“IN THE SOUP”

By S. FREUDER

“And where is baby?” asked Mr. Teitelbaum, as he took his seat at the dinner-table.

“She is dressing to go out with Mr. Halpern. We won't wait,” said Mrs. Teitelbaum, with a frown.

The soup was eaten in a depressing silence, broken only by occasional sighs escaping from an anxious mother's breast. When the roast was served—a real German pot roast, with a delicious brown gravy—Mrs. Teitelbaum laid down her knife and fork, and looking her husband straight in the face, said: “Let me tell you again, I don't like this Mr. Halpern.”

“You are a goose, my dear,” replied the husband in a most affectionate tone. “This young man is a most desirable match and all our Lina's girl friends look upon her with jealous envy and rage. His rating is A1, he is a fine talker, has lots of education and is besides one of the cleverest pinochle players I have ever met.”

“That's all you men folks care for,” rejoined Mrs. Teitelbaum. “If a man is clever in making money he is all right, no matter what family he comes from. My whole life will be blighted if my Lina marries a 'Litvak.' I never liked that kind of Jews and never shall.”

“Nonsense, my dear,” rejoined Mr. Teitelbaum. “A Litvak is just as good as any German Jew, and often a great deal better.” Noticing Mrs. Teitelbaum's expression, he continued soothingly: “So the Litvaks think. But that is neither here nor there. Mr. Halpern came here from the city of Posen where his parents live, and I can't see what makes you think that he was a Litvak.”

“I recognize a German Jew on the first look, and I know Mr. Halpern is not a thoroughbred German. I hope to God that his parents immigrated to Germany from Poland, Austria, Roumania or any other country in the world. But if they were Litvaks, as I fear they were, God help our poor Lina. I'll never survive the disgrace of our family.”

The dessert was already being passed when Lina made her belated appearance. She was good to look upon. Her rich dress and proud carriage were softened by laughing blue eyes, in which one could see with a luxuriant head of hair. After shaking hands with the parents, he nodded to his sweetheart, and taking out his watch he exclaimed: “Come, finish your soup and let us be going.” “What?” interrupted the mother,

At this Mrs. Teitelbaum uttered a piercing cry and fell back in her chair in a dead faint. Restoratives were applied and the hurriedly summoned family physician diagnosed the case as one of acute indigestion last. Now, when Mr. Halpern declared this to be his habit, her worst fears concerning his pedigree were confirmed, and it was this sudden revelation which had such an overwhelming effect on her mind.

Early next morning, while Lina was still sleeping, Mrs. Teitelbaum entered her daughter's bedroom and, exercising a benevolent despotism of a loving mother, took the engagement ring lying on the table and sent it back to Mr. Halpern, accompanied by a curt note that she would never consent to her daughter being married to him.

The engagement was declared off, but love laughs at a mother's whims, and Lina managed to meet Mr. Halpern clandestinely and to encourage him in the hope that her mother would in time be convinced of the unreasonableness of her attitude. At first she endeavored to convince her mother that there were other people besides the Litvaks who prefer their soup at the end of the dinner. But she failed to produce any unbiased evidence to support her contention. No sooner did she find a witness in her favor, than her mother's scrutinizing the witness, found him or her to have been either born a Litvak or brought up in a Litvak atmosphere. One day, though, she seemed to be near the goal of triumph. She had found in an old magazine article on Dr. Robert Koch, the famous discoverer of tuberculin, that he usually took his soup after the meat, declaring that that was the proper way from a hygienic point of view. But even this failed to impress the stubborn mother; she simply waived aside the testimony by the remark: “Well, probably Prof. Koch was a Litvak, too.”

After several months' fruitless efforts to shake her mother's conviction that Mr. Halpern was a Litvak, Lina decided, as the lawyers would say, to admit the fact, but to deny the conclusions drawn from it. She delved into the history of the Jews of Lithuania and showed her mother a long list of noble hearted mirrored the Garden of Eden with its beauty and innocence.

No sooner did she start with her dinner than the door bell rang and her fiance entered the dining room. He was a prosperous looking man of about thirty, thickset, smooth shaven, and prescribed accordingly.

“won't you let her finish her dinner? The theatre will not run away.”

“Oh, pardon me, Mrs. Teitelbaum,” exclaimed Mr. Halpern, laughing. “I thought Lina was through dining. I always take soup for the last course of my dinner.”

But the real cause of her sudden collapse was of a psychical nature. While living downtown in humbler circumstances, she had made the observation that her Litvak neighbors were in the habit of taking the soup

A SCENE AT BISKRA

In another column Rev. Dr. Leopold Wintner gives a charming description of the people of Biskra and tells our readers of his visit to a colony of Jews in that distant desert city. Rabbi Wintner in his later years has developed into quite a traveler and our readers will readily agree with us that advancing years have not in any way dulled his descriptive pen.

Litvaks, such as Elijah Ben Solomon, also called der Wilner Gaon; M. A. Gunzberg, the father of modern Hebrew prose; Abraham Bar Levenson, the father of modern Hebrew poetry; Abraham Mapu, Mosz Loeb-Lilienblum, and a host of others. Then she went to work and made up a list of Litvaks who have become distinguished in the commercial and communal life of New York city by their great talent of making money and their unlimited generosity in spending it for the support of Jewish charity and education.

But Mrs. Teitelbaum would not budge. She was as little amenable to facts as is the dyed-in-the-wool anti-Semite whose last resort is expressed in the words of the well-known lines:

I do not like you, Brother Fell.

The reason why, I cannot tell. But this I know very well:

I do not like you, Brother Fell.

The strain of the prolonged conflict between love and filial duty began to tell on Lina's state of health, and as the hope of overcoming her mother's objection faded from her view, the roses on her cheeks faded and withered away. Mrs. Teitelbaum proposed to Lina a trip to Berlin, Germany, where her aged mother and sister lived; hoping that such a journey would benefit her health and make her forget Mr. Halpern. Lina willingly accepted. Imagine her surprise, when on the very day of her arrival, noticing at the dinner table that the grandmother was not served with soup, she was told that the good old dame liked to take her soup last.

Only by a supreme effort she curbed her impatience to inquire at once into the reason for her grandmother's preference. As soon as dinner was over she managed to steal away from the company invited in her honor, to the grandmother's bedroom, and the information gained there made her the happiest person in the capital of the German empire. Her grandmother, she found out, was born in a Lithuanian village near Wilna, where she lived until the age of thirteen, when her parents emigrated to Berlin. She had, of course, become thoroughly Germanized and her children always supposed her to be a native of Germany. As she grew older, some of the manners and habits of her childhood life came back to her with renewed force and attractiveness, among which was the habit of eating the soup as the last course of the dinner.

After a sleepless night Lina got up in the morning, and without waiting for her coffee and rolls—the usual German breakfast—she inquired her way to the nearest cable telegraph station and sent off this dispatch:

"Grandma takes her soup last. Will return by same steamer."

On receipt of this cablegram her father telegraphed to Mr. Halpern: "You win. Mrs. Teitelbaum is 'in the soup.'"

A merry little crowd was gathered at the Hoboken pier, when Mr. Teitelbaum, being delayed, arrived. "Well," said he, "Come on, you Litvaks, I am the only simon pure German in the crowd."

"Yes," retorted Mrs. Teitelbaum, "and you will be able to hold on to the claim, because both of your parents are dead."

IMPRESSIONS OF FOREIGN CITIES

Biskra, Algeria, Constantine, Tunis, Etc.

By REV. LEOPOLD WINTNER.

In a previous article I gave a description of the life and customs of the Jews of Batna. In this installment of the series of my "Impressions," I will speak of Biskra, the Sahara town, the most famous winter resort of Algeria, owing to its unique, wonderful situation. The fact is, Biskra lies on the very edge of and along the great African desert, forming one great oasis and two smaller oases, of 200,000 date palms and other tropical fruit trees, constituting great wealth to their owners. The town of moving masses of African humanity. And what strange crowds! What real moving pictures! They are incomparably bizarre, and, to the American, something new under the African sun.

Here and there you see: Arabs of the better classes, tall, imposing figures, strutting about in their fine long flowing robes, or Arabs of different tribes, such as Kabyles, of the mountain regions, Sudanese, Biskris, "Negres Nomades," Ouled Nails, in their various, curious, hooded garments, gesticulating and jabbering in their Arabic-French jargon; queer groups squatting in front of their cafes, playing games, smoking and sipping strong, black coffee; swarthy donkey boys riding on back of the little, big-eared animals with their bare legs dangling down or trotting by them with big sticks and shouting fiercely: "Hay! ho! out of the way there!"; curio vendors from Tug-gourt, fakirs from Timbuctoo, semi-nude Bedouin women, saddled, back and front, with ebony-skinned, ink-eyed brats, pushing through the crowds; gamins of the real type, vying with the Paris genus in alertness of shoe-shine soliciting and "pour-boire" taking; beggars of all sorts and conditions, ragged or well clad, blind, half blind, or "stage blind," singing lugubriously and praying for alms, not "for Christ's sake," but "in the blessed name of Allah!"

