Not a poker game, all the same a gamble.

He sighed. He was human just as any other mortal. He, too, dreamed and on awakening from his reverie he learned from experience if not from a book on physics, that it was not the fall but the sudden stop and unappreciative thud of the cold, ungrateful terra firma, that hurt. Alas! he rubbed his eyes. It was only a dream, and again he sighed. If only it were a reality; if only there was some faint hope of early materialization, and he fell again to dreaming, this chossid who would a rabbi be. A rabbi in a village, who knows, maybe a city, but a village would more than do in his particular case, if only to be acknowledged as the rabbi of the community, the wielder of authority, the one to be looked up to and honored and given homage. In such a position he would not be a subject of charity, at least directly. The mite he would receive (for whoever heard of a chossid having parnosseh) would count, and besides there were hopes of his renown spreading to the four corners of the earth (for when one dreams, why limit oneself to small things); and, of course, in such a case, people from far and wide would come to obtain his blessings and fight for a sip of the sanctified kiddush cup, just as by the Behusher Rabbi, and—and—the chossid sighed.

The chossid did not have a monopoly on dreams by any means, for one of the remaining two had also tired of being a plain, ordinary individual. He, too, wanted to be a somebody; hold some office, it mattered not what, so long as he would be pointed at as "there goes so and so." Not having had the training of the chossid, his aspirations were more limited, each according to his station—and he, too, sighed.

The third of the trio was an out and out materialist. It was not a question of honor, or position, or attainment. Those were things that dreamers could feast on—and starve.

There was but one thing to be considered, and that was "how much is it worth," or if he played second fiddle, "what do I get out of it." Very materialistic, indeed, and while was but one way of living it, and that was "what can I get out of it."

And now you know them. As the old saying goes, birds of a feather flock together, it was not surprising carrying out a certain scheme, and with much loquacity was attempting to bring the semi-dreamer into a state of semi-reality, the only barrier being a semi-consciousness of right little more talk and the semi-dreamer was convinced that black could be white. And thus it transpired while they were walking on the public highway, engrossed in conversation, the practical man, gesticulating of the advantages to be gained and the semi-dreamer lost in smiles of joyful anticipation, that the chossid, his brain aflame with desires, was likewise taking a stroll in the open that the refreshing balm might soothe his fevered brain. But like a cork, ever bobbing atop the waters, his dream of becoming a rabbi was ever foremost in thought; and thus he fanned the fire as he walked, his chin resting on his chest, his hands behind his back, never once looking up, just following his nose as a pointer.

Was it fate or was it chance?

Bump!

The sudden impact of dreamer and semi-dreamer sent the former sprawling to the ground. Seeing the stupid expression on the chossid's face, the practical man naturally laughed, while the semi-dreamer, more hollow of aspiration, recovered first from the shock.

"Rabbi!" said the semi-dreamer, in complimentary tones, hoping thus to assuage any forthcoming wrath. The chossid's palate was tickled immensely, and he smiled. The semi-dreamer assisted the chossid to his feet. "A thousand pardons, rabbi." The chossid lifted his hand slightly in protest.

"A rabbi! So you are a rabbi?" said the practical man.

"No, not yet," answered the chossid, but smiling with gratification, taking the mistake as an omen soon to be fulfilled. The practical man's eyes gloated as he saw before him a prospective victim.

"What say you, if I make you a rabbi?" he said suddenly.

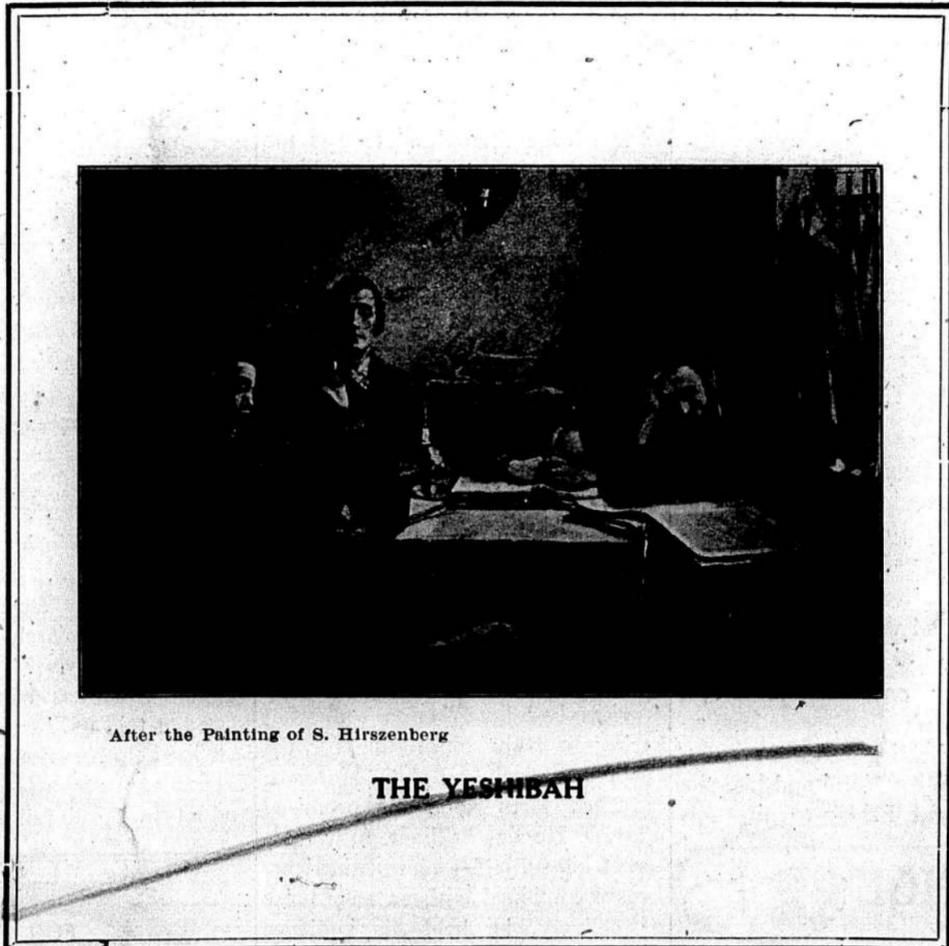

"You!" ejaculated the chossid in haughty disdain.

"Yes, I. I've told many a full-fledged rabbi what to do in certain predicaments, and you only wait to become one. You can dream and dream, but when it comes to pracothers dreamed he ever sought the practical wherewithal, having no compunction in letting you know that he lived in a world to live, and there to find the semi-dreamer, who would some position hold, and the practical man in each other's company. The practical man needed assistance in and wrong that for the moment afflicted the semi-dreamer, that is to say, he would do it were it not for the fact that he might be caught. A lower himself to the purchase of a rabbinat. Had it fallen so despicably low? Was it, after all, really worth the title? But the yetzer horah glided under the nail of the small finger of his left hand, into the blood it crept and up it swam into his heart. "Don't be a fool," it whispered. To a chossid it did not have to bellow aloud, whispering was sufficient. "Don't be a fool. If he says he can do it, maybe he can. Borrow the money." He may know of a vacancy somewhere and can put in a good word for you. You've studied so long for the loilom haboh, you've forgotten the workings of the loilom hazeh. Besides, who is there to know?" The practical man had long studied human nature. "They all deliberate; it's a bluff. He'll come around. Conscience! Fine to prate, but the prater carries a passcard."

Slowly, slowly, conscience blinded by ambition, yielded, because the chossid would a rabbi be. Monetary matters having been settled to the satisfaction of all concerned, the chossid thereupon became a full-fledged rabbi, Rabbi Mordecai, to be more exact, while the semi-dreamer gained the much sought-for title of "gabba" to the rabbi.

According to arrangements, the dreamer, semi-dreamer and practical man left on a certain Wednesday for the town of —, where they arrived Friday morning. There the dreamer and semi-dreamer betook themselves to an inn, while the practical man continued on his way until he came to the town of —, some fifteen miles further south. Immediately the gabba announced that the renowned Rabbi Mordecai had come to town. Who he was, no one seemed to know. The gabba was astonished at the ignorance of the community.

"You have never heard of Rabbi Mordecai? Impossible! Why did you not hear of his great wonders as a healer and of his gift of prophecy?" Some frankly admitted they knew naught; others said they may have heard of him, but for the moment it slipped their memory.

"You mean Rabbi Mordecai who cured the blind woman of ten years' standing?" asked one.

"The very one," answered the gabba, and soon all, more or less, remembered hearing of him. Of course, Rabbi Mordecai and his gabba attended the Friday evening ser-VICES, as well as the morning services of Shabbas. Naturally the congregation desired to test the depth and wisdom of their newcomer, and after much coaxing and persuasion, Rabbi Mordecai condescended to address them after Mincha services.

In the meantime, the practical man had arrived at his destination Friday noon, a little before Maariv, and put up at an inn over Shabbas. He attended the services that evening, and also the Shabbas morning services. A little before Mincha Shabbas, the practical man entered the synagogue, and being a stranger, was soon conversing with a number of the congregation. He was interrogated about his business, his destination, whether single or married, until it was time for the afternoon services to commence.

Mincha services began, the Torah was taken out to be read; the Cohen and Levite were called in turn, and now Israel was called. Suddenly the practical man arose, livid of face, nervously biting his lips. He looked about and espying the shammas, made his way towards him.

"What is it? What can I do for you?" asked the shammas of the practical man.

"I clear forgot. I have 'yahrzeit' to-day, and not till now did I think of it. It's too late to be called to the Torah. Permit me, I beg of you, grant me 'Agden.'"

"Very well," answered the shammas more with nod of head than word of mouth. By this time the last portion had been read and the practical man received the honor of "Hagba," while another was called for "Glilen." Making his way up the dais to the reading desk, whereon the scroll lay, the practical man took hold of the two handles of the Torah to raise it.

"Quick! Help him! Catch it!" shrieked the shammas. It was too late, and before assistance could be given the scrolls fell to the ground with a thud. The catastrophe bewildered the congregation, while tears streamed down the practical man's face as he stooped to pick up the Torah. The calamity tore the heart strings of the old men, and many a groan and sob echoed through the room.

"A plague! A plague!" moaned some. But already it was a thing of the past; there was nothing to be done except to fast and mourn that the evil decree might be averted.

At about this time in the town of —, where Rabbi Mordecai and his gabba were holdingsway, Mincha services had been begun somewhat earlier to allow more time for the rabbi to speak. Rabbi Mordecai launched forth upon his promised address. He was brilliant, fully master of his subject, and with intricate finesse combined with an easy poise of delivery, he held his audience spellbound, and as he elucidated more fully some salient points, the gentry of the congregation nodded their patriarchal heads in approval.

The gabba adjusted his cap. In the midst of his discourse, his eyes aflame, mouth open, arms extended, Rabbi Mordecai suddenly stopped, caught hold of the desk for support, his face contorted, and groaning twice, he fell on top of the desk weeping and moaning.

The congregation was in an uproar and rushed to his assistance.

"Are you ill? What is the trouble? Water!" called someone.

"No! No! I don't need any water," said the rabbi in a whisper. "It is not my body that is ill, but my soul that is afflicted."

"How! What! Where!" "I have just seen His Daughter, His Torah, fall to the ground."

Everyone looked at the other in open-mouthed astonishment, sadly shaking their heads.

"But where?" questioned some. "I don't know," answered Rabbi Mordecai. "I don't know the name of the place exactly, but it seemed not to be very far away."

"Maybe it's the town of —?" suggested the first questioner.

"Yes, yes, that's it. Yes, it comes more clearly to me now. That is the town," said Rabbi Mordecai.

"A nuvee," was whispered from mouth to mouth. "After maariv we'll send some one down there to learn the particulars." The rabbi was too overcome to continue with his address and the meeting broke up, the excited congregation speaking of little else. Maariv over, a fast team of horses was hastily hitched, and with two trustworthy members, left for the town of — post haste. Arriving there, they immediately made their way to the synagogue.

"What brings you here in such excitement so soon?" asked the shammas.

"What has happened?" questioned the interrogator from the town of —. "What calamity has occurred?"

"Calamity! We have been sorely stricken, brothers. But how come you to know so soon? You must have left immediately after maariv. Who informed you?"

"But what has happened? You have not told us?"

"God help us. Some fool stranger having yahrzeit was given 'Hagba' and let the Torah fall to the ground."

WHY TOLERATE THEM LONGER?

The two from the town of — looked at each other in amazement.

"Then it's true! Then it's true!" they exclaimed in one voice. "And it happened at Mincha?" they asked.

"Yes! Exactly," answered the shammas. "But how come you to know of it so soon? No one has left this town." "It was then that the trustworthy members from the town of — disclosed their remarkable find, the renowned Rabbi Mordecai, the nuvee, how he came to their town; how he discoursed to them, and the profundity of his lecture, and how in the very midst of his address he openly told the whole congregation the terrible calamity that had befallen the town of —.

