A HAPPY MISTAKE

By S. FREUDER

For some weeks past Moses Abelson had been a patient in the hospital of a famous Long Island summer resort. The doctors gave little hope for his recovery, although they were not quite sure as to the nature of his sickness. He was past seventy, and, in all likelihood, his heart or his liver or some other internal organ, getting tired of the monotonous daily grind, had gone on a strike, which, if not speedily settled, was bound to result in a shut-down, complete and final.

One afternoon his only son, Nathan, was informed by the physician in charge that the end may be expected within a few hours.

Although prepared for the worst, Nathan reeled and staggered under this terrible blow. Only a few hours more, he thought to himself, and all opportunity of showing my filial love will be gone forever!

While cudgeling his brains to find something to do which might be pleasing to his dying father, his mind turned to the subject of religion, a subject which suggests itself most readily in the presence of death.

Nathan himself was not much of an observing Jew. He belonged, though, to a synagogue to which he contributed regularly, and from which he stayed away just as regularly. His father, however, had a fair knowledge of Hebrew, and was deeply attached to the time-hallowed forms and ceremonies.

In his agitated state of mind there rose before him a picture of his boyhood days, in faint and blurred outlines at first, but gradually growing in vividness and clearness. His imagination transported him across the ocean, and there in a beautiful Russian city he saw himself as a little boy peeping through the keyhole into the room where his dead grandfather was awaiting his burial. At the head of the corpse, which was lying on the floor covered up with a snow-white linen cover, there were two big wax candles burning, and seated at a table there were two gray-bearded men, each with a big folio volume of the Talmud, from which they read in a subdued voice and with restrained gestures.

was nothing that could please his father better than to have his body watched by one who is engaged in the study of the Holy Law, given to the synagogue, where he found the rabbi engaged in conversation with a young man.

"My father is dying," Nathan said, get me one of our "heimische" people who is able to read the Talmud?"

"I'll try, sir," answered the rabbi, slowly. "It is hard, though, to find such people in a hurry. I'll do my best with the help of the telephone. Let me have your address."

"Here it is. Tell the man to be sure to be there by ten o'clock tonight."

Hardly had Nathan departed when the rabbi beckoned to the young man, who had respectfully retreated, remaining though within ear-shot.

"Here is a chance for you to make a five-dollar bill," he said, with a benevolent smile. "I suppose you know enough of the Talmud to satisfy the demands of the occasion. And even if you don't, there will be nobody there to find it out. Dead men, you know, tell no tales."

"But why didn't you introduce me at once and clinch the matter?" asked the surprised youth.

"Why? Because I have lived long enough to know that people never fully appreciate anything easily gotten. Besides, I was afraid he would object to you because of your lack of beard. Didn't you notice the emphasis he put on the word "heimish"? As it is, he will have to take you, beard or no beard. I'll phone him in an hour or so of my success in securing your services."

The young man—henceforward he shall be called Simon—was studying to become a rabbi. Like most theological students, he was as poor as a church mouse. The pay he received for giving Hebrew lessons was just enough for his necessary expenses and left no margin for any of the luxuries which are so enticingly displayed in watering places.

The pleasing prospect of making an extra five dollars made Simon feel very happy, and, after a youthful fashion, he started in at once to spend a part of the prospective income. In company with a chum of his to whom he owed a long-delayed return treat he stopped at a cigar store, sat down in an ice cream par-

The more he thought of that long-forgotten scene across the ocean, the more he became convinced that there by Israel's watchman, who neither slumbereth nor sleepeth. Nathan hurried in his automobile abruptly; "and I want a man to watch the corpse until the undertaker comes in the morning. Can you lor and wound up at a moving picture show, which he found so interesting that he came near forgetting all about his engagement for the night. Happening to look at his watch he tore himself away from his companion, rushed to his room for a volume of the Talmud and, more running than walking, he arrived at the hospital only forty minutes behind the appointed time.

On being shown to the sick room Simon put on as much of a funeral air as possible and introduced himself to Nathan, adding a word of apology for being late.

"You can see that you are not late," replied Nathan, with a slight turn of his head toward the bed in the corner of the room.

Simon looked in that direction and was astonished to see the supposed dead man moving his lips as if in prayer. For a few moments he was bewildered and almost wished that the angel of death would not be so dilatory and tend promptly to his business, so that there should be no miscarriage in the plans and purposes of the evening's engagement. But soon his finer feelings asserted themselves and he felt ashamed of his mean and selfish thoughts. There being no need for his services, he was about to withdraw. But Nathan, having implicit confidence in the doctor's judgment, urged him to stay.

Determined to make the best of a bad situation, Simon settled into a comfortable armchair, fetched from his coat pocket a little skull cap, and unwrapped the book he had brought along. After all, he mused, our Torah is for the living, not for the dead. He opened the book and, lo and behold! there lay before him a volume of Sholem Alechem's works. His face flushed and grew pale, while his trembling fingers alternated in clutching the book and tapping his forehead.

For some minutes he was utterly at a loss to account for this mishap, and was greatly chagrined and mystified. But a little calm reflection made everything clear to him. Among the few books he had taken along for the summer there was the Talmud, or rather "Mishnayoth," and Sholem Alechem's works, both being similar in size and binding. Now, when he rushed home from the theatre to get the Talmud, he took no time to strike a light in his room, but grabbed a volume from the corner where the Talmud had its place. But he had made his calculations without his hostess, who for some reason best known to herself had seen fit to change the books around when she dusted the room in his absence.

Being left without a book suitable for the occasion, Simon, consoling himself with the hope that the dying man would be considerate enough to delay his dying until the following morning, was soon absorbed in the reading of one of Sholem Alechem's stories, those rollicking, mirth-provoking stories, which have earned for their author the title of "the Jewish Mark Twain." Suddenly Simon burst out in such a loud laughter that Nathan, who was dozing in a corner, jumped up terror-stricken. Simon's explanation aroused Nathan's curiosity, who requested him to read aloud. Simon complied. Pretty soon Nathan got so interested that, forgetting all his melancholy surroundings, he shook with laughter and his eyes filled with tears of joy. When the story was finished they heard some low, soft murmurings. Running to the bedside, they were astonished to find the dying man was sitting upright with a smile on his emaciated face. The doctor was quickly called in and restoratives again applied, to which the patient responded so favorably that before another day passed he was taken off the "dangerous" list, and a week later he left the hospital, not altogether a well man, but well enough to tease the doctors who had given him up and to send a token of gratitude both to Simon and to Sholem Alechem for restoring him to life.

While his body was lying helpless and motionless, so the old man told his friends, he had not lost all consciousness, and his mind was all the time conjuring up pictures of the long ago, and he lived his early life over again. When the sounds of the Yiddish, his mother tongue, struck his ears, his attention was attracted so powerfully that he struggled hard to understand the meaning of the words coming from Simon's lips. He struggled in vain. Provoked at his failure, he tried to cry out for an explanation, but his voice refused him. Getting still more angry he wanted to stamp on the ground with his feet, but his feet disobeyed him. Just then he heard a hearty laughter and he joined in the laughter, which was the first sign of returning life.

that the Czar is about to accord his Jewish subjects equal civil and political rights with the Russian people at large. This is not the first occasion that the hour of freedom has been gloriously heralded—and indefinitely postponed; not the first time the hopes of Russian Jewry have been permitted to soar sky-high, only to be dashed to earth again, trampled upon anew.

"Side by side with this portentous news item, in juxtaposition that savors of the sardonic, there appears the bald announcement that 250,000 Jewish subjects of the Czar rallied to the colors at the general mobilization. The elementary rights of citizenship may be denied them; the vodka-soaked peasant may despoil their homes, inflict unheard-of cruelties on their loved ones, yet they take their share in the battles of their country, fighting for a nation that grinds them under heel relentlessly.

"The Russo-Jewish soldier may possess the spirit of a lion, the acumen of a general. Yet he can never hold commissioned rank,* Nor can he even aspire to the conductorship of a military band. As a would-be army surgeon his path is barred, however brilliant his attainments. And yet, when the call to arms rang through the Czar's dominions, numbers of Jewish doctors were summoned to the front, to minister to the hurts of fellow-Russians, who regarded them, maybe, in the light of natural enemies. Jewish patriotism was a wonderfully stirring thing in those dark days (the Russo-Japanese War) for the Northern Colossus. Jews of all social grades contributed freely to the Red Cross funds, while the Israelites of Kischineff—Kischineff, scene of one of the most terrible pogroms in the history of Russian repression—offered up prayers in its synagogue for the success of the Russian arms!

"Such is part of the queer patchwork of Russo-Jewish life. That patriotism should exist at all in the face of their position as a whole, is one of the most surprising things to be met with in the history of nations. Nor, when occasion offers, do the authorities seem anxious to fan the tiny flame of national ardor. It is on record, for example, that at the close of the Russo-Japanese War a number of Jewish military heroes, some with decorations for conspicuous gallantry, were discharged from hospital but half-cured. Was the accommodation badly needed, or were the wounds incurable? No. The hospitals at Kieff and Moscow happened to be outside the Pale of settlement! Patriotism under such disheartening circumstances needs be pretty fervent to bear the strain.

Let there be no mistake, for the matter of that, about the grit and bravery of the Jew—whether he be Russian-born or the child of a more enlightened race—when it comes to fighting his nation's enemies. Before and since the days of Deborah there have been no more thrilling pages in Jewish history than those that tell of Israelitish pluck in the face of fearful odds. The spirit of the Maccabees burns as brightly now as in the days of Greece of old. "Shalom," peace is the watchword of the Jew, but there comes a time—there has come a time—when peace is impossible, and the turning of swords into plowshares must be further delayed. Then does the Israelite respond to the call of duty.

"But what" (proceeds the author) "after all this digression, does the promised emancipation connote? Does it signify, as the plain man may be forgiven for presuming the acquirement of that intangible something for which our sisters have been striving—the vote? By no means. It may be regarded as nothing more nor less than the clarion call to freedom; the prelude to the passing of a slavery far worse than that of the days of Pharaoh; the opening of the gates of life and hope to tolling millions who had imagined hope to have passed from their ken forever.

"The bearing of so just and magnanimous a concession—magnanimous when regarded in the light of Russia's invariable treatment of her Jewish millions—upon the future of the Jews of Eastern Europe and, indirectly upon the Hebrew race as a whole, can hardly be calculated. It will mean ever so many things, this long-hoped-for emancipation. It will mean a stemming of that tide of immigration that has bothered the exclusionists for decades. It will make for the economic and cultural advancement of a country which has chosen to hold the most brilliant intellects in leash, to have smothered initiative, deliberately and effectively. For six or seven million subjects of the Czar, penned ignominiously within the Pale of Settlement, subject to the heaviest taxation, harassed at every turn, hedged around with a thousand arbitrary rules and inhuman restrictions, emancipation would mean a new life indeed. Russia a real home for her Jewish millions! It seems too rosy a dream.

