TOO MUCH HONOR

By B. HOROWITZ

"Confess, you rogue, that they are delightful."

"For want of anything better, they are."

"How devilishly difficult it is to please you! Here we have the whole world talking of these sisters in terms of the highest praise, and here you are—as cold and indifferent as you can be. But for all that I believe that that cool exterior covers a hot interior."

"Believe as you wish—I care not. You go into ecstasies when there is little cause. I tell you once again: I don't care much for those girls. They're pretty, it's true; but they are altogether too conscious of it. Besides, apart from their prettiness—which is of a kind that will soon disappear—there is little to recommend them."

"You want philosophical female companions. Unless they can talk to you on the latest theories of matter they are useless."

"You know that I want nothing of the kind. But I do like a girl whose education and interests are such that she welcomes an intelligent discussion. Can you do that with the Meyers? 'How pretty you look to-day!' 'How well that dress suits you!'—'Pooh!'"

"Fiddlesticks! Fiddlesticks with your intelligent discussions! We have enough brain-splittings throughout the week, immersed in laboratory and library as we are. A little relief in the shape of chit-chat with these beauties is welcome."

Marx just shrugged his shoulders. "You're an ungrateful wretch," said Lewin. "Do you know that I've gone to immense trouble on your account?"

"On my account?"

"Yes, on your account. I promised that we would pay them a visit on Saturday—and all to please you."

"To please me?"

"Whom then? I thought you wanted to see Lena —"

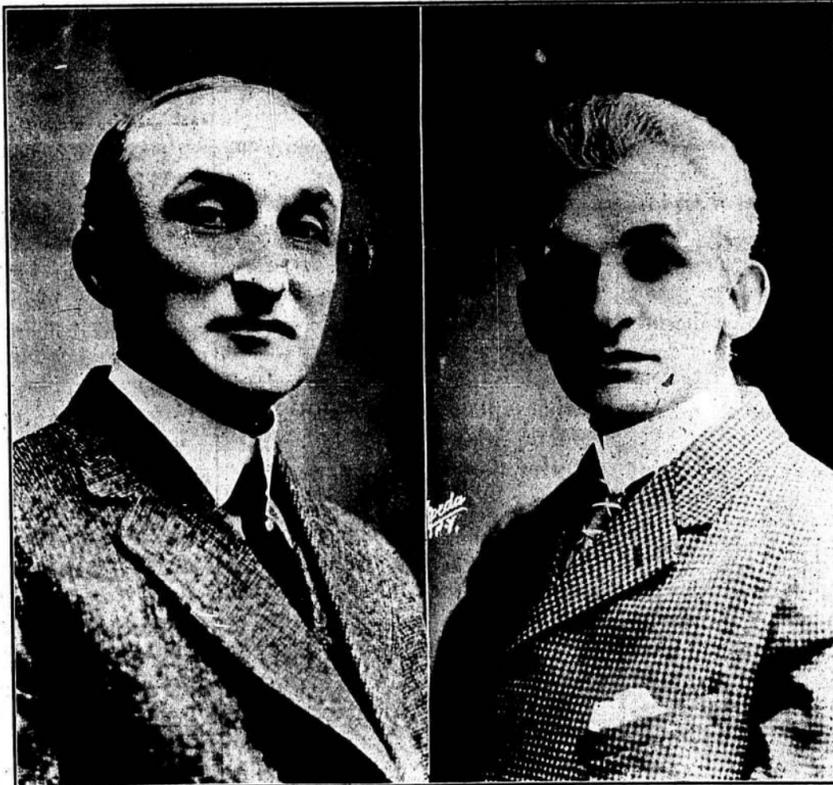

"And you Dora."

"Yes, and I Dora, I'll admit."

"That you wanted to see Dora I

"And that doesn't prevent me from telling you that you're a rascal. Did you consult me?"

"Bah! You've gotten out of worse scrapes than this." And patting his friend on the back Lewin walked off

SARGENT ABORN

MILTON ABORN

The appointment of Milton and Sargent Aborn as general managers of the Century Opera Company, which will open its season at the Century Opera House on the 15th of September, is interesting from several points of view. It is encouraging to those interested in musical America from the fact that they are the first natives of this country to be appointed to such an important operative post, and it adds to the already large list of Jewish impresarios. The action of the Board of Directors of the Century is an official recognition of the value of the work done by Messrs. Aborn in the past in presenting "grand opera for the people," a field of endeavor in which they have been practically alone for several years. Since Mr. Savage gave it up several years ago there have been no other companies of this class giving grand opera at moderate prices, excepting now and then when some intrepid impresario would organize one which would go out of existence as suddenly as it came in, after a few weeks. While others have come and gone, the Aborn English Grand Opera companies have continued year after year and these managers have been the only ones who have made this form of amusement support itself and even pay a profit.

gaged giving the finishing touches to their toilets when our two heroes made their appearance. Barely were they ushered into the parlor when Mr. Meyers, the father of the two girls, came in. Lewin winked at his friend and began to hum.

"For Heaven's sake talk Talmud," whispered he.

"I wonder if I can recall the alef, beth?" mused Marx.

"Good evening, gentlemen; my daughters will soon be here. In the meantime make yourself quite at home."

"Thanks," answered our heroes in chorus, as each threw himself into a comfortable arm-chair.

"You look tired, Mr. Meyers," ventured Lewin, who wished to break the silence.

"My dear sir, when a man has to get up every day at break of day, is that to be wondered at?"

"A shochet's life is not a milk and honey affair, evidently."

"No, but then the knowledge that you're engaged in work worthy of a Jew—"

"Cutting throats is certainly an honorable profession," interrupted Marx in the blandest tones possible.

"Especially when they are cut in the particular way prescribed by Jewish law," added Lewin.

"That is an art," said Mr. Meyers, taking Lewin's remark quite seriously; "but how few appreciate it!"

"That but goes to show that the world is still barbarous," said Lewin.

"None are so destitute as the ignorant," according to the Talmud," remarked the shochet.

"And it's ignorance that begets intolerance," says the Talmud also, does it not?" remarked Marx.

Now Marx was as familiar with the Talmud as he was with Chinese—which simply means that he knew nothing of either. But this much he did know: that the Talmud is an encyclopedia in which references can be found to everything in creation.

"If that be the case," reasoned our remarkable logician, "it is just pos-have no doubt; but that I wanted to see Lena I utterly deny."

"That doesn't prevent me from not believing you."

"I thought I'd give you a pleasant surprise."

"Cunning as a fox! You've put me into a fine position!"

crying: "Till Saturday night, my Adonis!"

sible that some such sentiment was expressed by one of the rabbis."

"I—I don't altogether recall that," said Mr. Meyers, knitting his brows whilst trying to recall. "Possibly you have reference to that portion which speaks of conceit as growing in proportion to one's ignorance?"

"Ah, yes; that's it!" exclaimed Marx. "How learned we are!"
whispered Lewin to his friend. "But beware!"

Just then Mrs. Meyers came in.
For a few moments the husband and wife were engaged in earnest conversation. Marx took this opportunity of interrogating his friend.

"Beware, did you say?"

"Beware of being caught in the net."

"He'll find out that I don't know any Talmud—?"

"That you'll make a very agreeable son-in-law."

"The devil he will!"

"Now," said Mr. Meyers, turning round, and at the same time offering a chair to his wife—"now I am ready to resume our conversation. By the way, my wife, gentlemen." Then without stopping he continued: "I have done what our sages recommend us to do. They tell us that 'it is a man's duty to take a wife'; and he smiled good-naturedly.

"Did you get that?" whispered
Lewin to Marx, as he nudged him.

"That is very sage counsel," said Lewin aloud.

"And one that my friend will follow at the very first opportunity," added Marx, maliciously.

"Confound you for an ass!" whispered Lewin.

"Tit for tat," whispered Marx.

"I am glad to hear that," said Mr.
Meyers, as he cast an approving look on the unfortunate Lewin.

"That is but right," commented
Mrs. Meyers; the sooner a young man thinks of settling down the better."

"As our Talmud says: 'He who has no wife is not a complete man,'" added her husband.

"No wonder I have always found that I lack something," said Lewin sadly.

"Ah!"

"Though I labored under the delusion that that something was not so much the want of a wife as the want of money."

The young man said this in so serious a tone that both Mr. and Mrs.
Meyers were convinced of his sincerity; but his friend, who knew him better, laughed aloud.

"My friend does himself wrong," interposed Marx, assuming a serious expression in his turn, "for there is no one who thinks of money less than he does, and no one who takes a deeper interest in the fair sex than he."

"A thousand plagues on him!"
muttered Lewin. Then aloud: "If I have shown any such interest in the sex you may be sure that Mr. Meyers was my teacher."

"Ah! money! money! what misfortune that brings upon us!" said Mr.
Meyers, shaking his head and heaving a deep sigh. "Remember, gentlemen, remember what our sages say:
'The children of a man who marries for money will prove a curse to him.'" This was indeed an apt quotation, seeing that Mr. Meyers was no millionaire.

"We are traveling rather fast; he talks of children already, whispered
Lewin.

"Money is but trash; it is mine to-day, thine to-morrow," as the Talmud says also, I believe," said Marx in the most innocent manner.

"Ah, thou slaughterer of Shakespeare, how I would like to rip thy belly!" whispered Lewin in his friend's ear.

Just then in walked Misses Dora and Lena. Both the young men thought the same thing at the same time; that these beautiful girls never looked more beautiful; and their looks plainly expressed their admiration.

"And how are the gentlemen this evening?" said Dora, the elder maiden.

"No matter how they have felt before, they cannot but feel fine now," said the gallant Lewin.

"Why cannot they?" asked Lena,
who could easily have supplied the answer.

"Cannot you guess?"

Lena shrugged her shoulders.

"We have had a most instructive conversation with your father," interposed Marx.

"And that is why you are in such good spirits?"

"Certainly," said Lewin, who did not mean that at all, but who wasn't at all averse to telling a lie at the expense of the ladies.

"You do me too much honor," remarked Mr. Meyers, quite overwhelmed.

"That is but true," emphasized
Lewin to make the lie doubly emphatic.

"You are modest," added Marx,
looking very calmly at Meyers père.

"You know that what our forefathers have said: 'They who are modest will not easily sin,'" replied
Mr. Meyers.

"That is the very reason why I could never conceive how either Miss Dora or Miss Lena could ever be guilty of the slightest impropriety," commented Lewin, looking at the sisters in the most bewitching manner.

Dora threw an appreciative look at the young man. Lena, not taken in so easily, had little difficulty in detecting the sarcasm underlying this remark.

"Mr. Lewin is an accomplished gentleman, is he not, ma?" said the latter ironically, turning to her mother.

"I have no doubt of that. And so is his friend."

"I shall say with Mr. Meyers:
'You do me too much honor,'" said Marx.

"And I shall answer that I am altogether overwhelmed at Miss Lena's estimation of my poor self," added
Lewin, making a graceful bow.

Now both Mr. and Mrs. Meyers were not particularly anxious to remain in the room, nor were the other persons particularly anxious to have them remain. Mr. Meyers got up, stooped to his wife to say something,
and then turning to the rest said:
"You will excuse us, won't you?"

Of course they wished to detain him, but, of course, he refused, and turned towards the door. When there he turned round and found his wife still occupying her seat. He went up to her, and again whispered something. Then once again facing the young men he laughingly remarked: "If thy wife be short stoop down to her and speak." With which sage remark he led himself and his wife out of the room.

"How else are you going to do it?"
murmured Lewin.

