The Synagogue, the School and Tradition*

By Rabbi Moses Rosenthal

It is well that we survey the field together and discover the difficulties to be surmounted in order that we may enter into the holy work on which we are embarked equipped with a large optimism and confident for the future. Our sages identify the Torah with wisdom, and they quaintly remark that when God created the world he found his model in the Torah. Let us emulate our Heavenly Father and seek in the Torah the guiding principles of our work. There is a sentence in the address delivered by Moses to the Israelites before they went up into the Promised Land, to which I invite your attention:

He charged them: "(Remember) especially the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb"

"When the Lord said unto me, Gather me the people together and I will make them hear my words"

"that they may learn to fear me all the days that they shall live upon the earth, and that they may teach their children."—Deut. 4:10.

Upon these foundations—of the Synagogue, the Religious Education of the Youth and Tradition—I shall endeavor, my friends, with your co-operation and with God's help, to build the structure of Judaism in this community.

I.

It shall be my aim constantly to emphasize the ideal of the synagogue. Life has two aspects: individual and communal; and the individual expresses himself best in his relation to the community. The criterion of good citizenship is the extent to which the citizen identifies himself with the altruistic and humanitarian aspirations of his fellowmen; his patriotism and usefulness are gauged by the support which he gives toward the maintenance of its institutions and the safeguarding of its ideals. We Jews, in addition to the obligations that we owe to the state of which we are citizens, must pay allegiance also to another community which we form everywhere—a distinct Jewish brotherhood. And the mainstay of the Jewish community has been and of necessity must be the synagogue. The synagogue has been the center of gravity of Jewish life—its rallying point, its watchword, its bond of union—yea, the very life and soul of the community. Indeed, the term Kehillah which denotes a united Jewish community has its original application in the welding of the Jews together into a religious organization. "Gather me the people together that they may learn to fear me." Synagogue and community cannot be divorced from each other. The mountain peaks of Jewish life are prayer, study and service, and those are the things for which the synagogue has firmly stood against fire and sword.

As the Beth Hatephlah—it ministers to the emotional nature of the Jew. "Prayer is the soul's speech to God"; prayer gives fulness to our spiritual life; prayer lifts the bruised soul of synagogue is also an expression of the needs and emotions of entire Israel. Through the prayers of the synagogue a people four thousand years old has poured out its heart, they have been uttered on the scaffold and at the burning stake and are dyed crimson with discussions and incessant hammerings of Talmudic logic the intellectual genius of the Jew was forged. In the synagogue he held communion with the great souls of the past; he studied and emulated the exemplary lives of prophets and rabbis; he became familiar with the in which the people or their representatives gathered to work out plans for the welfare of the community, to review the common joys and sorrows, to take counsel for the strengthening of Judaism from within and for its preservation against attacks by the enemy without. In it also were started all the philanthropic impulses of the community. The synagogue has been the headquarters of social service.

It is the sacred duty of every Jew to identify himself fully with the Jewish communal life, and to help make the synagogue what it has been and what it must continue to be—the religious, intellectual and social center of the community; a great power-house, set in some corner of the busy town, generating the electric current that sends the multitudes along the different lines of travel which radiate through a city's streets—the worker, the business man and the professional man to their daily pursuits impelled by honest motives and ethical ideals; the mother, the father and the children to the home imbued with a genuine love of Judaism and of Jewish family life.

The call of the synagogue to the modern Jew is very loud and urgent. Will he remain apathetic or will he respond to it? In rabbinic phraseology we may say that "a city, the roofs of whose private dwellings are higher than the synagogue, is doomed to destruction." Where individual, material affairs overshadow the communal, spiritual aims, there lurks danger. The safety and longevity of an organized society depends upon the readiness of each individual to sacrifice some of his money, honor, convenience, and personal opinions for the common good. And that our synagogue may grow and become distinguished it will have to be supported by personal service, regular attendance, and genuine heartfelt interest. It is a dictum of Jewish ethics: "Separate not thyself from the community." Of what use would an engine be to a ship, if it were lying loose in the hull? It must be fastened to it with bolts and screws, before it can propel the vessel. A man must be bolted and screwed to the community by duties, responsibilities and personal sacrifices before he can work well for its advancement.

II.

The injunction to gather the Israelites together is explained "that they may learn to fear me and that they may teach their children." An index of the Jew's love of God is the attention which he pays to the religious education of the youth. A Jew who is filled with the spirit of God, a Jew who has a sense of gratitude to the founders and preservers of the nation will strain every nerve to perpetuate the results for which thousands have toiled, suffered and died by transmitting to his children the spiritual treasures of Judaism. For, the continued existence of Israel is conditioned upon man as on eagle's wings up to the highest heaven for divine healing; for faith under affliction, for guidance in moral perplexity, for courage and comfort in sorrow. And the service of the Jewish blood. The synagogue is a reservoir of moral and spiritual strength. And the synagogue as the Beth Hamidrash—contributed immensely to the development of the Jew. In the heated spiritual treasures of his people; its very atmosphere imbued him with lofty ideals.

The synagogue has also been the Beth Hakenesseth—a sort of city hall, the loyalty of Israel's youth. This idea is expressed in poetic form in a well-known midrash.

When the Israelites stood prepared to receive the Torah, the Holy One, blessed be he, said: "I will give you my Torah, but you must first give me an assurance that you will preserve it." The Israelites said, "Our Patriarchs shall be our pledges." But God refused to accept them. They were not good enough. Then they said, "Our Prophets shall be our pledges." These also were rejected. They were not good enough. Finally, they exclaimed with one voice, "Our children shall be our pledges," and at once God replied, "These are surely trustworthy pledges. Through them I will give unto you my Torah." Israel's youth is Israel's insurance policy.

It is a fundamental law of nature that every living organism desires to perpetuate itself, to win life everlasting. And the same innate yearning for immortality manifests itself also in national life. This hope is realized through the younger generation. But the foundation of the future generation is laid by the one preceding it, and so upon the soundness or rottenness of this foundation depends the existence of the entire people. If the present generation of Jews shall bequeath to the one just growing up the spiritual heritage which it has received and developed, if its attitude toward the education of the children shall be a serious, thoughtful one, then the life of the Jewish people will be safe in the hands of its children. But if our attitude shall be one of indifference, of carelessness, if religious instruction shall be subordinated to every other study and accomplishment, if the spirit of old Israel shall not be poured into young Israel, then young Israel will not be, and the days of old Israel will be numbered.

To insure our people's existence the Talmud Torah must receive all the attention and care that we can possibly bestow on it. In former generations the home was a Yeshibah Kotonah miniature academy where father and son and grandson studied their traditions. The influence of the synagogue of the community entered more deeply into the life of the Jew. To-day all the Jewish training of the child is left to the Hebrew school, which is only a faint spark compared to the bright flame of the public school. In the latter every nation is made to pass in review before his eyes, and he learns about their heroes and their achievements, but the Jew whose brain and brawn have built up every nation is either missing from this parade or is placed so far in the background that he is hardly to be distinguished. Strange ideals, literatures and religions are expounded to him, and he little dreams of the grandeur, the poetic beauty and the soul-stirring episodes to be found in his own literature and history. The death of Judaism and Jewry will be brought about by the ignorance of its youth. The Russian newspapers reported at the time of the Bellis case that there were many Jews who were not positive that their coreligionists do not use Christian blood for Passover. The best weapon with which to fight ignorance of Judaism is the Hebrew school. Without it the synagogue is useless. For, if the synagogue is the reservoir of Jewish feeling the Talmud Torah is its feed pipe.

A story is told about the mother of one of the rabbis. She used to bring her little son in his cradle close to the door of the academy where the sages studied, and there she would sit and sew for hours, thinking that the place, the surroundings, the wise words of teachers in Israel would inspire him unconsciously to become a guide to his people in later years.

III.

