VENUS AND SHULAMITH

Translated from the Yiddish of J. L. Perez by Samuel Roth

Behind the oven in the House of Study sat two students, Chayyim and Selig. Chayyim was reading aloud from an open note book, while Selig, with needle and thread, was mending a boot.

"And Hannah was as beautiful as Venus."

"Tell me, Selig, I beg of thee, what do you mean here by the word Venus?" Chayyim suddenly inquired.

"Venus is a mythological goddess," answered Selig, as he pulled the needle through the leather with some difficulty.

"And what is this mythology?"

"Even that you do not know, Chayyim? Do you remember last week an extraordinary woman with a long, colored apron came here and sold licorice candy and other sweets?"

"Aha?"

"She was Greek. There is a whole people that calls itself by that name."

"And do they all sell licorice candy?"

"Don't be foolish. They have a land of their own, Greece it is called. The Greeks are an old people. They are mentioned in Tenach (Book of Prophets) as the 'Ionians.' Did you never hear of Socrates, Aristotle? Yes, they were Greeks—great men. And yet, though they were such a cultured, civilized people, they did worship idols!"

"A-ha!"

"Now you will understand! And all the stories of their idols and images make up what is known as mythology."

"Aha, nu! And what is Venus?"

"In mythology Venus is the goddess of beauty."

"What do you mean—goddess?"

"Understand, among those Greeks, every industry, and form of life had its own god or goddess."

"Have they put women into their heaven, too?"

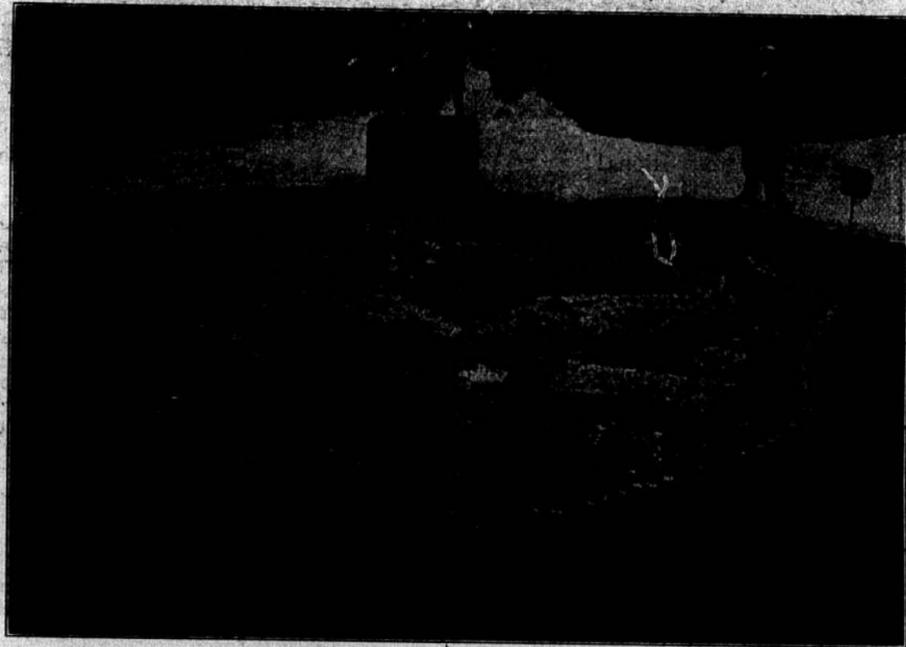

"If men, why not women?"

"True, Selig; but I really meant that gods should be neither men nor women."

"You must know, Chayyim, that Greek gods are just like ordinary mortals. The only difference is that they live forever. Like ordinary great, who holds in his hands the terrible thunderbolt of heaven and before whom all the gods tremble—even he is a weakling in the pres-

Xantippe. Well, she was tame when compared to Juno, the wife of Jupiter. He perhaps wished her dead ten times a day, yet die she could not."

CITY OF BOSTON HONORS ZIONISTS

The city of Boston took official notice of the Zionist convention and paid a signal honor by a beautiful floral display in the Public Gardens on Arlington street. The display, which was over eight feet wide and employed over 10,000 plants, represented a Zionist button in blue and white, in the centre of which was a Mogen David with the word "Zion" in Hebrew. Below were crossed American and Zionist flags with the inscription "Zionists 1915." The display exacted much admiration from the visiting delegates.

about her. Wait, I've something in a book about her." He put aside his half-mended shoe, pulled out a book from his drawer and began reading:

"Venus Aphrodite, Iphogenea, Pontananao, Andiometa."

"Is that German? I can't understand a word!" Chayyim wondered.

"Fool! These are the names by which Venus was known in various parts of Greece and later in Rome."

Selig continued:

"And in the various parts of Greece and Rome the name of Venus was held sacred as the emblem of divine love."

"I thought you said beauty?"

"All the same. 'She was not born of a mother, but rose out of a wave, a picturesque woman of magnificent body.'"

"Magnificent? What does that mean?"

"That means she was so beautiful that people stared hard when they saw her, and their blood grew warm."

"Aha!"

"She was always pictured either half or wholly naked."

"Pfe!"

"Her husband was Vulcan."

"What kind of a creature is that?"

"Also a god, the god of fire. Now she had no children with him. But gods are not permitted to divorce. However, since they do not marry with special contracts, they are free to have children with other gods and human beings, too."

"Illegitimates, you mean?"

"Now don't be a fool, Chayyim. By them there are no sins in these matters because they never make marriage agreements. Now listen. 'With Mars she had two sons.' Don't ask me, Mars is the God of War. 'With Bacchus, the god of all sweet wines, she had four children.'"

"What a lot he must have been! What a drunkard!"

"Two with Mercury."

"What is he?"

"Mercury was the god of thieves, merchants and messengers."

"What a bad match!"

"Well, but what of Venus?"

"Venus is the goddess of beauty."

Listen, as I'll tell you some things

"With one Anchizes she had a nice affair. He was an ordinary mortal, blood and marrow. She found him at the edge of a stream, she was disguised as a shepherdess. And from that meeting resulted another child. At another time something interesting befell her. She was pursued by a band of murderers, and she called to her aid Hercules."

"And who was he?"
 "Hercules was not exactly a god, he was partly human; but he was the personification of strength. He himself once cleaned out thirty-six stables."
 "Go on with your story now, Selig. This is getting on my nerves."
 "'Hercules came and they went after those thirty-six murderers and fixed every one of them up for fair and planted them.'
 "Pfe!"
 "'Venus took pleasure in avenging herself on those who sneered at love.

She once transfigured a whole city of people into oxen."

"Enough!" cried Chayyim, leaping to his feet. "Do you call that a goddess? Had a thousand husbands, killed, slaughtered, changed honest people into oxen."

Chayyim expectorated, and Selig arose in great wrath.

"Ah," said Selig with the air of one who has been insulted, "you take a costly, beautiful dress and put it on on the left side. Venus is merely an ideal, a sort of symbol of beauty, say like Shulamith of the Song of Songs."

"Shulamith! Ha, ha, ha! What a comparison! Shulamith of the Song of Songs is fresh, firm, and as strong as iron! The brothers bid her watch over their vineyards, and so she forgot her own; her face is dark, but she is not like the daughters of Egypt; the fragrance of her is more than of all the fields, woods and gardens together; she does not look down in shame, nor does she blow herself up like a hen; she looks straight, has nothing to be ashamed of, her eyes, warm, hearty eyes, like two doves; and lips has she, like two thin scarlet threads; she talks simply, and honey flows from her mouth! When you behold her no evil thought enters your head. And she loves only one, a young, handsome shepherd; she knows not that the shepherd wears a crown on his head, that he is the greatest king of the world; she is simple, open, and honest; she cannot play any romances. This is Shulamith, the ideal of a real Jewish daughter who is born of a mother and father, not like your Venus the harlot!"

"You forget only one thing," interrupted Selig, "all these things, the mythology I mean, are only a series of symbols which involve deep philosophical and religious reflections!"

"Just the opposite! How present high thoughts by such worthless symbols? Do people usually hide their precious stones in rags? And what do you mean? Is not the Song of Songs to us Jews also a symbol? Is not Solomon to us the Lord God himself? And is not Shulamith, his people Israel? But why continue this? Can there be a comparison between Shulamith and Venus? Take it from me, Selig, rub her name out of your book. Tell me, what is the name of the girl you are writing about."

"Hannah."

"Well write, Hannah is as beautiful as . . . but no, do not write. You hear, don't dare to write! It would be sheer impertinence. Let your Hannah with her feet like pinheads resemble any one you please. Compare her to Maria, Rohoba, Delilah, even Esther the Queen. But not Shulamith, no one can be like Shulamith, no one, do you hear me?"

powers of the universe. In dealing with the Jews of Luxemburg, then, we shall consider first their history and development, and secondly, their present condition and relation to the Jews of the rest of Europe.

We meet with Jews in Luxemburg as early as the year 1276, for in a document of that date a reference to them occurs. At no time in history did the Jewish community of Luxemburg number many souls—today it probably embraces a greater number than ever before—yet, in the Middle Ages Jews were present in the land. They probably came into the country from the Rhineland, where their condition then was in the highest degree abject. The Luxemburg nobles of that day were impoverished and in extremely indigent circumstances, and for this reason they had recourse frequently to the Jewish usurers of the neighboring Germany. It is unknown if the early Luxemburg community was wealthy, or the reverse; it was confined within the limits of a ghetto, admission to which was obtained by means of a gate, securely closed after sundown, and possessed a synagogue and a cemetery. Thus, the Luxemburg ghetto presented the usual characteristics of one of mediaeval Germany. Its inhabitants were "servi camerae" of the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation; they were subject to the control—for which whim or caprice is an appropriate synonym—of the local princes and the ruling class, to whom they represented a never-failing and unquenchable source of revenue.

This cemetery, "house of life" or God's acre of the Luxemburg ghetto may detain us a moment. It was in existence and continuous use for many years, and finally was closed. Subsequently the marks that set it out became obliterated.

General Conditions in Great Britain—Advancing Tide of Women Workers Includes Many Jewesses—Looking After Jewish Soldiers, Whether Training, Fighting or Wounded—A Label and a Moral—New Synagogues—An Interesting and Curious Jewish Will—Herbert Loewe on the Migrations of the Jews.

London, June 11, 1915.

Business conditions in this country seem to be shaping well despite all the trouble, confusion and difficulties caused by ten months of war. Of course the prosperity that rules here has a kind of abnormal basis, in that it depends so largely upon orders for war material. There are practically no people unemployed here now, and in many industries actually a serious deficiency of labor has matured. The great want of labor is of course felt in those departments of industry where ammunition, rifles, guns, uniforms, etc., are being manufactured. As, however, these departments of labor have drawn off workmen and workwomen from other less active departments, some deficiency in workers is being felt in avenues very remote from those concerned with direct war orders. One result of this great shortage of labor is the movement for the introduction of more women into industry and into fields of activity into which their entry has hitherto been barred. An early phase of this movement was the inauguration of a national register of women. Upwards of one hundred thousand women have now handed in their names for this register as being willing to take part in factory and workshop operations, and are prepared either to concern themselves with the manufacture of shells, explosives, etc., or with the production of food on the farms and in dairies, etc. Jewish women figure largely in this list, so far as names are any criterion. Apart from this register, the incoming tide of female labor is obvious everywhere. H. Gordon Selfridge, the great American storekeeper from Chicago, who runs the biggest departmental business in London, is using lots more girls owing to the large number of young men he has lost through enlistments in the new armies. He even for the first time in the history of London has girl commissionaires on the sidewalk outside his store to replace the former male commissionaires, whose work it was to open carriage and automobile doors, direct customers to their right entrances and generally answer outside-the-building questions. Women police are increasing in numbers, women express goods delivery drivers have arrived, and we have girls now in charge of elevators and collecting fares on electric tram cars in the streets. Again, it is obvious that Jewish women and girls are playing a big part in this series of operations. It is clear that one upshot of the war will be an immense extension of the area for women's work in this country.