"Do what?" asked his friend.

"When you are long and your wife is short?"

A pinch was all the reply vouchsafed. Lewin knit his brows, and then raising his voice, he repeated slowly and deliberately: "If thy wife be short stoop down to her and speak."

"Well * * *?" inquired Dora.

"I would like to substitute two words in that sentence, Miss Dora."
"Which?" said the unsuspecting lady.

"'Girl' for 'wife' and 'kiss' for speak."

Dora blushed violently.

"And what would our other gallant do to that innocent little sentence?" inquired Lena, not without some anxiety.

"I would leave it alone," replied
Marx gruffly.

The beautiful Lena cast an angry look at him.

"How generous!" exclaimed she.

"Your approval flatters me," retorted Marx, making a bow in imitation of his friend's.

Lena bit her lips.

"I've never heard of the book,

Marx coolly.

"And what if I'm not?" retorted
Lena, losing control of herself.

"That you do well to study it," replied he.

"Come, come, my children—quarreling among lovers!" interrupted
Lewin.

This was a bold stroke. To make use of the word "lovers," and then to emphasize it in the peculiar way that Lewin did!

"We can't all love as my friend does," answered Marx, as he savagely eyed his friend.

"And some of us can, though we find it impossible to love some people," said Lena, casting a disdainful look upon Marx.

"Amen!" said Marx.

"Our sages tell us that love without rebuke is no love," came a distant voice which made all four of them start.

"Father!" murmured the two girls.

"The old fox!" muttered Lewin.

"As your poet has it: 'Love never runs straight,'" came the same voice, which grew louder as the voice came nearer.

"But winds itself like a serpent and then strangles you," ventured Marx.

Lena, who overheard this, gave him a look which plainly said: "How I would like to strangle you!"

"Aha! he left the door ajar—the cunning old fox!" thought Lewin, who soon took in the situation.

"Papa, may I correct you?" said Dora very timidly, when her father made his appearance.

"What is it, my child?"

"In your quotation you left out a word, and you substituted one word for another. You said, 'Love never runs straight'; you should have said, 'True love never runs smooth.'"

"He who acquires knowledge without imparting it to others is like a myrtle in the desert—no one is there to enjoy it," replied the father, eyeing his daughter most tenderly.

"Oh, were he but that myrtle!" muttered Lewin.

"Would I were in a desert now!" quoth his friend.

"My dear children," continued Mr. Meyers, then as if suddenly recalling: "I mean my dear children" (looking at his two daughters) and friends (looking at the two young men), "a man has not reached three score and four years without having gained some wisdom."

"Some have, though," interposed Lewin, putting on that innocent air which he could feign so well.

"I am talking of myself more particularly," replied the old man.

"Oh, of course, that's another proposition," said Lewin.

"Now, my children—and my friends: gain from my own experience."

"Bet yer the old fellow was a hot 'un in his young days," whispered Lewin to his friend.

"The pit is growing wider, and I'm afraid we'll fall in," replied Marx.

"Never fear," said Lewin confidently.

"Bearing in mind the Talmud's saying, 'He who does not educate his children is his own and his children's enemy,' I have bestowed the greatest care on the up-bringing of my two daughters. The Almighty has blessed me additionally by giving me daughters that are fair to look upon."

"Father!" cries Lena.

"Please, please!" implores Dora.

"Under these circumstances," continued papa, without heeding his daughters, "I do not wonder that you (looking at the young men) have been favorably impressed with them."

"Father!" cry Dora and Lena in chorus.

"I think the old coxcomb has the impudence to look at us!" murmured Lewin.

"This is getting warm," thought Marx.

"Now, I know that you are most anxious to have my opinion. In brief, knowing both the young men, and knowing their parents, I cannot truthfully say that I have any objection to either of you."

"Woe is me!" mutters Lewin. Then aloud, "As Mr. Meyers said before, 'you do us too much honor.'"

Poor Marx was too dumbfounded to utter a word.

"But I don't understand you, pa," cried Lena, who, though not ungrateful for this intrusion, had not yet forgotten Marx's sneering allusions.

"Pa means to imply, I think; that he gives his consent," ventured Dora timidly.

"Rashi interpreting chumish," mutters Lewin. "How I would like to strangle you all!" thought Marx.

"It is quite plain that, unlike her sister's affection for my friend, Miss Lena heartily dislikes me," said Marx aloud.

Dora gave him a grateful look; Lewin could have strangled him with his. As for Lena, she said to herself, "He does not like me, that's evident."

"I have no reason to believe that Miss Dora looks upon me with any more favor than does Miss Lena upon my friend," said Lewin. Dora looked at him reproachfully, but the rascal just chuckled to himself.

"That's all very well, my children," said Mr. Meyers, "there are five of us here now. Let the old man go away. Let one pair go one way, and the other another." And he began to smile.

"What a diplomatist!" thought Lewin.

"He who is unmarried lives without happiness, without religion, without blessing," says the Talmud, and with this remark Mr. Meyers left the room.

For a few moments there was an embarrassing silence.

"How I could break that fellow's skull for getting me into this mess," thought Marx of his dear friend.

"Does he love me?" mused Dora.

"He does not love me," thought Lena.

"This will require some manoeuvring," reflected Lewin, and he began to hum:

"One more unfortunate,
Weary of breath,
Rashly importunate
Gone to his death!"

"Confound you for a fool!" muttered Marx.

Lewin, without heeding this continued:

"Take him up tenderly,
Lift him with care;
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young, and so fair!"

"I'll strangle you if you don't be quiet," muttered Marx.

"You do me too much honor," replied Lewin calmly.

Marx hastily took his watch out of his pocket, and said in a very agitated air, "we must go now."

Lewin still continued:

"Ere his limbs frigidly
Stiffen too rigidly,
Decently, kindly,
Smooth and compare them;
And his eyes, close them,
Staring so blindly!"

"Are you going?" shouted Marx.

"What's the hurry?" inquired Lewin; "are these ladies, then, so anxious to get rid of us?"

"I'm sure we are not," answered Dora. "There!

"Perishing' gloomily Spurned by contumely—"

"Let my sister speak for herself!" cried Lena, unable any longer to control her passion.

* * * * *
Two young men are strolling leisurely in the park. All at once they spy two girls coming from an opposite direction.

"Well, I'll be —!" exclaims one of the young men. The other turns scarlet.

As the girls pass them the man who had just given vent to his surprise salutes them in gallant style. His companion turns his head in another direction.

"My Dora looks as beautiful as ever," says the former, after the two ladies had passed.

"And I never want to see either of them again," says the latter.

"Come, come; suppose I arrange a visit—"

"I'll have you roasted alive!"

"Ah, my friend! You do me too much honor."

Get This and Run No Chances With Your Stomach in Summer

There is a new medicinal preparation for sale in drug stores called GASTRO-AIDS, which is without a doubt the surest safeguard against summer stomach troubles procurable. It is made of a number of ingredients which keep the stomach sweet, normal and healthy, and it prevents gases, acids, fermentation, etc., from taking place, and thereby saturating the system with poisons. Many of the greatest dangers that all physicians encounter in the summer originate in a poisonous, gaseous condition of the digestive system—which makes ptomaine poisoning, sun stroke, heat prostration and general illness, all the more likely.

You can't stay well any time and especially during the hot months unless your digestion is perfect, but you can keep it perfect at a nominal cost and eliminate the dangers of life due to imperfect digestion by using this preparation GASTROAIDS. At all druggists for 10c., 25c., and 50c., or from Curtis Chemical Company, 117 East 24th Street, New York City. Ask for GASTRO-AIDS.

In response to an inquiry as regards the ministerial promise to facilitate the naturalization of the Jews serving in the Roumanian army, the Minister of War has replied that Jewish soldiers will not have to apply for naturalization individually, but a bill will be introduced which when placed on the statute book will have the effect of enrolling them all as Roumanian subjects.

A Russian ministerial order has enacted that even privileged Jews who have to change their residence from a Pale to a non-Pale town must have their permits confirmed by the Senate or Ministry. The governor-general of the Priamur district has, however, informed the Novoe Vremya that he will not permit any new Jewish settlers in the provinces intrusted to his care.

Another anti-Jewish riot took place last month at Slobodka, Kieff, when the Real Russians assaulted Jews in the streets. Four Jews—Spireit, Sokoloff, Lufer and Revis—were injured, and when the last-named called upon a constable to defend him that official struck him. An urgent message was dispatched to the governor, inviting him to take measures to maintain order.

The Society of Polish Archaeologists, in conjunction with the Polish Society of Architects, has decided to carry out the restoration of the old synagogue at Przemysl, which dates from the year 1579. The synagogue was built from the plans of the famous Italian architect Bononius, and is one of the oldest architectural monuments in Galicia. The cost of the restoration will be defrayed by the local congregation.

The Russian authorities have forbidden the Jewish vice-president of the suspended Conference of Russian Commercial Employees, M. Gunsberg, and the Jewish delegates, MM. Ehrlich, Vinaver and Nachimson, to visit or reside at St. Petersburg and Moscow. This harsh measure is a reply to the activity of the delegates at the recent conference which, at their invitation, condemned the anti-Jewish legislation. After the conference those delegates were also detained by the police.

Ritter von Raab, Protestant Bishop of Kremnitz, has just celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his pastorate. In reply to the congratulations of the local Jewish community, he stated that he drew no distinctions between the people of the locality in respect to religion, and that he had given practical expression to his sentiments, in the provisions of a trust he had created to commemorate his jubilee. This trust is intended to benefit pupils of the high school at Kremnitz, Jews as well as Christians.

Prior to the separation of the church from the state, when official relations were still maintained between the government and the various religions in France, it was by no means unusual for rabbis to receive the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor. In fact, the French rabbinate still numbers seven of its members who were decorated before 1905, the year of the separation. But at present no minister of religion, as such can receive the order. Hence, it is not on the nomination of the minister of public worship, but on that of the Grand Chancellery of the Legion of Honor, that the president of the republic has just conferred the national order on M. Emile Cahen, ex-chief rabbi of Lille, in recognition of his services as army chaplain during the war of 1870, and as a worker since his retirement in educational movements.

The Council of the University of Paris has confirmed M. Paul Mantoux in the position he has held for some months—that of professor of French history at the University of London. The council has further decided to continue at the Sorbonne the free course of lectures on the Hebrew language and literature given there for some years by M. N. Slousch. This scholar, by the way, is at present in Morocco on a scientific mission.

Dr. Felix Canter, rabbi of the congregation at Zwittau (Moravia), has received from the cardinal archbishop of Olmutz a poem written in classical Hebrew and composed in the form of an acrostic, as an acknowledgment of the rabbi's congratulations on the occasion of the jubilee of the prelate's priesthood. Zwittau is in the diocese of Olmutz, and Dr. Canter frequently holds conversations with the cardinal on religious and scientific matters.

At a recent meeting of the governing body of the Imperial College, Mr. Otto Beit informed his colleagues of his intention to found three fellowships for scientific research, to be held at the Imperial College. Mr. Beit's intention in founding these fellowships is to foster only the highest research. The fellowships will be limited to Europeans, men and women, who have graduated at universities in the British islands, colonies and dominions, or who are recognized by the trustees to be of the same standing.