Our text admonishes us that our synagogue and our school must be of the kind that were ordained from the very beginning—"the day that thou stoodest before the Lord thy God in Horeb." They must be founded upon tradition. National life as well as individual life is shaped by forces that work from within and forces that operate from the outside. The force that drives national life together is tradition. Without tradition we are like a balloon without ballast. The Jewish people cannot have a future if it ceases to draw its nourishment from the past. If orthodox Judaism is stamped as reactionary and obsolete, then what is the source of the future?

And religion of convenience cannot succeed, for convenience is only relative and we often find that we pay too dearly for our conveniences. Ever since the Jew won his political equality many of our brethren have been working on the principle that we must imitate our neighbors and follow the crowd. But whoever follows the crowd is going to ruin. In becoming like the others we lose our individuality and we thus commit suicide. This desire to efface as much as possible the lines of demarcation between the Jew and the non-Jew has led to the view that Judaism is a burden and that the yoke of the Torah ought to be lightened. Some of the most sacred Jewish characteristics have been discarded and the holiest sentiments trampled under foot. And now the would-be saviors of Judaism are beginning to see that they have brought too great a sacrifice on the altar of convenience—our nationality, our language, our Sabbath, the education of our youth, both the past and the future.

As for us, whether the world approve or disapprove we proclaim and we intend to give our undivided loyalty to the declaration of independence that was made on this day about four thousand years ago at the foot of Sinai: The Jews are a separate people and they will not assimilate with their neighbors. Our Judaism is not to be a colorless copy of unitarianism. Ours is to be a living, vital Judaism vibrating with Jewish emotions, causing the Jewish heart to palpitate and to beat faster with enthusiasm and love for our past, our present and our future.

And let me add a bit of rabbinic fancy. When God will sit in judgment upon the nations He will ask them: What have you accomplished? The Romans will say, "We have erected great public monuments and many places of amusement"; the Persians will say, "We have built bridges and conquered cities"; other nations will pride themselves on other material achievements. But Israel will simply say, "We have kept the Torah." Then the nations will be sadly disappointed; for Israel will be crowned with glory as representing the true achievement of mankind.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Why Does the Council Violate the Sabbath?

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
Recently I saw a letter in one of the Jewish papers written by Mrs. Hannah Solomon, of Chicago. In it she spoke of the reason why the Council was started and dwelt upon the Jewish spirit which was to permeate it.

It seems to me that Mrs. Solomon's letter was not half strong enough.

I have watched with great interest the work of the Council, and must say that I am surprised at some of the flagrant breaches of the Jewish religion.

The office of the executive secretary, from which should come the spirit for the entire organization, IS OPEN ON THE SABBATH! Upon inquiry I find that the National Executive Committee passed a motion some time ago requesting that this office be closed on the Sabbath. This has not been done. Why not? If the organization, through its Executive Committee, orders the office of the executive secretary closed on the Sabbath and she insists on keeping it open, is there no punishment for such open disregard of the request of those in authority? Very truly yours,
AN ARDENT COUNCILITE.

Make Ready for the Orthodox World Congress.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The message proclaimed two years ago from Kattowitz in Germany to all true sons of the Jewish people has found universal sympathy and appreciation. In all the lands of the dispersion, as well as in the Holy Land, among the Jewish masses of Eastern Europe and of America, in the centres of modern culture and in the abode of ancient Jewish learning, the Beth Ha-Midrash, the idea represented by the Agudath Israel, the revival of Jewish unity on the basis of the Torah-spirit has acted as the spark that arouses the fire of enthusiasm.

Local groups, unions of groups, juvenile groups, the cells from which the new organism is to be formed, have been organized in great numbers and now the task is to form from them the living body of Agudath Israel.

The world congress has been summoned. On Rosh-Chodesh Elul, from the 23d till the 31st of August, in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, the delegates of the local groups are to come together in a great gathering, in order to complete, under the guidance of the great men of Israel, that what was begun in Homburg and Kattowitz.

Brothers, think of the grandeur of the moment. For the first time in Jewish history, since Israel was scattered to all parts of the world, its sons are to assemble in order to establish a platform for the expression of the will of the true Judaism, faithful to the Law, in order to unite all loyal Jewish forces in the service of God and his Law, to work for the Torah and the people of the Torah. See to it that the best which we possess of intellectual, moral and economic values should be represented in this parliament of Torah-loyal Jewry. Send the best men to the world congress, men who possess the spiritual heritage of the past, men who see life in its needs with Jewish eyes and who are willing and able to do creative work for life. Use the short weeks which separate us from the Attend the local groups week after week in order to prepare all that is necessary, revive the spirit of unity, of mutual responsibility and of willingness to bring sacrifices. Rouse every individual to the work of propaganda; call all who hold aloof, all the indifferent and the timid to the banner of ancient loyalty.

The president, Dr. P. A. Siegelstein, read his annual report, which showed that $20,500 was collected since the institution was opened, and that thirty-five inmates were admitted into the home. The home is conducted on a cottage system, with every possible modern improvement, comfort, accommodation and convenience. No more than two or three inmates are permitted to be housed in one room. The inmates are visited daily by two local physicians from Mt. Vernon, and twice a week by a visiting physician.

A collection was taken up which resulted in the contribution of a large sum, and in the offer of one member to defray half of the expense of building an additional house or annex to the present home. A resolution was thereupon unanimously adopted to accept the offer, and to proceed at once with the building of the necessary addition to the home, including an annex for the special accommodation of convalescents, and a committee was appointed to devise the proper plans for the building.

The following officers were re-elected: Dr. P. A. Siegelstein, president; Mr. A. L. Kalman, vice-president; Mr. B. Corneal, treasurer, and Dr. Joe E. Braunstein, secretary.

GRUENING.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Mount Sinai Hospital, held on Sunday, June 14, 1914, announcement having been made of the death, on May 30, 1914, of Dr. Emil Gruening, who for thirty years served the institution as attending, and for five years as consulting aural and ophthalmic surgeon, it was, on motion, resolved to adopt the following minute.

"In the death of Dr. Emil Gruening, who served us so devotedly and efficiently during the past thirty-five years, the hospital has lost one who by his eminent abilities and his activities in the hospital shed great luster upon our institution. His unflinching courtesy and gentility has endeared him personally to all who were associated with him, and we, who were in such close touch with him during the many years of his service in our wards, feel a deep sense of personal loss in his passing away.

"To his bereaved family we tender our deepest sympathy in the great loss which they have sustained."

Why Zoolak Is Leader of All Milk Ferments

Contains 4 Per Cent. Butter Fats, Is a Perfect Food, and Is Not Seeking "Easy Money," Like Some Imitators.

By ALFRED W. McCANN.

It is hard, to suppress one's indignation when confronted by the plain truth connected with Dr. M. G. Dadirrian's efforts to introduce to America the virtues of fermented milk.

Throughout Bulgaria, Turkey, Persia and other Oriental countries for centuries the people have been eating and drinking yoghoord, which is made in three ways—in the form of little cheese-like balls, or a sort of cup custard, or as a liquid, something like buttermilk but entirely dissimilar in character and flavor. The superstitious Orientals, knowing nothing about chemistry, bacteriology or pathology, ascribed some mysterious virtue of yoghoord, not knowing that its value as a food and a medicine was the result of physiological laws, not of witchcraft, mystery or hocus-pocus. These laws are beginning now to be understood by modern medicine, and the dignity of yoghoord has been accordingly increased.

Dr. Dadirrian, thirty years ago, attempted to teach his fellow physicians in New York the food value of yoghoord—which is simply a scientifically fermented whole milk, including all the cream obtained from the cow. He called the product Zoolak.