"I have been discussing with Jewish folk in London, Russian men and women of culture and refinement, the prospect of this dream becoming a reality. They incline to the belief that if Russia is really in earnest over the matter, and is not propounding it as a strategic move; if, in our time she will hurl to the dust the grim, hope-excluding walls of the congested Pale, she cannot but open up an era of unexampled greatness and prosperity. With that wonderful intellectual force, now held in check, applied to the advancement of Russian culture and progress, the Empire of the Czar might awaken and expand beyond the most ambitious dreams of its dead-and-gone autocrats."

The author proceeds to quote the words of M. de Plehve, wherein he dashed to the earth all prospects of civil rights, with the pendant warning that the conferment of any such rights would mean but the repetition of Kischineff and Homel "on a much greater scale."

"Ten years have passed since these words were uttered; ten years that have brought little, if any, amelioration in the lot of these people. . . . And yet, with treaties, and passions, and animosities in the European melting-pot, what more natural than this greatest master-stroke of all, a stroke of the pen that will break off the shackles of six million subjects? . . . It is too alluring, this prospect of a storm-tossed people living in peace, with no shadow of a terror lurking at its heels, each man under his vine and his fig tree, endeavoring to thrust aside the memories of the pokrom-ridden past—Kischineff, Homel and Bialystok—scanning hopefully the horizon of the future.

to the limit of the intolerable; when backs that have become bent by sorrow and repressive laws are breaking under the strain of Romanoff inhumanity. And so, too, are countless hearts." Detailing restrictions and excesses one by one, Mr. Costa returns to the resolute refusal of the authorities to satisfy the thirst of the Jew for higher education, "though here and there the sheer compelling brilliance of an intellect has caused officialdom to stand aside for very shame. How fearfully inflexible are these regulations, how determined the policy of educational exclusion, is illustrated by the inglorious role played by the authorities in connection with the notorious 'yellow ticket.'

"Would the intellectual Jewess pursue a university career and cast off the galling restrictions of the 'Pale'? She might do so, but not until registered as a holder of the 'yellow ticket,' distinguishing badge and official permit of the Russian cocotte! With that terrible passport in her possession, and the path from the Pale rendered clear, it might have been imagined that, but for petty annoyances, she might attain to her long-cherished goal. But the authorities thought differently. The police were invariably placed upon her track to discover in how far the possession of her 'yellow ticket' had been justified! 'Holy Russia!'"

The Daughters of Hanna Home for Infants, which was recently organized at Baltimore, Md., to take care of orphaned and homeless children, has purchased the clubhouse of the Hebrew Pioneer Club, 1734 East Baltimore street. This spacious building will be devoted to the purposes of the organization, which, though in existence only a few months, is progressing very well with its work. The membership is composed of about 500 Jewish women, who are active in their interest and are accomplishing good results.

American Jewish Relief Committee for Sufferers from the War.

The total contributions reported by the treasurer, Mr. Felix M. Warburg, up to Monday, December 21, was $222,122.06. This is exclusive of the fund collected by the Central Committee, which has passed the $40,000 mark.

Among the contributors during the past week were: S. G. Rosenbaum, New York, $500; Cone Export and Commission Co., Greensboro, N. C., $1,000; Cesar Cone, Greensboro, N. C., $500; Arverne Cong., through Israel Unterberg, $918; Cong. B'nai Israel and Talmud Torah of Waslin Heights, $735; Jews of Rochester, through J. Michaels, $1,043; Mrs. Felix Full, So. Orange, $1,000; Mrs. Jacob Ruppert, N. Y., $250; Jacob Wertheim, New York, $500; Jewish Relief Society, Fargo, N. D., $463; through Cesar Cone, Greensboro, N. C., $321; H. Kohnstamm & Co., New York, $250; R. Arkush, New York, $500.

The Central Committee for the Relief of Jews Suffering Through the War.

An energetic campaign will be immediately commenced in New York City to place the self-taxation stamps issued by the Central Committee for the Relief of Jews suffering through the war in conjunction with the American Jewish Relief Committee. Mr. Morris Engelman, financial secretary of the Central Committee, will leave New York on December 31 to visit Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other Middle Western cities to make arrangements in each of these cities for a similar campaign. It is expected that not less than 10,000,000 of the one-cent stamps will be sold. By this means it is placed within the reach of every one to contribute toward the fund for the relief of our suffering brethren, without unduly taxing even the poorest. They are already on sale at the offices of the American Jewish Relief Committee, 356 Second avenue; Mr. Felix M. Warburg, 52 William street; Young Men's Hebrew Association, Lexington avenue and Ninety-second street; Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, 229 East Broadway; Brooklyn Jewish Institute, 666 Willoughby avenue; Brooklyn: Young Men's Hebrew Association of Bath Beach; Emanuel Brotherhood, 309-11 Sixth street; Young Women's Hebrew Association, 31 West 110th street; Hebrew Educational Society, Hopkinson and Sutter avenues, Brooklyn, and at all the Jewish newspapers.

At the meeting of delegates held by the Distribution Committee of the Central Relief Committee and of the American Jewish Relief Committee, held at the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, 229 East Broadway, on Monday evening, at which Mr. Felix M. Warburg presided, over twenty-five societies were represented by delegates. After discussion they decided that they would send their contributions through these committees to the designated places.

The sum received to date by Mr. Harry Fischel, treasurer, 1003 World Building, New York City, amounts to $43,488.99.

The Jewish Institute.

The speaker for the Jewish Institute next Sunday morning at the Kessler Theatre meeting room will be Dr. Isaac Husik, of Graetz College of Philadelphia. He will take as his subject "The Jews of Alexandria."

Chanukah was observed by the Jewish Institute with a lecture on "The Spirit of the Maccabees," delivered at the Sunday morning meeting of December 13 before a large and enthusiastic audience, by Mr. Sol. M. Stroock, and with an entertainment held at the headquarters of the institute, 108 Second avenue, Thursday evening, December 17. This gathering of the younger members constituting the Social Circle was addressed by Dr. Benjamin A. Lichter, who spoke on "The Maccabees." The class in Jewish History continues to meet at our headquarters, 108 Second avenue, every Thursday evening.

Federation of Sisterhoods.

At the last meeting, in response to an invitation sent by Mrs. Samuel Elkeles, the president of the Federation of Sisterhoods, for a conference, there were over 100 delegates present, representing twenty-five societies. Plans were laid for the work of the winter and the great problem of the unemployed was discussed. Among those who made addresses were Mrs. William Einstein, Mrs. Alexander Kohut, Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, Mrs. Al. Gritzner, Miss Carrie Tekulski and Mr. Morris D. Waldman. The Consumptive's Transportation Fund was admitted to membership. Among those present were Mesdames David Goldfarb, Charles Oppenheimer, M. L. Levinson, Henry Bodenheimer, Harry Kraft, M. L. Phillips, Edw. Goddman, A. Lederer, M. M. Menken, Edw. Epstein, Wm. Cohn and Simon Sarnoff.

The Emmanu-El Brotherhood.

The eleventh anniversary service of the Brotherhood was held last Friday evening, December 18, in the auditorium of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls, Second avenue and Fifteenth street, with a congregation of 600 young men and women present. The speaker on this occasion was Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, president of the Brotherhood.

The children of the Brotherhood were fortunate in having two Chanukah entertainments, and on each occasion received a box of candy as a Chanukah present.

Dr. Morais to Lecture.

Rev. Henry S. Morais will lecture this (Friday) evening at 8 o'clock sharp at the 115th street Talmud Torah, No. 40 West 115th street. His topic will be "Jewish Ideals in the Light of Present Events." All are welcome.

Board of Jewish Ministers Meet.

The December meeting of the New York Board of Jewish Ministers, held at Temple Emanu-El Vestry, was largely attended. Dr. Rudolph Grossman presided. Additions to the Chaplain Fund, in response to the special appeal sent to various congregations, were reported. Chaplains to the Board, Rabbis Blum Lewis and Tintner, reported their work for the past month in the various public institutions of New York and vicinity.

Rabbi Pool as chairman of the special committee on co-operation with the students in higher institutions of learning, reported that the Jewish Students' Religious Union had been duly formed at the meeting held on December 10, which was addressed by Prof. Gotthell, Mr. J. L. Buttenwieser and Dr. Pool, and by representatives of the various colleges. Representatives from Columbia, the New York University and College of the City of New York had been present in considerable number, and three from each institution were elected to the Executive Board, to which three representatives from the Board of Ministers and the president ex officio were to be sent. The new York board appointed as its representatives Rabbis D. de Sola Pool, Joel Blau and Clifton H. Levy.

Various matters having to do with chaplaincies and the Frank case were referred to the Executive Committee of the board with power.

The Committee on Nominations reported through its chairman, Rabbi Jacob Goldstein, recommending the election of the officers now serving. Upon motion, one ballot was cast for the following: President, Rabbi Rudolph Grossman; vice-president, Rabbi D. de Sola Pool; treasurer, Rabbi Isaac S. Moses; secretary, Rabbi Clifton Harby Levy. The Executive Committee consists of Past Presidents Rabbis H. P. Mendes, Joseph Silverman, F. de Sola Mendes, M. H. Harris and Bernard Drachman.

Rabbi Blum reported that the Governor of the State of New York has stated that he will appoint at least one Jew on each Board of Managers of the State hospitals.

Ohab Zedek League.

At the last regular meeting of the Ohab Zedek League, held at the Savigny on Thursday, December 17, the following officers were elected: Chairman, Julius H. Rosensky; first vice-chairman, Irving Grossman; second vice-chairman, Stella Grossman; treasurer, Morris Morgenstern; recording secretary, Helen Loeffelholz; corresponding and financial secretary, Abram J. Engelman. Miss Jeanette Armstrong, Miss Mildred Roth, Mr. Leon Gartenberg and Isaac Reis were elected as executive members.

The officers will be installed at the Savigny on Thursday, January 7, at 8.30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman will preside and all are invited.

Two Novel Bar Mitzvahs.

Master James W. Wise, son of Dr. anu Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, was Bar Mitzvah last Sabbath at the Rodeph Shalom Synagogue, Sixty-third street and Lexington avenue, and in honor of the event his father was invited to preach the sermon. There was a very large congregation present.

Master H. Maxwell Goldman, son of Mr. Wm. P. Goldman, of No. 562 West 113th street, was Bar Mitzvah at the Shaari Zedek Synagogue, 25 West 118th street, last Sabbath, and not alone did he read the entire Sedrah and the Haftarah, but he officiated as Cantor during the entire service, being assisted by a choir of eighteen. The young man acquitted himself remarkably well, and his reading of the services was very clear and correct.

Pincus Elijah Activities.