The Rev. Michael Adler, who is now at the front, looking after the religious affairs of over ten thousand Jews now serving with the fighting armies on the western front, writes home from time to time the most interesting letters with regard to the way the Jewish boys are behaving out there. Heroism, self-sacrifice and cheerfulness, no matter what sort of conditions, are their note.

The Rev. S. Lipson, who was appointed assistant chaplain when the war broke out, has been describing how the religious affairs of the Jewish recruit and the returned Jewish wounded soldier are being watched over at home here in these islands. The country has been mapped out into nine districts, each under a Jewish assistant chaplain—seven for England and Wales, one for Ireland and one for Scotland. They are placed in the chief military centres where Jewish soldiers are found, Liverpool and Manchester being the principal ones.

Recently Mr. Lipson visited the wounded Indian soldiers at Brighton, where these particular British fighters are quartered when wounded. He endeavored to find out whether there were any Indian co-religionists among them, but he failed in his quest. The local War Office authorities, however, have promised to acquaint him with the fact if any should arrive.

I read that the provision of Kosher food has been a sore point with some Jewish recruits, but, according to Mr. Lipson, while the British War Office has not found it practicable to supply such food to Jews in camp, there is no reason why this should not be done privately by friends. The assistant chaplain mentioned the curious fact that a Jewish officer had told him that all the tinned food in certain camps is labelled "Kosher" and is eaten by Jew and non-Jew alike. Upon this interesting point Mr.

Lipson may be able to shed a little light later. The British War Office authorities, indeed, are declared to be quite anxious to further the comfort and the happiness of the Jewish recruits. Of this their readiness to grant leave for the festivals is an apt illustration. An important element in the soldier's comfort must, of course, be the relations which prevail between him and his fellows. In Mr. Lipson's view, the feeling between the Jewish and Christian soldier is generally admirable, the isolated cases of unpleasantness being attributable not so much to religion as to temperament.

Mr. Lipson tells a story which is enough to provide material for a whole host of homilies. In one of the largest military towns in the kingdom, he said, a Jewish recruit was badly handled. His fellow Jews in the battalion were happy and at peace. The reason was that while the unmolested Jews had truly stated their religion on enlisting, their co-religionist had labeled himself Church of England. The Christian troops despised the concealment and they gave the Jew a rough time accordingly.

I gather also that the Jewish soldiers greatly appreciate the soldier's prayer-book compiled by the Rev. Michael Adler. This is now also being distributed to the Jews in the French army, a proper translation having been made.

The foundation stone has been laid of the new building of the Western Synagogue, and recently the New Synagogue, of Stamford Hill, in the northeast of London, was consecrated. Each of these buildings will take the place of older ones and follows the principle of building new edifices not on the sites of the old ones, but rather where the Jewish population has moved to, which means frequently many miles from the old site.

Hippolyte J. Cahen has just passed away in London at the age of seventy-four. He was a well-known member of the community here and greatly admired. Both he and his wife were French by birth, and one of his brothers was Grand Rabbini of Rouen, France.

A Jewish scientist and journalist, David Alexander Louis, has just died. His death made a big splash in the newspapers because of some of his peculiar bequests. He left small legacies to "the one-armed newspaper boy who stood usually in front of my house," to "the old man with the beard who has laces and matchboxes for sale at the door in the evening," and to "the woman with the tray of odds and ends who stands between Cook's office and that of the International Sleeping Car Company." No names were given for these people, but they have got the money and are delighted. This part of the will is a curious example of the way in which a good-hearted Jewish gentleman came to notice these poor outcasts in a busy city. Louis was a member of the Savage Club, the famous Bohemian literary and artistic club of London, and leaves $6,500 to that club as a holiday

Zangwill's "The Melting Pot" was not allowed to be presented in Edinburgh, Scotland, because it contains insulting statements against Russia. The question was brought up in Parliament last week and the reply of the government was that the step was taken at the instance of the Foreign Ministry, which regarded this play insulting to Russia, at present England's ally.

Governor Brumbaugh has made a cut of $5,000,000 in the Pennsylvania State appropriations, and in consequence the allowances allotted to a number of Philadelphia Jewish institutions were affected. The Hebrew Sheltering Arms was cut from $4,500 to $4,000; the Jewish Hospital, from $50,000 to $45,000, and the Mount Sinai Hospital, $75,000 to $66,000.

Dr. Harry Poltz, the young physician of the Mount Sinai Hospital who recently announced the discovery of a typhus antitoxin, sailed last Saturday en route for Serbia, where he will cooperate with the American Red Cross Commissioner at Nish and endeavor to stamp out the epidemic of typhus which at present is scourging the country. His expenses will be borne by the directors of the hospital.

At Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, Leonard Abrahamson has been awarded the foundation scholarship in modern literature. Mr. Abrahamson entered the university in October, 1912, with a sizarship in Irish, a board exhibition and entrance prizes in Hebrew and Irish. These distinctions were followed by composition prizes in French and German, first of the first honors in French, German and modern literature, premiums in Irish, the Dompiere-Chanfeple prize and other distinctions.

The Libre Parole has criticized the Grand Rabbin of France for endeavoring to arrange religious services for the German Jewish prisoners of war, while the Action Francaise attacked the Paris House of Rothschild, alleging that it carried on business with its German relatives and styling the family as a German one. The same organ also took M. Herve, the well-known Socialist, to task for defending the cause of the Russian Jews.

School for Communal Workers Open.

The School for Jewish Communal Work opened its summer course of lectures on "Child, Adolescent and Adult Welfare," at the Heinsheimer Memorial Building, Ninety-second street and Lexington avenue, at 2:30 p. m., June 28, with an enrollment of sixty-nine students.

The introductory lecture was delivered by Dr. Ludwig B. Bernstein, superintendent of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society. His subject was "The Problem of Child Welfare in the Modern Jewish Community."

This introduces a series of lectures to be given by the prominent communal workers and heads of great Jewish communal agencies of the city. Among the lecturers the following are scheduled:—Dr. Paul Abelson, Miss Sadie American, Dr. Edgar S. Barney, Dr. S. Benderly, Miss Sophia Berger, Dr. Charles S. Bernheimer, Dr. Boris D. Bogen, Mr. David M. Bressler, Mr. Julius Drachler, Professor Israel Friedlaender, Mr. Joseph Gedalecia, Mr. I. E. Goldwasser, Miss Rose Johnson, Mr. A. H. Kaminsky, Professor M. M. Kaplan, Mrs. Alexander Kohut, Mr. Louis Lipsky, Mr. Solomon Lowenstein, Dr. J. L. Magnes, Mr. Harry W. Newburger, Dr. Frank Rosenblatt, Dr. M. G. Schlapp, Mrs. E. M. Theuman, Miss Lillian D. Wald and Mr. Morris D. Waldman.

Mr. Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the School for Jewish Communal Work, opened the session with a short address. He said:—"The time has passed when the bringing up of large numbers of Jewish children in orphan asylums and the handling of large numbers of young men in institutions like the Young Men's Hebrew Associations and Educational Alliances could be left in the hands of untrained people. Formerly these places were filled, as were those of teachers in the Jewish religious schools by unsuccessful business people or unfortunate women who had to make a livelihood without training. Today we try to furnish the proper teachers after proper training through the Teachers' Institute, and it is for the school to prepare the social workers with that sympathetic knowledge which is so urgently needed. "In my opinion, no rabbi, who expects to be a real pastor of his flock, should be permitted to take his pulpit unless he has received some training of this kind. "I have no doubt these meetings and discussions will be a source of inspiration and will bring refreshing thoughts to the many earnest workers in Jewish fields."

The lectures will continue every afternoon between 2:30 and 5 o'clock until July 27.

Information about the course may be obtained from Mr. Julius Drachler, secretary of the School for Jewish Communal Work, 356 Second avenue.

Harlem Jewish Shelter Opens.

The new home of the Hebrew Sheltering Society of Harlem at No. 69 East 107th street was opened last Sunday. There was a large gathering present and among the speakers were Congressman Isaac Siegel, State Senator Irving Joseph, Assemblyman Joseph Steinberg, Rabbi H. S. Goldstein, Rabbi Samuel Kosofsky and Benjamin S. Rhine. Cantor Meisels rendered some vocal selections.

The new home is a three-story and basement dwelling house which has been leased for two years. There will be living accommodations for thirty persons, while arrangements will be made for feeding 200 daily. The home will have a reading room, library and other social features, and an employment bureau, for it is the desire of the founders to enable their benefactors to become self-supporting.

The officers of the home are Samuel Gordon, president; H. Socolow, M. Lupelsky and B. Safton, vice-presidents; J. Drosin, treasurer, and I. Siegel, secretary.

Recently a ladies' auxiliary was formed to co-operate with the home. The officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. Rose Tillman, president; Mrs. Anna Block and Mrs. Mary Bachrach, vice-presidents; Mrs. Anna Marcus, treasurer, and three trustees, Mrs. Lena Gordon, Mrs. Anna Shapiro and Mrs. Mollie Steinberg.

Roumanian Federation Meets.

The annual convention of the Federation of Roumanian Jews was held last Sunday at the Manhattan Lyceum, East Sixth street. This organization is not to be confounded with the Federation of the Roumanian Jews of America, which convened on the 13th ult.

The convention decided to establish on the lower East Side a social centre for Roumanian Jews, of whom there are 30,000 in this city. The centre will have an institute to fit men for naturalization. It is proposed to urge Roumanian Jews to contribute five cents each week to fund it.

A report was read on the Home for Convalescents, established by the federation in what was formerly the Forrest Castle, at Grandview, on the Hudson. There are ten acres of land and the investment was $100,000. The officers elected are: President, Julius Weiss; directors, Joseph P. Segal, Samuel Goldstein, Mrs. Betty Weiss, Miss Rose Markowitz, Solomon Diamant and Dr. Philip S. Bereano.

The Zionist Convention.

The annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists was in session at the time of our going to press. A detailed account of the entire proceedings will be published in our next number.

Deportation of Jews Halted.

The deportation of six Jewish aliens to Russia was prevented by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America just as they were about to sail last Friday on the steamship Kursk for Archangel. These aliens, together with twenty others, were inmates of various hospitals for the insane in New York, and the State Deportation Bureau concluded that it would be cheaper for the State to pay for their transportation to their native places in Russia than to keep them in the institutions. Accordingly arrangements were made with the steamship company to take them to Russia through the port of Archangel.

The society learned of this on Thursday after the aliens had been placed on the ship, and Judge Sanders, the president, immediately protested, taking the ground that the aliens were being subjected to dangers at sea and to hardships on land in reaching their homes from the port. He presented to the Bureau the same objections which the society had recently urged before the Federal Department of Labor, with the result that Secretary Wilson had ordered that no immigrants be sent back to Russia at this time and until they could be returned with perfect safety.

Dr. Osnato, the head of the State Bureau, did not yield, however, and the society took the matter up with his superiors, the State Hospital Commission at Albany. A telegram was sent to Deputy Attorney General, Charles M. Stern, a national director of the society, urging his immediate appearance before the commission, and he arranged a hearing to be held that night. His objections did not prevail for the reason that the members could not get into communication with their representative in New York, and the matter was adjourned to Friday morning.

