THE BA'L MAGIHA

By H. L. STOLLNITZ, Litt. D.

The Scroll of the Law, out of which portions are read during public divine services, consists of the Pentateuch, and is written on parchment by the "Sofer" scribe. It must not be used, however, before undergoing a rigid revision by the "Ba'l Magiha" proof-reader, whose eagle eye discovers the errors to be corrected by the scribe. Not only is the proof-reading a profession of skill, but also of trust. The Jew guards his "Torah" like the apple of his eye. Guided by various readings—different manners in which some passages are expressed in different manuscripts, together with the omission or insertion of a word or a clause, yea one letter, occasioned by the oversights or mistakes of transcribers, he—the Jew—takes precaution against the recurrence of such errors which cause the scroll to deviate from the original. The Jewish doctors, called Masorites, were grammarians who engaged with ardor in the revisal of Hebrew scripture. The Masoritic notes and criticisms relate to the verses, words, letters, vowel-points and accents—"K'lollim, Protim v'Dikdookim." The "Ba'l Magiha" is the successor to the Masorite. He does, however, not make any notes or criticisms. He is guided absolutely by the "Tikon," printed vowel-less Pentateuch. His "O. K." relieves the scribe of all further responsibility. Hence, the "Ba'l Magiha" must be worthy of unlimited confidence.

able. But the more inaccessible Pogoda was, the more they renewed their attempts to launch him into matrimony. One day three "Shadchanim" approached him simultan-being admitted in turn to the "Ba'l Magiha's" private room. After all had been heard they were seated in the reception room. The marriage brokers now worked on Yossel in clined every one of their proposals and advised them to be governed by his ultimatum, which he gave to them in the following exposition: "The woman I would choose as my wife brated "Ba'l Magiha" that I am, and they will come in good stead to help me find a wife without physical blemish. The fascination of the 'eternal feminine' has never ceased to govern the world which includes also me. Savages, rulers, artists, authors and plebeians have sacrificed their lives on the altar of love, that means for the one they thought most beautiful of all women. In poetry, music, sculpture and painting, in fact in all branches of art, beauty plays its part. She must therefore be of captivating and inviting form. But beauty is not all; at least not mere physical beauty. There is a deeper beauty of the mind and soul which outweighs external beauty.

"You, gentlemen, know my career. You are aware of my travels, that I have spent some time in Paris and Rome with a view of studying art and it is only because of a lack of means that I abandoned the muses. You must also be mindful of the secular education I acquired. While I am a Jew, with every fiber of my soul, I have also imbibed enough of the world to become a man of the twentieth century. A man can be a strict observer of every jot and dot of his religion, yet keep pace with modern life. Taking all this into consideration, I must have a wife to possess an ensemble of external beauty and beauty of the soul on which both my eyes and soul can pasture. She must be able to hear others talk and not be bored and to talk herself without boring others.

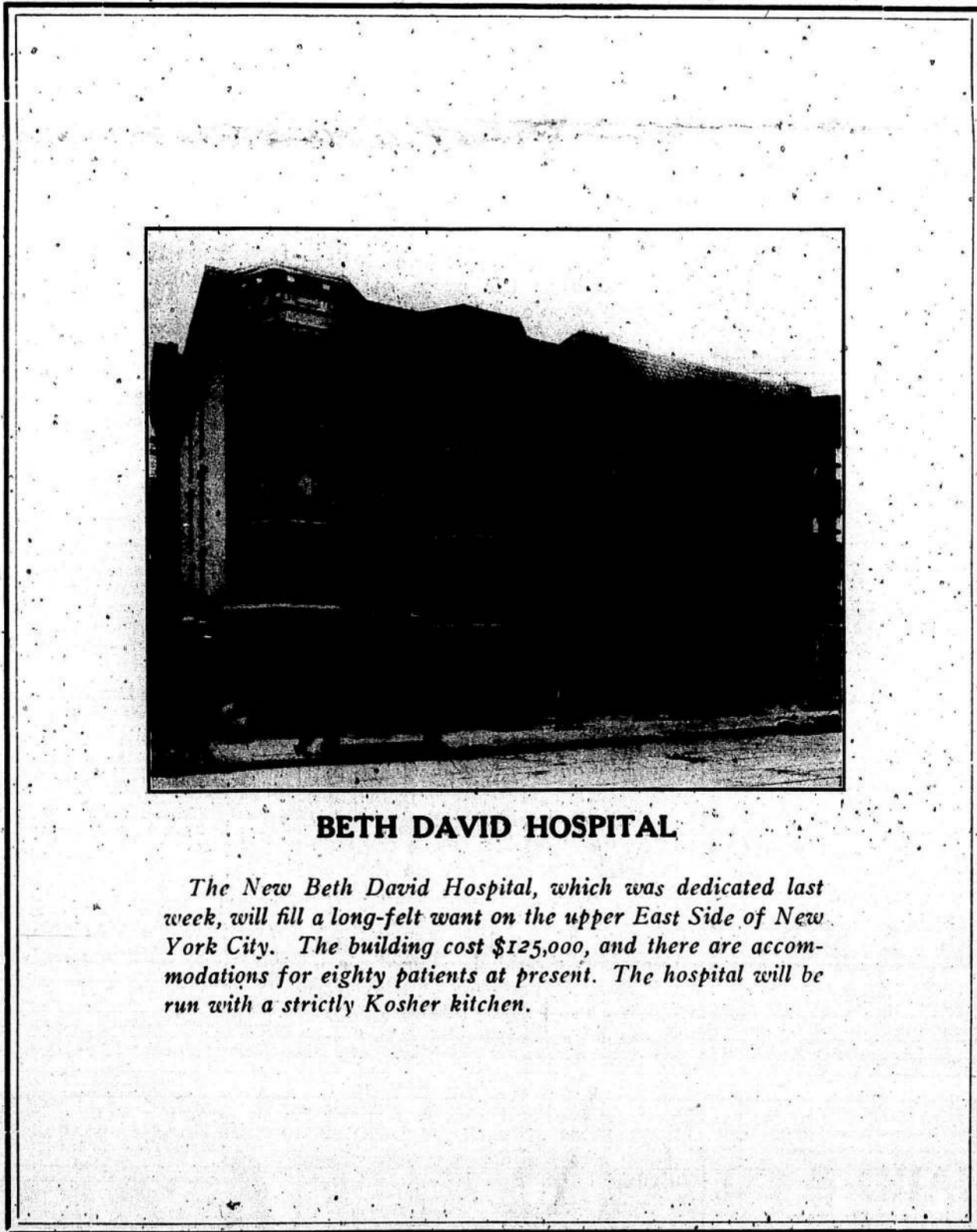

"Were I not so busy a man I would never make use of the services of a "Shadchen." If you think you know what I am after and that you can find her, proceed and I wish you good luck; if not, throw up the job right now. But, mind you, you are to discover her, that is all. You are by no means to be the go-between. You report to me her whereabouts and I will do the rest. If successful, I will gladly pay your full commission."

Treating each one to a cigar he bowed them out of the door. The trio were spellbound. They did not exchange a word until they came near to a tea house, when one of them suggested that they enter. As they were sipping the amber colored liquid out of the tumblers, one of them asked: "Gentlemen, have you ever in your 'Shadchenic' career come across such a case?" The others at once answered with an em-ously, each with a string of eligibles of rare qualities. The conversations were held separately between Pogoda and each of the brokers, the latter unison. Held at bay for a while by their quick wit and smooth tongues, Yossel at length energetically and emphatically told them that he de-must, before all, be beautiful to the eye, i. e. (pointing to his lustrous eyes of rare shape and charm), the ones which made of me the celephatic "No." Recreated by the aromatic beverage and abashed by their defeat, they now began to discuss the means through which to bring the "Ba'l Magiha" under the canopy of marital bliss. They doubted not Yossel's sincerity nor his intention of paying generous commission. They were also aware of the German adage "Wer den Schaden hat, der braucht fuer den Spot nicht zu sorgen" (the loser is sure of ridicule). They wished not to be the laughing stock of the host of their colleagues in addition to their failure to earn the coveted fee. After a deal of deliberation they made a compact that no matter who should discover the unusual Kohinoor, the commission should be equally divided among them. Each of the "Dreibund" went hunting with an ardor never known heretofore by any "Shadchen." Many were the candidates in Warsaw, but Pogoda's definition of his affinity to be echoed in their ears at each analyzation of a young woman that entered their minds. They were at their wits' end. They were to meet every second day in order to compare notes. At their fifth rendezvous Mendel, called "Chripka" on account of his noisy breathing caused by asthma, came running and breathing louder than ever. Triumphantly he asked his partners to congratulate him as well as themselves. "I have found the one," shouted he repeatedly. "You may well treat me and yourselves to a roasted goose quarter and tea with arac. Breathlessly the others waited to learn who the rare gem was. When Chripka announced "Chinka Perlmutter," the two agreed that she was the one destined by Providence to be the wife of the particular "Ba'l Magiha." The trio were in full accord should Pogoda find fault with Miss Perlmutter, he and they too might as well give up all hope of ever finding any one to answer his taste. They also concluded that even should nothing come out of the whole affair they fully deserved to relegate themselves for their arduous work. They were light-hearted and of good cheer when they parted. The next morning Tavyr Pyetrak, one of the trio, looked up his two partners and put before them a new idea. He thought it expedient to first see Kalmen Perlmutter to exact his promise that in case they find a suitable match for his Chinka they would receive the regular commission. "For," said he, "after all, Yossel Pogoda is but a "Ba'l Magiha," while Reb Kalmen is a rich man and well-known for his generosity. I grant that we are all anxious to bring the match to a finish, but remember we cannot live on glory." After a heated discussion the opinion prevailed that the business should be conducted in strict accordance with the rules laid down by Yossel Pogoda, Warsaw's champion "Ba'l Magiha."

It is one of the mandatory precepts that every Israelite should write a copy of the Pentateuch for his own use. If unable to do it himself he should hire a scribe to write it for him. Thus it is the ambition of every pious Jew to possess a "Sefer Torah."

Strange as it may seem, Reb Kalmen Perlmutter, although the rich and pious man he was, had no scroll. Reb Moishle Pinsker was Warsaw's foremost scribe. He was so pious that it was said he bathed each time before writing the name of God. His reputation as a "Sofer" was not less than that of Yossel Pogoda as a "Ba'l Magiha." Scribe and proof-reader were close friends. The morning after he had received a minute description of charming and fascinating Chinka, Pogoda visited his friend Reb Moishle before whom he laid bare his heart. The scribe at once declared himself willing to speak in his behalf to Mr. Perlmutter whom he knew personally. But young Pogoda could not be shaken in his determination that no mediator should ever have any part in his "af-shair du coeur." His senior friend was surprised at so new an idea, but he was a man of reason and knew that his young friend was more at home in modern life and wished him to eke out his salvation in accordance with his own views. Asked what else he could do for him in the matter, Yossel put before him the following plan: "As you know, Reb Moishle, it is a mystery to everybody that a man like Reb Kalmen Perlmutter should have no scroll. If he could be persuaded to have one written I am positive that no one but you would write it, and—" "Yes, yes," took up Reb Moishle, "and you would be the "Ba'l Magiha." I understand the whole plot. Although I have more orders than I can fill, I'll see Reb Kalmen yet to-day and Sokolski is my best friend and Reb Kalmen's confidant. I'll send him. If there is any chance it is he who can bring it best to an issue." "Agreed," said Pogoda, "but Reb Manne must not be let into the real secret." "Agreed," answered Pinsker.

