers were not Jews. What does that signify? And Mahler composed only symphonies. It is a circle from which one does not emerge, because the accidental is treated as essential. There is no Judaism in music—perhaps a few Jewish tears, or a laugh or a strong grip—but all these belong to humanity.

In commemoration of his seventieth birthday, Herr Rudolf Mosse sent the sum of one million marks to the municipality of Berlin, the income of which is to be distributed among specially selected poor families in Berlin. He also gave 300,000 marks to the German Imperial Journalists' Organization, for the support of aged journalists who are unable to continue their work. He further gave large sums, varying from 10,000 marks to 50,000 marks, to various Jewish and non-Jewish charitable organizations. The municipality of Berlin sent him a warm congratulatory telegram, and thanked him for his very generous gifts. The municipality has decided to perpetuate his name by calling one of the new streets in Berlin the Mossestrasse.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

(Exclusive Correspondence to THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

New Chief Rabbi Wins Golden Opinions—Community's Philanthropic Activity—Jewish Religious Union's Progress—Country Synagogue Developments—The New Rothschild Play—Election Sunday in Jewry—Women Sent Holders and the Vote—Depressing Story from Vienna.

London, May 23, 1913.

Golden opinions are steadily accruing to Dr. Hertz, now that the new Chief Rabbi of the British Empire is gradually entering upon all the duties connected with his exalted office. As a preacher he deeply impressed the large and representative gathering which assisted at the service of his induction; as a profound scholar of Talmudic lore, he gained the admiration of the very critical congregation which assembled at the great synagogue on the Sabbath preceding Passover to listen to his learned discourse; as a leading figure in the realm of philanthropic effort, he has attended the meeting of the Sick Room Helps Society, and the dinner organized by the Anglo-Jewish Association for the purpose of augmenting its fund. He has, moreover, received private deputations who have put before him various matters affecting the spiritual welfare of the community, so that he may now be said firmly to have grasped the reins of office, it does not look as though it will be a long time before he reaches the proud position occupied by his distinguished predecessor in the affections of his flock, for he has entered on his career in full possession of the sympathy and good will of those to whom he is to minister, for all realize the difficulty of his task and all are aware of the benefits which will accrue to Anglo-Jewry from a strong and able leadership.

Your correspondent recently recorded the success which attended the appeal of the Anglo-Jewish Association for funds. This is a matter for gratification in these days, when so much is heard about the decadence of charity. The association hardly makes that powerful appeal to the sympathies of the public which some of the other communal institutions make, and that a sum of $40,000 should have been collected for the purpose of education abroad is no small proof that the flow of Jewish charity shows little sign of being arrested. Yet every success brings with it other claimants to sympathy and support. The appeals vary in magnitude, even as they vary in kind, yet all have their champions. The Sick Room Helps Society is the latest to appeal for support. Twenty-five thousand dollars is the modest sum for which it asks, truly small when regarded in the light of the work performed and the results achieved. Since its establishment 24,530 mothers have been nursed in their confinement, and annually some 800 men, women and children have been nursed through all forms of sickness, with the exception of infectious cases. It is the very pioneer in England of organized sick room helps, a fact of which the Jewish community might well be proud. Moreover, and here perhaps is to be found its chief claim to support, it has enlisted the aid of some of the very best Jewish women in London, women who give of their time and their thought, and who bring to bear on their labors the keen intelligence derived only from years of study among the poorer members of their faith.

True to its avowed policy of preaching its doctrines and propounding its principles, the Jewish Religious Union has arranged a series of lectures to be delivered by its minister, Rabbi I. Mattuck. The first was given on May 18 at West Hampstead Town Hall, and dealt with "The Ideal of a Universal Religion in Liberal Judaism"; the second will be delivered shortly at Armfield's South Place Hotel, Finsbury pavement; London, and will be devoted to "The Bible in Liberal Judaism," while the third, given at the Highbury Athenaeum on June 1, will treat of "The Attitude of Liberal Judaism to Jewish Tradition." It is a comprehensive series and will doubtless attract large numbers interested in this, the latest attempt to combat religious apathy. The days have long gone by when the union was howled down as an enemy determined on uprooting English Judaism, aiming at the very foundations of belief by insidious appeals to so-called commonsense in religion. The union went steadily on its way, for its motives were pure, its aims noble, and the men at the head of it were men imbued with the true spirit of piety. And so it flourished, not without trouble, and now is a serious force in Anglo-Jewry. Claude Montefiore may have preserved it alive in its early days, but its strength largely to-day lies in the earnest and gifted young preacher who carries right into the heart and mind of his congregations the inward meaning of the messages he brings to them.

There is no surer sign of the growth of the Jewish community in provincial towns than that furnished by the opening of new synagogues and the extension of old ones. Jewish life has always centered around its places of worship, and so it is not to be wondered that numerous appeals in connection with them are always before the public. Cardiff, one of the principal Welsh cities, is the latest case in point. Some years ago a rapid growth of the Jewish community in that city made it absolutely necessary to build a synagogue. That could only be accomplished by effecting a mortgage of $20,000 on the completion of the building. Subsequently strenuous efforts were made to wipe off the mortgage, the interest upon which proved a great strain upon the slender resources of the community. The hon. secretary, Isaac Samuel, J. P., thereupon endeavored to raise in annual subscriptions, the sum of $2,500 for eight years, and he has already succeeded in securing promises amounting to $2,000 per annum. In an effort to secure the balance, he is now approaching prominent London Jews and bids fair to meet with success, seeing that the original indebtedness of $20,000 has already been reduced to $8,900.

