I. The Flower Dance.

The little ones in Japan are told that in the month of July, Uzume, the Goddess of Laughter, leaves her sacred place in the Everblooming Garden and makes her home, temporarily, with her mortal children. During the time of her stay, it is further told, she makes it her chief task to beautify their regular walks of life; for the Goddess is as kind as she is beautiful and concerns herself not a little with the souls of her beloved ones. But the Goddess is more than kind. She is an artist. She kisses the rose and causes a blush to appear on each petal. She breathes upon the sea and a soft white haze rises out of the water, lending it a sort of bluish, alluring hue. She plays sweet, magic hymns to the hills in the sacred silence of each night so that the grass weeps dew-gems for the fair morning. The rivulets run much smoother and with gentler ripple down the lily-tipped hills; the clouds play fairer with one another in the perfect afternoon; and the winds are much sweeter, because of her magic presence.

Nor are the people of Japan unappreciative. Indeed they endeavor in various ways to show her how grateful they really are. The children do not, of course, need to show their gratitude. The love which they bear the gentle Goddess is seen plainly in their mild, happy glances, and in their gentle, quiet habits of life. The Goddess can read the heart of a child as well as she reads the heart of the rose, the lily, the sea or a fair day. But the older ones, being occupied all year round with the serious business of Being, must find some way of showing that inspite of all they are still appreciative of the beautiful. And so they declare a holiday and call it the Feast of Uzume. No one works on the Feast of Uzume; for everyone is busy preparing something of delight for his neighbor. Some pick flowers, and the day's programme. In this dance all the daring maidens of the town in which it is held, participate for the glory of receiving the Crown of Uzume and being declared her favorite.

two weeks prior to the event of its centre you can hear of nothing but flowers, dresses, and colors wherever you happen to stand, sit, or roam. Old men, women who in final sense of disillusionment have thrown aside do nothing from blush of morn till the time to go to bed but discuss the colors of flowers from as many points of view as the Talmud. If you happen to be an innocent foreigner and are unfortunately slow in catching the fever, you have but one clean alternative, and that is to stick to your room and have your rice brought to you. But I must not forget to mention that it is in this critical moment that the young men attend zealously to business and thus preserve the mental balance of Kano.

In the year 190- the excitement was unprecedented for no particular reason whatever. Perhaps it was due to the growing spirit of rivalry among the gentle ones of Kano. But the author does not pretend to know. But the Uzume fever was, in fact, so strong that in the buzz of flower-talk even the O-Tojin-san (Honorable Mr. Foreigner), that mighty and high-browed stranger (to put it in their language) who had come with his wife from their home in the land of the setting sun to study their life and manners, even he was nearly forgotten. As he is to count not a little in our story we will proceed to give the reader a closer acquaintance with him.

He was tall, well-knit, but his figure lacked that fine sense of proportion which impresses upon female hearts the exquisite sensation of male beauty. Although his forehead told a story of many sorrows he could not have been more than thirty-five years of age. His head bore a thick mass of black, rebellious hair, but his eyes were brown and gentle with the light of learning. His wife was not as tall as he; looked at least ten years younger, and was of a much more favorable proportion. Her Genji Negato, a young man of means, who had attended a university in America, named Star-eyes, because of the exquisite charm which her eyes sensed in the hearts of all upon whom they fell. Although the Tojin-san was among them no longer than two months he was already high in the favor of the younger element to

BENJAMIN ALTMAN

The will of the late Benjamin Altman, disposing of his notable art collection so as to make it a source of educative benefit to the people of this city, was an act which aroused the pride of citizens of all creeds and stations. Mr. Altman was of an exceedingly retiring disposition, and during his lifetime would not consent to a reproduction of his features in a public print. We are now enabled to present a portrait of the late Mr. Altman to our readers.

others go hunting. In most of the towns the Flower Dance is considered a very important event, though not in all of them is it instituted on

In Kano the Feast of Uzume is looked forth to with even more interest than that which our young women display before Christmas and those petty artifices by means of which they endeavor, with some slight success, to smoothen out their difficulties with Beauty. (imagine!)

whom he lectured very often on various topics of interest, but chiefly concerning their own importance in which he aimed to impress them with a preserving sense of their own national importance. Consequently, all the citizens of Kano, young and old alike, regardless of sex, looked upon him as a wise and exceedingly noble man.

One morning, a week before the Feast, Benjamin de Leon, hitherto known to us as the Tojin-san, was preparing a lecture, when his young wife came in and interrupted him (an agreeable habit which all wives happily share) by saying that he had already written too much for one morning and hinting in the usual deadly feminine fashion (a smile and a caress) that it was time that he tried to amuse her. The learned man, obedient to the customary cowardice of all husbands, blotted his paper, corked his ink, and taking her on his lap (this was their honeymoon), acceded to her impetuosity.
When she was thus happily situated she said: "Benjamin, what do you think Genji Negato suggested to me yesterday?"

Benjamin shook his head gravely and answered: "I don't know and I can't guess; but I am certain it was something honorable."

"Why of course it was!" she exclaimed. "Who could be so absurd as to expect anything but what is honorable from him? But the fact is that he has suggested to me to join in the Flower Dance."

"Genji Negato suggested that to you?"

"Why are you surprised?"

"I am surprised, because only a week ago I heard Genji express himself in terms decidedly uncomplimentary not only of his attitude toward the dance, but also toward the Goddess herself."

"O, yes; Genji Negato is much unlike most Japanese lads. For one thing he is a hopeless cynic. But what do you think of his suggestion?" The last phrase was uttered rather anxiously.

Benjamin seemed to be studying the situation. "The truth is," he said, that we foreigners should encourage these demonstrations as little as possible. It was this Uzume and her tribe who kept civilization from the doors of Japan. But knowing how much enjoyment it will afford you I can hardly advise you to stay out."

Having gotten what she wanted
Anna sprang down from her pro-tector's lap and joined in the general hustle of preparation. Now in al-seriousness she was not overburdened with that conceit which made the ancient bard exclaim in his reference to woman: "Vanity of vanities!" but the prospect of such rich material for stories to her friends at home made her feel extremely elated.
To have been in Japan might sound prosaic enough for a guide book. But to have partaken of one of the most beautiful religious ceremonies in the Flowery Kingdom would be a matter of no little interest. And should she win the Crown of Uzume, what a triumph that would be! And then Anna looked into her mirror, smiled her most bewitching smile, and saw that she was still charming in spite of the fact that she was married; a light wave of joy began beating entrance at her heart's gate.

On the morning before the Feast of Uzume Mr. and Mrs. de Leon were favored with a visit from Genji Negato. The latter had brought the sensei's wife the flowers he had promised her. He came in, deposited the flowers upon a nearby table and greeted the two. The Tojin-san was seated studiously at the writing table while his wife was arranging her hair at the mirror. They both greeted him cordially and requested him to take Japanese comfort. Genji sat down on a mat in front of an artistically elaborate chair (which seemed to say to all who passed it: "Sit on me; but do not press hard."). And having performed this with native grace, he asked the learned sensei (teacher) what he was writing about; at which the learned man smiled and said that it would be unfair to himself to reveal to him, Genji Negato, the material for his next lecture, as that might deprive him of the attendance of his keenest pupil.

"I see," remarked Genji, "that you are very quickly contracting our flattering habit of speech. Would that our lads learned your ideas as quickly!"

"That is not wholly true," answered the sensei. "You, Genji Negato, are a contradiction to your own statement, for you have learned our teaching with more ease and to much more mental advantage than a good many of our Western students.
Truly, the manner in which some of you Japs learn is remarkable!"

"Some day," said Genji, as though he were half talking to himself, "it will cease to be a matter of wonder."
"His eyes seemed to say much more than his words expressed. The sensei nodded for him to complete his meaning.

The Jap's eyes flashed. "It will,
on the contrary, become a subject of much fear." These words must have cost him a great effort, for his lips dwelt tremulously on the last syllable.

The sensei merely elevated his eyebrows. "Why fear?" he asked. His eyes were now leveled seriously upon the trembling youth who was rising to his feet.

"Because my people are awakening to a serious realization of their own strength," was the meaning reply.
"The nations of the West are worn out, and we will rise above them like the dawn of day over a sick night.
Our war with Russia was nothing in comparison with what will happen yet."

"That is a fatal error," said Benjamin, with a smile. "I fear that Japan has awakened too late and that consequently she will have to practice her war tactics on the savages of Africa and Manchuria who are also awakening. The nations of the West are tired of war. Their claims to life have grown. Europe and America are now ushering in a new awakening—the awakening of the soul."

"But what if we invade their lands?"

"Pause a moment, Genji Negato.
There is a bit of history I have taught you, it seems in vain. In the period of the decline of the Roman Empire, when the Gauls, the Teu-tons and other savage tribes of Europe burst into the light and tore down the banners of Greece and Rome, there was a small people living on a patch of land near the Mediterranean who, while they foresaw the bloody consequences of the awakening, did not care to fall victims to it, it having already raised itself through hard struggle and desert meditation above this savage state; so it disbanded like a nation which is

"Russia was not, and is not even now, on the side of civilization."

The morrow's dawn peeped upon a magnificent circle some distance from the more populated part of Kano, a gorgeous arena of flowers which blended the rarest colors into rainbows and the most fantastic forms of the mind's creation. It seemed to rest there in the perfect day in open defiance to the merely human imagination. It was boldly suggestive of the huge amphitheatre erected by the ancient Greeks in a small valley, centuries ago, which extended itself vastly to the very heights of the neighboring hills. Kano's arena, though not as huge, was by a good distance the more beautiful.

Even the sun seemed to partake of the general feeling of good will and smiled down incessantly from morn till night without growing overheated or distant. All day the arena was full of happy men, women and children, for Kano is very religious, and its manifestations of devotion must have pleased the Goddess unless, of course, she was out for bigger game. A great source of happiness were the delightful anticipations which wove themselves around the flower dance in the hearts of young and old, for no one was without some sister, aunt, daughter, cousin, sweetheart or granddaughter who was to be a hopeful participant. But the great event was reserved for a more appropriate hour, when it could be performed in the blessed moonlight.

Finally the sun seemed to weary of his good disposition and sank slowly and with ill grace beyond the edge of the farthest wood. Shadows began to gather swiftly, and these dark, unconquerable hosts threatened to deluge everything, when lo! the moon, queenly and silent, rose above the scene and bathed the arena in a flood of green and blue light. Into the fragrant circle leapt the two hundred or more fawnlike forms of the richest feminine produce of Kano, garbed in the most fantastic colors, and began moving singly and in twos in the soft moonlight.

In Japan applause is looked upon as a vulgar demonstration. But whoever looked at the silent throng and saw the tears of bliss starting from the eyelids of happy mothers, the heaving bosoms, the bodies which seemed to sway to the delightful rhythm of eventide, could have known without another guess that it was pleased. The judges, who were the oldest men in town and had seen more than one demonstration such as this, sat in their august places, and themselves whirled along in the whirlpool of even, grace and flowers judged the dancers.

The fairest figures were unquestionably those of Zulu and the wife of the sensei.

Zulu alone wore no fantastic dress. She was garbed in a halo of lily white, over which her light, soft, red hair flowed exultingly, and she danced with simple grace. "A dancing lily!" exclaimed the youth of Kano as they followed her fleeting form. But she did not seem entirely happy, for she danced singly and her eyes sought no one's.

Anna was frankly joyous and easily surpassed them all in grace and personality. There was something of the enchantress about her movements; her eyes, which challenged daring, her exquisite red lips.

But the judges looked from her to Zulu.

The Feast of Uzume ends with the announcement of her whom the Goddess hath favored. When at last the dancing ceased the judges rose and announced amid the profoundest silence, the winner of the dance. As the beautiful crown was placed upon the head of Zulu a universal rush was made for her; and, strange to relate, that maiden betrayed very little concern over what anyone of her friends would have considered as the most singular bit of fortune.

Genji Negato alone hurried to the side of Anna, who, he thought, needed consolation. When Benjamin looked about for her she was gone.

2. Night of Encounters.

Benjamin De Leon had too much faith in the integrity of his wife to doubt her honesty. For that very reason her sudden, uncalled-for disappearance caused a growing feeling of fear to rise in his breast concerning her safety. She had danced magnificently, and he had seen more than one vulgar look leveled at her from that throng. But he had been engaged in conversation at the moment when the results were announced, and when he looked around for her she was gone. He hurried immediately to the hotel at which they were staying, where he hoped to find her. But no one had seen her and she could not be found within the vicinity.

His fears now rose and he made a round tour of investigation throughout the whole town. But with the exception of a few who now and then passed him on their way home he met no one of interest. For that matter, the Mikado himself would at that moment have been a very uninteresting spectacle to him, for he was looking for his wife.