Mr. Joseph Abraham Schalom, a wealthy merchant in Calcutta, has bought a site in Jerusalem on which twenty-four houses are to be built. The tenants will be Sephardic Jews and each family will have a house rent free for three years, together with a gift of $100 a year, on condition that the males shall study the Torah every day in the Yeshiba, which is to be named "Porath Joseph," after the founder. The site cost $25,000 and the houses will cost $50,000. According to a Jerusalem Jewish newspaper Mr. Schalom has deposited $300,000 with a Calcutta bank. Forty per cent. of the annual income is to be applied to the maintenance of the new houses.

At Pinchev, Poland, the rabbi has brought the boycott of Jewish goods by the peasants to a dramatic end by his advice to his community to assemble for prayers at the synagogue on the market day. The Jewish tradesmen obeyed, and the peasants, arriving with their goods, on finding the market deserted, hurried to the priest to complain of their misfortune. The priest made inquiries as to the nature of the festival which the Jews were celebrating and which necessitated their abstention from the market. The rabbi replied that the Jews were celebrating the same holiday as that which prompted the Christians on previous occasions to avoid Jewish shops. The priest immediately intervened, and the peasants apologized and promised to abandon their boycott tactics.

Young Men's Hebrew Association. Under the supervision of Rabbi Leo Mannheim, now executive director of the Y. M. H. A., the activities promise to assume a new and vital significance this fall. Increased emphasis is to be placed upon distinctive Jewish work, and it is hoped to make the Y. M. H. A. a prominent, if not dominant, force in shaping Jewish affairs in the community. Dr. Mannheim aims to awaken in the members an enthusiastic Jewish consciousness, that they may truly serve the larger interests of our people in the great problems which now demand serious attention. A systematic attempt is to be made to spread the influence of these activities to the various institutions similar in purpose to the Y. M. H. A., which are urged to join this work. To this end an inter-Y. M. H. A. league has already been organized.

This serious work will be given an early impetus Saturday evening, August 23, at a rally to be held in the association building at Ninety-second street and Lexington avenue, under the auspices of the Judea Society, which is devoted to the study of Jewish questions. Dr. Mannheim will deliver an address outlining the work which he proposes to inaugurate in the fall. Mr. Julius Drachsler will also speak. An attractive musical programme has been provided, including Miss Nita Weiss, the well-known vocalist. Refreshments will be served. Interested visitors will be cordially welcomed to this rally.

Donations to Arverne Synagogue. In response to a stirring appeal made on Tisha b'Ab by Mr. Samuel I. Hyman, vice-president, over $1,200 has been subscribed for the purpose of reducing the mortgage now held against the Derech Emunah Synagogue at Arverne, L. I.

Bendersky, Miss Helena H. Cohen, Mr. Meyer Chartiner, Mr. Ephraim Dainard, Dr. A. Elaisberg, Mr. J. Feldman, Miss Sojna Gronemann, Dr. K. Lippe, Dr. Benzion Mossinsohn, Madame Bella Pevsner, Mr. Kurt Rosenbaum, Mr. Hugo Schachtel.

Young Men's Hebrew Association of the Bronx.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association of the Bronx will wind up its summer activities with two social events—one on August 30, a dance at the boathouse—and later a lawn party upon the association's grounds. Most of the fall activities will begin on or about September 15, which is also the date set for the reopening of the Hebrew school.

Two series of lectures will be given parallel to one another throughout the season—one on civic topics, and the other on specifically Jewish topics. These lectures will take place on the first and third Sunday evenings of the month at 8 p. m. Dr. Edwin I. Goldwasser will open these lectures on Sunday evening, September 7. The topic will be "The Young Men's Hebrew Association and American Ideals."

The dignified high holiday services held last year in the auditorium of the building will be repeated during the present year, and, if possible, with some improvements. Mr. Louis Gottschall is chairman of the committee making the arrangements.

Business courses will be given this year at the association as an accommodation to the members. Excellent work is being done by the Young Folks' League along the line of sociability, and the season is opening auspiciously.

American Jewish Committee.

(Communicated.) On August 13, 1913, the Executive Committee accepted regretfully the resignation of Dr. Herbert Friedenwald as secretary. Dr. Friedenwald resigned on account of ill health. Mr. Herman Bernstein, the author, was elected secretary of the American Jewish Committee.

Philadelphia, Pa.

An interesting bit of news comes from this city in the form of an announcement just issued of the engagement of Miss Anna R. Grossman, daughter of Rabbi and Mrs. Joseph Grossman, of 503 Tasker street, Philadelphia, Pa., to Rabbi David B. Swiren, of Waterbury, Conn. Both young people have countless friends and are well known in their cities and in New York.

Miss Grossman is a young woman of great charm and ability, who has interested herself in matters of Jewish educational, social and religious life. She is a graduate of Temple University, Gratz College, and the Gratz College School of Pedagogy, and is now model teacher at the latter institution's School of Observation and Practice. Miss Grossman was the organizer of Philadelphia's first Hebrew kindergarten and Hebrew speaking school for girls, started here two years ago. In addition to this she has been active in religious work, acting as principal of the Ch'nd n Sunday school and leader of children's Sabbath services in Philadelphia, and aside from these engaging in charitable and social work.

Rabbi Swiren is a graduate of the Yeshibath Reb. Isaac E'kanan in New York. He received his secular education in New York at Columbia College. He is a thorough Talmudist and Hebrew scholar, an eloquent speaker in Yiddish, English and Hebrew. For the last two years he has been minister to the congregation at Waterbury, Conn., where his work has been unusually successful.

Thackeray's Famous Remark Recalled.

A link with the past has been removed by the death in Paris within the last few days of the widow of the late Abraham Solomon, the painter. She was a sister of the late Dr. Ernest Hart, and had resided on the Continent for many years. Abraham Solomon, who died in 1862, was an artist who achieved considerable repute in the mid-Victorian era, and was a frequent exhibitor at the Royal Academy. His picture, "Waiting for the Verdict," and its companion, "The Acquittal," as well as "First Class" and "Third Class," attracted great attention at the time they were hung, and all formed the subject for subsequent engravings. It was of Abraham Solomon that Thackeray remarked, on viewing "Waiting for the Verdict," "Here is Solomon in all his glory, but he is not E. A. D. (arrayed) like some of these."

SOCIAL.

Master Julian Bernstein, the son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Bernstein, of 102 West 119th street, New York, celebrated his birthday at the Hotel Stafford, Asbury Park, N. J., where the Bernstein family are stopping for the summer. The sun parlor and the porches of the hotel were profusely decorated with bunting, flags and flowers, and many of the young fellow's friends were present to assist in making the affair a most enjoyable one. Among those present were Debra Bernstein, Helen Kaplan, Gertrude Levy, Florence Chalmovitz, Gladys Abel, Gladys Shear, Lillian Cohen, Celia Wilensky, Ruth Salny, Estelle Natchin, Milton Levy, Irving Levy, Alfred Samuels, Irving Chalmovitz, Oscar Wilensky, James Gottesman, Harold Salny, Abie Gormansky, Gabriel Barnett, Samuel Brookbinder, Abraham Bernstein and Isidor Rosenberg. The Misses Sadie Ellis and Anna Springer were the matrons of the occasion.

The Hebrew Day Nursery of 262 Henry street, represented by Mrs. D. Malgood and Mrs. H. Lessem, gave a vaudeville and ball on Saturday, August 16, at the Inn Cafe, Arverne. The affair was a decided success socially and financially, the net proceeds amounting approximately to $1,000. This success was due to the zealous efforts of the Arrangement and Reception Committees, consisting of Mrs. Malgood, Mrs. Lessem, Miss Ruth Lessem, Mrs. A. Solomon, Mr. H. Malgood and Mr. B. Malgood.

Rev. Dr. I. Reichert, rabbi of the newly formed Congregation of Temple Emanuel, of the Bronx, is enjoying a much-needed rest at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., in the company of his wife and daughter, Natalie. They intend to leave in a day or two to go to the mountains for a few weeks and return to the city in the fall.

A successful entertainment and ball for the benefit of the Zionist National Fund was given August 13 by the Misses Pearl Friedelson, Daisy Mintz and Libby Neuman, stopping at the American Hotel, Tannersville, N. Y. It was held at the Mountain Summit Casino, the use of which was given free by Mr. Levenson, proprietor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The "Lemaan Zion."
 Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
 May I appeal to your readers on behalf of the Ophthalmic Hospital "Lemaan Zion" at Jerusalem, which is sorely in need of funds with which to carry out its beneficent work? I was in Jerusalem for the past five years and one can hardly realize the number of our coreligionists who suffer from trachoma and other diseases of the eye. Hundreds become blind or half blind annually through the lack of financial ability to journey to the European centers to receive proper treatment. This condition applies to the middle classes as well as to the poorer classes.

To ameliorate this deplorable condition the "Lemaan Zion" was established. At present it provides accommodations for twenty in-patients and a clinic for out-patients. During its short existence hundreds have been successfully treated and simply lack of funds prevents us from extending the good work.

The institution has the indorsement of the United States Consul and all the rabbinical authorities. I should be very glad to call and give full details to any of your readers who may be interested.

Very truly yours,
 JACOB BERLINSKY,
 56 Ludlow street, care S. Rosenson, New York.

Justice Sanders Resigns.

Municipal Court Justice Leon Sanders, of the Second District, who has been on the bench for ten years, has sent in his resignation to Mayor Gaynor, to take effect on September 1. Judge Sanders retires from the judgeship to take a place as vice-president and director of the Public Bank at Delancey and Ludlow streets.

Justice Sanders has been active in politics for the last fifteen years. He was a member of the Assembly before going on the bench. He is Grand Master of the Independent Order Brith Abraham and is president of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society.

Items of Interest from the National Farm School.

The harvest season at the National Farm School, at Farm School, Bucks county, Pennsylvania, is now in full swing. During the past month the students have been at work harvesting and baling about 200 tons of hay and have harvested and threshed over 500 bushels of grain. One and a half acres of peas and oats have been cut for grain for the farm school live stock. The harvesting of the grain is now practically over, and the students are constantly cultivating some thirty-nine acres of corn.

About 40 quarts of milk a day are being produced at the school at the present time. Most of the milk is shipped to the Jewish and Mount Sinai Hospitals of Philadelphia. Some of it is separated and is used for practical demonstration in handling cream for butter and in making cottage cheese. It is aimed in this department to impress upon the students absolute cleanliness in the care and handling of dairy utensils. The buckets and cans used for the milk and cream are thoroughly washed and sterilized in live steam to prevent any contamination.

Under the direction of their poultry instructor, the students are also enlarging the hen houses, so as to have room for a larger breeding flock. The students assist in much of the building that is done at the school, and in this way learn to do simple carpentering and concrete work, which will be most helpful to them later on when they are farmers in their own right.

Of special interest is the work in the horticultural department. Each year it is aimed to improve the appearance of the school grounds and to add to their attractiveness. Special attention is given to the lawns and scenic effects. A hedge has been planted at the Schoenfeld Memorial Farm No. 1, and vines have been started on all the houses and barns. The output of the greenhouses increases yearly. All of the plants used for summer decoration at the school are produced there. In the winter season hundreds of dollars' worth of cut flowers and plants are shipped to the Philadelphia markets and nearby towns. Vast quantities of vegetables and fruits are grown in the kitchen gardens and supply the boarding department with an abundance of fresh vegetables and fruits for immediate use and for canning purposes for the winter.

The work in the nursery is continuing with the usual interest and enthusiasm. Many thousands of young trees in the nursery have been propagated in the farm school green houses. This season about twenty-five hundred young evergreens were produced from the plants in the Krauskopf Memorial Circle dedicated to the memory of Henrietta Krauskopf. Through the munificence of Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Krauskopf it was possible to add to the collection this spring. This addition is an arboretum dedicated to the memory of the late Mr. B. A. Feineman, of Kansas City, Mo., and is devoted to the cultivation of ornamental trees, of which more than 6,000 have already been planted.