Your correspondent noted, recently that a play by a member of the Rothschild family was due to be produced in London shortly and curiously enough some special sensation has marked its production. The trouble got into the papers and made a big splash and does not appear to have been ordinary press agents' booming. Mr. Arthur Boucher, one of our leading actors, was the producer, but another gentleman claimed the prior right to the use of the particular theatre for some other production. Each producer in turn brought down a body of men and evicted the other, but in the end Boucher won in the courts and secured the theatre for his Rothschild play. Its title is just "Croesus." In the play this is the nickname of Comte Sorbier, a millionaire philanthropist, whose sufferings under the rich man's burden the author evidently takes greatly to heart. For the root idea of his play is the canker of wealth, a notion of almost mythological antiquity. There was novelty, however, in the notion of producing the piece first in London and in having Marcelle de Ligneray, the fascinating widow with whom Sorbier is in love, played by a well-known Parisian actress. Moreover, Mlle. Gabrielle Lorziat justifies her choice by speaking English a great deal better than the best of us can ever hope to speak French.

She infuses an inalienable charm into the beautiful Marcelle, who, in spite of her elegant apartment in the Champs-Elysees and everything the heart of woman can covet, including a $15,750 sable coat, grossly under-estimates the value of Sorbier's love. So, when his self-seeking friends assert that no man of his wealth can secure even disinterested friendship, she does her best to prove them right by running away with some one else. Poor Croesus has scarcely recovered from the effect of this knock-down blow when she turns up again repentant in white muslin and a Cavalier hat. During the five minutes he consents to give her in his office she pleads very prettily for forgiveness, but contrary to expectation, he proves obdurate. Then, wearing the flower Marcelle left for him, Sorbier goes off in a shabby coat in search of true love.

For a time we think he has found it among the simple, happy people with whom a shop girl called Yvonne lives. But Yvonne who has liberal notions about how to get on in the world, though nominally engaged to the disguised Sorbier, proposes to accept the protection of an old gentleman.

The irony of the situation consists in the fact that this is one of Sorbier's so-called friends, who has been sponging upon him outrageously for years. There is nothing left, therefore, for the gold-hearted millionaire to do than make Yvonne independent of such patronage, and then quietly withdraw. But as he puts Marcelle's flower back in his buttonhole as he does, we may hope that he eventually returns to his first love.

Handicapped by its didactic purpose, "Croesus" is enlivened by some well-observed touches of comedy. Its episodic character is, perhaps, its worse defect; but at any rate the author has spared us the infliction of an unnecessary fourth act. Though the reception was not wholly favorable when the curtain fell, there was a hearty call for the author, Baron Henri de Rothschild (perhaps the most picturesque member of the great family) which he took in the midst of a company that had served him, all things considered, remarkably well.

On the whole the play does not appear to be equal to the expectations formed of it and at times it is hard to believe that the author of "La Rampe," a work of talent and knowledge of life, has also written this rather obvious thing.

Unusual interest this year centred round the annual synagogue elections of the metropolis, which were held on May 18 at different times of the day. For the first time the question of the right of women seatholders to vote at synagogue elections was raised at several meetings, while in most cases there were keen contests for representation on the board of deputies. Apart, however, from one or two cases, the enfranchisement of women seatholders was not regarded with any favor by male members and even where the women had been in receipt of special invitations to attend the meetings "to give ladies an opportunity of discussing the affairs of the congregation, and, if necessary, to make any recommendations," apathy in synagogue government was shown by their non-attendance.

At three synagogues resolutions in favor of extending the franchise to women were lost, notwithstanding that it was urged that women could do much to strengthen the position of the synagogue in the community if allowed a voice in its control. The West London, or Reform Synagogue, in Berkeley street, long ago conceded its lady seatholders the right to vote, and the members of the Spanish and Portuguese congregation hold the right of voting in the case of the appointment of minister or cantor, but here their franchise ends. So far as purely local matters are concerned nearly every synagogue shows progress both in membership and revenue, and these facts were favorably commented upon by the presiding wardens at the meetings, all of whom by a strange coincidence were re-elected.

Distressing news comes from Vienna to the effect that nearly the whole of the Jewish quarter of Pressburg, the ancient capital of Hungary, was burned down on May 17, eighty houses being destroyed, and 6,000 Jews rendered homeless. The fire is believed to have commenced in an attic, where a wedding was being celebrated, from some fat in a frying-pan, but it only served to spread from one house, with its old wooden roof, to others with great rapidity. Very soon six narrow streets were involved, but being the Jewish Sabbath, the Jews themselves are alleged in the report to hand to have refused to assist in extinguishing the flames, until the Chief Rabbi had formally absolved them from the obligation of rest.

So far as is known, only one life—that of a little girl—was lost, but several hundreds of persons were more or less severely injured. The Pressburg Ghetto is the oldest in the Dual Monarchy, and is well known for its picturesque ancient buildings of the fourteenth century. The Roman Catholic Church was also destroyed. After the conflagration had lasted six hours, it was finally quelled with the help of a number of fire engines sent from Vienna by special train.

In Memoriam JACOB PHILIP SOLOMON Born Sivan 6th 5598 Died Sivan 6th 5669

In the approaching week will occur the fourth anniversary of the demise of Jacob P. Solomon, the beloved founder and first editor of this journal. Tempus fugit! Four years have come and gone since his cheery voice was heard and his reassuring footfall resounded for the last time in our sanctum! But, secher Zaddik lirocho; his blessed memory abides with us forever! The ideals which he cherished and to which, with a singleness of purpose and devotion worthy of being remarked in this time-serving and materialistic age, he dedicated his life are coming more and more into their own. This we faintly would believe; this belief we think the unmistakable signs of the day confirm. But this journal will not only continue to represent and defend the things for which Jacob P. Solomon stood. It will seek to take up in the face of all Jewish problems and communal matters the position which, from our knowledge of his thoughts and views, he would have advocated were he still with us in the flesh. And, above all, this conspicuous lesson from the life and career of Jacob P. Solomon must never be forgotten: he was, first and foremost, a Jew of the Jews, with all that this implies. He was never false to his moral, intellectual and religious heritage. He fought the battles of his brethren-in-faith with courageous sincerity, and without hope of material fee or reward of any nature. Hence on the fourth anniversary of his passing away, we rededicate ourselves to the task which he essayed so successfully: to be the editor of the Jewish people.