Through the efforts of Dr. Dadirrian, Zoolak was introduced to the New York Academy of Medicine, where it was studied and discussed. Also through his efforts the medical journals published scientific papers concerning its history and its value. Dr. Dadirrian preached, wrote and prescribed, and while in some respects he differed with the opinions of Professor Metchnikoff, it can be said truthfully that the widespread interest in fermented milk in America to-day is due almost entirely to the labors and ideals of Dr. Dadirrian. He went about the work of producing a pure Zoolak for the benefit of hundreds of physicians who wanted to prescribe it, but who did not know how to get it for their patients.

Throughout the thirty years in which the Dadirrian family has been identified with the production of Zoolak there has never been a suspicion of "monkey business" connected with its preparation. They have kept it pure, honest, clean, decent and good. They were not business people and their hearts were not centered on easy money. Many an inventor has died in a garret, robbed of the fruits of his genius. The Dadirrian people, to be sure, have not died in a garret, but their little, old-fashioned business, of to-day is no bigger than it was ten years ago, although Zoolak is, without question, the finest product of its kind in America.

Clever imitations produced from skimmed or partly skimmed milk appeared on the market long ago, and with characteristic American energy their inferiority has been pushed far out ahead of the real thing, and the more or less famous American people have bought the inferior stuff and been satisfied.

Zoolak contains over 4 per cent. butter fats. The writer knows of no other fermented milk which contains as much as 2 per cent. Zoolak contains all the mineral salts of whole milk, all the protein of whole milk and the valuable lactic acid which is produced by a carefully safeguarded fermentation with only a pure culture.

Ordinary buttermilk and sour milk will rot. Zoolak will not rot. The carelessly made product decomposes because putrefactive bacteria of many kinds, sometimes including disease-breeding bacteria, find their way into the milk with the lactic acid bacillus.

Zoolak is a perfect food. There is no question about that. Nobody can dispute the statement. I have been all through the process and seen with my own eyes how carefully the milk is handled, how thoroughly it is sterilized, with what pains the culture is introduced and how completely the fermenting process is controlled.

The business man who finds it uncomfortable and unwholesome to eat a meal at noon during the hot weather will find a bottle of Zoolak and a few whole wheat crackers or a whole wheat muffin refreshing and strength-giving. Eight or ten such lunches in succession will make him realize that it is not so necessary as he thought to swallow a laxative pill before going to bed in order to prevent the gum-willies and the grouch on the following day.

Zoolak is food, laxative and antiseptic in one. Children can drink it with impunity. As a matter of fact the children of the Orient drink it constantly. When freshly made it is almost sweet. When a week old the lactic acid content increases in the bottle. Even at the end of a month, although quite acid, it is still a wholesome and strength-sustaining food.

It is on sale in every drug store in New York, and if this article helps to double its consumption I will be glad. In the mean time all that I drink myself I pay for, and I have received no bonus, either directly or indirectly, for setting down here for your benefit the plain truth as I know it. For my hasty lunch yesterday Zoolak and Wheatworth filled the bill, and I was sorry that thousands of busy people who so often squander several dollars for a poor return in many un-American restaurants every day, could not see the gain to themselves by eating such an impromptu lunch when business pressure interferes with time and slipping the difference into a fund that would help educate the underfed children of the poor of this city to a knowledge of the kind of food their little bodies require. A dream, yes; but perhaps it isn't so far off as you think.—Reprinted from the N. Y. Globe of June 4, 1914.

Business Crisis in Russia.

The London Times' correspondent at St. Petersburg wires that business on the Bourse there is at a standstill, owing to the suspension of foreign investments. The crisis is due chiefly, he says, to the reactionary and repressive policy of the Russian Minister of the Interior, which has been responsible for an enormous increase in the number of strikes and for the discouragement of foreign capital by "absurd and vexatious restrictions" placed on joint stock companies respecting Jews.

It is reliably announced that $125,000,000 of foreign capital which has been subscribed for the development of Russian industries is being withheld pending further orders and the statutes of more than 300 new companies have been pigeonholed.

While Minister Maklakoff is seeking to devise means to eliminate the Jews from Russian industries the Czar realizes the impossibility of maintaining the paradoxical situation and has empowered the Premier gradually to eliminate the obstacles to the Jews.

The Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, Philadelphia.

The annual meeting of the Board of Governors of the Dropsie College was held on Monday evening, June 8, 1914.

The resignation of Mr. Paul Warburg as a governor of the college, tendered because of his appointment as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, was accepted with sincere regret. Dr. Solomon Schechter, Ephraim Lederer and Edwin Wolf were re-elected governors for a term of three years. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. Cyrus Adler; vice-president, Hon. Mayer Sulzberger; treasurer, Oscar B. Teller; secretary, Ephraim Lederer.

During the past year twenty-four students were in attendance. The degree of Doctor of Hebrew Literature was conferred upon one of the instructors, Rabbi Abraham A. Neuman, by the Jewish Theological Seminary at its annual commencement on June 7. Two thousand one hundred and ten volumes were added to the library, making a total number of 10,510 volumes.

The following were appointed to fellowships for a term of one year: Biblical Department, Joseph Medoff (reappointed) and Powell H. Norton, B. D. of Crozer Theological Seminary; Rabbinical Department, Samuel A. Rabnowitz and Samuel Fredman (reappointed); Department of Cognate Languages, John Meighan (reappointed); Department of History, Norman Winestine, B. A., of Yale University, all the appointments to date from September 1, 1914.

The summer term will begin on Monday, July 6, and extend to Friday, August 28.

Jewish learning and orthodox Judaism have suffered a great loss by the death of Rabbi Isaac Halevy, which took place last month at Hamburg, Germany. Rabbi Halevy, who was sixty-six years of age, was particularly noted as a historian. By many he was regarded as the

The King of Bavaria recently paid a visit to his estates in Hungary. While there he gave an audience to the cantor of the synagogue, who handed him a copy of a prayer composed by him in His Majesty's honor. The Turkish Consul-General at Salonika has refused to issue the passports of one hundred and forty Jews, who desired to go on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem. The veto was, however, removed as the result of representations made by the Haham Bashi of Turkey, to the Prime Minister, but on condition that none of them remain in the Holy Land.

The development of the new Hebrew schools in Palestine is making rapid progress. There are already 922 scholars in the school at Jerusalem, and there are increases at all the other schools. The staff of teachers is complete, with the sole exception of the new Teachers' Seminary in Jerusalem, where there are still some positions vacant.

Literary Tribute to Israel Zangwill—An American Ambassador on the Position in Palestine—Dinner to Joseph Cowen—Suffragette in a Synagogue—Allen Emigration Board Chairman Displays Fringe Stupidity—Anti-Jewish Financial Legislation in Russia Bringing Industry There to a Standstill.

London, June 5, 1914.

The "Bookman," which is one of the leading London literary magazines, brought out its May issue as a special Israel Zangwill number. This was a well printed and well illustrated issue. The cover design was a study of Zangwill by Ginsbury and throughout the matter there were half a dozen photographic studies of the novelist, two caricatures and two reproductions of oil paintings. Furthermore, there were pictures of Mrs. Zangwill and the two eldest children, aged 3½ and 7 years, respectively, and of Far End Zangwill's country house, and 3 Hare Court, Temple, where Zangwill's London chambers are situated. Other characteristic pictures were also included and notably one of Mr. and Mrs. Zangwill taken in the balcony of a hotel at Basle in 1905 during the Zionist conference there at which the Jewish Territorial Organization was founded.