The Talmud Torah of the Congregation Pincus Elijah, of 118 West Ninety-fifth street, celebrated the last day of Chanukah before an appreciative audience that filled the synagogue to its capacity. Among the features on the programme was a sketch, "Hannah and Her Seven Sons," in Hebrew; also a playlet, "Abraham and the Idols," written specially for the occasion, and a lecture on Chanukah, with stereopticon views, by the superintendent, Mr. Reuben Kaufman.

Through the activity of the Young Folks' League of the congregation, the vestry rooms will be partitioned into class rooms, where school desks will be installed. The school is equipped with a stereopticon machine and lectures on Jewish history will be delivered Sunday mornings. A circulating library of Jewish books will be established soon.

Two dramatic clubs, one for the production of Hebrew, the other of English plays based on Jewish history and Agada, have been organized. Children's services will be introduced and steps are being taken to organize a children's choir.

The school aims to reach all the Jewish children in the neighborhood and has therefore made tuition free.

Hospital Children Receive Chanukah Toys.

The Hospital and Social Service Committee of the New York Section of the Council of Jewish Women, of which Mrs. Samuel Elkeles is chairman, distributed to the children in various hospital wards in the city toys for Chanukah in addition to the usual gifts.

To Honor Cantor Schorr's Memory.

The Cantor's Association of America will hold services in memory of the late Rev. Israel Schorr, formerly Cantor of Temple Israel of Brooklyn, at their meeting place, No. 74 East Fourth street, on Monday, December 28, at 8 p. m. Relatives and friends are cordially invited to be present.

Beth Israel Chanukah Celebration.

The Chanukah entertainment of the Religious School of Temple Beth Israel, Seventy-second street and Lexington avenue, was held last Sunday morning in the synagogue. More than 400 children were present. The Chanukah lights were kindled by the children and hymns, recitations, music and a playlet given by Post-Confirmation Class made up the programme. Candy was distributed to each child, it being donated by Mr. and Mrs. Mark L. Abrahams in honor of the wedding of their daughter Grace. Addresses were made by Rabbi Elseman, Isaac Goldberg, president of the congregation, and Mark L. Abrahams, chairman of the School Board. There are now more than 450 children receiving religious and Hebrew training in the schools three times a week. The work is carried on by voluntary contributions. Since most of the children come from very poor homes in the district, no charge whatever is asked for instruction.

Ansche Chesed Library Circle.

The performance of "Watch Fires," a Chanukah play, by the members of the Library Circle of Temple Anshe Chesed last Sunday evening, December 20, proved a source of great satisfaction and pleasure to an audience that tested the limits of the seating capacity of the vestry rooms of the temple. The play was, in reality, a series of episodes relating to the "Feast of Lights" arranged from Longfellow's poem, "Judas Maccabeus," and Esther Cohen's play, "Watch Fires." They had the spirit of the holiday and it was expressed by the young players with a warmth, earnestness and sincerity that deeply impressed the auditors, whose delight was manifested in heartiest applause and many certain calls for the young actors.

The Library Circle is a comparatively new feature in the congregational life of Anshe Chesed. It consists of the older scholars who have passed from the Religious School and shown a desire for higher study in Jewish education.

Chanukah Celebration at the Montefiore Home.

Nowhere did the Chanukah lights twinkle more merrily than at the Montefiore Home on Thursday, December 17, when Rev. Joseph Rosenblatt, assisted by his choir, lit the Chanukah lights and sang the benedictions with a melodious sweetness that brought joy to the hearts of the hundreds of inmates for whom the Home is doing all that philanthropy can suggest to relieve their suffering from their incurable ills and make life worth living even to them.

This is the annual Chanukah treat that the Montefiore Home has given its inmates and the second time this year that the Rev. Joseph Rosenblatt, has volunteered his services.

The president, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, and several of the directors were present at the celebration.

Orach Chaim Talmud Torah Chanukah Festival.

A children's Chanukah service by the pupils of the Orach Chaim Sisterhood Talmud Torah was held last Thursday at the Orach Chaim Synagogue. In addition to the ordinary afternoon and evening services the children sang portions from the Hallel, Hanorous Hailoh, Psalm 30 and Mooz Zur. The music was composed and taught to the children by the principal, Mr. E. Horowitz. Dr. Moses Hyamson delivered an appropriate address to the youthful congregants. This was followed by an entertainment at the vestry, attended also by the ladies of the Sisterhood and the parents of the children. The pupils gave a humorous sketch, composed by the principal, which caused great mirth among the audience.

C. J. W. Religious School Celebrates Chanukah.

Religious School No. 3, under the auspices of the Council of Jewish Women and under the able supervision of Mrs. Victoria Davis, had its Chanukah entertainment on Saturday afternoon at the Educational Alliance. The programme was a very enjoyable one. The council provided refreshments for the pupils and Mrs. Wessels and Mr. Joseph Schwartz delivered addresses.

The school has been doing splendid work during the past year, and much has been accomplished in teaching the children Hebrew and Jewish history.

Harlem Hebrew Educational Institute.

On Saturday evening the Young Israel had a Chanukah festival in the auditorium. Rev. Dr. Spiegel, Ph. Shick and Mr. Falk Younker were the speakers. Mr. I. Schwartz gave a few violin selections.

On Sunday evening the Union Club debated the Equal Club on "Government Ownership of Railroads."

This Friday evening Mr. S. M. Stroock will speak.

You may know a woman who has a reputation for making delicious cake, biscuits, etc.,—who seems to hit it right every time.

You may also know a woman, who, no matter how painstaking, can't seem to get the knack of successful baking.

Both use the same butter, same eggs, same flour and sugar. What is the difference?

Very likely it's all in the baking powder. Undoubtedly the woman with the knack uses Royal Baking Powder, and the unsuccessful woman uses an alum baking powder thinking it cheaper.

Yet the difference in the cost of a whole large cake is less than a cent.

It is economy to use

OBITUARY.

STERN.—Caroline Stern, affectionately known to her host of friends as "Tante," was buried from her late residence, No. 51 East Ninety-second street, last Friday on the day which was to have been her ninety-fifth birthday, and what was intended to be a joyous celebration, was a mournful occasion. Mrs. Stern, who arrived in America seventy years ago, was the widow of the late Herman Stern, who was prominent in politics when he died in this city forty-eight years ago. Mrs. Stern was a woman with a remarkably keen business instinct and upon the death of her husband she invested her inheritance in real estate and continued to manage her business affairs with great success until her last day. Her sight was very keen and she was a steady reader, and in good weather took walks in Central Park unattended. She was the oldest attendant of Temple Beth El and enjoyed a chat with her neighbor, Rabbi Schulman, who was a weekly caller, as was her nephew, School Inspector Benjamin Blumenthal. Mrs. Stern over fifty years ago organized "Star" Lodge and continued to be active in its councils. Her charities were many and she was a firm believer in the old-fashioned "Zedokah" and gave freely to deserving cases.

CORRESPONDENCE.

National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods Welcomes Conservative Societies.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

In reply to many letters of inquiry, I take this method of extending in behalf of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods a hearty welcome to all ladies' societies connected with Jewish congregations. I desire especially to emphasize that the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods has been organized not upon doctrinal lines, but upon the broad platform of Judaism.

In this respect the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods has patterned its policy after the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, its parent body, which does not attempt to interfere with the mode of worship of its constituent congregations. It may be interesting to point out that there are quite a few congregational units belonging to the Union that are very conservative in their form of worship, retaining Hebrew, wearing the tallith and hats and observing the second day of the various holidays.

Similarly the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods has been founded on the broad basis of Judaism and Jewish womanhood, and is animated by the desire to unite into one national body all women's organizations that are engaged primarily in religious work in connection with congregations. The Federation does not attempt to interfere with individual activities of its constituent societies. On the contrary, it seeks to intensify these very activities.

Some ladies' organizations have hesitated to join the Federation because their congregations have not as yet joined the Union. However, this need not act as a deterrent, because all congregations are welcome to join the Union.

I trust that I have made this matter quite clear, and I beg to assure all inquirers that the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods extends the hand of welcome to all associations of women connected with Jewish congregations.

Very sincerely yours,
(Signed) MRS. ABRAM SIMON,
President.

Musings from Burlington, Vt.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

At a political meeting the other night, the writer, while listening attentively to the revelations disclosed by the enthusiastic speaker, gleaned the information that Vermont is a potent factor for the angel of death, completing the latter's mischief and dastardly work. Vermont, the orator sinisterly remarked, molds stones for graves and monuments. Politics and diplomacies are somewhat incomprehensible to your humble servant, unable to decipher, solve or elucidate correctly. But one may take a notion, indeed, to the monuments, the erection, construction and edification of which are responsible in a measure and turn instrumental, time and again, in the perpetuation of Judaism and its everlasting endurance.

Thus Jacob erected monuments every now and then in commemoration of incidents of import and events of significance, and sons and daughters of the Patriarch at the city of Burlington, Vermont's metropolis, learned a lesson from domestic monuments to follow the ancestral ways and looks to the monument for inspiration and reflection. A host of young Jewish men and maidens have combined for the sake of Jewish study. They formed an organization, under the somewhat euphonic name of Menorah Society. Although the name of Menorah has been patented by collegiate and university students, the Menorah may be an

First Complete Survey of Jews in the British Army—Rev. Michael Adler to Go to the Front—Special Jewish Battalion Taking Shape—An Interesting Anniversary—Jewish Charities in London Expect Extra Claims This Year—A Great Jewish Commercial Family and Its Wide Communal Interests—Turkey and the Jews.

London, Dec. 4, 1914.

British Jewry is justifiably proud of the response made by its members to the call to arms. On the outbreak of war there were about 500 Jews in His Majesty's forces. To-day the Rev. Michael Adler, the Jewish chaplain to the forces, is in possession of the names of over 5,000 of his flock, and other names are pouring in. No fewer than 450 Jews are holding commissions in the army and navy. These figures are striking, as, allowing for the large number of Jews whose alien birth debar them from service, the total quota which Jewry should supply is about 3,200. There is scarcely a unit in the army or navy which does not include a Jewish member. The first nine names in the chaplain's alphabetical list, as quoted by the London Times, represent eight corps—First King's, Seventy-second R. F. A., A. S. C., Second Lancs. Fusiliers, Second R. I. F., Second Border, R. A. M. C. and Royal Scots. There are two hundred Jews among the Canadians at Salisbury plain, many of them men who emigrated from Roumania and Russia to Canada, and have taken up arms for the empire of their adoption. From Australia comes the names of seven officers and a large number of men, many of whom took part in the operations in New Guinea and Samoa. In South Africa the regiments are full of Jewish soldiers.

With the expeditionary force in France at least 1,000 Jews are serving, of whom more than a hundred are in the Honorable Artillery Company, which is London's oldest and classiest volunteer force. In the Army Service Corps Jewish members of the well-known catering firm, Joseph Lyons & Co., are giving their special knowledge.