All these and many more things are rare feasts indeed for the eyes of the promenading tourist in the streets of that Sahara town.

The night life of Biskra is none the less novel and interesting to the stranger. Besides these typical street scenes and queer out-door throngs, the centers of real Arab life are the cafes.

One of the most crowded and typical Biskra streets is the Rue Ouled Nail, replete with those lounging places. In company of other guests of my hotel I visited one evening a cafe, where an entertainment of a most peculiar kind was given. That place was of Moorish architecture; the interior space was

STREET CORNER, BISKRA

Biskra and the adjacent native villages are scattered about the oasis; the principal town is compactly built up and is, commercially, of considerable importance. It is quite a busy town, being the starting point of the loaded camels—"the ships of the desert"—carrying all kinds of goods to the oasis towns, and in returning, bringing the South African products to Biskra. It is thus the great "entrepot," the exchange of European and African goods and commodities, and the principal distributing center of the Saharian trade in this section of Africa.

The Arab market and the caravan-series of Biskra are sights long to be remembered; a pandemonium of yelling, shouting camel drivers in their rough costumes and the ear-piercing sounds of the camels, which they emit when roused to be loaded and to start for their long, weary journey in the desert.

Besides this, Biskra is a delightful, interesting town, having in the center a fine, large park, known as the "Jardin Public," well shaded with tropical trees and plants, and other smaller gardens; it has fine shops filled with African souvenirs, Oriental bric a brac, and rugs; a number of good hotels, cafes, a casino and a City Hall, Hotel de Ville, of modern, quite pretentious architecture. All these things, together with the arched buildings, fronting on the main street, form the modern French section of the town.

And the native quarters! To fully describe these would take a larger space than I wish to be allotted to me. Suffice it to say that the narrow, crooked streets, lanes, squares, little balconied houses, markets, boutiques, dark shops and Moorish cafes are queer, quaint and picturesque to a degree, baffling description. All day long till late in the night these places are swarming with dark dimly lit, giving it a mysterious appearance; it was filled with Arab men (never women), who presented a queer sight, indeed; they were either squatting or leaning on the matted floor, their faces were turned to a small platform, where a distinguished-looking man read from a book war stories of their old national heroes, and was listened to with the closest attention. The reading, called by the Arabs "Lecons nationales," was, of course, in pure Arabic, and, although not understood by us strangers, was nevertheless most fascinating in regard to the delivery of the lecturer. His voice was clear and resonant, his gestures were truly Oriental, full of temperamental mobility and vivacity, but most remarkable and characteristic was his emphasis.

The principal sentences, namely, were terminated with such a loud, vehement and abrupt voice that it produced, so to say, a kind of a pop gun effect. After the reading lessons came musical selections of a very primitive nature, consisting of songs, intensely melancholic and plaintive (reminding me of our ancient Jewish "negoonim") accompanied by a flute, a "clap" instrument and by the ever present "tom tom" and drum; a very peculiar ensemble it was, indeed.

At the end of this semi-religious entertainment the mixed audience adjourned to another hall and witnessed a more worldly one—a terpsichorean performance by the famous Ouled Nail dancing girls of the nomade tribe. It was a very monotonous, inartistic affair; but, nevertheless, those daughters of the desert, tattooed, painted, clad in the most gorgeous costumes and decked from head to foot with grotesque and glittering gold and silver ornaments, belong to the mahy curious and peculiar sights of Biskra.

Biskra is called by the natives the "Queen of the Sahara." It has become more known within the last few years through the writings of travelers, and more particularly, by Robert Hitchen's novel (dramatized in New York), "The Garden of Allah," consequently a general desire was created to visit this charming African town, and, having good railroad connections, it has become the mecca of winter tourists of all nations, who come here to enjoy the perfect climate during the winter months.

During my two weeks' stay in Biskra in February, there was bright, glorious sunshine every day, and hardly any clouds were visible on the African sky; the tropical heat was not oppressive, because the air was perfectly dry and pure and no sunstroke occurs there like in New York on hot summer days. In Biskra under the shady palms one really feels the "joy of living"; it is a veritable paradise.

From the tower of the minaret there is a most wonderful sight: the holy, garden town, with its gloomy, brown-yellowish mud houses; the oasis, with its forest of palms, and the verdure stretches, surrounding them, and lastly the mysterious, endless Sahara beyond.

"As I stood there and gazed on that unique scene, the descriptive words in Deuteronomy: "Hammidbor haggodol v'hanoroh" came to my mind, for truly it was "the desert, the great and the fearful."

And now after my modest effort of giving the above sketch of Biskra an interesting winter resort and tourist center, I will devote the following lines to the Jews of that Sahara town; and I beg the reader to overlook a short excursus in connection therewith.

During my stay in Biskra I happened to read Robert Hitchens's well-known and much admired book, "The Garden of Allah." I read it with great interest, so much the more as the scenes with the action of the hero and the heroine are laid by the author in the very place where I was at that time.

In a similar way I would say, my enjoyment of reading Cooper's "Pioneers" was heightened because I happened to be then in Cooperstown, on Lake Otsego—spending there the summer—about two years ago, where saw and roamed about in the very places which Cooper so beautifully and minutely described in that semi-historic book, "The Pioneers."

Shakespeare's word, "The play's the thing," is paraphrased by the average reader of a novel, "The story is, the thing." But, leaving the dictum of a shallow mind aside, I must say that in "The Garden of Allah," Mr. Hitchens did not only write a most fascinating story, but he gave such wonderful and scholarly descriptions of the people of Biskra, their customs, conceptions, views and mode of life—religious, social and otherwise—that to the thoughtful reader the book affords both a pleasure and an ethnological study of Arab-French-African life.

And now, "revenons a nos moutons." I wondered at first why Mr. Hitchens, in his comprehensive treatment of peoples and races inhabiting Biskra, failed to even mention the Jews of that Sahara town. Were there not any at all?

Well, upon inquiry I heard that Jews did live in Biskra, and later on I learned, also, that in quantity and quality, they were insignificant, and did not cut any figure, socially or commercially; hence, I suppose, Mr. Hitchens did not consider them of enough importance to weave them into his Biskra story; aye, not even to select for his plot a pattern for a villain (as our modern authors generally do), from among the Jewish elements of Biskra.

The fact is, there are about twenty-five Jewish families in Biskra. The old saying, where there are the sons of Israel there is also good business, and vice versa, is exceptionally not verified in that town, for they are poor and humble and share but little in its prosperity. There are fine shops and large warehouses in Biskra, but I was told very few of importance are kept by Jews. These earn their livelihood in a modest way, they are mostly small itinerant dealers, some have stands in the Arab market, and some have small shops in side streets.

The Synagogue of Biskra is a small, insignificant looking building near the park, and, going there on Friday evening, I saw groups of women and children sitting right on the sidewalk of the quiet street, chatting and amusing themselves. They responded politely to my greetings, and I was told that the services had just commenced. A cheerful animated lot those Jewish African maidens and children were, as seen by the friendly Sabbath lights, which shone through the low windows of the small one-story houses.

As in other towns I was also there surrounded by many persons, who bombarded me simultaneously with their eager questions: "Israelite? Juif? American?" They were, of course, pleased with my affirmative answers, and warmly shook my hand; for the visits of tourists in that modest neighborhood were, as I was told, of very rare occurrence. And then the old story over again—the topic of Kosher came au tap; for we must remember, that for the African Jew, "to be or not to be Kashir"—is the question; his religion, orthodox or other "doxys," hinges upon it; it is his "Credo." Now, tolerance in matters of conscience is a virtue, or, if you like, it shows good breeding, not to make people change their religious views. The good people, however, were quite astonished when I, on being questioned, said I stopped at the "Hotel du Sahara," a non-Kashir place, and thereupon I was patronizingly informed that there was a Jewish eating place in Biskra.

OULED NAIL STREET, BISKRA

Well, to please them, I said I would go there; but, going there is one thing and eating there is another; and there was a good reason for not doing the latter.

The so-called restaurant was in a slummy neighborhood, the exterior of the house was wretched, the stairs rickety, the "salle a manger" most uninviting, and the food—well, not forbidden—being "Kashir"—but forbidding; truly so.

And so, after all, my escape from eating it was my reward for going there, "s'char haleechah."