"Confirmation" and Shabuoth have absolutely nothing in common with each other. The former may be, in and for itself, quite innocuous, even useful. But Shabuoth is an important enough day to get on without it!

The reform temples disfigure the beauties of Shabuoth by "performing" on that day "the solemn rite of confirmation." And the innocent little ones remember the event, not as the day marking the Mosaic acceptance of the Torah from God Almighty; but as that on which they received presents!

Hungarian Jewry now has a representative among the high officials of the Ministry of Justice. Perhaps he will be able to stem the tide of economic anti-Semitism against his co-religionists, which has now set in, and which, be it noted, is far more subversive of their further well-being than the crass and brutal outbreaks of irrepressible Russian and Roumanian opponents of the Jew.

Senator Dillingham has come upon an ingenious solution of the problem of alien immigration into this country. His idea of restricting the admission of aliens of any one nation to 10 per cent. of the number of people of that nation, already settled in this country, sounds more like the proposal of a Russian minister of education dealing with the question of Jewish students and the universities than the serious project of a Senator of the United States. Of course, the scheme is absurdly unworkable! How, pray, is the total number of settlers originating out of a particular nation already in this country, to be arrived at? Senator Dillingham leaves this most important and necessary feature of his plan to peradventure.

The ritual murder fable has latterly twice made its appearance in Germany, of all countries! Both reports emanated from small communities in the eastern portion of the kingdom of Prussia, from that section, in other words, where ignorance and superstition would be likeliest to be found prevailing. Both in Landsberg and in Lobsens, the two places affected, the local police lost no time in making known to their citizens the absurdity of such a charge. Really, however, for the entire continent of Europe a systematic campaign of education for the purpose of proving the utter falsity of this charge is necessary. Here is work for the Hilfsverein der deutschen Juden and similar important international Jewish bodies.

THE ELECTION OF MINISTERS

IT is difficult for one who writes on this topic to lay down any hard and fast rules which ought to obtain in the election of ministers. Circumstances alter cases and where, as in our own land, each Jewish congregation is sovereign in the matter of the appointment and discharge of its spiritual guide, we may expect to and do find rabbis dependent upon every sort of fortuitous condition for their tenure of office. But the office of an editorial in a Jewish journal, is to mould the public opinion of its readers, wherever possible, and for this reason we at once venture the suggestion that our rabbis should be amply and sufficiently secured in their tenure of office by the congregations whom they serve.

If, in this connection, we point to the recent example of Congregation Orach Chaim, which elected Dr. Moses Hyamson as its rabbi for his life, it should be distinctly understood that we are anything but invidious in our comments or examples. We, however, hold this example up as an ideal for all Jewish congregations to follow and the recent communication from the Rev. Samuel Greenfield, published in our columns, shows that this action of the congregation in question evoked a responsive note from the colleagues of Dr. Hyamson, of all shades of theological opinion.

What does an election for life signify? It means simply that the rabbi who is honored by such is rabbi of the congregation during good behavior, as the lawyers say, or for the term of his natural life. It removes from the congregational councils the temptation to "play politics" with the worker for the glory and honor of the Almighty, enables this worker to bend all his energies fearlessly and unremittingly to the upbuilding of the spirit of devotion in the hearts of his congregants to bring them to a realizing sense of what Judaism means and what its continuance for all time demands. In fine, electing a rabbi for life results in enhanced effectiveness for both rabbi and congregation, and we need not labor the remark that this is a consummation devoutly to be wished by all lovers of our people and our faith.

Where the rabbi holds his office for a limited term he may be just as effective, just as whole-souled in his work as his colleague for life. But he looks out into the future and dreads to behold the time when he must seek re-election! It is this which we ought by all means to avoid.

The Jews of Turkey are said to be suffering, too, from the enmity of their non-Jewish neighbors, due to economic causes. This economic form of anti-Semitism, from which many Jews now suffer, is the latest and perhaps most subtle form of this malady of the centuries.

The Shabuoth festival, which we celebrate during the approaching week, is one of the most beautiful and significant of all the synagogal institutions. It is the day on which the Law was given to Moses, our teacher, on Mount Sinai, and through all the intervening years—centuries, indeed—the Jew has been faithful to his covenant with God. No matter how gross was his backsliding, no matter how grievous were his errors in the end his fidelity to his faith was unabated. The higher critics may tell us that Shabuoth was fundamentally a pagan agricultural feast; we shall continue to associate it with the greatest event in the history of Israel: the Giving of the Law to the people. Thereby the ethical content of the faith was deepened; thus Israel became the leaders of the morality of the world.

The Jews of Boskowitz, in Moravia, are confronted by a peculiar problem for the solution of their educational administration. The high executive for education has ordained that the school in that locality which is maintained, officered and attended by Jews, must display the crucifix in the class rooms during all the hours of secular instruction. A short time since the same authority declined to permit this school—a Jewish one, to all intents and purposes—to display Mezuzoth during the hours of secular instruction. Now Jewish children will be compelled to learn the three Rs under the shadow of the cross. The picture presented contains no humorous side lights! It explains, moreover, why in many respects the Austro-Hungarian monarchy stands immeasurably behind the other great European powers.