The news of the "wonder rabbi," Rabbi Mordecai, spread like wild fire about the surrounding communities, and soon contention arose to obtain the treasure for their permanent rabbi, which narrowed itself down which would guarantee the greater emoluments, and the town wherein the prophecy occurred won.

The town had settled itself down to the regular humdrum existence (what was there to disturb it, when the practical man thought he owed congratulations to the rabbi of the community of —, upon the mutual success of their venture, and at the same time leave out of his system the pent up joyous hilarity which had accumulated since the eventful episode in question. And so he called to pay his respects.

Although dead men tell no tales, walls, on the other hand, have ears. The three, Rabbi Mordecai, the gaba and the practical man met in the rabbi's house and held a general reunion. Schnaaps was placed on the table which the practical man was unable to let rest any length of time. Though practical in many things, he had never learned the law of balance or counterbalance, especially that the tongue may oft outweigh the head. In privacy was the well-planned trick related and re-related, so that even the walls of the rooms laughed and rocked with mirth. However, not having been taken into the charem and hearing the tongues let loose, the walls communicated the story to an eavesdropping servant, who, in turn, told a few members of the congregation, and so on ad infinitum. The cat out of the bag, the result was—tat Kaduschin." Through the red-and-blue tablecloth spread before the window come the sunbeams, diffusing a spell of soft, delicate colors and tints over everything.

It is a warm July day, and you feel rather languid after the unusually abundant Saturday dinner. You have several times begun the chapter assigned to you by the rabbi, but your mind is on something else. Your lips move, and thoughtlessly you murmur: "Tanun rabanan—the rabbis have taught" . . . But dreamily and languidly you cast your eyes around the room.

Over there in the half-dark alcove the rabbi sleeps, the "sefer chassidim" on the cushion, and the spectacles on his forehead. And opposite to you sits Gietele.

Her hair shines like gold, and her lips suggest to you fresh strawberries.

Once in a while she looks up, and your glances and hers meet. And your face becomes warm and your heart beats faster. Then you quickly gaze down at the book and murmur: "Tanu Rabanan—the rabbis have taught—"

On the street a woman's voice is heard. She sings a Ruthenian folksong, and it tells of a brook, running slowly and lonesomely down into the valley . . . Then it is still once more.

You again look up at Gietele, your eyes meet and your body is all a-tremble. A thought takes possession of you—an indefinable, inexplicable idea.

"Ma jasit uma naim, aheva b'tamigim." "How fair art thou, how sweet art thou, oh my beloved, with thy charms." You read it yesterday in the Song of Songs and then sang it with your father—why should it now, suddenly, occur to you? You once read the interpretation, that the words signify the Thora—another expounder is quite sure that it is Judaism of which the Royal poet sings—but what has thy rabbi's daughter, what has Gietele to do with it?

In your heart a voice is heard. It contains, it seems to you, an answer to your question, though you do not understand it. It is, apparently, an answer in one of those seventy languages, which your seventeen-year-old innocence has not yet learned.

But still it is an answer. And just as the cradle song soothes the child, though it understands not a word, so the soft, gentle, mysterious language soothes your young heart.

And while your glances are fastened upon the lovely young creature your mind becomes clearer and clearer and with a half-whispering voice you say:

"Itti milebanon Kalle Itti milebanon taboi . . . Thou comest with me from Lebanon, oh my bride!" You have never thoroughly understood the words. On Friday nights, when you chanted the Song of Songs, and you came to this passage, you paused and looked up from the prayerbook.

How often you were possessed with the longing to look upon that grand and beautiful mountain. Your own thoughts were never quite clear to you—it all seemed a fantastic vision, an inexplicable, enchanting dream. But now how well you understand the sweet, heavenly words!

"Thou wilt come, oh my beloved, from Lebanon with me, will look down from the summit of Amanas, and of Snir and of Hermon . . ."

And upon the highest peak of Mount Hermon you stand, hand in hand, and brilliant sunshine will beam and smile upon you . . . And the forest of palms murmurs and sends forth its fragrance, and above your heads the pure blue sky

Mr. Léon Zolotkoff has resigned the editorship of The Jewish Daily News, and will engage in the practice of law in New York city. Several years ago Mr. Zolotkoff came to New York from Chicago, where he had been assistant State's Attorney.

The architects have finished plans for the four-story building which is to be erected by the Philadelphia (Pa.) Young Men's Hebrew Association as a memorial to the late Dr. Steinbach. The building will be 60 by 150 feet and will cost $100,000.

The Building Committee of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Bayonne, N. J., is getting plans in shape for the erection of their building, and from present indications work on the edifice will be started soon. The building is to cost $25,000.

Considerable interest has been aroused among Massachusetts Jews over the fact that the State primary falls on the Jewish New Year. In Boston and several other cities this means practically the disenfranchisement of the orthodox Jewish voters.

At Zolotonosha, Poltava, Jews have been forbidden to converse among themselves in Yiddish at the railway station. At Keltzi the police stopped a performance in the theatre and dispersed the audience because an artist rendered a Yiddish song.

Judge William Wallace, who was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator for Missouri, has been overwhelmingly defeated. Judge Wallace openly berated the Jews some years ago, and they in turn made a successful set against his nomination.

Congressman A. J. Sabath has announced that he will be a candidate this fall for re-election to Congress from the Fifth District of Illinois. He has completed four terms of service, having been elected to the Sixtieth, Sixty-first, Sixty-second and Sixty-third Congresses successively.

Archbishop Platon, of Kishineff, who until recently had been the head of the Greek Orthodox Church in America, has stated that his experiences in the United States induced him to be in favor of yielding to the latter on the passport question and of introducing wide religious tolerance.

There exists in Salonica a union of Greek newspaper editors to which no Jew is allowed to belong. The union, however, has issued a statement in which it denies that its members hold anti-Semitic views, and charges Jews with having denounced sentiments of hatred, from which the union is entirely free.

The Jewish populations in the countries affected by the general European war are given as follows: Austria-Hungary, 2,258,262; Belgium, 12,169; France, 100,000; Germany, 615,021; Luxemburg, 1,270; Netherlands, 106,309; Russian Empire, 5,215,805; Servia, 17,000; Switzerland, 19,023; United Kingdom, 245,000. Total, 8,571,429.

Recently the Real Russians forced several Jewish communities in the Pale to assemble in their synagogues and take an oath not to sell intoxicating drink. As Jews are prohibited from engaging in such trade, the action of the anti-Semites can readily be gauged at its true value.

Samuel Prince, former Assemblyman and Deputy Commissioner of Licenses for New York city, under Mayor Gaynor, died last Tuesday at his home, 275 East Seventh street. He was prominent as a labor leader and was widely known on the East Side. He was born in London in 1852, but was brought to this country when a baby.

There was an increase of Jewish immigration in May, 1914, over that of May, 1913, amounting to 48.2 per cent. in the United States. The immigration for the first five months of this year as compared with the same period of the preceding year shows an increase of 12.2 per cent. The immigration, more than nine-tenths of which comes from countries in Southern and Eastern Europe, shows but a slight predominance of males over females.

The trial took place the other day in Constantinople of the editor of the anti-Jewish paper, Palestine, which is published at Jaffa. The defendant was charged, at the instance of the Haham Bashi of Turkey, with having insulted the Jewish religion and the Jewish race. Pending the hearing of the trial publication of the periodical has been discontinued.

Mr. A. Blum, from New York, who was the owner of a factory for artificial teeth in America, has settled down in Palestine and is going to establish a similar concern there. Mr. Blum trusts to be able to employ hundreds of Jewish workmen in this enterprise. Two other American Jews, Messrs. Levinson and Pollak, intend to found a large clothing manufactory in American style.

Australian Jewry is mourning the loss of Alderman Jacob Marks, who passed away last month at Melbourne at the age of fifty-three. He began his municipal career as a member of the City Council in 1894. In 1912 he was elected an Alderman. He occupied many important positions as a representative of the citizens on the council. Some years ago he was elected grand treasurer of the Grand Lodge of Masons.

A severe blow was struck by the German Government at Jewish immigrants from Galicia and Russia last month. Jewish hawkers and dealers in old clothes coming from these countries will no longer be permitted to settle in the industrial districts of the Rhine provinces. Those Jews belonging to the above named categories who already reside there will be expelled.

The general European war has made necessary the indefinite postponement of several important international Jewish conventions. On the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the death of Theodor Herzl a Polish and Yiddish version of Theodor Herzl's "The Jewish State" has been issued in Stanislaw (Galicia). The preface contains several very interesting introductory speeches by the Countess Marie Johanna Wielopolska, Baroness Bertha von Suttner, Count J. Tolstol (former Russian Minister of Public Instruction), etc.

The income of the railway between Jaffe and Jerusalem amounted in 1913, according to the recently published report, to 13,000,000 francs. The company distributed on original shares (nominal value, 500 francs) 4.0625 francs per share, and on bonds (nominal value, 500 francs) 33.9584 francs. Besides, there is supposed to be a considerably large sinking fund, the amount of which is not mentioned in the report.

Some days ago, on the occasion of the landing of a group of Jewish immigrants at Haifa, Palestine, the harbor officials raised objections to their landing, referring to an order they had received from Constantinople. Only after interference of the Russian Consul were they allowed to land. The whole affair arose from a misunderstanding of the administration of Haifa. The Constantinople order referred to a group of Jewish emigrants from Saloniki, who, as Greek subjects, had omitted to get their passports indorsed by the Turkish Consul.

Belgium, which at present is the center of the European war, has some 12,000 Jews. The largest community, augmented by immigrants from Holland and Russia, is at Antwerp. Other communities are at Brussels, where the synagogue is quite conspicuous; Arlon, which has been invaded by the Germans; Ghent, Liège and Namur.

The public press recently detailed the payment by the Eastman Kodak Company to Mr. Henry Gaisman of $30,000 for an autographic attachment to a camera, which makes it possible to write a caption or signature on a photograph film immediately after the picture is taken. Mr. Gaisman, now in New York, was formerly a resident of Memphis, Tenn., where his mother, who is an active member of the Jewish community, still resides.

About 16,800 Jews recently made an attempt to appeal to the clemency of the Czar in connection with the tercentenary of the Romanoff dynasty. Some of them asked for the privilege of being allowed to remain outside the Pale, others begged to be permitted to send their children to government educational institutions, while still others appealed against the unjust fine imposed on them for having failed to present their relatives to recruiting commissions, as well as against the restrictions in the legal profession.

"WHERE IS JENNY SUNSHINE?"

"Where is Jenny Sunshine?" do I hear the people say.

Every hamlet echoes in the same imploring way,

All at once they noticed that the songs of her had fled,

All at once folks hungered for the sunny things she said.

You remember Jenny—she was purty like, and fair,

God just borrowed sunshine, when He figgered on her hair

All th' time asingin' 'till th' heavens spread apart—

Songs that Sanctuary in a Nature-loving heart.

"Where is Jenny Sunshine?" All the village wants to know.

Spring is here, in Eden, where the fern-hid waters flow

Down by peaceful homesteads of a valley sweet with hay;

Men and women miss her from that joyous yesterday.

Lads, as brown as berries, stop and ask you, where—and why?

"Seen Miss Jenny, lately?"—then go onward, with a sigh,

Queer—one little woman bein' missed so from a place!

Songs and deeds and sunshine and th' beauty of a face.

"Where is Jenny Sunshine?" Yes, a hundred times a day,

In the hills and valleys I can hear the whispers say.

Roses in old gardens or the great oak on th' hill

Leaves that rustle questions when the deeper woods are still.

Nature, too, is asking—she was fond of growing things,

Fond of old-time flowers and the whirr of startled wings,

Fond of cooing babies or the white of silvered hair.

Brought her smiles 'o sunshine to th' darkness, everywhere.

"What of Jenny Sunshine?" If a still voice seems to say,

"Jenny's gone forever down a path of Grief and Grey."

We who knew her, startled, find our solace in th' tears.

Love brought Sin's own silence after all th' happy years,

She's out, yonder, waiting, till that great and sweeter day

When God's new-born sunshine drives the bitterness away—

When, at Home's wide threshold, she can stand, a child once more,

Smiling thro' th' sorrows that have vanished at our door.

—W. Livingstone Larned.

Do You Remember?

smiles and nods with a thousand raptures.

Tenderly you bend over the maiden standing next to you, press her to your heart and the big brown tearful eyes timidly gaze up to you.

"Gietele . . . !"

A half-suppressed burst of laughter frightens you out of your dream. The holy Baal-Schem—Rabbi Israel ben Eliser—has cracked so good a joke as to cause Gietele to forget her slumbering father.

The rabbi stretches his arms and awakens, and the "Sefer-Chassidim" falls to the floor. Quickly he picks up the holy volume, kisses it piously and rubs his sleepy eyes.

And you, hurled down from Mount Hermon, return to your "Traktat Keduschin." You cast one more glance at Gietele, sitting there so calmly, swallow a deep sigh, and rocking to and fro you sing, now quite audibly: "Tanu Raba-nan . . ." "The rabbis have taught . . ."—From Das Ghetto-buch. Edited by Artur Landsberger. Munich: Georg Muller.