At that hearing Mr. Stern was assisted by Louis Marshall, a member of the Advisory Board of the society, and Samuel Littman, its representative at Ellis Island. Two and a half hours were taken up in arguing the matter. The difficulties of reaching Southern Russia from Archangel, and the fact that the aliens would be obliged to travel per etape, or under military escort, on foot for thousands of miles, were dwelled upon. Finally, when the promise was made that the society would pay the expenses incurred by delaying the deportation until a complete investigation could be made, the commission ordered that the Jewish aliens be taken off the ship. Ten minutes after they were removed the steamer sailed.

A Valuable Compilation.

A few days ago there arrived at the office of the Galician Federation, 247 East Houston street, a unique book which is destined to be of immense benefit to thousands of people who are anxious about the fate of their relatives and friends in war-stricken Galicia. The book, neatly typewritten, contains about 80,000 names of people whom the cruel war has forced to leave their homes and find refuge in Moravia. The compiler of this gigantic list, Rabbi M. Lewin of Vikolsburg, Moravia, has done his work with great zeal and devotion, and the fruit of his labors are daily manifested by the hundreds of people who besiege the office of Galician Federation to get the whereabouts of their dear ones, some of whom they had given up as dead.

Mr. S. J. Rosenblatt has been reappointed a special Park Commissioner for Chicago, Ill., a post which he has occupied for the past few years.

Young Israel Completes Fourth Year.

The fourth year of Young Israel has just been completed and the chairman, Rabbi Moses Rosenthal, in his annual report shows a year of splendid activity.

Thirty-two public lectures were given on Friday and Sunday evenings and Saturday afternoons in the various synagogues of the East Side and in the headquarters, No. 205 East Broadway. These lectures included a series on "Great Men in Jewish History," a series on "Jewish Codes" and the others on topics of current importance to Judaism. The lecturers were Prof. Israel Friedlaender, Prof. Israel Davidson, Dr. Moses Hyamson, Dr. Jacob Tarlow, Dr. Elias L. Solomon, Dr. Bernard Drachman, Dr. David de Sola Pool, Dr. Max Raisin, Dr. Elias Margolis, Rabbi Nathan Blechman, Rabbi Jacob Grossman, Rabbi Israel Lebediger, Rabbi Alfred H. Kahn, Rabbi Gustav N. Hausmann, Hon. N. Taylor Phillips, Mr. Samuel Strauss, Mr. Bernard G. Richards, Mr. William Schwartz and Mr. Samuel Sachs.

Study groups in Jewish history, Jewish literature and Hebrew met weekly. From time to time literary gatherings took place for the members to discuss topics of Jewish interest. These were accompanied by musical programs.

Following are the officers elected and appointed for the ensuing year: Samuel Sachs, president and chairman of Educational Committee; Samuel Horowitz, vice-president and chairman of Executive Committee; Pearl Ingwer, recording secretary and chairman of Social Service Committee; Miss Becker, financial secretary; Harry Feuerstein, corresponding secretary; Louis Cohen, treasurer and chairman of Finance Committee; Isidore Simon, chairman of Propaganda Committee; Sarah Horowitz, chairman membership Committee, and W. M. Krumbin, chairman of Reception Committee.

Convalescent Homes Needed.

The Hebrew Women's Aid Society of Flushing held its closing meeting of the season on Wednesday afternoon. The semi-annual report was given of the work for the past six months, showing a great deal of collective as well as individual effort to relieve distress and help the needy in and around Flushing. At the close of the meeting an enjoyable musical program was given. Mrs. Samuel Elkeles, president of the Federation of Sisterhoods, addressed the meeting. She gave several incidents of her experience as a communal and charity leader for twenty-five years. She said she expected to come to Flushing to help a new experiment, instead was agreeably surprised to find so thoroughly an organized society doing such valuable work. But said she, I am disappointed in your treasurer's report. "You have a surplus, when you might justly have had a deficit. Your work is to collect and expend the money for charity and not hoard it in the bank. But on the other hand, you have done so well and spent so wisely that I feel sure when the call for the greater help comes you will not be found wanting. It is not what you give alone, but how you give it. Charity to be progressive and effective should be specialized or functionalized, and I hope some day in the near future your work can also be so directed so that you can build upon broader lines. One great need of today is convalescent or rest homes, where the sick who are too soon discharged from our hospitals can be restored to health and strength. Mrs. Elkeles said she did not know of any more worthy charity or constructive and preventive work than to take the patients at the psychological moment when they leave the hospital too weak to resume responsibilities, and to give them the time and care to recuperate. This institution would bridge the chasm between the hospital and home.

Mrs. Geo. Baran, the president, thanked Mrs. Elkeles in eloquent and well-chosen words. Mrs. Samuel Jaros, vice-president, presented flowers. Mesdames Bernard Weiss, secretary; B. Blosserlin and J. Ehrlich read interesting reports. Judging from the enthusiasm at the close of the meeting the convalescent home will probably be established.

New Chaplain for Sing Sing

Rabbi Jacob Goldstein has resigned as chaplain to the Jewish prisoners at Sing Sing Prison and Rabbi Samuel Buchler has been appointed as his successor. Rabbi Buchler was formerly in charge of the People's Synagogue at the Educational Alliance, was the organizer of the New People's Synagogue and is at present in charge of Temple Adath Israel of Coney Island. Dr. Buchler's appointment is probably the first instance of an orthodox rabbi receiving the post.

There are more than 7,300 Jewish men and women attending universities and colleges in the United States. Allowing for two million Jews in the entire country, this means that out of every 1,000 Jews, 3.6 receive a higher education.

OBITUARY.

BLYN.—Funeral services were held on Monday, June 28, at No. 22 Mount Morris Park West, for the late Mr. Isaac Blyn, who passed away at the age of eighty-three years after a lingering illness. The obsequies were conducted by Rev. Dr. Edward Lissman, Rabbi of the Hebrew Tabernacle, before a large audience composed of some well known persons in the community and delegations from various societies and fraternal organizations of which the deceased was a member. Isaac Blyn was born in Germany and came to this country in 1854. He immediately started in the shoe business as a manufacturer and finally branched out as a pioneer in the establishment of a chain of retail shoe stores in this city and continued to enlarge his business until about ten years ago, when he retired from his commercial enterprises and left the concern entirely in the hands of five sons. Mr. Blyn married Miss Marianna E. Gottgetreu in May, 1862, and celebrated his golden wedding at Hotel Astor three years ago. Mrs. Blyn died in March last year. Five sons and four daughters survive, including eight grandchildren.
Mr. Blyn, although opulent, was extremely simple in his tastes, and unostentatious in his charities. He was beloved by his family and employees for his hospitality and democratic manners. Rabbi Lissman, who knew the deceased well in life, held up his career as a pattern of modesty and sterling worth. A man who found New York a village and left it the greatest commercial centre of the new world, Mr. Blyn being one of those who in no small way assisted in the rapid evolution of the Empire City of the Union.
The commitment services and interment took place at Beth El Cemetery, Brooklyn.

Dr. I. M. Rottenberg was chairman of the committee, which included the officers of the congregation, the Ohab Zedek Sisterhood, the Ohab Zedek League and of the Talmud Torah. Brief addresses were delivered by Dr. Drachman and Dr. Rottenberg, to which Rabbi Klein fittingly responded.
Dr. and Mrs. Klein entertained their callers at luncheon. Owing to the suffering caused by the European war it has been decided to postpone the formal celebration until some time in the fall.

The Jews of Luxemburg

ated, and for many years after the dawn of the nineteenth century of enlightenment the Jews of Luxemburg had to travel beyond the confines of their own country to bury their dead. A living Luxemburg Jew was suffered to dwell in comparative peace by his non-Jewish neighbors; when the vital spark left his frame the clay had to be returned to the earth whence it sprang, only at Freudenburg, a locality in the Rhine district of Germany. This is a circumstance of Jewish history of the time which is often met in the case of our co-religionists of the center of the European continent. In some cases the Jews could not dwell in the towns, in others the open country was forbidden territory to them. But, very frequently, interment was permitted only in specified places, and from outlying districts it was a considerable journey, indeed, to these havens of refuge for the dead!

As the bond-servants of the overlords the Jews of Luxemburg were now and then almost providentially protected. Thus, at the time when the Black Death raged on the continent, in 1350, Charles IV, the Emperor, gave them into the solicitous care of the local officials. Twenty years later, however, they were expelled from the land and compelled to remain away from it for upwards of sixty years. They must have returned by 1441, for in that year we find them recorded as paying two guilders each in order to secure the official protection of the Luxemburg rulers: Such protection must have possessed more than a nominal value, for the governor of the "Clausener Berg" or Luxemburg Castle adequately safe-guarded them in 1470 from the rage of the townspeople who, in the March of that year, attacked them, plundered their dwellings and demolished and otherwise maltreated the contents of these. This was the period of the beneficent sway of the Burgundians, among whom Charles the Bold was the outstanding figure, and the Jews, spread from the city of Luxemburg to Echternach and Igel, and even as far as Arlon, now the county seat of Belgian Luxemburg. After 1527, however, when the Spaniards came into possession of the territory and surrounding lands Jews could not remain in the country. And none are found there, as a consequence, until the end of the eighteenth century, unless it was an occasional Marrano. The Marrano flourished ubiquitously throughout the domains of Spain, and Isaac de Traybac, the Jewish engineer who in 1644 built the citadel of Luxemburg, may have been such. Luxemburg had a famous fortification and was known far and wide as the "Gibraltar of the North" because of this.

While the mediaeval Jews of Luxemburg—for the present community is modern in its origin—dwelt in peace, comparatively speaking, they were not permitted to live without galling restrictions. They never, it is true, had to wear the odious "Jew's hat" or the infamous yellow badge of the Middle Ages, yet the law of April 15, 1513, prohibited them from selling cloth, except by the piece. This disability was not grievous but the oath "more judaico," to which they were subjected, was of a piece with the treatment then accorded the Jews elsewhere in Central Europe. Finally, by decrees promulgated early in the eighteenth century, the Jews of Luxemburg were compelled to pay a head or poll tax on arriving at the various bridges by which entrance to the cities could be obtained. This special exaction in the nature of an impost remained in force up to the period of the French Revolution. Then, under the influence of the abstract principles of liberty, equality and fraternity, ruling the world of that day, the Jews of Luxemburg were completely enfranchised. They obtained full civic rights by the laws of January 28 and July 20, 1790, September 27 and November 13, 1791.

From the time when Napoleon the Great ruled practically all of Western Europe, when the neighboring German territories were part of his tributary kingdom of Westphalia and the Confederation of the Rhine, dates the modern community. As organized, it was placed under the consistory of Trier, then called, by reason of the French suzerainty, Treves. In 1815, when Luxemburg was joined to the Netherlands with Belgium, the community was annexed to the synod of Maestricht and this condition prevailed for fifteen years. From 1830, in which year Belgium separated from the Low Countries, and Luxemburg was once more altogether independent, the community has been autonomous.

The Luxemburg rabbinate was organized under subvention by the government, a feature still obtaining, toward the middle of the nineteenth century. Its first incumbent was Dr. Samuel Hirsch, who for twenty-three years, from 1843 to 1866, was the spiritual chief and guide of the Luxemburg Jews. The community, when Dr. Hirsch became its rabbi, was orthodox, but passed easily and definitely over to the Reform Richtung under his expert leadership. Dr. Hirsch came to Luxemburg from Dessau, Germany, and left it for Philadelphia. His activity while in Luxemburg covered all phases of a rabbi and scholar's life, and he wrote at this time the works by which his name and fame have been and will be preserved for all ages in Jewish development.

The Jews of Luxemburg have had, with the single exception of Dr. Hirsch's immediate successor, only German religious leaders. This, because their language is more akin to German: the speech of the inhabitants of the "Eiffel" or Aachen district of Germany, as heretofore explained, is practically that of the mass of Luxemburg Jews.