The eighteenth annual report of the State Commission of Prisons of New York for the year 1912 is an interesting document and is replete with the usual information concerning the penal and correctional institutions of the State. Henry Solomon, favorably known through his close interest in the Montefiore Home, is the president of the Commission. It may interest our readers to have presented to them the following statistics relating to the Jewish criminal population of the State. Of 3,433 persons admitted to State prisons in the past year 314 were Jews. Similarly, 251 Jews out of a total of 1,737 were admitted to the reformatories in this period. To penitentiaries the admissions totaled 11,344; 373 of these were Jews. It should be noted that, under this head, 296 Jews were admitted to the city penitentiary on Blackwell's Island out of a total of 2,782. In various jails and lockups throughout the State the Jews numbered 483 out of a grand total of 32,824. Finally, in the various district prisons and houses of detention of Greater New York there were 17,023 Jews and Jewesses out of 103,059 admitted prisoners. Thus it is apparent that Jewish criminality in New York is much below the average of the Jewish proportion of the population of the State.

THE LAW OF MORAL EFFORT

"Precept draws in its train precept." (Ethics of the Fathers iv, 5.)

PRECEPT draws in its train precept! This is the law of moral effort. This law is not to be identified with the commonplace saying, "Virtue is its own reward." The meaning of the latter is merely that the consciousness of duty well done is one of virtue's rewards. Observe that there are some dangers attached to this consciousness. It may degenerate into self-approbation, and then into smug self-complacency, which may prove a barrier to further moral effort, inducing the individual to stop short at past achievements. In such a case it would be far from the truth to state that "Virtue is its own reward," rather—Virtue is its own punishment! But the rabbis promise something higher and more efficient than such barren self-satisfaction. They promise us as the reward of virtue, more virtue; of one meritorious deed another meritorious deed. They promise us future achievement. And they promise yet more: To-day's duties, though they appear burdensome to the sluggish moral sense, will make to-morrow's obligations appear easier. The performance of duty, that is, results in an increased facility of subsequent performance. This is the law of moral effort.

It is a unique law. It is not valid in other departments of human endeavor. A man toiling up a steep slope might resent the suggestion that the nearer the peak the easier his ascent; that every rock he scales gives him increased strength to scale the next. In physical effort it is undeniable that, despite skill, the point of fatigue is brought nearer with every expenditure of energy; but in moral effort, the more work the more power. Love in spending itself revives itself. In intellectual effort, in artistic creation, does it hold true that one good book draws in its train another good book, or that one fine painting draws in its train another fine picture? Of the moral effort alone do we declare that "one good deed draws in its train another good deed."

In all other effort there lurks the danger of exhausting one's capacity in a single performance. Some lives are like an instrument with but one string; and that one string is so keyed that when it has played its highest note—it snaps. All the resources of some souls may be tending toward one culminating achievement in such a manner that, the climax once reached, there follows a hurtling fall into the abyss of incompetence. A master-piece may be the ruin of—the master. The world says, "Nothing succeeds like success;" but sometimes, nothing fails like success! The world thinks that a man's worst competitor is his rival, but, really, a man's fiercest competitor is—himself. For it is manifestly harder, when one has succeeded, to outdo oneself than to outshine another man; when one has done a big thing to do a bigger thing yet. But in moral effort, we are here told, one big thing will lead to bigger things yet. There is no danger here of exhaustion in a single performance. The benevolent heart is inexhaustible.

In all other effort, our proficiency may be partial. We know only in part. The world is so vast, its mysteries are so deep, that no single human mind can know all there is to know. Who can count the number of the heavenly host? Who can tell the plants by name? There are men who have applied themselves just to stars, and others who have studied just plants and nothing else. Since no one is able to understand all aspects of the universe, men have spent their lives mastering a single aspect, some narrow nook, of creation, thus trying to find the big in the little. This butterfly sailing with outspread wings on the sea of light, carries on its velvety back just as much of the burden of the universe as yonder planet roaming in the sky; this little thrush, blithely singing its matin to greet the rising sun, holds in its frail throat just as much of the harmony of the world as all the seven heavens; this slimy earthworm winding through the clods, poses the riddle of life just as bafflingly as the entire animal kingdom;—and, therefore, there are specialists who are busy counting the spots on the wings of the butterfly, or those who confine their attention to song-birds, or those again whose knowledge is cramped within the rings of the earthworm. For we know only in part, and the vastness of things compels specialism. But there can be no specialism in morals. Though we know but in part, we cannot do in part. Partial knowledge may have its value; but partial morality is no morality! Can one man specialize in truth-telling? Or another in charity, and yet another in justice? What boots it that a man is scrupulously truthful if he be hard-hearted, uncharitable? What boots it that a man is generous to the poor, if indeed he be unjust to his employees?

Nay, in moral effort, "one virtue must draw in its train another virtue," if it be virtue at all. The moral life asks for completeness. Morality disdains fragments. Morality involves the whole of man. Each virtuous deed transforms and suffuses the entire character of man, as each wicked action leaves its mark along the entire length and breadth of his life. One flaw is sufficient to mar the integrity of man, and hence all virtues combined are necessary to keep out the least defect. Contrariwise, one virtue may be the making morally of the whole man, because in some subtle manner—"precept draws in its train precept." Yes, there is a mysterious affinity between one virtue and another. If "precept draws after it precept," it is because of the subtle bond to which all virtues are attached. Dost thou see, understand, this subtle bond? "Canst thou," asks God of Job, "bind the sweet influences of Pleiades, or loose the bands of Orion?" Canst thou, I ask, loose the bands that bind virtue to virtue? Look up to the starry heaven where in the twinkling constellations star draws after it star, by invisible bands, and know that even thus in the heaven of man's heart—"precept draws in its train precept!"

The American Israelite devotes much valuable space to re-printing the abjectly contemptible, anti-Semitic vapourings of Life and The Smart Set, thus giving a wider currency to the crass brutalities of publications of this class. We would ask our Cincinnati contemporary not to waste its space upon such things in future. Here, in New York, the habits, inclinations and views of these journals are well known and the community gives them a wide berth. This is as it should be. We want no such life and would never be part of such a smart set!