But aside from this phase of our co-religionists' views, I must say, I rather liked them, after I got more acquainted with them; they are plain folk and well-meaning. They are the characteristic children grown on the Arab-French-Saharan soil. On the one hand they are full of religious zeal and Oriental enthusiasm—exuberant like the waving palms in their oasis; and on the other hand they are perfunctory in their observances—dry like some gnarled trees on the fringe of the desert.

On Saturday morning the little synagogue was well filled; the venerable Rabbin Eliyahou Toutou conducted the services without a choir; he chanted the prayers of the Sephardic liturgy, and the congregation fervently responded. There were very few women in the gallery, and the religious assembly was not distinguished looking, like, for instance, that of Algiers, nor picturesque-Oriental, like the one in Batna, for the burnouses and turbans of the worshippers were worn and faded, and their "tallithim" were of the same aspect, with hardly any silver band—"Attora"—on the upper border.

The whole appearance of the congregation reflected the material condition of the Jewish community; but, nevertheless, this did not detract from the decorum and devotion of the service; for, indeed, "Man looketh at the outward appearance, but God looketh into the heart."

Rabbin Toutou invited me to call at his residence, and in the afternoon his son took me there. The large family lives in a very modest apartment in the lower part of a house, situated in a large sandy courtyard near gardens and fields, with some scattered date palms. The large room in which the minister and his good wife received me was poorly and scantily furnished, more so than the quarters of the small-salaried village parson in our country. Chaloum, the son of Rabbi Toutou, who studies at the College Francaise, is a fine, bright young man, combining the vivacity of the French, the deferential manners of the Oriental and the religious loyalty of his father.

The latter volunteered in telling me that he and his family live "b'dochek," very modestly, as his congregation was American Zionists Convene.

The eighteenth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists was held in Cincinnati last week and was attended by about three hundred delegates. The delegates assembled on Friday and there were special services on Sabbath morning in most of the orthodox synagogues.

The convention proper was called to order on Sunday morning at Memorial Hall. On behalf of the city of Cincinnati, Acting Mayor Simeon Johnson extended a cordial welcome and President Dr. Harry Friedenwald read his annual report at the afternoon session, in which he reviewed the work of the Actions Committee, Nahum Sokolow's tour, the tour of Mme. Pevsnor, the plan to establish a Jewish university at Palestine, and the various affiliated Zionist societies.

The treasurer's report showed an income of $17,794.06 and expenditures of $16,357.46, and a balance on hand of $1,436.60.

Greetings from Dr. Otto Warburg and Dr. W. Bodenheimer were read and then the convention settled down to real business.

It was decided to leave the selection of the meeting place for the next convention to the Executive Committee. Both Chicago and Baltimore have extended invitations.

The delegates devoted most of Wednesday to sight seeing, returning to their homes on that evening.

Roumanian Jews Convene.

The seventh annual convention of the Federation of Roumanian Jews of America was opened on June 28, at the headquarters of the organization, 44 E. 7th st., N. Y. Two hundred delegates, representing over thirty organizations, including some of the most prominent members of the Roumanian-Jewish colony of New York, were present, when Dr. P. A. Slegelstein read the report of the Executive Committee, concluding with an earnest and warm appeal to some outstanding and striving factions to join the ranks of this single central organization for the protection and welfare of the Roumanian Jews here and abroad. His report was enthusiastically received and was unanimously adopted.

The first vice-president, Dr. E. Koffer, in his address, gave a report on the conditions of the Jews in Roumania, and concluded with the proposition that this organization co-operate with the American Jewish Committee for the betterment of their unfortunate brethren in Roumania. Mr. H. Spleer, third vice-president, reported on the question of internal organization and recommended the appointment of a special committee for the purpose, which was carried. The committee on resolutions proposed the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

First. That the F. R. J. A. establish or operate in conjunction with an existing similar East Side organization an educational institute and social and civic centre.

Second. That the F. R. J. A. protests with its utmost energy against the atrocities of the Roumanian Government in regard to their Hebrew subjects who are living there under the inhuman restrictions of the "Aliens" laws, and invites the co-operation of responsible civic bodies, and especially the American-Jewish Committee, to advise ways and means for the amelioration of said conditions.

A board of directors composed of fifty members was elected, and among them the following executive officers: President, Hon. Charles I. Fleck; vice-presidents, Messrs. H. Spleer, Max Rubinger and Hon. M. Graubard; treasurer, M. Sani; secretaries, Dr. J. Braunstein, Temple Israel, New Rochelle.

On Saturday evening, June 21, a reception was given by the Ladies' Society of Temple Israel, of New Rochelle, in honor of Rabbi Richard Stern and his bride on their return from their honeymoon. The young couple received the guests on the veranda of the home of Judge and Mrs. Mark M. Schlesinger, who acted as hosts for the evening. Many speeches were made, welcoming the bridal pair back to New Rochelle and wishing them joy for the future. None of the speakers failed to express their appreciation of the efforts of the young minister who, during the past year, has endeavored to enlarge the scope of the congregation's activities.

Among the speakers were Mr. S. B. Solomon, Mr. O. Heyman, Judge M. Schlesinger, Mr. Charles O. Tobias, Mr. B. Hecht and Rabbi Samuel Greenfield, of Temple Isaiah, New York city. The last named pleaded with the assembled congregants that, by their actions, they should strengthen the hands of the minister in his work for the cause of Judaism.

Services have been discontinued on Saturday morning and will be resumed early in September.

The minister will occupy the pulpit until Friday evening, July 11, 1913, when he will leave for a six weeks' vacation.

The Home of the Daughters of Jacob, at 301-303 East Broadway, have instituted a campaign to raise $250,000 to build the new home for 600 inmates upon the thirty-six lots purchased by them in the Bronx, at 167th street, between Findlay and Teller avenues.

The distress of those unfortunate homeless and despondent aged waiting for the completion of the new home is very great. Immediate aid is imperative.

A number of ladies have already taken a number of building fund booklets and expect to raise considerable sums of money at the various summer resorts.

Miss Fannie Horney, a friend of the home, and one of its devoted workers, who for the past four years represented the Denver Sanatorium, is now visiting the various summer resorts in the neighboring towns of New York in the interest of the building fund of the home. Any courtesy extended to her will be greatly appreciated by the officers and directors of this institution.

Mr. Albert Kruger, the efficient superintendent of the home for the past fifteen years, is leaving on July 15 for Mt. Clemmons, Mich., where he has been raising annually considerable sums for the home and expects to be particularly successful this year.

ADDELSTON.—The monument erected in memory of the late Mrs. Anna Addeleston will be unveiled Sunday morning, July 8, 1913, at the Chaim Bebu Cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa. Friends and relatives are invited.

Saturday Closing at Hearn's.

In conformity with a custom inaugurated thirteen years ago, the establishment of Messrs. James A. Hearn & Son, West Fourteenth street, will be closed to-morrow (Saturday) and will be closed all day on each Saturday during July and August. This closing enables the employees to have two full holidays in each week and there is no deduction in pay or compulsion to work overtime to make up for it, the firm standing the entire cost. That the custom is a good one is shown in the demeanor of the employee, who is not entirely fagged out during the hot season and is enabled to give better attention to the wants of the shopper, and that the public is appreciative is attested by the large volume of business transacted at the Hearn store on the other five days in the week. To-day (July 4) the store will be closed all day and will not reopen until Monday, July 7, so that this week it means three full holidays for all employees.

Monticello, N. Y.

The Towner House, Monticello, N. Y., is delightfully situated on a high hill commanding an excellent view of glorious scenery at an altitude of 2,000 feet. With luxurious shade trees, ample grounds for recreation, it is in itself a complete summer resort. Modern in its equipment, having sanitary plumbing, hot and cold baths, telegraph and telephone service, and a large dance hall, it gives city comforts to its guests. The Towner House will be open until October 1, under the management of Wm. Gulkis this season, and everything possible will be done to please his guests. The food will be of the best from the Towner House farm, and will be served Kosher in Hungarian style.

One of the modern, summer hotels of this charming village is "The Ashley," under the management of Mr. Abraham Rudnick, who will endeavor to make his guests comfortable and happy while they are enjoying his hospitality. The Ashley has particularly large rooms, most of them containing four windows and all of them have electric lights, open plumbing, hot and cold running water, and they are splendidly furnished.

NO CONNECTION WITH ANY OTHER HALL.

Jewish Interest in the Centenary of Richard Wagner.