Yet Benjamin De Leon was one of that class of people called philosophers, who pride themselves on the fact that their interests are not as narrow as those of common mankind, but universal, all embracing. Look at them after they are married, and they are gluttonous to the point of being anxious for the safety of their wives.

What is in a wife, she in whom philosophers find so great an interest? Will she ever decide the nature of the fourth dimension? Look at her from a perspective, and her husband is always worrying where she could have gone.

When Benjamin had been searching for more than an hour and the monster fear had grown in him into great proportions, he suddenly found himself in front of the great arena again. It seemed at first sight thoroughly deserted but for the shadows which lingered around the flowery circumference. The moon was still beaming down brimmingly, but from a wider angle. Seized with a certain instinctive desire, he leaped into the circle and found that he was not alone.

In the center of the arena stood one whose identity flashed upon him in lily white. It was Zulu. In the midst of the moonlight she stood, her slender arms folded beneath her breasts, and she seemed to be in deep grief.

What a picture she presented! The soft, streaming moonlight, the flowers beautified into inestimable colors by the lurid light, and in the center of all that graceful and flower-like thing of life and vision! For a moment Benjamin forgot himself and was overwhelmed with admiration. But the more serious color of the picture followed, and he caught himself wondering whether or not he should talk with her. He knew that as the "beloved sensei" he had some right, but he also knew that he needed more than merely some right. Curiosity supplied the desideratum, so he walked up to her quietly. She seemed to feel rather than see his presence, for without moving she whispered: "Tojin-san!" Now, this was an act of open hostility, for the people of Kano called him "the beloved sensei." But he chose not to regard it, and said: "Zulu, this is a very late hour, and it is strange to find thee here."

His soft, sympathetic tones seemed to carry much assurance with them for the white figure trembled slightly and she said: "O, beloved sensei,

Jewish Community of New York (Communicated)

The following are the minutes of the executive committee meeting, Jewish Community (Kehillah) of New York City, Tuesday evening, October 14, 1.13.

A committee consisting of Mr. Louis Marshall, Judge Rosalsky, Rabbis Margolies and Klein, of the Vaad Horabonim, of the Kehillah, and Messrs. Walter H. Liebman and Monroe Goldstein, of the National Desertion Bureau, is to consider the whole question of Ghet in its relation to the divorce laws of the various States.

A Committee on Millah, of which Dr. David De Sola Pool is chairman, is considering plans for the examination and certification of Mohelim. The sub-committee of physicians consists at present of Dr. Illoway, Bullowa, Blenfeld, Held, Keller, Weinburg and Neumann.

A complete study of the activities and personalities of twelve missionaries to the Jews has been secured. Mr. S. C. Lampert is chairman of the committee to determine what active steps, if any, are to be taken in this connection.

Prof. Israel Friedlaender reported that the text book work of the bureau was proceeding apace. A representative of the bureau visited a number of cities as far as Kansas City to secure information as to Jewish educational conditions.

Four hundred and five applicants were interviewed; 196 employers were interviewed; and 527 positions were secured. The handicaps during the month included tubercular, minus limbs, cripples, defective sight, partly paralyzed, mental defectives, non-Yiddish speaking immigrants, delinquents, professional men and Sabbath observers.

Information is being gathered concerning Jewish and non-Jewish firms which discriminate against Jews in giving employment.

Mr. Maurice Simmons was appointed chairman of a committee representing the Kehillah, to be part of a joint committee representing various immigrant peoples. The film "The Firebugs" has been suppressed through activity of this committee.

Council of Jewish Women.

The regular meeting of the New York Section was held on Tuesday, October 21, at the Shearith Israel Synagogue, No. 21 West Seventieth street. In keeping with the Succoth festival, Rev. Dr. H. P. Mendes spoke on "The Succah," and Dr. D. de Sola Pool on "The Year 5673"; Mrs. Henry Villard told of "Some Results in Women's Work," and Borough President McAneny delivered a short talk. A feature of especial and timely interest was the presence of Capt. Inch, commander of the ill-fated "Volturno." Capt. Inch spoke a few well-chosen words.

Preparations for the soiree dansante to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria, on Saturday evening, November 15, have been completed. The entire proceeds will be used for the philanthropies of the New York Section.

Miss Szold to Lecture.

Washington Lodge No. 19, Independent Order B'nai B'rith, one of the largest lodges of this order in the City of New York, has arranged a lecture on "The New Palestine" to be held at Temple Israel of Harlem, Lenox avenue and 120th street, Thursday evening, October 30, at 8 p. m.

The lecturer, Miss Henrietta Szold, who is well acquainted with the subject, has many interesting stereopticon views which were taken in the Holy Land. It is expected that several other persons who have visited Palestine will participate in a discussion. The public is invited.

Bnai Shalaum Cornerstone Laid.

The elements played havoc with the attendance and the programme outlined for the cornerstone laying of the new Bnai Shalaum Synagogue in Ninth street near Seventh avenue, last Sunday, and Mayor Kline, who had been booked to speak, failed to attend. Borough President Louis H. Pounds, Congressman William H. Calder, Michael J. Butler, Rev. Nathan Krass spoke after Rev. Israel H. Goldfarb had opened the proceedings with prayer and President Louis Lehman and Chairman of the Building Committee Jacob M. Steinberg made introductory remarks. Magistrate A. H. Gelsmar and Rabbi B. H. Levinthal also spoke, after which Benjamin H. Namm laid the cornerstone.

Many of those present contributed to the building fund and the sum of over $2,000 was subscribed.

Succoth Pilgrimage to National Farm School.

Upwards of 500 friends and members of the National Farm School journeyed to the institute at Farm School last Sunday. Judge Leon Sanders of New York presided and made an interesting address. Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, the president, delivered his annual message, which was in the nature of a farewell, prior to his year's trip around the world. The other speakers were Rabbi Charles H. Freund of Harrisburg, Pa., who spoke of the work of the Jewish Colony at Clarion, Utah; Dr. Karl Kelsey, professor of sociology in the University of Pennsylvania, and William H. Berry, Collector of the Port of Philadelphia.

The election of the school's officers resulted in Rabbi Krauskopf again being chosen president; Harry B. Hirsch, vice-president, and Daniel Gimble, Joseph N. Snellenburg, W. Atlee Burpee, Albert J. Bamburger and Harry Felix directors for three years. Dr. John Hosea Washburn, director of the school, read his annual report. At the end of it he announced the winners of the various prizes.

The Inter-Y. M. H. A. League.

A league of the various Young Men's Hebrew Associations in and about New York has been formed recently, and three meetings of delegates from the various associations have been held. The object of the league is two-fold, to stimulate the various activities in all the associations by arranging inter-association competitions and to encourage the formation of additional associations in nearby cities and towns; in other words, to foster the growth of Y. M. H. Associations intensively and extensively. To date the following associations have joined the league: New York, Bronx, Brooklyn, Williamsburg, Bayside, Rockaway, Terrace City (Yonkers), Mt. Vernon and Richmond. It is expected that by the next meeting the associations in Fayette, Perth Amboy, Portchester and other localities in the metropolitan district will have been heard from.

At the last meeting of the Board of Delegates, held on October 10, at the Ninety-second street building, the following officers were elected: Mr. Felix M. Warburg, New York Y. M. H. A., president; Mr. Abraham Shiman, Mt. Vernon Y. M. H. A., first vice-president; Magistrate Alexander H. Gelsmar, Brooklyn Y. M. H. A., second vice-president; Mr. Max Friedman, Bronx Y. M. H. A., treasurer; Mr. A. Maurice Levine, Williamsburg Y. M. H. A., secretary. A committee on organization and scope of activity was appointed, consisting of the above-named officers and Mr. I. Edwin Goldwasser, Rev. Jos. I. Gorfinkle and Mr. Benjamin Levin.

The meetings already held have been productive of much good; a forum has been afforded for the exchange of ideas in association management, and plans have been laid for inter-association competitions in debating, chess and checkers, declamation and athletics. By the next meeting of the Board of Delegates the details of these competitions will have been definitely arranged by designated committees.

It is requested that associations not yet represented in the league communicate with Mr. A. Maurice Levine, secretary, No. 31 Nassau street, New York.

Tribute to Altman by Methodist Pastor.

The Rev. Dr. Christian T. Reiser, in his sermon at Grace Methodist Church Sunday morning, paid tribute to the high ideals of the late Benjamin Altman.

"It remained for a Hebrew to write one of the most ideal and worthy wills ever recorded," said Dr. Reiser. "It ill behooves Christians to criticize this race until they can match it. The Altman bequests reveal the visions of a man of heart who was appreciative and determined to serve his fellows to exhibit it."

"Some gross minded millionaires load down worthless relatives with gold they are incapable of managing. But Mr. Altman had developed the spiritual fellowship with pictures and saw vast possibilities in rewarding faithful workmen and in providing for charitable helplessness not through iron-clad rules but as it might be freely meted out by men with hearts and eyes in touch with the day. Other funds are tied up so that very many worthy causes that have arisen since the day of the testator cannot be aided.

"But Mr. Altman had confidence in future manhood and believed that it could be trusted. Hence, he gave absolute liberty in dispensing its income. He did not entail it with fullest rigidity and so put a premium on mere profits, as did Marshall Field, but he gave strong evidence of his desire that first of all the employees of 'my business' should have best conditions and advantages. Profits to be paid in beneficiaries are secondary. And he tied no strings to his $10,000,000 art gift. Some deriders of Hebrews might well learn from this frail, timid, retiring Hebrew, who had much of the spirit and aims of the Great Master, else he could not have so planned."

Mr. Richards' Resignation Accepted.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Jewish Community (Kehillah), of New York City, held on Tuesday evening, October 14, the resignation of Mr. Bernard G. Richards, secretary, was presented and was accepted with regret. A resolution praising the services of Mr. Richards was adopted.

Widowed Mothers' Fund Association.

An organization meeting of the Upper Manhattan Branch of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association was effected on Tuesday afternoon in the vestry of Temple Emanu-El, Fifth avenue and Forty-third street. There was a series of excellent addresses followed by music and tea, and much enthusiasm for the cause was displayed by those present.

Orach Chaim Elects Officers.

The annual meeting of the Congregation Orach Chaim was held in the vestry rooms of the synagogue last Sunday night and resulted in the selection of Mr. M. B. Lande as president, and Jacob Lunitz, vice-president. To fill expiring terms the following three trustees were elected; Messrs. Adolph Guggenheim, Dr. S. Friedman and L. Guttman.

Rev. Dr. Moses Hyamson will be the Choson Torah and Dr. S. Friedman, the Choson Bereshith.

To Honor Moses S. Hyman.

Joint memorial services in honor of the late Moses S. Hyman will be held on Sunday, October 26, 1913, at 3 p. m., at the I. O. B. B. Home for the Aged and Infirm, Yonkers, N. Y. The participating organizations will be the Home for Aged and Infirm, I. O. B. B., Manhattan Lodge No. 156, I. O. B. B., Ladies' Auxiliary Society, I. O. B. B., Centennial Lodge No. 763, F. and A. Roused to action by the serious attack on one of their number last week, Jews of Springfield, Mass., have appointed a committee to confer with the Mayor and Chief of Police regarding more adequate police protection. The latest attack is the culmination of a series of outrages upon the Jewish residents of Springfield beginning a year ago with the death of an inoffensive patriarch.

No Change in Altman Policy.

Mr. Michael Friedsam, president of the corporation of B. Altman & Company, and also president of the Altman Foundation, and executor, desires especially to impress upon the public that the death of Mr. Altman will make no change in the long-established business policies of the house, which are as well known as the house itself. These will be continued with the same liberal conservatism, the same scrupulous regard for integrity and truth, and the same keen appreciation of honest values that distinguished Mr. Altman's own management, and to which, it is conceded, the business largely owes its success.

The business will be conducted as heretofore. No part of the capital will be withdrawn. On the contrary, Mr. Altman's will explicitly conveys and assigns to the corporation of B. Altman & Company all his interest in the real estate where the business is situated.

Speaking for the house, Mr. Friedsam desires particularly to express grateful appreciation of the magnificent tributes rendered to Mr. Altman's memory by all—especially by the public press. While those who were so fortunate as to be closely associated with Mr. Altman well knew and deeply esteemed his many splendid qualities, his retiring nature served to envelop his personality—in so far as concerned the general public—with impenetrable reserve. Hence, it is most gratifying to those who knew and loved him to realize that his real worth—as a man, a citizen and a benefactor—was not only known outside of his own immediate circle, but estimated at something approximating its true value.

Alice Lloyd at the head of her own company will begin a tour of the combination houses, opening at the Royal Theatre, Bronx, next Monday afternoon. Miss Lloyd needs no introduction to American theatregoers, in fact, her popularity even exceeds that of her famous sister Marie. The company is directed by Mr. William Morris, who has surrounded Miss Lloyd with a superb galaxy of vaudeville artists who will, no doubt, give extreme pleasure to Bronx theatregoers. Daily matinees will be given during this engagement.