Baltimore has established a Jewish court of arbitration and communal workers will follow its operations with much interest. This tribunal is a species of combined Beth Din and American court of justice, and should amply subserve the purpose for which it was called into being—the prevention of much of the litigation, some of it rather of an unsavory kind, which arises in the regular courts maintained in the quarter largely inhabited by Jews. The Baltimore tribunal has simple methods for dispatching business, and, curiously enough, seems to be bent on obliterating the “man of law” altogether.

What are the psychological motives which underlie the giving of public dinners? The question is put from a twofold point of view—that of the givers of such functions and that of the recipients of such honors. All the world and his wife are, in the final analysis, fond of their stomachs, but the public dinner is not a mere pandering to the mere material instincts of man. We can well understand why some truly great man, in Israel or extra muros, is flattered by such procedure. We can even comprehend why the little man who is thus singled out for this distinction feels grateful to them that dine to honor him; but, as to the latter case, why? What reason can there be for so much circumstance?

The Jews of Perth Amboy, N. J., are vastly exercised over the circulars which have been printed and distributed broadcast by certain Polish tradesmen calling upon their fellow-countrymen to avoid dealing with the Jews, “who cheat and rob them.” Circulars of this kind are beneath notice, even of the most contemptuous kind. We advise the Jews of Perth Amboy to pursue the even tenor of their way; let them continue on the olden paths of probity and rectitude. If the non-Jewish Poles will not patronize Jewish tradesmen in Perth Amboy the latter must, perforce, “worry along” without this custom. Of course the circulars speak falsely, but denials will not avail. The non-Jewish Pole is a Jew-baiter by nature, and we can but hope that under the inspiring influence of free America and American customs and ideals he will change his methods and his tune.

Miss Sadie Gertrude Fischel, the daughter of Harry Fischel, the well-known communal worker, received this week from Columbia University the degree of M. A. in course for post-graduate work and a thesis on the Biblical (and therefore Jewish) subject of “The Probable Date of Deutero-Isaiah.” The M. A. degree is an historic distinction in the academic field to which women, even in these days of militancy and “bombastes furioso” methods, only occasionally are admitted, and the Jewess is, of course even less conspicuous than her non-Jewish sisters in the ranks of the M. A. bearers. Accordingly Miss Fischel has every reason to be proud of her scholastic success. Perhaps she will be persuaded to have her thesis see the light of print. We make little doubt that it will be interesting to scholar and layman alike from more than one point of view.

The departure for Europe of M. W. William A. Brodie, Senior Past Grand Master of Masons in the State of New York recalls to our mind the fact that thirty years ago, when Grand Master Mr. Brodie congratulated Brother Sir Moses Montefiore, who was also a Mason, on attaining his one hundredth birthday.

“A NATIONAL DEBT IS A NATIONAL BLESSING?” WHY SHOULDN'T A MUNICIPAL DEBT BE A MUNICIPAL BLESSING?

Jay Cooke, who was the great government banker at the time of the War of the Rebellion, said “that a national debt was a national blessing.” He contended that, like England (whose debt has been upwards of four billions of dollars and which summed but little in the past thirty or forty years or more), and which debt is held in small sums by the people of Great Britain—to a large amount and by thousands of the population—these small holdings go far to maintain the integrity of the government and hold the population firmly.

Mr. Cooke also said that if the United States had had a large national debt when the war broke out, and the farmers and others of the South had invested and held the bonds of the government, they would have been less prone to secede, and thus endanger their holdings.

It seems to be a wise policy to have the national debts, held in goodly sums and goodly numbers, by the citizens of the nation. It creates a common interest and strengthens the bonds of citizenship and allegiance.

The city of New York has recently issued forty-five millions of dollars in bonds, at the attractive interest of four and one-half per cent. It is as good and possibly better investment than the deposits in a savings bank. Why shouldn't the people of New York city invest in these bonds? It would be of value interest to them. It would engender an interest in the financial situation. Having an actual interest in the city by their holdings they would be likely to watch more closely the operations of the Board of Estimate which does the city's spending, and having a pecuniary interest in the welfare of the city, they would become a factor in its affairs. And why should not this issue of bonds find lodgment with the residents of the city? The denominations of the bonds are ten dollars and upwards, so that it would be within the means of thousands of the working men and the middle classes to own them. Such a distribution among residents would create a splendid watchman of the municipal treasury.

Pure, good tobacco—selected as you would select a gift for a friend. Simple package—20 cigarettes, of which more are sold than any other in this country.

First—the team representing the Y. M. H. A. did so without consulting us and, as I have learned, without the approval of the physical director. In other words, they entered as individuals, and have no business to call themselves our representatives, nor did they. The entry blanks were not sent to us for signature or approval.

In fact, such an occasion arose last year when we were consulted and the matter was promptly turned down. Our Y. M. H. A. is on record as opposed to any activity whatsoever which takes place on Saturday or any holiday.

Second—Our Y. M. H. A., if guilty, was not the only one so embarrassed by the boys. As the other Y. M. H. A.'s have also been unofficially represented by thoughtless boys.

Third—The boys won in the race, but I am not aware of the fact that we officially announced it. Whatever announcement was made, was made by the boys themselves; moreover, we shall not take any notice of the whole thing except to reprove the runners by not accepting the plaque they won and by not accepting their medals for presentation at our closing exercises. They have already been made to see their error.

Assuring you that we wish to cooperate with you in making our institution Jewish in every way, I am,
Very truly,
BERNHARD D. SAKKE, Supt.

(In the regular weekly bulletin sent to the office of this journal there appeared a paragraph to the effect that “our boys were successful in the Marathon race promoted by the Evening Mail.” If the superintendent was ignorant of the fact that the boys had entered as the Bronx Y. M. H. A. team, why did he embody the fact in his official bulletin sent to the Jewish press? The announcement was not made by “the boys,” but by the association, which, in doing so, assumed responsibility.—Editor HEBREW STANDARD.)