Our Puritan Vice-President.

The church is forever decriing the inroads which science is making into the domain of religion. At a recent graduation in the State of Virginia Thomas R. Marshall, Vice-President of the United States, delivered the baccalaureate address. Mr. Marshall is an ardent and devout Presbyterian and closely and religiously identified with all the interests of his chosen denomination. In his address to the graduates of the Virginia institution he complained bitterly of the fact that our schools are paying too much court to science and too little to religion. He thought the day would come when we would rue this policy and procedure. The Rev. E. W. Oneal of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Chicago was one of the speakers at the Desplains camp meeting which is now holding forth in Chicago. He, too, had something to say derogatory to the natural sciences. We quote him in part: "The advance made in the field of natural science has crowded God back into some remote chamber in the mind of the average individual. This world is not to be studied as an end, but as a means to an end. Humanity is not receiving the spiritual influence from the natural world that it was designated to receive. Studies into the realms of the intellect, the social needs and the physical kingdom have been made, but the spiritual domain is still unexplored. People a generation ago saw more in the natural work than we because they were not in such a mad hurry as we are."

It is not true that "the advance made in the field of natural science has crowded God back into some remote chamber in the mind of the average individual." Science has not driven God out of the world, it has put God into it. It has not dethroned God, it has enthroned Him. It has not placed Him outside of the world, it has put Him into it. It is pretty near time that the church were beginning to learn that religion is then only religious when it is scientific, and that science is then only scientific when it is religious. Some of the most devout men that the world has ever known have been the men with the greatest scientific attainments. It is said that Lord Kelvin, whose death two hemispheres some years ago mourned, had the faith of a little child.

The Jew does not decri the spread and growth of science and the scientific spirit. The church should not. The church that fears the spread of science will have to write Ichabod across its portals, for its "glory is sure to depart."—Rev. Tobias Schonfarber, in The Chicago Israelite.

Frau Ignaz von Wechseltmann died in Budapest last month at the age of 75. Some years ago, in conjunction with her husband, she founded in that city the well-known Wechseltmann Institute for the Blind, which has at present fifty inmates, a few of whom are non-Jews. The capital of the institute amounts to 1,400,000 crowns. The worthy couple also created, with a capital of 2,000,000 crowns, a fund for the benefit of the widows and orphaned children of teachers. Both organizations are administered by the Budapest Jewish community. On the death of her husband, Frau Wechseltmann decided to devote the rest of her life to philanthropic work. For her services to the cause of humanity the Emperor conferred on her the Elizabethan Order, Second Class, and the Gold Cross of Merit. Frau Wechseltmann has bequeathed large sums for charitable purposes.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND

(Exclusive Correspondence to the HEBREW STANDARD)

The Training of Jewish Teachers—Jews and the European War—Fears for the Russian Communities—Jacob Teitel's Views—Jews and Tuberculosis—Haifa University Fears.

London, July 31, 1914.

Among the problems of Anglo-Jewry which will shortly call for urgent treatment is that of the training of teachers for religious schools. Spasmodic attention has been given to this subject in the past, but it has not hitherto had serious consideration. From time to time one has heard the suggestion that a training college for Jewish teachers should be established, but no hint of the money necessary for the founding of such an institution has ever been forthcoming, and in view of the shrinkage of the funds available for public purposes in Anglo-Jewry which has been so painfully evident in recent years no responsible person feels inclined to create any new source of expenditure, especially on a large scale. In another direction it has been suggested that Jews' College should undertake the training of teachers, but despite the original objects of this seminary work of this character is quite out of the question to-day. At the most Jewish teachers in training might be permitted to attend such of the lectures at the college as are held at convenient hours and are of such a character as is likely to be of use to them. More than this cannot be expected.

Jews' College has, however, for many years held examinations for the certificate of qualification for teachers. The standard of these examinations was raised considerably a few years ago, with, as a consequence, protests on the part of the candidates as a body, protests which have now been voiced by the institution which employs the greater number of the teachers. The demand is, however, not for a lower standard of examination, but for the extension of the series of examinations which qualifies for the highest grade of certificate into four instead of as at present, three examinations. The council of Jews' College has agreed to this, on the face of it very moderate request, but the examiners are unanimous in their stubbornness on the subject. The latter have now resigned and a fresh board of examiners will have to be selected from outside the staff of Jews' College.

The outbreak of war between the Austrian-Hungarian monarchy and the Kingdom of Serbia is casting a very severe shadow upon things on this side at the moment of writing. All kinds of fears are expressed that the trouble may extend so that in the end half a dozen of Europe's great powers are flying at each other's throats. There is no specifically Jewish view to take of the crisis except to mention that both Austria and Serbia have been good friends to their Jewish subjects. Jews have risen to high positions under the rule of the Emperor Francis Joseph, while the Servian Government has actually contributed funds toward the building of several synagogues within its borders. It is recognized, however, that a very grave responsibility rests upon Austria for having precipitated the conflict, although there appears to be no doubt that the government of that country regards itself as having been given a great deal of provocation in recent years.

Perhaps the biggest point outstanding in the whole trouble is concerned with Russia and what treatment her Jewish subjects may expect, whether she wins or loses, if she is implicated in the coming struggle. We remember what followed upon Russia losing in the war with Japan and the great streams of Jewish blood that were shed on one excuse or another afterward. It is clear that Russia's six or seven million Jewish subjects are, in a manner of speaking, hostages, and that if Russia loses and seems in danger of a revolution as a consequence she will once more cast her Jewish subjects to the lions.

Upon the question of Russia's treatment of Jews we have had the advantage of an expression of views lately from the mouth of Jacob Teitel, a member of the Russian Council of State, and the only avowed Jew who has been able to obtain and retain the position of judge within the Czar's dominions. He had a long career of valuable and fine work behind him in Russia prior to his retirement from active business in 1912. He speaks with authority and declares that the position of the Russian Jews gets worse from day to day. Even people in Russia are not fully aware of the terrible position in which the Jews are placed, and still less do brethren abroad appreciate it. The restriction measures are not only increased in number, but they are increased also in vigor of application. There is hardly a walk of life which the Russian Jew is able to follow unmolested. In some instances he is even hindered now in the pursuit of manual labor. There is only one possible alleviation, one palliative, that Mr. Teitel can see at the present time, and that is emigration. It is no solution of the Russo-Jewish problem, as it is impossible to emigrate seven million people. The solution must be in Russia itself.

The restrictions that are perhaps felt most by the Russian Jews are the educational restrictions. The avenues to higher education in Russia are almost completely closed to the Jews, and a large number of students go abroad to seek this higher education at foreign universities. Jews holding a university degree are allowed the right of residence in all parts of Russia, so that its acquisition is a matter of supreme importance to them. Few Jews can obtain Russian degrees, and so most of those seeking to qualify go abroad, a foreign university degree enabling the holders to obtain a Russian degree as external students. These students need assistance. They need help, not so much of a pecuniary character, though that is very important, but of other kinds. Many of them are unfamiliar with foreign customs and habits. They need guidance and advice as to the particular university to go to and the particular course to follow. They need help in acquiring the foreign tongue. There are many Jews who think that there are too many Russian Jews of the student class. But according to Mr. Teitel comparatively their number is small. There are seven million Jews in Russia, and the number of university students is a very minute proportion.

Asked by an interviewer here whether he is in favor of the movement toward the establishment of a Jewish university, he declared that the project had his sympathy, and he further added that a Jewish university can have no bearing on the problem of those Jews who desire to return to Russia and on the strength of their degrees acquire the right of residence. The degrees awarded by a Jewish university would not be recognized, and this fact should be borne in mind by those who are supporting this proposal. Of course, for those who have left Russia permanently for the purpose of starting a new life abroad there is no reason why a properly equipped Jewish university should not be a great boon. At the present moment Mr. Teitel thinks that energies should be concentrated on the movement for the distribution and assistance of Russo-Jewish students visiting European universities.

A statement has been distributed to the English newspapers during the past week by a news agency to the effect that Dr. D. L. Thomas, medical officer of health for Stepney, in his annual report declares that consumption is more common among the Jews of this district than other classes, and that it is undoubtedly on the increase among them. The returns of cases notified and the number of deaths in certain model dwellings occupied by 5,789 Jews and 6,848 non-Jews showed that in the buildings entirely occupied by Jews ninety-five notifications were received, and there were fourteen deaths, or 14.7 per cent. of persons attacked. In the buildings where there were no Jews twenty-six notifications were received and there were six deaths, equal to a percentage of 23 of those attacked. So that a greater percentage of Jews contract the disease than of non-Jews (16.4 and 3.8), but a smaller percentage die of those attacked (1.47 to 23). These figures, adds Dr. Thomas, "tend to confirm the opinion I have frequently expressed, that pulmonary tuberculosis is more common among Jews than others, and that it appears to be of a more chronic nature. Its chronic character may be the cause of its greater prevalence among Jews. Some of these chronic cases live for many years. They cough and expectorate quantities of sputum laden with tubercle bacilli, and are the center of infection for many years. The danger of this in crowded rooms or in workshops where many work in close proximity to others is obvious." In White chapel, which is perhaps the most specifically Jewish part of all Stepney, the deaths were more per 1,000 than in the rest of the borough.

I notice a pretty generally expressed opinion among interested members of the community here that the scheme for the creation of a Jewish institution for the higher secular education at Haifa in Palestine is about to suffer shipwreck.

Apparently "Mentor," in The Jewish Chronicle, echoed our views on the question recently set out at large in this place. Does Reform Judaism produce apostasy? For "Mentor" declares that the English discussion "placed as cause and effect what experience shows have really no relation one to the other."

Why does The Herald persist in labeling orthodox Jews as "foreigners"? The other day our contemporary reported on divine services held by Slavs, Greek Catholics, Lutherans, et al., and ignominiously described them all as foreigners. Probably with less right than would apply to its own editorial policy now and then.

The American Israelite opines that the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the American Jewish Committee between them should divide the field of work in combatting the prejudice against the Jew—the province of national organizations. Our contemporary, so singularly fertile in suggestions, might indicate, if it can, what work these bodies shall perform and which work they shall divide.

English journals seem to be lapsing into the same evil habits which marked certain newspapers of this country some time ago. When referring to Jewish traders, bankrupts or even criminals they are sure to mention the fact of their membership in the community of Israel, as if this had any possible connection with extraneous matters. There is need of yeoman work for Anglo-Jewry to put a stop to this wholly reprehensible practice.

The Jewish farmers of this State are nothing if not active. They have developed co-operative principles beyond all former limits, and now have their own savings and loan bank chartered by the Commonwealth. Indeed, they are successful tillers of the soil. We hope the existing European war will not work havoc with the duty now devolving on them of bringing their products to market. Were it not possible for our urban Jewish communities to render them material assistance in this task?

We note with satisfaction the announcement that a special American edition of Singer's "Authorized Daily Prayer Book," containing a preface by the chief rabbi, is shortly to issue. The late Simeon Singer's tephillah has become a strong support to all orthodox worshippers; its conformance to strict traditions and its clear and limpid English have combined to make it the version of all others. Now that the book is adapted to the particular needs of America's Jewry we shall expect its dissemination and popularity to increase a hundredfold. Its use should speedily banish that miscegenated Union concoction from the synagogue.

Latterly The Jewish Chronicle has become almost American in its news and interest. Here is Prof. Friedlaender expatiating on the bureau of education of our "great and glorious" kehillah; there Rabbi Maurice Harris discusses the workings of the Eastern District Council of Reform Rabbis. Besides, other American Reformers are preaching and lecturing in England and the leading men of Anglo-Jewry are casting more than one glance toward America, the future seat of world Jewry, especially in this time of storm and stress.

JEW AND THE DIPLOMATIC SERVICE

In most of the great European nations, including, singularly enough, Great Britain, the profession of the diplomatist is closed to Jews. There it is practically in the possession of an aristocratic caste, jealous of its prerogatives, which is on the whole exceptionally well fitted for the duties involved.

America, fortunately, has not produced a self-perpetuating band of diplomatists as yet, and will probably never do so in view of the exigencies of our political life. Time and again in the course of the debates in Congress we are told that the United States diplomatic service is employed as a shuttlecock to the battledores of contending "statesmen." Yet it is far better, conducted as the service is on this basis, since it is open to all men regardless of race, creed or previous condition of servitude.

Consider, for example, our plenipotentiaries at Constantinople. Oscar S. Straus and Henry Morgenthau have represented the interests of their country ably and conscientiously, and at the same time have consistently and patriotically done all they could to advance the condition of their coreligionists. They have added new lustre to the American ambassadorship in the capital of Turkey, placing it relatively in the same position as our representative at London occupies in the hearts and affections of the British people. For this task a Jewish-American (here these words may be appropriately and advisedly employed) is peculiarly fitted at Constantinople, and his work there, as may be seen by the careers of Messrs. Straus and Morgenthau, redounds to the credit of the American people.