Reb Moishle Pinsker told his friend Sokolski in confidence that he was hard pressed for money. Several hundred rubles were to come in within a short time on the completion of some scrolls, but it was a question of the immediate moment. "After much pondering," said he, "I arrived at the conclusion that there is but one thing that could lift me above this difficulty—to influence Reb Kalmen Perlmutter to have a scroll written for him. He is the only one I know of who would not mind paying in advance, at least part of the price agreed upon." "Reb Moishle," cried his friend, "you are a lucky chap! But yesterday I accidentally broached the subject to Reb Kalmen, and I am most sanguine that with very little persuasion an order can be gotten. For you, Reb Moishle, I'll do anything. I thank you for giving me the opportunity of being of service to you; rely on me." Reb Moishle heaped thanks upon his willing friend and rose to leave when Reb Manne said: "Reb Moishle leben, you are my best friend. I, too, have a secret in my heart with which I was about to come to you. It seems the Lord has led you hither for both your and my sake. My daughter Grendel is advancing in years; she'll soon be seventeen. I have kept an eye on Yossel Pogoda for the last two years. I believe he would make a capital match. Suppose I get you Reb Kalmen's order for an expensive "Sefer Torah" and you help me to inveigle the "Ba'l Magiha?" A fair exchange is no robbery." Quickly correcting himself he continued: "God knows, Reb Moishle, that I would do anything for you without expecting the least reward, but this is a favor which I intended to ask of you anyway. As I said before, I wanted to come to see you about it." Reb Moishle's heart ceased beating for a moment, his knees shook, a pallor covered his patriarchal face and it was with some effort that he reached a chair. Sokolski was frightened. Speechless at first, he then ran for some whiskey. After reviving him he asked his guest what ailed him, whereupon the quick-witted scribe replied: "It is nothing—just one of my old spells." Assuring his friend that he was alright again and thanking him warmly for his kindness Reb Moishle departed and slowly dragged himself to his home.

There had been no secrets between Sokolski and his spouse. Post-haste he reported to her what had transpired. "Gittel dear," said he, "it is a Godsend. His ways are miraculous! Reb Moishle needs the money just as we are in need for a suitable match for our Grendel. "Hold! Better yet! Reb Manne learn how the field lays." After a moment's reflection he exclaimed: True, I am his friend, but he cannot—shall not receive Reb Kalmen's order for a scroll without rendering me that favor in return. This law of self-preservation I must—I will observe.

Whether it was premonition or a woman's intuition, Gittel, who looked pensive, queried: "Have you ever witnessed a like spell of Moishle's before?" As unseemingly as his wife's question would have been at any other time, it startled Manne and set him thinking. After some reflection he answered: "Not that I can remember." "Perhaps—" said his wife. "Perhaps what?" retorted the husband, "you know Reb Moishle has no daughter or even any young lady among his entire relationship. Then, you must also bear in mind he is getting old. The years have many an ache and ailment in their wake." At this juncture Grendel entered which prevented further discussion of the subject.

Israel's Love of the Stranger

From a Sermon by the Late Dr. Adolph Jellinek
Translated from the German by Rev. S. Rosenberg, late of Kingston, Jamaica

"Love ye therefore the stranger, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt." Deut., 10-19.

No event in history is so repeatedly emphasized in the Scriptures as Israel's deliverance from Egypt. This historical episode is closely interwoven with Israel's solemn festivals; like a golden thread it runs through all the stringent laws regarding right and justice, honesty and integrity, love, mercy, kindness and benevolence as laid down in the Pentateuch. When in the book of Deuteronomy (5-15) the command of the seventh day as a day of rest is proclaimed for all, even for the beast, we hear the words, "Remember that thou wast a slave in the land of Egypt."

When the feast of weeks is commanded as a day of rejoicing for the man servant, the maid servant, the Levite, the stranger, the orphan and the widow, we hear the repetition of the words, "Remember that thou wast a slave in the land of Egypt."

At the Feast of the Tabernacles, instituted as a day of rejoicing and thanksgiving over the ingathering of the fruits of trees and other productions of the field, the word goes out, "That your generations shall know that I made the children of Israel to dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt." (Lev. 23-43.) In all commands of love and mercy to the poor and needy, the man and the maid servant, the widow and the fatherless, the Israelite is admonished, "Remember that thou wast a slave in the land of Egypt."

While other nations sought to efface from their memory the days of national defeat and dishonor, seeking to impress upon the minds of succeeding generations only those days of national victory and glory, we find the gloomy period of the Egyptian slavery accompanying Israel's brightest and friendliest behests. As out of the darkest cloud sometimes the sun breaketh forth, so did the light of the most benign precept emerge from the Egyptian darkness for all future times and generations.

"Love ye therefore the stranger, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt." What a glorious triumph does the genius of Judaism achieve in thus bringing together all strangers within the fold of love and attachment! Open the statute books of the ancient nations; ask Egypt, Assyria, Babylon, Greece and Rome; ask the Middle Ages, with their cruel fanaticism; ask the modern age, with its cunning diplomacy if it realizes the significance of these three words, "Love the stranger."

I have often heard our opponents say, "The Law of Moses has outlived its usefulness, it being out of harmony with modern ideas and conditions; in fact, too old to guide humanity with a firm hand on the path of brotherly love." And what do we say in answer to this allegation? We shrug our shoulders in amazement, and in reply we say this: "Yes, the law which Moses commanded us is an inheritance from the house of Jacob." In other words, we admit that the Mosaic Code is an old heritage of past ages, but what of it? Is not the sun old—this superior planet which illuminates daily the universe? Is not the moon old, she who in everlasting youthfulness sheds light over the nightly sky? Are not the stars old, they who in their matchless regularity and unchangeable beauty shine in the firmament above us? So is this sublime command old, the one consisting of the three words, "Love the stranger." Yet, it has grown old waiting to see its fulfillment on the part of the nations of the world. Would that every synagogue on the face of the globe could be so extended as to become "a house of prayer for all nations," so that the latter might hear what is being taught and preached from Jewish pulpits on the precept, "Love the stranger."

Books have been and still are written in which the opinion is maintained that Moses, our law giver, has borrowed his code of laws from the Egyptian priesthood. To refute this assertion I ask a simple question: If Moses had taken his code of laws from the Egyptians, what about the command, "Love the stranger?" Has this command likewise been taken from them? History answers emphatically no. It is a historical fact that Egypt was not only inimical toward strangers, but even to her own people. No, only such laws emanating from God are perfect, "rejoicing the heart," even that of a stranger, and chiefly so on Israel's festive and joyous seasons.

"Love the stranger." A stranger in ancient Israel was he who confessed another religion, and him it was that the Israelite was commanded to treat kindly, to greet with a smile and receive with a pleasing countenance. "The stranger that sojourneth with you shall be unto you as the homeborn among you, and thou shalt love him as thyself; for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt." (Lev. 19-34.)

True, Israel was intrusted with the mission to be the bravest and the most persevering bearer of the pure idea of God among the nations, so that their minds be not befogged by either superstition or otherwise false reasoning. For, as the psalmist has it, "For the Lord hath chosen Jacob unto himself and Israel for his peculiar treasure." True, the duty devolved upon Israel, as the "first born" among the nations, to lead the way to the other members of the human family, proving by his own example the courage of his conviction and his due regard for the higher and nobler ends of life. Yet it is equally true that Judaism has never superseded the other nations, denying them godliness and salvation. "The Lord who came from Sinai with his flaming law in his hand loves all his children, carries the holy ones of other nations in his hand." (Deut. 33-2.)

Our sages taught in the Talmud that the nations of the world were given seven Noachian precepts, prohibiting idolatry, blasphemy, robbery, murder, unchastity and rudeness. This was done to insure right and justice, order and safety in society. These precepts, if properly adhered to by the nations, would justify the latter's claim of having fulfilled the duty of a human being in the sight of God. Hence Judaism, without disloyalty to itself, could justly inculcate into the minds of its adherents the law of "Love the stranger." Hence it was that, as the Talmud relates, Rabbi Yochanan rose up before an old heathen as before an old Israelite, as in his opinion the Biblical command, "Thou shalt rise up before the hoary head" (Lev. 19-32) referred to every one well stricken in years, regardless of creed or nationality. Hence the great Maimonides, more than seven centuries ago, laid down in his famous work, "Yad Hachshakah," a work comprising all the Jewish precepts, the following remarkable sentences: "Every mortal being whose mind, judgment and understanding have drawn him near to God whom he serves, adores and obeys, is in the highest degree a holy man. Fifth Annual Convention Jewish Social Workers.

The fifth meeting of the National Association of Jewish Social Workers was held in Atlantic City, May 29 to June 1, and was attended by approximately 130 delegates with very few exceptions from nearly every city in the United States where Jewish social work is being carried on to any extent. In view of the fact that this meeting for the first time in its history was held independent of either the National Conference of Charities and Correction or the National Conference of Jewish Charities, the Executive Committee made every effort not to give the impression that this meeting was in any way being held in place of the National Conference of Jewish Charities, and that the reason for an independent meeting of the National Association of Jewish Social Workers was because so few of the workers intended to be present at the coming conference in Seattle, and that it carry an informal tone both from the point of view of programme and discussion. This, with the exception of the first session that was held Thursday morning at 10 a. m. in the Assembly Hall of the Rudolph Hotel, the headquarters of the conference, where the majority of the assigned topics were read from prepared papers, was very appropriately carried out. Most of the main topics, discussions and round table conferences were informal in the fullest sense of the word.

The president, Mr. Morris D. Waldman, in his opening address welcoming the delegates to the conference, stated that he did not prepare a formal address primarily because he wanted to start the ball rolling without giving the slightest impression that the conference was going to assume any formality. He explained further that the object of the meeting, as well as other meetings held during the past five years, has been to get together on off years when the National Conference of Jewish Charities was not in session, as well as to give the younger workers in the field an opportunity for free expression in an exchange of experience in their local communities.

The Hon. Simon Wolf, of Washington, who was present as a delegate from the Jewish Orphans' Home in Atlanta, Ga., was then called upon to address the meeting. The veteran in social work, the "youngest member of the group," as he so fittingly called himself, made a few fitting remarks on some of the problems affecting Jewish immigration (a subject he has been interested in vitally for the past fifty years). He emphasized strongly the importance of stretching out a helping hand to our alien co-religionists and make them feel thoroughly at home in the shortest possible time. Likewise to acquaint them in the shortest time with the advantages and opportunities offered by this free republic of ours to all of its inhabitants, new and old, and of the splendid institutions which express in their broad tendency the free spirit of the American Republic.

Mr. Henry Fleishman, who acted as chairman of the first session, gave a general survey of the settlement situation in this country affecting Jewish institutions in particular. Dr. Chas. S. Bernheimer read a very carefully prepared paper on "How Far Shall Settlements Actively Engage in Work Carried on by Other Agencies, Such as Relief Societies, Public Schools and Others?" Mr. Oscar Leonard, the superintendent of the United Jewish Educational and Charitable Associations of St. Louis, then presented his paper on "What Has the Settlement Done or Should It Do for the Immigrant?"