Jewish K. C.'s.

Mr. L. H. Rosenthal, the new Irish K. C., is the first Jew to be granted silk by an Irish Lord Chancellor. In England, however, there have been several King's Counsel, although, compared with the Continent, English Jews cannot be said to have attained to their expected eminence in the law. It must not be forgotten, however, that the head of the English bar at present is a Jew, Sir Rufus Isaacs, and that of the living representatives of the older generation one of the most eminent is another Jew, Mr. Arthur Cohen. Among the younger King's Counsel are Mr. A. H. Jessel, Mr. A. M. L. Langdon and Mr. H. H. Haldin. Mr. D. L. Alexander, K. C., retired from active practice some years ago.

Of those who are dead, Judah Benjamin and Sir George Jessel stand out pre-eminent as pillars of English judicial science. To a lesser plane, but also to a past generation, belong Sir Francis Goldsmid, the first Anglo-Jewish barrister, Sidney Woolf, and Lionel Pyke, all in their day Queen's Counsel. Sir George Jessel is as yet the only Jew by religion to be raised to the bench, but both Mr. Arthur Cohen and Mr. Langdon at times perform judicial functions. The foregoing is the tale of Anglo-Jewish gifts to English law. By Hebrews by descent, however, the legal profession in England has been further endowed. Of recent English lawyers of this description there have been a Lord Chancellor, Lord Herschell, a Master of the Rolls, Sir Archibald Levin Smith, and a High Court Judge, Mr. Justice Lopes, afterwards Lord Ludlow. And among the most able of to-day's younger King's Counsel is Mr. Felix Cassell, a nephew of Sir Ernest Cassell, and a member of a well-known German Jew family.—Jewish Chronicle.

Quick Action by the United Hebrew Charities.

(Communicated.)

On May 20, 1913, fifteen Jewish boys and two Jewish girls between the ages of eleven and fourteen years, were arrested on the lower East Side for peddling illegally and brought into the Children's Court. The United Hebrew Charities, seeing the report in the morning newspaper, immediately communicated with the authorities, requesting the names and addresses of the children. In order to have an investigation made to determine whether in any of these cases destitution was responsible, and if so, to grant sufficient relief to enable the children to remain at home.

The probation officer in charge of Jewish children reported the names and addresses promptly, and made the following statement in the accompanying letter: "It is the belief of Justice Hoyt and myself that the majority of peddling cases among children is a result of poverty in the home. While the proceeds of peddling are of great help to the family, it should be impressed upon the minds of the parents, the great dangers to which they expose their children; sending them out all hours of the day and night, becoming acquainted with vicious persons and habits, such as playing crap, picking pockets, etc., and gets them accustomed to having money in their possession. Many of these children beg while pretending to peddle."

An investigation carefully made by the Charities discloses the following facts: In five the addresses given were wrong; the families were not located. Of the remaining twelve, eight were found to be in fairly comfortable circumstances. In two other cases, the income was insufficient to maintain a decent standard of living, but the income of the father was insufficient to provide a comfortable livelihood for his family but was still enough to make it unnecessary for a charitable organization to render assistance. All of the cases thus far cited had never been recorded in the office of the charities.

The remaining two were known to the society. In one, consisting of man, wife and four children, considerable assistance had been rendered for a number of years; the last aid rendered was on August 31, 1910, when $50 was loaned by the society from the Self-Help Fund to enable the man to peddle. The man is peddling at the present time and the eldest of his children, a boy aged twenty-one, works in a broker's office, his earnings have not been determined, although they are admittedly $6 per week. The family is not in need of relief.

The last case, known to this society since 1907, consists of man, wife and four children, two of the latter being in the Hebrew Orphan Asylum. The husband has, for many years, failed to recognize his family responsibilities. In January, 1912, the society found it necessary, because of the man's wilful refusal to support his family, to have him committed to the Work House. He was discharged some time ago. Since that time the wife has peddled with papers, earning, according to her statement, $9 a week. We are attempting to locate the husband.

The above indicates the value of organized charity. In this instance, as in others that have come to its notice from time to time, the United Hebrew Charities did not wait for application to be made for relief, but made it its business to learn at once whether there was need for relief in cases which had not come to its attention in the ordinary way. Though no reliable conclusion can be drawn for seventeen cases, it would seem to indicate that undue emphasis should not be laid upon poverty as a cause for neglect and improper guardianship of Jewish children.

Deputy Wik recently delivered a strong pro-Jewish speech in the Finnish Diet. He said that the position of the Jews in Finland was a disgrace to the country, which did not deserve such good citizens as the hard-working, educated, sober and honest Jews were. The Jews, he stated, are valuable as promoters of commerce, and they are a progressive force which is strongly opposed to oppression and reaction. Finland, he exclaimed, ought not to copy the tactics of Russia and Roumania.

The Emperor of Austria has conferred the Order of the Iron Crown, Third Class, on Dr. Sigmund Herzberg-Frankel, professor at the University of Czernowitz. After having been first extraordinary professor and later ordinary professor at the university he was elected its rector in 1905, and was returned by it as its representative in the Diet of Bukowina. Dr. Herzberg-Frankel is the eldest son of the Ghetto poet, Leo Herzberg-Frankel, who despite his advanced age (eighty-six) still continues his literary activity.

Talmudical Institute of Harlem.