"The Master Mind," a play whose theme is unfolded in a most gripping fashion, and which proved one of last season's thrillers, will be at Cohan and Harris's Bronx Opera House next week. Edmund Breese and a company of representative players will be seen in their

The Red Lilly

is it not stranger still that I who have to-night been declared the favored of the Goddess Uzume should appear so grieved?"

The sensei felt a gentle rebuke in her words. He had been brought up as all Western lads are, in an atmosphere of formality, which places the hour and the manner above the person. "Pardon me," he said, "for making so rude a remark. I should indeed have been first of all to see that you are so deeply grieved."

Zulu's eyes seemed to search the sensei's face for confidence. "Sensei," she said, "what place do you assign to live in your teaching?"

"The highest and the lowest."

"I do not comprehend."

"I will explain myself. As there are two stages of civilization, the lower and the higher, so the ruling passions of men may be classed into two sorts—the lower and the higher. From the point of view of the higher man love is the feeling of another's pain. Thus one loves another because of sympathy, and, more than sympathy, a feeling of kinship with his or her struggle for the ideal. This love is the highest and may be exalted to the holiness of God. From the point of view of the lower man love is the obedience to some blind and irrational instinct which calls for the possession of blood. Worse than blind and irrational, this instinct is bestial and degrading. This sort of love I regard as the lowest sort and beneath the ideal."

Again the white figure trembled, and, as it moved, the entire picture—the soft moonlight, the very tenderness of the night—seemed to be cast into commotion. Zulu drew nearer to him and her eyes sought his. "Tojin-san!" she exclaimed; "you do not know my people!"

Benjamin looked at her with revived interest. She was no longer the moving lily, for her eyes flashed radiantly and her voice rose and swelled in her throat. But instead of taking up the challenge in her words he merely nodded for her to continue.

She hesitated, as though to reflect upon a choice of words. "You see, Tojin-san," she said, "our people are not like your own; in fact, they are quite different, and we do not need the mighty culture of the West." She spoke as though she bore the weight of her entire nation upon her shoulders, yet Benjamin shook his head. Some instinct told him that this light flower-like creature was not talking for her country, but for herself. "What do you mean?" he asked.

"Do you not divine my meaning, O, Tojin-san!" she exclaimed passionately. "With us all love is one love, and that love is sacred. Your culture will not make us happy, for its discriminations are stern and we are gentle."

"You err grievously," answered Benjamin. "Only the religion and maidens of Japan are gentle. The powers of Japan are awakening and our nation will need a harder religion to meet its greater spiritual demands."

"You speak with much confidence, Tojin-san," she said bitterly, "because you are learned; but though I know nothing whatever, this much I feel—that all your mighty culture is doing for our land is creating restlessness. As for my part, misery is all I can see in it."

Benjamin smiled. The prospect of arguing the subject with this passionate yet tender maiden according to the strict regulations of logic grew very dim. "But these matters surely do not explain your grief," he said. "Come; you know that you can trust me. Perhaps I can offer you some consolation."

"I can tell you nothing!" she said passionately. "You are so learned and I am so simple. You pretend to see the future, whereas I can only feel the present. People say I am a lily. Well, yes; I am a lily and I feed upon the morning dew. To tell thee my heart, O Sensei, were so simple a matter thou wouldst scarcely place it highly." Then she turned around and hurried away without another word. She seemed to carry away with her the delightful picture of which her form had been the genius.

As he watched her retreating form Benjamin felt that some secret sorrow had caused this spiritual outburst on her part. What this secret might be he did not know. He decided, however, to go home, where he might now find his wife safe and sound. But he had not advanced more than a few steps when suddenly a gigantic figure rose up mysteriously, as if out of the ground, and tried to pass.

It need hardly be remarked that Benjamin had long since passed that stage of his mental development in which he could enjoy the ignorance of believing in the existence of evil spirits, but it needs much more than a frail disillusionment to face the extraordinary. It is easy enough for one to come to the conclusion that David had rid the world of the last of its evil spirits, but to establish in one's self a constitutional confidence in the ultimate naturalness of all reality is an entirely different affair and requires more than a mere reading of Tom Paine's "Age of Reason." Temperamentally, Benjamin was adaptive. Knowing that the only possible way to live a thing and truly understand it is to adapt one's self to it, he did not allow the impressions of a past situation to color his progress. But, like one who enters a circus or a hothouse prepared for anything which might appear strange and to impress it upon his memory, he walked the ever-changing ways of life ready to encounter and to learn.

So he did not shrink before this mysterious form nor did he grow alarmed. He looked it straight in the face and saw that it wasn't anything very strange—merely a man. But was it a man? Do men hide in the grass and move like shadows? Perhaps they do—figuratively.

This man Benjamin decided would be a great find for even Barnum and Bailey. He was about six feet tall and very broad shouldered, and had a face which might have been Chinese, only that it was impossibly flabby and ugly. His hair, black and coarse, fell over his shoulders in an immense mass. The eyes were small and intensely black; they shone from beneath his terrible brows like two bright stars from a cloud-ridden sky. Under his arm he embraced some-hing large, which Benjamin recognized as the form of an ancient Chinese harp. When this apparition saw that the white man was not at all frightened he tried to pass on, but Benjamin grasped his arm firmly and said: "Not so fast, Mr. Shadow! I'll have a word with you before you leave. Who are you and what were you doing here?"

The giant squirmed, but the white man's grasp was firm. "Tojinsan!" he exclaimed.

Surprised to hear him talk so familiarly, Benjamin nodded.

"Thou are an enemy of Japan," was the rather heated declaration.

"But I am a friend," protested the astonished Benjamin.

"You, friend? You come to destroy!"

Benjamin grew serious. "I repeat," he said, "that I am a friend. I have not come here to destroy. On the contrary, I have come to build."

"Build on thyself!" was the reply; and suddenly, with a swift motion, he released himself from the white man's grasp and in a moment was hurrying away in the direction of the Yellow Wood. Benjamin looked after him until he had disappeared. Then he remembered that he was going home, and was about to start again when suddenly the air was filled with a strange sweet music, which seemed to root him to the spot. His next sensation was that of a sweet familiar face against his, and he looked into the eyes of his wife.

3. Genji Negato.

When Genji Negato heard the decree of the judges declaring Zulu the favored of Uzume he hurried to the side of Anna, and, endeavoring to console her, lead her away from the crowd in no particular direction whatever. Anna paid no attention to the compliments which the Jap poured into her ear, and recomposed herself in time to realize the disgraceful position into which she had unwittingly placed herself. Here she had accompanied her husband to aid him in his studies of the Flowery Kingdom, and in what a position to find herself! Genji Negato actually thought she needed consolation and flattery! When she had joined the dance she had in truth entertained some notions of receiving the crown, but how could anyone imagine her small enough to grudge so simple and flower-like maiden as Zulu favor in the eyes of her own Goddess! Granting even that she was somewhat disappointed, what right had this presumptuous Jap to think so? Was that really the impresison she made on people? And where was he leading her? What if some one should see them together! A pretty bit of gossip that would create among the wives of Kano! The wife of the Tojin-san, the beloved sensei, found after midnight in the company of Genji Negato, a student? She felt that she ought to leave him instantly and return to her husband. But Anna had too much of the adventuress in her makeup, so she allowed the student to lead her some distance away, where there were no houses. They halted near a big rock, which looked inviting to Anna after her long, tire-some dance.

She therefore sat down upon the rock and said: "Now, Genji Negato,

I hope you will deign to explain your strange conduct, for it is strange, to say the least. In all probability my husband is looking around for me this very minute."

"It is not very strange," answered Genji. "It is very natural. You are young and fair; as fair as our fairest flower. Your husband is much older than you are, and takes no delight in your beauty. I am young, as yourself, and the blood of youth is leaping through my veins. All the laws of nature justify my conduct."

Anna laughed softly. "That is interesting—quite interesting," she murmured. "You seem to be even more presumptuous than I had decided you were. To begin with, you presume that I need your flattery and consolation, and then you presume that my husband, being somewhat older than myself, takes no delight in my beauty. Ah, yes! You are presumptuous to the point of being totally absurd." The ring of contempt in her voice was unbearable.

"Well, if he does he has no right to!" exclaimed the Jap passionately.

"A husband has no right to take delight in his own wife's beauty?" she asked.

"But I can never think of him as your husband!" he exclaimed; "I can

Distinguished Russian Rabbi Arrives in London—English Views on the Trial of Mendel Beilis—A Study of Ritual Charges Throughout the Ages—Another Jewish Statesman in Europe—Activities of Modern Jewish Women.

London, October 10, 1913.

A new and distinguished Russian rabbi has arrived in London and will in all probability be retained here by the ultra-orthodox congregation, known as the Machzikei Hadass. That congregation, the headquarters of which is the Spitalfields Great Synagogue, London, created a stir some twenty years ago in Anglo-Jewry through its breaking away from the official Jewish community known as the United Synagogue and its then spiritual head, the late Dr. Adler. In the course of time, however, an arrangement was arrived at between the ultra-orthodox and the official community, the former having been granted a kind of religious autonomy, including their own rabbi. Last December the spiritual head of that ultra-orthodox congregation, the late Rabbi Werner, died, and it was thought that no successor would be installed in view of the improved relations of both sections of the community, and in view, too, of the new Chief Rabbi. But the Machzikei Hadass, it seems, is anxious to have its own rabbi. In consequence, the honorable officers of the ultra-orthodox congregation have approached Rabbi Oppenheim, of Klem, Russia, a distinguished Talmudic scholar, to come to London, with the view of being appointed their spiritual head. The rabbi has accepted the invitation, and will in all probability fill the rabbinic chair left vacant through the death of the late Rabbi Werner. It may be added, that this, or any other appointment by the ultra-orthodox congregation will be with the approval of the Chief Rabbi, Dr. Hertz.

The eyes of the community are very strongly fixed on the trial of Mendel Beilis, and, in fact, the eyes of practically the whole nation here. All the newspapers are featuring the trial with pictures of Beilis in all kinds of attitudes, and of the other leading personages. Pretty generally, again, the ordinary press recognizes the deadly malignity of the Russian reactionaries. The conduct of the case is declared to have been marked by almost diabolical cunning. Still, the position is not regarded here as altogether hopeless, although it is seen that enormous odds have to be overcome.

The leading organ of Jewish opinion here points out that what is being done is an outrage not upon the Jewish people only. It is a crying wrong against humanity at large, and it is the duty of humanity at large to take measures for putting an end, once and for all, to the terrible shame. Jews are but the pawns in the degrading business of this Beilis trial, just as the accused man is a mere cypher in the whole of the hellish plot that has been hatched against our people. What, in face of such doings, are political considerations which are so often pleaded? What, at such a time, are diplomatic emanities, so conventionally alleged, compared to the call to the civilized world to justify itself by telling the Russian government that there is no room on earth to-day for a State organization which can be guilty of connecting against Jews the blood accusation. If at this moment humanity and civilization are neglectful of the clear duty that lies before them to be pursued at any cost, it does not seem that in the nature of things they in the long run can escape unscathed, or that the retribution of dereliction will not, in due time, inevitably fall upon them. At this solemn moment for Jews, at this critical time in the history of the world, an appeal goes out to our fellowmen and women, irrespective of race or creed, not to remain silent with folded hands, passively allowing the odious ignominy of Kieff to go on unchecked.

One writer here points out that charges of murder for ritual purposes have not by any means been confined to the JEWS. In point of fact, in the early centuries of the Christian era, the charge appears to have been leveled by Greeks and Romans against the Christians themselves, and many of the early fathers inveigh against it. No doubt the strangeness of the new Christian religion, with its celebration of the Holy Communion, led to these accusations, based upon survivals of popular primitive superstitions. Thus, for example, Justin, "the Martyr" (about 150 A. D.), in dealing with the charges of eating human flesh, says: "They drag our slaves, children or wives to the ordeal, and by means of horrible tortures force them to confess to these mythical rites, which they themselves openly practice." Shortly afterwards, Athenagoras speaks of the charges of "atheism, Thyestean meals and Oedipodean intercourse" leveled against Christians. At the beginning of the third century Tertullian writes in the Apologeticum: "We are charged with the heinous crime of killing and eating children as a secret rite (sacramentum). The charge is brought against us persistently; yet you do not care to prove this persistent charge. Prove it, then, if you believe it; or believe it not, since you have not proved it."