All of the work on the farms, in the dairy, the horticultural department, the nursery and orchards is done by the eighty-four students who are in residence at the school, under the direction and supervision of the faculty. The boys also make their own beds and keep their rooms in neat condition. In addition, they have time for recreation and sports. Health and appetites at the school are excellent.

The National Farm School is in receipt of a check for $175 from Mr. Max Lowenthal, of Rochester, N. Y., being the proceeds of a long outlawed debt, unexpectedly collected, and sent as a donation toward the running expenses of the institution. Mr. Lowenthal, in his letter, which accompanied the check, says that he feels that not enough is being done to help in the great work that the National Farm School is doing, in view of the fact that so many worthy applicants for admission have to be turned away, by reason of lack of funds.

Hebrew Political Clubs.

We are not aware of the fact that an election is soon to take place in the city of Chicago, but that does not deter the Jews who are in politics for the plums and for revenue only to get together and make a noise and at the same time fools of themselves and hurt the cause of the Jew by forming Jewish Republican or Jewish Democratic or Jewish Bull Moose Clubs. It is never the Jews of high standing who are guilty of such action. It is the professional peanut politician who plays upon the credulity of the unsophisticated who is responsible for this outrage, for this is what it is. There is no redress for the well-meaning Jew who takes exception to this damnable procedure of forming Jewish political clubs. He can but let the public know that these clubs do not receive his sanction and are the result of the tricky maneuverings of the politician for revenue only. Announcement is made in one of the Chicago dailies that the Illinois Jewish Republican Club was organized last Saturday night at 3353 Ogden avenue. Joseph W. Schulman was elected president; Charles Stern, Edward Fager, Dr. S. S. Winner and Jack Kruezlitch, vice-presidents; Paul W. Rothenberg, secretary; B. Schulman, treasurer, and H. B. Krumholz, sergeant-at-arms. The information is also given that three hundred and fifty applications for membership were received. The "Israelite" does not know a single one of the officers of the newly formed Republican club and it does not want to know them. It knows that this Republican club has no right to exist as a distinctively Jewish organization. It knows that the men at the head of it are not guiding its destinies out of purely disinterested motives. It discontenances every Jewish political club and denounces them as hurtful to the good cause and the good name of the Jew. No self-respecting Jew can afford to affiliate himself with an organization of this kind. They are not "kosher."—Rev. T. Shanfarber, in Chicago Israelite.

Washington Man Got His.

Edward Fox, who is employed in the varnishing department of the Cornish factory, at Washington, N. J., is generally regarded as a quiet man; that is, when he is on the water wagon. He has occupied a seat on the wagon for quite a long time, but when the factory closed down this week for the annual vacation week Fox could not find enough to occupy his attention, so he again took to the booze. On Wednesday evening, with a cargo of grog aboard, he started out on East Stewart avenue, and when he came to the tailoring establishment of David Berry, a Russian Jew, he challenged him to come out in the street, promising to break his neck as soon as he did so. Berry didn't mind the threats very much, but he didn't like the names Fox called him, and when his words became too hot Berry politely stepped out of his place of business, landed a healthy wallop on the point of Fox's chin and then walked back to his work. Fox went down for the count, and in falling, twisted one of his legs beneath him, breaking it in two places. He was taken to the office of Dr. Charles B.

Jehudah Halevi

By Alter Abelson

Meteors glowed and glared upon my sight—
They blazed and beamed like stars. Across the sky
They flashed and flared and waned again in night,
"Bright beads, bright bubbles of heaven they are," said I.

And then I saw a steadfast light that shone more starry, bright and fair,
The more I looked or strained my sight,
And lo! a true fixed star and rare.

Jehudah Halevi, starry mind,
You are a true fixed star; pure gold
And pearls within your heart are shrined;
You are a sun; of Titan mould.

God dreamt of beauty, faith, and song,
And holiness; and lo, your soul did stand
Near Maccabee, God's warrior, strong,
And wept, and sang of Holyland.

God's lark and nightingale you were,
And Zion's, love's, and virtue's knight;
Your pillar of song, on exile's shore,
Your Zionide, made bright our night.

What potent magic, wondrous charm
Within the simples that you gave!
But far more balm for hurt and harm,
Within your songs that soothe and save.

Ah, if a potion you could brew,
Bewitched and charmed as is your lay,
The dead, it would revive anew,
The living, they would live for aye.

You are God's song, His lily, light,
And rose. Your words are dew and tears;
You lived on wings with heaven in sight,
In you have lived and live your years.

Have you the curtains of heaven raised,
And heard the angel-choirs sing,
Or entered Paradise where blazed
Their flaming swords? Or whence your wing?

Or have you golden stairways spied
At Beth-el, pillowed on a stone?
Perchance with Israel's Genius vied,
And made the realms of dream your own?

What Orients kissed your blood, and wooed!
What ancient vintage ran like fire
Within your veins! How rainbow-hued
With tears and Raptures, is your lyre!

God took the morning's golden beams,
And shaped therefrom a harp, and blew
Therein the music of His dreams—
And lo! the Rapture that was you!

There are whom patrons, powers, gold,
Or causes, great, make known to time,
Often these suns are sparks but bold,
But you made greatness more sublime.

True heir of David's kingly lyre,
A Heine with a soul were you.
With Loncoln's love and Dante's fire,
You were Isaiah born anew.

Who was that Arab that could kill
While you on Holyland have gazed,
And sang God's song by Zion's rill?
In what Gehenna was he raised?

O Spain, Halevi's native land!
Halevi's folk, how could you slay,
Or hound or exile? His name doth brand,
And haloe you, and shame for aye.

As shed their leaves, the forests yon,
To take new Spring with ecstasy—
So you, earth's vanities doffed, to don
Your shining immortality.

You, too, have left no grave, as he
Who first beheld God's face divine;
God kissed you, and your soul was free
To join the aureoled souls like thine.

You, too, with prophet's magic cloak
Have soared in chariot of fire;
As he, who thunder-and-lightning spoke,
But you ascended heavens, higher.

You, too, have stood on Pisgah's height,
And saw through mists of tears of glee,
The Promised Land, the Future Light,
The dream, the Israel to be—

O'er ruins two, has mourned your muse;
How would you mourn the sadder hour,
When we, our dream begin to lose—
When Judah barter's God for power?

O, for your golden harp to-day!
O, for a soul, so heavenly, meek,
To sing us some heroic lay—
We were not then so sad, and weak.

Death, you are life, since Judah's breath
You took. His living glories ray
From all that light, and music hath,
And love, the light that's more than day.

From out the dungeons, where they pine,
Like ruin in ruin, the chosen few—
Their balm is David's psalm divine,
And light that shines from bards like you.

Your full-sphered worth we did not know
When cherub-like you walked the earth,
And now we raise no shaft for show,
For now we feel too much your worth.

Within your heaven of fadeless spring,
I see you leave God's throne, and all
The raptured seraphim that sing—
And nigh a starry shining wall,

You bow your head, and strive to stay
The sea of tears your eyes outpour;
And then I see you brush away
A star, and make in heaven a door,

And from that skyey door of light,
Like heaven in heaven, I see you stand,
And weep o'er ruins. Your tears alight
On Israel, and Holyland.

O, Hebrew bard, what sigh within your sky,
Your peace, O singer, half thereof is strife,
And half your hope is fear, your song's half sigh,
Your heaven weeps. It is a heaven of life.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND.

(Exclusive Correspondence to THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

The Rocksavage-Sassoon Wedding—A Look Back at Other Similar Unions—Elizabeth de Bruin on Judaism and Womanhood—Jews at the International Medical Convention—A Few Words on Ehrlich.

London, Aug. 8, 1913.

It is not often that a fashionable wedding has so romantic and even exotic a flavor as that which was celebrated on August 6 at the registry office, St. George's, Hanover Square, London, between the only daughter of the late Sir Edward Sassoon and Lord Rocksavage, the heir of Lord Cholmondeley. The alliance is interesting too, as being the only one of its kind since Lord Rosebery astonished the world by marrying the Rothschild heiress in church. Miss Sassoon is a clever girl, with characteristics from parents who both died in the prime of life. Since her parents she has lived with her only brother in the huge caravansary in Park Lane that was built by Barney Barnato and adorned in his time with the rather alarming statues that were known in Mayfair as "the petrified shareholders." (These statues now adorn the Steyne at Brighton.) When standing as candidate for Hythe the late Sir Edward Sassoon was questioned, with a disregard of the privacies of life that is rather uncommon in the English election, as to his race and religion. He answered: "I am a Jew, and proud of it." Lady Sassoon was a Rothschild of Paris.

The Rocksavage-Sassoon marriage is the first case of the son of a great peer making a wealthy match through a registry office. Even the runaway marriage of the late Lord Hastings took place in church. With Lord Rosebery, the late E. Yorke, and the late Lord Battersea, although the brides did not become Christians, the marriages took place in the church and at the registry office. When the Duc de Grammont and Prince Wagram married the sisters of the present Lady Rothschild the brides had previously become Roman Catholics. The synagogue is forbidden to mixed marriages, and, as the mother of the bride was a very strict Jewess, the daughter probably thought it was due to her memory not to go to a Christian church. There is considerable feeling among orthodox Jews about the marriage, especially that it should have happened on one of the "nine days."

While on the matter of these great families a note might be made of a serious blackmailing charge against a young German here. He sent a threatening letter to Lord Rothschild, demanding $152,000 in bank notes. There is something queer about the prisoner, who is only twenty years of age, tall and well dressed, and described as a book-keeper. When arrested he said that he was very sorry for what he had done and continued: "I have been living on my mother so long, and I wanted to get some to help her and keep myself. I thought if I asked him for a big lot I should have got something. I never would kill or hurt Lord Rothschild."

Your correspondent has made frequent reference to the way in which Jewish questions get freely ventilated in the English daily, weekly and monthly press. Another example of this is in the August number of the Westminster Review, one of the four or five most important 60-cent monthly surveys of important public questions. Elizabeth de Bruin writes on Judaism and womanhood. In it she points out that the history of the Jewish Church presents much interesting matter to the champions of the woman's cause, and if woman's place among the ancient Jews has progressed in a rather erratic manner, it has progressed nevertheless and in almost direct proportion to the modern interpretation of a very ancient faith. While more modern religions have starved a woman's soul as if it were a thing apart from her body, the Jewish conception denies this divorce. What is from a purely Jewish conception the ideal status granted to women? Is it one which allows for the fullest development of the woman? How comes the position which Judaism has assigned to woman to be what it is? These and similar questions evolve from a consideration, in a purely practical common-sense manner, of the place occupied by the Jewish woman.

After a retrospect which dips into history and argues that the trammels on Jewish women from the orthodox point of view were occasioned in part by the fact that the Jewish conception of womanhood was colored by the Eastern atmosphere, the writer proceeds to a study of the status of woman in the present Jewish policy. She finds it to be almost an uncompromising policy of exclusion of women from every sphere but the domestic. In deciding this somewhat negative work Judaism has attributed to women, one finds at least one contributive factor, namely, the education of girls. In contrast to that of the boy, it lacks solidity and definite purpose. While it is considered an absolute essential to the boy, in the case of the girl it is one of mere acquirement. And even here the domestic aspect is emphasized and the broader application is almost eliminated. The result of such half-hearted measures in the education of woman-kind shows a kindred spirit of indifference in matters pertaining to the synagogue. Here, again, woman's function is more in the nature of a follower rather than of a leader. Indeed, the Oriental trait in Jewish religious life is but the centre of the circle of woman's disabilities. One could enlarge on many of the phases of Jewish life which contribute to the secondary place assigned to Jewish women in communal activities, but the more important ones help to demonstrate more clearly that a rigidly narrow system of education has produced a limited sphere for activities.