The centenary of Richard Wagner, which occurred on May 22, possesses no little interest for the world in general, and perhaps for the Jews in particular. An account of his life may be found in an encyclopedia. Whether he was a Jew or not is a matter of question. In an article in the Contemporary Review, about six years ago, Mr. A. E. Keeton describes Wagner as "extremely Jewish looking." This matter of Jewish looks, however, is extravagant, questionable, and inconclusive in a general way. The oft-repeated theory advanced by the author and others that the great composer's father was not the police officer whose name he bears, but a Jew—Ludwig Geyer—actor, painter, poet, musician and dramatist—who married Wagner's mother in the early days of her widowhood, is a conjecture. Nietzsche also bears witness to this fact, and it was also rumored that Wagner admitted this paternity in his "autobiography," since supposedly tampered with. Certain musical characteristics, employed by Wagner, are distinguished as particularly Jewish. All this supposition is still insufficient to prove him a Jew. In the first place Wagner's mother was supposedly of more Jewish appearance than his alleged Jewish father—Geyer; and the burden of proof is against the Geyer paternity, while looks count for nothing. Secondly, his so-called Jewish musical characteristics prove nothing; the short thematic phrase is not especially Jewish, and Wagner, like many Jewish composers, employed other phrases. Music, furthermore, is neither Jewish nor Christian. As to his anti-Semitism—it is not unusual for a Jew to be an unconscious anti-Semite; but this likewise does not prove that Wagner was a Jew.

We will now briefly examine Wagner's anti-Semitism, which is, indeed, a surprise, when we learn that it was a Jewish composer, Meyerbeer, who assisted him in his attempts to have his operas produced in Paris and another Jew—Heine—whose contact helped with the libretto of "The Flying Dutchman." In addition, he had many Jewish friends. He was extremely fond of the Jewish composer, Halevy, of Berthold Auerbach, the German-Jewish novelist, and very kindly disposed towards Joachim; while his favorite choirmaster in later life was Herman Levi. He complained bitterly of what he called—the Judaizing of German music, which was but a piece of imagination, and we can, indeed, conceive his dumfoundedness when, in the production of an opera to show the Teutonic superiority over the Jews, on the night of the performance he saw all the first violins in the hands of Jews and Jews in the first rows of his audience. It is further told that when Leopold Damrosch arranged a concert for him, he was amazed to find the front seats filled with Jews to whom he owed his success, and only Jews were present at the dinner given in his honor on the next day by Damrosch. Yet he went out of his way to insult contemporary Jewish composers. In 1850, he wrote: "Judentum in der Musik," wherein he remarked that the Jew was incapable of true passion, and refused to concede him a place within the inner sanctuary of the music Valhalla. This venom was presumably derived from his hatred of Felix Bertholdy—Mendelssohn, a true Christian of Jewish birth, which has inspired the statement: "Felix leaves us, but Wagner assails us." The lack of sympathy between the two is said to have been mutual. Wagner suspicioned Mendelssohn's jealousy, though its reality is not provable. Even his friend and helper, Meyerbeer, was criticized in his "Oper und Drama." He imagined that Meyerbeer was likewise jealous of him, but it was just the other way. Wagner really envied Meyerbeer, in spite of the fact that Wagner was the greater and was more successful in battling revolutionary musical innovations to favor Wagner's anti-Semitism was of the prevailing German quality and quantity. No doubt he was professionally prejudiced, but he also assimilated and practiced the policy of contemporary Germany to keep the outfit, it is time that the rational and the Jews on an inferior level of political and civil rights, a policy warmly defended by German statesmen and theologians. A man who harbors religious, as any other kind of prejudice, is very narrow-minded.

But Wagner is of another and a further interest to us Jews. In his operatic dramas he takes his themes from romance, legend, and popular myths. In Tannhauser, for example, we have the tournament of song, as popular in every mediaeval castle and manor as was the tournament of arms in the Middle Ages. In this tournament lyric poets matched themselves one with another and in chivalrous manner. They were called minnesingers, the product of the Minnedienst, the pagan service of sensuous love, transplanted and founded by Christianity on the cult of the Virgin Mary. In some cases, in the Middle Ages, it reached even to unbridled passion. Both these species were impossible in and to Judaism, and the Jewish ideal transformed and sanctified the subject of love. The Jewish Minnesinger, therefore, sang of purity and nobility and, like his contemporaries, gave utterance to human brotherhood. Religion in those circles, evidently made little or no distinction. Wagner, true, perhaps, to his anti-Semitic feeling, omits the Jew in the Saxe-Weimar City of Wartburg, yet among the knights of song at the usual festive gathering at Trimberg, in the Rhenish province of Franconia, are Walther von der Vogelweide, Wolfram von Eschenbach, and others, and also the Jew—Sussekind of Trimberg, dignified and fearless, whose song receives the praise of the assembled notables and whose poems, have survived in German literature.

In the Meisterlied, a satirical musical autobiography, we have the revolt from the old tradition of the Minnesingers. The latter had declined, and the new school or guild of lyric poetry has been established, which reached its climax in Hans Sachs, and which, in its turn, disappeared with the rise of Humanism. Wagner then turned to the Niebelungenlied, the greatest national German epic drama, where in a tetralogy he illustrates the old world tale of man's lust for gold and power and the futility of all things, save love. He strives to show the curse of ill-gotten gains, which bring sorrow and misfortune and murder, even to the third and fourth generation. In the Niebelungen Ring we are given a picture of "the negation of the will to live," concentrated in the figure of the god Wotan, and then what to Wagner seemed logically sequent and inevitable—the affirmation of the spiritual will, accomplished by Parsival, who, after a series of imitations, becomes king of the grael. Parsival has been represented as teaching the lesson of the Simple Life by means of a legend which was very popular and potent in the Middle Ages, in spite of the fact that

Parsival has been represented as teaching the lesson of the Simple Life by means of a legend which was very popular and potent in the Middle Ages, in spite of the fact that it seems as if the kingdom of heaven was stormed and taken by violence.

The moral influence of the musical dramas of Wagner cannot be overestimated. He was a musical revolutionist in a very real sense. The old standards did not appeal strongly to him. He introduced new ideas and developed them. He was a progressive. He told the old message in a new garb. As his own librettist, his words express the sense and consciousness of the music. In short Wagner makes his words live in the music no less than the music live in the words. He was the greatest musical genius of his age, and his works will live on to inspire to purity of life and nobility of purpose. He has interpreted to us that melody is something more than the fixed and narrow form that belongs to the childish stage of musical art. In this alone he has taught a great lesson. We need a melody in our life, in every sphere of life, attuned to a higher and a broader motive than that which contains our present situation, a melody that will take us out of our smaller and constrained selves and lead us to a wide place of sympathy, love, and commonhood.

End of Marconi Business with Its Anti-Semitic Tendencies—Extraordinary Declaration by British Judge—Record Honors for Jewish Students at Cambridge—More About Roumania—Manchester Jews and Their Poor—A New Cantor.

London, June 20, 1913. Except for echoes that may arise from time to time in the interests of political partisanship we have now heard the last of the Marconi inquiry business. Sir Rufus Isaacs, the most prominent Jew in the British Parliament, has complied with a pretty general desire to express regret for thoughtless, though honest, action, and Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George has done the same. So far as the House of Commons is concerned the matter was closed when the Speaker put before the members a resolution which read as follows:

That this House, after hearing the statements of the Attorney-General (Sir Rufus Isaacs), and the Chancellor of the Exchequer in reference to their purchase of shares in the Marconi Company of America, accepts their expressions of regret that such purchases were made and that they were not mentioned in the debate on October 11 last, acquits them of acting otherwise than in good faith, and reprobates the charges of corruption brought against ministers, which has been proved to be wholly false.

The supporters of the government in the House expressed their assent with a loud "Aye!" The opposition let it pass without a word. It was, therefore, adopted unanimously.

It is just as well, perhaps, that the whole matter is out of the way as the various incidents arising in connection with the Marconi upset in the way of inquiry commissions, libel actions, criminal cases in the courts, etc., was providing material which has helped some of the Jew-baiters in this country to spread rumors and insinuations which, although proved to be entirely unfounded, have done evil work in some directions. Anti-Semitism is still only an infinitesimal influence in this country, but one knows from history, and not so very far distant history at that, how easily the unthinking masses of the population (and in this one includes the lower middle classes as much as the working classes) are swayed by unreasoning prejudices and impulses in a moment sometimes and forced into savage and unjust actions which, although immediately regretted leave foul traces behind.

Special comment has been caused by some of the remarks made by Mr. Justice Phillimore in his final address to the jury at the close of the so-called suffragist conspiracy case at the Old Bailey. It may be remembered that when the police raided the offices of the London headquarters of the Women's Social and Political Union a month or two ago they arrested the heads of the various departments, although some were only ordinary paid servants and not therefore usually included in any raid for conspirators. Still, the women, with one man, an outsider, in connection with whom some compromising letters were found, were held for trial and in the end given sentences which many people regard as vindictive as for the crimes for which they are being punished. Crowds of other women have been punished in the course of the last twelve months, while others again have been held liable in the courts for all the damage done and have had to pay thousands of dollars for the broken windows.