The same accusation of ritual murder was at later periods brought against heterodox Christian sects such as the Montanists, and in the later middle ages was frequently brought against heretics. As against the Jews, the charge appears to have first begun in the 12th century. There are, indeed, one or two earlier references to murders by Jews. Thus in Josephus the Alexandrine grammarian Apion is charged with having accused the Jews of annually fattening a Greek in the temple, sacrificing him, and tasting his entrails and swearing an oath of enmity against the Greeks. Next, Socrates, an ecclesiastical historian of the 5th century, tells that in the Syrian town of Inmestar the Jews, after scoffing at Christians and Christ, tied a Christian child to a cross and so ill-treated it that it died. This story, whatever truth there may have been in it, appears to have died down, and no further mention of any such practices appears, even in the most virulent and anti-Jewish writings, until we come to the 12th and 13th centuries.

Strangely enough, the first revival of these charges arose in England in connection with St. William of Norwich, a boy whom the Jews were accused of having killed in 1144. The unsatisfactory nature of the evidence is discussed in detail by Messrs. Jessopp and James in their edition of the "Life and Miracles of St. William of Norwich," by Thomas Monmouth. Suffice it to say that there was no judicial trial, that the evidence consisted largely of miracles produced by the corpse which breathed the "odor of Sanctity," and that there is said to have been a statement of a Jewish convert, presumed to be one Theobald of Cambridge, who said that there was a conspiracy among European Jews, who annually cast lots as to where the annual sacrifice of the Christian child at Passover should take place. It has even been doubted whether the boy was actually murdered, or buried alive during a cataleptic fit.

The Norwich case, however, was followed by various others both in England and abroad. With regard to these early cases, it has been pointed out that the alleged murders are usually said to have taken place in the Christian Easter, and that only later does the Jewish Passover come into play. Moreover, in these earlier cases there is generally no suggestion of a ritual murder; on the contrary, the blood is said to have been taken for curative or medicinal purposes, in accordance with a very widespread primitive superstition. This was particularly the case at Fulda in 1235, when 34 Jews were put to death by crusaders, after confessions had been extorted by torture.

The case of Fulda, indeed, forms a landmark in the history of the crime. For, as a result of that case, the Emperor Frederick II appointed an expert commission, which reported that the accusation that Jews were obliged to have human blood for any object whatsoever was untenable, and the Emperor "fully acquitted the Jews of Fulda of the crime attributed to them and the rest of the Jews of Germany of such a serious charge." Still more important is it to observe that Pope Innocent IV., who was by no means well-disposed to the Jews, issued in 1247 two recently discovered bulls denouncing the un-Christian inhumanity of oppressing Jews without legal trial, as was done at Fulda.

In welcome contrast to the Russian anti-Jewish attitude is to be seen the Turkish. Recently the appointment has been made of Yechekel Sassoon Effendi, formerly member for Bagdad in the Chamber of Deputies, as Under-Secretary of State at the Ministry of Commerce and Agriculture in Turkey. Sassoon Effendi visited England some four years ago as one of the deputation of members of the Turkish Chamber of Deputies. He is tall and stately, and looks the typical Sephardi. When a young man, he studied in England, and he speaks English thoroughly. He was sent to Parliament by the votes of all sections of the electorate, and his new appointment as Under-Secretary of State was pressed upon the government by Mohammedans, notably Arabs. This is the first time in Turkey that a Jew has been given so high a post.

There has been sitting this week at Hull, an important port in Yorkshire, England, the annual convention of the National Union of Women Workers. This is not a trade union association, but one for education, legislation and investigation. Jewish women have figured very largely in the debates, including Lady Swaythling, the Hon. Mrs. E. L. Franklin, the Hon. Lily Montagu, the Hon. Marian Montagu, Mesdames Emanuel, B. S. Jacobs, Model, R. S. Mosely, S. Simon, Solomons and M. A. Spielmann; the Misses Ethel Behrens, Olive Franklin, Evelyn Guitermann, Kate Halford, Ethel Jacobs, C. P. Lewis, G. E. Mosely and Sylvester Samuel. This participation is another indication of the immense range of activities now covered by Jews and Jewesses in this country.

בראשית

Apparently the London Jewish World does not know that the New York Evening Journal and the Chicago Evening American are controlled and managed, and for all we may understand, edited by the same group of men.

Lynn, Mass., newspapers seem to hover between admiration at Jewish fidelity locally to our traditions and resentment at the growing preponderance of our people among the school population of the city. The former feeling will, we doubt not, successfully vanquish the latter.

The Philadelphia Y. M. H. A. is preparing to erect a community building as a memorial to the late Lewis W. Stejnach, a faithful and devoted member of the community in the city of brotherly love. The idea of such an edifice is to be commended, and, when it commemorates so zealous a Jewish life-work as that of Dr. Stejnach's, the union of missions is of the highest inspirational value.

It delights us hugely to learn that the Jewish Social and Civic Club, of Louisville, Ky., has, to use its own picturesque language, "come out strong" for the Democratic municipal ticket in that locality. No doubt the ticket needed its support, and, equally, no doubt, the club exists just for the purpose of lending just that support—on paper. By the way, such a club was much needed!

Rabbi Abraham Cronbach, of South Bend, Ind., seized upon the observance of the recent Rosh Hashonah festival as the proper occasion upon which to criticize the present styles in women's clothes from the pulpit. Perhaps his hearers were able to discover the slit in the skirt of his argument, or to be lost in rapture on listening to his flights of eloquence from the vantage of their minarets.

We opine that "the beautiful, new chasan," who has just come to Lynn, Mass., who lived in China, there fell in love with a "beautiful" "Chinese" Jewess and married her, and who speaks Hebrew, German, Chinese and Russian fluently, is one of whom we shall hear much in the future. Such a man, possessed of such a voice as is credited to him, must emulate Chasan Sirota's chaste example.

Our co-religionists of Jamaica, Queens County, are vastly exercised over the anti-Semitic attacks of Harry Sutphin, Deputy Commissioner of Public Works in their vicinity. We do not regrettably know the gravamen of their complaint, but, from what we can learn, surmise that it rests upon a foundation of fact. Our sympathies, needless to state, go with all those who resent unjustifiable attacks upon our people.

The resolution of condemnation of Russia with respect to the Beilis case, passed by the Jews of Woodbine, N. J., religiously and civically, does their sense of justice more credit than their practical wisdom. Jews know full well that "ritual murders" have no part in their economy, and the civilized Christian world knows this, too. Let the latter, however, do all the teaching of their weaker, ignorant and savage brethren that, alas, still remains to be done!

Surely the management of the New York Railways Co. could well have avoided discharging five of their Jewish employees for refusing to work on the holiest day of their religious year. A paltry five hands would not have seriously, if at all, crippled the operating division of the road, and the management would thus have stood absolved of the charge that they used a person's religious convictions to do him harm. For the excuse offered we have but little patience: it is too much like the customary burden of the customary anti-Semite's song.

ROUMANIA IN THE AMERICAN CONGRESS

IN the House of Representatives on Ereb Yom Kippur Congressman Walter M. Chandler, of New York City, delivered a very thoughtful and scholarly address on the persecutions to which the poor down-trodden Jews of Roumania have been subjected by that national government. He showed by citations of chapter and verse that the Jews have been consistently and persistently and improperly persecuted, and that Roumania has deliberately and in defiance of her most sacred obligations crushed out their life's blood.

The address is too long to permit its reprinting in this place. Suffice it to say that Mr. Chandler has made a sober and patient study of the situation of our brethren-in-faith in the Balkan kingdom, and that his indictment is telling in its cumulative and certain reference to the continual harassment of peaceful, law-abiding residents of the country by ignorant and brutal governing classes.

Mr. Chandler's philo-Semitism is proved. He has before his entry on public life translated his admiration for Jewish virtue into a judicious and impartial statement of the facts in the trial of Jesus of Nazareth, and shown that Jews should no more be persecuted in this behalf than that Greeks should suffer cruel tortures because Socrates was made to drink the fatal hemlock.

We sincerely believe and trust that all this agitation now making in our legislative halls on the side of our brethren in Roumania will prove efficacious. It were a thousand pities if the Russian bear were stripped of his power for evil with American Jews and the Roumanian taskmaster, more refinedly diabolical by far, suffered to wreak his vengeance upon these neglected children of his own land.

And the following words, from Mr. Chandler's peroration, deserve to be quoted here:

Civilization may well rush to the rescue of the Jew when threatened with destruction as a terrified and frantic mother struggles to save a favorite child, for if the Bible and the Talmud of the Jews, with all that they teach and mean, should be stricken from the earth, mankind would relapse with frightful speed into savage and barbaric night.

Liberty may well complain when Jews are persecuted and oppressed, for from the days of Isaiah and Jeremiah, the first great revolutionists of earth, to the times of Gambetta and Castelar, the fierce and uncompromising advocates of republican government in France and Spain, freedom's cause has had no nobler, braver champions than the sons of Israel.

Religion and Literature will gladly join hands with Liberty and Civilization, their dearest children, in protesting again mistreatment of the sons of Abraham, for in every century of history, with their hands tied behind them and their hearts burdened to the breaking point, with a bitter load of hatred and persecution, Jews have yet managed from the cave of the prophets and from the manger of the Christ, from the filth of the Judengasse, and from the darkness of the hovels of the Ghetto, to plant in the garden of life, in the soil of the soul, to none but God. The Romans worshiped a whole host of greater and lesser deities, who inhabited earth and sky, mountains, seas and streams. Against this polytheism of a most extravagant kind the Jews pitted the doctrine of monotheism, the jealous and exclusive worship of one great God. Again, polytheism was an integral part of the government of the Roman state and could not be attacked or deided without constituting an act of treason against the laws of Rome and the sovereignty of Caesar. On the other hand, the religion of the Jews and their law were identical.

The prosecution in the Beilis case is using all the old tricks of the trade to fasten the crime of "ritual murder" upon their victim. They employed a meshummod monk to gabble on the witness stand concerning the practice of Jews with Christian blood for sacrificial purposes. This modern Paul of Burgos realized all that was expected of him by those that called upon him to testify, although his cross-examination disclosed that, when a Jew, as was to be expected, he heard nothing as to ritual uses of blood and "murders" of any kind. Meanwhile, the civilized world is standing aghast at this spectacle of Russian "justice." Unless its protests, however, emanate from non-Jewish sources they can and will have no effect on the travesty known as Russian government.

The Christian Science Journal invariably presents the names of Christian Science practitioners all over the world. In this city a fair number of them have Jewish names, and the Jewish identity of others is most undoubted. Curiously enough, the widow of an officer of one of our prominent fraternal organizations figures in this list, and, more curious still, these "Jewish" Christian Science practitioners all have their "stamping ground" in the immediate neighborhood of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. For all we know, an affinity subsists between the seminary and Science.

Why the members of the Congregation Bikur Cholim of Asheville, N. C., should subscribe to the funds of a Mission of the Good Samaritan, performing local "work" of the customary variety, passes our understanding. Scarcely to exhibit their breadth of mind. For that there is elsewhere abundant scope. If the Mission, with its Jewish visiting list, is all that such institutions elsewhere stand for, these Asheville Jews have deliberately gone out of their way to assist the enemies of our faith in their task of accomplishing our religious destruction.

Rabbi David de Sola Pool has issued, through the Bloch Publishing Company, "How to Tell Bible Stories to Jewish Children." The little work, though brief, is an admirable and excellent manual of its subject. The teacher who follows its views in his class room work will not only thoroughly know and deeply appreciate in a Jewish way his Bible, but his little charges will derive from his instruction the knowledge and appreciation of their own ancient heritage. More books like Rabbi Pool's are needed for the teacher of the Bible and Jewish religion.

"BERAYSHIS"

בראשית ברא אלקים:

(Gen. I, 1) "In the beginning—God..."

THE first word of the first book of the Bible is the most important word ever written. All that has ever been written in any literature on any subject may be regarded as a commentary upon this word. The word is—Berayshis. Beyond this word the human mind or the human imagination cannot go. From this word all the thoughts of the intellect and all the golden-strings of fancy proceed, and to this word they must invariably return. Truly, the sum and substance of all that we know and can ever hope to know is the idea: "In the Beginning—God!"

This word is a commentary not only on the nature of God but also on the constitution of man. Only the human mind, constituted as it is, could father, could concern itself about, this word. The elephant browsing in the tall grass, the lion ranging through the desert, the eagle soaring in the sky, do not ask questions concerning the beginnings of grass, sand or ether. They nibble at their food, they rend their prey, they drink in the air, without being attracted and tormented by the riddle of the universe. They take matters for granted; but even the savage races have their myths dealing with the origin of all things, showing that already the man who split his wood with stone-axes and hunted the wild-boar with flint-arrows was a philosopher—a Plato in the germ. Therefore, we ought to be interested in this word if for no other reason because it is a testimony to the early awakening of the human soul. How early was this awakening? How long was it before man ceased browsing and began brooding, ceased to be mere guests at the freely-spread table of nature and began to be pupils at the scantily equipped study-table of nature, we do not know. But with the first question concerning origin and end, design and purpose, the natural man rose into the spiritual man, and the word, Beginning, marked, at any rate, the beginning of his higher life if not the exact beginning of the world.