Following upon this she points out that there are signs of the dawn of a new spirit. The Jewish nation once more is confronted with the old-recurring proof that with all its commendable spirit of self-preservation, time modifies and enlarges. The outside clamoring for woman's enfranchisement has made itself felt within the portals of the Jewish community. The most recent testimony to this is the formation of a Jewish League for Woman Suffrage. It is difficult to prophesy the possibilities of a movement in its infancy, but even if this particular movement were doomed to failure it would have been significant if only as an expression of the attitude of mind of a people upon a question of such vital importance. This is not a solitary pronouncement against a destructive conservatism. With the introduction of a liberal interpretation of an ancient faith, the pruning of non-essentials is presenting to modern Jewry a practical religion, which cannot divorce social and political questions that affect its adherents. Further, this ideal is the very spirit of liberal Judaism. The history of Reform Judaism clearly points to woman's enfranchisement as far as the synagogue is concerned. The Reform Synagogue of Berkeley street, London, has its two women voters, as is the case also with the more advanced Liberal Synagogue of Hill street.

The conservative synagogues are less accessible to the new spirit. But very recently the Jewish League for Woman Suffrage is trying to affect an alteration in the act of Parliament which governs the United Synagogue by the omission of the word "male" from one of the clauses the effect being women would thereby be enabled to vote at synagogue elections.

The writer your correspondent is quoting concludes as follows: "This attempt to break down antiquated barriers is one which, in a community of conservative thought, must meet with bitter opposition. The Jewish woman is but the resultant of the two, opposite forces of Eastern tradition and Western culture. Far from sacrificing her religious faith for a political force, the latter will help to strengthen the former. To be true to the spirit of Judaism implies the combating of unrighteousness in all its forms. The noble conception which Judaism has for motherhood, the lofty poetic praise for the woman of worth," the sacredness of family and the abhorrence of all that pertains to slavery—shall these remain mere words?"

The magnificent international convention of medical men which is now sitting in London contains the names of many distinguished Jews. Prominent among them is Professor Paul Ehrlich, who delivered the important "General Address on Pathology." This choice of Professor Ehrlich is regarded as a signal honor by the Jews here, especially as it is paid to a man who struggled long against an unbelieving world for recognition of his particular views. His hour of triumph has now come. He has well summed up his own professional career in the following words:

"For twenty-five years I have been endeavoring to convert the principle into practice that a medicinal substance can only act upon the bodily system into which it has been incorporated, and now, finally, after long, painfully troublesome labor, I have succeeded in obtaining acknowledgment of the therapy. For a long time I remained isolated in my opinions and endeavors; there was only my cousin, Carl Weigert, who unfortunately died too soon, who spurred me on again and again not to lose heart because of my failures."

Ehrlich stands to-day as the greatest exponent of the application of the inductive method to scientific medical research. The proof of the soundness of the principles which he has laid down, and of the methods he has adopted, lies in the brilliant achievements of this Jew of Frankfurt in the field of therapeutics, or curative medicine. For very many years he followed the path he had himself chosen, and his highly original and suggestive theories, worked out and amplified by the inductive method, have stimulated many epoch-making inquiries, and have been the basis of many far-reaching researches. His work on "immunity" and his "side-chain theory" are brilliant examples of his method. His followers were few till he announced to the world the discovery of a drug, that bids fair to exterminate the greatest scourge to which mankind is victim. His great discovery, be it emphasized, was no conventional accident, but the rational and logical outcome of organized and well-thought-out experiment, and Ehrlich brings the result forward to prove the "establishment of the fact that it is possible, unhesitatingly and confidently, to find a specific and etiologically active remedy for protozoal diseases in a chemo-therapeutic way." His remedy, the result of ceaseless labors, he presented to the world, and mankind, without distinction of race, creed, loudly acknowledges its gratitude. Till within very recent times Jews, as a race, were said to be comparatively immune from this disease which has made such ravages among the other races of the world.

YOUMANS HATTER
Has opened a new store in the Arcade of the Longacre Building on 42d Street at Broadway, opposite the Knickerbocker Hotel.

With the "annual" sponsoring the orthodox summer services at Arverne and Sharon Springs, the question occurs to us, how many members of synagogues affiliated with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, or of those maintaining rabbis belonging to the Central Conference, attend these services? We forbear from supplying the answer to our query, but our readers will not be at a loss to compute the simple addition of two plus two.

President Wilson's announced selection of Henry Morgenthau for appointment as American Ambassador to the Sublime Porte is to be regarded in a highly favorable light. Mr. Morgenthau is a gentleman of excellent reputation and respectable attainments and will, no doubt, creditably acquit himself in his diplomatic surroundings. Incidentally, his nomination for Constantinople preserves the traditional association of an American Jew with that office.

We rejoice to learn that the Rev. E. B. M. Browne was able in apparently undiminished vigor to make his customary annual pilgrimage to the tomb of General U. S. Grant and to tell the newspapers of his feat. Mr. Browne makes it a practice to go to Grant's Tomb on the anniversary of the great soldier's funeral. We sincerely hope that Mr. Browne will be spared to undertake this melancholy duty even after "Taps" have been sounded for the very last surviving soldier of our Civil War.

The newest kind of an "open" or "free" synagogue hails from Little Rock, Ark. Here the seats are allotted on the "first come, first served" plan on all days except on the high holidays in the autumn and on Shebuoth. On the day of the "solemn rite of confirmation" and on the great Yomim Noraim, when one might well long to be in a house of worship even like this "free" synagogue, the "free" principle has no application. At such times as the fane is "full of emptiness," of course, the seats are "free." Hence, the question will not down: What good flows from all these "free" synagogues? They are not "free" in reality, for those worshipping therein must pay for the inestimable privilege. The only thing that is free about them, perchance, is the pulpit: rabbis of this kind of congregations affect the "free," which is the open and unbridled, tongue in all their pulpit utterances.

We are prepared to accept Rabbi Herman Abramowitz's opinion that the Dominion of Canada is well able, in the physical sense, to admit to her territory all the immigrants who will knock at her doors throughout many a year to come. Canada is a fair land and is now in the flood of an unexampled prosperity that has made and is making her securities in every branch of trade industry the marvel of the investment field. Hence on the theoretical side Canada, even more than the United States, offers a home to Jewish refugees from countries of persecution provided they are willing to work. The Dominion, further, can do and is doing much to return the Jew to his traditional calling of agriculturist. Rabbi Abramowitz has now been in Montreal for over a decade, is thoroughly informed on Canadian-Jewish conditions, and knows whereof he speaks. There is, however, one element in the Jewish situation in Canada that has made itself felt in immigration matters heretofore and will continue to do so in the future. It is the anti-Semitic problem which Rabbi Abramowitz would confine exclusively to the Province of Quebec, but which we are inclined to extend all over Old Canada, that is, over the entire eastern half of the country. The evidences of this are, in our opinion, not far to seek, and it behooves the leaders of Canadian Jewry to use all the legitimate means at their command to lay this pretentious and terrifying ghost. With this accomplished all other questions affecting our co-religionists living under the beneficent sway of the Duke of Connaught will have been solved.

INEPT DIPLOMACY

IT is a pity that Secretary of State Bryan's proposal to the Balkan peace plenipotentiaries miscarried. Mr. Bryan sought to have inserted in the treaty of Bucharest a stipulation securing civil and religious liberty to the inhabitants of territory to be ceded or annexed as a result of the outcome of the recent conflict.

We repeat, it is a pity that Mr. Bryan, acting with entirely laudable intentions as the result of representations made by American Jews, could not carry his point. Such secrecy enshrouded his acts and negotiations that we are quite at a loss to whom to attribute the blame for his failure. At the threshold a mistake may have been made, however, in not initiating the discussion of the subject by means of a motion of one of the plenipotentiaries instead of independently through our diplomats. If Bulgaria, consistently friendly to Jewish interests within her borders or abroad for more than a quarter of a century, for instance, had instructed her representative of his own motion to lay stress upon the matter in question, some tangible result might have been attained, and the snub—which the newspapers report was administered to this country—avoided.

Then, too, this problem of Roumania, for the Balkan situation is, so far as the Jews go, exclusively Roumanian in character, seems to be above and beyond the treaty stage. We say this in view of the fact that the Treaty of Berlin in its 44th Article is eloquent on this question of the treatment of native Jews in the Balkans, and that this very article is quite a dead letter.

Unfortunately the United States is unable to compel, through the usual channels of diplomacy, any sort of compliance with the Treaty of Berlin on the part of Roumania. This nation was not a participant in the negotiations of 1878, and patently has nothing to do directly with the present peace proposals. Hence, if Secretary Bryan would act in the transcendent spirit of one of his predecessors, the late John Hay, in behalf of the Jews in Roumania, other more striking and much more direct methods of intervention should be employed.

What these are we need not detail. The cause and the subject alike are worthy of them. Will America continue to stand forth as the friend of the homeless and the oppressed throughout the world? Mr. Bryan can return the answer!

Rabbi Moses Hyamson told an appropriate audience in England the other day that an offer to finance pastoral visits on his part to orthodox Jewish congregations outside New York had been made to him by a public-spirited philanthropist of this city. Thus it appears that Rabbi Hyamson is considering the active extension of his work when he takes up his permanent residence among us. Of this we are glad, for such pastoral visits, whether made by Rabbi Hyamson or by others equally capable and experienced, would be of considerable service to the cause of traditional Judaism. While we trust that Rabbi Hyamson will have the opportunity to enter upon an effort of this nature, we should be willing to have him act for the immediate present only as the director of the enterprise, leaving to other orthodox rabbis the duty of making the visits. This we say because we feel that Rabbi Hyamson should have ample time to become accustomed to his new environment. But the idea, we repeat, is an excellent one and should be brought to an early fruition.

The questionable propriety involved in claiming credit for summer services, whether held under its auspices or not, by the extension department of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Central Conference of American Rabbis, was commented upon by us some weeks since. We did not for a moment believe that our remarks would have any effect at all on the pretentious bureaucrats of Cincinnati, and, indeed, their latest news bulletin confirms our worst fears. For, in this we find the orthodox service maintained for many years now, entirely on his own initiative, by Rabbi Bernard Drachman at Sharon Springs duly noted, as if, forsooth, Rabbi Drachman and the "annual picnic" could have anything at all in common. We shall not repeat the words we used in the case of Rabbi H. Pereira Mendes, in the face of this new instance of hollow sham and empty pretence on the part of this extension division. We merely call attention to the confession made by the responsible leaders of this department: "We are endeavoring to popularize the practice of holding services at summer resorts. For this purpose it is immaterial whether the services are reform or orthodox." An attempt to produce results by means of suppressio veri or suggestio falsi is foredoomed to failure. One cannot compel respect for one's achievements unless they are honest, fair and altogether "on the level." If the extension division reports on summer services held by orthodox rabbis, who acted without its assistance and entirely apart from its active interference, it is simply fulfilling the functions of a news-gathering bureau. This it scarcely is, and the leaders of the reform wing must soon realize how sorry a figure they are cutting under circumstances such as these.