President Wilson, concerning whose diplomatic appointments Republican wisacres in Congress have predicted appalling calamities, has advanced the traditions of the republic one step further. He has made more Jewish nominations than any of his predecessors before him, although he has not singled out an individual Jew for such signal preferment as did President Roosevelt in the case of Secretary Straus. But he has sent Jews as the representatives of America to more than one foreign country, and in the case of Mr. Morris a Jew appears for the first time at the Swedish court in an accredited diplomatic capacity.

America is a favored nation. Not only is this country not exposed to the dangers and vicissitudes that harass the warring lands of the Old World, but in the public and official life of the United States each man is judged by his own merits. There are here no adventitious aids to rank.

We have repeatedly adverted to the nomination of Paul M. Warburg to the Federal Reserve Board. We do so once more for the purpose of emphasizing the altogether praiseworthy action of the Senate in promptly confirming it, thus enabling the nation to benefit by the ripe experience and thorough financial knowledge of Mr. Warburg at a time when these are so much needed. Of Mr. Warburg's qualifications and high sense of patriotic duty in the premises we have spoken. He has done much to allay the spectre of official anti-Semitism in America, for he has proved once more what is so very well known—the American Jew is first and foremost an American, steadfastly maintaining his Jewish consciousness and ideals.

Newspapers all over the globe have cited the "squib" from The Century for July concerning the programme for a typical Fourth of July celebration in a typical public school of this country, and have almost invariably made their little jokes over names like Einstein and Scully, Bauer and Nolan, Rosenblum and Maresca, appearing in the list of supposed participants. Ah! but therein lies the inherent strength and the saving force of our "little red school houses!" They are our great levelers, our supreme Americanizers, and the descendants of immigrants emerge from them with their strange-sounding names intact but with their American professions and sentiments cultivated to the nth power of patriotism.

We think the city marshal of Newburyport, Mass., took somewhat too narrow a view of the law when he restricted the Jewish storekeepers of the locality from selling anything but kosher meat on Sundays. Jews who observe their own Sabbath with scrupulous nicety require something besides kosher meat on the Sunday. Physicians inform us that an exclusive and uninterrupted meat diet is deleterious. The law giving these Jews the right to labor and trade on Sundays, provided they thereby do not molest their worshipping neighbors, to all intents and purposes made Sunday a secular day for them.

FACE TO FACE

כי לא את-בנ יכם אשר לא-ידעו ואשר לא-ראו כי עיניכם ראתם את כל-מעשה ד' הגדל אשר עשה:

"I speak not with your children who have not known and not seen. But your eyes have seen all the great acts of the Lord which he did." (Deut. xl, 2, 7.)

It is the grandest privilege to live in stirring times, when great men are at the helm of humanity's ship, and the breath of God blows lustily, and the sails swell to the bursting point with the forces that head our little craft into the foaming deep. What blessing to have been the contemporary of a Moses or an Isaiah! To have looked on their shining countenance, to have heard their ringing voice, to have been made conscious of the divine afflatus present in such great lives! Have you breathed the same air with a Demosthenes or a Darwin? Have you basked beneath the same sun with a Lessing or a Lincoln? Did great currents of thought eddy round you? Did you stand within earshot of the thunder of new revelations? Were you part and parcel of gigantic upheavals that changed the very face of the earth, and rejuvenated the spirit of the world with loftier ideals? Happy you! For "your eyes have seen all the great acts of the Lord which he did!"

"Your children who have not known, and who have not seen," who have not passed through the storm and stress, who enjoy the safety of the new haven found for them by the daring adventurers, must content themselves with the feeble echo of those thundering times. By dint of listening to this echo, they may blend it with the lesser voices of their own generation and their own souls; but it is very difficult for them to penetrate into the heart of heroic ages and transfuse, as it were, the very blood of bygone days into their veins. Not theirs is the privilege of learning great lessons at first hand.

God teaches many lessons in many ways. He teaches through silence and through sound. He speaks out of the storm and out of the serene sky. Those who dwell by the shore may know just as much of God as those who "do business in many waters." But the shore-dwellers are in danger of having their eye diverted from God; while "they who go down to the sea in ships, these see the works of the Lord and his wonders in the deep." God indeed is everywhere, but the human eye is not lifted Godward everywhere in the same angle. Some there are whose vision is direct, who, like Moses, see God "face to face." And some there are with eyes aslant who realize God by devious ways. Now, those who are taught through silence, are apt to have but an indirect and partial vision of truth, while those who are taught through sound, are more likely to possess the direct vision of truth. Therefore, they who live in times when History is brewing on a large scale are more likely to see God than their children after them. Thus we get the familiar historic phenomenon of great epochs of spiritual awakening being followed by prolonged periods of moral stagnation.

It is interesting to note, how the silent lessons of the Divine Teacher are apt to divert the eye. The quiet landscapes have taught man beauty; the mute rocks have taught him science; the silent voices of the heart have taught him morality. One man conned his lesson in terms of art; another in terms of matter; yet another in terms of conscience. And the artist said to the scientist, I know thee not! And the scientist replied to the artist, I have naught to do with thee! And both together made common cause against the moralist; for while one spelt out the laws of beauty painfully like a child learning his letters, and while the other deciphered slowly and blunderingly the laws of matter, they both oft overlooked the laws of goodness. And often all three while bending over their tasks forgot to look up to their divine Master. Therefore it is good that the loud vices of history do now and again ring in men's ears to recall them to their God.

If there is any thought characteristic of modern times, it is the thought of the Unity of Experience. All phases of human experience are but avenues leading to one central truth. It would be well for man to know everything, to encompass the vast circumference of reality. This cannot be. Failing this, however, there is given each one of us that wonderful compensation which enables him to cling to his own segment of the circle and, disregarding all the rest, trace his radial line from where he stands straight to the center. That centre of all being is the righteous God, the power that makes for goodness. Toward that centre all things tend. The scientist need not go off on a tangent; the discovery of the stupendous natural forces should lead him to the One from whom all these forces emanate. As to the moralist—what folly to separate Ethics from God, Goodness from its source! And what fatal fallacy is it that Esthetics have nothing to do with Ethics! If I walk in the garden which the Lord hath planted; if flowers kiss my feet as I walk, and the sunrays caress my cheek with their grateful warmth; if I behold this boundless delight inwoven in the texture of the All, and breathe into myself the fullcheated joy which overbrims the world, shall I not at once think of Him who beautifies the universe not for any useful purpose but only to cause his creatures to drink from the river of His pleasures?

Yes, all experience is one, even as God is one; yet the self-absorbed shore-dwellers are given to dissect it with their blunt scalpels without troubling about its organic unity. Therefore, it is good that from the quiet shores and the mute scenes, from the ease and calm of silent days, men are oft thrown into the roaring waters and made to listen to the Voice of God. For the voice of History is the voice of God; because History is nothing if not moral; because history cannot be clearly read in terms other than those of the spirit. Behind the forces that make History are the divine dynamics of the human soul. You may read your art, or your science, without God—somehow; but your History you cannot read without God. There you see Him "face to face."

The Modern View is making a fight to have the series of cartoons called "Abie the Agent" withdrawn from the St. Louis Star. The same cartoons appear in the New York Journal and other Hearst publications, and while they are undoubtedly offensive to many Jews, at the same time the fact that they are drawn by one Hershfield, a Jewish cartoonist, will tend greatly to weaken whatever forcible argument the Modern View may present.

The heart of every American assuredly beats in sympathy with that of our stricken Chief Magistrate in the sore bereavement he has suffered. He has been deprived of the partner of his joys and sorrows, and life for him, despite his exalted position, no longer has the same charm and zest. May he and his daughters be comforted in their overwhelming sorrow.

Our whilom friend, "Rev." E. B. M. Browne, had the welcome opportunity to see his name in print in connection with his annual "pilgrimage" to the tomb of General U. S. Grant. His advertisement of his orthodoxy and the efforts he made to secure the co-operation of the Hamburg-American line were scarcely calculated to enhance the dignity of his calling and acts. He assured the world that the present may have been his last "feat" of this nature. Let us fervently hope so, for the good name of Israel.

Rabbi Martin A. Meyer, of San Francisco, in his efforts to make a point, once in a while goes a trifle too far. At the Western Jewish Chautauqua, in a recent address, he gave voice to the following choice sentiment: "It is too bad that the rabbi nowadays is usually the only one in the community who knows the great culture and history of the Jewish people, their language and learning, their Talmud, Torah, and their parts, the Mishnah and Gemara. We must say that it is different in Russia." Yes, and we must say that it is different here, too, wherever we find an intelligent, orthodox laity. And, moreover, where the rabbi, of whom Dr. Meyer, in this respect a welcome exception to the general rule, speaks, is an alumnus of the Cincinnati "forcing-house," we seriously question his knowledge of the great culture and history of the Jewish people, their language and learning, their Talmud, Torah and their (?) parts, the Mishnah and Gemara." An average Orthodox boy in cheder knows his Shass better, much better, than does the average Reform rabbi.

A Word to the Delicatessen Man.

Some years ago the city was honeycombed, in the residential district, with what was then known as the "corner grocer." The corner grocers were nearly all "low Dutchmen," who were doing a most thriving business. Nearly all of them became prosperous — many quite wealthy; they not only kept all kinds of dry groceries, but green goods and vegetables as well, and a large assortment of canned goods.

The prices for canned goods and other articles were steep and for years they enjoyed a monopoly of the grocery business.

At last the department stores opened grocery departments, and by cutting the prices on canned goods and groceries generally practically put the "corner grocer" out of business. And the Greeks who opened fruit, vegetable and garden product stands added to his woe, so that there are to-day but few, very few, of the old style of "corner grocer," and what there is left of him, he is made to conform his prices to those of his competitors.

In a large measure the "delicatessen store" has made an invasion into the held formerly occupied by the corner grocer. These concerns also better have a care else the large grocers of the style of Acker, Merrill & Co. and Park & Tilford, will also wipe them out, for they are pursuing a course, at least a large number of them are, which will make such a retribution a just one. During the last week these delicatessen places have raised the prices of food to an excessive degree, giving as a reason "the war in Europe"—the raise being far beyond what is warranted, and 30 to 40 per cent. above the prices charged in the large establishments referred to for the same goods. These delicatessen people should have a care, for on all sides, these large grocers are opening branch stores, with goods at moderate prices. Hence these stores with the department store grocery, will be apt to make the same short shrift of these delicatessen dealers that they made of the "corner grocer."

It is not denied that some articles have been effected by the "war in Europe," but not to the extent that the small dealer has taken advantage of. Verb sap. L'AIGLON.

Kabbalists

By ISAAC LOEB PEREZ.

(Translated from the Yiddish by Helena Frank.)

When times are bad, even Torah, "the best ware,"* loses in value. In the Lashewitz "academy," there remain only the head, Reb Yaikil, and one pupil.

The head of the academy is an old, thin Jew, with a long, pointed beard and old, extinguished eyes; Lemech, his beloved pupil, is a young man, likewise thin, tall and pale, with black, curling ear-locks, dark, glowing eyes, heavily-ringed, dry lips, and sharp, quivering throat; both with garments open at the breast, with no shirts, and both in rags; the teacher just drags about a pair of peasant boots; the pupil's shoes drop from his sockless feet.

This is all that remains of the celebrated academy!

The impoverished little town sent less and less food, gave fewer and fewer meals to the poor students, and these crept away elsewhere! But Reb Yaikil intends to die here, and his pupil remains to close his eyelids!

And these two are often hungry. Eating little means sleeping little, and whole nights without sleep or food incline one to the Kabbalah! If one has to wake whole nights and hunger whole days, one may as well get something by it, it only rasting and nagelations, so long as these open the door to the world of mystery, of spirits and of angels!

And they have been studying the Kabbalah for some time!

Now they are sitting at the one long table. With everyone else it is "after dinner," with them still before breakfast. They are used to that. The teacher roils his eyes and holds forth, the pupil sits with both hands supporting his head and listens.

"Therein," said the teacher, "a many degrees of attainment: one knows a bit of a tune, another has a one, another a whole. The Rebbe of blessed memory knew a whole one with the accompaniment. I," he added sadly, "have only been found worthy of a bit like that!"

He measured out a tiny piece of his bony finger and went on:

"There is one kind of tune that must have words, that is a low order of tune. But there is a higher kind; a tune that sings itself, but without words—a pure melody! But that melody must have a voice—and lips, through which the voice issues! And lips, you see, are material things!"

"And the voice itself is refined matter, certainly, but matter none the less. Let us say, the voice stands midway between the spiritual and the material."

"However that may be, the tune that finds expression through a voice and is dependent on lips is not pure, not entirely pure, not yet really spiritual!"

"The real tune sings itself without a voice—it sings itself inside one, in the heart, in the thoughts!"