Let us then accept this word in the first place for its human value, for its testimony to the nobility and high purpose of the human intellect. The human intellect desires for its operations a Beginning at which it might conveniently stop, from which it might conveniently start. Trains of thought are unlike ordinary trains, for the latter carry our bodies while the former have our souls as their passengers. Trains of thought will not brook arbitrary terminals. They will unavoidably run beyond any artificial terminal built by any system. But God is the natural terminal of the mind beyond which it cannot go. Once it reaches this final station, it will stop and rest content. It will not be satisfied with anything less than God. It will refuse to halt at any half-way station constructed by logic and physical science. Here is the most glaring fallacy of logicians and pseudo-scientists. They consider their half-way stations as terminals which these are not. It is well for logic to watch trains of thought as they hurry past. There are many dangers menacing these trains. Like ordinary trains, they may jump the track—and thought becomes illogical, unable to get anywhere. Collisions are of daily occurrence. Let therefore logic and its allies guard the tracks: that is their function. Let them build their little station-houses where thought can linger awhile in the waiting-room before taking the next train to some far-off destination. But—and a serious but this is—let them not imagine that these station-houses are terminals. Let them, moreover, stand modestly beside the tracks and wave conscientiously their little red flags, but let them not commit the grave mistake of standing on the tracks, for if they stand there, in the smash-up that will follow they will be the sufferers and not the thought-trains. Consider these half-way stations: atom, eon, forcé, organism and what not. Would it not be foolish to consider these as terminals? Would it not be presumptuous to command the intellect, Thus far thou mayest go, and no farther?

The human intellect, by its own constitution, simply runs beyond these would-be terminals, until it reaches its own natural terminal and rests content in—God! Who would dare flag the train whose natural point of destination is so lofty, so sublime? What about the atom, or the electric eon, or the chain of evolution? Can they satisfy the soul? Can they obstruct its onward march? Do they provide an esthetic beginning and end for it? No. True scientists, therefore, hesitate not to say that every theory of the universe, to make it workable, requires a God at the beginning. The atom requires a God, the eon requires a creator, and evolution requires a First Link. Atom and eon and the rest of machine-made devices are good enough to serve as safeguards on the way, but not to arrest the home-run of the soul.

When trains of thought run backward they reach God by the path of history. When trains of thought run forward they reach God by the path of prophecy. Whether going backward or forward their natural terminal is none other than God. If God is at the Beginning, God is at the end; that is to say, if this world is planned by God it is carried forward by Him toward a moral purpose—toward Himself. Hence the vision of the prophet was not so much a God enthroned in the Beginning as a God made King in the millennial reign of righteousness. Therefore, while our first impulse is to read the word Berayshis as history, as the record of things that were, it is far more glorious and uplifting to read this word as prophecy, as the foretelling of things as they ought to and will be when the day will arrive in which "God will be One and his name One."

Formerly occupied

The splendid will by which the late Benjamin Altman disposed of his vast wealth is a credit to its testator and to the Jewish community of New York, of which he was a component part. Mr. Altman left his money where it would, to employ the language beloved of Jeremy Bentham, do the greatest good to the greatest number of his fellow-men. With his direct charities and bequests for more or less eleemosynary purposes, we need not concern ourselves specifically. These are eloquent of the possession by the late merchant of what is known as "a Jewish heart," with all that this implies. That he so disposed of his great art collection as to make its use an educative benefit to the people of the city in which he passed his life must be a source of unconquerable pride to citizens of all creeds and stations. An outright gift to cur great museum, his munificence has here builded Benjamin Altman a monument more enduring than brass.

It is, one would say, necessary for the authorities of the Jewish Hospital at Brooklyn to explain why a Jewish gentleman of enthusiasm and attainments was not accorded that opportunity of contributing practical work to their cause. Such a rejection of an offer of co-operation betrays a duplication of existing institutions, and this does neither the old nor the new institution any earthly good. When such an institution, moreover, avails itself gladly of the offers of co-operation of non-Jewish experts, the thought is uppermost with many that here we have a Jewish institution where Jewish aid along practical lines is not courted, where it is only Jewish money which "makes the mare go."

We wonder where The Outlook got the information, published in a recent issue, that Miss Eva Leon, the sister of Mrs. Richard Gottheil, is "a wealthy French Jewess?" Certainly, Miss Leon is a Jewess. As to her French affiliations we think, in spite of the efforts of Jews to be nationistically brave, that the country of a Jew's nativity determines nationality. As to Miss Leon's wealth, finally, we can but hope that The Outlook has more accurate sources of information than have we on this score.

When The Outlook speaks of the Jewish holy days, as it did in its number dated the 11th of October, one must always bear in mind that duty bids us look for the cloven hoof. And in the article in question we have it, in the following innocuous (?) little paragraph:

The Reform Hebrews have their own observance of the day (of Atonement), and there is a constantly increasing number of both Orthodox and Reform Hebrews who perform the rites of Yom Kippur simply out of respect to their fellows. There is another ever-increasing element in the larger cities of the United States, consisting largely of young Jews whose members have taken Socialism for their religion, and who abjure altogether the holy days of their fathers.

The few Jews, comparatively speaking, who abjure the holy days of their faith, do so because of their desire to imitate the standpoint of those to whom The Outlook, with its Protean advertising columns, appeals, and not because of the spread of Socialistic doctrine among them.

KILLING THE GOOSE THAT LAID THE GOLDEN EGGS.

At last there seems a revolt of American travelers against the aviciousness of the European hotel-keepers. One of the morning papers has a statement of a prominent Philadelphian who has made thirty trips to Europe, but now "is done." His complaint, which seems to have become general by returning visitors, is that the prices of everything have been raised inordinately. Hotels have increased their rates to an excessive figure, and even in Switzerland, where one was wont to get the best the land afforded at a moderate rate in its hotels, these hotels have kept pace with those of Continental cities, the prices being almost prohibitive.

These complaints are positively true. The American tourist has been made the object of almost confiscatory rates in the better class hotels, and while protesting they have stood the charges, until now they rebel against them. Not only that; a visit to Europe, as the Philadelphian says, "is not like it used to be." The tips and the extra charges have become as irksome and gross as the increased cost of hotel service.

It is about time that the Americans learned to see their own country and learn to appreciate the wonderful scenes which it offers to the view. It is about time that some of the millions yearly spent in foreign travel should be circulated in our own territory—in the country where they were earned.

Thousands of our people who make frequent trips abroad have never seen their own country, and while full of tales of the wonders of the foreign countries, haven't viewed the greatness of this and of our own.

They have been plucked unmercifully by foreign bonifaces and those who cater to American travelers. At last they are beginning to realize this. It's another instance of "killing the goose that laid the golden eggs."

If this condition will divert the travel of Americans from European trips to transcontinental trips in our own country we may be thankful for the revulsion which the foreigners have brought about by their aviciousness.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Sir Rufus Isaacs.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
It goes without saying that the elevation of Sir Rufus Isaacs to the high position of Lord Chief Justice of England is an event of great importance to international Jewry, and no doubt Jewish preachers and Jewish newspaper editors will join in a chorus of laudation and congratulations to the recipient of the honor. Something more, however, than individual action ought to characterize our satisfaction. The occasion lends itself to a demonstration by communities rather than by individuals, and it behooves the greatest Jewish community in ancient or modern times—Greater New York with its 1,250,000 Jews—to take the lead with a meeting of prominent citizens to decide in what manner American Jewry should express its collective congratulations to the Jewish Lord Chief Justice of England!

Obediently yours,

MAURICE BRODZKY,
246 West 23d street, New York.
New York.

Why Does the Review Not Carry Out Its Promises?

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The October instalment of the Jewish Quarterly Review lies before me. It makes a stout volume of two hundred pages, offering far more reading matter than any of the previous quarterly numbers. A useful and original investigation into the scansion of mediaeval Hebrew poetry by Mr. B. Halper, of Dropsie College, an historical article on the privileges of the Jews in Ancona in 1535, and a note on Phoenician parallels to the Am Haarez Parliament, make up the real contents of the number. For the rest, valuable space is given up to matter which should not find place in the Review. The first article in the number is "The Rightlessness of Mediaeval English Jewry," by Frank I. Schechter. This is an interesting legal-historical essay which was read in part at the last annual meeting of the American Jewish Historical Society. It is fully worthy of publication by either the English or the American Jewish Historical Society. But the editors of the Quarterly, in their editorial announcement made when they took over the publication of the Review three years ago, stated that "heretofore the Review contained a considerable amount of matter relating to the history of the Jews of England. As there is a society devoted to this subject in particular, which publishes the result of its investigations, only articles of special importance or universal interest relating to English Jewish History will be accepted for the Review." The editors are, therefore, untrue to their promise in admitting Mr. Schechter's entertaining essay, which is neither of special importance nor of universal interest. The readers of the Review have a right to question why an exception is made in the case of this essay of Mr. Schechter's, when the editors, Dr. Cyrus Adler and Prof. S. Schechter, promised to exclude such essays for good and sufficient reasons.

But more serious than this diversion of thirty pages to matter which, by general consent, should find no place in the Review, is the admission of the reviews by Mr. Halper and by Prof. Margolis. Mr. Halper reviews recent Arabic literature and gives an interesting account of M. Marcel Cohen's book on the Jewish-Arabic dialect of Algiers; but the remainder of his article is devoted to Tabari's Commentary to the Koran and other works which have not even the remotest connection with Jewish studies. The editors in their announcement referred to above, laid down the principle of excluding "all matter not falling within the province of Jewish history, literature, philology and archaeology." The inclusion of Mr. Halper's reviews of Arabic works without Jewish interest is, therefore, another breach of faith on their part. Mr. Halper, to judge from his other contributions to the Review and to judge from what we have heard of him, is a man of high attainments and great knowledge. The readers of the Review therefore have the right to demand of him original articles of Jewish interest. The editorial policy which foists on the public anything else is to be strongly censured.

For this reason it is nothing less than an abuse of the patience and the good-will of the subscribers to the Review, when the editors devote fifty-five pages to a review by Prof. Margolis of the recent Biblical literature. These pages are the most palpable padding. Prof. Margolis is a brilliant scholar, constantly engaged in original research, and for the editors of the Review to ask from him pot-boiling material of this kind is unfair to Prof. Margolis and an insult to their readers. We have heard more than once that original articles of scientific value have not been able to obtain admittance to the Jewish Quarterly Review, except after a delay amounting to years, because of the number of articles waiting publication in the hands of the editors. If these reports are true, it is incomprehensible why the editors give up about one hundred of the two hundred pages of this number of the Review to unsuitable or unworthy material offered by the son of one of the editors and by members of the faculty of Dropsie College. It is not just to the readers of the Review to offer them this kind of fare. The editors will do well to remember and adhere to their statement of principles and to publish some of the original articles submitted to them by outside scholars rather than to give money for and space to anything and everything, however unworthy, submitted by members of the faculty of Dropsie College. The Jewish Quarterly Review has had a high standard set for it by the twenty volumes published in England. It would be a sad degeneration if the American continuation of the Review is allowed to fall from this standard through a suspicion of partiality or through errors of judgment on the part of the American editors.

Very truly yours,

WATCHMAN.

A Correction.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
In reading over my contribution entitled "The Perfect Day" which appeared in your issue of October 10, I find that, lest I be misunderstood, it may be necessary for me to tell your readers that by saying: "We, therefore, who can see God through the whole of our people's varied history and are fortunate enough to live in so free and happy a land as our noble republic, can really make our Judaism shine in freedom and joy far brighter than it ever shone in our days of deep darkness and dole," I did not mean to exclude our final national hope—Zion. Zion has an equal claim on my heart with every other noble Jewish ideal. I hardly need say also that in the lines referred to I meant to assert that our people find altogether normal conditions of life for themselves even here in this, our noble, free and happy republic. Zionism is too much in my heart to allow any one to misunderstand me regarding my loyalty, love and patriotism thereto. I always envy the joy and exaltation, the bliss Jehuda Halevi and Emma Lazarus must have felt in rearing their noble pillars of song for Zion, the lady love of Israel's exile. What better proof of the inevitableness of Zionism to the Jew than the fact that there is hardly a Jewish poet of prominence even to-day, from Bialik and Frug of Russia to Rosenfeld and Yehosh and Dolitzky of the United States and all the rest of the noble Jewish singers that does not sing of what is in itself the sweetest song to us—Zion! Zion and the United States, what nobler lands can one bear in his heart? May I ask you therefore to kindly publish this letter in your columns at your earliest convenience?

Very truly yours,

ALTER ABELSON.

Visiting Jewish Boys in Reform Schools.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
I beg to call your attention to the article on page three of the Milwaukee Wisconsin of October 2, 1913, in regard to a visit made by Mr. George B. Schoen to the Industrial School of Wisconsin on Rosh Hashanah Day.