MORAL CAUSATION

והיה עקב האמעון את המשפטים האלה... וואחך וברך והרכך:
 "Wherefore it shall come to pass, if ye hearken to these judgments... that he will love thee, and bless thee, and multiply thee."
 (Deut. vii, 12, 13).

THE discussion that follows hinges upon the proper interpretation of two words in the text: Aykev tishm'un. The accepted English version has it: Wherefore, if ye hearken. But the English Wherefore is a colorless and altogether inadequate rendering of the Hebrew Aykev; and, therefore, let us trace the latter back to its origin. Aykev is related to the word meaning "Heel," and has much the same force as our English idiom: "At the heels of." The message of the text, hence, is: Reward follows at the heels of Obedience. Reward follows right closely and inevitably, even as effect follows cause. Plant a seed in the soil, and moisture and sunshine will form a powerful team to pull the feeble germ from under the resisting clod. In the universe a multitude of causes pull their effects after them by bands that are as insubstantial yet powerful as the sun rays that draw out the seed into finer growth; and even thus does a righteous deed draw after it, by invisible yet unbreakable bands, its due reward. In a word, causation is true not only in the physical world but also in the moral world. The term Aykev proclaims the doctrine of Moral Causation.

Put in this form, the thought may appear a cold enough philosophic proposition. But remember the many lives that have been plunged into abysmal despair, because of the fact that though pure and upright, they were steeped in the direst sufferings, while at the same time mocked by the grim sight of lives which, though, nay oft because, wicked, basked in the dazzling light of prosperity. Prophets and Psalmists; Job and Jeremiah; some of the finest intellects of mankind, while grappling with the riddle of life, have oft, in moments of unspeakable anguish, been tormented by the paradox of the prosperity of the wicked and the sufferings of the righteous. With these men, the problem here discussed was not a mere matter of cold speculation. It touched their lives; it racked their souls; it threatened to wreck their faith; it filled their existence with the horrors of hell. Had the assurance contained in the word Aykev, but come to them in those terrible moments when the mockery of their fate stood before them like a grinning skeleton, they would have been spared much torture and we should never have listened to those sublime accents of woe that cry out of the world's Literature of Disenchantment. But this simple assurance was no longer theirs. It was too primitive; and though undoubtedly magnificent—the entire experience of mankind gainsaid it. They could no longer believe that between right and reward there is such an iron-bound nexus as between cause and effect. They could no longer believe that the forces of the universe stood at the beck and call of the good man; that winds blew, that dews pearly, that clouds rolled, that skies smiled, that fields flowered—at the will of the good man. They could no longer believe all this—but to their ancestors who entered Canaan, what a comforting assurance that a righteous man held Destiny in the hollow of his hand; that he was, in this immediate, direct manner, the arbiter of fate.

Detractors of the Jewish Bible are in the habit of proving its alleged inferiority by this very promise of material rewards for righteous deeds. They consider this a bait—as if the Israelites had to be bribed into goodness. What they failed to see is the spirit underlying this promise. By it morality is placed on a very high plane indeed. For what does this promise mean but that morality masters the very forces of nature? The sweep of the cyclone over the raging sea is mighty and majestic; but more majestic and mighty than the strongest of natural manifestations is the hand that doeth righteousness, the mouth that speaketh truth, the heart that designeth naught but good. Powerful is the chain of cause and effect that is wound around the universe, coiling in and out the pathways of heaven and holding stars in their places, but the most powerful link in this chain is morality! We praise the Greeks for their early intellectual achievement in laying down the fundamental concept of an universe governed by the inviolable law of cause and effect; why not praise the far more stupendous intellectual achievement of the ancient Israelites who fitted into the chain of mere physical causation links of morality, links of godliness?...

That they clothed their belief of moral causation in a primitive guise; that they conceived of such a close connection between nature and morality as we may not hold, is beside the point. The main achievement was to place man in the midst of the resisting forces of the world and proclaim him master thereof! To this truth we too may hold fast. Master he is—tho' not in an immediate, direct manner, for nature will always resist man. But master he is, not by lashing nature into obedience, but by rising superior to natural obstacles. Master he is, not by subduing winds and waves, but by subduing his lower self. And though the sky remain brazen and the soil drought-encrusted; though fields remain bare of fruit and flower and he be doomed to privation and suffering, man, the Master, will cause Righteousness to rain down upon the earth, till the desert blooms with the flowers of kindness and life is made beautiful through human love and human self-sacrifice.

WOLFSON'S IMPERIAL ARVERNE, LONG ISLAND

Beautifully located, close to the ocean, on Gaston avenue. Thoroughly renovated. Reservations may now be made. Open for reception of guests from June 1. Table boarders accommodated.

Our excellence of cuisine is too well known to need further comment, as well as the observance of the Jewish dietary laws in all its details, under the personal care of Mrs. Wolfson and myself. Endorsed by Rabbi M. S. Margolies, of Cong. Kehilath Jeshurun.

Invariably at this season of the year one is treated to the spectacle of having Jews frantically proclaiming their racial and religious ties to the heavens. These men are quite unheard of in the highways and byways of the community throughout the rest of the year, but now they bestir themselves. It is not the spirit of the advancing penitential season, however, which moves them to make their declaration! They are candidates for partisan nominations for public office; hence their anxiety. Now and then some, "true-blue" Jew is a political stalking-horse, but he is only the exception proving the rule.

Jews in the summer time are the same to all intents and purposes all the world over. Here we have a staff writer of The Jewish Chronicle registering a complaint against what he terms the "over-dressing" of our female co-religionists in country hotels, and thus explaining the desire of some English Jews to spend their holidays amid non-Jewish surroundings. This feeling pervades certain classes of Jews in our own country. Let a summer resort be conducted under Jewish auspices and some of our people will studiously avoid it, no matter how excellent are the accommodations provided there. They do not justify their action perhaps because of the "over-dressing" at such hostleries, but rather because they find literally a Jewish environment to be irksome in the extreme. It is not a matter of argument and proof, nor one of prejudice pure and simple with them; it is a question of psychology, wholly temperamental in its nature.

The Hebrew Citizens' Association of the Fourth Ward of the Borough of Queens is another one of those miscegenated monstrosities of mingled religion and politics against which we have protested so often. To make matters worse—since its nominal existence would be evil enough—at this juncture it declares through the stately method of formal resolutions that the Governor of the State is now being "crucified" by his enemies. Thus its leaders exhibit their Americanism and Judaism very strikingly! The question of the Governor's guilt or innocence of the charges of impeachment preferred against him is now sub judice, and it is the present duty of all good citizens, Jews or Gentiles, to await the outcome of the trial, without rushing in where angels fear to tread. Meanwhile, it is a part of their proper responsibility to render a cheerful obedience to the constituted and constitutional officers of government.

We look upon the resolutions passed by the International Congress of Liberal Religionists at Paris and the International Medical Congress at London, respectively, protesting against the continued currency of the ritual-murder fable and Russia's disreputable conduct of the Beilis case as important in that they register in unmistakable terms the enlightened world's thoughts upon the subjects covered. Russia was probably represented by delegates at both congresses, and these men must have gone away from the meetings deeply mortified by the views entertained and expressed of their country and government by the leaders in two or more divisions of the scientific globe. So, these resolutions, having no special virtue of their own, will be able to effect some good.

President Woodrow Wilson has not as yet selected the new American Ambassador to the Czar, and the country has at this writing no inkling as to the identity of the gentleman who is being considered for the post. We hope that the President, who fully comprehends the grave and somewhat difficult questions his representative to Russia must meet, will choose a man with red blood in his veins, one who will worthily, faithfully and whole-heartedly stand up for America and all her citizens of every race and creed at St. Petersburg.

Dr. Snowman, of London, holds that the congested surroundings of the vast majority of Jewish city dwellers are responsible for the nervous disorders to which we as a people are peculiarly prone. Alcoholism is not a characteristic of our race, but this, by the same observer's testimony, is due to our environment, not to inherit racial superiority. These views commend themselves by their sanity to the approval of all men. The ghetto has had much to do in the development of Jewish character and the crowded Jewish districts in metropolitan cities to-day are direct descendants of the ghettos of the Middle Ages. We speak of the "mark of the ghetto" as responsible for some of the defects in modern Jewish personalities: this is no empty phrase in the light of the researches of psychologists and anthropologists.

The unseemly scramble for the choice judicial nominations, in which so many excellent Fusionists of all creeds were recently engaged, shows that "man wants but little here below, but wants that little long." In all the walks of life poor old human nature is the same.

MEN'S SUMMER SUITS.

The propaganda made during the present summer for lightweight clothing for men has made quite a good deal of progress. More suits of light texture have been worn than in any summer for many years past. This is a sensible innovation.

There is no reason why men should not wear linen suits as well as those of pongee instead of flannel or serge which, no matter what the weight may be, are a burden on our hot days. L'AIGLON.

A Jewish Rosalind

By Euphemia

Fie, fie, is that the love, the rev'rence you profess—
Make not my name a jest; how know you others have No sweethearts just as sweet as me you think?
Or, granted that I am as dear and rightly dear,
Can you the world convince that you the best have found?

Be temperate, good friend, let not your voice, your pen,
As in a whirlwind carry you away; my name,—
Pronounce it not if you would win my heart;
Our Sages call him mighty who his nature rules;
The Better—"Yetser Tob"—as well as "Yetser Ra."

Therefore, dear Roland, if you love me as you say,
Within your breast retain the thoughts you think of me;
Except to me of course, reveal them not.

To me reveal them if you will and must; for then
I'd show the kindness human shows to humankind.

For so devoid of kindness am I not—to say,
"Withhold from her you love that her alone you love."
That me you love I cannot wicked call,
Though hard it is to put on paper my response,
Response that's seemly from a maid to ardent youth.

It has been said (may Heaven such a jest forgive!),
'Tis man proposes—woman, she disposes. Now
Bethink you what a burden this doth place,
Imposes on the so-called weaker sex—it says,
"To him that's good in their own eyes let them be wives."

This precept calleth forth the powers of mind and heart
Of women who the right pursue and questions ask,
As, "Means he what he says—I grant he does;
But know I he's for me, in truth, and I for him:
Do his capacities, his thoughts with mine agree?"

Another form in which our question frames itself:
"Is he the other half that cries incessantly,
'Come, make me whole,' whereunto I'd respond
In gladsome tones, 'I feel the same,—complete I'll be
When thou and I one destiny together share?'"

Restrain thy nature, friend, and listen well to me,
For I'm to speak according to the custom; yet
I know it not—the answer, shall't be "Yes"—
The word of assent short with meaning, import fraught,
When once it issues, back can never be recalled.

And wherefore should I not say "Yes" and add thereto,
"The love that's promised ev'ry maid (and am I not
A maid, as such, entitled to such love?—
That love hath come, and you, the subject, object now, Possessor shall be called"—I ask and answer "Yes."

'Till that from me such permit you receive, kind friend,
Be good in this—to better nature true—to me:
In public places, nor in forests thick
Where naught but lions wild, non-readers, roam,
Do not inscribe my name, nor thoughts, conceits that surge.

Such follies, pardon me if I a strong word use,
Belong to those who lived in darker ages—gone!
To me alone how sweet I am, how good,
How beautiful (if that suit you), but not to men
Divulge; for "honored is a princess in her home."

Why Jews Do Not Play Professional Ball.