"Where you have the meaning of the words of King David: 'All my bones shall say,' etc. It ought to sing in the marrow of the bones, that is where the tune should be—that is the highest praise we can give to God. That is a human tune that has been thought out. It is a fragment of the melody to which God created the world, of the soul. He breathed into it. Thus sings the Heavenly Family, thus sang the Rebbe, whose memory be blessed!"

The teacher was interrupted by a shock-headed lad with a cord round his waist—a porter. He came into the house of study, put down on the table, beside the teacher, a dish of porridge with a piece of bread, said gruffly: "Reb Tebil sends the teacher some food," turned his back, and added, as he went out: "I'll come back presently for the dish."

Recalled by the rough tone from the divine harmonies, the teacher rose heavily, and went to the basin to wash, dragging his great boots.

He continued to speak as he went, but with less assurance, and the pupil followed him with greedy ears and glowing, dreamy eyes.

"But I," repeated Reb Yaikil, sadly, "was not even worthy of understanding to what category it belongs, of knowing under what heading it is classified. However," he added with a smile, "the initiatory mortifications and purifications, those I do know, and perhaps I will teach them you to-day."

The pupil's eyes seem about to start from their sockets with eagerness; he keeps his mouth open so as to catch every word. But the teacher is silent, he is washing his hands; he repeats the ritual formula, comes back to the table, and says "Thou who bringest forth," with trembling lips.

He lifts the dish with shaking fingers, and the warm steam rises into his face; then he puts it down, takes the spoon in his right hand, and warms the left at the dish's edge; after which he masticates the rest of the bread with some salt between his tongue and his toothless gums.

Having warmed his face with his hands, he wrinkles his forehead, purses his thin lips, and begins to blow the porridge.

The pupil has not taken his eyes off him the whole time, and when the teacher's trembling mouth met the spoonful of porridge, something came over him, and he covered his face with both hands and withdrew within himself.

A few minutes later another boy came in with a bowl of porridge and some bread.

"Reb Yosef sends the pupil some breakfast!"

But the pupil did not remove his hands from his face.

The teacher laid down his spoon and went up to the pupil. For a while he gazed at him with affectionate pride, then he wrapped his hand in the snit of his kaftan, and touched him on the shoulder.

"They have brought you something to eat," he said gently, by way of rousing him. Slowly and sadly the pupil uncovered his face. It was paler than ever, and the black-ringed eyes had grown wider.

"I know, Rebbe," he answered, "but I will not eat anything to-day."

"The fourth fast?" asked the teacher, wondering, "and without me?" he added, with a playful pretense at being hurt.

"It is another kind of fast," answered the pupil. "It is a penance."

"What do you mean? You and a penance?"

"Yes, Rebbe! A penance. A minute ago, when you began to eat, I was tempted to break the commandment: 'Thou shalt not covet!'"

Late that night the pupil woke the teacher. They slept on the benches in the Klaus, opposite to one another.

"Rebbe! Rebbe!" he called in a weak voice.

"What is it?" and the teacher started up in alarm.

"Just now I attained to a higher degree."

"How so?" inquired the teacher, still half asleep.

"It sang within me!"

The teacher sat up.

"How so? How so?"

"I don't know myself, Rebbe," replied the pupil in his feeble tones. "I couldn't sleep, and I thought over what you told me. I wanted to get to know the tune, and I was so sorrowful because I could not that I began to weep; everything in me wept; all my limbs wept before the Creator."

"Then I made the invocations you taught me, and, wonderful to say, not with my lips, but somehow inside me, with my whole self. Suddenly it grew light; I shut my eyes and still it was light to me; very light, brilliantly light."

"There!" and the teacher sat bending toward him.

"And I had such pleasant feelings as I lay in the light and I seemed to weigh nothing at all; no more than if my body had been a feather; I felt as if I could fly."

"You see! You see!"

"Then I felt merry and lively; I wanted to laugh; my face never moved nor my lips either, and yet I laughed—and so heartily."

"You see! You see! You see!"

"Then there was a humming inside me like the beginning of a melody."

The teacher sprang down from his bench and was across the room.

"Well? Well?"

"Then I heard something begin to sing within me."

"What did you feel like? Tell me, quick!"

"I felt as though all the doors of sense in me were shut, and as though within me—as it ought to do—without any words, like—like—"

"How was it? How was it?"

"No, I can't! I knew before—and then the singing turned into—into—"

"Into what? What became of it?"

"A kind of playing, as though (lehab-dil) there was a fiddle inside me, or as if Yoneh, the musician, were sitting there and playing hymns as he does at the Rebbe's dinner table. Only it was better, more beautiful, more spiritual. And without a voice, without any voice, at all—it was all spiritual."

"Happy, happy, happy are you!"

"Now it's all gone (sadly), the doors of sense are reopened and I am so tired, I am so—so—tired that I—"

"Rebbe!" he called out suddenly, clapping a hand to his heart; "Rebbe, say the confession of sins with me. They have come for me. They have come for me. There is a singer wanted in the heavenly family; an angel with white wings. Rebbe! Rebbe! Hear, O Israel! Hear, O Is—"

The entire little town wished as one man that it might die as blessed a death, but the Rebbe was not satisfied.

"Another fast or two," he groaned, "and he would have died beneath the divine kiss."

Pogroms Threatening in Roumania.

The Correspondent of the Unionist Gazette reports from Bucharest: "The Union of Roumanian-born Jews have once more addressed a petition to the Parliament asking for equality of rights for the Jews born in Roumania. Following up this step of the Roumanian Jews the secretary of the Roumanian Culture League, Professor Bogdan Duica, answers by a manifestation of extremely exciting character, published in all the Roumanian newspapers, in which he expresses his thought, that the Jewish question is a question of power, at the same time threatening that the slightest attempt at a solution of this problem in favor of the Jews it would be answered on the part of the Roumanian population by a pogrom similar to the examples Russia has given. The Roumanian Government maintaining their unfriendly attitude towards the requests of their Jewish citizens our friends will probably have to face not inconsiderable danger.

Furthermore the correspondent writes: In consequence of unrestrained anti-Semitic agitation the Jewish population of Odobescht had to suffer last week from sad outrages. The mob in the streets plundered numerous Jewish-shops and dwellings. The police interfered and arrested several persons. Professor Cuza, leader of the anti-Semitic Culture League, broached this incident in the Chamber of Roumania and addressed the question to the Minister for Home Affairs as to what sort of measures he intends to take to suppress the pernicious actions of the Jews and to punish the policemen for their friendly attitude towards the Jews. The Minister's reply was that he is going to institute an inquiry and that the Chamber will receive a report.

Sees World at Peace.

In the absence of the local rabbi Rev. Theodore F. Joseph, of Allentown, Pa., officiated at the Washington (D.C.) Hebrew Temple last Friday evening and delivered an address in which he denounced the war in Europe as inconsistent with the "ideal of peace" which European countries have cherished for many years, predicting as the result a universal peace spreading over all nations.

Dr. Joseph recalled similar rises and falls of empires that the Israelites of history witnessed. He predicted that the ultimate issue of this struggle would be a grander and broader peace for all nations. He said the present carnage would produce a growing appreciation of the necessity of it.

"In our own race," the speaker said, "peace has always been our grandest and most cherished ideal. It has run through our history and our prayers as a golden thread. Israel can live out its economic, industrial, civic and religious salvation only if our race follows the lofty ideals of peaceful fraternalism."

Optimism characterized Dr. Joseph's address. He predicted that good would result from the present war, and that though the cost of universal peace would be great, it would be justified, and with it would be brought to bear lessons of experience to the world.

He predicted that dynasties would be wiped out, and that present monarchies would adopt the republican form of government with the ideals of liberty, equality, fraternity and "peace to all men." One of his predictions was that the border lines of empires would be changed.

The speaker touched on the future of large Hebrew populations in forecasting that good might result from a possible change in sovereignty in the province of Palestine. Russia, with the readjustment of the map of Europe, would have to guarantee civic and religious freedom to the Hebrews of Russia, he said.

Hungary's Treatment of the Jews.

Hungary has proved an exception to the other European countries in its treatment of its Jewish subjects. Probably no country in Europe with as many Jews has tried to treat the Jews so fairly and justly as did Hungary. Long before the middle of the last century the prospects of religious emancipation of the Jews was assured and all peoples co-operated and fought for the liberation of the Jews. In 1867 the bill granting religious liberty to the Jews was adopted amid the applause of the Jews and non-Jews. This well shows in what esteem the Jews are held in this country of the Magyars. A liberty loving people themselves, they were not reluctant to grant freedom to all their subjects. In 1897 the religion of the Jew was "legally recognized," and which act was almost passed unanimously by both houses. In no part of the empire have the Jews enjoyed greater liberty than in this country. They have taken active part in all the fields of human activity and have risen to high positions in all the spheres, political, scientific, etc. The Jews have the most to expect from these peoples who have at all times proved their friendship for them.—Jewish Sentinel.

The final valuation of the estate of Sir Julius Wernher is set at more than $7,500,000, and the estate of Alfred Beit was finally proved at $42,000,000. The two chief partners of Wernher, Beit & Co. made during their lifetime $100,000,000 between them. The Wernher fortune is easily the record for a South African magnate.

Saratoga's Waters and Attractions.
Many thousands of patients suffering from rheumatism, gout, arthritis or neurasthenia, or especially from diseases of the heart and the arteries, have been greatly benefited by the use of baths in mineral water naturally charged with a large amount of carbonic acid gas at Wiesbaden, Marienbad, Nauheim, Kissingen and other European health resorts.

The same results can be obtained by bathing in the mineral waters of Saratoga Springs, the only spring waters in this country east of the Rocky Mountains with such a large content of this valuable gas ingredient.

The State of New York has restored the mineral waters of Saratoga Springs, which are now in a State reservation, flowing freely or, in some instances, spouting to a considerable height, in larger quantity, of better quality and in considerable variety. They are now under the administration and regulation of the State government.

These waters are of great therapeutic value when properly used for bathing or when taken internally.

The mineral springs supplying drinking waters, all alkaline-saline, are comprised within four principal classes—laxative or cathartic waters, alkaline-saline with alkalinity comparatively predominating, chalybeate or iron waters and table waters, all containing nearly two volumes of carbonic acid gas in solution and therefore supersaturated.

The laboratory of the State reservation at Saratoga Springs, preserving close relations with the laboratories of the State Department of Health, is in the large Hathorn Building, and here the analyses of the waters are made, as well as bacteriological examinations, assaying of rock and mineral and also determination of carbonic acid gas and degree of radioactivity presented by the different waters.

The radio-activity of Saratoga Waters is due to dissolved radium salts, to an unusual degree, and is therefore persistent. The effect of radium salts taken internally is computed to last about three days.

The mineral waters used for bathing are especially useful in certain heart and arterial disorders and degenerations, nerve fag (neurasthenia), exhaustion following acute diseases or surgical operations, in alcoholic or drug addiction, in gout, rheumatism and arthritis, and in reducing obesity.

The mineral waters used for drinking are principally useful in digestive disorders, certain stages of kidney disease, in anaemia, and, partly because of the radio-activity present, in gout, rheumatism and arthritis.

Full analyses of the mineral spring waters mentioned are given herewith

Saratoga Springs offers:
A village containing about 13,000 inhabitants, one and one-quarter hours from Albany; five hours from Grand Central Terminal, New York city; five and three-quarters hours from Boston by the B. and M.; six and one-quarter hours from Binghamton; seven and one-quarter hours from Montreal; ten hours from Philadelphia; fifteen hours from Chicago.

Auto roads from Albany, Cooperstown, Lenox, Pittsfield, Bennington, Westport, Lake George, New York.

Miles of streets, shaded by magnificent elms, maples and pines, with locusts, lindens, cherry and apple trees for variety.

Broad lawns with grass as green as in England.

Delightful weather from May first to December first; and a dry, tonic and healthful winter climate.

Scores of attractive villas.

Famous hotels, in the village and on the nine-miles-long Saratoga Lake, as well as many excellent boarding houses.

Charming village park of ten acres, with terraces, groves, lakes and Italian Garden, including within its limits the Congress and Columbian Springs, the Casino and the beautiful and impressive Trask Memorial. Three small State Reservation Parks in the village; one surrounding the historic High Rock Spring and great cone of tufa, revealed to the white man by the Indians in 1767; besides the 45-acre Lincoln Park and the 250-acre-Geyser Park, two miles distant, wherein are many spouting and bubbling springs, a mile of Coosa Creek, and other attractive features.

For some time past the most important Mohammedan papers in Constantinople, which are regarded as the organs of the Young Turks, have in their campaign in favor of Mussulman nationalism attacked all non-Mohammedans in the empire, including the Jews. One paper The Tasfir Efkia, has been especially conspicuous in this direction, and it attacks the Jews in particular. In consequence of representations made by the Haham Bashi to the Porte the publication of the paper has been suspended, but it has been permitted to reappear under a very slightly altered title.