The number included a long appreciative article by Holbrook Jackson, of Zangwill, in which he declares that Zangwill is adapted by birth, experience, gifts and temperament to communicate between ineradicable Israel, and absorbing England. He was born in London fifty years ago of parents to whom England spelt sanctuary. His father, Moses Zangwill, burdened with dreams and race-consciousness, escaped from a Russian military prison, where he had lain under sentence of death for refusing, while in the army, to eat food which had not been consecrated according to Jewish rite. He arrived in London about the year 1850, and married a woman of his own race, who, although born in Poland, was of remote Spanish descent. There were five children, three boys and two girls, all of whom possessed more than the average mental gifts, and both of Israel's brothers, Mark and Louis, have artistic claims to recognition, the latter especially who, under the pseudonym "Z. Z.," has written "A Drama in Dutch" and other novels. Israel Zangwill was educated for the most part at the famous Jewish Free School in Whitechapel, where in the race for honors he left all behind him, winning the principal scholarship three years in succession, graduating at London University with triple honors. After leaving school he became a teacher, but with the full intention of getting into journalism as soon as possible. This occurred sooner than he expected, for friction arising over a point of school discipline, Zangwill resigned, but not before he had proved his efficiency as a teacher by seeing every one of the sixty boys in his class pass in every subject at the annual exhibition. Thus equipped with ability and a mind of his own, Israel Zangwill came to art.

Holbrook Jackson, reviewing Zangwill's work as a novelist, quotes him as saying "Artistic truth is for me literally the highest truth; art may seize the essence of persons and movements no less truly, and certainly far more vitally than a scientific generalization unifies a class of phenomena. Time and space are only the conditions through which spiritual facts struggle." The spiritual facts of Jewish history and of modern Jewish life have received their highest and most convincing expression in English, in such Zangwill books as "Children of the Ghetto," "Dreamers of the Ghetto," "The King of Schnorrers" and "They That Walk in Darkness." From the point of view of art his great achievement is the re-statement of the seemingly eternal tragedy of Israel in the light of modern experience and modern culture. And he has done this with fitting seriousness and a most gracious and refreshing sense of humor.

It is impossible to read this remarkable cycle of Jewish studies, says Jackson, without being moved by the mastery of the Jews over life—yes, and death. Shakespeare, who had probably never seen a Jew, makes Shylock the mere symbol of an exacting business man who is permitted to claim relationship with the rest of humanity on the grounds of senses which are possessed in common. But there is nothing in Shylock's claims to human kinship which might not with equal logic have made him kin with cat or dog—nothing save the claim that if a Jew is tickled he will laugh. It is clear that Shakespeare did not visualize the Jew as fully human. When he made Falstaff plead "I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew," he associated himself with the popular conception of the Jew as a rogue and outlaw. Dickens probably held a similar view when he created Fagin, but he sought to make amends in a later book by fashioning a Jew as impossibly good as Fagin was impossibly evil. Zangwill, on the other hand, having had the most intimate experience of Jews, and possessing both a sense of humor and a sense of fact, gives us a more convincing idea of his compatriots than we have yet had or are likely to have. But he does not give us only realistic portraiture, after the manner of the newer novelists of his early days; nor does he strive particularly to see the good and bad and to apportion praise and blame, after the manner of pre-Meredithian novelists. He knows the Jew to be human, not only because he hath "hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions," but because he is capable of the same virtues and vices, the same splendors and the same littlenesses as other human beings; that he is in short compact of good and bad like the rest of us. But, again quoting Holbrook Jackson, Zangwill does not commit the opposite folly of concluding therefore that the Jew is not different. That would have left us where Shakespeare and Dickens stood. He knows the Jew is different and that this difference is surmounted only by a genius for adaptability. These differences are revealed in his Jewish studies, which have always astonished Gentiles by their fairness in recognizing the evil as well as the good among Jews.

The Hon. Henry Morgenthau, United States Ambassador at Constantinople, has recently been giving his views on the present position in Palestine. Mr. Morgenthau made a tour of the various American institutions in Syria and Palestine, although this did not form any part of his formal duties as Ambassador. Everywhere, he says, he encountered proud, free and contented beings. There was no evidence of any sense of oppression, no bent backs nor furtive glances. The Jews he met were self-respecting and buoyant types. Women and girls working in the fields amused themselves from time to time by dancing, and it was hard to believe that these were frequently people who but a short time before were working with bent backs at sewing machines in sweat shops, etc. Mr. Morgenthau was reminded of birds freed from a cage. Two things struck the Ambassador in the colonization movement. For one thing, there were offered peaceful and secure homes and for another it would be easier to found and develop Jewish settlements in other countries as a result and in these other countries, especially in North and South America, the chances of prosperity are more favorable than in Palestine with its weak markets.

Discussing weaknesses Mr. Morgenthau viewed it that Jerusalem lacked a leader or a central authority which would provide a bond of union among the various Jewish interests in the country. Following up his visit to Palestine the Ambassador has arranged that Dr. Stephen S. Wise send out from the States to Palestine shortly a commission of from two to five members who would study the whole colonization question on the spot and furnish a report that would serve as a basis for future expansion.

Another return visitor from Palestine now in London, Joseph Cowen, president of the English Zionist Federation, was entertained at a banquet last week here. One hundred covers were laid in the well-known assembly rooms in Great Alie street, Whitechapel. He made an effective Zionist-cum-Palestine speech, and other contributions to the feast of words were made by Zangwill, S. B. Rubenstein and others.

On Sunday last, at the Brighton Synagogue (the town of Brighton is one of the principal seaside resorts of the Londoner), immediately after the completion of the service, a suffragette rose in the gallery and offered a prayer in the following words: "May God forgive King George of England and the Czar of Russia for the torture practiced on their women subjects in and out of prison."

Some of the persons holding authority under the Aliens act in this country look like qualifying for the first prize in stupidity. Take, for example, the chairman of the Aliens Appeal Board, where applicants go who have been turned down by the emigration authorities and which is supposed to hear their case and if proper reverse the decision of the port officials. A young Russian music hall artist, who was earning at his profession in his own country $75 a month, who had been arrested at Odessa for singing a song about Bellis, kept in prison for three months but not brought to trial, sought a freer opening for his talents in this country. He was described by one of the members of the appeal board as a smart, respectable young fellow. But the chairman of the board would not dream of allowing him to display his genius on English soil. "I am quite sure," he added, "we do not want any more singers and dancers in this country. We are overrun with them as it is."

Such a remark defies comment and perhaps more especially in these days when the higher walks of music and dancing are frequently here for months at a stretch almost monopolized by Russian performers.

As a result of the absurd and vexatious restrictions imposed upon joint stock companies with regard to Jews, Russian industry is arriving at a standstill. The position on the St. Petersburg Bourse is daily becoming worse. The joint efforts of the government and of the leading banks have repeatedly averted a serious crisis, but gradually transactions have become restricted and on June 3 they were practically nil. An aggravating circumstance is the unprecedented rise in foreign exchanges. The situation is all the more remarkable in view of the extraordinary "boom" in all industries as evidenced by the inability to execute orders, causing an increase in the imports, notably of coal and of pig iron.

There is a general agreement that the crisis is chiefly due to the reactionary and repressive policy of the Minister of the Interior, which is directly responsible for the enormous increase in so-called political strikes and for the discouragement of foreign capital by anti-Jewish legislation. According to reliable information, about $125,000,000 of foreign capital which had been subscribed for the development of Russian industries is being withheld pending further orders.

While the Minister of Commerce and Industry offers every encouragement to foreign capital, the Ministry of the Interior systematically places obstacles in its way. The status of over 300 new companies have been pigeonholed during the last fourteen months at the Ministry of the Interior, while M. Maklakoff is devising ways and means of eliminating the Jews from Russian industry. The Czar's rescript to the Minister of Finance, emphasizing the urgency of developing the resources of the country, is thus openly defied.

In the Government of Ekaterinoslaff some fifty large and small collieries owned or leased and worked by Jews, have been closed down by order of the Assistant Provincial Governor, and 6,000 colliers have been thrown out of employment. The Jewish proprietors and leaseholders have laid an energetic protest before the president of the Congress of South Russian Mines and are forwarding a petition to the Minister of Trade and Industry.

