Sanitation and Public Health in Palestine

By Israel J. Kligler*

American Museum of Natural History

The construction of the Panama Canal has furnished us a forceful demonstration of the value and importance of sanitation in the successful consummation of a project involving the segregation of a large number of people. Equally striking, if not more so, is the tragic failure of the French in their earlier attempt to accomplish the same feat. The success in the one case and failure in the other are in a very large measure attributable to the rigid sanitary measures against the known death-dealing agents of disease employed by the Americans and the utter helplessness of the French, who, instead of abating, were unconsciously instrumental in stimulating the development of these agents.

There is a distinct parallelism between the building of the Panama Canal and the colonization of Palestine. Both undertakings involved the bringing of an alien population into a limited territory infested with the malarial mosquitoes. Both countries enjoy a semi-tropical climate. In both places the native population is comparatively ignorant and the government incompetent to enforce proper sanitary measures. Besides this, the successful development of a new country necessarily entails privations, which tend to lower the vital resistance of the individuals. It is therefore doubly necessary to maintain a healthy environment so that these pioneers might not be unduly exposed to infections.

Modern sanitarians recognize three distinct modes of transmission of disease, which are well expressed in alliteration—fingers, food, flies. In other words, disease may be spread directly from person to person, indirectly by infected foodstuffs and finally by means of insects, either mechanically as in the case of the fly, or as an intermediary host as in the case of the mosquito. The human being is the primary focus of disease germs. Either as a sick person or as a healthy "carrier" he sows the seed broadcast transferring the germs to his immediate associates, to one way or another to break a link in the chain which connects the individual harboring the parasites with the healthy members of the comin a country generally determine the nature of the sanitary measures required, the mode of attack and the point where greatest efforts should be exerted. The nearer we approach a tropical climate the greater are the difficulties which confront us.

The successful execution of the attack on the invisible foes of man depends largely on the people, their general intellectual status, the type of government they have and the amount of money they are willing or able to spend for the preservation of their health. The more highly civilized a community is and the fewer the bigotries and superstitions to be encountered the more readily will it understand and co-operate with its health authorities in controlling the spread of disease. In the absence of a highly civilized community similar results may be obtained by the rigid police power of an absolute government. Germany stands out today as the healthiest country largely on that account. The success achieved in enforcing health regulations in the Canal Zone was again due to the absolute power vested in the sanitary division. The value of large appropriations in educating the people and in maintaining an adequate force needs hardly to be dwelt upon. Education of the people is the only effective measure capable of producing lasting and permanent results.

Conditions in Jerusalem in 1912.

With these preliminary remarks, we may now consider the conditions existing in Palestine and the attempts that have been made to render it a healthy, habitable country. In speaking of Palestine we must most of the time confine ourselves to Jerusalem where the evils exist in a most intensified form and where the most concerted efforts have been made to eradicate them. Since 1912 marks a turning point in the sanitary history of Jerusalem and of Palestine generally, we may well first consider conditions as they then existed and later discuss the efforts made by various agencies to meet the situation.

munity. The successful solution of the problem is controlled generally by four factors:

- The climatic conditions prevailing

The climate in the mountainous region of Palestine is salubrious, the temperature ranging from a minimum of 46 degrees Fahrenheit in February to about 75 degrees Fahrenheit during the hottest months of July to October. The low-lying plain from Jaffe and Haifa inland and the dry low-lying Jordan valley have on the other hand a sustained tropical climate. This entire region is extremely malarious. As a result we have in Palestine side by side a healthy, moderate climate and a disease infested tropical region. In addition, therefore, to the problems of control of bacterial diseases such as typhoid, diphtheria, pneumonia, cholera and the like, we are confronted with the tremendous task of checking the more puzzling infections due to animal parasites such as malaria and Oriental sore.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that Palestine in general has to rely almost exclusively on rain for its water supply. On account of the seasonal fall, water is very scarce and is, therefore, stored in cisterns. These cisterns are locked for protection against the encroachment of dishonest neighbors, but afford a cordial hospitality to the malarial mosquitoes which breed there in abundance throughout the year. Drs. Brünn and Goldberg summarize the situation as follows: "Today rain supplies the population of Jerusalem with water. The rain water is collected in cisterns four, five and six meters deep, built of stone." The cisterns rise from 30 to 50 cm. above the ground, surrounded by a square enclosure with a small opening in the centre, locked "not for hygiene reasons, but to prevent the water from being stolen by neighbors."