"Potash and Perlmutter" will this week celebrate an uninterrupted run of one year in New York city. The success of this play, with Jewish characters as the central figures, has been truly remarkable, and for next season no less than eight different companies will tour the United States. In England "Potash and Perlmutter" has been equally successful. A company is enjoying a long run in London, and two companies will tour the provinces. It is now admitted

Let the Portals of the Synagogue Be Open.

(Translated from the Yiddish of Gedaliah Bublik in the Jewish Daily News.)

There are plans proposed and suggestions made for the fostering of Jewishness among the younger element, the growing generation, and the native born, who will have to follow suit and continue our religious work in the future. The ways and means for the diffusion of Judaism and the dissemination of the parental inheritance are entirely overlooked. Our synagogues fail to convey their messages and don't manifest their mission. We, indeed, have a right to demand better returns, but sins of omission and iniquities of commission are responsible for public inactivities and cause universal stagnation. Let us then atone for past transgressions, smooth out the difficulties and mend our ways; in other words, may the synagogues turn sources of inspiration and pabula for reflection, so as to instill and inject Jewish ideals and ideas, fervency and intensity, zeal and ardency, ameliorating, this wise, local conditions and existing circumstances, and at the same time banishing apathy and indifference. There are, to all intents and purposes, about two thousand synagogues, which should have been the harbingers and the centres of a living, striving and seething Judaism, their keynote being Judaism first, last and all the time.

Unfortunately, this is not the case, the greater number of the synagogues being closed, opening but for extraordinary occasions, when the memory of a departed member is blessed by the near kin, who offer prayers and conduct, divine service, the synagogue becoming thus allied with the cemetery. Do the congregational leaders really think that the house of prayer is but the preparatory to the grave-yard, people visiting the former only after the latter became the depository of demised relatives? Are they inclined to believe that the Kaddish stands first and foremost in the activities of religion, eclipsing all other needs and necessities of a communal life and national consciousness?

Remember the days of old, study conditions of yore, when the houses of prayer have bored children and adults, engaged in the reflections and discussions of the law and its multifarious addenda, superseding as these would the meditations and devotions, for the perpetuation of Judaism and the dissemination of its implications, usefulness and benefits. Knowledge and learning are the basic foundations of the Jewish creed, emphasizing wisdom and accentuating contemplation to such a wonderful degree as to place the humblest student above the High Priest, knowing full well that ignorance and illiteracy undermine religion and shatter its foundations.

The recital of assigned selections and the chanting of several hymns do not complete the mission and commission of the synagogue: Information and investigation are the proper means and essential methods for the spread and furtherance of religious ideas and creedal concepts, which must needs be imparted within the very quarters of the temple and on its very premises. The hub on which Judaism revolves is the synagogue, out of which sprang our sages, sayants, rabbis, codifiers of the laws, makers of books and compilers of doc-torians will rebuke us severely and call us to account for these sins of omission and commission in failing to provide for Boazs gracing the aisles and finishing augmentary touches. They, the Houses of the Lord, are supplied, likewise, with all the sacramental paraphernalia, traditional outfits and prescribed investments, a rabbi, chazan, sextion and male choir, all of which, however, cater to the fads and fancies of the older folks, the immigrants, the Russian, Polish, Galician and Roumanian arrivals, who understand the vernacular, know the Hebrew, comprehend the ritual, appreciate the rabbi's polyglot and admire the chazan's cantillations.

But what about the youths and maidens who were born, raised and reared on these shores? What do they know of Talmudical discourses, mediaeval melodies, Aramalec sophistries and Hebrew recitations? How can one expect children of universal training, school education and modern environment to come to the synagogue, listen to unintelligible utterances and participate in ceremonies, rites and functions, without having any idea of the reason, cause and origin of the performances, or any intimation as to the meaning, significance and impressions of the celebrations. Yawning, gaping, sleeping, talking, ridiculing and scoffing, are, indeed, very poor accessories to associate with religious zeal, fervency and devotion. Yet, the observing by the young ones of the blowing of Shofar, the shaking of the Lulah, the stamping at the mention of the name of Haman and the smiting of the willows of the brook, on the respective festivals of New Year's, Tabernacles, Purim and Hashannah Rabba to the uninitiated and the novice are but objects for contempt and derision.

The walls, floor and ceiling of the synagogue, as well as the desks, chairs and benches, cry bitterly and openly revolt against the darkness, dormancy and stagnation that reign supreme within the interior; and Scrolls of Moses, books of the prophets, cycles of prayer, compendia of the ritual, volumes of the Talmud, treatises of the Midrash, collections of responsa and compilations of the codices are perennial prisoners, doomed to captivity and confined in seclusive hermitage.

To allay these pangs, remedy the disease, ameliorate conditions and bring back the stray sheep to the fold, the wayward children to their parents and the lost members to the community, the leaders and workers in God's vineyards must need install in the synagogal vestry rooms, institutes, schools, libraries, clubs and gymnasia. Instructors, speakers and rabbis must frequent the places to diffuse Judaism, further religion, reveal history and refute the scoffers. Open widely the synagogal portals for the admission and ingress of men and women, youths and maidens, boys and girls, to learn and study, ponder and perse, contemplate and aspire, as all of them are the children of the Covenant, offshoots of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Rabbi Lipkind for Agudath Jeshorim The announcement is made that Rabbi G. Lipkind has received and accepted a call to the Congregation Agudath Jeshorim, East Eighty-sixth street, in succession to Dr. David Davidson, who recently resigned.

Rabbi G. Lipkind has been in the American rabbinate for ten years, and has held positions in Milwaukee and St. Louis. He was the first minister appointed to the Emanu-El Brotherhood, New York, and succeeded in placing the movement on a stable and permanent basis.

In St. Louis he ministered to the United Hebrew Congregation for two years, preaching to large congregations and greatly increasing the membership of the congregation. A vigorous and active propaganda will immediately be started at the Eighty-sixth Street Temple for augmenting the membership and increasing the spiritual and educational activities of the Temple.

Rabbi Lipkind will preach this Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock, and every Sabbath thereafter until further notice at 10 a. m.

Sinal Temple of the Bronx.

The ladies of the Sinal and Henriette Sisterhoods held an enthusiastic meeting at Sinal Temple, 816 Union avenue, on Thursday evening, August 6. Mrs. S. Henickburg, the chairlady of the Fair Committee, presided, and presented an excellent report of the work accomplished and an elaborate account of the various plans and schemes to be promulgated. Mr. William Daub, the manager of the fair, and Rev. Dr. Max Reichler, the rabbi of the congregation, made short addresses. The fair is to be given in the early part of the winter, and from the various reports of the work of the ladies, even those at summer resorts, a considerable amount of money will be added to the building fund of the congregation.

The last two Saturdays Rabbi Reichler occupied the pulpits of the People's Temple of Bensonhurst and of Temple Israel of Far Rockaway, respectively, Rabbis Braun and Frisch, the occupants of these pulpits, will in turn speak of Sinal Temple during the month of October.

A Hebrew Juvenile Periodical.

The August number of The Young Judacan has just appeared with a Hebrew supplement, which is to become one of the features of this popular monthly magazine for the young. The Hebrew is written in a simple style and is accompanied with vowels, making it very attractive to youthful readers in Hebrew schools as well as Zionist circles. This supplement will be the first Hebrew periodical for juveniles appearing in this country. The August issue is a Herzl number and in addition to a full biography contains a story written by Herzl, as well as anecdotes of his life, tributes by leading Jews and extracts from his Zionist writings. It is fully illustrated and affords permanent value for all interested in the life and work of the founder of modern Zionism.

Sharon Springs Notes.

Last Saturday morning Myron, son of Rev. Bernard Drachman was Bar Mitzvah and there was an unusually large congregation present. Mr. Jonas We'l the young confirmant's grandfather, addressed the gathering. A "peace meeting" was held Sunday evening under the auspices of a committee, consisting of Messrs. Jonas Weil, H. B. Grossman and M. Engelman. Dr. Drachman delivered an address and a special Hebrew prayer composed by him was recited by Cantor Josef Rosenblatt. The synagogue held the largest gathering since its opening some years ago.

Rabbi Joel Blau will preach in Temple Beth Miriam this Sabbath morning.

A Depositor's Protective Committee.

At a meeting to-day he'd at the office of Mr. Louis Marshall, 37 Wall street, New York city, at which the following gentlemen were present: Jacob H. Schiff, Herbert H. Lehman, Albert Bing, J. L. Magnes, Charles Dushkind, Bernard Semel, Joseph H. Cohen, Israel Unterberg, Isaac Goldberg and S. C. Lamport, a committee was organized to act for the protection of the depositors of the several East Side p. i. e. banks which have recently been closed by the Superintendent of Banks.

On assuming this function, the committee deems it incumbent upon itself to make the following statement of its purposes, in order that there may be no misconception on the part of the public or of the depositors of the affected banks:

The Superintendent of Banks has taken possession of the property and assets of these several banks, in obedience to the provisions of the revised banking act of 1914. The duty of administering the affairs of these banks rests upon the superintendent. In fact, it is the State which is engaged, through him, in liquidating these institutions. It is to be presumed that the superintendent will perform his duty. Nevertheless, on account of the complicated situation, it is believed to be desirable that representatives of the depositors shall keep themselves in constant communication with the superintendent, in order to tender him such advice as they may be able to give, to the end that the best possible results may be attained.

There is absolutely no necessity that the depositors should engage lawyers to represent them. Private attorneys can be of no assistance whatsoever. The Superintendent of Banks is required by law to distribute the proceeds of the liquidation of each of these suspended banks equally to all depositors who prove their claims. All that it is therefore necessary for the depositors to do is, to prove their claims when called upon to do so by the superintendent, who will doubtless furnish the necessary blanks without cost or expense to the depositors.

It is important that the creditors exercise patience in this unfortunate situation. Nothing can be gained by excitement, and payment cannot be hastened by impatience or by giving heed to the statements of irresponsible persons, or by multiplying committees, or by protesting or holding mass meetings. The Superintendent of Banks will be required to make an inventory of the assets of these suspended banks. This committee will, if permitted, make every reasonable endeavor to ascertain, after such inventory has been prepared, what the assets consist of and what their probable value is, and will from time to time, through the press, inform the depositors of the results of their investigation, and will communicate to the superintendent such information as may come to it with respect to the actual assets of the suspended banks. So far as it lies in its power, the committee will seek to safeguard the interests of the depositors, and to that end will have the benefit of the advice of experienced men of affairs, who have expressed their willingness to co-operate with it.

This committee is not in a position to render financial assistance to the depositors, either by way of loans, advances or otherwise, but will confine its endeavors to the exercise of such guidance of the depositors as the circumstances may permit. Unity of sanction is of course desirable. Nothing can be gained by conflicting advisors, which can only result in confusion, and probably in the absolutely ignoring by the Superintendent of Banks of all committees.

Suggestions in writing will be gladly received at the office of the committee, 256 Second avenue, New York city.

Dated, New York, August 10, 1914. J. L. MAGNES, CHARLES DUSHKIND, BERNARD SEMEL, JOSEPH H. COHEN, ISRAEL UNTERBERG, ISAAC GOLDBERG, S. C. LAMPOR, H. MANDELBAUM, CYRUS L. SULZBERGER, JACOB WERTHEIM, Committee.

Personal Liberty.

By LOUIS N. HAMMERLING.

It is an old saying that, in order to command, one should first learn to obey. Similarly, it is true that, in order to be qualified to enjoy liberty, one should first learn to master oneself.

The animal, man, needs a master in order to live decently and properly. If he would dispense with mastery from without he must possess a master within; that is to say, if he would be free he must master himself by his reason and his will.

This is fundamental and of the essence of liberty. To live a life of freedom within the limits of civilized society certain restraints are necessary. But the morally free does not feel them as restraints, rather as expressions of his own principles and aspirations; for the reason and will of the free moral agent are in harmony with the rules established by the consent of civilized men for their own government. As one of the great writers has said, "Take up the godhead into thy will and it will descend from its throne above the world; the galling fetters of the law bind only the slave who would spurn them."

There can thus be no freedom without self-mastery. Neither is there self-mastery without freedom. Nor, if one lives correctly according to the forms of law under compulsion from without, there is not self-mastery, but slavery to external authority.

This is also of the essence of self-government. Self-government is but the self-mastery of a number of individuals instead of a single individual.

Thus it is true that self-mastery is the necessary preliminary to freedom, even as freedom is the only atmosphere in which self-mastery can be exercised.

All these principles are familiar enough in a land in which self-government has been practiced for centuries. But this very familiarity tends to make us careless of them. We are too apt to take them for granted together with the idea that every one understands them and which is more important—that every one values them and holds them sacred. Here is where we are likely to be mistaken and to run the risk of losing our liberties, because there are many who do not properly value the importance of self-mastery as the foundation of liberty and seek to impose their own will upon others.