It is probable, however, that under the new legal restrictions affecting Jewish directorships in industrial companies these Hebrew proprietors and leaseholders will be compelled either to liquidate or dispose of their properties and share stocks to non-Jewish purchasers.

The collection this year for the Zionist Central Fund has already reached the amount of 300,000 marks. This year the collection has reached three times the amount of last year's contributions. However, the collection is in no way at an end, and many and still larger are the contributions promised by English-speaking countries.

According to Die Welt, Count Michael Karolyi, the Hungarian political agitator who recently paid us a visit, is a friend of the Jews only because at the present time it best serves his interest to be such. This makes him worse than no friend of the Jews at all.

Israel J. Zevin, the Yiddish feuilletonist, who is well known by his pseudonym of Tashrak, is represented in the Sunday edition of The New York Herald of June 7 by the first of his series of sketches, "Joe the Waiter." More are expected to follow. The sketches are brief and interesting and not translations of similar ones that appeared in the Yiddish press some years ago. Only why select the Herald for their publication in English?

The Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities has issued its detailed report of its own activity, and that of its various constituent societies, for 1913. The booklet makes interesting and encouraging reading and leaves one, rising from its perusal, with the impression that federation is the question of the hour in organized Jewish philanthropy and that the Jewish community of the Borough of Manhattan would do well perhaps in emulating the example of the large and influential section of our people residing across the East River.

Israel Zangwill's latest dramatic offering, "Plaster Saints," is somewhat on the line of his recent incursions into the domain of the drama. "The Melting Pot," "The Next Religion," and the play dealing with war surely may be regarded as dramatic treatments of the problems attacked by them. "Plaster Saints" is frankly a "problem play," dealing with the forms and material of personal religion. London has seen it and the general verdict appears to be favorable; New York will undoubtedly ere long have the same opportunity and may make the like return.

London now has three dayanim in its Beth Din, two of whom were solemnly inducted into office as such a fortnight ago. Thus the centre of Anglo-Jewry is fully equipped with an ecclesiastical tribunal, necessarily competent to deal with all ritual and Jewish juridical questions. It is a pity that New York, the greatest Jewish centre in the Diaspora, cannot similarly provide itself. The Jews are here; the men eminent and learned in matters Jewish, who would constitute such a court are also with us; why does not the forum take shape and come into being?

Miss Hannah Berman, of Dublin, whose name is tolerably well known to our readers by reason of the frequency with which it has appeared in our columns, appended to stories dealing with Jewish life in Russia, or to translations from the Yiddish, was recently made the subject of an interview by a representative of The Jewish Chronicle. Miss Berman declared in the course of the dialogue that Yiddish literature has "a brilliant future. Hardly a day passes but a whole host of new Yiddish writers arise to dazzle us. I don't profess to know more than a tiny section of the Yiddish writers of today, but those I do know make me feel that the old reproach that we do not support our own writers cannot now be levelled against us. The Yiddish high-class journals alone that are published every month in Russia are beyond counting. And their level is equal to the level of the best reviews of modern Europe." High praise and boundless optimism reside in these words, yet the truth is that the Yiddish is a force to be counted with in present-day Jewish literature. And nowhere is this more apparent than directly here in New York.

JUDAISM AND THE HEATED TERM

The summer season is with us once more, and again the age-old cry: What of our Judaism when the thermometer is in the "nineties?" Not that religion has aught to do with the seasons and the length or the shortness of the days! But, in this materialistic age, and especially in this land, which popularly is supposed to be quite given up to the worship of Mammon, there are many Jews who suffer their outward observance of the faith to fall into innocuous desuetude during the warm weather. They are mostly, if not all, of the Reform wing of the synagogue, for the followers of traditional Judaism are more heroic, are more eager to make sacrifices on behalf of their religion than are the Reformers, and do not take note of the position of the sun in the heavens or of the mercury in the thermometer on the wall.

Yet, assuming for the nonce that we are all obsessed with the desire in summer to escape the confines of the stifling cities, and to wander mid the fields and hills where no synagogue is to be found, our due practice of the tenets of the faith should not cease. Summer services for our people have become plentiful in the last few years, a fact which is to be noted with much pleasure, and a condition of affairs which is distinctly encouraging. Even where these services cannot be maintained—and they cannot exist in centres possessed of few Jews or none at all—the Jew on vacation bent may maintain his Judaism just as actively as in the cold season. Upholding every jot and tittle of his ceremonial observance, he may refresh his mind by the perusal of the pages of the Book of Books, or of any portion of the great literature in Hebrew and perhaps in other languages which depended for its inspiration upon the Bible. Although one man, or even half a dozen men, do not comprise a congregation, there cannot be any objection from the point of view of the philosophic rationalism of our faith, for such to offer up their prayers singly and thanksgiving to the Holy One, blessed be He, for the manifold blessings He has duly vouchsafed to them. In short, in the summer time the duty devolving upon all of us is to preserve our contact with our faith and our consciousness as brethren of the House of Israel at every hazard!

If these lines offer fruitful suggestions to those of our readers who may wish to pursue the subject further, our purpose will have been amply met.

In his answer to the charges of enmity to their religion brought against Signor Nathan by the Catholics of the United States, our co-religionist assumes a completely isolated and thoroughly independent attitude toward all religions, his own (the faith into which he was indubitably born) included. Thus, while he is not an enemy of religion, he is one of those free-thinking advocates of none. For the deus ex machina of the ancient Greeks such a position was logical and unassailable; for a mere mortal in the twentieth century it is not above the ridiculous. We shall not endeavor, assuming that our endeavor could bear the slightest possible fruit, to cause Signor Nathan to be more Jewish in his thought and action. But, if he became such, it were better for him and for all concerned. Moreover, this fact that Signor Nathan stands quite aloof from Judaism must not be lost sight of when the Catholics attack him for his antipathy to the Papacy, and vent their spleen on the Jews! The Jews, by Signor Nathan's own testimony, have nothing to do with the case: he does not wish to be identified with them, and they cannot and will not accept responsibility for him.

The stenographic report of the eleventh Zionist Congress, held at Vienna last September, has just appeared in volume form. It is an interesting record of opinions expressed and of business transacted, tending to the realization of the hopes bound up in the Zionist movement. The Zionist leaders have consistently published the several records of their international congresses, affording the student at once a complete account of the progress of their cause and an interesting narrative of an important part of contemporaneous Jewish history in the making.

According to The Brooklyn Daily Eagle President Henry Moskowitz, of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, is not above "playing politics" with the subordinates in his office in approved Tammany style. Only this time the Tammany adherents are the "goats." And because Mr. Moskowitz is a Jew, our Brooklyn contemporary has him charged with "favoring the editor of a Jewish weekly who was loudly Progressive in the last city campaign." For the present we refrain from further comment, to give President Moskowitz the needed opportunity to deal with the matter properly. But we thought the Reformers (politically, not Jewishly), were "holier-than-thou" when it comes to the "political game."

THE RELATIVITY OF HUMAN JUDGMENT

ושם ראינו את הנפילים בני ענק מן הנפילים ונתי בעינינו כחנכים וכן היינו בעיניהם.

"And there we saw the giants, the sons of Anak, who come of the giants, and we were in our sight as grasshoppers, and so we were in their sight. (Num. xiii, 33.)

OUR text is significant. It means this: Measure yourself against giants, and you will appear a dwarf—even to yourself; measure yourself against pigmies, and you will appear a giant—even to others! Human judgment is relative and hence, unreliable.

Man has from the beginning been in quest of absolute standards. What is the absolutely good, the absolutely true, the absolutely beautiful? This quest has engaged many a serious mind through the ages, yet we cannot say that the Absolute has been determined. Groping for support like a blind man, humanity has thus been wending its way along a most devious path, often returning to points it had long traversed. Each age embraced different standards, and yet beneath those standards there lingered the haunting misgiving that the human intellect has not found a secure anchorage and must more or less drift with the tides and the times.