Dr. Hirsch's successor, then, was the French Rabbi Sopher, who came from Dijon, but who remained only five years in the land. From 1871 to 1903 Dr. Isaac Blumenstein, the contributor of the article on Luxemburg to "The Jewish Encyclopedia," was Rabbi of Luxemburg and since the 3d of August, 1903, Dr. Samuel Fuchs officiates there in this capacity. The new cemetery and the new synagogue date from 1884 and 1894, respectively, in the rabbinate of Dr. Blumenstein and under him, on January 12, 1899, the community of Luxemburg city was formally incorporated by the supreme court of judicature. Here there are about 500 Jewish souls in an urban population of some 22,000. There are official Jewish communities, also, in Ettelbrueck, Grevenmacher, Esch, Medernach and some scattering villages. Most of these places have made provision for Jewish burging grounds: in only one of them—Esch—is there a synagogue as well.

In Luxemburg the Jews have not been admitted to hold offices under the government and they have not furnished any municipal councillors to cities and boroughs. One Jewish family, has, however, served the office of Mayor of Hamm, one of the smaller cities in the grand duchy, for many years. This, the Godchaux family, has embraced the three Mayors of Hamm, Paul Godchaux, his cousin, Samson Godchaux and the latter's son, Jules Godchaux, who is the present incumbent.

We are creditably informed that anti-Semitism does not exist in Luxemburg. There is manifest, however, considerable of an anti-clerical spirit, which is not surprising in an Occidental country so preponderatingly Catholic as is Luxemburg. It reveals itself inversely in the opposition of the hierarchy to Freemasonry, on which a word or two is appropriate for the reason that Jules Godchaux, who was spoken of above, is actively identified with this fraternity.

The Supreme Masonic Council of Luxemburg is the smallest sovereign body of its kind in the world, for it controls but one lodge and one chapter. Jules Godchaux is its Deputy Grand Master. The subordinate lodge, founded in 1803 and numbering a membership of nine at present, is called "Les enfants de la concorde fortifiée." Its Worshipful Master is Jules Godchaux. The opposition to the Council established in 1849, crystallized recently in the form of a special sermon preached against it by the Roman Catholic Bishop Koppes of this diocese, which produced strong refutations from the members of the order in Luxemburg and the lands contiguous to it.

It is thus apparent that the annals of the Jews of Luxemburg are peaceably simple. The Jews, in common with the other elements of the population, have contributed their best to the upbuilding of the country. They have continued in the lines of commerce, industry and agriculture which they followed from the first, and latterly have come to take rank as important manufacturers. The factories for cloth, gloves and furniture have passed largely into Jewish control, and with the gradual transformation of the country from an agricultural and commercial to a modern industrial community, the Jews of Luxemburg have been intimately and favorably associated. The Jewries of the world have never been unduly startled by the fact that in little Luxemburg a small section of our coreligionists may be found, but these have patiently and steadfastly lived their lives—it is pleasant to be able to add, in a sincerely Jewish way—and their story is of interest to all to whom nothing that is Jewish can possibly be foreign!—Reform Advocate.

From the universities, colleges and high schools all over the country, come as usual reports that a disproportionately large number of Jewish students have won honors and carried off the majority of scholarships and prizes. That this is very gratifying goes without saying, but on the other hand, it is unpleasant, though quite natural, that this should arouse envy and jealousy on the part of the unsuccessful competitors and their friends. It is quite certain, however, that the bestowal of these prizes was not determined by any prejudice favorable to Jews, and much as we dislike to grieve anyone, even those who do not love us, we cannot advise our coming graduates to pay less attention to their studies.—American Israelite.

Albert Plaut, head of the drug firm of Lehn & Fink, whose will was filed last week, left an estate of about $700,000. Besides leaving $50,000 to employes, he made the following bequests to institutions: $15,000 to the College of Pharmacy at Columbia University; $2,500 each to the Montefiore Home and the Mount Sinai Hospital; $2,000 each to the United Hebrew Charities and the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, and $1,000 each to Lebanon Hospital, Beth Israel Hospital, Presbyterian Hospital, German Hospital, New York Skin and Cancer Hospital, New York Phtharmic Hospital, New York Orthopaedic Hospital, Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, the Charity Organization Society, the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor, Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, Children's Aid Society, New York Probation Association, Manhattan Trade Schools for Girls, Crippled Children's East Side Free School, University Settlement Society, Association for the Improved Instruction of Deaf Mutes, United Relief Works of the Society for Ethical Culture, St. John's Guild, Prison Association of New York, Educational Alliance, Hebrew Technical Institute, Hebrew Technical School for Girls, Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews, Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, Hebrew Infant Asylum, Jewish Protectory and Aid Society, Recreation Rooms and Settlement and Bethel Sisterhood.

In order to insure the insertion of communications in the current issue of THE HEBREW STANDARD they must be in this office not later than Wednesday 10 a. m. of the week in which they are to appear.

Subscribers leaving the city for the summer may have their papers sent to them by notifying us of the change in address.

If Abram I. Elkus does not know what are the duties of a post like the one—American commissioner at the Panama Exposition—which President Wilson has offered to him, we suggest that he may easily ascertain their nature by accepting the President's designation.

Once more our friends, the Reform rabbis, are in the throes (the expression is literally applicable) of their "annual picnic." What would our national Independence Day be if the Reformers could not rise to greet it tunefully, or the reverse, with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner"?

It is ridiculous to look upon Reform Judaism as the logical opponent of Zionism, because in the liturgy of the former all nationalistic references have been eliminated. If this were so, then no Reform Jew could be a Zionist and the Zionists would be unable to "lionize" the chief of their recent recruits of high position. And then, not every orthodox Jew who, by the same token, ought to be a Zionist is one!

An Anglo-Jewish optician, who was "interviewed" recently by a reporter for The Jewish Chronicle, declared that the foreign-born Jews in the East End of London strenuously object to have their little ones provided with glasses. Especially is this objection of theirs made manifest where the person whose sight is defective happens to be a young girl. The reason is obvious. We should like to know if the Jewish opticians in New York have a similar story to tell.

Those responsible for the Sunday services in the Reform temple at Detroit, Mich., would have the world believe "that the services on Sunday morning gave a distinctly Jewish character." To what? The apologists for these services are silent on the point, although, indeed, the entire statement given out by them represents the wish which is father to their thought. What Sunday services can accomplish to deepen the Jewish character or interests of a community passes our understanding. These services are a cowardly compromise, and those responsible for them voice the foregoing sentiments as a salve to their tortured consciences.

There is nothing that so ill becomes a body of Jews, whether in organization work or otherwise, as snobbishness. Kol Yisrael haberim is not a meaningless phrase to the people of all peoples, the most democratic in their interests and life. Where snobs rule the doom for their Jewish work is sealed. This view is gradually becoming recognized more and more, and well it is that this is so. If the communal organization of Jewry in all its manifold forms depended upon the snobs, we should resign ourselves to our condign fate, innocuous desuetude and consequent dissolution.

Isn't it poetic justice of a sort which leads one of our contemporaries faithfully to chronicle in its social column the wedding of a recently-emancipated "convert" to St. Thomas? The lady in question, concerning whom we have heretofore written in this place, comes of good Jewish stock, but wishes nothing better than to be regarded as a fashionable Episcopalian. That is why she married outside the Jewish fold, and, presumably out of deference to her "benighted" Jewish next of kin, who still belong to the synagogue, consented to have the nuptial knot tied by a justice of one of our law courts. No doubt she will thank our contemporary for thus reporting her marriage!

SPAIN FOR THE JEWS

To judge from the reports latterly printed in the daily newspapers, it was only the other day, and then through the efforts of a more or less disinterested individual co-operating with the Hon. Oscar S. Straus, that Spain, by the medium of her Ambassador to the United States, formally repealed, recalled and revoked her decree of expulsion against the Jews promulgated in 1492. As a matter of fact that decree has been variously renounced during the past two decades, and Spain has at different times in this period announced that she will be very glad to receive immigrant Jews within her borders. Particularly does her welcome go out to the descendants of those Jews whom she originally expelled from her main territories over four hundred years ago.

We have neither the right nor the desire to doubt the sincerity of this proffered welcome in any way. But, the fact remains, the Jews have not yet availed themselves to any extent of this offer, and it is extremely doubtful if its latest repetition will serve to turn their faces towards the Iberian peninsula. Just as Russia today is the archetype of the traditional Jew-baiter, so the Spain of mediaeval and early modern times was the implacable enemy of our people and the Jews cannot and will not forget these essential facts in their history of sorrow and suffering.

If Spain would seek Jewish aid to rehabilitate herself as a nation and to restore her commerce and navigation to the conditions which prevailed when she owned practically one-half of the entire world, we fear that Jews of the present day will not be "among those present" in this task. Other nations have, in times past, expelled the Jews from their borders and subsequently reversed themselves, but no other nations outside of Spain and Portugal had the Holy Office of the Inquisition so fully developed and, as a consequence of this, produced Marranos in unstinted measure.

Hence we view the newest tale of Spain's tendered hospitality to the Jews with sublime indifference. Assuming that the Jews took advantage of it, we are not sure that they would not have cause at some time in the future to regret the step. Assuming that the Jews do not take advantage of it, we feel reasonably certain that the course of Jewish history will not be altered thereby.

The sorry plight of the Polish Jews has evoked to Georg Brandes' somewhat submerged Jewish heart a responsive chord of sympathy. That the great critic is racially a Jew is well known, but, alas, it is equally generally understood that he is an assimilationist. Therefore, his renewed interest in Polish Jewry presents a hopeful sign. He documents this interest in characteristic articles on Jewish subjects—among which an appreciation, as fulsome as it is deserved, of the Hebrew poet Bialik may be mentioned—for the great journals of Europe, thus proving that his Jewish racial feeling transcends all efforts to live this down, once the sorrows and suffering of his coreligionists has been brought home to him.

The Zionist convention which took place this week in Boston was an important one, and we reserve the right to refer again to it in this place when greater details of the results there achieved are at hand. In what would ordinarily have been a congress year for the Zionists of the world, this American meeting bids fair to remain the only important conference of the adherents of this movement. That the American Zionists have utilized to the full the great opportunities vouchsafed them in the present period of stress was but to have been expected. We hope their labors will redound to the credit and advancement of the Zionist cause in general and of its American branch in particular.

The Chicago Hebrew Institute has opened a bureau of civics and citizenship. The purpose of this is obvious: to assist the alien male constituents of the association, who are over twenty-one years of age, to become citizens of the United States. A circular which is being employed to advertise the new bureau and its work holds out the distinct possibility of securing official positions of honor and trust or places in the classified civil service to the prospective citizens. A house-to-house canvass of the people living in the vicinity of the institute is being conducted, all in the effort to enhance the usefulness of its new departure. On the whole, we have here an interesting experiment in social work which other bodies like the Chicago organization may effectively develop.

The American Israelite, in its frantic efforts to preserve "pure and unsullied" the "American" Judaism for which the Hebrew Union College, among the other creations of the late Isaac Mayer Wise, is responsible, deems it wise every now and then to make unkind and untrue statements about orthodoxy. In especial, since the graduates of the Cincinnati school of prophets can never hope to be accepted as rabbis in the sense in which Hermann Adler and Zadoc Kahn were such, it tells us that for "the old-fashioned imported rabbinat" theological training "means the Mazzos bakery, the Mikvah and the stock yards." This statement is quite out of accord with the facts. The old-fashioned imported rabbinat knows the things just mentioned because it knows the Talmud and other well-springs of Jewish life and literature. And the modern orthodox rabbi, whether in Europe or in America, knows the Talmud and the other great works of our sages in the original, in addition to a tolerable secular education which will not "disgrace" the Amoses and Hoseas of Cincinnati.