The response to the call has not been confined to any section of the Jewish community. Fully half of the volunteers are sons of alien parents. On the other hand, the great Jewish families of England have contributed their quota. Every eligible member of the Rothschild family, the lay heads of the community, is with the colors, while the sons of the Jewish clergy have enlisted almost to a man. In the Jewish Laas Brigade—an organization akin to the Church Lads' Brigade—there were fifty officers at the outbreak of war. Forty-seven are wearing the King's uniform. The Jewish lads' clubs have responded well. The Stepney Jewish Lads' Club has 107 officers and men from among its members. Nearly 300 old boys of the Jews' Free School are in the army or navy—a record which will compare well with that of any elementary school in the kingdom.

Naturally the Jewish community is proud of the fact that three Jewish officers and one man have been mentioned in dispatches. Lieutenant Marix, one of England's most brilliant airmen, is also of Jewish origin.

Honor is not without scars, and against many a name on the chaplain's list there appears the letters K., W. or M.—killed, wounded, missing. Early in the war Alexis de Gunzburg, a member of a family widely known and honored, gave his life for England while serving as an interpreter attached to the Royal Horse Guards. In the heroic fight of L. Battery a Jewish driver fell. One of the first naval victims of the war was a Jewish stoker on His Majesty's ship Pathfinder. In one engagement six Jews in the ranks of the Fourth Middlesex Regiment were killed and three are among the missing.

Arrangements are being made for the Rev. Michael Adler to go to the front. This will be the first time in history that a Jewish chaplain has accompanied British troops in the field.

The discussion for and against a specific Jewish battalion continues to burn heatedly, but whatever the views expressed it is very clear that there are a considerable number of Jews who are not willing, at all events, not eager to enroll under other conditions. Such a corps, further, it is urged, would be able to enroll Jews who are still subjects of Britain's allies without being British Jews. The formation of this unit is now in progress, but must in no wise be regarded as a movement against the enlistment of Jews in other regiments. The War Office has already recognized that many persons prefer to serve with their "pals." To those Jews who feel thus rather keenly, the Jewish unit will be an additional recruiting measure. This is not a movement of opposition toward other Jewish ideals or other Jews; it is a practical step to get soldiers who would not be obtainable by other means, and good soldiers, too.

An interesting anniversary in the community during the past week was the celebration of the eightieth birthday of Isaac Seligman, head of Seligman Brothers, the well-known and highly esteemed bankers. Mr. Seligman, although leading an exceptionally busy life, has always been associated with the good works of the community, and with some of the Jewish institutions he has worked for fifty years. The Anglo-Jewish Association has been a particular protegee of his. In many respects Mr. Seligman's history is that of Jewish communal organization in this country. He has a great admiration for America and has been for many years now in constant touch with leaders of opinion on your side of the Atlantic.

The Jewish Soup Kitchen, one of the most famous charities in the East End of London, has commenced its new season. This year there is exceptional distress in many quarters and some of the trades on which the Jews of East London are engaged are especially depressed. In performing the opening ceremony the Chief Rabbi said that the urgency and distress of the war never discouraged the Jewish public. On the contrary it made them redouble their efforts, and he had every confidence that the present crisis would be met as crises in the past have been met and overcome. Mr. Gustave Tuck also having spoken, some 500 families received the bounty of the kitchen, at which distributions are made five times a week.

Mention of Mr. Gustave Tuck's name reminds your correspondent that one of the most remarkable and interesting Jewish commercial enterprises in this country is the firm of Raphael Tuck & Sons, Ltd., fine art and book publishers. Under the managing directorship of Sir Adolph Tuck, Bart., with the assistance of two other members of the family, Gustave and Desmond, together with the world-famous author, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes, this business appears to grow year by year from success to success. The giving of birthday cards and cards at Christmas and the New Year is a custom of great antiquity in this country and spreads from the highest to the lowest sections of society. Easily one hundred million Christmas and New Year's cards are distributed every year here, and this year the business has taken on an acuter form owing to the fact that all Austrian and German imports (and these are very enormous) have ceased. British firms therefore expect to make considerable hay while the sun so, metaphorically, shines.

The leading place among these firms is occupied by the famous Jewish house of Raphael Tuck & Sons, and this year special efforts have been made to beautify their cards both by means of advertising and by the distribution to newspapers of review parcels. These parcels contained specimens of the firm's new season's Christmas and New Year's cards, autograph stationery, calendars, gift books, toy books, art novelties, picture post-cards, etc., and a wonderful impression of the firm's enterprise has been created. Furthermore, for the twelfth year in succession, the firm is issuing a collection of royal Christmas cards, produced for King George, Queen Mary, Queen Alexandra and the Prince of Wales. These are exceptionally beautiful productions and are commanding a wide sale at high prices.

It is good to record further in connection with this business that the Tucks, as announced above, are among the keenest supporters of all good and uplifting movements in the community. They are towers of financial strength to every good cause.

Information has reached London to the effect that the Turkish government, on the application of the Grand Rabbi, has agreed to accept foreign Jews, especially Russians, living in Turkey as Turkish subjects on condition that after the war they do not relinquish their nationality. A telegram from Constantinople states that Mendel Bellis, who was the chief figure in the Kieff ritual murder trial, and who has been living for some time at Jaffa, has assumed Turkish nationality.

Italy last month lost a distinguished scholar by the death of Senator Alessandro D'Ancona. Born at Pisa in 1835, he studied law at Turin University and became one of the most active intermediaries between the Tuscan Liberals and Count Cavour. He abandoned politics in 1861 on his appointment to the Chair of Italian Literature at the University of Pisa, where his lectures on the origin of the language and on Italian prose and poetry won him great fame. He also wrote a number of highly appreciative works. Signor D'Ancona was appointed a Senator of Italy in 1904.

The History of Scientifically Soured Milk.

In all Bulgaria, Turkey, Persia and Oriental countries for centuries Zoolak has been eaten and drunk. This is prepared in three ways, namely, in the form of little cheeses like balls, in the form of small cakes or in the form of a fluid, somewhat like buttermilk, but wholly different in character and taste.

The superstitious Orientals who knew nothing of chemistry, bacteriology or pathology, ascribed secret virtues to Zoolak, and didn't know its worth as a means of sustenance and healing resulted from physiological laws, and did not depend upon magic, secret arts or hocus pocus. These laws are now understood by modern curative art, and as a consequence Zoolak has increased in reputation.

During the last thirty years fermented milk has been the subject of many scientific discussions, and the view prevails to-day that Zoolak is a healthy and extremely nourishing diet.

In consequence of the efforts of the late D. G. G. Dadirrian, Zoolak was brought to the attention of the New York Academy of Medicine, and there scientifically examined. His work resulted, moreover, in medical journals becoming interested in it, whereby the history and worth of the product was described in scientific articles. Thus the physicians of this country learned the value of Zoolak as a means of sustenance, as it is nothing else than scientifically fermented milk—that is, milk with the entire cream as it comes from the cow.

Dr. Dadirrian preached by word and writing, and although in several ways he differed from Prof. Metchnikoff's views, yet it may be said in full truth that the widespread interest in fermented milk in America at the present time is almost wholly due to the work and ideals of Dr. Dadirrian. He strove to produce pure Zoolak for the benefit of hundreds of physicians who wished to prescribe it and who were at a loss as to how to secure it for their patients.

Fermented milk must contain above 4 per cent. of butter fats, and, moreover, the mineral salt and the protein of full milk, besides the valuable curds which may only be produced by means of a carefully supervised fermentation process with a clear culture.

Perfectly made milk does not spoil as does ordinary buttermilk or sour milk. The carelessly prepared product, on the contrary, spoils because in the preservation of transitory bacteria of different kinds, among them sometimes disease-producing bacteria find their way with the sour milk bacillus into the milk.

Correctly produced, this milk is a complete means of sustenance, a laxative and a tonic as well. It is excellent for children, and children in the Orient drink it constantly. When it is fresh it tastes almost sweet. When it is a week old its sour milk content increases, and after a month, in spite of the fact that its content of acid is still greater, it still remains a healthy, nourishing means of sustenance.

Zoolak is the sole property of Dr. Dadirrian & Sons Co., and is prepared by a strictly scientific process under direct supervision of Dr. Dadirrian's Sons' chemist. It is sold at all Druggists, Fountains, Clubs, Hotels, or can be procured direct from Dr. Dadirrian's office, 73 Lexington Ave., N. Y.—Adv.

Dare the Christian world pretend at this Christmastide that peace on earth and good will among men do obtain?

The Jewish World does not believe that the claim of King Alfonso of Spain and of ex-King Manuel of Portugal to the title of King of Jerusalem rests upon any substantial basis of fact. By inference, however, it credits the three other possessors of this title—the Emperor of Austria, the King of Italy and the Sultan of Turkey,—with a more or less authentic record. Why this should be the case with the monarchs of Austria and Italy we fail to understand, since they were invested with the distinction apparently by some head of the Church in times past for meritorious services in some crusade or similar pious enterprise. The Sultan of Turkey alone can make good his claim to this title at the present time, for he is to-day as he has been for centuries the more or less undisputed king of the holy city. For how long? Who knows but what in a few short months we shall have a Republic of Jerusalem, "guaranteed" by the great powers, with a man perhaps of the name of Cohen or Levy as the president!

Dr. Stephen S. Wise is one of the "pillars" of Liberal Judaism in this country. While the principles of this Richtung of theological thought are such as to cause its upholders to "renovate, but by no means to innovate," the solid body and framework of our undying faith, still a number of our glorious traditions have been by them consigned to the limbo of effete and forgotten things. One of the practices on which ultra-Reform and Radical or Liberal Jews have frowned down is the ceremony of Bar Mitzvah, and we distinctly remember to have read in the newest year book of the Central Conference of American Rabbis that Dr. Wise himself sternly condemned a proposed minister's handbook for the "annual picnic" on the ground, inter alia, that its concessions to conservatism, notably in respect of the Bar Mitzvah ceremony, were too flagrant to be approved. And yet we feel that somewhere and somehow a mistake must have occurred; the real Dr. Wise did not speak when these utterances took place. For, on last Sabbath at Temple Rodeph Sholom, James Waterman Wise, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Stephen S. Wise, was Bar Mitzvah in the good old-fashioned way, wore a Talith, said his Brochas in Hebrew, and Dr. Wise himself preached the sermon in honor of the event. We heartily congratulate Dr. Wise on this auspicious event in his own household and we trust that the youth will grow up to be an honor to Jewry, a guter Jude of the old school, to his own credit and the undimmed satisfaction of his parents. The only question in our minds in this connection is, Was this the real Dr. Wise who participated in the ceremony?