The school, called the Industrial School, is in fact, the same as a reform school and, on investigation, Mr. Schoen found out that no one, as a rule, visits the Jewish boys, either before a holiday, nor any other day during the entire year, and therefore, while those boys are in this institution, they have no training in the Jewish religion; nor are they aware of their holidays.

While at that school the Protestant minister and the Catholic priest preach and teach there every week; so far, not once in a year does a Rabbi show up there to do likewise. This is what determined Mr. Schoen to visit the institution on Rosh Hashanah to start a movement throughout the United States that such schools or institutions should teach them the Jewish religion and to make them aware of their holidays.

This can only be accomplished if all the periodicals issued in the interest of the Jewish religion will help this cause by giving this article publicity with such remarks as they deem it best.

Hoping you will participate in this good work, I beg to remain

Respectfully yours,

GEO. B. SCHOEN.

"Then that is all you think of me?" she asked, with elevated eyebrows.

"I think the world of you!" he declared, and actually knelt down at her feet. "Isn't that enough?" he asked. "All that I love—all that I idealize—is in you!"

Anna rose to her feet tremulously. A slight color of shame rose to her cheek, and a light beam from the moon which had struggled its way through the dense foliage above her fell upon that spot and illuminated it. She had hoped that the Jap would refrain from such a declaration, though she had half expected it. She blamed herself inwardly for having given him the opportunity for this insult. But she handled the situation with a firm hand, though the tears were constantly rising to her eyes and she had to summon all her strength to repress them. "I fear I must be going now," she said. "So I will not hear the end of your solilo-quy. There are just a few things which you and your awakened Japan will have to learn—without which you must always remain as impoverished as you are at present showing yourself to be. You must learn that besides the laws of Nature there are the Laws of God which make man above all the beasts of the forest and of the field. With you union with women means no more than what you term "delight in beauty." With us it is infinitely more. In my case it means sympathy with my husband's ideal which is the expression of ages of struggle of which we are offsprings. It is our feeling of kinship in this mighty struggle that constitutes our bonds of marriage. You see there is a mighty difference of pain, experience between me and you. All you can offer a woman is delight in her beauty. That is exactly what the pig offers the fattest she-pig he meets. To delight of the soul you are as yet an august stranger!"

Genji Negato rose to his feet. "Words! Words!" he panted. "Nothing more!"

"Words are enough!" she answered. "They are the most glorious possession of the human race. Language. That is the keynote to all that is superior in Man."

Genji's lips curled into an expression of bitter scorn. "I know of but one effect that language has had on Man," he said. "It has made a miserable beast of him. It has put in his hands a small scale—called Thought—upon which he presumes to weigh all values—even the Universe itself. By the aid of that scale he narrows down his richest emotions and he represses by its advice what is law with the gods. The flower which takes a full breath of air without gasping is much nobler than he. Because of these same words the life of man is one continuous contradiction—one gross lie. Every word he utters belies him. Even when he is buried deep into the Earth the lie follows him. It is a matter of no small wonder to me that the worms condescend to eat him."

Anna made a motion of disgust. "I have heard and read such talk before," she said. "It is the manner of the witless, hapless lad who has some slight desire which he cannot fulfill. Then the holiest things become as playthings on his idle tongue. And now I hope that you will allow me to walk home alone and in peace." Genji started after her. In truth he was more astonished than angry.

When she had gone some distance Anna quickened her pace, for she was in a great hurry to find her husband. Although she had been intimately acquainted with him since they both could remember, having both been born and brought up together, never until this moment did she fully realize her relations to him until, as if by the aid of some divine inspiration, the words came to her lips.

When she reached the arena the air was suddenly filled with a strange sweet music and she perceived her husband a very small distance from her and that he was in some sort of a reverie. She walked up to him quietly and was pleased to note that he did not see her approach. In a moment she had embraced him in a manner of which he had never thought her capable.

"Is it you, Annie?" he asked. "Yes," she answered. "It is I. "But are you angry with me?" And before he could answer she exclaimed: "See!"

He looked and perceived Zulu speeding in the direction of the Yellow Wood from which the music proceeded. "Let us return," he said.

They walked along silently, side by side. He walked like one in a dream. He did not even ask her where she had been. Not a word passed between them. She knew instinctively that in his soul some mighty battle was raging hot. It was always so when he walked in that leaning, thoughtful way. With her arm entwined about his she led him into his study. Then a marvellous change took place. The light of his study lamp seemed to transmit a new life into him. He went up to his writing table and began examining the papers which he had left lying there. Then he walked up and down the room a number of times—as if to assure himself that what he felt was real. He finally sat down at the table, as though he were already convinced, and prepared to write. He opened his inkwell, spread out a sheet of white paper and dipped his pen in the ink.

Anna had been watching her husband rather curiously. "Benjamin," she began. He looked up. "You may go to your room now, Annie," he said. "I shall be very busy tonight."

She saw him bend down to his writing again and knew that it was best not to disturb him. She walked up to the door of her room undecidedly. Then she heard the voice of her husband calling to her. "Annie."

She turned round. "What is it, Benjamin?"

"You may start packing up tomorrow. In two days we leave Japan. She was going to say that she thought he would remain much longer, but seeing that he was writing again she left him to his pleasure.

Another new synagogue is to be built in Berlin, this time at Wilmersdorf, to meet the requirements of the 10,000 Jews who reside in that suburb. There will be seating accommodation for 2,400 persons. The two nearest synagogues are overcrowded, and during the present year nearly 1,200 applications for seats in one of them had to be refused.

At a meeting of the Pretoria Town Council held recently, the recommendation of the General Purposes Committee "that a Deputy Mayor be appointed, Vice-Councillor J. H. L. Dr. Gaster, the Haham of the Sephardic Jews of England, recently had an interview with King Charles of Roumania. Dr. Gaster reports that from the audience he had, he expects that within three months the 15,000 Jewish soldiers who were mobilized for the recent war will be in possession of full citizenship rights.

The Royal Society. An interesting book in the shape of a "Record of the Royal Society" has recently made its appearance. This society of London, which has a history of several hundred years, is probably the most illustrious scientific organization in the world. To become a fellow, which entitles the individual to put the magic letters F. R. S. (Fellow of the Royal Society) after his name one must have attained eminence in his own special department. No honor is more highly valued by the scientist than an election to this exclusive fraternity of scholarship.

SKIBINSKI.—The People of the State of New York, by the Grace of God Free and Independent, to Antonia Bosinski, the next of kin of Leon Skibinski, deceased, and greeting: Whereas, John Schütz, of the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogate's Court of our County of New York to have a certain instrument in writing, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last will and testament of Leon Skibinski, late of the County of New York, deceased, therefore you and each of you are cited to appear before the Surrogate of our County of New York, at the office in the County of New York, on the 13th day of November, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, then and there to attend the probate of the said last will and testament. And such of you as are hereby cited as are under the age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your guardian, if you have one, or if you have none to appear and apply for one to be appointed, or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate to represent and act for you in the proceeding. In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Hon. Robert Ludlow Fowler, a Surrogate of our said County of New York [L. S.] York, at said County, the 19th day of September, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. Lord one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. DANIEL J. DOWDNEY, Clerk of the Surrogate's Court. Margaret M. Burnet, Atty for Executor, 2 Rector St., New York.

DANENBERG, IRY.—In pursuance of an order of Hon. John P. Cohalan, a Surrogate of the County of New York, notice is hereby given to all persons having claims against Iry Danenberg, late of the County of New York, deceased, to present the same with vouchers thereof to the subscriber, at her place of transacting business, at the office of Guggenheimer, Untermyer & Marshall, No. 37 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before the 23d day of February next. Dated New York, the 11th day of August, 1913. BERTHA DANENBERG, Executrix. GUGGENHEIMER, UNTERMYER & MARSHALL, Attorneys for Executrix, 37 Wall Street, Borough of Manhattan, New York City.

EXPLANATION—MATTER IN ITALICS IS NEW. STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section seven of article one of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next general election in this State to be held on the fourth day of November, nineteen hundred and thirteen. MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section seven of article one of the constitution, relative to taking private property for public use. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session of nineteen hundred and twelve duly adopted a resolution proposing an amendment to section seven of article one of the constitution, relative to taking private property for public use; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That section seven of article one of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 7 When private property shall be taken for any public use, the compensation to be made therefor when such compensation is not made by the state, shall be ascertained by a jury, or by the supreme court with or without a jury, but not with a referee, or by not less than three commissioners appointed by a court of record, as shall be prescribed by law. Private roads may be opened in the manner to be prescribed by law; but in every case the necessity of the road and the amount of all damage to be sustained by the opening thereof shall be first determined by a jury of freeholders, and such amount, together with the expenses of the proceeding, shall be paid by the person to be benefited. General laws may be passed permitting the owners or occupants of agricultural lands to construct and maintain for the drainage thereof, necessary drains, ditches and dykes upon the lands of others, under proper restrictions and with just compensation, but no special laws shall be enacted for such purposes. The legislature may authorize cities to take more land and property than is needed for actual construction in the laying out widening, extending or relocating parks, public places, highways or streets; provided, however, that the additional land and property so authorized to be taken shall be no more than sufficient to form suitable building sites abutting on such park, public place, highway or street. After so much of the land and property has been appropriated for such park, public place, highway or street as is needed therefor, the remainder may be sold or leased. § 2 Resolved (if the Senate concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relative to the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session of nineteen hundred and twelve duly adopted a resolution proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relating to laws for the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That article one of the constitution be amended by adding at the end a new section, to be section nineteen, to read as follows: § 19. Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws for the protection of the lives, health, or safety of employees; or for the payment, either by employers, or by employers and employees or otherwise, either directly or through a state or other system of insurance or otherwise, of compensation for injuries to employees or for death of employees resulting from such injuries without regard to fault as a cause thereof, except where the injury is occasioned by the willful intention of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of himself or of another, or where the injury results solely from the intoxication of the injured employee while on duty; or for the adjustment, determination and settlement, with or without trial by jury, of issues which may arise under such legislation; or to provide that the right of such compensation, and the remedy therefor shall be exclusive of all other rights and remedies for injuries to employees or for death resulting from such injuries; or to provide that the amount of such compensation for death shall not exceed a fixed or determinable sum; provided that all moneys paid by an employer to his employees or their legal representatives, by reason of the enactment of any of the laws herein authorized, shall be held to be a proper charge in the cost of operating the business of the employer. § 2 Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relative to the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees. Whereas, The legislature at its regular session of nineteen hundred and twelve duly adopted a resolution proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relating to laws for the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees; and Whereas, Such resolution has been duly published in accordance with law and the constitution and referred to this legislature for action, therefore Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur), That article one of the constitution be amended by adding at the end a new section, to be section nineteen, to read as follows: § 19. Nothing contained in this constitution shall be construed to limit the power of the legislature to enact laws for the protection of the lives, health, or safety of employees; or for the payment, either by employers, or by employers and employees or otherwise, either directly or through a state or other system of insurance or otherwise, of compensation for injuries to employees or for death of employees resulting from such injuries without regard to fault as a cause thereof, except where the injury is occasioned by the willful intention of the injured employee to bring about the injury or death of himself or of another, or where the injury results solely from the intoxication of the injured employee while on duty; or for the adjustment, determination and settlement, with or without trial by jury, of issues which may arise under such legislation; or to provide that the right of such compensation, and the remedy therefor shall be exclusive of all other rights and remedies for injuries to employees or for death resulting from such injuries; or to provide that the amount of such compensation for death shall not exceed a fixed or determinable sum; provided that all moneys paid by an employer to his employees or their legal representatives, by reason of the enactment of any of the laws herein authorized, shall be held to be a proper charge in the cost of operating the business of the employer. § 2 Resolved (if the Assembly concur), That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to article one of the constitution, relative to the security and protection of the lives, health or safety of employees. STATE OF NEW YORK, OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE, Albany, July 22, 1913.—Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section four of article six of the Constitution of the State of New York is to be submitted to the people for approval at the next general election in this State to be held on the fourth day of November, nineteen hundred and thirteen. MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER THREE. Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly, Proposing an amendment to section four of article six of the constitution, in relation to the county courts.