THE DEATH BEAUTIFUL

עלה אל הר העברים הזה . . . ונאספת אל עמך:
"Get thee up to this mount Abarim... and thou shalt be gathered unto thy people."—(Num. xxvii., 12-13.)

DEATH on the mountain—a beautiful death! Death without the sad testimonials of human weakness. No muffled steps and no furtive tears. Neither pillows nor sheets nor yet medicine-bottles. Just a death as free and brave as the breezes of God that blow about the mountain-top! A noble ending to a noble life. We instinctively shrink back from the mere thought of a man who has lived an uncommon life dying the common death of all men; but this death in the heights is distinguished by something grandly heroic, something that is as soothing to our sense of the fitness of things as it is gratifying to our imagination. Surely, we would not have a Moses die a different death; we cannot harmonize with the ideal we have formed of his extraordinary personality, marked by creative strength and dauntless courage, the pitiful picture of life dribbling away in miserable little drops from the broken pitcher of the body; but this picture of a great soul gathering together all its vital currents and hurling them aloft with sovereign power; this picture of a life mounting upwards by the resistless pressure of its hidden resources, like a geyser that seeks the heights in clear jets which shimmer in the sun, has in it something that inspires us, something that makes us long for a similar destiny.

All our ideals are ideals of life. We have not as yet formed ideals of death. We have early recognized how curiously our human nature no less than existence as a whole is woven of opposites: how the dual strands of light and darkness, of good and evil, of laughter and tears, yea, of life and death, are constantly interwrought to make the texture wherein we are swaddled all our days. But, owing to the fact that our eye was habitually turned manward rather than worldward and Godward, we set to work picking out just those strands that seemed to us bright with happiness and embroidered with hope, while the strands that were dull with pain and drab with despair we ignored just as long as we might. We even gloried in the fact that in the midst of the changes of existence we insisted on what we called the positive side rather than upon the negative side of being. Hence it came about that all our ideals pivoted around the question of beautiful living, and that the question of beautiful dying has not yet to any extent engaged the attention of the thoughtful. But the time is not far distant when the sense of unity will rise to such potency within us that all such terms as positive and negative will be banished to the lumberroom of obsolete ideas; when we will realize that all things, though seemingly at variance, make for one divine meaning; and then perhaps death, to our present vision the opposite of life, will be invested; to that maturer human vision which is yet to be, with a solemn dignity and unspeakable serenity which we, with our constitution as it is, are scarcely able to foresee; and when that comes, ideals of death will be placed side by side with ideals of life.

The physicians, to be sure, have long ago spoken of Euthanasia—the Death Beautiful. But their idea of euthanasia was to make death easy, rather than beautiful, by deadening the pain of the final struggle. But that is not the ideal of euthanasia here alluded to. The Future Man will not want to banish pain: he will claim his patrimony of pain no less than his heritage of happiness—he will want to drain the cup of life foam, wine and dregs. The ethical and spiritual ideal of the death beautiful aims at banishing the anguish of the spirit. It would ask of the soul to possess itself in that awful moment of the last wrench when all things fade into mist. Recognizing that such uncommon forms of dying as the one which crowned Moses' life are only for the uncommon man, it would yet insist that all men ought to be so far spiritualized in their nature as to be able to look death calmly in the face, without trembling and quaking. Who will deny that the terrors of the death-bed are not in conformity with the dignity of true living and should therefore be ended forever? As matters stand, what ought to be the ringing finale of the triumphant song-drama of human life—a chorus of praise in which the voices of men mingle with the voices of angels—is oft turned into a sordid scene of puling and muling wherein life's divine harmony is drowned and the sense of the all-overbrooding God entirely lost.

When the voices of those who seek mankind's redemption along economic lines will finally be silenced, men will understand and never any more be swerved from the thought that their salvation lies in the God-sense and in that alone. The finest dream of the finest spirits is that of mankind redeemed by the transforming power of God. A race of men will arise that will be as superior to our generation as we are to our savage ancestors. And their superiority will consist in an enhanced knowledge and direct personal perception of God the Father. Their entire nature will be steeped in the thought of God until that which today scarcely exists in us in its rudiments—the faculty of Seeing God—will in them be fully awakened. They will feel and know as none does today that human life is part of God's life. They will take this knowledge through their earthly existence even to the brink of the grave. And will not this knowledge then utterly change the last moments, banishing their terrors, nay, transmuting fear into faith, trembling into triumph? For how can any man, knowing that he shares the Infinitude of God, consider death other than the final entering of his soul into God?

Meantime, God's breezes blowing freely and strongly about the mountains invite us to partake of their freedom and their bravery. They repeat to us the command once issued to Moses: "Ascend the mountain and die there!" They tell us that death is an ascent—the last fulfilment of Life. They sing to us of the Death Beautiful—death in the heights. The Roman King-Philosopher said: "Live as on a mountain-top!" The breezes say: "Die on a mountain-top!" We say: He who lives in the heights, will die in the heights. JOEL BLAU.

MUSIO

LUCIEN BILQUEZ,

Proprietor. Tel. Farragut 9519.

In a military, if not to some extent a philanthropic, sense, no community is so well-organized as is Anglo-Jewry at present. These words bear no reference to the agitation, begun some time ago and which fell off almost as suddenly as it started, for Jewish fighting units in the British forces. They allude to the Jewish chaplains in the army who have so systematized their work that the phrase, "division of labor," has come to have a new significance for them. Other belligerent countries have their Jewish chaplains for their armies, but, curiously enough, we do not hear so much of them.

Once more the summer season is here, the proverbial "dull" season for the community. Need it be such in fact for the individuals composing that community? God is as much in His heaven while the thermometer registers high numbers as He is when the mercury creeps down to the end of the glass. There is just as much work for each one of us to do now as there is when the weather is cold. The door of the synagogue is ajar now as at all times throughout the year, in spite of the contention of the Reform Jews that their Creator is entitled to a "rest" during the heated term. And, be it noted, at the height of the summer the great book of Deuteronomy, containing some of the most profound ethical and religious truths and lessons, is read in the synagogue. If you do not worship then you do not get the opportunity to study this portion of Holy Writ. On all counts, then, do not suffer your religious susceptibilities to decline because of the state of the weather.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Young Rabbis.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD: Reading volume lxxv., No. 21, of your respected journal I became interested in the article written by Rabbi H. S. Goldstein. The contents of that article reminded me of the following story, which is parallel to it: On a certain beautiful landscape surrounding a nice lake there appeared a chicken, who had hatched out a brood of little ducks instead of little chicks. These little ducks, following their mother, suddenly plunged into the river and, swimming in the water, were separated from their mother. In vain did the chicken, their mother, call them and ask them to come to her and be trained by her. The little ducks did listen to her as if they would have replied to her, "No, no, mother, we don't need your warmth, your heat, your training any more. Look, we can swim now, something which you can't do." In the meantime a storm broke out and the little ducks became terrified and very cold, and away they swam to their mother, to be protected by and under her wings and feathers, the little ducks themselves not having any feathers as yet.

Rabbi Goldstein claims that the young American rabbi is able to swim in the seas of science—namely in the seas of chemistry, physics, geology, etc., where the old rabbi can't swim. Hence the young rabbi ought to become independent of the old rabbi in the work of orthodoxizing the young Jewish-American generation: the old is to be used only to interpret difficult questions arising once in a while in the Halocho. This is what the author of the article claims.

But to me it seems different. In the first place, orthodoxy has nothing to do with science. There is no contradiction whatever between science and orthodox Judaism, and if there is some foolish student who thinks there is some contradiction, some misunderstanding, to such a one not even a young rabbi will be able to make a compromise. Besides, if we want truly to follow the creeds of Jewish orthodoxy we must not try to explain everything by reasoning, because the Jewish religion, according to the spirit of the orthodox, consists only of creeds concerning things that have to be done and things that are not to be done.

In the second place, the young rabbi must remember that even in orthodoxizing the young American-Jewish generation he can't be independent of the older rabbi. The young rabbis themselves need very much to be warned and protected by the wings and feathers of old rabbis. And when a storm arises on Judaism the young rabbis themselves do not possess orthodox feathers to overcome the storm, and they therefore must always be influenced and trained by the older rabbis. Very sincerely yours,

DAVID LIPSCHUTZ.

Leavitt vs. De Haas.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

The letter from Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt is a sad commentary on the spiritual state of American Jewry and the preparedness of the latter to cope with the great problems its leaders have set it. Mr. Jacob de Haas, an editorial rival of the aforementioned gentleman, having made some unkind remarks touching his journalistic reputation, Mr. Leavitt, to guard the honor of his own name, justice, and everything in Jewish life, sails in to Mr. de Haas in merry style, incidentally tripping against the heels of the great American-Jewish statesman, Louis D. Brandeis, to whom he refers as "the local lawyer."

I have nothing to say about either of these gentlemen that does not wholly do them credit. Mr. Jacob de Haas was for a time secretary to Herzl, and in that capacity did some useful work. He has since served the Zionist movement as the editor of the Maccabean and general Zionist lecturer. The Boston Jewish Advocate, under his management, has reflected Zionist opinion creditably. No less can be said of Mr. Leavitt. If the latter has not served Herzl and the Zionist movement directly, his poems in Hebrew and Yiddish have inspired many, a service not to be lightly estimated. The American-Jewish public is sufficiently well acquainted with these facts.

But for one who is conscious of the task confronting the Jews of this country it is difficult to understand why Mr. Leavitt has permitted himself to become so excited. What if he has been accused of not being a Zionist, of not being a Hebrew writer, and of being an anti-Semite? A gentle note to the press calling the attention of his rival to tasks in the ranks more serious and necessary than the work of calumny would have sufficed to crush the indiscreet Mr. de Haas and recall him to his senses.

His hasty letter has only compromised the reputation Mr. Leavitt wrote to defend, the sneering remarks concerning the leaders of American Zionism will raise the monster doubt in many a brain. I, for one, now ask: Can Mr. Leavitt, who wrote that letter, be interested sincerely in adding his strength and personality to the machinery of Zionism straining under the stress of Jewish national difficulties? SAMUEL ROTH. New York, June 24, 1915.

An Appeal from the Hebrew Day Nursery of New York.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

Will you kindly allow us through the medium of your valuable paper to appeal to our sisters and brothers on behalf of the above nursery?

This institution is not unknown to the New York Jewish public. That it is eight years in existence is sufficient proof of the sound principles and good management which the officers of this nursery have adopted and its many sided activities a guarantee of the good work it affects to do.

In our own building, situated at No. 262 Henry street, constructed in accordance with all sanitary requirements and equipped with the latest improvements, is carried on a free day nursery, admitting 150 children of the very poorest widowed or deserted mothers. The children are sheltered during the day and given every comfort. The two outstanding features of the nursery, the excellent and wholesome food and clothing, with which these poor children are provided, and not the least important is the elementary religious education that these children receive from specially trained Jewish teachers.

But the activities of the nursery have not only been confined to the East Side. By leaps and bounds the east side of Harlem has become a thickly Jewish populated district, and there no less than on the East Side has this nursery extended its work, because there also are to be found many poor widows and deserted mothers who have to support their children and cannot go to work because they have no one upon whom they can entrust with safety the charge of their loved little ones.

Therefore the directors of the Hebrew Day Nursery of New York have felt it necessary to open a branch in that neighborhood and have bought suitable premises at No. 61 East 107th street, where they are doing for the last fifteen months similar work to that done at the downtown building.

We may mention that this institution is governed entirely by ladies. Its directors, honorary officers and members are all ladies, who devote most of their time in the interest and welfare of the nursery.

Owing to the great crisis which we are now passing through, and the increasing poverty among the poorer classes, it was found necessary to admit children into the Harlem Branch Nursery even before we could hold the formal consecration of the building. There are now to be found in both nurseries two hundred and fifty children. Its expenses are increasing and its income unfortunately on the decline.