The people inhabiting Jerusalem are almost all poverty stricken and the whole country is absolutely ignorant of hygienic principles. Poverty and ignorance always spell dirt and disease. Coupled with the low status of the people is the hopelessly chaotic condition of the Turkish Government which is bound hand and foot by the outside powers. We can hardly conceive the nature of the conditions that actually existed there. By "agreement" with these powers, foreign subjects residing in Turkey were under the rule of the consuls of their respective governments and were not answerable to Turkish officials for their acts. This is the essence of the so-called "Capitulation." (See foot note.) If Turkey desired to enforce a certain measure on the foreign population it first had to submit the order to the consuls and if the latter so desired, they in turn would issue orders to their respective subjects. The effect of this situation on the enforcement of public health measures is quite evident. Often there lived in one house subjects of three, four or more powers. Naturally under these conditions no attempt could even be made to enforce sanitary laws. As a result of this "no real sewage disposal system exists, the refuse is thrown either into the streets or back yards, vaccination is not enforced even when smallpox is epidemic, and there is no attempt to isolate those suffering from infectious diseases." (Masterman, J. of Hyg., 1913).

As was intimated above, Palestine besides its regular quota of the prevailing infectious diseases is ridden with malaria. Dr. Masterman reports that of the out patients coming to his hospital 16.20 per cent. suffered from malaria during the cold months, while during the hot months 40 per cent. of the patients had malaria. Among the in-patients the percentage is 20 for the cold and 43.50 for the hot seasons. He even claims that if the mild, latent and unreported cases were included the percentage would be much higher and adds: "This, to us medical men, is exasperating because we know that most, if not all, the malaria at a city like Jerusalem could be eradicated by measures which are comparatively simple and require for their enforcement merely that a certain amount of authority be conferred upon an intelligent health officer. Brünn and Goldberg found an enlarged spleen (indicating probable malaria) in three out of five inhabitants of Jerusalem and the malarial parasites in one out of every five. These findings correspond closely with those reported by Masterman, and give an idea how widespread this scourge is.

Dawn of a New Era—The Health Bureau and the International Institute.

This was the condition as it existed in 1912. In the spring of that year, thanks to the generosity of Mr. Nathan Straus, a health bureau was established for the purpose of combating various endemic diseases and especially malaria. Dr. Brünn was appointed director and in August of that year he undertook, with the assistance of Dr. Goldberg, a thorough investigation of the cause of the spread of malaria in Jerusalem and Hadera and the best modes of attack. The first report of the work was published in the Zeitschrift f. Hygiene, etc., August, 1913.

In the meantime, September of 1912, Prof. Muhlsens of the School of Tropical Medicine at Hamburg was sent with three assistants to investigate the malarial situation in Jerusalem. By arrangement with Dr. Brünn, Dr. Muhlsens studied the conditions among the Mohammedan and Christian population while the former investigated the conditions among the Jews. As a result of Dr. Muhlsens' report Dr. Pawitz came to Jerusalem and conferred with the Turkish authorities, the consuls, medical men and institutions, on a plan for co-operative public health work. After negotiating for some time an International Health Institute was established in Jerusalem in 1913, under the direction of Dr. Muhlsens.

The support of the Institute was to be shared in common by the German Committee for the campaign against malaria in Jerusalem; by Nathan Straus, of New York, and by the Society of Jewish Physicians and Scientists for Sanitary Interests in Palestine. The German committee supported the general department for combating malaria, and its chairman was at the same time the director of the Institute. Nathan Straus supported and still supports the hygienic and bacteriologic department of which Doctors Brünn and Goldberg are the heads. The Society of Jewish Physicians and Scientists, founded in 1913, has taken over the serological department, including protection against rabies, originated by the German committee and placed it under the directorship of Doctor Behan. An accessory department for the prevention of eye diseases under the direction of Doctor Feigenbaum has also been added. The authorities of the city have, moreover, promised a permanent annual contribution to the work of the health office.

The most important task was the attack of the malarial problem. Drs. Drunn and Goldberg had already studied the situation and concluded that the great prevalence of malaria was due to the unscreened cisterns which served as admirable breeding places for the anophelene mosquito. The campaign was therefore started from two different angles, first the treatment of patients harboring the parasites and second the screening of the cisterns and substitution of pumps for the old-fashioned pail used for drawing water.

The third form of the malaria campaign must begin, however, by the education of the population, awakening their interest and winning their active co-operation in the removal of nuisances and by the permanent inspection of the cisterns by a health inspector, or special mosquito commission. According to the latest newspaper reports of last year, the supply of the city with good spring water by a system of water pipes had been undertaken by a French company. The accomplishment of this plan would also have rendered the suppression of typhoid, dysentery and other infectious diseases much easier, especially among the poorer population, who depend on the old cisterns often contaminated with water from the streets.