Still, apart from this, Mr. Justice Phillimore in his summing up made the following extraordinary remark: "The religion of the world which has done most to elevate the position of women is Christianity. The religion which has probably done most to repress them is Mohammedanism."

A more oblique or unwarranted historical reference could scarcely be made by the most ignorant man. Justice Phillimore is one of our oldest judges and has behind him a life of study, one must presume, and of continual education. Yet he talks the above stupid nonsense. His views with regard to Mohammedanism are perhaps of little moment to us, but a passing reference might be made here to the fact that that particular section of his ignorant expression is absolutely controverted by a strong and conclusive letter written by Bernard Shaw, the world-famous dramatist, to the London Times a day or two after the trial. With reference to the historical value of the praise for the Christian treatment of women and the implication that Judaism is inferior in this respect, readers of THE HEBREW STANDARD will require no enlightenment.

The Jewish Chronicle, of London, is very properly moved to protest in the following words: "When the learned judge, however, lectures suffragists on the achievements of Christianity in the woman's cause, and gives it pride of place, we cannot but express our surprise. To speak of the protagonists of female equality about a religion the founder of which publicly exhibited contempt for his own mother, and the foremost apostle of which deliberately preached the 'subjection' of women, is sufficiently astonishing. But that Mr.

Justice Phillimore, whom we had credited with some acquaintance with Jewish practice, should have overlooked the claims of Judaism when speaking of the elevation of woman's status is a good deal more remarkable.

"He must surely know what the Mosaic law did to raise the position of the mother. We can hardly suppose that he is ignorant of the lofty Jewish teaching in regard to the status of the wife. Every 'Ketubah' solemnly binds the husband to honor his help-mate, besides working for her and maintaining her. The Talmud upon almost every page teaches reverence for wife, care and regard for womanhood, the common interest of the married couple, and the purity of the home. 'He shall love her as himself and honor her more than himself,' is a typical Rabbinical admonition. 'He who findeth a wife findeth a blessing,' is another. Or what within the two covers of the New Testament has excelled in beauty that Rabbinical saying: 'He who sees his wife die before him has, as it were, seen the destruction of the temple, his world is darkened, his step is slow, his mind is heavy. The wife dies in the husband's death, he in hers.' At a time when women were treated as slaves and chattels, a Deborah was ruling over Israelitish men. The position accorded to Miriam, the prophetess, earlier in Jewish history, will not be forgotten."

To turn from all these points to something more encouraging from the point of view of human progress a note might be made here of the exceptionally heavy list of Jewish successes in the Cambridge University honor lists just published. Jewish young men and women figure prominently in these lists, and in many cases these top-line scholars have worked their way up the scholastic ladder from the free educational centers provided by the London County Council without the aid of well-to-do parents. Three Jews—E. M. Maccohy, M. Daniels, and H. Weisberg, first received their education in the ordinary free elementary schools in the East End of London. They secure the coveted honor of a Wranglership in the Mathematical Tripos. In the Classical Tripos the son of the Rev. J. F. Stern achieved the high distinction of a first class. In the second class appears the name of Herzl, the son of the late Zionist leader. He would have been even higher had he not been severely handicapped by recent ill health. In the Natural Science Tripos five Jews take honors, one Spiers being top of the group both in the intercollegiate examination last year and in the scholarship examination the previous session. In the Law Tripos a dozen Jews figure, one being the son of the Rev. E. Spero, another being a Sassoon, and three being South Africans who presumably have reached Cambridge through the operations of the famous Rhodes scholarships. In the History Tripos four Jews and one Jewess figure, the lady being the daughter of Lionel Jacob and in the case of Quass, one of the Jews, the present distinction makes his fourth set of high honors within three years. In the Medieval and Modern Languages Tripos Jews have also figured well. E. M. Aron has secured a first class in German and Spanish with distinction in the spoken languages. B. J. Polack obtains honors in German, having obtained last year honors in French. He is the eldest son of the Rev. J. Polack. His two brothers, who are also at Cambridge, have obtained high places in their "Mays." Miss Lebus of Newnham also figures in the Mays.

Two Jews figure in the Mechanical Sciences Tripos. In the Economics Tripos a special position is secured by Miss E. J. C. Stettauer, of Girton. She is a daughter of the treasurer of the United Synagogue. Last year the same lady took honors in the Mathematical Tripos. Another Jew in economics is R. A. Harari. He is the son of His Excellency Harari Pasha, the well-known Jewish philanthropist of Cairo. Other Jewish names figure in the pass lists. A final reference may be made to the election of S. I. Levy, B.A., to a Hutchinson Research Studentship. His chemical work has shown much promise and very much is expected of him.

In reply to a communication from the London Committee of Deputies of the British Jews concerning the position of the Jews in the Danube territory ceded by Bulgaria to Roumania, Sir Louis Mallet has written from the Foreign Office to the secretary of the committee the following letter:

YOUMANS HATTER

Has opened a new store in the Arcade of the Longacre Building on 42d Street at Broadway, opposite the Knickerbocker Hotel.

I am directed by Secretary Sir E. Grey to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of May 23 respecting the position of Jews in Roumania territory, more especially in regard to the localities recently acquired from Bulgaria. In reply I am to inform you that on March 17 the Roumanian Minister in London addressed a note to Sir E. Grey referring to fears which had been expressed in the Parliament and press of this country lest the Jewish inhabitants of the regions ceded to Roumania, and especially the Jews of Siliustria, should lose the rights they had enjoyed as Bulgarian subjects. Monsieur Misu added that he was charged by his government to state that "all inhabitants, whether of Jewish or of other nationalities, of Siliustria and other localities, who would be annexed to Roumania would, of course, enjoy the full political and civil rights which they had under Bulgarian rule." Sir E. Grey informed Monsieur Misu that he had taken note of this communication.

The Board of Guardians for the Relief of the Jewish Poor of Manchester, which held its annual meeting on June 15, affords an inspiring example of social effort voluntarily performed by a small community for its members. As citizens of Manchester, Jews have to pay the rates levied under the general poor law; yet, not content with this, large numbers of Jews, poor no less than rich, voluntarily give to the Jewish Board of Guardians contributions which amount in the aggregate to nearly $15,000 per year. The result for many years has been that Jews have practically ceased to be a burden on the general poor rate. Their own Board of Guardians look after their own poor. During the past year, for example, over 300 Jews received the usual forms of relief, in money or in kind, and sometimes in medical treatment, or in legal advice. Emigrants were helped on their way, grants were made to orphans, goods and tools were brought for needy workers. Money even is lent—and lent without interest—out of a special fund, to enable the borrowers to embark upon some modest trade. The policy of the Jewish board has been and is still not merely to give relief in cases of actual distress, but rather to use preventive measures. From this point of view a suggestion made at the meeting on June 15 by E. H. Langdon is particularly notable. Mr. Langdon advocated that a special fund be formed in order to provide more liberally for the families of widows, for unless their children were properly cared for they would grow up "sickly in body and poor in mind." Such a fund would

The Rev. A. Katz, cantor of the Great Synagogue at Amsterdam, has just been elected, after a keen contest, chief reader of the Oldgate Synagogue, one of London's two most prominent Jewish houses of worship. This election is regarded as the most important appointment of its kind in Anglo-Jewry. The new holder of the first readership is a native of Wilna, and is the grandson of a famous cantor of that town. He is thirty-two years of age, and came to Amsterdam some six years ago as the successor to the late Chazan Heyman, the then chief reader of the Great and New Synagogue. He was selected from 125 candidates. He was originally intended to sing in opera, but being of a pious disposition decided to enter the service of the synagogue. Mr. Katz gained the esteem of his congregants in Amsterdam, and was very popular in all circles. He has composed much synagogue music, and is, in addition, a competent pianist. In Amsterdam he was vice-president of the Meshevas Nefesh Chevra. His voice is a remarkably fine and melodious tenor of great range. He created a deep impression when conducting the services at the Great Synagogue some months ago. In addition Mr. Katz is highly accomplished, and is a Hebraist of no mean order.

If it be true, it is a great pity that Sir Rufus Isaacs has resigned from the English Cabinet, and a greater pity that "wireless" forced this step.

For once we are in substantial agreement with The Modern View. Such a conference of editors, publishers and business managers of Jewish weekly journals, as it proposes, may be productive of some good.

We recommend to the heads of the Jewish Theological Seminary that the future commencements of this institution again have the organ recitals of Professor Baldwin, of the College of the City of New York, as a featured part of the programme. So far as the last commencement went the playing of Mr. Baldwin was the only portion of the exercises that abides with some of those who were present. And, be it noted, it was the only "worth while" portion of the exercises.