And right here is the danger that threatens us in this country to-day. Confidence in the self-mastery of the people seems to have been lost by many of our citizens who feel that the country is going to the bad because everybody else does not think as they do. And they pass laws without number, seeking to prescribe the conduct of each and every one for as many occasions as they can think of. It is a common complaint that we have too many laws. Even the most law-abiding citizen breaks scores of laws almost every day without knowing it of without being able to help himself.

Thus there are too many laws, but there is not enough law. For laws may prescribe or prohibit conduct, but law, that is, the sense of right and the desire to do right; can come only of the proper education to self-mastery and that foresight which identifies individual rights and interest with the rights and interest of the public.

The more crutches we provide for a man the weaker will he become on his feet. The more laws we pass to prescribe a man's conduct the less will he rely on himself to do right, the less will he be capable to choose for himself his duty and to identify his desire with his duty, the more will self-mastery decay and dwindle. And the more will liberty be circumscribed and confined. Finally, even the capacity for liberty, that is, for leading proper and moral lives in a civilized community without external constraint will become atrophied and die out. The tendency in our public life which is here criticized has extended to our schools and to education at home. More and more has the kindergarten principle been widened to embrace the primary and grammar grades and domestic training until it has become almost a settled conviction that children must be required to do only that which they like to do, and it is the chief art of the educator to supply that which will interest them. The underlying idea is no doubt right, and its application within bounds is probably altogether beneficial. But in order to prepare the child for life he must learn to do tasks not because he likes them, but because he ought to; that is to say he must develop a sense of duty, which again is self-mastery. There is too much self-indulgence in the present generation as a result of this lack of the sense of duty or self-mastery. There is an absence of mental poise, there is emotionalism and superficial thought to act on the great public questions that are submitted to the voters for their decision, and the result is that the political and moral charlatan too often wins, while the thorough student and earnest statesman ends in failure.

As we develop our muscles by physical exercise and labor, as we expand our minds and give them strength and suppleness by employing their powers, as we acquire moral firmness and discernment by compelling ourselves to do right regardless of advantage or pleasure, so must we foster self-mastery by giving it the widest scope consistent with the public safety. Assuredly it were mistaken kindness to strap crutches on healthy bodies because there are some cripples. And likewise it would be destructive of self-mastery so to shape our environment that we could not do wrong if we would.

It is better to build from within, to develop self-mastery. Therein lies the only permanent safety of our liberty. The self-master is the only true free man.—American Leader.

Be Careful of Exploitation.

As the primaries and election approach we find the attempts of politicians to secure the support of some one class or nationality in the community by an appeal to the prejudices of that particular class. It's bad practice. It's to be deplored.

One instance has already come to notice, where people engaged in a preliminary sparring match for a mayoralty nomination are seeking to use the Jewish race of Lynn for their selfish ends.

They pretend all sorts of friendships for the race, they magnify conditions, create straw men to knock down, and pose as the particular friends of this race and that. But it is only unbecoming, and the wise leaders in the Jewish race or any other race ought to be able to see through it.

The Jewish race, which we select only because it is being exploited at the present time, forms no unimportant and inconsiderable proportion of the population of Lynn. The section which it inhabits and its desires before the municipal council of Lynn deserve attention. But they do not deserve attention just because of the race, but because the people are citizens of Lynn, intelligent, respectable, hard-working citizens, thrifty citizens, tax-paying citizens, and they deserve from the municipal council the same consideration that any other class of citizenship receives, not as we have said, because of their particular racial distinction, but because of their citizenship.

Any politician who tries to incur their prejudice by insisting they are entitled to any more than any other class, any man who tries to raise their animosities, any man who tries to induce them to ask for unreasonable things, in the intent to secure their votes for his own ends is not a good citizen and is not the best friend of the Jewish people themselves.

We sincerely hope there will be no more such attempt in the municipal contest soon to ensue. If there is the wise leaders of the race should counsel their compatriots. It is a sad thing to see a splendid race exploited for the selfish ends of politicians who ought to show themselves better Americans.—Lynn (Mass.) News.

Jewry in Bombay.

Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, of Philadelphia, Pa., who is making a tour of the world, recently addressed a letter to his congregation from Bombay, India, and in the course of a description of Jewish conditions in that city had the following to say:

"With Mr. Raymond and Mrs. S. R. Marcus, the latter a gentleman of leisure, who kindly volunteered his services as guide, I visited two of the three synagogues, both of them, as have been almost all the others I have seen thus far in the Orient, the gifts of the Sassoons, and both maintained from perpetual endowments created by them, as are the others. Synagogal connection in the Orient, is, therefore, not an expensive affair; it might, perhaps, have been better for its state of Judaism if it were. The same apathy as to matters religious which I found in nearly all the Jewish communities I have thus far visited I found in Bombay. To most of the Oriental Jews perfunctory compliance with certain devotional and ceremonial forms is looked upon as a sort of tax they must pay to God to assure their individual salvation. That Judaism has a mission, that the present-day Jew has to continue the work his fathers have begun, that he still has a task to perform in the humanization and fraternization of mankind seems to enter the minds of but the fewest. But for paid attendants to make up the requisite "Minyan" the daily services could often not be conducted, and but for mourners, or for those who commemorate the anniversaries of the death of departed ones, the synagogue would perhaps not be opened at all on weekdays. The Saturday services, which commence at 6.30 in the morning and which are attended by some two or three score worshippers, are conspicuous for the absence of women and children. Many abstain from work on the Sabbath day, but of the more progressive, notably of the younger generation, many observe a little Saturday Sabbath as Sunday Sabbath; they work seven days in the week, all the year round, excepting on 'Rosh Hashanah' and 'Kippur, Christmas' and 'New Year,' and on the King's birthday."

BROOKLYN NOTES.

To Educate Candidates for Trained Nurses.

The Training School for Nurses of the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn has recently adopted a plan supplemental to the course of training, whereby deserving young women may become trained nurses.

The State Department of Education requires that all candidates for admission to training schools shall have had one year's education in high school or its equivalent. There are many young women who would make ideal nurses who do not possess the educational qualifications required by the State.

In order to obviate this difficulty and help deserving applicants, the training school has undertaken to educate applicants in the necessary preliminary subjects so as to enable them to pass the Regents' examinations. This training will be afforded either by private or class instruction at a well-known preparatory school in Brooklyn. The cost will be entirely paid by the training school. During this preliminary education the applicants will be taken on probation in the training school, thus providing them with a home, board, etc., during instruction, and they will also receive a sum sufficient to cover their expenses.

This plan will appeal to many young women. The training school is a splendid modern institution and exceptionally well equipped for the training of nurses. Any information respecting this matter will be furnished by Miss Sabol, superintendent of the Training School for Nurses of the Jewish Hospital, Clarkson and St. Marks avenues.

Jewish Immigration on the Increase.

There was an increase in Jewish immigration during the month of May over that of the same month last year amounting to 48.2 per cent., says Iskander Hourwich in the July number of the Jewish Immigration Bulletin. The immigration during the first five months of this year as compared with the same period the preceding year shows an increase of 12.2 per cent. As will be remembered, the first three months of this year showed an increase over last year of nearly 20 per cent. In April, however, there was a sharp decline in immigration as contrasted with a sharp increase in the same month of 1913.

The immigration, more than nine-tenths of which comes from countries in Southern and Eastern Europe, shows but a slight predominance of males over females. This is true for all ports but Galveston, where males form almost three-fourths of all immigration. Contrary to that which one would expect is the fact that the percentage of persons coming from countries other than those of Southern and Eastern Europe is greatest at the port of New York. The number and percentage of these is negligible at Baltimore and Galveston. Russia and Austria sent respectively eight-tenths and one-seventh of all arrivals. The remainder came from about twenty-five different countries in all points of the globe.

On the whole the immigrants who come over here are young men and women and children at the age when they are assimilated most readily. But one-third of the immigrants are married; nearly one-fourth are children under sixteen years of age, and unmarried and unaccompanied girls are one-eighth.

On the whole the immigrants are illiterate, less than one-sixth of the adults being unable to read. It is interesting to note that Boston and Galveston consistently show a much lower percentage of illiteracy than the other ports. The immigrants arriving at these ports appear to be no different from those arriving in New York; certainly they are not recruited from the upper classes, since Table VII. shows that they bring less per capita than they at the port of New York, yet the figures seem to show that they are more literate. One cannot help but suspect that illiteracy at the other ports is exaggerated.

This percentage becomes more significant when it is remembered that in Russia, from where eight-tenths of these people have emigrated, the percentage of illiteracy is sometimes estimated to be as high as 30 per cent. in urban communities, which is not to mention the various restrictions which are placed on the Jews in Russia to prevent them from acquiring most rudimentary knowledge.

It is often stated that the immigrant causes congestion. These facts are that more than one-fourth of the immigrants leave the State at which they have arrived immediately upon landing. At Baltimore and Galveston nearly eight-tenths and seven-tenths, respectively, of the immigrants left for other States upon landing.

The story of the immigrant is graphically depicted in Table VIII. Of the pioneers the full families, consisting of father, mother and children, there were 1,300, bringing with them on an average about $169. Ample proof that the immigrant "makes good" is found in the 3,100 families who are coming over to join the fathers that preceded them. In every one of these cases the father of the family had gone forth alone to try his way. When success came he sent for his family that is represented in these 3,100. Eight-tenths of the immigrants gave as their destinations places in the Atlantic States. At Baltimore, on the other hand, less than two-fifths remained in the Atlantic States, all but 6 per cent. of the remainder going to the Central States. Illinois individually claimed more immigrants than any State other than one in which there is a seaport.

The unaccompanied girls come, on the whole, from the same countries as the rest of the immigrants and in nearly the same proportion, fewer girls coming from Russia and more from Austria than is true of the whole immigration.

It is of great interest to know, in view of unfounded aspersions cast on the morality of these girls, that nearly three-fifths (fully 55.9 per cent.) of them were met by members of the immediate family, as fathers, mothers, sisters, etc.; that 41.2 per cent. were met by other relatives and but 2.9 per cent. were not met by kin, included among the latter being quite a few intended husbands.

Nearly nine-tenths of the girls gave eight cities (New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, Baltimore, Cleveland, Ohio and Newark, N. J.) as their destinations.

Culture of Jews in New York.

The New York Jew is a remarkable product. The public libraries that lend the largest percentage of books of a serious character are in the Jewish districts. The keenest pupils in the public schools are Jewish boys and girls. The high school that does perhaps the most remarkable work is the Washington Irving, whose membership of 6,000 girls is almost exclusively Jewish. On the East Side the debating society is the favorite place of resort; the atmosphere is filled with conversation, with public lectures, with music. Instead of discussing particular politicians and admen, these people are more interested in public questions—in subways, budgets, tenement house reform, municipal ownership, Socialism. They are almost all radicals.—The World's Work.

Masterpieces from the West.

Mr. Meyer A. Goldstein wishes to inform his friends the public that he has returned from a recent tour of the Western States in the interest of his firm, Messrs. Cohen, Goldstein & Co., 113-113 1/2 Bowery, the reliable furniture house that for many years has pleased its customers both in the quality of goods sold and in the matter of prices, which are always below the level of those asked by the furniture houses and department stores located in more expensive rental sections of the city. Mr. Goldstein is particularly anxious to emphasize the fact that Grand Rapids is not the only furniture manufacturing city on the map of the United States. He visited other towns and cities, where he picked up the choicest variety of splendidly made furniture that any buyer ever had the opportunity to gather in on one trip, and all of these masterpieces of the cabinet-maker's art, are now in stock and on exhibition. They are offered for sale at such modest prices that the extensively advertised August furniture sales will be outclassed in prices, beauty of design and everything that makes furniture worth while in the home. An inspection of this superb stock or a comparison of prices is requested.—Advertisement.

"Too Many Cooks," with Frank Craven back in his original part, is enjoying heightened popularity at the Tairt-ninth Street Theatre. The number of the performances for the coming week run from 201 to 208, inclusive, and neither the unusual length of the play's career on Broadway nor the frequently distressing humidity of the summer nights has influenced the unflagging spirit of the acting or the engaging humor of the stage proceedings.

Opposing dancing, singing and comedy to the grim front of war, the Palace Theatre is having a merry week with Elizabeth Brice and Charles King heading the bill in a bit of musical comedy done in a vaudeville way. Dainty Marie, "The Venus of the Flying Rings," does her dances and acrobatics in the prettiest and most individual acrobatic novelty on the stage. The great character actor, William H. Thompson, assisted by a powerful company, presents a tabloid drama by Cleveland Moffett called "Money Talks," and Adgie's Lions is the most thrilling animal entertainment ever staged; Adelaide and Hughes continue the Chinese "Ta-Tao," their Pierrot dance and other remarkable exhibitions of technical skill, and Harry Breen and Kirk and Fogarty offer their comedy. War bulletins are read at every performance.