The Ladies' Society of the Talmudical Institute of Harlem have been very busy making arrangements for the strawberry festival which will be celebrated in the auditorium of the Talmudical Institute of Harlem, at 56 West 114th street, on Sunday, June 8, at 8 p. m. They are very anxious to make this affair a great success, as the summer time is a very poor season to collect money for any institution, the people who are able to give being out of town, meanwhile the Hebrew and English teachers have to be paid, this institution being a school in which religious instruction is given from 9 to 3 p. m., suitable periods for recess and gymnastic exercises being allowed, and secular instruction is given from 4 to 7 p. m. There is no saving of money on the teachers! Every one who gives instruction in this institution is the most excellent teacher that can be procured in this city, and is well paid for his services. This institution, striving to excel all other institutions in both its Hebrew and English branches, cannot employ inexperienced teachers—therefore the expense is enormous, and in order to create a fund to tide it over the summer months until the people who are well to do return from the country, the ladies are making this strawberry festival, and there is no reason why it should not be well patronized. In the first place, the admission is only 25 cents, for which the inner and the outer person will be well regaled by the refreshments served, the music, the speaking, and, above all, the consciousness that with your 25 cents you are helping a young and tender child to grow up into a faithful Hebrew and a good American citizen, who will bring honor to your race.

The following are the officers of the Ladies' Society of the Talmudical Institute of Harlem: Mrs. J. Richman, president; Mrs. M. Sterman, vice-president; Mrs. L. Perlestein, vice-president; Mrs. D. Cohen, vice-president; Mrs. H. Goodman, vice-president; Mrs. J. A. Bernstein, treasurer. Do not forget the time and place, Sunday, June 8, 1913, at 8 p. m., at the Talmudical Institute of Harlem, 56 West 114th street.

The Columbia Religious and Industrial School for Jewish Girls.

The graduation exercises of the Columbia School, of 316 East Fifth street, were held Sunday afternoon at the Girls' Hebrew Technical Building. There were seventeen graduates of the industrial department and thirteen of the religious department. Mt. Neboh Congregation. At the closing of the Sunday school of Mount Neboh Congregation over 200 children attended. Prizes were awarded, and a very interesting entertainment was held. The president of the congregation, Mr. Edward R. Cohn, presented the prizes, and speeches were made by Mrs. David E. Goldfarb, principal, and members of the Sunday school board, Messrs. D. E. Goldfarb, Samuel Zekind and Saul Rogers. A vote of thanks was given to the Misses E. Rodberg, E. Hesse, L. Morris, H. Hess, G. Guter, F. Mandelbaum, and Messrs. S. Henle, M. Kaufman, P. Hertz, E. Levitus, and Miss M. Vidaver, the teachers who volunteered their services for the term. At the Sisterhood meeting held Monday, the 2d inst., ways and means were devised to collect money for the building fund during the summer. The public is invited to attend the reception June 17, 8.30 p. m., tendered to Rabbi and Mrs. A. S. Anspacher.

Congregation Kehillath Israel. On Sunday evening, May 18, a memorial meeting was held at the synagogue in honor of the late David H. Lieberman. A large attendance of friends and admirers of the deceased communal worker, Zionist and staunch Jew, was present. "Maarib" was read by the rabbi and addresses were delivered by Rabbis Magnes, Morris, Nieto and Solomon. Cantor Goldsmith chanted the Hazzkarah.

As a monument to David H. Lieberman, friends and acquaintances of his are contributing towards a fund by which an olive grove will be planted in his memory in Palestine. The treasurer of the fund is Mr. Louis Gotschall, of 830 East 163d street, city. A meeting will be held at the synagogue Thursday evening, June 12, at which a report will be rendered of the progress made in connection with the matter of the proposed new synagogue building. All subscribers to the building fund, and all others who are interested are cordially invited to be present.

At the annual meeting of Congregation B'nai Sholom, which took place last Sunday afternoon at their temporary quarters, the Hebrew Educational Society of South Brooklyn, Rabbi Israel Herbert Levinthal was unanimously re-elected minister of the congregation, and Rev. E. Hollander was unanimously re-elected cantor. Rabbi Levinthal is now entering upon his fourth year as the spiritual head of B'nai Sholom, and under his guidance the congregation has made strides of progress. The membership has been greatly increased, and Rabbi Levinthal has been extremely fortunate in interesting a large number of young men in the synagogue. The old synagogue building on Ninth street and Fifth avenue has been sold, and the congregation is now erecting one of the finest houses of worship in Brooklyn, on Ninth street near Seventh avenue. An interesting feature of the service instituted by Rabbi Levinthal is the participation of the children of the religious school in the Friday evening service. Every Friday evening more than 100 children chant the whole service according to the ancient Jewish melodies, being instructed by Cantor Hollander. Rabbi Levinthal has also taken an active part in the organization of the Hebrew School of South Brooklyn, of which he is the chairman of the Board of Education, and is actively interested in all civic as well as religious and philanthropic movements in Brooklyn. The final examinations in all the classes of the Religious School of Congregation B'nai Sholom will take place this Sunday morning at the Hebrew Educational Society, 372 Seventh street.

schmid were the recipients of a very handsome cut glass fruit stand and numerous floral tokens. The entire arrangements were in the hands of Mrs. Joseph Kellner and some of those present were Mrs. L. Schwartz, Mrs. R. Worek, Mrs. S. Kellner, Mrs. L. Stern, Mrs. Baruth, Mrs. A. Seigel, Mrs. S. Alpern, Mrs. B. Adler and Mrs. Loudey.

Dr. Alexander Fichandler, principal of Public School 165, will deliver an interesting lecture to the students of the Kaplan School this evening at 8 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Kaplan School, 1731 Pitkin avenue, Brooklyn. The subject of Dr. Fichandler's lecture will be, "What Are We Here For?" The public is cordially invited.

Rockaway Park, L. I. The Belmont House, which is open for the season under the management of Messrs. Bondy and Phillips, reports the following arrivals from New York city: Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Raphael, infant and maid; Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell B. Marks, infant and maid; Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hess, children and maid; Mr. Fred Labane, and Mr. Pierre Singer.