In these days when anti-Semitic manifestations in different portions of the world are the rule rather than the exception it is pleasant to note the passage of appreciative letters between the Turkish Ministry of Finance and the Chief Rabbi of the Empire. Even though Turkey lies vanquished before the Balkan allies, her ruler and people still exhibit the traditional friendship of yore for the Jews. And this is fully and completely reciprocated.

Judge Mayer Sulzberger's seventieth birthday anniversary has come and gone. The celebrant wished the day to pass without public demonstrations of any kind, and his wish was measurably acceded to. All the same the Jews of this country, to whom and for whom Judge Sulzberger has meant much, marked the day with congratulatory messages of good will and warm felicitations. This was but the scholar-jurist's due. In Philadelphia they look upon Judge Sulzberger as "our country's foremost Jew." He may be this, for Philadelphia, but in truth he is one of the noblest, if not the greatest, example of what an American Jew should be.

The impending Sunday closing law in Hungary seems to have been deliberately devised to crush the competition of the Jewish merchant against his Christian associates. For, no matter how observant the former may be, he cannot keep his shop open on the Sunday and must close it tightly at eight o'clock of every other evening in the week. Thus, during the greater part of the year when Habdalah comes after eight o'clock, the orthodox Jew is forced to abstain from business from Friday, afternoon until Monday, of each week. This is a refinement of anti-Semitism worse even than that in vogue among the Russian pogromchiks.

The Rev. Chazan Meisels was in St. Louis recently and while there gave a "concert" in the shape of a presentation of the regular Friday evening service at the local synagogue B'nai Amoona. If Mr. Meisel wishes to let his voice exhibit itself before men in the course of his execution of the duties of the sacred office of the chazan, the only questionable part of the "performance" would be its taste. If, however, he denominates the profane operatic rendition of the chazan's portion of the regular service a "concert," it were high time his "concerts" ended within the walls of synagogues. Do not our people appreciate the force of such a chillul ha-Shem?

The Jewish Chautauqua Society has just issued "The New Education in Religion with a Curriculum of Jewish Studies," by Rabbi Henry Berkowitz, its chancellor. This forms a neat pamphlet of more than one hundred pages and is interestingly and informingly written from a true Jewish point of view. Besides considering the necessary materials for the instruction of pupils in the various school grades, there are some short discussions of topics in general educational psychology as applied to the training of Jewish youths in religion. The purpose of the booklet, of course, is to win adherents for the thought that education in religion is as necessary to-day as training in the three R's.

THE AFRICAN IN THE BACKYARD

THE reports in the daily newspapers of this city during the past week, having reference to the revocation of the charter of Manhattan Chapter of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, located at the College of the City of New York, have proceeded upon the theory that those responsible for the act in question were actuated by feelings of race-prejudice and anti-Semitism. The circumstance that the student constituency at the City College is preponderatingly Jewish has lent color to this view.

When one considers, however, that in the fifty-nine years' existence of this subordinate chapter only three Jews have been admitted to membership in it and that, since 1878, not a single Jew at the College of the City of New York has been made an "Alpha Delt," we must ask ourselves, are not these good alumni members of the City College chapter of Alpha Delta Phi protesting their liberalism, their entire freedom from anti-Semitic prejudice, overmuch? If Alpha Delta Phi at the City College has not admitted and will not admit Jews to its membership, what necessity existed under the state of the present explanations for the revocation of the charter of the chapter by the governing body of the fraternity? Where Jews are not acceptable as members, what danger can possibly result to the chapter from the "excessive Hebraic element" at the college? The chapter could have "worried along," and, if Christians ceased attending the City College, died of inanition.

But the truth is that Christians to a fairly considerable extent do attend the City College. These Christians are drawn practically from the same elements in the population as their Jewish fellow-students. It will be found upon careful investigation that the Christians at the City College are in the main Irish and Italian Catholics, or their immediate descendants, and it was to these, and not to the Jews there who were not members, that the sturdy American Protestant element dominating the governing body of Alpha Delta Phi objected. In other words, the heads of Alpha Delta Phi did not care to stand for the recent members of Manhattan Chapter, all of whom are Christians.

Naturally, it was much easier for them to speak vaguely of the "excessive Hebraic element" at the City College than to call a spade a spade. They assumed that Jews have no defenders, while Catholics have. The whole situation has nothing whatever to do with Jews, and attempts to make anti-Semitic capital out of it and ought to fail.

We rejoice to learn that, in the Halifax shechitah case, the court of appeal has reversed the decision of the tribunal below and thus justified the Jewish method of slaughtering cattle. It will be remembered that a Halifax shochet was convicted of cruelty to animals originally because, in sootah he practiced shechitah. In the face of this ruling by a high Canadian court of law, all attempts to strike at shechitah in Canada, proceeding mainly if not altogether, from anti-Semitic inclinations, are rendered impossible. There can be little doubt that the Jewish method of slaughter, whereby the animal is at once killed by a single cut, is far more humane than the ordinary practice of "stunning."

Yet the fight in behalf of shechitah, even in enlightened Anglo-Saxon countries, is by no means over yet. We must keep up the campaign of education in which we are now engaged.

Although the provisional estimates made show that immigrants to this country from Russia, whence the vast majority of new Jewish arrivals on these shores issue, will be scarcely affected by Senator Dillingham's "percentage of aliens" proposal, we do not sympathize with the view which would write such a bill on our statute-book. Senator Dillingham's new measure contains a proviso in its third section, which reads as follows: "Provided, That the number of aliens of any nationality who may be admitted to continental United States, including Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, in any fiscal year shall be limited to ten per centum of the number of such persons of such nationality resident in continental United States, including Alaska, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, at the time of the United States census next preceding." Such a measure is mischievous in its possibilities; furthermore, it seeks to set up an arbitrary limitation by way of numbers which is un-American and opposed to the spirit of all our institutions.

The sixteenth annual report of the Executive Committee of the Federation of American Zionists, which was submitted to their convention in Cincinnati this year, is replete with interesting information regarding the activity of the followers of the Basle programme in this country. It is distinctly encouraging, at any rate so far as its tone of optimism is concerned. The American Zionists seem to be bending all their energies on practical work in Palestine and this has, undoubtedly, secured for them the sympathies of a number of persons to whom otherwise Zionism would not make any special appeal. The statement of the committee, however, that "Every Jew who has stood apart from us owes the Jewish nation a debt that increases the longer he remains outside the Zionist camp," is as intolerant and mendacious a point of view as men who call themselves reasonable, thinking beings have ever dared take up. Many Jews, who are (let us add this, parenthetically) far better Jews than some of the leaders of the Zionist cause, will have nothing whatever to do with Zionism as a movement. But they do their full duty as brethren of the House of Israel, despite the protestations of these self-appointed American Zionist critics.

THE TOOL AND THE TOIL

והפשט את-אהרן את-כגוריו והלכשחם את-אלעזר בנו ואהרן

יאסף ומת שם:

"And strip Aaron of his garments, and put them upon Eliezer, his son; and Aaron shall be gathered unto his people, and shall die there." (Num. xx, 26.)

AARON, in obedience to the behest of God, ascended the mountain, where he was to receive the divine caress which meant death here and life hereafter. He went up with unflinching step, undismayed. He was robed in the flowing garb of his high-priestly office, wearing the golden bells that tinkled as he walked; and the jewelled breastplate that glittered in the sun. Was he then mounting the altar steps to offer a sacrifice? Truly, he was. Mount Hor, rearing its peak skyward, was the altar, and his life, so submissively unyielded, was the offering. Never so holy an altar; never so pure a sacrifice! But did it occur to him on this final ascent to the heights, when life and the business of life departed from him like shining gossamer that floats unsubstantially in the autumn-air, how vain the fine linen, the golden adornments, the precious stones—the outward emblems of his authority; how vain authority itself; how idle human power, human honors, human achievements? Did he, in his last moments, between the mortal sunset and the immortal dawn, measure the human by the divine, the finite by the infinite?

Would that the dying thoughts of the great reached us more frequently, to become the priceless heritage of the race! We can but glean the last thoughts of Aaron from between the lines of the narrative. Unlike Moses when his end came, Aaron does not protest against the divine decree. His robe is stripped from him, but he does not complain. This stripping of his garments has a double significance. It means that he exchanges the garb of mortality for the robe of immortality. It means also that he solemnly transfers his authority to his successor. The only thought worthy of Aaron, worthy of this magnificent death, that we can conceive is that no man, be he never so great and efficient, is indispensable. It is for every man to know that, be his work never so important, when he is forced to lay it aside, there will be others to take it up. There is no room for the conceit which so many men freely express: "When I quit, there'll be nobody to fill my place!"