Mr. Bernard G. Richards, the secretary of the New York Kehillah, presented a paper on "What Has the Settlement Done in Judaizing Its Clientele?" A very lively discussion followed Mr. Richards' paper. Among those who took part in this discussion were Miss Sadie American, the Hon. Simon Wolf, Mr. Joseph Gedalecia, Miss Ray Pearlman, Mrs. Annie M. Paller, Mr. Chas. Strull, Mr. Monroe M. Goldstein and Mr. Louis H. Levin.

Miss Sadie American informally discussed "What Has the Settlement Done for the Adolescent Girl?" She emphasized especially the necessity for paying more attention to the dangers besetting adolescent girls and deplored the lack of interest taken in the girl. For every one thing done in the interest of the adolescent girl twenty things are done for a boy.

The second session of the conference continued Thursday afternoon at 2.30 p. m. Miss Cecil B. Wiener, the superintendent of the Federated Jewish Charities of Buffalo, acted as chairman. Rabbi Sidney Goldstein, director of the Social Service Department of the Free Synagogue, New York city, discussed the development of medical social service work. Miss Elenore Steinholtz, the Social Service worker of After-Care Circle, read an interesting paper on "After-Care Work of a Maternity Hospital."

Because of the proximity of Atlantic City to Woodbine, N. J., and through the hospitality of the Baron de Hirsch Agricultural School, about sixty members of the conference spent a day at Woodbine. After visiting the factories showing the industrial side of Woodbine, the conference gathered, in conjunction with a large number of the citizens at Woodbine, in the City Hall, where they were addressed by Mayor Rabinovitch. Other addresses were made by Miss Sadie American, Mr. Max Hertzberg, of Philadelphia; Mr. Morris D. Waldman; Prof. H. L. Sabsovich and Mr. Oscar Leonard, of St. Louis, who spoke in Yiddish. Luncheon was then served to all visiting delegates in the dining hall of the Agricultural School, where Mr. Fleishman, a member of the Board of Trustees, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the Agricultural School.

At the Sabbath services in the Temple Rabbi Fisher, of Atlantic City, spoke on social service and paid a glowing tribute to the social workers.

Though Saturday was a rest day for the conference, there were so many of the members present who were anxious to discuss problems affecting their particular work, that it was found necessary to engage in informal round table discussions. The subjects were child caring, led by Dr. Milton Reitzenstein, of Baltimore; immigration problems, a round table discussion on employment for the handicapped and Oriental Jewish immigration by Mr. Joseph Gedalecia, the president of the Federation of Oriental Jews in America; the financial aspects of federation, led by Mr. Louis H. Levin, of Baltimore; family desertion, led by Mr. Monroe M. Goldstein, secretary of the National Desertion Bureau, New York.

Through the special efforts of Mr. Chas. Zunker, members of the conference, as well as visitors at Atlantic City, had the opportunity of listening to a musicale given by Mr. Pirochneff, late of Russia, who played classic selections on his own improved English concertina, accompanied on the piano by Miss Nellie Sabovich.

The third session on Sunday morning was devoted to a symposium on the advantage of federation, from the experience of a number of cities. Mr. Mark Solomon, the president of the Jewish Aid Societies of Brooklyn, acted as chairman of the meeting, and the following persons took part in the discussion: Mr. Max Hertzberg, of Philadelphia; Mr. Benj. I. Namm, of Brooklyn; Mr. Louis H. Levin, of Baltimore; Mr. Samuel Goldhamer, of Cleveland, and Mr. H. G. Friedman, of New York. It seemed almost the unanimous opinion of those that took part in the discussion that no city working under federation plan would care to return to the individual institution plan of years ago. It was found the opinion, in spite of the tremendous difficulties presented in New York city by virtue of the enormity of the situation, that in time, and that very soon, New York city would federate its various institutions. Emphasis was laid on the fact that federation is conducive to more effective co-ordination in the work of the organizations. Mr. Goldhamer, of Cleveland, explained in detail the unique plan adopted by the Chamber of Commerce of the City of Cleveland to effect a general federation of all the benevolent institutions of the city, Jewish, Catholic and Protestant.

The second part of the third session was devoted to a discussion of "Inducements and Training for Social Workers." The discussion was opened by Dr. Lee K. Frankel, of New York, who delivered an inspiring address on the opportunities for social service work in the new fields that are just beginning to open up, particularly emphasizing the new social activities conducted by large industrial establishments; in other words, the human engineering side of industrial activities. Among the others who discussed this question were Miss Sadie American and Mr. Morris D. Waldman, who emphasized the need for proper training of social workers.

The report on the old age pensions for Jewish social workers continued from the last conference was again presented by Professor H. L. Sabsovich, the chairman of the committee appointed to formulate the plan. This plan was well presented by Mr. Solomon Lowenstein, of New York. After a thorough discussion it was decided by the conference to refer this matter to the Committee on Resolutions, with recommendations that the matter be turned over to the original committee with power to confer with the non-Jewish social workers as to their opinion and plan of the advisability of joining the Jewish workers in a general pension and annuity scheme.

In the absence of the treasurer, the chairman submitted the report showing a deficiency of some $34 and urged payment of dues. It is highly desirable that those who have not paid their dues to the association do so at their earliest convenience to Dr. Sidney Goldstein, treasurer, 36 West Sixty-eighth street, New York city.

The chairman of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. Annie M. Paller, of St. Paul, then brought in the following report: The Nominating Committee has deemed it advisable that the present officers of the conference of the National Association of Jewish Social Workers be retained, and recommends their re-election, because the president of the Conference of National Jewish Social Workers has been made the third vice-president of the National Conference of Jewish Charities, the meeting of which organization is held bi-annually, and because the election of future officers will be governed by the provisions in the new by-laws to be drafted. This report was unanimously accepted after the secretary cast one ballot, and the following are the officers and Executive Committee of the conference for the coming year:

Mr. Morris D. Waldman, New York, president; Miss Blanch Hart, Detroit, vice-president; Dr. Sidney Goldstein, New York, treasurer; Mr. Philip L. Seaman, New York, secretary. Executive Committee: Miss Sadie American, New York; Miss Hattie Rosenstock, Chicago, Ill.; Prof. H. L. Sabsovich, New York; Dr. Boris D. Bogen, Cincinnati; Mr. Julius Goldman, New Orleans; Mr. Oscar Leonard, St. Louis.

It was the opinion of the members that "Settlements" be given a day at the next meeting of the association. After discussion this matter was referred to the Executive Committee for consideration.

The conference adjourned at 4.30 Sunday afternoon. Most of the members returned to their respective cities, feeling confident that the meeting has done them a great deal of service and acted as an inspiration for the coming year's work. A number of the workers, because of the close proximity of Atlantic City to New York, decided to remain in New York city for a few days, their object being to visit particularly those institutions of a national character with whom they come in close contact in the course of their work.

Graduating Exercises of Jewish Theological Seminary.

The tenth annual commencement exercises since the reorganization of the Jewish Theological Seminary were held last Sunday afternoon at the Aeolian Hall in the presence of an unusually large assemblage. Diplomas were presented to the following rabbis: Meyer Waxman, who was given honor; Aaron G. Robinson, Abraham Nowak, Herman M. Cohen and Harry S. Davidowitz, masters of arts; Louis M. Epstein, bachelor of science, and Samuel Fredman, Benjamin L. Grossman, Max Hoffman, Oscar Levin and Calman D. Matt, bachelors of arts.

To the Hon. Mayer Sulzberger of Philadelphia was given the honorary degree of doctor of Hebrew literature. Prizes were awarded to Rabbi Aaron Robinson, Rabbi Louis M. Epstein, Israel Lebediger and Israel Epros. The alumni association prize of $100 was divided between Rabbi Harry S. Davidowitz and Meyer Waxman. The Steinbach scholarship was given to Louis Feinberg.

Diplomas were also awarded to the students of the Teachers' Institute. The graduates were Rose E. Abramson, Emily Deitchman, Rose Guterman, Sadie C. Pitkowsky, Adele Salzman, Rose Gilbert, Louis Axelbank, Morris I. Einsohn, Emanuel Gamoran, Max M. Gold, Jacob S. Golub, George Jacob Horowitz and Sidney Weissbach.

President Schechter, in his address, said in part:

"American Jewry is now strong enough to afford a few real scholars in the ranks of its clergy. Such scholars elsewhere prove, as a rule, an ornament to the church to which they belong, and the synagogue should not remain behind in this respect. They are the men who provide their denomination with ideas and ideals which are converted into small cash by the weaker brethren before they reach the public. There is room in the synagogue for all sorts and conditions of rabbis, but the rabbi scholar must not be allowed to disappear if Judaism is not to be reduced to the straits of a mere ranting sect, if our places of worship shall not become settlement houses in disguise and our seminaries mere sociological institutions.

"The Jewish public must begin to show interest in its learned institutions and aid it in its task by the material and moral support which it has always shown to philanthropic institutions. If the seminary is to develop on the lines begun thus far it is absolutely necessary that it should have the disposition of larger means than hitherto.

"And American Jewry, if it is to come down to posterity, if it is to prove a link in the great historical chain of succession, if its wonderful successions of prosperous and successful presents should not eliminate the future, or rather, eternity, if it is to be an element of perpetual life, a source of endurance, a center of an idea and ideal and a factor for peace and harmony between generation and generation, this will also only come, as experience has shown, through the means of a great school of learning worthy of the great American Jewish community, its members and means."

Other speakers were Louis Marshall, Solomon M. Stroock and Harry S. Davidowitz.

New Building for Har Moriah Hospital.

The Executive Committee, of the Federation of Galician and Bucovinian Jews of America, decided at their meeting, held on Monday last, June 9, to carry out the long cherished plans for erecting a new building for the Har Moriah Hospital, which is maintained by the federation.

The new president of the federation, Dr. A. I. Schoenholtz, has entered upon his duties with the greatest energy and enthusiasm, and he is confident that every branch of the federation will help in making the federation one of the foremost Jewish institutions in this country.

OBITUARY.

NEUMARK.—In the decease of Rev. Dr. Abraham Neumark on Wednesday, June 4, a remarkable Hebraist, Talmudist, Kabbalist, rabbi, teacher and chasid, passed away. The deceased received his rabbinical authority from Prof. Dr. Hildesheimer, of Berlin, and Rabbis M. L. Malbin and S. Rehnish, of Kempen, Prussia. After serving as district rabbi of Lyck for some time, where he was also instructor of the college and editor of the Hebrew journal Hammagid, he came to America and became the first rabbi of the Congregation Orach Chaim.

The funeral, which took place on Thursday from his late residence, was very largely attended. The speakers in the home and at the grave were Rabbis Drachman, Hausmann, Morais, Pozner, Guzzy, Kaminetzky, Ephraim, Loewenthal and a final word of farewell was given by the deceased's son, David Neumark.