We are in receipt of the interesting pamphlet, "Report of the Probation Committee of the Sisterhood of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue in the City of New York (Incorporated) from November 1st, 1913, to October 31st, 1914," of which Mrs. Elizabeth Barnett is the talented social worker. It deals with and covers the work of this body for the period indicated in respect to the Jewesses before the Women's Night Court and in other tribunals of criminal jurisdiction in this city. The committee aims to place the girls at the work for which they are best fitted and gives material aid pending their securing employment. How well it realizes these purposes is apparent from the fact that this report shows 262 Jewish girls whose cases were referred to the committee in the period 1913-1914, while the total number now cared for reaches the stupendous figure of 1,591. The capable and energetic social worker visits the families of the girls, the courts where they are held and the institutions in which they are confined, and is in turn visited frequently by the girls themselves and their parents and guardians. But one woman is physically unable to satisfactorily discharge all these duties, and she is in this case aided by volunteer "big sisters," who take some part of the tremendous burden from her patient shoulders. To properly develop this important labor, however, more "big sisters" are urgently needed, and it is indeed to be hoped that Mrs. Barnett will be flooded with applications of this nature from among the circle of our lady readers. Those who cannot or will not give personal service in this good cause can help, too, by contributing something of their substance to the financial means at the committee's disposal, for this form of aid is not alone welcome but very much to be desired.

RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS

THE propaganda which favors religious instruction as a part of the curriculum of our public schools received new strength the other day by the adhesion to it of Dr. John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education. Dr. Finley in virtue of his position is the head of the educational system of the State of New York, and hence his remarks in advocacy of the subject at the dinner to Auxiliary Bishop Hayes, of this Roman Catholic diocese, last week are provided with more than the usual weight and importance. On this occasion Dr. Finley is reported by the daily newspapers to have in substance said: "How much more profitable it would be if all the children in the State could have such religious instruction as their parents desire."

This is, indeed, a pious wish, and, as a pious wish, we cordially indorse it. Our rising generation, of Jews perhaps more even than of non-Jews, needs to be equipped with religious instruction, with an appropriate training in the tenets and practices of Judaism, to the end that the Jewish religion continue beyond our own days. This we have advocated repeatedly in these columns on more than one occasion and in more than one connection.

But, in speaking of Dr. Finley's expression of views as a pious wish, we desire it to be distinctly understood that we regard it as no more than that. We need religious education for our youth and need it badly. At the same time we believe we fully comprehend the purpose and the traditional ideals of our public schools and what they typify and represent in our American life. If religious education by the various sects becomes a part of their curriculum we fear that the war of denominations will obtain a new and a dangerous stimulus, with the result, be it noted, that the non-sectarian character of our schools will be irrevocably destroyed.

Hallowed as the end conceived by Dr. Finley is, the means by which he would secure it are to our mind fraught with dire peril. Gladly as we would welcome a recrudescence of religious educational activity among the rising generation of our people, we fear the public schools would not easily or properly lend themselves to such a purpose, and therefore we regard Dr. Finley's proposal as altogether mischievous and inappropriate.

THE WESTERN JUPITER ON EASTERN RELIGIOUS ADVANCES

IN the Reform Advocate for December 5, Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch has a couple of editorial notes commenting, in his characteristic manner, on the recent departure inaugurated by Rabbi Joseph Silverman at Temple Emanu-El. Our readers may recall our own observations on the subject, and we may add that Rabbi Hirsch takes practically the same view of it as we took. We fancy that much of his comment must have been penned by Rabbi Hirsch with his tongue in his cheek, as it were. However, our readers will no doubt be glad to read his words as he wrote them down, and therefore we quote the following portions of his utterances:

We are progressing. Let him who doubts take a walk up and down the most fashionable avenue of America's metropolis on the Hudson. A haven of rest, an island of quiet, in the midst of the roaring seas of traffic's tide rises in solemn solidity American Jewry's cathedral Temple. Past it used to rush the mad throng on business bent or by frivolity bound. Only twice during the week did its open portals invite the weary or wary pilgrim to pause and seek under its vault the communion with thought other than what was concerned with gain or pleasure. But fortunately this order of indifference has given way to newer and better counsel. By resolution adopted by the administration of Temple Emanu-El at the suggestion and solicitation of its learned senior rabbi, the gates of the sanctuary are now kept open from sunrise to sunset. The weary treaders of the dusty pavement, the distracted victim of the whirl and whir along the crowded thoroughfare, the oppressed and the disquieted are now beckoned to wend their steps into the sanctified dwelling place of the Eternal and tarry there near God's altar for spiritual meditation, supplication and even for physical rest. The reproach has been lifted which before rightly was hurled at the stately edifice that its utility was limited to one or two hours of official worship.

It is true these modern congregations believe that any spot over which God's name in whatever way is remembered, is as holy as ever may be a Byzantine pile of stone which kept in semi-darkness by colored windows is oppressed by an atmosphere of mustiness and mystery. They have been led to think that sunlight is as strong a reminder of the all-sustaining and all-pervading Divine Presence as ever may be gloom and obscurity. They are attached to the notion that clear thinking and sound knowledge and the pursuit of both are religious potencies lifting man beyond himself often more efficiently than mumbled accents of prayer. There is good ground for assuming that, on the whole, Jewish doctrine has been suspicious of the value of abundant and promiscuous and loose praying and secluded meditation. Acceptable time for prayer is declared to be only that at which the congregation takes up public worship, the stated hours of the common service. But surely a new day requires new methods. Chanting of Litany by surpliced choirs will be the next innovation. "Vesper services" indeed before this have been instituted. We are making rapid advances along the road toward "spiritualizing" Judaism. The Episcopal Church is our inspiring model. But let it be known in Gath and remembered in Ascalon that the Cathedral congregation is not of the company of Radicals. It is controlled by loyal devotees of historical Judaism and its traditions. Historical Judaism? Shame upon him who suggests to label it hysterical Judaism!

In a letter to "Everyrabbi, Everywhere," from the President of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, which appears in the November issue of The Union Bulletin, it is stated: "But there are only a few ministers who secure the attendance which their ability and efforts deserve." This is a rather pointed declaration coming from the wife of a rabbi, who herself is at the head of a body affiliated with the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. But she must know, if anyone does, either from her domestic experience or beyond it!

THE MASTER-PASSION

"Then Joseph could not refrain himself before all them that stood before him." (Gen. xlv, 1.)

IT is plain from Joseph's conduct that he did not intend to be cruel and vengeful towards his brethren; his harshness was largely assumed. To be sure, on human grounds we might excuse Joseph if his purpose had been to make his brothers feel the sting of his power before giving them to taste of the honey of his favor; but such was not his aim. If he did not at once reveal his identity to them, casting aside the royal purple that took the place of the coat of many colors, it was because he, a just man, did not think it would serve the ends of justice to grant them his forgiveness before their nature was duly softened and they were ready for remorse. They should first undergo a period of probation and testing. How long? It appears that this period was to have been much longer than it proved to be; but, this week's opening chapter tells us, it came to an abrupt halt when "Joseph could not refrain himself" any longer.

Joseph was suddenly caught in the vice-like grip of an all-powerful emotion and his resistance was at once broken down like a dam against which springtime lets loose a furious current swollen by a thousand rivers of melted snow. Cold calculation was absolutely useless against this springtime of love which began to spread through his being, melting the hardened surfaces into tenderness. Scarcely could he muster enough self-control to bid his servants leave, not wishing to expose the intimate depth of his soul to the profane gaze; but once the habitual "loafers around the throne" were gone, he rushed towards the men who had wronged him so grievously, for were they not blood of his blood and bone of his bone?

Why this mighty inrush of feeling that hastened the crisis in this family drama? We need but read Judah's plea, with its constant reference to the aged Jacob, to understand this. It was the picture of the gray-headed father, bent with sorrow and suffering, that brought Joseph to a quick decision—not a decision of the mind, but a decision of the heart. For the nonce he stood under the control of a noble passion—the love of his father—and this all-controlling passion, this master-passion, swept him forward toward a generous action, with the result that his brethren were not only forgiven, but pressed to his bosom more heartily than they might otherwise have been. Can we not recall some determined moment in our career when the heart took such masterly control over our lives, carrying us forward more speedily and surely than the mind would or could?

We should hesitate to call Joseph's love for his father the master-passion of his life, though, perhaps, it was that; for our purpose it suffices to say that it was the master-passion of the most critical moment of his career. And if the master-passion of that big moment impelled his life in the right direction, may we not conclude from this circumstance that all any life needs is some one master-passion that should act as the resistless propelling force to speed that life onward toward the highest and the best? Human life is so uncertain and is beset with so many doubts and difficulties forming a maze in which reason itself gets lost—may it not be that an all-dominant passion is the best guide and safeguard to keep us from error and sin?

Of course, I mean by a master-passion something abiding, enduring and pervasive; something that should take hold of our entire nature at all times, filling us to overflowing until all else is subjugated to it; and not something fitful and uncertain—a mere gust that might not affect us in all our parts and on all occasions. And I mean by a master-passion not something that might hinder the harmonious development of our being, causing us to become absorbed in a single idea to the exclusion of all else, but rather something that, giving true orientation to our zeal, should engage all our faculties and energies in behalf of the highest good in all concerns of human existence.

But, say you, how can we trust our life to the surge and heave of passion, though it be dignified by the name of master-passion? Passion is always masterly, tyrannical, claiming absolute obedience, driving its merciless fangs into our vitals while it lasts; each moment almost has its own master-passion! Can we single out any one passion as the master-passion, supreme overlord of our soul-life? Moreover, passion may tend toward evil at least as often as toward good;—how then can it be trusted?

These questions, which are apt to be most emphatically propounded by the advocates of reason, are, however, easily answered. There is passion and passion. There is a passion which silences all other energies and impulses, reducing man to a willless and soul-less being—a passion which is an end in itself. Such is never a noble passion. And there is a passion which far from silencing the best in us—our sovereign will, our moral perceptions, our sober judgment—sharpens and galvanizes all our faculties and carries them with itself towards high accomplishment. Such is always a noble passion. The one kind of passion makes us sub-human; the other kind—super-human. And if the latter kind of passion is raised to its highest potency until it becomes the culminating point of all the life, then it is the master-passion that may be implicitly trusted. Can we humans be dowered with such an unerring master-impulse having undisputed ascendancy over our days? We humans who are creatures, only too often, of unrelated strivings and stray, incoherent tendencies? Is there any human passion that may be elevated on the throne and have all other passions and desires pay homage to it? One there is—but only one. Thus far this one has found a throne but in a few hearts; but when the time will come that all men will be refined and spiritualized, then there will be none but will know the fervent bliss of the supreme human passion, the master-passion—the God-passion!

Married Woman's Savings

The decision of one of the justices of the Supreme Court in Kings county of this State, wherein he declares that the savings of a married woman, deposited by her from the moneys given to her by the husband for the maintenance of the household, belongs to the latter absolutely, has created quite a deal of surprise among womanhood.

It is based upon the old common law, under which husband and wife were considered as one, and all the possessions of the wife accrued to the husband, the wife being considered then much in the nature of a chattel.