To seek the true measure of things and fail in the quest—therein lies the pathos of man's life. What does this lack of the Absolute mean? It means not only defective knowledge, but also disturbed happiness. It means not only errors and falsehoods, but also tears and groans. When God from His absolute vision saw the world, he declared it all good. But when we from our relative viewpoint look out upon the world, we declare it partly good, partly evil. The sunshine is good, but the stormcloud is evil, for it hides the sun. Life is good but death is evil; health is good but sickness is evil; pleasure is good but suffering is evil, for that is the way it appears to us. But God created both light and darkness; and in the chorus of praise which daily ascends to His throne of glory, the storm sings no less harmoniously than the azure brightness; and in that rhythmic flux and reflux of the waves of existence in which nothing ever comes to a standstill, death dances to the same heavenly measure as life; and in that peace, passing understanding, that enwraps the divine Presence, fortune and misfortune are allies bound by the same eternal pact. Were we but possessed of the Absolute, our vision would penetrate the darkest veil and tears would be wiped away from off all faces, for we should recognize through all our experiences that the mouth of God speaks to us in both the major and the minor notes of existence.

Relativity in the dread ghosts that pursue us at every step. It sets our knowledge at naught and strews the path of humanity with the corpses of dead hypotheses. It obscures very often—too often—the way of duty and renders our greatest sacrifices useless. Under these circumstances was not the writer of Proverbs right when he said: "Lean not upon thine own understanding?" Yet there are many who think that they have found the Absolute in themselves. They think that the source and sanction of truth is in their own Reason. Do we not often hear about the self-sufficiency of the mind? They think that the moral authority, too, is in themselves. Whatever their heart in its dimmest promptings approves of, is good. Do we not often hear of this personal interpretation of Duty not only from the lips of a Kant, but also from those of the vulgar?

Now what is the essence of this romanticism which would place man in the centre of the universe? Does it not seem as if a dwarf were measuring himself against a giant, and yet trying to declare himself a Son of Anak? What is this but the result of a distorted vision which would magnify the little and belittle the large? Is it not more natural as well as more reasonable for us to recognize that in all our doings and strivings, in all our designs and desires, we are constantly pitting ourselves against a universe in which we are but a speck, against a God compared with whom the universe itself is as vanity and nothingness? That, therefore, we must not presume too much upon the feeble powers granted us by accepting our little yardstick as the measure of eternity? Was not the fault of the spies that they gauged Palestine after human standards?

The prophet Amos recounts one of his visions in the following manner: "Thus he showed me: and, behold, the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline, with a plumbline in his hand. And the Lord said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumbline. Then said the Lord, I will set a plumbline in the midst of my people Israel: I will not again pass by them any more. And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste, and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword." The prophet's vision refers to an epoch in Israelitish history when selfishness and sin had reached their height, and conduct was accommodated to individual and not to universal standards. It is therefore that Amos represents God as sitting on a wall holding a plumbline. He means to intimate that the plumbline according to which we are to rear the structure of human life, is not in our hands—it is in the hand of God. And no matter how high we rear that structure, no matter how daring our undertakings and how glorious our achievements, the question that must be answered is, Can these stand the test of God's plumbline? To our eyes, and judged by our wants and needs, our walls may be very straight and our house very beautiful; but what about that invisible plumbline? What about the Absolute? Aye, there is our difficulty! With our relative eye we cannot always perceive whither the Plumbline tends. But at all events it behooves us to remember that we are dwarfs pitted against a giant force; that therefore it would be unseemly for us to drop our own short plumbline into the unfathomable depths of existence and foolishly assert that we have struck bottom.

Max J. Herzberg's psychological study of Emma Lazarus' return to Judaism, as published in The Jewish Review of London, is thoroughly Zionist in aim and content. He admits that the poet, born into a nominally orthodox environment, did not return uncompromisingly to that orthodoxy, once her interest in and enthusiasm for Judaism revived. But, she looked upon the establishment of an independent nationality for her poor down-trodden and persecuted Russian brethren as the only solution, full and complete, of the problem of their existence, and thus dimly foreshadowed Herzl! 'Tis enough! Emma Lazarus is admitted to the company of the select. The faith is nothing, the name—Palestine—everything!

A man died in a Southern city recently. He was a bachelor all his life. We read that "yet he had many personal friends." Is this a libel or a base, post-mortem insinuation? Presumably it is much more dangerous to have personal friends of a certain sort when one is married than when one is single! How about this?

"The Broomstick Brigade: a Play of Palestine," is an interesting dramatic offering, with the poem Hatikvah as its grand climax, which Samuel Roth has written and the Bloch Publishing Company has issued. Its motive is avowedly Zionist, and its brevity makes it a useful vehicle for schools and societies wishing to produce amateur plays.

WORKINGMEN'S COMPENSATION LAW.

The innumerable interpretations of the various clauses and sections of the income tax law are not a circumstance, it seems, as to the meaning and interpretations which will accrue by reason of the going into operation of the workingmen's compensation law in this State.

There are thousands of classifications in this new law, and its compliance with its provisions is practically compulsory upon all who employ labor comprehended in these classifications.

To many the cost of insurance to compensate for injuries contemplated by this act, will prove to be a large burden—to be added to the present cost of running their business.

Both the State and the accident and liabilities-companies will be competitors in these insurance risks, with this difference that the insurance companies will choose the selected risks, while the State must by virtue of the law take any risk that is offered.

Then there is talk of further testing the constitutionality of the law, because of some of its features, and should the law be declared unconstitutional, the question of the safety of those who place their insurance with the State in such an event may become questionable; in this contingency, the insurance companies will be held closely in carrying out their contracts.

The daily press is already filled with articles endeavoring to disentangle the complexities which have already arisen before the law goes into effect.

While the liability companies have a department trained in handling this class of business, it would seem that the State must begin de novo and study the problem from experiences to come, which may prove a great handicap.

Already advertisements are being published by men who are ready to instruct those who are at sea respecting the various requisites of the law.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The President Explains.
Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
I take pleasure in inclosing you a reply from President Wilson anent a letter which I wrote him regarding his recent speech at the opening of the American University, wherein he was reported to have said that "real scholarship goes hand in hand only with the teachings of Jesus Christ," which remark was commented upon by you editorially last week.
Very truly yours,
EZEKIEL LEAVITT.
Boston, Mass., June 15, 1914.

"The White House."
Washington, June 11, 1914.
"My Dear Mr. Leavitt:
"The President has received your letter of June 9, and is very sorry that there should have been any unfair implication in what he said at the opening of the American University last week. He asks me to assure you that there was nothing of the kind in his mind, for there certainly is nothing in his thought that would discriminate in the important matter to which you refer. He finds that one of the risks and penalties of extemporaneous speaking is that you do not stop to consider the whole field, but address yourself merely to the matter directly in hand.

"Sincerely yours,
"J. P. TUMULTY,
"Secretary to the President.
"Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt, The Boston Jewish Voice, Boston, Mass."

International Council of Jewish Women.

At a meeting called May 14, 1914, by the German Frauenbund (Miss Pappenheim) and the Council of Jewish Women (Miss American) an International Council of Jewish Women was formed, consisting of the German Frauenbund, the Council of Jewish Women and certain individuals (twenty-five) present, representing countries where there were no national Jewish women's organizations.

The officers elected were:
President, Miss Pappenheim (Frankfurt); first vice-president, Miss American (New York); second vice-president, Mrs. Modell (London); secretary, Mrs. May (Berlin); assistant secretary-treasurer, Mrs. S. Simon (Manchester, England).

These officers were instructed as an Executive Committee to send out a letter and make propaganda and to call a meeting in about two years of a delegate body from all countries.

In addition to representatives of the Council of Jewish Women and the German Frauenbund, eight countries were represented by individuals at the meeting, viz., United States, Germany, France, England, Hungary, Austria, Tripoli and Italy.