"And he spake unto me, this is the table which is before the Lord." To the faithful Jew, the table on which food is set is like an altar, and in accordance with this sentiment nothing that would detract from its sanctity is permitted. Indeed, as much of the positively sanctity is associated with the word "Shulhan;" for, not only do we pronounce the blessing, "who bringest forth bread from the earth," and close the meal with Grace, but at this table we study and speak "Dibrei Torah." These thoughts occur to me as I learn of the departure of my beloved and revered teacher and friend, Rabbi Abraham Neumark, whom I first learned to know when, more than twenty years ago, I attended the synagogue Orach Chaim, in its first humble quarters, but mattered that to one who sought words of instruction, who desired to drink of living water? Sabbath Min'ha meant more to him because there he heard words of Halacha and Agada from one who knew and who felt and who could add thereto, from his own of all the centuries. Abraham Neumark's learning and piety are themes for men of knowledge and religious influence—nevertheless, I am impelled to call out, "How beautiful the home in which I heard him and his sons make Kiddush on a Friday evening or a Saturday morning. How blessed the Sukka in which we welcomed the Ushpizin Illa'in; when we welcomed them, not only did we invite them, but all their descendants who might know and realize that hospitality is found in the rudest of huts and that even in the midst of plenty and in marble palace the mind of the Israelite recurs to those periods of simple life when each man felt for his poorest neighbor, for was he himself almost, if not quite, as poor as the poorest? Oh Abraham Neumark, disciple of the great and pious Malbin, didst thou not, in my last visit to thee, in the week of Passover, show me in precept and practice the significance of the Sage's utterance, "He that extendeth hospitality to strangers is equal to him that receiveth the presence of the Shechina?" Thou who wast a receiver of all mankind with pleasant countenance, whether in Lyck or in the metropolis of America, great may the reward be, when thou canst tell the, to us invisible, host, that thou didst leave children and disciples who by the remembrance of thee will carry on the good work, who will love the Judaism thou didst love; and who will by the practice of its precept beautify their own lives and the lives of their neighbors. Those who have known thee have much to remember—so that the pain and grief caused by thy going will be replaced by those joys that come from hallowed associations, and many will with fervor say, "The memory of the righteous man becomes a blessing." Thou art now in the world of truth, in the Yeshiba 'Elyona, where thou enjoyest the splendor of the Divine Presence—A reward indeed for thy zeal, in the midst of trials and suffering, for Israel's learning and faith.

These are the words of one who writes but as he feels.

ISRAEL'S LOVE OF THE STRANGER.

Yes, indeed; the divine truth and justice toward all nations as embodied in Judaism appear in all their pristine beauty and magnificence when we compare Israel's laws with those of ancient or even modern times; when we consider but this one short precept, "Love the stranger."

But the Jewish alien law has for us Jews of the present age still another significance of a special nature, for it shows above all else a just and honorable testimony of our past. And, to our regret, it must be admitted right here that against Israel's past, his vast literature and culture have sinned many great and small minds, Jews and non-Jews alike, in ancient as well as in modern times. Prejudice, unkindness and fanaticism have combined in undertaking a voyage of discovery in the domain of Judaism with the result that the discoveries made were turned not into honey, like a bee, but into poison, like a spider. Not very many years since, in the midst of ultra-conservative Judaism, a Jew in the Austrian Empire had dared to represent our Talmud, that stupendous work in which intellectual giants have carried on their intellectual combats for a period extending over five hundred years, in a popular language, as being the hotbed of intolerance and wickedness toward other nations, thereby exposing to ridicule and contempt in the eyes of the world hundreds of thousands of our co-religionists, to whom every word in the Talmud is sacred and inviolable.

Time and again the enemies of Israel revive old complaints against the Jewish people. The Talmud, they say, contains places which speak disparagingly of non-Israelites. Well, then, we admit that in some places of the Talmud many a harsh and unkind word against the non-Jew has been uttered. But, on the other hand, those places referred to do not represent Israel's spirit and sentiment, but are the lamentable outcry of a father whose child has been murdered in cold blood; the distressing cry of a husband whose wife has been ravished and dishonored; the despairing outburst of a son whose father has been put to the rack. They finally echo the cry of anguish and indignation on the part of Israelites whose brethren by faith were plundered, outraged, persecuted, martyred and burned at the stake.

On a day when the sky is thickly clouded, flashes of lightning succeeding one another in rapid succession, and rain coming down in torrents upon the earth, striking dismay and terror everywhere, who would think of leaving his house or any other place of shelter and expose himself to the tempestuous weather without? And when the storm of foreign hatred and oppression raged round and about the Israelites during the long and dreary night of mediaeval times, in which homes, families and communities were either consumed by the sword or otherwise burned into ashes, at such terrific times, I ask, are the Israelites to be reproached for not having emerged from their secluded quarters, embracing their persecutors and pursuers, pressing them to their heart and blessing them for all those acts of violence perpetrated against them? The Israelites, the people of heroes, were too weak to resist the superior forces; and yet they had enough sense of honor, feeling of freedom and justice left to utter at least in bitter words their profound contempt and indignation at the abuse of that superior power. Sore trials and tribulations were heaped upon the Jew just because of his laws and statutes; he was forced to drink of the bitter cup of sorrow during his wanderings. But God showed him a tree which was to sweeten the bitterness of his fate—it was Judaism, the tree in which shone the most fragrant blossom of the precept, "Love the stranger," a precept which constitutes the just and honorable testimony of his past.

Again, this precept is likewise an anchor of hope for us in the future. People who do not know or who do not care to know our religion, our language, history, literature, usages and sentiments have popularized the idea that outside of Palestine we are aliens everywhere else. But let the ignorance be ever so dense, their prejudice ever so intense, yet we will never give up the hope that the divine spirit underlying the law, "Love the stranger," will, in the course of time, find a place in the hearts of the nations in a manner that they themselves will gradually be filled with the spirit of love for the stranger.

"For the stranger?" Is Israel really a stranger outside of Palestine? Has he not acquired his legal right of residence by the tears of his mothers and the blood of his sons who have laid down their lives for their country? Wherever stands the cradle of the newly born child, wherever his limbs are going to rest; in other words wherever the first cry of the babe emerging into the world and the last groan of the dying are being heard, there, too, is our home on earth. Moreover, we hope still more. We hope that as we have sown in tears seed of truth, liberty, justice and love, we will reap in joy. We hope that in the end truth will conquer, liberty will triumph, justice will prevail, and that love will extend her domain. We hope that the power of the living word and the influence of public print will ultimately succeed in bringing conviction in all circles, that Judaism knows no hatred or prejudice toward any one, being permeated with the divine spirit of love for all mankind.

We further hope that the evil minds of calumny who have painted

Israel's law, his life, ideals and aspirations in the blackest color will be silenced and placed in the background of oblivion. NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

(Exclusive Correspondence to THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

Sir Rufus Isaacs and His Reported Offer of Resignation—The Long-Drawn Out Marconi Business—English Zionism and Its Two Great Divisions—An Important Convention Approaching—Jews Who Fought for Bulgaria—Another Sidelight on the Future of the Communities Under the After-War Rearrangements—Jewish Dowries in London.

London, May 31, 1913.

A statement was published in a Jewish paper here during this week to the effect that Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney-General, had placed his resignation in the hands of the Prime Minister. This was a very startling piece of news indeed, but its truth was promptly denied by an official news agency. It will be known to readers of the HEBREW STANDARD that the name of Sir Rufus has been bandied about a good deal of late in connection with the so-called Marconi scandal and the name of the other Jewish member of the government, Postmaster-General Samuel Godfrey Isaacs, brother of Sir Rufus, was managing director of the Marconi Company, and the old story was urged by political opponents that these members of the government and other non-Jewish ones, the principal of whom was Mr. Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, had used inside knowledge to speculate in the shares of the American subsidiary Marconi Company.

In the end a special investigation committee was formed and the two Isaacs and other people concerned examined in turn. Certain transactions were proved to have taken place, but evidence of good faith was also secured, and it was further shown that no profit was eventually made by the members of the government out of their dealings. Sir Rufus Isaacs has $35,000 a year, and besides that he has the right to fees when attending in the law courts on behalf of the government. These fees amounted last year to more than a further $45,000. He has also independent means. In comparison with his total income his Marconi transactions were quite feeble and were furthermore entered into for reasons which were given in open court and found to be good.

All the same, political antagonists have not been slow in using these so-called revelations to further partisan ends, and it would not have been surprising if Sir Rufus had resolved to sever his old connection with the government rather than stand this remorseless and improper baiting day after day at the hands of one section of the House of Commons and one section of the public press. His resignation would, however, place the government in a difficult position. The present Liberal administration in this country is only supported in power by a coalition in the House of Commons composed of Liberals, Irish members and the labor members. Losing the support of either of the two latter small parties, the government would find itself in a minority in the House and be compelled to resign. Therefore it is in urgent need of every strong man it can lay its hands upon, and Sir Rufus is certainly one of the strongest of its supporters, owing to his own fine eloquence and powerful magnetic attractions.

The day after mailing this letter the annual convention of the English Zionists' Federation takes place and according to reports it is going to furnish rather critical sessions. The Executive Committee at Berlin is sending a deputation and the promised presence of several members of the Inner Actions Committee will make the meeting more notable. It frequently happens in this country, as no doubt elsewhere, that the mass of opinion in favor of a certain reform or movement is very much bigger than any society formed to foster the particular opinion. In the present case there is much more Zionism than would be thought from a study of the membership and standing of the English Federation. The idea has gone marching on in many quarters, while the organization has stood still and in fact gone back. Dr. Herzl, it is known, held high opinion of the Zionist potentialities of Great Britain and evidenced this by placing the financial instrument of the movement, the Jewish Colonial Trust, as well as the new Palestine Company, and other allied organizations with their head offices, in London. The lack of cohesion among English Zionists, always an outstanding factor, may, of course, be due to the lack of any prominent magnetic personality who would serve to unite those who now disagree on non-essentials.

The main line of division in English Zionism is generally placed at the point where Zionism exercised mainly from a sheer love of Palestine, enters into conflict with that political Zionism which essentially concerns itself with the future of the Jewish people.

As a writer in a Jewish journal here, speaking with some authority points out it was at the very establishment of the Zionist movement in this country that the two views came into conflict. The late Colonel Goldsmid was the champion of Chovevi Zionism and Dr. Gaster protagonist of the political Zionism. But in course of time Dr. Gaster himself became strongly opposed to other Zionists who claimed to be of the exact Zionist creed which he favored, and, indeed, looking at the matter fairly and impartially, in many aspects it would be difficult to disentangle the contending elements from mere personal considerations. Herbert Bentwich has more than once thrown the apple of discord into the movement by, while nominally joining the main stream of Zionism as organized by Herzl, constantly projecting the "Chovevi" idea. He assisted to form the English Zionist Federation, and was its president. He was one of the founders of the Jewish Colonial Trust, and was its solicitor. He practically withdrew for some time from the movement, and again returned only to bring up against it the Order of Ancient Macabaeans, a fraternal society with Zionist leanings of which he is Grand Commander.

A year or two ago he went upon a campaign, the object of which appears to have been to smash the English Zionist Federation and to put into its place his order. He appears to have succeeded completely in neither and partially in both. As a result, the two parties, each claiming to represent truly English Zionism, were in constant conflict. When Wolffsohn was the leader of the movement, he attempted, but without success, to obtain the best of both worlds by formally recognizing both organizations. The effort was a failure, and then an amalgamation between the two bodies was sought by means of a joint Zionist council. Dr. Hirsch became president of this combination. That it was not practically workable is acknowledged in the annual report by the English Zionist Federation which is to be discussed on June 1.