Since then a good many statutes have been passed in derogation of the common law, and woman—both married and single—has come into her just rights.

While the justice who delivered the above decision was quite within the technicality of the law, and would most likely be upheld upon appeal, yet no one, it seems, would have taken umbrage if his decision would have been the other way, particularly in these days, when even statutes and statute laws are being infrequently "distinguished" out of existence.

Here then is a good chance for the suffragettes to make a break into the Legislature, and by the passage of a law wipe out every vestige of the common and statute law which deprives them of their equal rights with men, notably in regard to rights of property.

L'AIGLON.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The United Hebrew Charities in Dire Need.

The following appeal has been issued by this society, and I trust you will find it possible to publish the appeal in full and also refer to the following facts:

That last year was the first year since 1908 that the United Hebrew Charities had an increase in the number of applicants for relief. This increase was first felt in November, 1913, and has continued up to the present time. In November, 1914, we had 300 new cases, as against 238 in November, 1913. The total number of families under care last month was 2,466, as against 2,247 for the same month 1913. Unemployment has been the one largest factor in bringing these new cases to our attention.

As the city government's investigators discovered and as the Mayor and the Chamberlain reported, the machinery of the relief societies is well able to cope with the situation, but that machinery must continue to be kept well oiled to run smoothly. By that we mean that considerable additional funds must be secured.

Yours very truly,
 MORRIS D. WALDMAN,
 Manager.

"He (Henry Bruere, Chamberlain of the City of New York) brought figures to show that his own investigators placed in the Municipal Courts where the eviction warrants were issued, had found the United Hebrew Charities well able to cope with the problem. 'It would be unwise to raise a special fund for this cause,' said Mr. Bruere, 'paying the rent does not fill all the requirements of the needy by any means. To handle this problem in the right way the machinery of the charitable institutions is needed.'"

The above statement, referring to evictions of tenants, appeared in the New York Times of December 11. The investigators were connected with the office of the Commissioner of Accounts, popularly referred to as "the Mayor's eye," which is universally recognized to be keenly observant.

Are you not pleased to learn that the Jewish community's relief organization has so creditably stood the test of official scrutiny? Would you not be disappointed and chagrined if the report were unfavorable?

In order to prevent evictions and starvation and exposure to the elements and to provide the necessities of life for the poor, we will need $50,000 more for our fiscal year than we have in sight. Unless we receive this additional amount future investigations of this sort may not disclose so favorable a situation, and the claim that the Jewish people look after their own poor may be discredited.

An extraordinary situation of distress exists which demands extraordinary sacrifices.

Please help.

"Do as I Say—Not as I Do."

Last Sabbath morning Master James Waterman Wise was Bar Mitzvah in the Rodeph Sholom Synagogue. Ordinarily this event would not be of unusual interest, but when I learned that the young man who had attained his religious majority was the son of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of Free Synagogue fame, I rubbed my eyes and wondered if it was really true.

Dr. Wise has publicly pronounced Bar Mitzvah as a thing of the past and about one of the biggest farces which old-fashioned Judaism still clings to. In one of his Hudson Theatre addresses, delivered prior to the institution of the Free Synagogue, he proclaimed that "the Torah was of Mosaic origin and spelled with a small m." He has not provided Bar Mitzvah for the sons of the worshippers at the Free Synagogue, and yet when it comes to his own son he thinks enough of the old traditions of Judaism to have him called to the Torah and pronounce the obsolete (?) blessings at Rodeph Sholom, where Dr. Wise's father, the late Rev. Dr. Aaron Wise, ministered so faithfully for over twenty-three years. Dr. Wise further dignified the day (Saturday—the Jewish Sabbath and not the Free Synagogue Sabbath) by preaching a very good sermon from the Rodeph Sholom pulpit. The congregation in honor of the event presented the Bar Mitzvah lad with the Shofar, which his grandfather blew on the solemn New Year day for over twenty-two years; and I understand the boy values it far above all the many costly and valuable presents he received.

And now what is the result of all this? Is Dr. Wise beginning to see the error of his way and does he realize that New York doesn't want the extremely radical type of "liberal" Judaism which he has been fostering? Is this the entering wedge to a more conservative Judaism which will be fulfilled later on when the Free Synagogue occupies its own home and not Carnegie Hall? In this event should you not, Mr. Editor, lessen the acerbity with which you always treat Dr. Wise and begin to encourage him in his coming back? Or is the Free Synagogue and its platform, after all, not a real movement, but simply Dr. Wise working along the line of least resistance, gradually finding out what the people want and giving it to them irrespectively of what his personal belief may be? The year 1914 has been an unusual one on every hand, and I confess this incident greatly puzzles me. Can you throw some light on the subject?

Very truly yours,
 ISRAEL PRAGER.

Chanukah in the Public Institutions.
 Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
 A Chanukah celebration was held at the Otisville Sanatorium on last Thursday, after which the 150 children present received fruit and chocolates. A similar celebration was held on Friday morning at Kings Park State Hospital, and on Friday afternoon at 4.30 nearly two hundred inmates of the Manhattan State

Hospital gathered in the assembly hall to join in the celebration. The Chanukah lamp was lighted by one of the patients, and after the Sabbath service each of the women received a present of chocolates and the men a package of tobacco and a pipe. Mrs. A. Blum read the story of the Maccabees and the services closed by the whole congregation singing "En-Kelo-henu."

On Sunday morning Chanukah services were held at Rome Custodial Asylum, and all the Jewish patients were remembered after the services. On Sunday evening the largest gathering of Jewish inmates of the Craig Colony for Epileptics at Sonya assembled at the Letchford Hall to celebrate Chanukah. After the services fruit and chocolates were given to each and also little souvenir pins to all the girls. It was indeed a happy event for our unfortunate inmates in these various institutions, and it was only through the kindness of some of our charitable people that Chaplain A. Blum was enabled to cheer the hearts of all these patients in the various State institutions.

Very truly yours,
 B.

Beware of the Missionaries.

At no time during the year are the missionaries so actively engaged in enjoining the Jewish child as during the Christmas week. The missions are wide open, ready to welcome every Jewish child and introduce him to the teachings of the gospel. Christmas celebrations have been arranged in all the mission houses. The birth and life of Christ, the benefits of leading a good Christian life, will be fully explained to the thousands of children assembled at these gatherings. Candies and toys will be lavishly bestowed, and the confidence of the unsuspecting child will be won by the soul-snatchers.

The regular attendance of many a Jewish child at the mission house can be traced to the giving of the Christmas gift and entertainment.

The Builders of Israel wishes to issue a note of warning to the head workers of settlements, the principals of Talmud Torahs and rabbis of synagogues to inform the parents and children under their supervision of the danger that lurks in the Christmas gift. It calls upon the parents whose children come home with a box of candies and toys to learn by whom these were bestowed. It asks the editors of the Jewish press to call the attention of the Jewish public to these missionary activities.

Very truly yours,
 THE BUILDERS OF ISRAEL,
 Pauline Rothberg,
 Chairman of Prop. Com.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The Young Folks' League of the Hebrew Infant Asylum held its monthly meeting at the Hotel Astor last Sunday afternoon. In addition to short talks by Judge Gustave Hartman and Mr. Isidor Metzger, an entertainment was furnished by Miss Adele Katz, pianiste; Mr. Rubey Cowan, who sang some of his own compositions and Mrs. Sigmund Newhaus, vocalist. Mr. Joseph Nathan was at the piano. This organization has in the past twenty years contributed over $50,000 to the support of the Hebrew Infant Asylum, which now harbors over 400 little ones at its building, Kingsbridge road and Aqueduct avenue.

A soiree dansante was given at the Biltmore last Saturday night by the Philanthropic League, which was organized last March principally for the purpose of aiding the Beth Israel Hospital. A goodly sum was realized. The officers of the society are Ethel Lamport, president; Joseph Pulvermacher, vice-president; Monroe J. Cahn, secretary, and Mrs. Charles Gottlieb, treasurer.

Miss Rebecca Fischel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fischel, of No. 118 East Ninety-third street, whose engagement to Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein was recently announced, received on Sunday last from 3 to 6. A throng of well wishers called during the course of the afternoon.

Mrs. H. Goldberg and her granddaughter, Miss Hannah D. Mayer, of No. 101 West 126th street, have returned home from Latrobe, Pa., where they went to celebrate the Bar Mitzvah of Mrs. Goldberg's grandson, Jerome Lowenstein.

The members of the Orach Chaim League and their friends, numbering 500, gave a theatre party at the Colonial last Tuesday evening. A large sum was realized which will be donated to the Orach Chaim Sisterhood.

Mrs. A. Tobias and daughter Sylvia of Winton Court, Lexington avenue and Ninety-fifth street, are spending the holidays at the Hotel Rudolph, Atlantic City, N. J.

The tenth annual ball of the Roumanian Ladies' Aid Society will take place Sunday evening, December 27, 1914, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Sondhelm, of No. 2040 Seventh avenue, were at home to their friends last Tuesday in honor of their silver wedding anniversary.

Miss Winifred Stix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Stix, of St. Louis, Mo., is the guest of her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Zucker.

Mrs. A. S. Bernstein and family are visiting Mrs. Bernstein's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Rosenthal, at Washington, D. C.

Joint B'nai B'rith Initiation.
 A joint meeting of all the B'nai B'rith lodges in the metropolitan district was held at Carlton Hall, 108 West 127th street, Sunday evening, December 13. The occasion that drew the lodges together was the Chanukah festival and the exemplification of the ceremony of initiation as conducted by the degree team of Springfield Lodge, No. 684, of Springfield, Mass.

Despite the inclement weather, there was not an empty seat to be found in the hall. The programme was opened by the lighting of the Menorah by Rev. Nathan Schlager, cantor of Temple Emanu-El. Then Rev. Samuel Abrahamson of the People's Synagogue sang "Jerusalem," the rendition of which was followed by all the lodges singing "Rock of Ages."

The auditorium was then made ready for the Springfield degree team. Forty-two new candidates presented themselves for initiation. The team, which is doubtless the champion one of the United States, conducted the ceremonies in a most impressive manner. Never have the New York lodges beheld the ritual exemplified in a way that was so stirring to the Jewish heart. The team, which consisted of twenty-six members under the presidency of Frederick Rabinowitz, has been in training for many months.

After the initiation was over, addresses were delivered by Dr. Joseph Silverman, president of District No. 1, and by Judge Louis D. Gibbs. A collation was then served. The celebration was held under the auspices of the Intellectual Advancement Committee, led primarily by Mr. I. Irving Lipsitch and Dr. M. M. Stark.

Jews Suffering in Galicia.

The following letter has been received by the American Jewish Relief Committee for the Sufferers from the War:

Letter from the Oesterreichisch-Israelitische Union (Austrian Israelite Alliance) in Vienna, November 16, 1914.