"The question is repeatedly asked," remarked President Ebbetts, of Brooklyn, "why there are so few Hebrews in professional ball. In answering that question I will first call attention to the fact that Scotchmen and New England Yankees are also extremely scarce in the professional game. They are out of baseball for the same reason that the Jews aren't in it, and this is why, in my opinion: When the game first took on a professional form it was not a highly paid occupation. The players got but little money for half a year's work, and the old-time clubs were filled mainly by adventurous, sport-loving Irishmen. The Scotch, Hebrews and Yankees couldn't see that kind of a proposition at all, and consequently paid no attention to the game. As baseball grew and the salaries increased many thrifty young Germans entered the ranks; then college men were attracted both by the sport and the money; next the American Indian took to the game and a few Poles and Slovaks joined the teams. But the Scotch, Jews and Yankees, deeply absorbed in mercantile pursuits, had by this time forgotten even that the game existed. It will be different in a few years, when the kids now playing on the lots are grown. Then you'll see an influx of Scotch and Jewish players; lots and lots of them, too, I'm thinking."

THE PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF NEW YORK, by the Grace of God Free and Independent, to Adolph Messner, Adelheida Newman, David Messner, Gussie Friedman, Herman Levine, Charles Levine, Joseph Levine, the legatees, heirs and next of kin of Hugo E. Messner, deceased, send Greeting: Whereas Herman Levine, of the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last Will and Testament of Hugo E. Messner, late of the County of New York, deceased, thereon and each of you are cited to appear before the Surrogate of our County of New York, at his office in the County of New York, on the 18th day of September, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of the said last Will and Testament. And such of you as are hereby cited, as are under the age of twenty-one years, are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding. In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the Seal of the Surrogate's Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. [L. S.] Witness, Hon. John P. Cohalan, Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said County, the 18th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. DANIEL J. DOWDNEY, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court. MEYER D. SEGEL, Attorney for Petitioner, 63 Park Row, New York City.

EXPLANATION—MATTER IN ITALICS IS NEW. STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section seven of article one of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next general election in this State to be held on the fourth day of November, nineteen hundred and thirteen. MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section seven of article one of the constitution, relative to taking private property for public use. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session of nineteen hundred and twelve duly adopted a resolution proposing an amendment to section seven of article one of the constitution, relative to taking private property for public use; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That section seven of article one of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 7. When private property shall be taken for any public use, the compensation to be made therefor when such compensation is not made by the state, shall be ascertained by a jury, or by the supreme court with or without a jury, but not with a referee, or by not less than three commissioners appointed by a court of record, as shall be prescribed by law. Private roads may be opened in the manner to be prescribed by law; but in every case the necessity of the road and the amount of all damage to be sustained by the opening thereof shall be first determined by a jury of freeholders, and such amount, together with the expenses of the proceeding, shall be paid by the person to be benefited. General laws may be passed permitting the owners or occupants of agricultural lands to construct and maintain for the drainage thereof, necessary drains, ditches and dykes upon the lands of others, under proper restrictions and with just compensation, but no special laws shall be enacted for such purposes. The legislature may authorize cities to take more land and property than is needed for actual construction in the laying out, widening, extending or relocating parks, public places, highways or streets; provided, however, that the additional land and property so authorized to be taken shall be no more than sufficient to form suitable building sites abutting on such park, public place, highway or street. After so much of the land and property has been appropriated for such park, public place, highway or street as is needed therefor, the remainder may be sold or leased. § 2. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, May 2, 1913.—The foregoing resolution was duly passed, two-thirds of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, MARTIN H. GLYNN, President. State of New York, In Assembly, March 26, 1913.—The foregoing resolution was duly passed, two-thirds of all the members elected to the Assembly, ALFRED E. SMITH, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript thereof, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-second day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. [L. S.] MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State. FORM FOR SUBMISSION OF AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

Shall the proposed amendment to Section Seven of Article One of the Constitution, designated in the election notice as Amendment Number One, in relation to the method of ascertaining compensation on taking private property for public use, and empowering the legislature to authorize municipalities to condemn property in excess of the amount actually needed for public parks, streets and places, be approved?

EXPLANATION—MATTER IN ITALICS IS NEW. STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section fourteen of article six of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next general election in this State to be held on the fourth day of November, nineteen hundred and thirteen. MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER THREE. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section fourteen of article six of the constitution, in relation to the county courts. Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That section fourteen of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 14. The existing county courts are continued, and the judges thereof now in office shall hold their offices until the expiration of their respective terms. In the county of Kings there shall be [two] four county judges. The number of county judges in any county may also be increased, from time to time, by the legislature, to such number that the total number of county judges in any one county shall not exceed one for every two hundred thousand, or major fraction thereof, of the population of such county, [and the additional county judge shall be chosen at the next general election held after the adoption of this article.] The additional county judges in the county of Kings shall be chosen at the general election held in the first odd-numbered year after the adoption of this amendment. The additional county judges whose offices may be created by the legislature shall be chosen at the general election held in the first odd-numbered year after the creation of such office. [The successors of the several] All county judges, including successors to existing judges, shall be chosen by the electors of the counties for the term of six years from and including the first day of January following their election. County courts shall have the powers and jurisdiction they now possess, and also original jurisdiction in actions for the recovery of money only, where the defendants reside in the county, and in which the complaint demands judgment for a sum not exceeding two thousand dollars. The legislature may hereafter enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of the county courts, provided, however, that their jurisdiction shall not be so extended as to authorize an action therein for the recovery of money only, in which the sum demanded exceeds two thousand dollars, or in which any person not a resident of the county is a defendant. Courts of sessions, except in the county of New York, are abolished from and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five. All the jurisdiction of the court of sessions in each county, except the county of New York, shall thereupon be vested in the county court thereof, and all actions and proceedings then pending in such courts of sessions shall be transferred to said county courts for hearing and determination. Every county judge shall perform such duties as they may be required by law. His salary shall be established by law, payable out of the county treasury. A county judge of any county may hold county courts in any other county when requested by the judge of such other county. § 2. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Assembly, Feb. 11, 1913.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present. By order of the Assembly, ALFRED E. SMITH, Speaker. State of New York, In Senate, March 17, 1913.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present. By order of the Senate, MARTIN H. GLYNN, President.

Shall the proposed amendment to Section Fourteen of Article Six of the Constitution, designated in the election notice as Amendment Number Three, providing for the abolition of county courts of sessions, except in the county of New York, and vesting the jurisdiction of such courts in the county courts thereof, and authorizing county judges to hold county courts in other counties, be approved?

MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relating to laws for the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session of nineteen hundred and twelve duly adopted a resolution proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relating to laws for the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That article one of the constitution be amended by adding at the end a new section, to be section nineteen, to read as follows: § 19. Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws for the protection of the lives, health, or safety of employees, or for the payment, either by employers, or by employers and employees or otherwise, of compensation for injuries to employees or for death of employees resulting from such injuries without regard to fault as a cause thereof, except where the injury is occasioned by the negligent omission of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of himself or of another, or where the injury results from the negligence of the injured employee.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript thereof, and of the whole thereof. AMENDMENT NUMBER FOUR. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section seven of article seven of the constitution, in relation to storage reservoirs and hydraulic developments in the forest preserve. Section 1. Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That section seven of article seven of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 7. Forest preserve. The lands of the state, now owned or hereafter acquired [] constituting the forest preserve as now fixed by law, shall be forever kept as wild forest land. They shall not be leased, sold or exchanged, or be taken by any corporation, public or private, nor shall the timber thereon be sold, removed or destroyed. But the legislature may by general laws provide for the use of not exceeding three per centum of such lands for the construction and maintenance of reservoirs for municipal water supply, for the canals of the state and to regulate the flow of streams. Such reservoirs shall be constructed, owned and controlled by the state, but such work shall not be undertaken until after the boundaries and high flow lines thereof shall have been accurately surveyed and fixed, and after public notice, hearing and determination that such lands are required for such public use. The expense of any such improvements shall be apportioned on the public and private property and municipalities benefited to the extent of the benefits received. Any such reservoir shall always be operated by the state and the legislature shall provide for a charge upon the property and municipalities benefited for a reasonable return to the state upon the value of the rights and property of the state used and the services of the state rendered, which shall be fixed for terms of not exceeding ten years and be readjustable at the end of any term. Unsanitary conditions shall not be created or continued by any such public works. A violation of any of the provisions of this section may be restrained at the suit of the people or, with the consent of the supreme court in appellate division, on notice to the attorney-general at the suit of any citizen. § 2. Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, April 14, 1913.—The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, MARTIN H. MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER SIX. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section seven of article seven of the constitution, in relation to storage reservoirs and hydraulic developments in the forest preserve. Section 1. Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That section seven of article seven of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 7. Forest preserve. The lands of the state, now owned or hereafter acquired [] constituting the forest preserve as now fixed by law, shall be forever kept as wild forest land. They shall not be leased, sold or exchanged, or be taken by any corporation, public or private, nor shall the timber thereon be sold, removed or destroyed. But the legislature may by general laws provide for the use of not exceeding three per centum of such lands for the construction and maintenance of reservoirs for municipal water supply, for the canals of the state and to regulate the flow of streams. Such reservoirs shall be constructed, owned and controlled by the state, but such work shall not be undertaken until after the boundaries and high flow lines thereof shall have been accurately surveyed and fixed, and after public notice, hearing and determination that such lands are required for such public use. The expense of any such improvements shall be apportioned on the public and private property and municipalities benefited to the extent of the benefits received. Any such reservoir shall always be operated by the state and the legislature shall provide for a charge upon the property and municipalities benefited for a reasonable return to the state upon the value of the rights and property of the state used and the services of the state rendered, which shall be fixed for terms of not exceeding ten years and be readjustable at the end of any term. Unsanitary conditions shall not be created or continued by any such public works. A violation of any of the provisions of this section may be restrained at the suit of the people or, with the consent of the supreme court in appellate division, on notice to the attorney-general at the suit of any citizen. § 2. Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

State of New York, In Senate, April 14, 1913.—The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof. By order of the Senate, MARTIN H. GLYNN, President. State of New York, In Assembly, April 30, 1913.—The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof. By order of the Assembly, ALFRED E. SMITH, Speaker.

State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript thereof, and of the whole thereof. Why I Am a Zionist

By Samuel Roth.

I. Anarchism and Socialism.

Ever since I gained self-consciousness I have sympathized deeply with those who suffer. The disabled and the exploited never failed to arouse within me a feeling akin to rebellion. Because most of my neighbors attributed the cause of all that was evil and unjust in society to capitalism, I did likewise, and became an ardent supporter of the crimson banner. I spared no one the knowledge that I was an anarchist. Not one of the violent, bomb-throwing kind—just an intellectual revolutionist (whatever that may be!), I always hastened to explain. I attended all the mass meetings held in Union Square and Cooper Union, and sometimes I spoke myself. In the course of my career as an anarchist I became interested in the American League of Hoboes, into which I poured my feverish revolutionary activity. Mr. How, the millionaire hobo and organizer of the league, became at one time so enthusiastic over me that he treated me to a 2-cent cup of coffee and a 5-cent pie. I became personally acquainted with Emma Goldman, Alexander Berkman and Ben Reitman, the astronomy of American anarchy! But, one day, as a result of the superior argumentation of my Socialistic friends, I held serious communion with myself, and finally arrived at the conclusion that anarchism meant nothing to the sufferers with whom I sympathized; that it could no more help distressed labor than woman suffrage could contribute toward the reduction of the size of hatpins. The battle of life is not to be fought out in brave phrases. The strugglers of the world must meet on some common grounds and decide the issues of the day. And what more common ground can there be than the ballot, argued my Socialistic friends so I became a Socialist.