The approaching convention, it is believed, will herald the appearance of an attempt to reorganize the Zionist movement in this country. But how it is to be done is not easy to see. For reasons into which one need not here enter, there is a remarkable dearth to-day of adherents and workers of influence, altogether apart from the outstanding personality. The reputation of Zionism in this country for constant quarrelling and eternal bickering has warned off many a good Zionist who would otherwise have taken his part loyally in the labor. The constant efforts that have been put forth, and to a large extent have succeeded, of trying to make of Zionism in England a London East End movement, concentrating the whole activity in the purlieus of Whitechapel, has also had its natural effect. Nothing, it would appear, short of the recasting of the whole organization in England will have any effect.

The position of the to be transferred Jews of Bulgaria still excites natural discussion and indignation, but in connection with it the point has been brought forward that out of 45,000 Jews in Bulgaria—men, women and children—as many as 5,000 went to the front in the late war. Of these between four hundred and five hundred were killed or died of wounds and disease. The patriotism of the Jew to an adopted country has been frequently raised before now, and the Balkan instance furnishes another striking example. The heroism and sacrifice of these Jews make it all the more abominable that it should be proposed to hand over so many of their Jewish fellow Bulgarians to Roumanian oppression.

Dr. Ehrenpreis, the chief rabbi of Bulgaria, from whom the above mentioned facts have been obtained, is visiting London. In an interview, he has further pointed out that the annexation of fresh Turkish territory will raise Bulgaria's Jewish population from 45,000 to more than twice that figure, Adrianople being of course the largest new community. Dr. Ehrenpreis furthermore does not regard the passing of Salonika under Greek domination as a good thing for the 80,000 Jews of that city. Salonika comes nearest in all the world to being a Jewish city, and while the Greek Government apparently does its best to give fair treatment to its Jews, the Greek population in its more ignorant aggregations is not so well disposed and can very easily get out of control. Had not the Bulgarian authorities interfered after the Greek soldiers entered Salonika an elaborate and savage Pogrom would have resulted. Anti-Jewish excesses have also been reported in the domains already under Greek control and notably in Rhodes Island.

The Bulgarian chief rabbi says that under Greek control the trade conducted by the Jews of Salonika will be wrested from them by Greeks, and already he asserts the portage in the harbor has been taken from the Jewish laborers by imported Greeks. Bulgarians are essentially an agricultural people while the Greeks are commercial. With Salonika Bulgarian the Jews would have continued to fulfill an important part in the new and enhanced nation's economy; with Salonika Greek they would eventually be driven out of the city and a most remarkable community destroyed.

There is one organization in the East End of London, the Marriage Portion Society, which assists intending brides with a modest, though welcome, dowry, provided with the pence of about 200 humble subscribers. It came into being in 1850, and under certain conditions grants a dowry of $125, as well as half a crown (60 cents) to be offered in the synagogue on the Sabbath prior to the marriage and $5.25 for the fee. Then there is another dowry charity a venerable society supported by the Spanish and Portuguese Jews for a like purpose, but offering dowries of far ampler proportions than that of the Marriage Portion Society. The dowries of the Sephardim have always been of tempting proportions, but in every case they are only allocated where the betrothed couple happen to be Sephardim on both sides. These bequests serve to recall the bitter feelings that once existed between the Portuguese and their Askkenazi brothers, and they prove the existence of inducements held out to the young members of the congregation to select their future husbands and wives within the congregational bound without finding it necessary to intermarry with the Tudescoes. In some cases bride and bridegroom have received as much as $1,000, and one clause in the Lara bequest provides for the apportionment of $500 to a young married Sephardi couple.

The recent will of the St. Petersburg notary, the converted Jew Dvorzetzky, in which he expressed the desire to be buried according to Jewish rites, has been utilized by the anti-Semites who reported the matter to the "spheres." As a consequence of their efforts, stringent measures will be adopted in government offices to guard against the admission of converted Jews into civil service, it having been announced that, in the circumstances, the "spheres" prefer Jews to converted Jews as public officers. The Assistant Minister of Justice, Senator Gasman (who is himself a converted Jew), finally fell a victim of the same anti-Semitic agitation, and last week he was obliged to leave his post. He frequently took a pro-Jewish view in the councils of the ministry.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Hebrew Literature which the Jewish Theological Seminary conferred on Judge Mayer Sulzberger, of Philadelphia, is an honor to that institution as well as to its recipient. Judge Sulzberger has done much for Hebrew letters; his great collection of books and MSS. well entitles him to the distinction of the doctorate in this field of scholarship.

The trustees of the Hebrew Technical Institute did well to include in their report an account of the memorial service for Morris Loeb, their president, last November, shortly after his untimely demise. The exercises stand out by reason of their dignity and by their sober appreciation of the qualities of the departed. Just as Morris Loeb used his wealth, wisely but not too well, so the speakers who eulogized him were not extravagant in their words concerning him.

We don't care the traditional straw whether Dr. Simon Bernfeld or Dr. Heinrich Loewe, each of whom is a German-Jewish writer and publicist, is right as to his interpretation of the ideals of Zionism. Their views fill many columns of the Israelitisches Gemeindeblatt, of Cologne, and each calls on the other to prove the assertions made. It would seem that Dr. Bernfeld charges the Zionists with harboring among their followers some who would lead the Jews to the baptismal font. This accusation has probably no foundation of fact beneath it, though the truth is that at the outset political Zionism was controlled and directed by altogether too many Jews to whom Judaism was very little of a religion.

The sixth annual report of the Jewish Protectors and Aid Society shows that for the year ended last December 31st this institution was conducted under the weight of a deficit of over $5,000. That the Protectors is performing a remarkable service for the Jews of New York goes without saying; if it did not exist now, the need for it would be so apparent that we should never be able to get along communally without it for even one day. Such being the case, it behooves this community to support this organization with their pecuniary contributions. As it is, the directors of the society are its creditors to the extent of some $27,000, representing loans bearing no interest. The few should not be called upon or expected to bear the communal burdens of the many. Jews of New York, do your duty!

At the time of its original presentation we commented on the state of affairs revealed by the report of President Joseph L. Butténwieser, of the Hebrew Technical Institute, and sought to bring this community to a realizing sense of its duty with respect to the due and proper support of this worthy and useful institution. The document has just appeared in pamphlet form, and the printed page tells with surpassing eloquence the story of a decreasing number of members and of a steadily increasing deficit in financial operations. Were the Hebrew Technical Institute new and untried, one would perhaps be able to point out a cause of a plausible variety for this discouraging exhibit. But, as it is, the organization has now served this community for many years. Let the Jews of New York do their full and just duty by the Hebrew Technical Institute now, without delay and without stint!

Rabbi Hyamson's Dropsie College lecture on "A Comparison of Hebrew and Roman Law" calls for some comment in this place, not alone because of the wide and deep scholarship revealed by him in his words, nor even because of his thoroughly systematic Jewish outlook, but rather because of the circumstance that in this lecture Dr. Hyamson proves beyond the shadow of a doubt that Hebrew law was far more humane and at the same time far more just than was Roman law. Also, and what is probably of equal importance, Rabbi Hyamson shows that the Roman law owed much to the law of God, or of Moses. At least this is the message brought to us by the Collatio, the work of an unknown author of the fifth century of the present era, which Dr. Hyamson has edited conscientiously and thoroughly, and which he has interpreted in a masterly manner for the auditors of his Dropsie lecture.

TRIENNIAL CYCLES

THE New West End Synagogue of London is to fashionable Anglo-Jewry what, mutatis mutandis, Temple Emanu-El is to the Jewish "four hundred" of our own city. Of course, in London the congregants are formally and really better and much more devout and sincere Jews than their fellows at Forty-third street in this city. But of late years all the attempts at Reform from within the United Synagogue, the official stronghold of traditional Judaism in England, have issued from the New West End Synagogue.

The fact, therefore, that recently the members of this congregation voted down the proposal to further consider the introduction of the Triennial Cycle for the reading of the Law in English synagogues, their own included, is a victory which must gratify the friends of orthodoxy the world over. The committee which dealt with the subject, in the first instance, presented a report in the nature of the Scottish verdict, "Not proven!" That is to say, the committee believed there were considerations favorable to the introduction of the innovation, and that others existed inimical to such a course.

But it is important to recall that the act of Parliament creating the United Synagogue requires faithful conformity on the part of its members to the tenets of the traditional Jewish faith. The Triennial Cycle Committee heard the evidence of various experts on Jewish law, and were informed that the Shulchan Aruch knows naught of a Triennial Cycle. Since, then, the English community lives and acts by the principles of the Shulchan Aruch, and it may be noted that no better set of principles can be found or conceived for Jews, a Triennial Cycle is an impossibility.

The entire suggestion is a product of the minds of some well-meaning but aesthetically inclined persons who fancy that a Triennial Cycle will enable the beauty of the synagogue service and ritual to be deepened. Never was a more egregious mistake made! The synagogue service and ritual in their traditional form are solemn and beautiful; they cannot be improved upon in the fashion contemplated, and triennial cycles have nothing whatever to commend them to observant Jews.

In short, the day of the Triennial Cycle for faithful and faith-loving Anglo-Jewry has not yet dawned. May it never approach! Let the Jewish (Ir-)Religious Union continue its monopoly of the practices of the godless ones.

Well, well, well! Who'd have thought it! Another St. Louis rabbi has his automobile "pinched." Sounds like a scarecrow headline from a "yellow" journal, but the fact is that Rabbi Goodman Lipkind's machine was stolen and that subsequently (for reasons which are not divulged) the thieves abandoned and set fire to it. Don't we envy Rabbi Goodman Lipkind? Not above a decade ago he was in conservative England, a minister to some little congregation in the West country. He little thought of automobiles then! Arrived here his star ascended to the centre of the heavens, he doffs much of his orthodox clothing and becomes in due season the fortunate owner of a fortunate automobile. No wonder the Anglo-Jewish minister casts loving glances across the Atlantic, for, if he can but "land a fat job" in St. Louis he will soon own an automobile! The only regret in this whole transaction that we have is that Rabbi Lipkind is not the pioneer of St. Louis rabbis owning automobiles; that honor is Rabbi Leon Harrison's. No, we are not sorry Rabbi Lipkind lost his car. There are plenty additional ones in stock, and it is so easy for a rabbinical automobilist to replenish his supply. Seriously, to the graduates of last Sunday at the Jewish Theological Seminary: if you would "do well" here in a material sense, move to St. Louis! When the English Jews read of the exploits of Rabbi Goodman Lipkind they will worship his earthly success even more than they do Rabbi J. Leonard Levy's (the whilom Yossel Loeb, of Bristol).

The resignation of William Williams, Commissioner of Immigration at Ellis Island, will probably not be regretted by those who favor the pursuit of a liberal policy by this country in matters affecting the immigration and naturalization of aliens. Mr. Williams in both his terms of service at the station was diligent and conscientious in the performance of his duties; he was, however, so bureaucratic in his outlook that his faults as an administrator much outweighed his very positive merits. While he dealt out justice to arriving immigrants even-handedly, ignoring the distinctions of wealth and poverty, influential friends or the reverse, he approached his work with the preconceived notions of a restrictionist, and thus robbed it of much of its value. In other words, had Mr. Williams been a truly impartial administrative judge, he never would have attempted to enforce his ridiculous and un-American requirement of the possession of a fixed monetary sum for arrivals at this port. He would not weigh the evidence for and against such a test before promulgating it; he would not recognize its illegal character; he set up this rule by his own fiat, and was surprised when the philanthropic bodies interested in immigration roundly condemned him for it. While it was well that he resigned his office, much still remains to be accomplished. Notably do we trust that President Wilson will see fit to appoint to Ellis Island a man who will be just, liberal, humane and impartial as our "guardian of and at the gates."