A campaign against tuberculosis has been started but proved to be much more difficult and less promising; it will also require much larger means. Particularly the improvement of the incredibly wretched dwelling of the native population, Jews as well as Mohammedans, will require the efforts of many years and the expenditure of considerable funds. Moreover, carrying out a long period of curative treatment such as is necessary in tuberculosis will be found to be very difficult.

The Hadassah Visiting Nurses.

The campaign against other infectious diseases in Jerusalem will depend chiefly on the introduction and progress of a general communal health movement, of which hitherto there have been only very small beginnings. A most important step in the direction of awaking this communal consciousness for better health conditions was the inauguration of the district nursing system by the Hadassah Chapter of the Daughters of Zion of New York city. It is being recognized more and more today that the most effective method of improving the health of a community is by education, by teaching the individual member the modes of transmission and control of the various infectious diseases and the need of so adjusting his life and conduct as to keep himself out of danger as well as to avoid endangering the health and life of his relatives, friends and neighbors. The visiting nurse is admitted by all to be the ideal agent for impressing these principles on the minds of the people. She has been aptly called the "Messenger of Health."

It is for this reason that the movement begun by the Hadassah to develop and maintain in Palestine a well-organized nursing system is

Chief Rabbi at the Front—Postmaster General Samuel Also Visits British Lines—Jews and the New War Loan, and the National Registration Bill—More Jewish Hero Stories—Annual Convention of Jewish Literary Societies—A Journalist in the Ghetto.

London, July 2, 1915.

The first days of the tour of the Chief Rabbi in France were passed in Boulogne, where a number of hospitals were visited. On June 27, accompanied by the Rev. Michael Adler, C. F., Dr. Hertz proceeded to general headquarters, where he was received by the Rev. Dr. J. M. Simms, Principal Chaplain to the Forces in the Field. In the afternoon a service and reception to Jewish officers and men were held at the local Soldiers' Club, at which the Chief Rabbi delivered an address.

He said that fifteen years ago he was engaged in a similar mission to the Jewish troops in the South African War. Today, however, the cause was immeasurably vaster. The Jews of the Empire have fully realized the duty of the hour and nobly have they responded to their country's call. As the late Colonel Goldsmid so admirably expressed it, "Loyalty to the flag for which the sun once stood still can only deepen our loyalty to the flag on which the sun never sets."

Later the Chief Rabbi and the Jewish Chaplain to the Forces were introduced by Dr. Simms to Field Marshal Sir John French, who was especially interested in the subject of Jewish soldiers in the war. On June 28 Dr. Hertz began his visits to the advanced stations at the front.

Herbert Samuel, the Jewish Postmaster-General, has also been making a brief visit to the British army in France. A visit was paid to the ruins of Ypres, where the minister had an opportunity of witnessing the destructive effect of modern shell fire. Accompanied by several officers, Mr. Samuel drove to the outskirts of the town by motor car, and continued his way through the debris-strewn streets on foot. The postmaster was intensely interested in the many amazing sights that met his eyes on all sides.

Jews are largely interesting themselves in the new war loan and the national scheme of registration in connection with helping the supply of munitions of war. So far as the new war loan is concerned, that is, for an unlimited amount up to possibly four thousand million dollars. Details of this were given in these columns last week, together with the debt the nation owes to Edwin S. Montagu for his skill and financial insight in making this war loan attractive and possible to every class of the population. It is interesting to note further that a poster in English and Yiddish has been published for the information of Jewish wage earners, and principally those in the East End of London. Signed by Leopold de Rothschild, Lord Swaythling and Leonard L. Cohen it reads as follows:

We desire to call attention to the following facts. The brief period of dislocation of trade, which was experienced at the beginning of the war, has been followed by great industrial activity, resulting from the distribution of government contracts. Wages have been, and are, high. Therefore, notwithstanding the increased cost of living, many wage earners should be able to put by against bad times. These bad times are sure to follow upon the termination of the war, whether it ends soon, or is prolonged. In addition to the usual facilities of the Postoffice Savings Bank, any person can now purchase at most postoffices the new war loan, giving a return of four and a half per cent. The opportunity, therefore, has never been more favorable for the investment of small savings, and we earnestly commend these considerations to the notice of those concerned.

With regard to the National Registration bill, this is a very far-reaching measure, indeed, and although limited to the duration of the war is something hitherto quite unknown in this country. The initial program is simple enough. Forms are to be issued through the medium of the local municipal authorities, which will have to be filled up by every inhabitant of the country, male or female, between the ages of 15 and 65, showing the following particulars:

- (a) Name; place of residence; age; whether single, married or widowed; number of dependents (if any), distinguishing wife, children and other dependents; profession or occupation (if any); name and business address of employer (if any), and nature of employer's business; and (in the case of a person born abroad) nationality, if not British; and
- (b) Whether the work on which he is employed is work for any government department or otherwise serving war purposes;
- (c) Whether he is skilled in and able and willing to perform any work other than the work (if any) at which he is at the time employed, and, if so, the nature thereof;
- (d) Such other particulars as may be prescribed.