Section 1. Resolved (if the Senate concur) That section four of article six of the constitution be amended to read as follows: § 4. The existing county courts are continued, and the judges thereof now in office shall hold their offices until the expiration of their respective terms. In the county of Kings there shall be [two] four county judges. The number of county judges in any county may also be increased, from time to time, by the legislature, to such number that the total number of county judges in any one county shall not exceed one for every two hundred thousand, or major fraction thereof, of the population of such county [and the additional county judge shall be chosen at the next general election held after the adoption of this article.] The additional county judges in the county of Kings shall be chosen at the general election held in the first odd-numbered year after the adoption of this amendment. The additional county judges whose offices may be created by the legislature shall be chosen at the general election held in the first odd-numbered year after the creation of such offices. [The successors of the several] All county judges, including successors to existing judges, shall be chosen by the electors of the counties for the term of six years from and including the first day of January following their election. County courts shall have the powers and jurisdiction they now possess, and also original jurisdiction in actions for the recovery of money only, where the defendants reside in the county, and in which the complaint demands judgment for a sum not exceeding two thousand dollars. The legislature may hereafter enlarge or restrict the jurisdiction of the county courts, provided, however, that their jurisdiction shall not be so extended as to authorize an action therein for the recovery of money only, in which the sum demanded exceeds two thousand dollars, or in which any person not a resident of the county is a defendant. Courts of sessions, except in the county of New York are abolished from and after the last day of December, eighteen hundred and ninety-five. All the jurisdiction of the court of sessions in each county, except the county of New York, shall thereupon be vested in the county court thereof and all actions and proceedings then pending in such courts of sessions shall be transferred to said county courts for hearing and determination. Every county judge shall perform such duties as they may be required by law. His salary shall be established by law, payable out of the county treasury. A county judge of any county may hold county courts in any other county when requested by the judge of such other county. § 2. Resolved (if the Senate concur). That the foregoing amendment be submitted to the people for approval at the general election to be held in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, in accordance with the provisions of the election law. State of New York, in Assembly, Feb. 11, 1913.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present. By order of the Assembly, ALFRED E. SMITH Speaker.

State of New York, in Senate, March 17, 1913.—This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present. By order of the Senate, MARTIN H. GLYNN, President. State of New York, Office of the Secretary of State, Albany, July 22, 1913.—I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript therefrom, and of the whole thereof. Given under my hand and the seal of office of the Secretary of State at the city of Albany, this twenty-second day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen. [L. S.] MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

This department is in receipt of the following self-explanatory letter: "I take the liberty to approach you to-day in a matter of more than common interest. Thanks to the efforts of Mr. Leo Levy, member of the New York Stock Exchange, the Educational Chamber Music Society has been founded. It is the purpose of this society to give, during the coming season, ten chamber music concerts in the Straus Auditorium of the Educational Alliance at an admission fee of ten cents. In the annals of the history of New York City and if I am not mistaken, of the world, chamber music has, until now, been beyond the means of all but the wealthier music lovers. Chamber music has been prohibitive to the average wage earner or student of music; but on November 23, 30; December 14, 28, 1913, and January 4, 25; February 8, 22, and March 8, 22, 1914, every lover of good music, whether he is a laborer or a poor student, will have an opportunity to hear the finest examples in the whole range of chamber music literature played by such artists as Messrs. Modest Altschuler, Jacob Altschuler, Alexander Saslavsky and Leo Levy, for ten cents. The Educational Chamber Music Society and the Educational Alliance are prepared to meet the necessary deficit of the concerts, but they do not care to give concerts in 1914-15 unless the desire for the concerts will manifest itself in well filled houses during the first season of 1913-14. Your valued paper reaches a number of people who, we know, are very much interested in good chamber music and I ask respectfully for your very much appreciated co-operation in making these concerts successful. They mean a rather large sacrifice of money to the founders of the society whose purposes are entirely altruistic.

"With many thanks for your kind co-operation, "Very truly yours, "C. M. ACKELWITZ, "Manager, Entertainment Dept."

Grete von Mayhof has sung and danced herself into a most emphatic New York success at the Adolf Phillip Fifty-seventh Street Theatre in "The Midnight Girl," the merry musical farce comedy in three acts. The triumph of this charming prima donna and her farce comedy is one of the most legitimate achievements of the year. In addition to the music, "The Midnight Girl" sparkles with lines that keep the audience convulsed with laughter. As a feature of this production, Adolf Phillip, the author-actor-manager and producer, is making his final appearance on the German-American stage, and will, after this season, devote all his time in writing for the English-speaking stage. Broadway owes many a sensational musical play to Adolf Phillips and the theatregoers will look to him for more.

The orchestra of the Symphony Society of New York, under Walter Damrosch, has just returned from a most successful engagement in Pittsburgh, and will open the symphony season in New York, at Aeolian Hall, on Sunday afternoon, October 26, at three o'clock. Mme. Johanna Gadsch will be the soloist, and will sing an aria from Tschalkowsky's "Joanne d'Arc" and three Wagner songs orchestrated by Mottl. The balance of the programme will include the Fifth Symphony of Tschalkowsky, and a rhapsody by the young Roumanian composer, Enesco. This rhapsody in A major is built on Roumanian airs, and is the first of a series of three published as Opus II. Interesting in contrast to

Gastroaids---A New Preparation for All Stomach Troubles

While medical science is making rapid strides in the treatment of tuberculosis, cancer, spinal-meningitis, diphtheria, etc. it has not overlooked the importance of the digestive organs. Without perfect, normal digestion, no human being can attain the maximum of efficiency, strength, weight or health. It is now known that more diseases have their origin from malnutrition than any other cause. "I had tuberculosis a few years ago," said a New York publisher recently, "and I got it because my stomach wouldn't digest my food to nourish my body." The medical world has recently perfected a remarkable preparation for the stomach called GASTROAIDS. It is for all forms of dyspepsia and indigestion, sour, acid stomach, bitter taste, swimming head, greasy risings, pains after eating, etc., which every dyspeptic knows only too well. Now we say "try it" and know the joys of being able to eat any kind of food at any time in any manner. It is truly a great preparation, highly endorsed and thoroughly guaranteed. At any druggist's for 10c., 25c. or 50c., or from Curtis Chemical Company, 117 East 24th Street, New York City. Remember, it's GASTROAIDS.

these modern works will be a concerto for strings by Vivaldi, one of the early writers for violin. The first concert in the Friday afternoon series will be given on October 31. Mme. Louise Homer will be the soloist, and the programme will comprise Haydn's Symphony in D (The Clock), a serenade in D by Brahms, and Loeffler's "La Willanelle du Diable."

Miss Florence Austin, a young American violinist, will give a recital at Aeolian Hall on Tuesday afternoon, October 28. Miss Austin, who will have the assistance of Miss Edna Rothwell at the piano, will give Reiss' suite in G minor, Wieniawski's concerto in D minor and selections by Vitali, Campagnoni, Burleigh, Musin and Ernst.

For her song recital to-morrow afternoon at Carnegie Hall Miss Geraldine Farrar has announced a varied programme which will no doubt satisfy all her various admirers. The programme is as follows:

- 1. Wonnevoller Mai ..... Gluck
La Partenza ..... Beethoven
Mit einem gemalten Band ..... Beethoven
Oh! had I Jubal's Lyre ..... Handel

Ouvre tes yeux bleus (request) ..... Massan-t
I'm not as other lasses ..... Hugo Wolf
The Maiden and the Buttrifly ..... Chadwick
The Bluebell ..... MacDowell

The current bill at the Palace Theatre, composed almost exclusively of headliners, is one of the greatest ever assembled. Marie Lloyd made such a success last week that she is retained, and sharing premier honors with her is Ethel Levey, who makes her last vaudeville appearance anywhere at the Palace. At the conclusion of her engagement at that house she sails for London, where she will appear with Gerald Du Maurier, son of the author of "Tribby," in a new play being written by Sir James Matthew Barrie, and afterward, it is announced, she will play Lady Macbeth in London. Of vaudeville interest, also, is the appearance of Amelia Stone and Armand Kalisz and their company, presenting an opera bouffe in one act and a prologue, with half a dozen musical numbers, called "Mon Desir." Paul Morion and Naomi Glass, Armstrong and Ford, Bankhoff and Girle, Moran and Wisser and the Maxine Brothers.

The Liebler Co. will present May Irwin in her laughing success "Widow by Proxy," at Klaw and Erlanger's Grand Opera House next week. Miss Irwin won a signal success in this comedy at Geo. M. Cohan's Theatre last spring, playing the part of a singing teacher, reduced to her uppers and harassed by dress-makers and tradesmen clamoring for their money. By a series of circumstances she impersonates a widow and shocks a staid New England household, finally emerging from all her troubles as a happy bride. In "Widow by Proxy" May Irwin is simply May Irwin and what greater promise of fun-making can be held out to the prospective amusement seeker? In addition she sings some of the successes that made her famous as a delineator of the Southern ducky. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

A German melodrama, "Kasernenluft," is the current play introduced at the Irving Place Theatre. "Kasernenluft" is very dramatic and full of splendid situations, and the old story of two men in love with the same girl, with its many dangers and intrigues, is well placed. In both of the principal characters, acting with fervor and sincerity, Grete Meyer, so well known to lovers of the German stage, does fine work, with an able second in Annie Simson. Heinrich Marlow, as a stage director, and also in the part of Christian Frizzen, is another deserving special mention. The first appearance of Rudolf Christians, who is this year the director of the Irving Place Theatre, will be made on Saturday afternoon and Sunday evening, when Sudermann's comedy "Glueck im Winkel" will be acted for the first time in several years.

The new dramatic version of Goldsmith's exquisite story, "The Vicar of Wakefield," has just been completed by Louis N. Parker, the English playwright, author of "Joseph and His Brethren," "Disraeli," and "Pomander Walk." Mr. Parker has written this play with a view to fitting Mr. Cyril Maude, the eminent English actor, who will play a preliminary season in a repertoire at Wallack's Theatre, beginning November 3, in the tender and appealing character of Dr. Primrose. Miss Margery Maude, who is with her father in this country, will be the "Olivia" of Mr. Parker's new version. If there is any one association more important in the brilliant dramatic history of Wallack's Theatre in New York, it is their recollection of the production of "The Vicar of Wakefield" made years ago at that theatre. Nearer to us of this 20th century is the splendid interpretation of Goldsmith's poem given by Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry in this country.

Prominent among the early piano recitals of the present season is the first New York appearance of a Boston artist, Rosalie Thornton, at Aeolian Hall, on the afternoon of November 3, at 3 o'clock. Boston is the adopted home of Miss Thornton, being in reality a Virginian, and descended from a very representative old Southern family—her father being Prof. William M.

Thornton of the University of Virginia. She arrives for a hearing on the New York concert platform via Baltimore, Boston and Berlin, having studied during the last ten years respectively with Ernest Hutcheson, Heinrich Gebhard, and latterly for three years abroad with Arthur Schnabel. The unqualified indorsement of these masters, together with the success with which she has played at various music centers throughout the country, and many schools and colleges, constitute Miss Thornton's claim to a New York hearing. Novelties will not figure on Miss Thornton's programme on this occasion, but much that is sterling will commend itself not only for scholarship, but for charm and diversity.

The concerts of The Philharmonic Society of New York, at Carnegie Hall next Thursday evening and Friday afternoon, under Josef Stransky, mark the opening of the seventy-second season of America's oldest symphonic organization. The soloist at both concerts will be the most celebrated of all women pianists, Mme. Teresa Carreno, who has not been heard in New York for several years. Mr. Stransky's programme for Thursday and Friday will offer Berlioz' overture "King Lear," and the same composer's "Symphonic Fantastique"; two compositions by Tschalkowsky will be given, the concerto pianoforte and orchestra, No. 1 in B minor, and the Marche Slav.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Final Rally for Federation.
The Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities has sent the following telegram to its members and friends:
As one of the Old Guard, you are urged to attend the closing rally of our last campaign to secure the Rosenwald offer.
This will be held at the Unity Club, 482 Franklin Avenue, on Tuesday, October 28, at 8 p. m. The results of our efforts will then be announced. Rabbi Judah L. Magnes of Manhattan will be the principal speaker.
In the meantime, don't fail to do your share to make our campaign a great success. If you require any additional names to solicit, kindly notify the offices of the Federation at 732 Flushing Avenue. Then be prepared to report full information about these names at the meeting.
Don't fail to attend this closing rally. You may invite others. Dress informal. Nothing will be asked of you except that you join in the work.

Yours for the Cause,
BENJAMIN H. NAMM,
Chairman Membership Committee,

Congregation Sons of Israel, Bath Beach.
The Congregation Sons of Israel, of Bath Beach, recently added many new names to its membership, and is in every respect in a sound financial condition. The rather large synagogue was found almost inadequate to the demands during the recent Holy Days, nearly all the seats having been disposed of weeks before. Services were also held in the school rooms, and in both parts the building was overcrowded. The services were of a very impressive character, being conducted on the main floor by the Cantor, Rev. Abraham Sukenoig, assisted by a choir of boys and men. Rev. Henry S. Morais, the minister, preached on the eve of both days of the New Year, and on the Sabbath of Penitence and on Atonement Eve, likewise during the Succoth Festival. Rev. L. Flax sounded the Shofar, read the Law and assisted in the services, as did Messrs. Silverzweig, Adolph Slomka, Meyer Greenfield and Julius Levy, while the services down stairs were conducted by Messrs. Shafran, Coblenz and Roeman.