The Jewish Theological Seminary of America is doing a flourishing business. Last Sunday it gave the degree of rabbi and preacher and teacher in Israel to no less than eleven young men. This shows that the peculiar brand of orthodox Judaism, for which the Seminary stands, is finding favor with those who would be rabbis to American congregations.

MEAT OR MANNA?

".....And it be loathsome unto you....."—(Num. xi, 20.)

THEY wanted meat, not manna. Their chief concern was the table, not the Tablets. They felt not that soul-hunger which feeds on itself, but that stomach-hunger which feeds on something else. Low-bred slaves of their insatiate appetite, they loved their slavery and neither sought nor understood that freedom which is the achievement of those who see the Vision. Gleams of the Vision? Joys of the Soul? Exaltation of the Spirit? These things are always foreign to seekers of gross pleasures, to those whose conception of happiness is bound up with the gratification of the senses.

Thousands of greedy mouths fill the camp with the welkin-ringing shout: "Flesh, flesh—who shall give us flesh to eat?" Faces pale, eyes blaze, nostrils quiver, with lust for flesh. It is a veritable cannibalic frenzy. Desire claws at their hearts, refusing to be put down; and under the very Cloud of Glory which rests upon Israel, men and women are seen running to and fro like maniacs, besieging the Man of God who had supplied them Faith and not flesh, Manna and not meat.

In despair, "Have I begotten all this people?" cries the Man of God. But God who fashioned the human heart and knows all its secrets, resolves to deal with this sudden gust of passion otherwise. "Say thou unto the people," is the Divine Fiat, "the Lord will give you flesh and you shall eat. Not one day shall ye eat, nor two days, nor five days, neither ten days, nor twenty days; but even a whole month, until it come out at your nostrils, and it be loathsome unto you."

God knew He could rely upon desire to kill desire. Pleasure is its own cradle and its own coffin. Pleasure is a confirmed suicide. It drowns itself in its own foaming cup. Never a crimson flower of lust blows under the red-hot sun of passion, but a black worm gnaws at its stem, until the wilted petals drop into the dust. The name of that ugly black worm is: Loathing! Who has not known the vacuous, blank hours of loathing that follow the one overflowing moment of joy? They not merely follow, they encroach, upon that one fruitful moment, changing its sweets into gall, its fullness into emptiness; casting over the rosy shimmer of its memory the murky mist of bitter remorse. That way lies self-disparagement, self-contempt, self-disgust. How could that one moment ever hold us so completely? we ask ourselves in the harrowing after. But the only reply is loathing, loathing, loathing.

Pleasure is its own punishment. The higher the crest of the wave, the deeper the trough that yawns beneath. The higher the paroxysm of pleasure, the deeper and the more sudden its collapse. There is a Divine Book-keeping, which like all efficient book-keeping, is managed on the double-entry plan. In life, there can be no Credit without its corresponding Debit-side. Wouldst thou quaff the cup of pleasure? Take the drégs with. Wouldst thou be wedded unto Joy? Thou must become reconciled to the idea of a bigamous marriage to its sister: Pain! In life the rule holds: Value for value! Settle your score, and settle it fully. Expect no rebate. But the gross pleasure-seeker, in his crass materialism, has an idea that this world is a vast department store, in which every day is a special-sale day. We have a good-natured smile for the pitiful little woman who rushes from sale to sale, from one bargain counter to another. But are we not, all of us, more or less moral bargain-hunters? Do we not want to get all the goods of this world for the least effort, the highest wages for the least labor, the greatest honors for the least merit, the blessings without the scourges, the realizations without the disappointments, the gains without the losses, the joys without the sorrows, the pleasures without pains?

The worst bargain-hunter is the pleasure-seeker who forgets that for every thrill of the senses he has to pay, and pay with staggering rapidity, with the pangs of the body and the stings of the soul. Not only does pleasure destroy pleasure, but it blunts the very capacity for pleasure. For the intake of pleasure entails a much larger outgiving of energy. The price of pleasure is twofold: Loathing and Waste. Observe that no such dread consequences follow upon pure pleasures and high enjoyments. There can be no surfeit of these. There can be no loathing. There can be no destruction of either pleasure or pleasure-sense. No one has ever tired of the pleasure of the fire-side. No one has ever had enough of the genial joys of friendship. And what shall we say of the bliss that proceeds from a good book, a lofty thought, a high fancy? Has it ever cloyed any man? Or the soul that hath seen the Vision of God, and lost itself in the unutterable elation of mystic union with the Father, has it ever declared itself satisfied to repletion?

The joys of the spirit are lasting; those of the body are fleeting. The difference between them is that while the latter, as said, result in larger outgiving than intake, the former result in larger intake than outgiving. It is the intake of the breath of God, so enlarging and freedom-giving, it is the veritable in-breathing of God, that comes to us with the higher pleasures of the spirit. When we breathe God into us we are sure to breathe God out into the world; when we are made rich and happy through God, we are sure that the world will be made rich and happy through us. There is therefore this difference, too, between the two types of joy, that the joys of the body are selfish while those of the soul are selfless. The seeker of material pleasures is concerned about what he can get out of life; the pursuer of ideal pleasures is concerned about what he can put into life.

The young Jewish student of Columbia University who could not graduate with his class and receive his degree because he was not able to swim the length of the pool at the university should promptly learn how to achieve such a "feat." Every person, man, woman or child, should know how to swim, for health if not for absolute protection. In the circumstantial tale of the student's "plucking," as presented by the daily secular press of our city, there is just a soupcou of that prejudice that harasses the Jews at the local institution of higher education on Morningside Heights. We hope that the fact that this particular student was a Jew had no connection with the further fact that he did not know how to swim! It were altogether too bad if, to give credence to the many stories that circulate concerning Columbia, Jewish students are no longer to be made welcome at an institution to whose standing, history and prestige they have contributed more—much more, as a matter of fact—than their quota.

ADVERTISING CONFIRMATIONS.

The flaunting of the names of a whole lot of confirmands by way of advertisement in the Sunday issue of one of the daily papers whose circulation is in the main due to its obituary columns, and which paper is scarcely friendly to our people, is another miserable exhibition of those craving for notoriety.

The confirmation of a youth or a maiden, and their profession of faith is of no concern to the public. Those of the family and immediate friends are generally quite cognizant of this event.

There are ulterior reasons, it is quite evident, for these publications, which have been increasing in number yearly. They stand for the reception of gifts to the confirmand. No person seems to be persona grata unless he comes fortified with a gift. Indeed, it is made quite plain in numbers of the advertisements, where the reception is at a hall, the number and street of the residence is added.

Of course, the more conservative members of our faith do not indulge in this kind of publicity. This epoch in the lives of their offspring is quietly celebrated in the circle of the home, amidst the family, relatives and friends, and no effort is made for a scramble for presents, the longing for which to many of the confirmands is accelerated by these public invitations and announcement—the religious meaning of the day taking second place. L'AIGLON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Neo-Orthodoxy.
Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
It is certainly a rare event that in a controversy the attacked party is ready to declare in the first round that his opponent has the better of him. I am willing to give such an example. Dr. Drachman in his attack on my position with regard to neo-orthodoxy most assuredly has the better of me. He calls me somewhat indirectly an ignoramus, a hypocrite and an anti-Semite. I cannot retaliate. It may be due to a faulty upbringing in my early environment that I believe unto this day that even in a controvery the manners of a gentleman are to be maintained. I have, however, a more serious objection. Granted that I am all this that has been charged to me and more, I cannot see that it would make any difference in the point under discussion.

Professor Schechter, whom I did not attack in my original article, published in the American Israelite April 3, and whom I do not attack now, but hold in high esteem, said that neo-orthodoxy is a misnomer. This means that there is no essential difference between the orthodoxy as interpreted up to the time of Moses Mendelssohn, and the orthodoxy that is chiefly connected with the name of Samson Raphael Hirsch. I maintained and do still maintain the view that an orthodoxy which rejects some of the dogmatic views of the old rabbis which permits secular education and conforms itself to the social habits of our western environment is not orthodoxy as it was understood up to the end of the eighteenth century everywhere, and as it is still understood in Eastern Europe, in Northern Africa and in the Orient. No matter how bad a man I am, this will have no bearing whatsoever on the question.

Our books of law, or for brevity's sake the Schulchan Aruk, contain implicitly the belief in evil spirits (Orach Hayim, 4, 2), in the evil eye (ib. 305, 11), in the transmigration of the soul (Hokmat Adam, 1, 11) and in certain scientific views which have long ago been discarded, but which are still retained in rabbinical law. Mendel Auerbach, a rabbinical author of the seventeenth century, says (Monatsschrift, 38, 557, 563, 1894), that no one has the right to decide contrary to the view of Joseph Caro and Moses Isserles, "Upon whom the whole household of Israel relies, and not one word that they say may be abrogated." Similarly Abraham ben David says in his polemical work against Zerachiah Halevi, we have no right to dispute the words of the Geonim on the basis of our own views unless it were the case of a manifest error which is impossible (Revue des Etudes Juives, 59, 208, 1910). Moses ben Nachman in a polemical remark against the same author who claimed that the liturgical poets misunderstood the Mishnah, says this is impossible, though he admits that his opponent is apparently right. (Alfasi, Yoma, ed. Vienna, 222, b.)