This crisis has not only affected the poor, but also the middle and richer classes, from whom the nursery depended for its regular support, and who have failed to come forward with their kind contributions just at a time when it is most needed.

The demand to admit children is greater than ever, and in spite of the adverse circumstances the nursery has not closed its doors upon any deserving case. The reserve fund of $3,000 has gone and the institution now finds itself in debt to the sum of $2,000.

Unless immediate help is forthcoming we might be compelled to close the doors upon those unfortunate children.

The directors and our superintendent, Mr. H. Gottler, have undertaken to canvass for help.

We hope that this appeal through the columns of your valuable and esteemed paper will enhance to awaken the public interest and assist us to go on with our good work. WOLF METCHIK, Secretary.

Herzl's Death Day.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

On the 20th Tamus the day returns on which, eleven years ago, Theodor Herzl was torn away from the Jewish people much too early. This national day of commemoration can also not pass by in the year of the world war without the Jews and above all, our friends in all lands bearing in mind what the Jewish people possessed in Herzl and what they have lost with him.

Our people have placed an imperishable monument to their great son in the Herzl Forest, which combines memory and hope in creative work for the regeneration of Erez Israel, proclaimed by Herzl. This forest, on Jewish National Fund land in Hulda and Benschemen, signifies an immense advancement of our settlement work.

Let the 20th Tamus (July 2, 1915) be an exhortation to all devoted admirers of Theodor Herzl to contribute towards and collect for the Herzl Forest. Every Jew give a tree!

Brooklyn Home Appeals.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:

Will you please announce through your columns that the Brooklyn Hebrew Home for the Aged cordially invites the general public to visit the home and see for themselves what we are doing. The demands for inmates daily are heart-rending, and we were compelled to purchase the adjoining lots to enlarge our institution. We take title on August 1, 1915, and are in need of donations to make up the necessary amount.

We appeal again to the public for their aid to shelter the waiting applicants, as this is the only home of its kind in Brooklyn, and has no other way of support only by its members and the contributions for which we are appealing now. Kindly send all donations to the Brooklyn Hebrew Home for the Aged, Howard and Dumont avenues, Brooklyn, which will acknowledge their receipt. THE BROOKLYN HEBREW HOME FOR THE AGED.

Strawberry Ice Cream.

Two cups of strawberries, two cups of cream, one cupful of milk, half cupful of sugar; ice and salt for freezing.
Wash and hull the strawberries and mash them through a fine strainer so that none of the seeds go through. Put the milk and sugar over the fire in a small saucepan and bring to a boil; set aside to cool; when cold pour into the freezer, which has been packed with alternate layers of ice and salt. Pour in the cream, and last the strawberry juice. Cover and begin to turn, adding ice and salt as it is needed. It will take eight to ten minutes to freeze. Then remove the dasher and pack with ice and salt and the wet bag in which the ice was broken. Be liberal with the salt.

Strawberry Sponge Cake with Whipped Cream.

Five eggs, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of flour, two cupfuls of strawberries, one cupful of sugar, half pint of whipped cream.
Break the eggs into a bowl, add the sugar and beat fifteen minutes; sift the flour and fold in very lightly. Line bake-sheet with paper, pour on mixture and bake fifteen minutes. Dust top with sugar, turn on cake-cloth, and to remove paper from bottom wet with cold water. Cut into two-inch squares. Wash, hull and crush the strawberries; add the sugar and mix well; spread over the cake. Whip the cream and put one large tablespoonful on each piece of cake. Garnish with one large strawberry.

Strawberry Sauce.

One cupful of sugar, half cupful of butter, the white of one egg, one cupful of mashed or chopped strawberries.
Cream the sugar and butter together, add the white of the egg, beaten stiff, then the berries. Place on ice several hours before serving.

Old-Fashioned Strawberry Shortcake.

One cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of Royal Baking Powder, half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of Sawtay, one-quarter cupful of milk, one box of strawberries and one cupful of sugar.
Sift the flour, baking powder and salt into a bowl, add the Sawtay and rub it in very lightly; add the cold milk, just enough to make a stiff dough. Form and put into deep pie plates or turk's head. Bake twenty minutes. Wash, hull and mash the strawberries; add the sugar. Split the cake and put the strawberries between. Dust with pulverized sugar. If you bake the cake in a turk's head you can fill the centre with berries. This amount makes four large helpings.

Boiled Custards.

One pint milk, 3 eggs, 1 bay leaf or half vanilla bean, 6 lumps sugar.
Put the milk on to boil with the vanilla bean and sugar in it; meanwhile beat up the eggs, taking out the treads (little white lumps). Pour the boiling milk on to the eggs. Pour the mixture into a jug, stand this in a saucepan of boiling water over the fire, and stir the custard till it has thickened.

Custard Pudding.

Three eggs, 1 pint milk, bay leaf or vanilla.
Beat up the eggs, taking out the treads (little white lumps). Pour the milk over the eggs, sweeten and flavor to taste; place in a greased pie dish and bake about 1 hour. If liked, a penny sponge cake cut in halves may be placed in the bottom of the pie dish.

A garment to be dyed must first of all be absolutely clean. Whether it is silk, wool or cotton, it must first of all be washed with soap and rinsed in clear water afterward. The dye must be boiling and the goods to be dyed must remain in boiling liquid for twenty minutes or half an hour.

Chiffon takes dye beautifully. So do woollen goods. Silk is harder to do and sometimes only takes in spots. But still by seeing that you get the proper dye for each kind of goods and by following the instructions implicitly you will often get results far beyond your expectations.

One of the points is to keep the article to be dyed moving the whole time it is in the liquid, and then the color is sure of reaching every part. Of course, a small wooden stick must be used for this purpose to avoid soiling the hands.

Cut glass is sensitive to sudden changes of temperature. Do not hold the cut glass bowl that has had ice cream in it under the hot water faucet. Do not take a piece of cut glass from a hot room into a cold one suddenly. Pieces of ice knocking against the sides of a punchbowl will sometimes cause it to crack. A block or piece of ice should be firmly anchored in the center of the bowl. To temper a cut glass dish before filling it with ice cream, punch, etc., pour cold water into it, then a piece or two of ice, very small pieces. When the dish has been gradually chilled put the ice cream into it. To clean cut glass wash with a mild soap and dry in sawdust, carefully brushing the crevices with a brush made for the purpose.

Mutton Broth.

Two lbs. scrag of mutton, 2 oz. pearl barley or rice, 1 turnip, 1 onion, 1 carrot, 1 leek, 1 teaspoonful chopped parsley, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 quart water. Cut the meat into small pieces (removing the fat), and put it into a saucepan with the bones, cold water and salt; bring to a boil. Draw to the side of the fire as soon as the broth boils, skim well. Simmer for 1 1/2 hours, skimming occasionally. Prepare the vegetables and rice, add them and let all simmer half an hour till the vegetables are tender. Add the parsley just before serving.

Oxtail Soup.

One oxtail, 2 oz. dripping, 1 carrot, 1 small turnip, 2 onions, 2 shalots, 1 tooth garlic or 1 leek, a bunch of herbs, a few sticks celery, a little mace, cinnamon and 2 cloves, 2 quarts of water or pot-liquor, salt, 2 or 3 mushrooms, 1 gill sherry or chablis.

Prepare the vegetables, cut them up, wash and wipe the oxtail, cut it in pieces and fry all in hot dripping in a large stewpan. Add the herbs, spice, seasoning and water. When boiling skim off the fat and then stew gently for 3 hours; strain it into a basin, putting the pieces of oxtail into the tureen with the sherry or chablis. Pour the soup into a stewpan, till it boils. Add the mushrooms, and cook from 10 to 15 minutes, skimming off any scum; strain the soup and pour over the oxtail.

Strawberry Dainty.

Split tiny lady fingers in halves and place, some distance apart, in stemmed glass dishes, filling the spaces between with strawberries cut in halves. Then fill the dishes with strawberry whips, made as follows: To one and a quarter cups of ripe crushed berries, add a cup of powdered sugar, and the white of an egg. Beat for thirty minutes, until the mixture will keep shape. Have it thoroughly chilled, then heap lightly in the glasses and serve with marshmallow sauce.

Keep a long nail near the laundry tubs and use it to remove the rubber stoppers instead of chains. The nail serves as a lever.

To Broil Fish.

Clean and dry the fish thoroughly, split it open, flour it, sprinkle with chopped parsley, pepper and salt. Grease a grid-iron with oil or butter, and broil the fish over or in front of a very clear fire from 10 to 15 minutes. Sprinkle with small pieces of butter before serving. Before broiling mackerel or herrings lay them in a mixture of salad oil and tarragon vinegar for an hour.

Home dried herbs are much cheaper than bought ones. About June buy the herbs, rinse them slightly in cold water, strip off the leaves, place the various kinds of herbs on separate pieces of white paper, in the oven or on top of it. When the leaves are quite crisp, rub them through a wire sieve and bottle them up tight.

Many Jewish housewives heretofore have been deprived of those culinary delights wherein gelatine is prescribed owing to the fact that the generally accepted gelatine of commerce is made from the hoofs of cattle which are not killed in accordance with the Jewish dietary regulations. But it will be of interest for them to know that they need no longer be handicapped by these limitations, for Sea Moss Farine (an advertisement of which appears on this page) is a purely vegetable gelatine, is positively guaranteed by its manufacturer to contain no animal matter, and may be used in compliance with the most rigid Jewish requirements.

This gelatine may be used in every case where animal gelatine is used. It is very economical, and a spoonful makes enough dessert for a family. For those who are fond of home-made ice cream it will be found particularly useful, as it is in many other hot-weather dishes, such as blanc mange, wine jellies, puddings, custards, etc. It can be obtained at Abraham & Straus, R. H. Macy & Co., Charles & Co., Park & Tilford, Acker, Merrill & Condit and other first-class emporiums.—Adv.

A recent compilation of medical statistics shows that more adult Jewish people suffer from diabetes than from any other malady. A proper diet, especially in conjunction with some good specific, can check the ravages of this disease. This specific is now obtainable through the marketing of Mountain Valley Water, which is bottled at the springs in Arkansas, and, although on sale in New York but a few years, hundreds of people will testify as to its efficacy in the cure of diabetes, as well as other diseases caused by excess of uric acid, such as Bright's disease, dropsy, cystitis, neuritis, neuresthenia, arterio-sclerosis, gout, rheumatism, etc.

Mountain Valley Springs are located twelve miles north of Hot Springs, Ark., well up in the Ozark Mountains, 250 feet higher than Hot Springs and 800 feet above the level of the sea. At this altitude the waters of Mountain Valley Springs bubble from great depths out into the pure mountain air, laden with the balm of the pine and fir trees. No surroundings could be purer or more sanitary. There is not the remotest possibility of any contamination. The water is shipped from the spring in air-tight cans of special construction, and delivered to users in sealed bottles or cans.

It would be well worth your while to try the curative powers of this wonderful water, which may be obtained from your druggist or from the Mountain Valley Spring Water Company, No. 247 West Thirty-sixth street, New York.—Adv.

Borden's Malted Milk

The word "BORDEN" is all that you need to know when you want to have the genuine, Kosher, pure, clean and wholesome MALTED MILK.

There has now appeared upon the market an imitation MALTED MILK, which some dealers desire to substitute for the BORDEN'S MALTED MILK, because it costs them only one half as much as BORDEN'S.

See that you are not misled. Insist upon the name BORDEN'S. See that this name is on every package or jar and that BORDEN'S is served to you at the soda fountain.

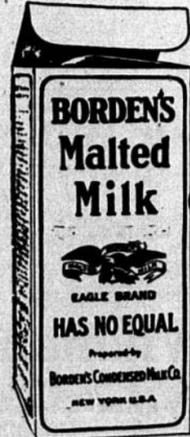

BORDEN'S MALTED MILK has no equal in the world for quality and cleanliness.