"Our secretary returned only yesterday from a tour of inspection through the fugitive camps in Moravia and Bohemia.

"Galicia has become the field of military operations and has been cleared by almost the entire civil population, therefore also by the Jews. At the present time there are 170,000 Jewish fugitives from Galicia in Vienna, of whom 70,000 are absolutely penniless; furthermore, 25,000 destitute Jewish fugitives who have been placed in barracks in Moravia and 70,000 in Bohemia, where barracks are also being built. These 165,000 poor Jews are in need of clothes, underwear, shoes and also warm blankets for the winter. Large means are necessary to protect these poor people from the rigors of winter.

"It is of the utmost importance that your committee step in now with financial assistance to combat this distressing condition and grant ample relief. Certainly even after the end of the war the strength of the entire Jewry of the world will be strained to again build up the shattered existences of the poor fugitives, but at this moment help is pressingly needed to protect these unfortunates from the worst and save their naked lives.

(Signed) "THE SECRETARY OF THE OESTERREICHISCH-ISRAELITISCHE UNION."

A Jewish Joan of Arc.

A brave young Jewess, only twelve years of age—Rachel Henoch, by name—has won renown in the Eastern theatre of war by her courage. The girl, it is said, carried water and refreshments to the soldiers on the battlefield of Ravoruska, and was so seriously wounded that one of her legs had to be amputated. The Archduchess Elizabeth, the granddaughter of the Emperor, visited her and brought her presents. The Emperor, too, sent her a piece of jewelry, and ordered that an artificial limb be made for her at his expense. In addition he sent to the mother of the child heroine a present of a thousand crowns. It is a good thing to pause, even in this bitter campaign, to admire this courage of a girl of twelve.—Jewish World.

Cantors' Association of America.
 The Cantors' Association of America held a meeting last Monday night together with a rehearsal for the evening of Jewish music, which will be given on Wednesday, January 20, 1915, at Temple Shaarl Zedek, of Brooklyn. The entire proceeds of the latter evening will be devoted to Jewish sufferers of the European war.

At a medical conference at Moscow the question of the anti-Jewish laws of residence in Russian spas was considered in connection with the agitation to make use of Russian health resorts instead of German and Austrian spas. The commencement of hostilities last summer found large numbers of Jews abroad on account of the difficulties raised for them in Russian health resorts. The conference resolved that the Russian spas should be open to all citizens without distinction of race or creed.

The death has occurred at Geneva of M. L. Nislovitch, a Jewish member of the third Duma. He served in the Ministry of Finance under the famous Minister Bunge, but on the introduction of a more reactionary regime he was obliged to retire. He published several books on financial and industrial problems. In the third Duma he at one time occupied the post of assistant secretary of the Finance Committee.

A special Jewish rifle corps has been formed at Durban, South Africa. Two hundred have joined, which is remarkable in view of Durban's very small Jewish population.

Gov.-elect Whitman has announced the appointment of Lieutenant-Commander L. M. Josephthal of the naval militia to be a member of the Governor's staff for the next two years.

Governor O'Neal has appointed Mr. M. C. Buxbaum, of Florence, to represent the State of Alabama at the convention of the National River and Harbor Congress at Washington, D. C.

Mr. Joseph M. Druker has been nominated as Councilman in Manchester. Mr. Druker gains the distinction of being the first Jew to be nominated for a political office in New Hampshire.

Negotiations are now under way for the purchase of the old United Congregational Church, Brooklyn, by the members of the B'nai Israel Congregation, now worshipping in the Knapp Mansion.

Numerous Jewish families at Lemberg, who before the war received money from relatives in America, are on the verge of starvation, as no support now reaches them from that quarter.

The Czar has definitely confirmed the closing to Jews of the higher elementary school of Odessa. The Jews already studying there have, however, been permitted to complete their courses.

President Wilson has made it known that he was opposed to the literacy test in the Smith-Burnett immigration bill, but declined to say whether he would veto the measure if passed in its recent form.

After serving for two years terms as head of the Cleveland (O.) Federation of Charity and Philanthropy, Mr. Martin A. Marks has declined a re-election, but has accepted a place on the Executive Committee.

The cornerstone for the new synagogue to be erected by Congregation Beth Israel of Richmond Hill, L. I., was laid last Sunday afternoon. The building is modern and will cost exclusive of the land over $12,000.

The Local Anzeiger, of Berlin, has expressed the view that the German Government ought to treat the Jewish, Polish and Finnish subjects of the Czar more leniently than orthodox Russians who are detained in Germany.

Friends of Municipal Court Judge Benjamin I. Hoffman are urging Governor Glynn to appoint him to one of the two vacant Supreme Court Judgeships for New York city. Congressman Cantor is also being urged for a similar appointment.

An Austrian Jewish soldier, Fried, has saved a whole company of Austrians from drowning in the Serbian theatre of operations. The officers desired to present him with a gift of money, but he requested them to devote the sum to charity.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Miss Kitty Cheatham, who has no equal among entertainers of the children, will be the feature of the two concerts for young people which the Philharmonic Society will give at Aeolian Hall, the first of which will take place on Saturday afternoon, January 2. She will tell the story of Humperdinck's fairy opera, "Haensel and Gretel," after which the orchestra will play the prelude and dream music from it. She will tell stories by Kipling and Hans Christian Andersen, and there will also be Christmas stories and songs. It has been decided to repeat the nut cracker suite of Tchaikowsky, each number of which Miss Cheatham will preface with the original Hoffman fairy tales. At Carnegie Hall the following Sunday afternoon, January 3, there will be a request programme containing the orchestral suite made up of the most attractive numbers of Delibes' charming ballet suite "Sylvia," Liszt's symphonic poem "Les Preludes," Wagner's "Dreams" and "Forest Murmurs" and Tchaikowsky's fourth symphony.

The second series of eight Sunday afternoon concerts given by the Symphony Society of New York. Walter Damrosch, conductor, at Aeolian Hall, will begin January 3 and continue on the following dates: January 10, 24, 31, February 7, 14, 28 and March 7. An unusually attractive list of soloists will be presented during this series of concerts, including Fritz Kreisler, Josef Hofmann, Ferruccio Busoni, Elena Gerhardt, Leonard Borwick, Emilio de Gorgorza, George Barrere, Ethel Leginska and Arkady Bourstin.

"A Recital of Popular Piano Classics" is Harold Bauer's descriptive phrase for his appearance in Aeolian Hall, Sunday afternoon, December 27. The pianist has selected numbers familiar to concert goers, and all of them favorites. The programme follows: Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, Bach; Sonata in C sharp minor, op. 27, No. 2, Beethoven; Carnival, Schumann; Berceuse, Chopin; Polonaise in A flat, op. 53, Chopin; Impromptu in A flat, Schubert; Etude in D flat, Liszt; Ride of the Valkyries, Wagner.

Efrem Zimballist gives his second recital at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, January 2, at 2.30, for which he has prepared the following recital: Sonata, G minor, Bach; Praeludium (For Violin Alone), Beethoven; Fugue, Schumann; Sicilienne, Chopin; Presto, Chopin.

At the Cort Theatre Monday night Selwyn & Company's production of Roi Cooper Megrue's successful melodrama, "Under Cover," in which smugglers, customs officers and society leaders from the principal characters will enter upon the nineteenth week of its engagement, with William Courtenay, Lily Cahill, Lucille Watson, Rae Selwyn, Phoebe Foster, Lola Fisher, De Witt C. Jennings, Wilfred Draycott, Ralph Morgan, Harry Crosby, John May and George Stephens still in the roles which they originated. In addition to the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees there will be a special New Year's matinee on Friday.

"The Midnight Girl," which Messrs. Shubert presented at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre last season for four months, will be the attraction at the Standard Theatre, Broadway at Ninetieth street, for the week beginning to-morrow night, with the original cast headed by George MacFarlane and sixty-five others, including Margaret Romaine, Marie Flynn, Amy Leicester, Lillian Concord, Zella Call, Daisy Rudd, Teddy Webb, William Pruette, George A. Schiller, Harry Delf and Denman Maley. "The Midnight Girl" is from the French of Paul Herve and Jean Briquet. In addition to the usual Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees there will be a special New Year's matinee on Friday.

Ethel Barrymore, assisted by Charles Dalton, presents "Drifted Apart," a one-act playlet of home life, as the headline feature of the Palace this week. This tabloid drama, which was first presented in England some years ago as a curtain raiser, has served the purposes of many prominent players in times past in giving abundant opportunity for tense playings, with a tearful, emotional curtain. Miss Barrymore is at her best in this tear-compelling sketch. Jack Wilson, the blackface comedian, travesties the other acts on the programme, and Manuel Quiroga, the celebrated Spanish violinist, proves himself to be a musician of romantic beauty, and his torrential music has all the fire of Spain. Toby Claude, assisted by William Smythe and company, presents "La Petite Revuette," W. H. Murphy and Blanche Nichols will present their new act, "A Quiet Room," and Rochez's "A Night in a Monkey Music Hall," Reynolds and Donegan and Kauffmann Brothers, in "Tuneful Nonsense," are also on the bill.

with its healthy fun. The abundant humor of this highly delectable comedy contributes to the season's enjoyment with a certainty that is attested in a never-ending succession of audiences that absolutely quake with laughter as this sparkling piece of farcical literature is unfolded to their view.

"The Spanish Fliege," which was presented at the Irving Place Theatre, kept the audience in a constant uproar from the beginning to the close of the play, so much so that at times some of the lines of the players couldn't be heard because of the boisterousness of the audience. There wasn't a moment's dullness during the rise of the curtain, and the audience was in continued good humor. "The Spanish Fliege" is the original of the "High Cost of Loving," which enjoyed quite a run recently, but the original as produced by the German company makes the English version appear staid and prosaic. The man who never smiles would find a splendid cure in attending the play. It should have a long run, and those who fail to see this comedy will miss a night of fun and frolic.

Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger will present their newest musical comedy, "Papa's Darling," at the Grand Opera House for the week beginning Monday, December 28. In its original form it was "Le Fils Surnatural," by Gnet d'Ancourt and Maurice Vaucalre. The music for "Papa's Darling" has been composed by Ivan Caryll, who wrote the music for "The Pink Lady," "Oh! Oh! Delphine!" and "The Little Cafe," and the American book and lyrics are by Harry B. Smith. In the notable cast are Frank Lalor, Dorothy Jardon, Frank Doane, Alice Dovey, Fred Walton, Octavia Broske, Jack Henderson, Georgia Harvey, Maud Grey, Lucille Saunders and a particularly attractive chorus numbering in all nearly seventy-five people. A special New Year's matinee will be given on Friday, the usual matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

"On Trial," the melodramatic sensation at the Candler Theatre, is holding audiences in a grip of steel. The realism of this surprising novelty in playwriting stamps it a triumph in dramatic art, while the ingenuity of its scenic background is a never-ending source of wonder and amazement. "On Trial" is a remarkable play and its splendid interpretation at the hands of a most efficient company is furnishing climax after climax of the most thrilling intensity.