Another project in the plans of George C. Tilyou to add to the attractiveness and picturesque environment of Steeplechase Park has reached such a stage of completion that it is now available to the crowds of visitors to that amusement resort. This is an esplanade extending from Surf avenue to the beach and connecting there with the pier that runs far out into the sea. This passageway, substantial and roomy, and constructed of heavy pine wood and steel piers, has a length of 1,500 feet, a width of 25 and a height of 30. The pier gives a stretch of similar length and breadth, so that the walk is a long one amid surroundings that are picturesque and pleasant.

From the beach to Surf avenue the Esplanade overtops the Steeplechase Park gardens that now are almost in full bloom, and present a beautiful appearance.

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Rabbi Elazar of Bartotha

Dear Children.

The Talmud tells us that whenever the "Gabye Tz'dokoh," or collectors for charity saw Rabbi Elazar of Birttha (or Bartotha) they would run away from him, because everything that he had with him he would give for charity. One day as he was going to buy a wedding outfit for his daughter he saw the "Gabye Tz'dokoh" running away from him. He ran after them with all speed until he reached them. "I adjure you," said he to them, "that you tell me for whom you are collecting?" "For an orphaned couple who are going to be married," they answered. "By my faith!" he exclaimed, "I swear that they take precedence over my daughter." He took out all the money he had with him and gave it to them. When they had departed he found that there was still a coin left in his pocket. For that coin he bought wheat and threw it in his granary. His wife came and asked her daughter, "What did thy father bring thee?" "Whatever he brought he threw into the granary," said the daughter. Going to the granary, she tried to open the door, but it was so full of wheat that she could not turn the knob. His daughter ran to the Beth Hamedrash and said to her father, "Come and see what your friend (the Holy One, blessed be He!) has done for you." "By my faith!" he swore, "it is consecrated for charity and you will have no larger share of it than any of the poor of Israel;" for he did not wish to enjoy any miraculous reward for his charitable actions.

This is the man, dear children, who is the father of the following maxim in the ethics, a maxim which is so well in keeping with his character, for Rabbi Elazar of Bartotha said: "Give unto Him of what is His; for thou and what is thine are His; as David hath it, thus—for from Thee is everything and out of Thy own have we given unto Thee."

To show you, dear children, that the noble character of the Jew has not changed in all these thousands of years I will tell you the following story of modern times as it has been told by Rabbi Moses Simon Sivitz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., in one of his sermons.

"Now I will tell you of a man who loved his Maker more than all his money. This is an actual fact, as chronicled in the records kept by the Congregation of Wilna. About one hundred years ago there lived in Wilna (a city of Russia) a very rich man by the name of Reb Yerucham. He was known to be very close fist-ed. Like all wealthy Europeans, he enjoyed the pleasure of having his dependents come to his house every evening to drink tea with him out of that bright copper "Samovar" which boiled so cheerfully. Reb Yerucham was very fond of a joke, and his guests vied with each other in keeping their rich host amused. These hours he considered the happiest of his life. It was the custom of these men to ask the rich man to make them a loan of ten rubels, which they would generally receive on Sunday and repay on Tuesday. They were very prompt in repaying in order that they might again be favored the following week and not have to pay any interest. Thus they would act all the time.

Amongst these guests there was a man called Daniel; a man possessing great wit and enjoying the favor of the rich man to such an extent that whenever he would be absent the rich man would inquire why he did not come. Adjacent to the city of Wilna there lived a very wealthy and titled land owner, a Gentile, who was very friendly to Daniel and always enjoyed the brilliant wit of Daniel the Jew whenever the latter would visit his place. One day the duke suspected his steward of dishonesty and he resolved to appoint an agent to lease his palace and farm lands for one year. As he was speaking of his plans to one of his friends Daniel the Jew called upon him. "Whence comest thou and whither goest thou, my lord the duke?" said the duke to Daniel (with whom he liked to jest). Then said Daniel to the duke: "I am neither a duke nor the son of a duke; I am just Daniel the peddler." "Why not?" continued the duke. "Because I am too young yet," said Daniel. "Perhaps in a hundred years from now I will also become a duke." "Listen, Daniel," said the duke jestingly; "I will lease to you these lands and possessions and you will make a large profit on it; then you will become a duke." Daniel assumed an air of gravity and said: "How much would your Lordship require for the lease? Tell me and I will pay you cash." "Six thousand roubles cash," replied the duke. Daniel quickly took a Polish gulden from his pocket, handed it to the duke and said: "There is the money and give me the change." After they were through with all this jesting Daniel said: "Perhaps, my Lord, I can find some one to lease this land. Will you give me a commission?" "Yes Daniel!" exclaimed the duke. "Find me the man and obtain your commission." Daniel bowed and took his departure. That evening Daniel did not come to the house of the rich Reb Yerucham as usual. However, the rich man sent for Daniel, and he came to his house appearing down-cast and ill at ease. That was a new joke that he was then playing. With an appearance of great worry Daniel bade his host "Good evening" and sat down at the end of the table, supporting his head with both hands. When the rich man saw Daniel's dejected appearance he said: "Daniel, why so downcast? Hide nothing from me and I will try to comfort you as much as I can." Daniel made no reply, but heaved a deep sigh. One of the guests handed him a glass of tea, but he would not drink it. "Tell me why you are so dejected to-day?" Reb Yerucham insisted. "I am greatly in need of money now," answered Daniel. "How much more do you need—five, six or ten roubles? Tell me," said the rich man, "why should you be so aggravated?" "Ah!" said Daniel, "it is not ten nor twenty, nor thirty roubles that can help me to-day, and even if you treble these amounts you cannot remove my sorrow from me. I need much more than you have any idea of. Six thousand roubles I must have to-day in cash."

Clergyman—Do you know where little boys go to when they smoke?
Boy—Yes; up the alley.

"I want you to pay down."
"All right. I'll settle up."

CONUNDRUMS.