Y., June 28-30, the following programme has been arranged: On Sabbath morning, June 27, sermons will be delivered by visiting rabbis attending the convention at the various synagogues of the city. Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, of New York, will deliver the convention sermon at the Beth Israel Synagogue.

On Saturday evening, June 27, a reception will be tendered all delegates by the Rochester Zionists at the Jewish Young Men's Association. A meeting of the National Executive Committee of the Federation will be held at 8.30 on the same evening in the same building.

On Sunday, June 28, at 9.30, the convention will be opened by Louis Lipsky, chairman. There will be an afternoon session at 2, and in the evening at 8 there will be a mass meeting at Convention Hall, with Louis Lipsky as chairman and Dr. Schmarya Levin, Rev. Hirsch Maslansky, Dr. J. L. Magnes, Abraham Goldberg, Jacob de Haas and others as speakers.

On Monday, June 29, there will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions and a banquet at Kaplan's Hall for delegates and friends. There will be morning and afternoon sessions on Tuesday, elections and adjournment.

All sessions of the convention will be held at the Jewish Young Men's Association, 3 Franklin Square, Rochester, N. Y. Luncheons will be served at the noon-day recesses at the Hebrew Library on Chatam street. A postoffice will be established at the Jewish Young Men's Association, to which all delegates may have their mail directed. All mail intended for the Federation of American Zionists for use at the convention may be directed in care of the Association Building to the Federation. The Whitcomb House on Main street will be used by many of the delegates, but the Rochester committee has published a booklet of directions, which will be sent to all delegates.

Congregation Kehilath Jeshurun.

On Sunday morning, June 7, there was a public examination of the Talmud Torah children, and all who were present agreed that the children made a very good showing.

On Monday evening, June 8, there was a parent's meeting. On this occasion Mr. Jacob Hecht, a former president of the congregation, awarded prizes to the most efficient children of the school. Among the prizes were two medals given by Samuel I. Hyman in memory of his father.

On Saturday morning, June 13, the Boy Scouts of America, who are holding a convention in this city at present, attended services in a body. Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein addressed the boys.

On Sunday, June 14, the Social Welfare Circle of the Congregation took 100 children of the Talmud Torah for a day's outing and gave them a most enjoyable time.

New Cantor for Montefiore Congregation.

At a regular meeting of the Montefiore Congregation, held in the vestry rooms of the synagogue, Hewitt and Macy places, Thursday, June 11, Rev. Bernard Woolf was unanimously elected cantor of the congregation. Cantor Woolf was formerly cantor of the Calvarian Synagogue and of Shaarei Zedek of Harlem. Cantor Woolf will officiate in the Montefiore Synagogue this (Friday) evening and Saturday morning, and will be accompanied by a well trained choir.

Mr. Bernard J. Fox, B. A., of Dublin, has been elected auditor for the Law Students' Society of Ireland, the highest position in the gift of the society. First records by Cantor H. L. Martin with his chorus of the 86th St. Temple, New York

The Columbia Graphophone Co. has finally succeeded in securing something which is absolutely a novelty for all buyers of Columbia records, and now begs to introduce to its patrons Cantor H. L. Martin and his choir in a number of Jewish musical selections which are used in all synagogues the world over.

Hitherto we have had Jewish Cantors with good voices who merely improvised certain texts taken from the Jewish liturgy. The selections now presented, however, are each and all compositions of recognized historical merit, many of them being of ancient origin, such as the melody of the "V'Hakohanim" Temple service of Jerusalem. They are rendered most artistically by the Cantor with the support of a choir of the best trained and most beautiful voices available.

Marc Diamond, aged 80, and Mrs. De La Ware, aged 70, doing all the modern dances from maxixe to tango.

Breezing along at a laughing pace that is distancing all competitors, Raymond Hitchcock continues to fill the Astor Theatre with delighted audiences who find in this inimitable comedian's latest musical comedy vehicle, "The Beauty Shop," an entertainment that is particu-

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Bath Beach, N. Y.
 The Ladies' Educational Society of the Congregation Sons of Israel, announces a strawberry festival for Saturday evening, June 20, at Belmont Hall. This institution labors actively and continuously for the welfare of the congregation, and especially for its school, which is largely attended five times weekly by Jewish children of both sexes. Mrs. Klein is president of the society; Mrs. Mandel, vice-president; Mrs. Tworger and Mrs. Wien, secretaries, and Mrs. Adman, treasurer, together with a board of directors.
 For quite a while, there has been talk of erecting a new synagogue suitable to the growing needs of this congregation. The present edifice, while not small, is insufficient to meet the wants of the increasing population. The membership has advanced strongly, the Sabbath attendance is usually quite large, while on festivals and holy days, it is hard to obtain even standing room. Besides all this, the Hebrew and Religious School of the congregation is in pressing need of larger and better fitted quarters. It is hoped that very soon some substantial move will develop, and be pushed on to a successful issue.
 Rev. Henry S. Morais is minister of the congregation, and has officiated as such for three years. He preaches almost regularly on Sabbaths and on other occasions. Rev. Abraham Sukenig is the melodious cantor, and Rev. Louis Flax, the Torah reader, sexton and teacher in the school, besides whom Mr. Ozer, and Mr. Nathan Flax are instructors, and Dr. Morais is superintendent. The present officers of this congregation are: Joseph Wien, president; Julius Levy, vice-president; Harry Adman, treasurer; F. Tworger, and Charles Paston, secretaries, together with a board of directors.

Stuyvesant Heights Congregation.
 The closing affair of the social season took place on Sunday evening, June 14, 1914, at 8 p. m., at the vestry rooms, 742 Jefferson avenue, Brooklyn. The Entertainment Committee arranged an interesting programme, including the Rev. Dr. Jos. Wasserman, Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman and the Hon. Jacob S. Strahl, of Brooklyn.
 The committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary and congregation having charge of the arrangements was Mrs. S. Rottenberg, Mrs. S. Beck, Mrs. A. Nurick, Mrs. J. Wolfson, Mrs. A. R. Klisch, Mrs. I. Meyerson and Messrs. H. J. Nurick, B. Feldman and S. Beck.

Another New Synagogue for Brownsville.
 Another synagogue will be added to those already existing in Brownsville. The latest house of worship will be called Petach Tikvah Temple, and its construction will cost $100,000. The movement for the erection of this temple was launched two years ago by a band of professional and business men of this section. The temple will be built on a plot located on Rochester avenue and Lincoln place. Mr. William B. Roth is the president of the new organization and also heads the building committee.

Hebrew Home for the Aged.
 A grand social and entertainment, following by refreshments and a dance, will be given on Sunday afternoon and evening of June 21, 1914, at the Home building, Howard and Dumont avenues, Brooklyn, for the purpose of meeting and entertaining all members and friends once more before the summer season passes, and to acquaint them with the progress accomplished thus far in the matter of caring and maintaining the present aged inmates of the home. There is a waiting list of more than 100 cases on file to be investigated of which many undoubtedly will have to be admitted very shortly.

Hebrew Educational Society.
 The closing exercises of the Sabbath school will be held on Sunday evening, June 21.
 Exercises of the graduating class of the Sabbath school will be held on Saturday evening, June 20.
 The intermediate clubs will have a rally on account of the opening of the new building on Sunday afternoon, June 21.
 The junior clubs will have a similar rally on Sunday afternoon, June 28.

Congregation B'nai Israel Anshei Emeq.
 On Sunday evening, June 14, the graduation and closing exercises of the Sunday school took place in the presence of an unusually large gathering in the synagogue on Harrison street, near Court street. Addresses were delivered by Assistant District Attorney Harry G. Anderson, Rabbi Israel Goldfarb, President H. Alexander and Mr. Aaron Dango, who also distributed the prizes and the diplomas to the graduates. At the conclusion Rabbi Goldfarb was presented by the graduates with a beautiful silver loving cup, while Mr. Anderson received from the school board a handsome traveling bag in recognition of his good work. The Sunday school is the oldest in Brooklyn and has a registration of over 400 pupils and a staff of sixteen teachers.