The rabbis say on this very point, in connection with that fine psalm-verse, The righteous will flourish like the palm-tree, like the cedar in Lebanon will he grow: "Why are the righteous likened unto palm and cedar? Most trees, when they are cut down, it is possible to take a twig from them, which, planted, quickly sprouts up again; but when palm and cedar are felled, is it possible to replace them except after many years and much toil? So when a righteous man departs this world, who can find a substitute at once? It takes years." This saying, with all its pessimism, yet admits that, though it take years, the great man can finally be replaced. Our text goes a step farther, for it seems to intimate that he can be replaced at once. In conformity with this view is another saying of the rabbis to the effect that "No righteous man departs this world before there is created another man of equal merit." (Yoma, 36b.)

It is this last rabbinic saying which furnishes a clue to the thorough understanding of our thought that no man is indispensable. God provides a new worker before he bids the old worker depart. God's servants must work in relays, between which there is not a minute's delay, for God's work must be done. Has the time come when Moses can no longer utter truths? Truths must be uttered till the end of time, though Moses be silent! Is there but one pair of lips fit to speak in the name of God? Samuel, David, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Micah, will arise to finish the sentence which Moses has left half-said. Has Zeuxis, or Praxiteles, dropped the brush or the chisel, unable to perceive any longer and interpret the beauty of line and color? Beauty must transfigure, must redeem life; must free, must enrich men's souls, though the classic hands are withered! Are there but two pairs of hands to create the gospel of beauty? Michael Angelo, Titian, Rubens, Rembrandt, Rodin, will arise to grace those walls and nooks in the gallery of mankind which Zeuxis and Praxiteles have left empty. Has the harp of the ancient singer been hung on the willow by the brook? Shall therefore none pluck the strings that vibrate with the charm of melody? The singer is dead, but the harp lives; and perhaps a Mendelssohn or a Mozart will yet arise to find the lost chord of songs unsung, of harmonies unheard.

My meaning is that God the eternal chooses finite agencies for the accomplishment of His infinite purposes. The tool breaks—the toil goes on. The worker being finite and the work infinite, shall the work be gauged by the worker or the worker by the work? "Shall the axe"—asks the prophet—"boast itself against him that heweth therewith? or shall the saw magnify itself against him that wieldeth it?" It is obvious that the work must be placed above the worker. The work is indispensable, and not the worker. In every branch of human endeavor, it is the duty of the worker to consider that his little hands are doing part of a very big work; that his limited powers are thus pitted against an unlimited purpose; that his resources that are so easily exhausted are matched against resources that are inexhaustible. "There is nobody to fill my place," is equivalent to the obviously absurd statement, "God has nobody to put into my place."

The individual, then, is easily replaced. When the mantle drops from Elijah, Elisha's shoulders are there to receive it. Yet, do not say that the individual life is without value. Adam's raiment, legend tells, passed on to posterity, but it retained the fragrance of Eden that clung to it. So, when our garments are stripped from us and laid on other shoulders, they will yet betray their former owner and first origin by wafting abroad the redolence of the Eden of our soul where bloomed the flowers of our own planting. JOEL BLAU.

As a practical step against Jewish trade and commerce, the Russian Jew-baiters have decided to bring into being an act prohibiting Jews from advertising goods or showing them at exhibitions. Accordingly, they asked M. Purishkevitch to use his influence, in order that their decision might be put into force by the government. The Smelianski (Kieff) Real Russians have gone a step further, for they have asked the authorities that Jewish bootmakers should not be allowed to exhibit their work even in their windows.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Brooklyn Federation of Charities. A chain letter has been started by Benjamin H. Namm, chairman of the Membership Committee of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, to help to raise $30,000 to complete the fund needed to carry on the work of the organization in that borough.

In this letter telling of the renewed effort to secure the money the committee express their gratitude for the support during the federation week and point out that no one who contributed during that campaign is expected to contribute additional money, but simply requested to send the letters to friends or acquaintances who have not yet subscribed.

Brownsville Y. M. H. A.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association of Brownsville will celebrate their first anniversary on Sunday, July 6, by giving an entertainment at their rooms, No. 65 Thatford avenue. The members are working hard to make the affair a high success.

A debating league has been organized among the members and prizes will be awarded to the winning team.

Regular meetings are held every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, and young men over the age of eighteen are cordially invited to join.

The Brooklyn Relief Association of the city of Stolla has filed articles of incorporation with Secretary of State May. The directors are Philip Deutsch, Harry Plaskowitzky and Isaac Margenstein.

The Congregation Anshe Torah have purchased the large church at the corner of Tompkins and Willoughby avenues, and will spend about $8,000 in converting it into their uses. The congregation now conducts services in a small house at the corner of Marcy avenue and Hart street. The new synagogue is within one block of the new building just dedicated by the Congregation Tiphereth Israel.

A public examination of pupils of the Talmud Torah, of the Congregation Faith Israel Anshei Emes, was held on Sunday, June 29, at 3 p. m. in the school building of the congregation. Addresses were delivered by the chairman, Mr. Michael Salit, and by Rev. Israel Goldfarb. The Talmud Torah will remain open throughout the summer.

The Fourth of July will be celebrated by the Hebrew Educational Society at Liberty Theatre in the morning. The exercises include an address, music by the Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band, songs and dances by members of clubs, an exhibition of scout work by the boy scouts' troop, which meets at the society's building, and two sketches, "Independence" and "The Preservation of the Union." There will be a housing exhibit in the auditorium of the Hebrew Educational Society next week, beginning Monday, July 7. It is provided by the Brooklyn Tenement House Committee. There will be illustrated lectures and explanatory addresses on the subject of proper housing conditions.

On Tuesday, July 2, the Sunday school children and teachers of the Faith Israel Anshei Emes School held their annual outing on the picnic grounds of Prospect Park. Ice cream, cake and milk were distributed, and prize games were indulged in. Special cars were chartered to carry the 350 children and their teachers to their destination.

The new building of the Hebrew Home for Aged will be opened in November. A monster fair will be held to raise funds with which to purchase the furnishings.

"The Mission of America" is the subject of the Fourth of July oration to be delivered by Dr. F. Stanley Van Eps, in the auditorium of the Kaplan School, 1731 Pitkin avenue, Friday evening, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Harry C. Spillman, manager of the School Department of the Remington Typewriter Company, will also speak on "Choosing a Vocation."

Broadway Casino.

A new structure in the heart of Williamsburg, is the Broadway Casino, 790-792 Broadway, near Stunner avenue, recently opened up to the public for balls, weddings, parties, socials, etc.

The interior of the hall is superb in its decorations, artistic paintings, costly draperies and crystal electric fixtures, more than 500 bulbs forming the illumination which give a dazzling show of brilliancy so much desired these days in all public functions.

The management announces a liberal policy and a special Kosher catering department under the supervision of Rev. Abraham Gotblatt.

Lodges, societies, etc., desiring to secure the hall for public entertainment or festivities are now invited to secure dates ahead, the same invitation being extended to all desiring a beautiful hall for private affairs, engagements or wedding parties.

The coming week's programme at the Brighton Beach Music Hall will be one that will entertain and delight every body, including the kiddies and grown-ups. Heading the list of attractions is Fimma Dunn, late leading woman of Mr. Belasco's successful comedy, "The Governor's Lady," also star of "Mother." Miss Dunn, assisted by a competent company of players, will present for the first time here a bright one-act comedy sketch called "Making Good," in which she has achieved success wherever she has appeared. Other attractions are Fannie Brice, in her newest budget of songs and character impersonations.

Sam Chip and Mary Marble, in "The Land of Dykes"; Willa Holt Wakefield, "The Lady and the Piano"; Hoey and Lee, the comical parodists; Doye and Dixon, in songs and dances; George Lyons and Bob Yosco, the harpist and the singer, and Apdale's Zoological Circus.

A committee has been formed at Constantinople under the presidency of Rechid Safvet Bey, secretary to the Minister of Finance, with the object of raising funds for the relief of poor Mohammedans in Adrianople. The chief rabbi of Turkey having sent him a donation in the name of the Jewish community, Rechid Safvet Bey, with the sanction of the government, has forwarded in reply a charming letter the terms of which constitute the best homage that can be rendered to the loyalty and patriotism of the Jews in Turkey. The letter has been communicated to the press direct by the Ministry of Finance. After expressing appreciation of the spontaneous generosity both of Ottoman and foreign Jews, it pays a warm tribute to the high moral qualities and the peace-loving character of the Jews in general.

Enrique Arribas Y Turull, Spanish historian, has published a brochure in which he states as the conclusion of his latest researches among original documents that Christopher Columbus was a Jew and not an Italian, Spaniard nor Corsican, as has been variously contended in the controversy which has lasted four centuries. Arribas says that Columbus was born at Pontevedra and not in any of the eighteen Italian towns formerly disputing the honor of being his birth-place. Eighteen documents dated 1413 to 1528 establish Columbus as a native of Pontevedra and the great discoverer merely posed as a Genoese from policy.