The congregation received quite a number of gifts from different sources, among them a handsome white pulpit cover from Mrs. Philip Rosenwasser, a white mantle for a Scroll of the Law from Mrs. Mandel, two white silk curtains for the Arks, containing the Sources of the Prophets from Mrs. Shafran, while the Ladies' Educational Society of the congregation is about to present it with a handsome new Reading Desk, which is to be placed in the Almemor of the synagogue.

During the services on the second day Succoth, Mr. Albert Rosenblatt, a member of the congregation, made a strong appeal for the survivors of the ill-fated steamer Voltorno, who were being cared for at the Hachnosath Orchim, of New York. Mr. Rosenblatt's remarks were headed by the congregation and the sum of $250 was subscribed and paid in at the termination of the Sabbath. Since then Mr. Rosenblatt has handed this fund to the institution.

The annual meeting of the Congregation Sons of Israel was held last Saturday evening, at which there was a very large attendance of members. New officers and directors were elected as follows: Joseph Wien, president; Julius Levy, vice-president; Harry Adman, treasurer; F. Tworger, recording secretary; Charles Paston, financial secretary, and these trustees: Samuel Levy, I. Schwartz, Edward Reisch, H. Meister, M. Goldstone, M. Levison and Solomon Betts.

The Ladies' Educational Society of the congregation gave a benefit on Tuesday evening of this week in a downtown Yiddish theatre, from which a considerable sum was netted for its worthy purpose. The Succah, erected in the rear of the synagogue, was visited by many after the services, and the Ladies' Society entertained the entire Hebrew school at a special entertainment after the session last Sunday morning.

Congregation Bath Israel Anshel Emes.
The fifty-seventh annual meeting of the congregation was held on Sunday afternoon, October 19, in the auditorium of the Sunday school building. There was a large attendance in spite of the inclement weather. The report of the president, Mr. I. Applebaum, showed the congregation to be in a most flourishing condition. The membership increased considerably, the receipts for the year were larger than ever before and the attendance at services and at the congregation's schools showed marked improvement. Reports were also rendered by the treasurer, Mr. Samuel Cohen; by the president of the sisterhood, Mrs. P. Weinberg; by the chairman of the Talmud Torah, Mr. Michael Salt; by the superintendent of the Sunday school, Mr. Harry G. Anderson; by the chairman of the Chevrah Kadisha, Mr. Louis Summer, and others. A great deal of enthusiasm was displayed by the members present as the reports were read.

The following officers were unanimously elected for a term of one year: President, Mr. Herman Alexander; vice-president, Mr. Jacob Kronman; treasurer, Mr. Pincus Weinberg, and honorary secretary, Mr. Samuel Lederman. The following were re-elected trustees for a term of three years: I. Applebaum, S. Lederman, A. Dango, J. Kronman and P. Weinberg. The congregation is the oldest Jewish congregation in the city of Brooklyn and has a large membership. Rev. Israel Goldfarb is its rabbi.

The fifth annual ball of the Sisterhood will be held on Sunday evening, October 26, at the "Imperial" on Fulton street and Red Hook lane. It is expected that a large number of Brooklyn's best Jews will attend the affair.

On Sunday morning last, nearly 300 children registered as pupils in the Sunday school and it is hoped that a similar number will register on the coming Sunday. The school is in charge of Assistant District Attorney Harry G. Anderson, Rabbi Israel Goldfarb and a staff of 25 volunteer teachers.

Junior Aid League.
At the last regular meeting of the Junior Aid League of Brooklyn, held on October 19 in the vestry rooms of Cong. Bath Israel Anshel Emes, 236 Harrison street, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Miss Mary Kaplan; vice-president, Miss Sarah Goldberg; secretary, Miss Jeanette Lazarus; treasurer, Miss Sophie Aarons; master of ceremonies, Mr. Wm. Goldman; chairman Advisory Board, Mr. J. Hellwell; Board of Directors, Mr. Maxwell Salem; Mrs. Theodore Isbutsky, Miss Ray Itzkowitz, Mr. Jack Blair.

The installation of officers will take place soon after the third annual ball, given by the J. A. L. at the Imperial, Red Hook Lane and Fulton street, on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 23. The proceeds of this ball will go for the Denver Sanitarium for Consumptives.

The Ridgewood Hebrew Educational Alliance.

A parents' meeting was held on Sunday, October 19, at the temporary school building, No. 136 Stanhope street, near Myrtle avenue. There was a goodly attendance and several eloquent speakers addressed the meeting. The result was that several new classes will be opened in the near future.

The school is meeting with signal success and at present over 100 boys and girls are receiving daily instruction in Jewish religion and history.

Williamsburg Y. M. H. A.
The rapid growth of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Williamsburg has emphasized the inadequacy of its building and the necessity of the home of the founders of the institution looked forward to. To increase the association's building fund, arrangements have been completed to hold a ball at the Masonic Temple, Lafayette and Clermont avenues, on Saturday night, Nov. 29.

Hebrew Educational Society.
The lectures for the coming week are as follows: This (Friday) evening, October 24, Rabbi Sidney E. Goldstein, "The Content of Religion."
Saturday evening, October 25, Charles M. Shapiro, "The Necessity of Learning English and the Use of Education." (This lecture will be in Yiddish and will be illustrated.)
Sunday evening, October 26, Congressman Herman A. Metz, "What is the Business of Congress?"

On Sunday, October 12, the Alumni Association of Temple Emanuel, Borough Park, was organized, under the leadership of Rabbi Nathan Lublin.

On Sunday, October 10, Rabbi Nathan Lublin was the principal speaker on the occasion of the Seeyum Hatorah celebration arranged by the Sea Gate Sisterhood of Coney Island.

Mrs. Jeannette Levy, one of the founders of Temple Beth Elohim, of Williamsburg, and for more than half a century identified with Jewish charities, died at her home, 864 Bushwick avenue, last Friday, aged seventy-five.

The Young Folks' League, of Temple Shaari Zedek, held its first open meeting last Sunday night in the vestry rooms of the synagogue.

The officers of the Hebrew Home for the Aged hope to raise $50,000 at their fair and bazaar, to be held during the week commencing November 16.

comedy success, "Years of Discretion," which David Belasco will send to the Montauk Theatre for the week of October 27. The play comes direct from its long run at the Belasco Theatre, New York, where for the greater part of last season its universal appeal made it the most popular dramatic attraction in Manhattan. Every one loves a love story, particularly if the tale is one of happiness and one that has no very serious side, and in this respect Frederick Hatton and Fanny Locke Hatton, the authors of "Years of Discretion," prepared an ideal plot. Its situations are delicious and while the wiles of cupid are often mildly satired, the main object of the play is to provoke laughter, and in this particular it succeeds admirably. To enact this subtle and exquisitely drawn play, Mr. Belasco selected actors of keen intelligence and broad experience, giving us in one cast Effie Shannon, Alice Putnam, Herbert Kelsey, John Flood, Louis Massen, Robert McWade, Jr., E. M. Holland, Grant Mitchell and Camilla Dalberg, all being sufficiently distinguished to cause the company to be heralded as a stellar organization.

The Trocadero Burlesquers, one of the foremost of the Columbia Amusement Company's attractions, will be at the Star Theatre next week. An entirely new two-act burlesque called "The Legend of the Ring," written by Frank Finney, who is also the leading comedian of the company, will be presented by a cast that includes several of the most popular performers in burlesque. Among them are Florence Mills, Sam Adams, Minnie Burke, Catherine Crawford, Zella Clayton, Lillian English, John P. Griffith, Lila Raymond and George Brennan. Another strong bill has been prepared for Sunday's continuous concert.

RABIB AKIBA

Dear Children:

Rabbi Akiba was always wont to say "Whatever the Merciful Father does is for the best"; he also taught his disciples to make use of this motto, no matter what happened to them.

Once as he traveled to a certain town, night overtook him on the way, and he applied to the nearest inn for lodgings, but he was told he could not be accommodated. "Whatever the Merciful Father does is for the best," said he. He went to make himself a couch in the field. He had with him a rooster to awake him in the morning; a donkey upon which he rode, and a torch to light the way. A strong wind blew and extinguished the torch, a cat came and killed the rooster, and a lion came and devoured the donkey. Said Rabbi Akiba: "Whatever the Merciful One does is for the best." That night a band of robbers came and took all the inhabitants of the town captive in order to sell them as slaves. He told his disciples of this occurrence and said, "Did I not tell you that all that the Holy One, blessed be He, does is for the best? for, lo! if the inn-keeper would have taken me in I would have been taken captive with the rest; if the torch were alight the robbers would have seen me; if the donkey had brayed or the rooster crowed the robbers would have come and captured me."

Rabbi Akiba always taught that the planets have no influence upon the life of an Israelite, as prayer could alter his destiny from evil to good, and proved it by his own experience. Once an astrologer told him that his daughter would die from the bite of a snake upon her wedding day. Rabbi Akiba worried greatly at the indication of his daughter's horoscope. On her wedding day she stuck her jeweled hair pin in the wall, and it so happened that it pierced the eye of a snake. In the morning when she drew the jeweled pin out of the wall a dead snake trailed along upon its point. "My daughter," cried the Rabbi, "what meritorious action did you perform to make you deserving of such a miracle?" "Father," said she, "last night as the entire household was busy preparing for the wedding a poor man came and stood at the door begging for alms, but everybody was so busy with the banquet that no one paid any attention to him. I arose and took the portion that you had given me and gave it to him." Said he to her: "Thou has performed a commandment." Rabbi Akiba then went forth and proclaimed, "But righteousness will deliver from death," not alone from a violent death, but even from a natural death, will it deliver."

Turius Rufus, the Roman General, once asked Rabbi Akiba "if your heavenly Father loves the poor why does he not supply their wants?" Rabbi Akiba answered "in order that the charity that we give them might cause us to be saved from the punishment of Gehinom." "On the contrary," said Turius Rufus, "because of this charity you deserve the punishment of Gehinom. I would compare this to a king of flesh and blood who was angry with his servant and confined him in prison and commanded that no one bring him anything to eat or drink, and a man came and gave him to eat and drink. When the king heard it was he not angry with the man?" And ye are called servants, for it is said, "For unto me are the children of Israel servants." Said Rabbi Akiba, "I will tell you to what this may be compared, to a king of flesh and blood who was angry with his son and confined him in prison and commanded that no one bring him food or drink, and a man went and brought him food and drink. When the king heard this did he not send that man a present? And we are called children, for it is said, "Ye are children of the Eternal your Lord." "Ye are called children, but ye are also called servants," answered Turius Rufus. "When ye do the will of the Omnipresent ye are called children, but when you do not do the will of the Omnipresent you are called servants, and now ye are not doing the will of the Omnipresent. Answered Rabbi Akiba: "Behold it is said, 'Distribute thy bread to the hungry and bring the afflicted poor into thy house,' and when does this apply to us if not now. Therefore we must fulfill thy commandment to distribute bread to the hungry."

Algy's Mother—I suppose yer gittin' a good fee, sir, fer attendin' to the rich Smith boy?

Doctor—Well, yes, I get a pretty good fee; but why are you asking?

Algy's Mother—Well, I 'ope yer won't forget that my little Algy threw the brick that 'it 'im!

Mr. Arthur Roberts, the famous comedian, once averted a panic in a theatre by a timely joke. Some scenery had caught fire, and the burning smell alarmed the audience so much that a panic seemed imminent. At this moment Mr. Roberts appeared at the footlights and addressed the spectators, assuring them that there was no danger. "I give you my word of honor there is no danger!" he said.

Still the audience did not seem at all convinced, which led the actor to exclaim:

"Ladies and gentlemen, confound it all, do you imagine if there was any danger I'd be here?"

A minister opened his Sunday-school class with a well-known hymn, "Little drops of water, little grains of sand." In the middle of the first verse he stopped the singing and complained strongly of the half-hearted manner in which it was rendered. He made a fresh start.

"Now, then," he shouted, "'Little drops of water,' and for goodness' sake put some spirit into it!"

A medical professor wrote on the blackboard in his laboratory:

"Professor Wilson informs his students that he has this day been appointed honorary physician to His Majesty the King."

In the course of the morning he had occasion to leave the room, and found on his return that some wag had added to the announcement the words:

"God save the King."

CONUNDRUMS.

Why does a coat get larger when taken out of a carpet bag? Because you find it in-creases.

Why will an insolent fishmonger get more business than a civil one? Because when he sells fish, he gives sauce with it.

What part of a fish is like the end of a book? The fin-is.

Why is a man's face shaved in January like a celebrated fur? Because it's a chin-chilly.

What is that which nobody wishes to have and nobody likes to lose? A lawsuit.

When does a post resemble a seed? When used to prop-a-gate.