Now what is the consequence of such a belief in rabbinical infallibility? The Schulchan Aruk (Yoreh Deah, 116) decides that to eat fish and meat or fish and cheese together is prohibited as injurious to health. Modern hygiene knows nothing about it. Consequently the rabbis were mistaken, though Moses ben Nachman, Abraham ben David and hundreds of others declared the Talmud infallible, and though "Der Israelite," 1869, p. 618, the pioneer organ of orthodoxy, lays down the principle that no science can abrogate the slightest rabbinical prohibition without doing away with Judaism. A similar instance of this: the Talmud (Yebamot, 62, b) recommends the marriage between uncle and niece. Modern science declares marriage between near relatives as highly inadvisable. If science is right, the Talmud is wrong. I wish it again understood that I am not speaking as a reformer. I merely contend that those who admit the errancy of the Talmud are no more orthodox in the traditional sense. We come to the second point of contention. I claim that secular studies are not permitted to the orthodox Jew. This view is plainly taught in Sifra, Lev. 18, 4, where it is prohibited to say, "I have studied the science of Israel and now I shall study the science of the Gentiles." Against this clear statement no evasion of the kind given by S. R. Hirsch helps. Dr. Drachman quoted the case of Maimonides and other mediaeval scholars, who were at the same time men of secular education. This fact merely proves that there were always inconsistent people. Abraham ben David says that we must not learn anything from one who is not a strict Talmudist because these people (who are secular scholars) misrepresent the Halakah (Revue des Etudes Juives, 59, 208, 1910). Still stronger is the position of Isaac ben Sheshet (Resp. No. 45), who says that the study of any secular sciences is prohibited and that even such great men as Maimonides and Levi ben Gershon, who engaged in such studies, from laudable motives, did not escape the taint of heresy. Moses Hagis, a great Palestinian rabbi of the eighteenth century, says that Hayim Reizes, who was terribly tortured to death at Lemberg, May 13, 1728, had declared before his death that he regarded his death a just divine punishment for having transgressed the law by studying Latin (Nishmat Hakamim, p. 85, Wandsbeck, 1733). Coming nearer to our time, I quote Moses Sofer, who in advising the congregation of Deutsch-Kreuz to elect a rabbi, says: "There is unfortunately in our days a terrible plague, that people mingle with the children of foreigners, and read secular books, which is bound to lead to religious levity, therefore when you elect a rabbi see that he shall by no means be one of those who write and read foreign books, for such a man cannot be a religious teacher, and to elect him is like placing an idol in the temple of God (Hatam Sofer, Hoshen Mishpat, No. 197). Naphtali Zebi Jehudah, Berlin, the principal of the Yeshibah of Woloshin, says in a letter written in 1855: "Just as ordinary meat, while not unclean will make sacrificial meat unclean by touching it, so secular studies while in themselves not unclean, will render the success of rabbinical teaching impossible when taken up at the same time" (M. Reines, Dor wa-Hakamaw, 111, 11). The rabbis of Jerusalem with Meler Auerbach at the head in 1875 issued a ban against the use of the Jerusalem public library because it contains secular books. This Herem was confirmed in 1904 by Chief Rabbi Samuel Salant, who declared that the ban against the "Shkolles" cannot be abrogated. (A circular entitled תענית in my possession.) Rabbi Eliezer Gordon of Telzhi (1845-1910), the head of the famous Yeshibah, would not allow his students to read any but rabbinical books, nor even Hebrew newspapers (Fraund, 1908, No. 135), and the same is reported of Woloshin (Jued. Tagebl., Aug. 6, 1912). It is true that quite recently in two instances, Russian congregations have elected rabbis with secular culture. The last one was the famous City of Kovno, but this was done over the protest of an influential minority, which declared that the election of such a rabbi meant the death of the true rabbinate (Jued. Tageblatt, March 28, 1912; Morgen Journal, April 3, 1913).

To bring this matter to a clear issue, Nahum Trebitsch, the predecessor of Samson Raphael Hirsch, as Landesrabbiner of Moravia, declared it a sin to speak a grammatically correct German. on Yerushalmi, Moedi, ירושלים, ש"ס 2, b., Vienna, 1821). He died in 1842 and was succeeded in 1847 by Hirsch. Will any one say that there is merely an accidental difference between these two men? I maintain that the difference is one of principle. Trebitsch is a real orthodox, Hirsch a neo-orthodox.

I briefly refer to the point of social customs. Previously I stated that the Schulchan Aruk declares a Jew is bound to dress differently from his neighbors. Moses Isserles (Yoreh Deah, 178, 1) says it makes no difference what particular costume he wears as long as it is different from that worn by his non-Jewish neighbors. We know that in the Orient and in Eastern Europe this is still taken literally. The Galician correspondent of the Juedisches Tageblatt, July 5, 1912, says, in Galicia every Jew without exception must wear a Streimel (a velvet cap with fur trimmings), and this is to the people as sacred as Teffilin. Die Welt, September 21, 1904, reports that the people of Jerusalem were indignant when they saw the wife of an orthodox rabbi who came to Jerusalem with a party of pilgrims wear a hat and a veil. An ordinance issued in Fuerth in 1786 prohibits that a woman wear a watch visibly on her garments or have her hair dressed, because this is a custom of the Gentiles. (Jahrbuch d. Jued. Lit. Gesellschaft, viii, 191, F. a. M., 1911). Needless to say, I could quote hundreds of such instances from recognized literature.

My object is not to attack any one or to convert any one, but merely to bring out a historical lesson, namely, that the orthodoxy of western lands is different from the orthodoxy of eastern lands, and from what up to the end of the eighteenth century was generally understood as orthodoxy, and that consequently the term neo-orthodoxy is a historically correct term. Let me say in conclusion that I never expect to convince any one who does not wish to be convinced. In fact, I am not out for making converts, but merely for giving instruction. If any one will prove to me that the constituents of "Rabbi Velvela," of New York, consider Dr. Drachman or Dr. Klein as orthodox in their own sense, I shall admit that I am very much mistaken.

Very truly yours,
GOTTHARD DEUTSCH.
Cincinnati, Ohio, June 6, 1913.

Col. Ephraim Hamburg, who died in Chicago, Ill., last month at the age of 97, was the oldest Mason in Chicago. He came to America in 1859 and worked for the Detroit Free Press until the opening of the Civil War, in which he served for four years. At the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War he entered the German army, and at the close of the war received several medals.

Australian Rabbi Here.

Rev. A. D. Wolinski, a noted rabbi of Sydney, Australia, is at present visiting relatives in New York city, whom he had not seen for over forty years. The rabbi's son, Joseph Wolinski, is exhibiting some of his paintings in the Paris Salon this year. His daughter, Zara, is singing in grand opera at Covent Garden, London. Rabbi Wolinski will remain in New York until August, and then return to Sydney.

It is reported from Rome that the King of Italy has received in audience two representatives of the Jewish community, its president, Signor Sereni, and Signor Colombo. The King expressed to them his deep regret at the sufferings of the Jews in Roumania and Salonika, and stated that he would do all that was possible to influence Roumania in favor of the Jews. The King also inquired about the state of the Jews in Tripoli and Jerusalem, adding that he was interested in the Jewish colonization in Palestine.

An interesting appointment is attracting considerable attention in Hungary. It is that of Dr. Badass, a representative of the National Labor Party in the Chamber of Deputies, as Political Secretary of State at the Ministry of Justice. He has for some years held office in the Government, and is responsible for some Acts of Parliament, one of which is known as the Lex Badass. Count Tisza was frequently interpellated in the Chamber with reference to a post having been given to the Jew, Badass, but his reply invariably was: "We pay no regard to religious beliefs; we only take into account character and talent."

The executors of the will of the late Washington Sellman have carried out one of the bequests of the testator by distributing $1,000 each to the following non-sectarian charities: The Hebrew Orphan Asylum, Children's Aid Society, the Brightside Day Nursery, the Washington Square Home for Friendless Girls, the Jewish Women's Lakeview Home for Friendless Women, the Sojourner Truth Home for Friendless Colored Girls, the New York Women's League for Animals, the Bide-a-Wee Home Association for Animals, the United Hebrew Charities, and the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor.

Nathan Glauber Recreation Fund.
Deeply impressed by the sad and sudden death of Mr. Nathan Glauber, the New York Section of the Council of Jewish Women has established a memorial to be known as "The Nathan Glauber Recreation Fund." This action is taken in recognition of the interest and services of both Mr. and Mrs. Glauber at all times and in all matters connected with the council and its work.

As the name implies, the fund has been created to supply wholesome recreation to workers who so badly need this, a desire that always swayed most strongly the spirit and purpose of Mr. Glauber's interest in behalf of the tired working girls.

This fund will be open to all of similar feeling who might wish to contribute "in memoriam," so that, through deeds inspired by sacred memory, the living may be linked with the spirits of their departed loved ones. Checks for this fund may be sent to Mrs. D. W. Richman, treasurer, 601 West 115th street.

Macy Employees Dedicate Memorial Tablet.

Last Sunday afternoon a bronze memorial tablet was unveiled in the restaurant of the R. H. Macy Building. The tablet was the gift of the employees of the firm, and was in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus. Over 5,000 employees were present at the ceremonies.

Mr. Louis J. Chamansky opened the proceedings by introducing Mr. Sylvester Byrnes, the store's general manager. Mr. Byrnes delivered a eulogy, after which Eleanor Hess, a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Straus, unveiled the tablet. It was accepted for the family by Mr. Jesse I. Straus, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Straus. Justice Samuel Greenbaum and Mrs. Cyrus L. Sulzberger also made appropriate addresses.

The tablet, which is in bronze, has bas relief figures of Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus and the inscription, "Their lives were benevolent and their teachings glorious." Later on the tablet will be placed in the thirty-fourth street entrance of the Macy store.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

On Sunday evening, June 8, the various literary clubs of this association competed for the Wolbarst trophy. A very interesting series of orations was delivered and the award went to the P. S. Menken Literary and Social Club, represented by Reuben Richman, his topic being, "Legions unthanked."

Rev. Leo Mannheim, of Paterson, who is to take a prominent and active part in the work of this association, is here and in the course of his frequent visits, has had several opportunities of addressing various groups of members. His short talks are thoroughly enjoyed and will no doubt be an interesting feature of his work.

Beth Hamedrash Hagadol of the Bronx.

On Sunday afternoon at 2.30 the cornerstone of the new synagogue and Hebrew Free School of the Beth Hamedrash Hagadol of the Bronx, at 827-829 Forest avenue, will be laid with appropriate ceremonies. The following will deliver addresses: Rabbi M. S. Margolies, Rabbi H. Orlansky, Rev. H. P. Mendes, Rev. H. S. Morais, Rev. E. L. Solomon, Hon. Julius Harburger, Hon. Joseph Baroness and Hon. Louis D. Gibbs. Music will be furnished by the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band.

The officers of the congregation are: Bernard Bernstein, president; Jacob L. Andron, vice-president; Abraham Davis, treasurer; Louis Solomon, secretary.

Federation of Orthodox Congregations.

A meeting of the Federation of Orthodox Congregations of Greater New York was held on Sunday last, at the Nachlath Zevi Synagogue, 65 East 109th street. There was a very large attendance present, and it was reported that the following six congregations had joined the movement. Yeshibath Torah Chayim, of Harlem; Kahal Adath Jeshurun, of Harlem; Chevra Kaduscha Talmud Torah; Yeshibah R. Sh. Kleyer; Ahawath Israel, of Harlem, and Rabbiner Israel Chayer Radowitz.

During the summer a committee will draft a set of suitable by-laws, and a mass meeting will be held early in the fall.

The Pressburg Relief Committee.
The Ohav Zedek Relief Committee has received another appeal from the Jewish Community of Pressburg giving more details of the disaster and earnestly appealing for further aid. The complete loss exceeds over 2,000,000 kronen, and up to date the amount received for relief has been about 130,000 kronen (about $23,000).

To add to the troubles of the sufferers, after the city engineers had passed on the safety of some of the houses, but before they could be inhabited again, a terrible rain storm came up and continued for a long period, greatly increasing the property loss.

Albert Lucas' Religious Classes.
The closing exercises of these classes were held last Sunday in the Pike street Synagogue. There were suitable recitations in English and Hebrew and singing by the children, and an address by Mr. David Saxe, one of the volunteer teachers.

In anticipation of the approaching marriage of Mr. Conrad J. Saphier, principal of the Pike Street Classes, to Miss Goldie Ginsburg, he was presented with a solid silver salver.

Council of Jewish Women School Confirmation.

Several hundred people gathered at the West End Synagogue last Sunday to witness the confirmation of the graduating class of the Religious School of the Council of Jewish Women. Dr. F. de Sola Mandes officiated. The children received their instruction from Miss Florence D. Eger.