When I showed them my red card my anarchistic friends smiled. What mattered it to them who are always misunderstood? But I have never known people more miserably slow making themselves understood. The reason is that they do not understand themselves. The average sincere anarchist is typified in Berkman who has recently published his "Prison Memoirs" at his own expense. No more unreasonable, impetuous, inconsequential document was ever put in print. But in spite of their smiles I became an ardent, active Socialist, and every year, three months before the election, I shouted Marxian economics from a soap box at the street corners of Brooklyn and Manhattan. I had almost convinced myself that at least the truth was mine when one day I picked up a book which was bound in humble brown paper and was written in poetry. I perused its contents eagerly from cover to cover, for it was decidedly good literature. But it was more. It was a philosophy upon which I had never thought. I had heard of Zionism, but it had never appealed to me as a live issue. The author of the brown book seemed to find in it fuel for a roaring, eternal blaze. For the first time in my life I was face to face with the terrible fire which struck my ancestors to the ground at Mount Sinai—and I believed. I did not find in Zionism a contradiction to Socialism. It was merely a part of myself I discovered.

II. The New Zionist.

Zionism differs radically from any other movement and should not, therefore, be judged according to them. It is not, for instance, like the Polish national movement. The aim of the latter is to regain Poland for the Polish. It is a purely political movement. Nor is it like Socialism, which is purely economical in its aims. Zionism, while being political and economical, is also an intellectual movement.

People are wont to consider Zionism as either an enigma or a miracle. It is neither of these. It is the logical development of the history of Europe.

In the first place the Jews never ceased being a nation.

But because they would not play a military role in the history of Europe—their role in the course of their own development having long since passed that stage of savagery—they found it necessary to leave their own land and settle down in every portion of the globe. This proved to be a double blessing. For, had they remained in Palestine a constant defense against the attacks of the savage Teutons would have kept them so busy that the true purpose of their being, namely the study and enforcement of the moral law, would have suffered neglect, and unconsciously they would have sunk back into the degradation from which ages of struggle had raised them. In the second place, their settling down among the wild tribes of Europe hastened the civilization of those tribes.

But now the dark ages are past and the mission of Israel among the nations assumes a new form. Nationalism is gradually ceasing to be militarism—and is awaiting a new meaning. Europe and America are experiencing a great spiritual unrest. All learning has become dry and "increaseth sorrow." Life to the masses of humanity has become a seemingly useless drudgery. Young and old alike have become skeptical of the values which the olden Judaism taught the world. A new moral force is what is lacking, a moral force which will implant a new faith in life in the heart of the world. Without that faith those who are economically secure become indolent and degenerate, and without it a commonwealth would be as poor as a listless idler. Israel, which brought to Europe the light of civilization, is alone capable of accomplishing this. But whereas before it was necessary that they disband to teach the wild tribes of Europe individually it is now necessary that they reunite, strengthen, and set before the world a national example of faith.

In Europe the New Zionism is hailed by Achad Ha'am in his brilliant, philosophical essays. In America it realizes its most forceful and most beautiful expression in H. Segal, the author of the "Book of Pain—Struggle," which is a brilliant arraignment of modern civilization

III. The Forces of Zionism.

I have for the present ceased my Socialistic activities to answer the more urgent call of Zionism. Socialism promises economic security, but in the lives of those who at present already enjoy that blessing I do not see that economic security in itself is so great a blessing. What man needs is not an assurance that he will live. He now wants a purpose to his life. He is altogether too intelligent to confine his life in just the anatomical process of living. He has seen the light and wants to travel with it. I must, therefore, first aid toward the establishment of the value of life. When that shall have been done—that is, when men see before themselves a higher and much nobler struggle than the economic one, then it will be time to talk of a commonwealth—but not until then.

In every corner of the globe we hear the voice of Judaism. Some of them are anarchists—and they condemn the oppression of labor. Some of them are Socialists and single-taxers, and a good deal of them are philosophers, educators. The voice of Zionism calls upon all of them to unite in their common pain to re-establish faith in the heart of the world.

Zionism is too young a movement to be wholly understood. But it rapidly becoming popular—and even at the present day—the Mountain of the Lord—is gradually being established among the hills. Zion is preparing to prophesy.

"The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

If ever a book breathed the breath of life that book is "The Woman Thou Gavest Me." It is the story, told in autobiographical form, of a beautiful, pure and exquisite woman who goes through some of the fiercest tests which the responsibilities of marriage bring into human life.

Hall Caine's novels have enjoyed remarkable popularity, but we predict that this new story will be more widely read than anything he has ever done. It is unquestionably his masterpiece.

The Bronx Opera House, Cohan & Harris' and A. H. Woods' new theatre in upper Manhattan, is ready for occupancy. Its formal dedication is announced to take place on Saturday evening, August 30.

Modern and down to the minute in every detail, and erected at a cost of more than $300,000, the Bronx Opera House cannot other than appeal to the amusement seeking residents of upper New York, who will now have the pick of Broadway's most successful plays brought to their very doors and presented at popular prices and by the original companies, in a playhouse that in point of seating comfort, adequacy of acoustic qualification, elegance of decorative scheme and scientific stage paraphernalia, together with its absolutely perfect safety appliances before and behind the curtain, is not surpassed by any theatre in America.

"Fine Feathers" will be presented for ten performances at the Bronx Opera House commencing Saturday, August 30, and continuing to Saturday, September 6, inclusive, with a Labor Day matinee on Monday, September 1, and the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees. Week of September 8, Reginald De Koven's superb presentation of "Robin Hood," with the original cast and production as seen at the New Amsterdam Theatre last year.

Barney Gerard's 1914 "Follies of the Day" will play at the Star Theatre, Brooklyn, week of August 25. An entire new scenic and costume production is carried this season. Never has there been a better selected beauty chorus than that seen with this edition of the "Follies."

George Sidney, the funny little comedian who has always been a welcome favorite in Brooklyn, will come to the Brighton Beach Music Hall next week, the last of the summer season of 1913. He will be seen in a new edition of his last season's success, "Busy Izzy."

THE SORROW AND THE COMFORT

Dear Children:

The words of the great preacher, Jonathan Eiberschutz, reveal to us the history of Israel in a new light, and cause us to understand that nothing in the world has the power to cause Israel to continue his existence, nothing save the Torah, which the Jews learned best to transmit from father to son, from the time of the great Scribe Ezra and the second Temple. The position of Israel in exile, together with his holy Torah, I can best explain to you by the following story of "The Light House."

Somewhere in the great ocean, where the ships sail back and forth, there are a great number of treacherous rocks; many a poor ship was shattered against those rocks, and its human freight was consigned to a watery grave. At length some wise navigators decided to build a lighthouse to illuminate the dangerous parts of the ocean and guard the mariners against disaster. They found it necessary, however, to build seven solid walls around that lighthouse in order to guard it against the attack of the pirates who infested that part of the ocean for the purpose of robbing the shipwrecked people, for those bloodthirsty sea-robbers would just love to get into the lighthouse, kill the keeper and extinguish the light, that light that warned the ships away from the dangerous rocks and prevented them from obtaining rich spoils.

Dear children, life may be compared to a great and stormy ocean upon which each human being must sail. In that ocean there are some terrible rocks upon which many an unfortunate had wrecked his life, the largest and most dangerous of these rocks are called Idolatry, Immorality and Bloodshed, besides other rocks, sins of lesser degree, but also sufficiently dangerous to wreck human life. The great Creator in pity of his creatures who were thus abandoned to the perils of the deep, built for them a lighthouse; He caused the light of the Torah to illuminate the dangerous paths of the ocean and guide the seafarer to the haven of eternal happiness. In that lighthouse he placed Israel as its keeper, and in order to safeguard him against the attack of those pirates who love to profit by the existence of idolatry, immorality and bloodshed, and would therefore fain kill Israel and extinguish the light of the Torah, He surrounded the lighthouse with seven walls in order that they might not get anywhere near Israel. The first wall is the Sabbath, the second wall is the Holy Language, or Hebrew; the third wall, the Holy Land, Israel's love for it and firm belief that it will be restored to him. The fourth wall is his holy garments, "Tzitzis" and "Tefilin," the fifth wall is Israel's dietary laws; the sixth wall is his laws against inter-marriage; the seventh wall is circumcision.

In the thousands of years that Israel is the keeper of that lighthouse of the Torah, many fierce onslaughts were made against it, but those seven walls remained standing solidly. Israel, the father, would die for their protection, and Israel, the son, would arise to take up the fight for this defense, but, alas! what the enemy from without could not accomplish, the enemy from within Israel's camp has undertaken to accomplish. It began with the childish talk of some of our foolish and very much misguided brothers in Germany in the early part of this century. "Why," said they, "do the German Christians hate us and cry 'hep, hep,' because we are so different from them? Let us mingle with them and cast aside our peculiar ways and they will love us." These childish creators of reform Judaism were blind to the lessons of our history; they forgot that all the misery our nation has ever endured and is suffering from now is from mingling with the other nations. What did they accomplish? The originators, nearly all of them, disgraced themselves and the Jewish nation by becoming apostates. They caused Germany to become the hotbed of the most virulent anti-Semitism, which has since spread to all parts of the world, for it is just such creatures as reform Judaism that arouse the antipathy of the Christians everywhere. And what is worst of all, they have weakened the walls which make Israel, even in exile, a kingdom of priests and a holy nation. The Sabbath they profane, the Holy Language they ignore, the Holy Land they despise, ceremonial Judaism they condemn, the dietary laws they violate, intermarriage they promote, and like the wretched Hellenistic Jews of the past, they would even destroy the sign of the Holy Covenant, and all this evil came upon them through "childish talk."

כּוֹ אֲהָרִין

The Novice—Would you advise me to give my wife a weekly allowance? The Old Timer—No, indeed. If you do she'll behave like a millionaire until Tuesday and like a pauper for the rest of the week.—Judge's Library.

"It tells here in this paper about a woman who has worked for a railroad for twenty-five years as a watchman."

"Must be a good looker."—Judge's Library.

Knicker—How do you know Jones is married?

Bocker—When he buttonholes you he tries to do it up the back.—New York Sun.

Blobbs—I suppose there are times when all doctors have to give superfluous treatment. Slobbs—Yes; I once knew one who prescribed a nerve tonic for a man who turned out to be a book agent.—Philadelphia Record.

Father—How is it that I find you kissing my daughter? Answer me, sir! How is it?

Young Man—Fine, sir; fine.

Heckler (to orator)—Hi, guv-nor, do you support early closing?

Orator—Certainly I do, my friend.

Heckler—Then shut up.

"Do you think your father would object to my seeking your hand?"

"Don't know, I'm sure. If he's anything like me he would."

"What punishment did that defaulting banker get?"

"I understand his lawyer charged him $40,000."—Pittsburgh Post.

Little Florence climbed upon her father's lap on her birthday and put her arms around his neck. Father always called her Toodles, and until now she had answered to the name. But now she looked at him in surprise. "Why, I'm three now. I should think you'd call me 'Threedles,'" she said.—Judge's Library.

CONUNDRUMS.

Why is it vulgar to sing and play by yourself? Because it is so-lo (so low).

Why is the root of the tongue like a dejected man? Because it is down in the mouth.

Who was Jonah's tutor? The whale that brought him up.

Why is a dirty child like flannel? Because it shrinks from washing.

Why is lip salve like a chaperon? Because it is meant to keep the chaps off.

What man had no father? Joshua, the son of Nun.