The historically interesting old synagogue at Cracow has for several years past been undergoing restoration. Toward the heavy cost of the work, considerable contributions have been given by the Galician Diet as well as by the Cracow Savings Bank and the Cracow Jewish community. But as the sums thus provided were inadequate to complete the restoration, the work was suspended about a year and a half ago. On the application of the Restoration Committee, the Austrian Government voted a grant of 15,000 crowns, thereby assuring the preservation of this famous Jewish historical building.

Not content with the measures against foreign Jewish exhibitors at the automobile exhibition at St. Petersburg, nineteen Russian Jews were last week ordered to leave the exhibition grounds for a few hours as the Tsar visited the exhibition, and it was not expedient to bring him into contact with Jews. Many French exhibitors entered a strong protest against the action of the Court Clique, and some of them announced their intention to leave St. Petersburg. The incident has produced widespread indignation.

Up-to-Date and Kosher.

The new manufacturing district above Madison Square now contains an enormous population of our coreligionists during business hours and to many of them the question of their mid-day meal is of prime importance and to a large number of religious significance, especially so for those wishing to strictly observe the dietary laws.

The latter are respectfully informed that the modern restaurant of Lifshitz and Halpern, 36 West Twenty-sixth street, between Sixth avenue and Broadway, serves strictly Kosher regular dinners between the hours of 11 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. This dinner is of exceptional quality and the variety of food served cannot help but please those wishing a good meal. Although the dietary laws have been observed for centuries, they can still be rigidly enforced in new surroundings, and to this end this restaurant is fitted up in truly American fashion.

Lifshitz and Halpern have been in the restaurant business eight years and have a branch at 22 University place. Their new restaurant in West Twenty-sixth street is an inviting place to dine and should merit the patronage of the faithful.—Adv.

Prince's Two Hotels.

Mr. Henry Prince, for several years proprietor of the Hotel Majestic, Arverne, L. I., has extended his seaside operations by leasing the Tack-a-pou-sha, the famous hotel on the ocean front, Far Rockaway. Both the Majestic and the Tack-a-pou-sha are under his management and are now open for the season. The Tack-a-pou-sha has undergone a complete overhauling and thorough renovation, so that it is really up-to-date in all the essentials of a seaside home. Mr. Prince will give this house his personal attention, and that means hospitality of the right sort. The cuisine will be a feature of the establishment. Only fresh killed poultry and city dressed meats will be served at meals. The Majestic will continue its successful career with Mrs. Prince "on the job," so that guests of both houses can be satisfied in every respect during the heated term.—Adv.

The growing popularity of Pommery as a wine du luxe is attested by the many notable dinners where this famous wine is served to the exclusion of all others. nurtured from its inception some twenty-six years ago until the present day. The career of Jacob Schoen and the progress of the order were closely linked together, and for the past seventeen years he had officiated as grand secretary, and the amount of work entailed in keeping the records of over 180,000 members may be easily imagined. Mr. Schoen performed his duties faithfully and the estimation in which he was held by his brethren was attested by the gathering at the public obsequies on Sunday morning—the biggest funeral ever held on the East Side—attended by over 25,000 mourners, and a cortege comprising over 400 carriages.

The services, which were held in the home of the deceased, 37 East Seventh street, were simple. They were conducted by Rev. Max Fried, and Grand Master Leon Sanders delivered a eulogy. Telegrams from over 600 lodges were received. The interment was in Washington Cemetery. Mr. Schoen is survived by his wife and two sons, Eugene Schoen, an architect, and David Schoen, a theatrical manager, of Springfield, Mass.

CHILDREN'S PAGE.

Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa

Dear Children:—

Before I will tell you of the maxim of Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa, I will tell you something of himself.

Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa lived in the time of the second temple and was one of the eye witnesses of its destruction by the Romans.

He was extremely poor and extremely pious, in fact his piety as well as his poverty were so extraordinary that the sages said: "Every day the echo of a Divine voice is heard saying, 'all the world is sustained for the sake of Chanina, my son, and Chanina, my son, contents himself with a measure of carobs from Sabbath eve to Sabbath eve.'"

The following miracle stories are told of this wonderful man: Every Sabbath eve his wife made fire in the stove and threw some substance in that made a smoke come from the chimney. She did this because she was ashamed to have it known that she had nothing to cook or bake. She had a bad neighbor who said to herself, "I know that she has nothing to cook; I will go in and see what she is making such a fuss about."

She went and knocked at her door. Rabbi Chanina's wife, greatly ashamed, ran in another room. In a miraculous manner the stove was filled with bread and the basin with dough. "Woman! Woman!" cried the neighbor, "bring a peel to take the bread out of the stove, as it is burning." "Why I just went to fetch one!" said Rabbi Chanina's wife, coming in with a peel in her hand, for she was used to miracles.

"How long are we going to suffer from this dire poverty?" cried his wife to Rabbi Chanina. "What shall we do?" he asked. "Pray that something be given you," she answered. He prayed and the image of a hand appeared which gave him the foot of a golden table. That night his wife saw in a dream that all righteous people who went to Paradise ate at a table of three feet, while she and her husband ate at a table of two feet. She said to herself, "Are you satisfied that everybody shall eat at a perfect table and we shall eat at a broken table?"

"What shall we do?" he asked. "Pray that it be taken away from you," said she. He prayed and the image of a hand again appeared and took back the golden foot of the table—and they were again as poor as ever.

One Sabbath eve he saw his daughter looking very sorrowful. "My daughter," said he, "why so sorrowful?" She answered, "By mistake I filled the Sabbath lamp with vinegar instead of oil." "My daughter," said he, "what do you care, He who ordained that oil shall burn will also ordain that vinegar shall burn." It is related that it burned not only during the night, but also that entire Sabbath day until the close of the Sabbath when a light was kindled therefrom for the Haddallah.

One day his wife found some hens which a wayfarer had left at the door of their house. Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa told her not to eat of the eggs they would lay. The result was that many eggs accumulated and many chickens were hatched which caused them great annoyance. He sold them and with that money he bought goats. Some neighbors complained that the goats were eating up all their vegetables. "If that is true," said Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa, "may the bears devour them, if not may each goat bring a bear upon its horns." In the evening each goat brought a bear upon its horns. After a while the owner of the hens passed by with a friend. "Here is where I lost my hens," he remarked to his friend Rabbi Chanina overheard these words and when the stranger proved that they were really his he gave him the goats.

In a certain place there was a serpent who attacked human beings and killed a great many people. It was made known to Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa. He asked them to show him the hole wherein the serpent made his hiding place. They showed him the place. He planted his keel firmly upon the hole and when the serpent darted its forked tongue at him to bite him he crushed its head and it died. He threw its dead body upon his shoulder and brought it to the Beth Hamedrash. "See, my children," he exclaimed; "it is not the serpent that kills, but the sin that kills." This gave rise to the following proverb: "Woe to the man who comes in contact with a serpent, but woe to the serpent that comes in contact with Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa."

Rabbi Chanina Ben Dosa was on the road when a heavy rain descended and he was in great distress. "Master of the Universe," he cried, "all the world is in comfort and Chanina is in distress." Thereupon the rain ceased. When he arrived at his house he cried, "Master of the Universe, all the world is in distress whilst Chanina is in comfort" (meaning thereby that the farmers needed the rain, although he could get along without it, as he had no farm) the rain again descended.

From near and far people would come begging him to pray for their sick and he would always know which one of those he prayed for would live and which would die. "How can you tell?" he was asked. He replied, "If the words of my prayer flow fluently from my lips I know that my prayer is accepted, otherwise I know that it is rejected."

Mr. Spongely (slightly related)—Splendid! Magnificent! Do you know, Uncle Eli, I believe I shall never get tired of seeing the sun set behind that hill! Uncle Eli—That's what me an' mother's beginnin' to think.—Puck.

Judge (to prisoner)—Why did you take only the money and leave the basket of silver? Prisoner—Because it was too heavy. Judge (excitedly)—Aren't you ashamed of yourself, you lazy man?

"Are you feeling very ill?" asked the doctor. "Let me see your tongue, please."

"What's the use, doctor?" replied the patient. "No tongue can tell how bad I feel."

"Waiter, what does this mean—25 francs for two hard boiled eggs?"

"Very sorry, sir. Slight mistake, sir. I've given you the bill intended for the American at the next table."—Pele Mele.

Why is a fisherman's the most lucrative employment? It is all net profit.

Why does the sailor know there is a man in the moon? Because he has been to sea (see).

Why are fixed stars like wicked old men? Because they scintillate (sintillate).