Far Rockaway.
 With the opening of the summer season, matters are taking on a livelier shape, and many of our co-religionists are flocking to this beautiful resort. This is seen, not alone upon the street, but in the new faces appearing at worship in the synagogues. The Orthodox Congregation, of which Mr. Cohen is president and Mr. Lidz is vice-president, is pursuing its even ways, and the services held in the Masonic Temple, are interesting and impressively rendered by the cantor, Rev. Mr. Wolkowitz, while the sermons by Rabbi B. A. Lichter are much appreciated. In the place of the latter on the 6th inst. Rev. Henry S. Morais, of Bath Beach, by special invitation of the minister, occupied the pulpit. There were some notable persons among the representative congregation in attendance. Dr. Morais preached upon the subject of the "Nazarite Vow," as read in the lesson from the Torah, and expatiated upon its meaning from the standpoint of separateness as conducive to holiness, and of Israel's separation from all the other nations. The speaker found in its application a relation to our own times, and supported his words by lessons and illustrations drawn from certain events.
 The congregation, in whose temporary synagogue, these services are held is named Sha'aray Tefillah, and hopes soon to erect a suitable and comely building. Quite a number have come to its help with subscriptions, and there is promise of more support. Mr. Cecil B. Ruskay is secretary of the Congregation.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

Dear Children:—Rabbi Eliezer Ben Jacob said: "He who performs a divine precept acquires for himself an advocate; whilst he that commits a transgression, acquires for himself an accuser. Repentance and good deeds serve as a shield against visitations."

And thus says the holy Zaohr: "Come and see." When the son of man performs a commandment, that commandment goes up to heaven and stands before the Holy One, blessed be He, and says: "I am of this person who formed me," and the Holy One, blessed be He, lets it remain in His presence to regard it every day and reward the person for its sake. When one transgresses a commandment of the Torah, that transgression goes up to heaven and says: "I am of this person who formed me," and the Holy One, blessed be He, lets it remain in His presence to regard it, and to punish the person for its sake, and thus it is written: "And the Lord saw this, and he was angry; because of the provoking of his sons and of his daughters." What did He see? The transgression that stood in His presence. But when the person repents, what is written? "Also, the Lord hath caused thy sin to pass away; thou shalt not die." He dismissed the transgression from his presence in order not to regard it so that He may act kindly toward the person who repents, and therefore is it written "turn not unto the stubbornness of this people, nor to its wickedness, nor to its sin." Thus we see, dear children, that Repentance and good deeds serve as a shield against visitations, and thus we are told in the Book Pirke Rabbi Eliezer. Rabbi Akiba says: "Since the Eternal created repentance, His right hand is stretched forth to receive the penitents every day and He says 'Repent, O ye Sons of Man.' Know you the power of righteousness and repentance? Come and see its power, from Ahab, the King of Israel, who performed great penance, for he had robbed and plundered and killed, and when he was accused by the Prophet, he repented and called for Jehoshaphat, King of Judah, who thrice daily gave him forty stripes, and he fasted and prayed morning and evening, and occupied himself with the study of the Torah the rest of his life, and never relapsed to his evil ways, and his repentance was accepted, as it is written: "And the word of the Lord came to Elijah the Tibbite, saying: 'Hast thou seen how Ahab hath humbled himself before me?'" Rabbi Abba tells us: "You can know the power of repentance from David, the King of Israel, for the Lord had sworn to the Patriarchs to multiply their children as the stars of heaven—in spite of that David, the King of Israel, went and counted them said the Holy One, blessed be He, to him: "David, I have sworn to the Patriarchs to multiply their seed as the stars in heaven, and thou comest to nullify my word, on thy account will the people be destroyed." And in three hours there fell in Israel seventy thousand men, or, as Rabbi Simon says, one man who was worth seventy thousand, because of his good deeds and knowledge of the Torah, namely—Abishai, the son of Zemyah (for it is said seventy thousand "ish," man, fell, not anoshim, men)—and it is said that David rent his garments, put on sackcloth and ashes, fell on his face upon the ground before the Ark of the Covenant of the Lord, and cried unto Him: "I am the one that have sinned and done evil indeed; but these sheep, what have They done?" And the Lord bethought himself of the evil, and said to the angel that destroyed among the people: "It is enough, now stay thy hand." Ben Azai said: "Come and see the power of repentance from Rabbi Simon Ben Lakish, who, together with his two comrades, were robbing and plundering all whom they met on the highway—what did he do?" He left his two comrades and sincerely repented with all his heart, with fasting and prayer, both morning and evening, before the Holy One, blessed be He, and he occupied himself with the study of the Torah and giving alms to the poor all his days, and he never relapsed to his evil ways, so that his repentance was accepted, and on the day he died, his two ex-comrades, who were still mountain-robbers, also died, and the portion of life was given to Rabbi Simon Ben Lakish, while his two ex-comrades were sent to the depths of Sheol. They said to the Holy One, blessed be He: "Master of the Universe, there is partiality shown here; he also robbed with us in the mountains, and he has the portion of life, while we are in the depths of Sheol!" Said He to them: "He has repented while he lived whilst ye have not." Said they to Him: "Allow us to repent now!" Said He: "One can only repent before he dies." It is comparable to a man who desires to cross the ocean, if he does not prepare provisions from the shore he cannot find it on the ocean. If he wishes to cross the desert and does not provide himself with food and drink from the inhabited country, he will not find anything to eat and drink there, thus it is with repentance—if a man does not repent while he lives, after death he cannot repent.

Betty was playing in the sand-pile. She began to throw shovelfuls of sand upon the flower-bed. Her father remonstrated. "Aren't you going to be my good Betty any more?" he asked. "Yeth," answered that young lady, continuing her occupation, "I'll be you're good Betty when I'm frowning thand."

Little Dick: "Papa, didn't you tell mamma we must economize?" Papa: "I did, my son." Little Dick: "Well, I was thinkin' that mebby if you'd get me a pony I wouldn't wear out so many shoes."

The truth of the saying, "Where art is long cash is short," was evidenced by the appearance of the following editorial recently in the columns of a small Western newspaper: "Burglars entered our house last night. To the everlasting shame of the community, for whose welfare we have labored, be it said, they got nothing."—Harper's.

MEDICINE FREE
We want the name of every person everywhere who is suffering from rheumatism, so we can send him a free sample bottle of Hill's Rheumatic Remedy. We don't care how long or how severe he has had it, as there are very few cases that have not yielded and been thoroughly cured with it. It works at once. In twenty-four hours it stops the pain. Don't take our word for it—test it at our expense. This is not a new, untried thing. For twenty-five years it has been regarded by physicians as practically the only certain treatment for this terrible disease.
Over 10,000 Testimonials Like These:
Mr. E. M. Ehlers, Secretary Grand Lodge of Masons of New York State writes that "Although I suffer from rheumatism for many years, two doses stopped all pain and one bottle cured me."
Mr. A. Goldman, Victoria, Tex., says:
"I am very well pleased with your medicine; am recommending it very highly.
It has done more for me than anything
I have ever tried."
Marshall F. W. Geraty, of 70 Manhattan street, New York, says: "I have suffered with rheumatism for many years, have tried almost every known remedy, but got no relief or cure until I took yours. In forty-eight hours I was entirely cured and free from all pain.
I send this unsolicited."
Hill's Rheumatic Remedy is on sale at most drug stores at $1 per bottle. One bottle generally effects a complete cure.
Call or send for free sample bottle and booklet at once. There is no greater service you can perform for humanity than to tell any rheumatic sufferer about this wonderful preparation. Ad-