BORDEN'S name on a jar of MALTED MILK is like the United States' seal on gold coin.

$100 Reward will be paid to any person causing the arrest and conviction of any person, firm or corporation who may be found selling any substance which is not genuine as or for BORDEN'S MALTED MILK.

Ask for BORDEN'S MALTED MILK. Buy only BORDEN'S MALTED MILK. Accept no substitutes.

The La Grange Vacation Home for Working Girls at Glenside, Pa., which was opened last Sunday, is the gift of Mrs. Joseph Fels. Formerly the vacation home was on Sixtieth street, a property owned by Joseph H. Fels, the single tax advocate. Mrs. Fels, widow of the single taxer and herself a follower of the Henry George principle, felt that when she sold for $100,000 the Sixtieth street property, which she and her husband had bought for $33,000, that the vacation home should become the beneficiary of the "unearned increment." Thus the new estate was opened Sunday with the $67,000 "unearned increment."

Pogroms Feared in Georgia.

"Pogrom" is the Russian word for pillage, destruction: In 1905 it came to be used for combinations to rob and kill Jews in many parts of the empire. As a result of the Frank case agitation the substantial establishment of pogroms in some cities of Georgia is feared. The terror has begun in Marietta, where a boycott against all Jewish merchants has been organized. To any American State either a pogrom or a race boycott is an intolerable disgrace.

The motive of either outrage in Georgia is as absurd as the motive of the Kishineff massacre. Wealthy Jews in various parts of the United States did unquestionably contribute to a fund for seeing that Frank got what was regarded by the Jews as justice. The expense for lawyers and for educational work to make the public understand Frank's claim, and for petition circulation was large, but wholly justified. The allegations of bribery have never been based on anything that could be considered evidence, and sane people take no stock in such charges.

Georgia's good citizens must see that the reputation of the State is cleared of the stain for which the lawless element is to be blamed. They have a plain duty to American civilization. The fairness of Governor Slaton should be reflected in their thought, their words, their acts. A stern determination to tolerate neither violence nor injustice should govern. That is a self-evident proposition, as unprovable as an axiom.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Hebrew in Scotland.

Although the famous Scottish reformer, John Knox, "had a fervent thirst" for Hebrew, it was not he, but one of his associates, John Row, called "Rom primus," who first brought the Hebrew letters to Scotland, and among his most eager pupils was his own son, Row secundus, afterward the historian of the Church of Scotland. The first Hebrew book printed and published in Scotland, 1644, was a short grammar and vocabulary of Hebrew by Row tertius, the grandson of Row primus. In 1642, two years before the appearance of this tiny but epoch-making book, a professorship devoted exclusively to the teaching of Hebrew was founded in Scotland—the Hebrew chair in Toon's College of Edinburgh. But the fact remains that, in the matter of Semitic scholarship, Scotland was at this period far behind England, for the mid-seventeenth century produced in England a galaxy of Semitic scholars, at whose feet the foremost students of the continent were proud to sit, and the works of Seiden, Lightfoot, Pococke, Usher and the Polygot Bible of Brian Walton remain to this day unsurpassed as monuments of Semitic learning.—Pittsburgh (Pa.) Press.

Why a Jewish Congress?

We are glad that a great deal of hot air was liberated in the discussion of the calling of an American Jewish Congress; for out of this heat something of value to Jewish life will be wrought. It has stirred the imagination, it has raised hopes, it has given freedom to the unused Jewish capacity for constructive thought. Without this agitation, had the American Jewish Committee had its way, all this war would have meant would have been merely a silent, expressionless, automatic collection of funds, which would, as usual, have been sent to the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden for distribution, and that would have been the end of the matter.

The talk about a congress has cleared the air. It has made clear the utility of a congress, and it has also shown what a congress will not do. What would a congress produce? A free discussion. That free discussion would have to resolve itself into a set of resolutions whose practical effect would be the election of a representative committee. The discussion would not produce the program. The program would have to be formulated before the discussion was held. It would have to be prepared weeks before the holding of the congress. In effect, the congress would, however, place the responsibility for Jewish action upon the Jewish people, and not upon a few self-appointed leaders.

Granting that the congress could not make the Jewish program, there would, however, be a tremendous gain. The American Jewish community has gradually contracted the basis of its constituency. Autocratic management of Jewish affairs has narrowed the scope of appeal. The former the so-called leaders held the reins of government, the fewer were the supporters they could command for any Jewish service. This is to be seen best in the management of institutions, where a small board of directors administering the affairs of the institution gradually concentrate all responsibility and all power in their own hands, and ignore the wishes of the supporters. The American Jewish Committee has selected men in certain communities who have not the confidence of the large mass of Jews in that community. The result is that the community feels no responsibility for any of the work of the American Jewish Committee.

The congress would clearly assert where the responsibility for Jewish affairs rests. Not in the few, but in the mass. Not in the man of means, but in every individual member of the community. By extending the boundaries of the appeal, by placing the responsibility where it belongs, whatever action would be taken by the elected representatives of the masses would be regarded as the action of the constituents themselves. The Jewish program then would be a program which would command the allegiance of all Jews.—The Maccabaen.

The Russian society formed for the purpose of promoting the development of the spas has, by eighty-five votes in favor of to four against, resolved to request the government to abolish the restrictions against Jews. In addition, Deputy Maslennikoff, of Saratoff, has visited the Ministry of the Interior and lodged a protest against the regulations preventing Jews in his district from going to summer resorts:

Made Stars.

If there isn't any star within your sky,
 Pretend it's there!
 Why, a make-believe one, swinging white and high,
 Is just as fair!
 If you put it where you'll see it every night,
 Just where the sky's particularly bright,
 Your star is sure to guide your steps aright.

If there isn't any sunshine in your day,
 Why, put some in!
 If you've never tried to make your sun that way,
 Oh, do begin!
 This sunshine-making's hard, but you won't mind.
 Keep on; and when it's done, you're apt to find
 The home-made brand's the very nicest kind!

Jewish Work with the British Troops in France.

The following incident is typical of the manner in which that excellent institution, the Y. M. C. A., continues to display the utmost friendliness toward soldiers of all denominations. On Thursday, the 10th, the chaplain desired to hold a service for a number of soldiers in a large center in the North of France. There was no place available and upon approaching the local hut-leader of the Y. M. C. A., the "quiet room" was offered to him with the greatest readiness, and a service was accordingly held at which a number of men, including several Canadians, were present. At the conclusion of the service, the Y. M. C. A. leader insisted upon supplying all the Jewish soldiers with tea, as many of the men had come from long distances. Mr. Adler upon leaving this area arranged with the Senior Church of England Chaplain to have an order issued fixing Saturday afternoon for regular weekly services, to be conducted by one of the Canadian soldiers, and the Y. M. C. A. hut is to be used for this purpose.

The Chaplain has been in communication with the military authorities and has been able to arrange to set up in cemeteries over Jewish graves a wooden Mogen David with the word Sholom inscribed. This has already been done in several instances, as in Rouen, Le Treport and Paris Plage. Arrangements are now being made to carry this out in every case where possible, especially as special plots have been allotted to our soldiers in Base towns and other areas. As recorded in the instance given last week, it has occurred that Jewish soldiers have been buried without the authorities being aware of the religion of the deceased. The Chaplain would, therefore, be grateful if parents who know where their sons have been buried would write full details to him, addressing their letters to A. P. O., 3, France. The work of carving these memorials is being carried out by a Christian staff sergeant of the Royal Engineers, who offered the Chaplain his services for the purpose, saying, "there is nothing too much I would do for any soldier of any religion who has given his life for his king and country." The first two of these, however, were carved by Pte. Friedlander, the Chaplain's orderly.—Jewish Chronicle.

Protect Us from Our Friends.

A fine psychological observation in the Talmud says that well-meaning people were responsible for the destruction of Jerusalem (Gittin, 56, a). Indeed it is this class of people whose hearts get the better of their intellect and practical experience who make us pray, "God, protect us from our friends." Louis Friedmann, of New York, is a gentleman who occasionally launches a project to save Judaism by supporting Hungarian Yeshibahs or by a translation of Judah Halevi's Kuzari, and who in the Public Ledger, of Philadelphia (June 15), announces that he has solved the Jewish question by obtaining from Juan Kiano, Spanish Ambassador at Washington, a statement that Spain will welcome all the Jews of the world. Mr. Friedmann does not seem to know that his panacea is not entirely new. Since Castelar's famous speech in the Cortez, April 12, 1869, we have heard any number of expressions to this effect from Spanish statesmen. The constitution of July 2, 1876, gives freedom of religion, but limits the right of public services to the Catholics. How far the amendment passed June 11, 1910, which abolishes this restriction, is in effect is hard to determine. E. Alec Woolf, of London, who has studied conditions in Spain, stated only last year that the population is so hostile that at the mere rumor of proposed Jewish immigration, anti-Jewish societies were established all over the country. Such facts have a much greater significance than showy demonstrations intended for political purposes, like Premier Sagasta's dispatch to the Spanish Minister in Constantinople, June 17, 1881, that Spain would welcome the Russian Jews, or a similar statement, made by the same gentleman in a letter to Halm Guedalia, of London, June 27, 1881. Nor will the public utterances and essays of statesmen like Senators Lopez Lapuya, Angel Pulido, ex-Minister Manuel Ruy Zorilla and Ambassador Marquis Prat de Natouillet, with their utopian schemes for the repatriation of the Oriental Sefardim have any tangible effect. If sentiment instead of hard economic facts were to decide the movements of populations, the United States would not have received more Greek and Italian immigrants after the foundation of the new Italian kingdom and the liberation of Greece than it ever received before. Spain is not in a condition to support immigrants without capital, and others, like the banker, Gustav Bauer, or the electrical engineers,

Levi and Kocherthaler, found their way to Spain unopposed, and would have found it even if Pulido's "La Raza Sefardi" had never been written. Another hundred Jews as porters or interpreters in the hotels of Barcelona and Seville will not tangibly affect the situation of the Jewish people, though we should be glad to see the final undoing of Thomas Torquemada's statesmanship.—American Israelite.

The Russian Imperial Technical Society has followed up its recent conference by submitting an important memorial to the Premier, the Ministers of Commerce and of Ways and Communications, members of both Houses of Parliament and heads of all commercial and trade organizations. The memorial deals with the requirements of Russian commerce, and contains a strong recommendation that the Empire must adopt as its fundamental policy the principle of securing for all citizens, irrespective of race or creed, the full right to develop the resources of the country by means of their capital and labor.

fund for any subscribing member who may become peculiarly embarrassed and require a few days' holiday away in the country. Other legacies include $5,000 each to the Jewish Board of Guardians and the Salvation Army. There are many other interesting bequests, although the net value of his estate was not more than $35,000.

The weekly Jewish historical lecture at Toynbee Hall, in the east end of London, was last Tuesday delivered by Herbert Loewe. Taking as his title the "Migrations of the Jews," the lecturer followed the great Jewish movements in Europe, America and the East, and showed the difference between mediaeval Jewish migrations, caused by expulsion, and those in modern times, caused by persecution. Dealing with the immigration of the Yemenite Jews into Palestine, he said these people did the hardest work there, carrying enormous loads and doing the rough labor in the fields. They must not be exploited. Trade-union regulations must be devised to prevent injustice, for people were looking to the Yemenites as a source of cheap and efficient labor. They should be protected and not degraded into mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. Mr. Loewe devoted much attention to the decaying bodies and sects of Jews. While during the war we were naturally concerned more with our co-religionists in Poland than with those in Abyssinia, we should, when peace was restored, extend the activities that had been commenced in giving help to the Falashas, the Chinese Jews and other sects. No attempt must be made to organize them on the lines of constituent bodies in the United Synagogue or the Federation. They must be helped to retain their own traditions unimpaired. The solution lay in the establishment of schools by local teachers, supervised by educational experts, who must, however, make it their business not to Anglicize or yet to impose the Shulchan Aruch, and the erection of printing presses. These Jews must not be regarded as belonging to heretical sects or as observing rites which, from a Jewish point of view, it was necessary to abandon. Union and not uniformity, argued the lecturer, should be the true note.