Patrons of the Brighton Beach Music Hall have shown such evident appreciation of the big programmes that the management has provided during the last three weeks that it has been decided to offer another of equal proportions for the current week's entertainment. Fifteen excellent vaudeville acts will make up a bill that will compare favorably with the fine programme that Manager Breed has been giving. Among the brighter features of the week are Will Oakland and company, in "A Night at the Club"; Miss Evelyn Dunmore, a very clever singing comedienne; the Seven Bracks, sensational acrobats; Darrell and Conway, in their laughable farce comedy skit entitled "Life on the Stage"; Ajax and Emily, in feats of prodigious strength, and the Three Clark Razillians, European aerial wonders.

Cantor Greenbaum in the Bronx To the Jews of the Bronx

Cantor J. S. Greenbaum is at present organizing a congregation to be known as Congregation Beth Jacob.

For the coming holidays we have secured the beautiful
EMPIRE THEATRE,
 Westchester Avenue and 161st Street,
 (Near Prospect Avenue Subway Station) where services will be conducted according to strict orthodox ritual. Cantor Greenbaum was for the past eight years cantor of the Montefiore Congregation of the Bronx, and his fine baritone voice and the beautiful manner in which he conducts services are well known to Bronx residents. During the holidays Rabbi Taubenhauz will deliver suitable addresses in English and in German. The Empire Theatre is a beautiful edifice, containing over 2,000 seats. There will be no crowding and the ventilation is all that can be desired.
 The price of seats will range from $1 to $5 each. For reservations and further particulars call on or address
 Rev. J. S. Greenbaum, 777 Hewitt Place, Bronx.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

A SUDDEN CALL

Dear Children.

Rabbi Jacob said: "This world is, as it were, the vestibule of the world to come; prepare thyself in the vestibule in order that thou mayest enter the great banquet hall." He used further to say, "Sweeter is one hour of repentance and good deeds in this world than the whole of one's being in the world to come; yet sweeter is one hour of spiritual bliss in the world to come than all the life of this world."

Our great moralists always impress upon us the fact that this is the world of preparation and that we should always be prepared for a sudden call to the palace where we ought to appear suitably appared as becomes one who is in the presence of the King.

In the time of the great rabbi who was the author of the work called Mikdash Melech there lived a Jew who led an immoral life, as he was led astray by his passions and desires which he was too weak to resist. The rabbis and righteous men of the city constantly exhorted him to mend his ways, but his evil imagination was so strong that he could not conquer it, and he became daily a greater sinner. Besides that he was a great drunkard. It once happened that in a convivial drinking bout with some boon companions he drank so much that he died the same night. On the following day he was interred, and at his funeral there were present all the inhabitants of the city, both great and small, an honor seldom accorded even to very pious men. The author of Mikdash Melech happened to arrive in that city in the midst of the funeral procession. When he saw such a great number of people at the funeral he asked "Who is that 'Tzadik' (righteous man) who died in your city?" Some one said, "No, Rabbi, he was no righteous man. On the contrary, a very wicked man, and because he was so notorious as a great sinner, to whom there was no equal, therefore everybody went to his funeral just out of curiosity." The author of Mikdash Melech understood that the reason for the great funeral was not as simple as the people thought; and he prayed that the true reason might be revealed to him. Thereupon he dreamt that this sinner was seated in Paradise among the righteous men and was clothed in a handsome Talith with a golden crown. When the author of Mikdash Melech inquired how that dream might be interpreted he was told that that sinner was not so very blameworthy because he had an inherent inclination for immoral actions and for wine and he could not overcome these terrible temptations; but on the day before he died there came to him the parents of a poor bride who wept and begged him to advise them what they should do concerning their daughter, who had become betrothed but whose engagement was about to be broken just because they could not afford to buy the bridegroom a Talith with a silver crown. That sinner immediately went to a dealer in Talethim and bought of him a handsome Talith with a good silver crown. He then sent for the bridegroom, praised the girl and her parents very much, and gave him some of his good wine. He then kissed him and presented him with the Talith with the silver crown, and the bridegroom left him in a very contented frame of mind. Through this good action the sinner acquired his share in the world to come. Therefore it was a merciful Providence that allowed him to die of drunkenness on that night in order that he should sin no more. On the following day the author of the Mikdash Melech told the story of that wonderful man to the honored men of the city, and said that that man had prepared himself very handsomely in the vestibule and that he had beheld him sitting in that handsome apparel in the palace of the Holy One, blessed be He, just as Rabbi Jacob said, "Prepare thyself in the vestibule in order that thou mayest enter the great banquet hall."

Willie—Paw, what's a stable government?

Paw—When the party in power displays horse sense, my son.

Gable—I see that a scientist says that he will make eggs out of air.

Steve—Gee, I hope he will wait until the campaign closes.

"What is the best way to develop an appetite?" asked the old fogy.

"Being without the price of a meal is the best way I know of," replied the wise guy.

Briggs—What did your wife say about your staying out so late the other night?

Griggs—Don't ask me yet. When she gets through with the subject I'll condense it for you.

Mrs. Peckhem—Henry, do you believe that people are punished right here on earth for their sins?

Peckhem—I certainly do—that is, if marriages are really made in heaven.

"I see," said Mr. Starvem, "that a certain scientist claims we'll soon get a palatable food from wood—"

"Well," growled the crank boarder, "it seems impossible to get it out of board."

On his teacher's request that he give the class his ideas on the subject of "Bravery" little Johnny delivered himself of the following:

"Some boys is brave because they always plays with little boys, and some boys is brave because their legs is too short to run away, but most boys is brave because somebody's lookin'."

An old-time Yankee from a Vermont town recently went to that city for the purpose of purchasing a new family carryall.

"I presume you want a carriage with rubber tires," said the dealer.

"No, sir," was the emphatic response. "We ain't that kind. When we are driving we want to know it"

"I hear the sea captain is in hard luck. He married a girl and she ran away from him."

"Yes; he took her for a mate, but she was a skipper."—Tid-Bits.

"I want to buy a pair of slippers, size 9, to give to my pa on his birthday," said the boy to the shoe salesman.

"What price slippers do you want?"

"I don't mind the price," said the boy, "but please have the soles thin and soft."

Form 228. ONE Explanation-Matter in Italics is new; matter in brackets [] is old matter to be omitted. STATE OF NEW YORK OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE Albany, July 20, 1914. Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section one of article two of the Constitution of the State of New York is referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators in this State to be held on the third day of November, nineteen hundred and fourteen.

MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly proposing an amendment to section one of article two of the constitution, in relation to the qualification of voters.

Section 1. Resolved (If the Assembly concur). That section one of article two of the constitution be amended to read as follows: Section 1. Every [male] citizen of the age of twenty-one years, who shall have been a citizen for ninety days, and an inhabitant of this State one year next preceding an election, and for the last four months a resident of the county and for the last thirty days a resident of the election district in which he or she may offer his or her vote, shall be entitled to vote at such election in the election district in which he or she shall at the time be a resident, and not elsewhere, for all officers that now are or hereafter may be elective by the people, and upon all questions which may be submitted to the vote of the people, provided that a citizen by marriage shall have been an inhabitant of the United States for five years; and provided that in time of war no elector in the actual military service of the state, or of the United States, in the army or navy thereof, shall be deprived of his or her vote by reason of his or her absence from such election district; and the legislature shall have power to provide the manner in which and the time and place at which such absent electors may vote, and for the return and canvass of their votes in the election districts in which they respectively reside.

Section 2. Resolved (If the Assembly concur). That the foregoing amendment be referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and in conformity with section one of article fourteen of the constitution, be published for three months previous to the time of such election.

State of New York. In Senate, Jan. 23, 1913. The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof.

By order of the Senate. MARTIN H. GLYNN, President.

State of New York. In Assembly, Jan. 27, 1913. The foregoing resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof.

By order of the Assembly. ALFRED E. SMITH, Speaker.

STATE OF NEW YORK OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE. I have compared the preceding copy of concurrent resolution with the original concurrent resolution on file in this office, and I do hereby certify that the same is a correct transcript thereof; and of the whole thereof.

Given under my hand and the seal of the office of the Secretary of State at the [L. S.] city of Albany, this twentieth day of July, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

Form 281. TWO Explanation-Matter in Italics is new. STATE OF NEW YORK OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE Albany, July 20, 1914. Pursuant to the provisions of section one of article fourteen of the Constitution of the State of New York, and section two hundred and ninety-five of the Election Law, notice is hereby given that the following proposed amendment to section four of article seven of the Constitution of the State of New York is referred to the Legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators in this State to be held on the third day of November, nineteen hundred and fourteen.

MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly proposing an amendment to section four of article seven of the constitution, permitting the legislature to alter the rate of interest upon debts authorized pursuant to said section.

Section 1. Resolved (If the Assembly concur). That section four of article seven of the constitution be amended so as to read as follows: Section 4. Except the debts specified in sections two and three of this article, no debts shall be hereafter contracted by or in behalf of this state, unless such debt shall be authorized by law for some definite work or object, to be distinctly specified therein, and such law shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay, and sufficient to pay the interest on such debt as it falls due, and to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within five years from the time of the contracting thereof. No such law shall take effect until it shall at a general election have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for and against it at such election. On the final passage of such bill in either house of the legislature, the question shall be taken by yeas and nays, to be duly entered on the journal, and shall be: "Shall this bill pass, and such the same to receive the sanction of the people?" The legislature may at any time after the approval of such law by the people, if no debt shall have been contracted in pursuance thereof, repeal the same; and may at any time, by law, forbid the contracting of such debt, or shall impose under such law; but the tax imposed by such act, in proportion to the debt and liability which may have been contracted in pursuance of such law, shall remain in force and be irrevocable, and be annually collected, until the proceeds thereof shall have made the provision herebefore specified to pay and discharge the interest and principal of such debt and liability. The money arising from any loan or stock creating such debt or liability shall be applied to the work or object specified in the act authorizing such debt or liability, or for the payment of such debt or liability, and for no other purpose whatever. No such law shall be submitted to be voted on within three months after its passage or at any general election when any other law or any bill shall be submitted to be voted for or against. The legislature may provide for the issue of bonds of the state to run for a period not exceeding fifty years in lieu of bonds heretofore authorized but not issued and shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax for the payment of the same as heretofore required. When any sinking fund created under this section shall equal in amount the debt for which it was created, no further direct tax shall be levied on account of said sinking fund, and the legislature shall reduce the tax to an amount equal to the accruing interest on such debt. The legislature may from time to time alter the rate of interest to be paid upon any state debt which has been or may be authorized pursuant to the provisions of this section, or upon any part of such debt, provided, however, that the rate of interest shall not be altered upon any part of such debt or upon any bond or other evidence thereof, which has been, or shall be created or issued before such alteration. It shall be lawful for the legislature to increase the rate of interest upon any such debt, or part thereof, if it shall impose and provide for the collection of a direct annual tax to pay and sufficient to pay the increased or altered interest on such debt as it falls due and also to pay and discharge the principal of such debt within five years from the time of the contracting thereof, and shall appropriate annually to the sinking fund moneys in amount sufficient to pay such interest and when it shall become due and payable.

In case any annual tax heretofore imposed for the payment of a debt authorized by vote of the people under the constitution will, if continued, provide for the payment of the interest on such debt as it falls due and also the payment of the principal of such debt before it becomes due, the legislature may amend the law by reducing the rate of such tax provided that the same shall not be reduced below a sum sufficient to pay the interest on such debt as it falls due and also the principal of such debt when it becomes due.

The supreme court shall have jurisdiction to direct the comptroller of our office of the state to issue such sufficient to comply with the provisions of this section for the protection of any sinking fund of the state.

Section 2. Resolved (If the Assembly concur). That the foregoing amendment be referred to the legislature, to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and in conformity to section one of article fourteen of the constitution, be published for three months previous to the time of making such choice.

State of New York. In Senate, March 26, 1914. This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the Senators elected voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present.

By order of the Senate. ROBERT F. WAGNER, President.

State of New York. In Assembly, March 27, 1914. This resolution was duly passed, a majority of all the members elected to the Assembly voting in favor thereof, three-fifths being present.

By order of the Assembly. THADDEUS C. SWETT, Speaker.

MITCHELL MAY, Secretary of State.

AMENDMENT NUMBER THREE Concurrent Resolution of the Senate and Assembly proposing an amendment to article seven of the constitution, in relation to the forest preserve.

Section 1. Resolved (If the Senate concur). That article seven of the constitution be amended by inserting a new section to be section seven-a, to read as follows: Section 7-a. The prohibition of section seven shall not prevent the cutting or removal of mature, dead or fallen timber or trees detrimental to forest growth, on lands constituting the forest preserve, nor the leasing of camp sites and the construction of roads and trails necessary for protection against fire, and for ingress and egress. The legislature may authorize the sale of lands outside the limits of the Adirondack park and the Catskill park as such parks are now established by law. The proceeds of such sales of lands shall be set apart in a separate fund and used only for the purchase of lands or for reforestation in such parks.

Section 2. Resolved (If the Senate concur). That the foregoing amendment be referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election of senators, and in conformity with section one of article fourteen of the constitution, be published for three months previous to the time of such election.