The estate of the late Mrs. Caroline Neustader has been appraised at $3,523,173 by the New York State Appraisers. The executors will immediately carry out the charitable bequests in her will filed in January, 1912, among them being $1,000,000 for a convalescent home, $100,000 each to the United Hebrew Charities and Mount Sinai Hospital, and $335,000 to various other charities.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

The Congregation Sons of Israel, of Bath Beach, at their last meeting re-elected Rev. Henry S. Morais as their minister at an increased salary.

Magistrate and Mrs. Harry Miller, of Jamaica, L. I., have presented the Congregation Shaari Zedek with a pair of handsome candelabrae in memory of Mr. Miller's father, the late Louis Miller, a former treasurer of the congregation.

After extensive alterations, the building of the old Second Baptist Church, on Ainslee street near Graham avenue, will be used as a synagogue. The building was erected over fifty years ago when there was a very large field for Baptists, and owing to a change in the neighborhood, it was abandoned several years ago.

Rabbi Nathan Krass sails July 1 with his wife and family on the Rotterdam, to remain until August. On July 15 Dr. Krass will attend the World's Congress of Liberal Religion at Paris.

The confirmation exercises of the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum will take place Sunday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. All interested are invited to attend.

Bertha Rosenstock Mayer, wife of David Mayer, died at her home, No. 224 Garfield place, last Friday, in her fifty-ninth year. Mrs. Mayer was a resident of South Brooklyn for over forty-five years and was a former director of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum. The funeral was held last Sunday from Temple Beth Elohim, Rev. Dr. Alex Lyons officiating.

On Sunday, June 15, there will be a Shabbath entertainment given by the pupils of the recently opened Hebrew Educational Alliance of Ridgewood at the temporary school rooms, No. 136 Stanhope street, near Myrtle avenue. The Arrangement Committee consists of Leon Luft, chairman; Morris Geller, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Weinberger, S. Grossman, Mrs. Largeman, Mrs. Levy, Mrs. Markowitz, Mr. L. Mintz and principal of the school, Mr. Birnbaum.

There will be a meeting in behalf of the proposed Brownsville playground on Sunday evening, June 15, at the Hebrew Educational Society, Gen. George W. Wingate, vice-chairman of the Public Recreation Commission, will preside. There will be a moving picture exhibition of the Chicago playgrounds. The playground planned for Brownsville is based on the Chicago style, including field houses, athletic field and all the appurtenances of an outdoor and indoor gymnasium, for young men and young women.

Herbert L. Bridgman, president of the Explorers' Club, president of the department of geography of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences and managing editor of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, will deliver an address to the students of the Kaplan School Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, in the auditorium of the Kaplan School, 1731 Pitkin avenue, Brooklyn. The subject of the lecture will be "Soudan: Africa from Sea to Center." Nathan H. Seidman, the principal of the Kaplan School, will preside.

Hazleton, Pa.

Rabbi Myer Noot, who has accepted a call to be the rabbi of Beth Hashalom Reform Temple, at Williamsport, Pa., will give his farewell address here on Tuesday evening, June 10, in the Beth Israel Reform Temple. He has made a host of friends during the four years he has resided here. He was V. P. of the Ministerial Association; has been invited to occupy most of the Christian pulpits, and has been honored on several occasions to give an address before the Masonic lodges. He was invited to deliver the Memorial Day address before the Grand Army of the Republic and had the satisfaction of knowing it was the finest ever given in the city. At the last Elks' memorial, Rabbi Noot delivered the eulogy. The Civic Club of Hazleton also invited him to speak upon "Sanitary Science." Rabbi Noot comes from a family of rabbis, his late father, Rev. Simon C. Noot, was a Talmudical scholar of renown, and his brother, Rev. Isaac C. Noot, of the Bronx, but now Rabbi, Emeritus, has also gained laurels in the city of New York. He was for forty years the able and efficient superintendent of the Hebrew Free School and was also the minister of the B'nai Israel congregation. Rabbi M. Noot was for ten successive years the spiritual leader of the B'nai Shalom Reform Temple, at Troy, N. Y., and the assistant to Rev. Dr. Schlesinger, of the Beth Emeth Temple, of Albany, N. Y.

In order to justify the hostile attitude towards the Russo-Jewish students at German universities, the Imperial Government has published statistical tables showing the growth of the "foreign" element at German universities. In the last twenty-five years the growth of foreign students had been 195 per cent., reaching 4,187 in 1912. Forty-five per cent. of these were Russian subjects, and two-thirds of all the Russian students were Jews. While formerly most of these students studied art and philosophy, to-day nearly all of them take up law and medicine.

The Emigration Conference at Wilna has resolved to establish medical aid for the emigrants, to found a Rabbinical and Judicial Committee, to consider the problem of the "deserted wives," to create a "frontier committee," at Warsaw, to endeavor to improve the hygienic conditions at the control stations, to convene a universal emigration congress, to suggest to the Jewish Colonization Association that it should take charge of the Galveston emigration, to co-operate with the organizations endeavoring to divert the immigration stream from New York to other parts of America, and to organize courses in English and lectures on life in America.

Herr Gustave Lowe, one of the prominent actors on the German stage in the city of Prague, Bohemia, died there last month. Herr Lowe, who was born in the city of Prague, was for over twenty-five years a member of the company of the Royal German Theatre of that city. Besides being a prominent actor, he was a valued member of the Jewish community, and his will contains a provision that on the death of his wife his entire estate shall fall to the Prague Jewish Community for the support of orphans. He left outright 5,000 crowns to the Jewish hospital, 2,000 crowns for Jewish orphan girls, and 2,000 crowns to the Chanukah Verein.

Dr. Frederick Forcheimer, one of Cincinnati's most distinguished physicians and a scientist of world-wide fame, died at his home last week aged 60. In 1905 he was chosen dean of the Ohio Medical College and in 1910 was president of the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons. At a meeting of the medical college of the University of Cincinnati last Monday a movement was inaugurated to erect a monument on the university grounds to Dr. Forcheimer's memory.

The Australian Natives Society is an influential society in many States of the Commonwealth, watching the special interests of "native" citizens. The presidency of the three most important branches is now held by Jews, namely: Reginald Cohen in New South Wales, Herbert Solomon in South Australia, and M. M. Phillips, in Melbourne.

At a conference held last week in the office of Herman Loeb, director of Supplies for Philadelphia, Pa., plans were outlined for the establishment of a colony of Roumanian Jews in Texas. Mayor Blankenberg has expressed his sympathy with the movement and has offered his assistance.

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Dear Children.

Great laughter burst forth from all assembled at the table, for it was another of Daniel's jokes, which they relished greatly. Daniel, however, did not content himself with the joke as it was, but got up and spoke as follows: "Listen, Reb Yerucham! I have now a chance of leasing a great estate—fields, gardens and everything belonging to it. The price is six thousand roubles and I can make a profit on it of three thousand roubles. If I have found favor in your eyes, my Lord, lend me that money. If I will bring you a good guarantee, who will give you his signed note—and I assure you that you will admit that my guarantee is perfectly secure—will you then lend me the money?" "Why shall I refuse?" said Reb Yerucham, smiling.

Daniel went away to bring the written guarantee. On arriving at his house he took his pen and wrote upon a paper:

"He lendeth unto the Lord that is liberal to the poor.

"Mine is the silver and mine is the gold,

"Sayeth the Lord of Hosts."

He quickly returned to the house of the rich man and placed the note upon the table before him. "Is this guarantee good enough for my lord?" said Daniel. "There is your guarantee; the whole earth is filled with His glory, and here is the note with His signature at the bottom, like any other note: 'Sayeth the Lord of Hosts.' Now quickly hand me the six thousand roubles."

What was Daniel's object in all that? Merely to carry the joke on to the end? But it was not to be so.

When the rich man looked upon that note his face turned as white as snow, and he said: "How can any one refuse to lend upon such a note? 'Sayeth the Lord of Hosts.' Is it proper to joke concerning such matters? No! No! I will give you that amount upon His guarantee." He quickly arose, walked hither and thither, lifted up his eyes heavenward and exclaimed: "Behold, I am ready to lend upon your guarantee! 'Sayeth the Lord of Hosts' is the greatest guarantee that I can have."

He counted out that money and gave it to Daniel. Early in the morning Daniel arose and proceeded to the duke's palace, placed that money in his hands, had an agreement written and sealed and duly witnessed and Daniel became the lessee of that vast estate.

At the end of the year Daniel gathered together all the money that was the income of that leasehold, and found that the Lord had blessed him with great profits. He took six thousand roubles and came to Reb Yerucham's house and said "Here is the money you have loaned me exactly a year ago. How can I ever thank you sufficiently for the great kindness you have shown me? I was poor and now I become rich. Now take your money and return me the note."

But Reb Yerucham refused to accept the money. "Why not?" asked Daniel in amazement. "Because," said Reb Yerucham "your guarantee already repaid me many times that amount, for it is now fifty years since my father of blessed memory, who was a government contractor, had a claim in the highest court for a very large amount of money due him, and I had since given up all hope of ever realizing anything of that claim, for, thought I, who can win against the government? The counsel for the government made some admissions unwillingly in his argument which caused the judgment to be rendered for me, and I have become richer by fifty thousand roubles, which certainly comes to me from the hand of the guarantee; and as I do not wish to be paid twice, you can keep this money."

Reb Yerucham put that note in a secure place and commanded that it be placed by his side in the grave, "in order," said he, "that I may return it to the guarantor who made his indorsement good."

This text of Rabbi Elazar of Bartotha is also highly appropriate for the holiday of "Shebuoth," which we are about to celebrate, for Rabbi Naphtali Hertz Wessely is of the opinion that it refers to the Torah, which gift the Almighty has made us on this holy day which we are about to celebrate, and it teaches us that it is the greatest gift one can make to another—far greater than the gift of money or any other perishable possession; for by that gift one can bring the other in possession of the eternal life, and it is King David who, when preparing for the building of the Holy Temple, exclaimed, in the contemplation of a mortal daring to offer a house unto the Lord, whose glory filled the whole earth, "For who am I and what is my people that we should possess the power to offer voluntarily after this sort? For from Thee is everything and out of Thy own have we given unto Thee."

"Mother," said an exasperated young lady, "I wish you would not hang that old parrot up in the parlor."

"Why not, my dear?" asked her mother.

"Why, I think he must have belonged to a street car conductor before you bought him. Every two or three minutes, when Edwin is here, he chirps out, 'Sit closer, please.' It is too embarrassing for anything."

Clara (with emotion)—Do you truly care for me just as much as when we were first engaged?

Meyer (with conviction)—Yes, lovey, every single bit as much.

And at the time this conversation took place they had been engaged just one day.

"Pluck, pluck, pluck, first, second and thirdly, my boy, is the secret of success," said Mr. Magnate, the millionaire.

"Ah!" sighed the pale, overworked clerk, "I guess so; but I wish you'd tell me your method of plucking."

CONUNDRUMS.

Why is a person reading these conundrums like a man condemned to undergo a military execution? Because he is pretty sure to be riddled to death.

Why is a fashionable woman like a thrifty housekeeper? Because she makes a great busile about a little waist.

Why were the brokers in the panic of 1873 like Pharaoh's daughter? They saved a little prophet from the rushes on the bank.

Why did Cranmer fare better in his last hours than Charles I.? Because a hot steak is preferable to a cold chop.