A Jewish Nation. As a result of the European war, is there to be a Jewish nation...

From time to time we have spoken of the probability of submerged nations coming to the surface in the making of peace—Poland, Bohemia, Silesia, Hungary—but, sentimentally at least, the re-establishment of a Jewish nation in Palestine is a matter of much wider interest...

Who Was Maimonides?

A reader asks this question: "I see that you talk about a man named Maimonides in your editorial. Who was he?"

It would take one of the Geonim (may they be blessed) to give any adequate idea of the vast labors and intellectual powers of Maimonides, known to every little Jewish boy as "Rambam."

The full and real name of Maimonides is "Rabbenu Mosheh B. Maimun Haddayyan." "Maimonides" is really a name given to him by the Christians. Among the Jews who are honored by his wisdom and character, Rambam is the name by which he is usually known—a name ingeniously made up of his and his father's initials combined with "be," meaning "the son of."

About this great man here are a few facts: He was born in 1135, nearly eight hundred years ago. His entire life was devoted to philosophy, science and religious study.

The Christians in his day were fierce savages, and their "Christianity" was a brand of brutality that made it necessary for any student to keep away from them. Therefore Maimonides lived among the Mohammedans, less brutal than the Christians.

Enemies of Maimonides, in the days of fierce discussion and hatred following his death, declared that he and his family embraced the Mahomedan religion to escape persecution, and that it was to defend himself that he wrote his treatise on the sanctification of the name of God, telling how much a Jew may yield and what things he must refuse to do if compelled to embrace another religion.

In it he declares that Mohammedanism is not "a heathenish religion." The Jews looked with some slight toleration upon the Christian and Mohammedan religions because both of them had taken so much from the Jewish religion.

Concerning Mohammed, it is believed that a learned Jew wrote his Koran for him—that learned Jew seems to have amused himself highly, in spots.

It may be said that Maimonides created the Hebrew language of today—as much of it as is used in dealing with philosophical and ethical subjects. He lived among the Arabs in Cordova, where many learned men lived in his time.

He wrote very largely in Arabic, translating some of his own works into Hebrew. He and other translators were obliged to create Hebrew words for the expressions of Greek philosophical thought. The words did not exist in ancient Hebrew.

Maimonides worked to reconcile Greek philosophy with Hebrew theology—his enemies accused him of putting Aristotle above Moses. As a matter of fact, he put Aristotle and his wisdom next to Moses.

For the unprejudiced citizen it is difficult to see why there should be any comparison. Moses was a statesman, a leader of men, making laws based on conditions as he found them. He was no philosopher, no really learned man.

Aristotle was only a philosopher and a man of learning.

All of his hard work, his incredibly deep study was done for the enlightenment and the good of humanity. He believed with many great rabbis that to make a living out of religious learning is sin. He was a physician of great skill, and made his living as a doctor. When he died in Cairo, not quite seventy years of age, the Saladin of Egypt was his patient.

Serious young men who enjoy study might take as subject for a composition the difference between the teachings of the earnest Maimonides and the great poet Omar, who died just before Maimonides was born. Both of these men, wide apart as were their philosophies of life, devoted attention to astronomy, and both wrote profound calculations as to the calendar—Maimonides wrote his at the age of twenty-two.

It is probably difficult for us to realize just how profound was the wisdom of this great thinker, described by a famous rabbi as "last of the Geonim as regards time and the first of them as regards worth."

Learned men declare that Maimonides was undoubtedly the greatest thinker and philosopher that the Jews have produced.

There is no doubt his influence upon modern philosophical thought is less than that of Spinoza, whose work was done free from the limitations of theological teaching.

All sorts of fables have been built up around the name of Maimonides, and, as in the case of all other great religious teachers, he is credited with miracles and prodigious feats. But these are forgotten in our intelligent day, and his great service to learning—the greatest of which, perhaps, was taking the wisdom of Aristotle to the Jews—remains.

Maimonides was a great student of natural philosophy, and that important truths were foreshadowed in his religious teachings there is no doubt. For instance, the world has noted with amazement the fact that the great Italian, Dante, describing the ascent of Virgil and himself, from climbing down Satan's hairy back and leaving the centre of earth, appeared to understand the law of gravitation, not yet, of course, announced by Newton.

Infinitely more remarkable, in our opinion, and more exact, is the foreshadowing of that law by Maimonides, who died sixty years before Dante was born.

In the following quotation Maimonides refers to the old Jewish belief, which he refutes, that every little thing that happens on earth, a man's getting up and sitting down, for instance, is especially ordered by God and obedient to His will in each case. Maimonides says (page 90):

"It may be said that this is true only in one respect. Thus, for instance, when a stone is thrown into the air and falls to the ground, it is correct to say that the stone fell in accordance with the will of God, for it is true that God decreed that the earth and all that goes to make it up should be the centre of attraction, so that when any part of it is thrown into the air it is attracted back to the centre."

There is certainly a very interesting, if incomplete, foreshadowing of Newton's law, and of the fact that on our planet the centre of the earth is the point to which all matter tends.

This quotation is taken from Maimonides' Ethics, translated from Maimonides' Arabic into Hebrew by Ibn Tibbon, and from Hebrew into English by Dr. Joseph I. Gorfinkle, published by the Columbia University Press in New York.

It would be interesting to know just how exact a quotation this is of the original Arabic and of the Hebrew translation of that Arabic.

We should be glad to know from Dr. Gorfinkle, or from Richard Gottheil, who gives strong indorsement to Dr. Gorfinkle's translation, just exactly what words were used in Arabic by Maimonides, and what exact Hebrew words were used or created by Ibn Tibbon in the translation.

Did there exist in Arabic at the time Maimonides wrote any word that could be fairly translated as meaning "attraction" in the sense of the power of gravity? To what extent is the Gorfinkle translation into English influenced, if at all, by the present knowledge of attraction and gravity?

The expression of Maimonides as translated here is so remarkably like that of Dante's in his "Inferno" that the latter may be thought to have known of Maimonides' writing through hearsay.

It is similarly supposed that his extraordinary description of the Southern Cross, entirely unknown to Europeans in his day, may have been due to his conversation with some mariner accidentally driven around the Cape.

We should be glad to know from Dr. Gorfinkle or others, also, whether or not attention has hitherto been called to this foreshadowing of Newton's law by Maimonides.

For Jewish scholars, of course, the most important work of Maimonides is his Mishna Torah, in which with wonderful patience and learning he has codified the whole of the Jewish laws, as found in the Bible, in both of the Talmuds, and in the great mass of rabbinical writings.

He was accused by those who opposed him and who indulged in the mediaeval pastime of excommunicating him from the Jewish synagogue that he thought to make his own work take the place of the Talmud and the teachings of the rabbis.

He did nothing of the kind, but he did save a great deal of trouble, putting knowledge hitherto inaccessible within reach of all students.

He was a very great man, and, as he often said in mentioning his predecessors, "may he be blessed."—New York Evening Journal.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

RABBI SIMON BEN JOCHAI

Dear Children:
Rabbi Simeon, the son of Judah, in the name of Rabbi Simeon, the son of Jochai, said beauty, strength, riches, honor, wisdom, old age and a hoary head and children are comely to the righteous and comely to the world, as it is said, the hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness (Proverbs 16-7) and it says: The glory of young men is their strength, and the adornment of old men is the hoary head (Ibid 20-29); and it says: A crown unto the wise is their riches (Ibid 14-24); and it says: Children's children are the crown of old men and the adornment of children are their fathers (Ibid 17-6); and it said: Then the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed, for the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his elders shall be glory (Isaiah 24-23). Rabbi Simeon, the son of Menasya, said: These seven qualifications which the sages enumerated as becoming to the righteous were all realized in Rabbi Judah the Prince, and in his sons.

The Talmud tells us that Rabbi Chama, the son of Bissa, was very ambitious to study the Torah. He therefore left his wife with his young son and traveled to a Yeshiva, where he studied the Torah for twelve years. At the end of that time he returned to his home. When he arrived in this city he thought, I will not come to my wife suddenly in order that it shall not occur to her as it occurred to the wife of Rabbi Chanina Ben Chachinai, who also studied in a Yeshiva twelve years, and then came home suddenly, and when his wife saw him all of a sudden she swooned from joy. Rabbi Chama therefore went first to the Beth Hamedrash and sent some one to tell his wife of his return from the Yeshiva and that he is now in the Beth Hamedrash. His wife sent to him their son, Rabbi Hashiah, who in the twelve years of his father's absence had grown up to be a fine young man and a great Talmud Chacham (highly learned in the Torah). The mother told him not to let his father know that he was his son and that he should enter into discussion with him, on matters relating to the Torah. Rabbi Hashiah came to the Beth Hamedrash and stood before his father, Rabbi Chama, who did not know that the young man was his son. Rabbi Hashiah asked his father many questions in the wisdom of the Torah and solved some intricate problems so that Rabbi Chama became greatly impressed with his great knowledge and wonderful acumen. "Alas!" thought he, "if I had been home all this time, perhaps my son would also have developed into such a Talmud Chacham as this young man." When Rabbi Chama came to his house and as he crossed the threshold he saw the same young man also coming to his house. Rabbi Chama stood up and went to receive him, for he thought he came to him for further discussions concerning the Halachoth or Laws of the Torah. Thereupon his wife said to him: "Now my heart is full of joy, for now I see that my son is a Talmud Chacham and need not be ashamed before his father in learning; know then that this is your child whom you left as a little boy and I have raised him up in Torah and in wisdom entirely without your help, but that I did not expect of you. I did not think that a father would rise up and honor his own son." Rabbi Chama was surprised and overjoyed at the words of his wife; he fell upon his son's neck and kissed him, and it was to him that Rabbi Ramie bar Chama applied the verse: "And a threefold cord cannot quickly be torn asunder" (Ecc. 4-12), meaning thereby Rabbi Hashiah, the son of Chama, the son of Bissa.

Thus we see that the children that are comely to the righteous and comely to the world are a real crown of glory to their fathers. This is a great lesson to you, dear children. We all strive for the possession of beauty, strength, riches, honor, wisdom, old age and a hoary head, which with righteousness are a blessing to the world, but after we have attained them all, like Chama Ben Bissa, we say to ourselves: "Alas! If my son was only a Talmud Chacham!" How many fathers are so fortunate as he, to find the dearest wish of their heart realized? How many mothers are there who could so faithfully devote themselves to the training of their son in the Torah as the mother of Hashiah Ben Chama, but what is most important of all, dear children, is to ask yourselves if you, too, cannot follow the example of Hashiah, the son of Chama, who, without the strict discipline of a father, devoted his young life to the attainment of the knowledge of the Torah which is the only knowledge in the world that guarantees its possessor with beauty of character, strength of mind, riches in possessing the only wealth that is worth while—the wealth of the mind, the honor of mankind for his great moral force and wisdom—and though young in years, the wise students of the Torah will obtain the honor due to old age and the hoary head, as you saw Rabbi Chama rising up and honoring his own son, for when the moon shall be confounded and the sun ashamed; when the materialism of the world shall recognize that it is the Lord of Hosts who resides in Mount Zion and Jerusalem—then the forces of nature shall cease to be honored but before his elders shall be glory.