At B. F. Keith's Royal Theatre this week for the first time to headline the bill are Joseph Howard and Mabel McCane, the former the well-known song writer and musical comedy producer, and the latter a dainty singing comedienne. Bickel and Watson present their musical absurdities and Harry Linton and Anita Lawrence present "Bits of Our Hits." Others here include John R. Gordone and company, presenting "Knight and Day"; Frank Terry, "the Knight of Komical Knuts"; Martin and Fbrini, in a dainty dancing divertissement; Barto and Clark, in a musical comedy skit, "In Sixty Five," and the Frank Gregory Troupe, hoop rollers and jugglers. The usual Sunday concerts will be given matinee and evening.

"Sari," that sparkling and spirited operetta, will be the New Year's week offering at the Bronx Opera House. The engagement starts next Monday night. There will be matinees Wednesday and Saturday, and a special New Year's matinee, "Sari," as everybody knows, is one of the biggest musical successes in years. It was the rage throughout Europe for two years, it has been the craze in this country since Henry W. Savage produced it in New York more than a year ago.

That jolly farce, "It Pays to Advertise," at the the George M. Cohan Theatre, is sweeping audiences on their feet Congregation Bath Israel Anshel Emes.

A large number of members and their wives gathered on Sunday evening last in the assembly hall of the Sabbath school at the reception and rally given by Congregation Bath Israel Anshel Emes of Harrison street, near Court street, in honor of the Sisterhood's untiring work on behalf of the congregation. Mr. Herman Alexander, president of the congregation, welcomed the guests in a few well-chosen and appropriate remarks, and then called upon Rabbi Israel Goldfarb, Samuel Lederman, H. M. Copland, Samuel Cohen, Jacob Kronman, M. Salt, Harry G. Anderson, A. Danglo, Mrs. Michael Salt, Mrs. H. M. Copland and Mr. Joseph Schnittka. A collation was served and a most pleasant evening was spent by all.

One of the most interesting and important announcements of the local theatrical season is that of the coming to the Montauk Theatre next week of John Drew in the comedy in which he has been appearing since the opening of the present season at Charles Frohman's New York Empire Theatre, "The Prodigal Husband," from the hands of Dario Niccodemi and Michael Morton. These collaborators are credited with having fitted Mr. Drew with one of the best roles he has had in recent seasons. The new comedy differs somewhat from several of the vehicles in which this distinguished player has lately been seen. Aside from the laughter-arousing elements, the story contains such unexpected tenderness and an extremely ingenious child scene, in which real pathos occasionally interrupts the charming humor.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

Philanthropy or Pestilence

Dear Children:—While our holy Torah has always insisted upon our practicing charity at all times, and has promised us a reward for its fulfillment and a punishment for its transgression even in this world, it is especially severe upon those who, while they are enjoying the bounties of nature, are entirely indifferent to the wants of the poor. Prosperity that does not lead to philanthropy must result in pestilence, and thus say the Rabbins in the Ethics of the Fathers: "The pestilence is most prevalent at four seasons, in the fourth and in the seventh year, and at the close of the seventh year, and of the Tabernacle Festival each year. In the fourth year, because of the (omitted) tithes to the poor in the third year; in the seventh because of the (omitted) tithes to the poor in the sixth year; at the close of the seventh year because of the fruits of the seventh year (of liberation), and at the close of the Tabernacle Festival each year, because of the gifts due to the poor that have been rapaciously withheld."

The Torah has commanded us: "At the end of three years shalt thou bring forth all the tithe of thy produce in the same year, and thou shalt lay it down within thy gates, and then shall come the Levite, because he hath no portion or inheritance with thee, with the stranger, and the fatherless, and the widow, that are within thy gates, and they shall eat and be satisfied." The Lord's blessing is vouchsafed to him if he will act the philanthropist as the Torah has commanded, otherwise, the pestilence.

At the end of the sixth year we are again commanded to bring forth the tithes of our produce for the poor.

Concerning the fruits of the seventh year, the Torah tells us: "Six years shalt thou sow thy land, and shalt gather in the fruits thereof; but the seventh year shalt thou let it rest and lie still, that the needy of thy people may eat (of it) and what they leave the beasts of the field shall eat; in like manner shalt thou deal with thy vineyard, and with thy olive tree."

The Torah tells us also: "And (the product of) the Sabbath of the land shall be unto you for food, for thee, and for thy man-servant, and for thy maid-servant, and for thy hired laborer, and for thy stranger, that sojourn with thee, and for thy cattle, and for the beasts that are in thy land, shall all its products be (left) for food."

If the rich farmer disregards the commands of the Torah and does not allow the needy to enjoy of a portion of the blessings with which

Providence has endowed him, he robs the poor not of the value in money that his gifts would amount to to them, but of their very lives, for how shall they live if the portion that is rightly theirs is unjustly withheld from them; therefore is the pestilence the portion of the rapacious land-owner.

"And when ye reap the harvest of your land," the Torah tells us, "thou shalt not cut away altogether the corners of thy field when thou reapest, and the gleanings of thy harvest shalt thou not gather up; unto the poor and to the stranger shalt thou leave them."

But if the fifteenth day of the seventh month (the Tabernacle Festival) comes around when the farmer gathers in the fruit of the land and looks with smug satisfaction upon his swollen graneries and storehouses, gathered from the field whose corners he did cut away, harvested from the soil whose gleanings he did gather up, gazing with bloated pride upon the wealth of the earth of which neither the poor nor the stranger had a morsel, then at the close of that festival, the pestilence ought to come upon him because he rapaciously withheld the gifts due to the poor.

"CAPITAL" PUNS.

An Irish fusilier named PETER O'GRADY, in describing some of his experience, wrote:—"It's horrible to stand before those thunderous German PRZE-missiles, I doubt if the Russian BER-LIN-vade Prussia successfully. A highlander asked me 'Ha-VIENNA cigarettes?'—and, 'Hoots MONS!' he cried as a shell came DANZIG at the same moment just at our feet. I doubt if any previous WAR-SAW so much suffering in com-PARIS-on; but with more British troops the Germans will be all LONDON (all undone)."

The Senator and the Major were walking up the avenue. The Senator was more than middle aged and considerably more than fat, and, dearly as the Major loved him, he also loved his joke.

The Senator turned with a pleased expression of his benign countenance and said, "Major, did you see that pretty girl smile at me?"

"Oh, that's nothing," replied his friend. "The first time I saw you I laughed out loud!"

Of course, now that his country is engaged in a great war, Nicholas the Unspeakable loses no opportunity to demonstrate to his Jewish subjects that he is their "little father." And his bureaucrats are active in their "support" of Russo-Jewish affairs. One of his governors even attended a Polish synagogue to show the Jews that his heart is "in the right spot." It was ever thus! During the Russian struggle with Japan there were no pogroms. And none will take place now, one may be quite certain!

The OLIVER 7 Typewriter No. 7

The Standard Visible Writer

Now the Supreme Achievement

This Brand New Oliver Model Inspires All

In making this extraordinary announcement we realize how the typewriter world has waited for what we now give. How typewriter users look to us for the first advances and refinements. Our responsibility has grown with every Oliver innovation—visible writing, visible reading, Printype, and our numerous epoch-making inventions.

The No. 7 Model

Reduces human effort to the minimum. Performs automatically many operations. The new cushioned keyboard, the new anchor keys—all the ingenious advances that raise this model to the peak of typewriter perfection. Less effort required, less attention, less eye-strain. Yet utmost speed and 25 per cent. more value!

17 Cents a Day

We have applied our popular purchase plan to this new Oliver. And we will not increase the price one penny.

Now see this typewriter at any Oliver agency. Send for the Oliver No. 7 De Luxe Catalog—FREE.

WOLLSTEIN, MINNA.—The People of the State of New York, by the Grace of God Free and Independent, to Martha Wollstein and Samuel Fleischman, named as executors of the last will and testament of Louis Wollstein, deceased, Martha Wollstein and Helene Baum, daughters of Minna Wollstein, deceased, Isaac Wollstein, a son of Minna Wollstein, deceased, Rosalie Wollstein Lichtenfels, a granddaughter of Minna Wollstein, deceased, Adolph Wollstein, who, if living, is a son of said Minna Wollstein, deceased, and, if said Adolph Wollstein be dead, his heirs and next of kin, if any, whose names and addresses are unknown and cannot with due diligence be ascertained, and Edward Wollstein, who, if living, is a son of said Minna Wollstein, deceased, and, if said Edward Wollstein be dead, his heirs and next of kin, if any, whose names and addresses are unknown and cannot, with due diligence, be ascertained, and the heirs and next of kin of Minna Wollstein, deceased, send greetings.

Whereas, Martha Wollstein, who resides at No. 325 Central Park West, Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing, dated April 4, 1899, relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last Will and Testament of Minna Wollstein, who was at the time of her death a resident of the County of New York, deceased.

Therefore, you and each of you are cited to show cause before the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, at the Hall of Records, in the County of New York, on the 19th day of January, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the said will and testament should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

In testimony whereof, we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed.

Witness, Hon. Robert Ludlow Fowler, a Surrogate of our said County of [L. S.] New York, at said County, the 9th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

DANIEL J. DOWDNEY,
 Clerk of the Surrogates' Court.

ROSCOVER, FANNY.—The People of the State of New York, by the Grace of God Free and Independent, to Mary Rosenbaum, Lena Rosenberg, Rosa Wagner, Jacob Wagner, Bettie Cohen, Mary Bönlinger, Adele Weinthal, Hannah Wolf, Ricka Osterweil, Louis Wagner, the heirs and next of kin of Fanny Roscover, deceased, send greetings.

WHEREAS, Elia Kaufman, who resides at 320 St. Nicholas Avenue, in the Borough of Manhattan, in the City of New York, has lately applied to the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York, to have a certain instrument in writing relating to both real and personal property, duly proved as the last Will and Testament of Fanny Roscover, who was at the time of her death a resident of the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, in the County of New York, deceased.

THEREFORE, you and each of you are cited to show cause before the Surrogates' Court of our County of New York at the Hall of Records, in the County of New York, on the 22d day of January, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen, at half-past ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the said will and Testament should not be admitted to probate as a will of real and personal property.

In testimony whereof we have caused the seal of the Surrogates' Court of the said County of New York to be hereunto affixed.

Witness, Hon. ROBERT LUDLOW FOWLER, a Surrogate of our said County of New York, at said County, the 11th day of December, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

DANIEL J. DOWDNEY,
 Clerk of the Surrogates' Court.

PAUL R. GORDON, Attorney for Executrix, 149 Broadway, New York.

WEIS, SALOME.—In pursuance of an order of Hon.