What the government will do with the mass of more or less accurate information which it will thus obtain has never been clearly stated. There is no hint throughout the measure that it will be used as a basis for enforcing compulsory service, either industrial or military, although some such idea has undoubtedly been at the back of the minds of the supporters of the movement. Such a numbering and codification of the people must necessarily be a long and very expensive business, and if undertaken merely as a sort of national stocktaking of human resources in the middle of a great war, would not be worth the cost and labor involved.

It is important to note, however, that the responsibilities of the citizen under this bill do not end with the mere filling up and return of the form supplied to him. He (or she) will subsequently receive in due course an official certificate of registration, which must be religiously preserved. If he changes his address he must return his certificate to the local authorities for indorsement and reregistration in his new locality. Finally, if he fails to comply with this or any of the other requirements of the act he will be liable to a fine of $25, and "in the case of a continuing offense to a further fine not exceeding $5 for each day during which the offense continues." There is also a penalty of $100, or three months' imprisonment, or both, for any person who falsely represents himself as having received a certificate of registration. This is, no doubt, aimed at aliens.

By this means it is proposed to "keep tab" of every adult member of the population. Provision is made for the registration of foreigners and colonials within twenty-eight days of their arrival in this country.

As a preliminary to some form of conscription or compulsory national industrial or war munition service, the system which it is thus proposed to inaugurate would be a useful and, indeed, an almost necessary preliminary. But presuming the retention of the system of voluntary military service, it is a little difficult to understand how advantages will be gained commensurate to the cost of the undertaking. It may be added that unless the more migratory type of the working classes are kept under much more efficient supervision and discipline than they have ever been hitherto, the register, so far as they are concerned, will be more or less of a farce within a few months' time.

It is understood that even foreign-born and foreign-speaking Jews will have to register and for their convenience specially translated forms will be used. Already the matter is causing quite a commotion in the more foreign parts of the East End Jewish community.

Stirring stories of Jewish heroism continue to come from the front and, although those published here refer, of course, mainly to Jews who have fought and died in the service of England, France and Belgium, there are also from time to time fine stories from every other battle front. The elegant conduct of the Foreign Legion in France, which, according to Gustave Herve, is composed mainly of volunteer Russian Jews, is said to have wrung absolute cries of admiration from its commanding officers.

Another good story is with regard to what happened after the bayonetting of Lieut. Max Seller, of the German Bavarian cavalry. He and fifty men attacked a body of British soldiers unsuccessfully and the lieutenant lost his life. A Jewish soldier in the British service found his body and helped to bury him with the British casualties. Finding he was a Jew this British Jewish soldier had the burial service altered by the chaplain to correspond with the special Jewish needs and desires.

The annual convention of the Union of Jewish Literary Societies produced a good attendance of delegates, Dr. S. A. Hirsch being in the chair. The question of reviving a Hebrew paper in this country was discussed and seemed to win fair support. One of the speakers, Rabbi Dr. Samuel Dalches, pointed out that 1,600 subscribers would enable such a publication to make a regular appearance, but so far he reported that only 100 subscribers had come forward in connection with the proposal to revive Hayehoodi.

A well-known journalist has been taking a walk through what is sometimes called the Ghetto here, by which is known more particularly the bunch of little streets in and around Petticoat lane and Wentworth street, in Whitechapel. He found that the restaurants are full of chattering, work-grimed humanity, discussing the latest editions, criticising the cook, and talking of the fortunes made from khaki. As a matter of fact, it is the boom in military uniforms, which alone has, according to this writer, saved the Ghetto from the abyss of despair. The terribly anxious days of August have passed away; no longer do the tailors congregate in Whitechapel's "al fresco" labor market offering their services to the highest bidder. No longer does the constable need to move them on.

Once they were grateful for the home-made cigarette, and precious few of them at that. Today, in their leisure—and leisure is subservient to the requirements of Whitehall—they are smoking quite fragrant, expensive cigars, for they are living in what are golden days, days the like of which may never return. Presser, machiner, they are the monarchs of the Ghetto today; and it is their wealth which is keeping the markets as busy as in normal times. Though the consumption of luxuries has fallen off markedly,

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN THE JEWISH WORLD

Two new Yiddish papers are appearing in Russia, the Volk at Wilna and the Freie Wort at Odessa.

A junior Misrachi society has been organized in Dorchester, Mass., the first in existence in the vicinity.

Mr. Mortimer Schiff has made an additional gift of 10,000 francs to destitute Paris women whose husbands are at the front.

The rank of Councilor of State has been conferred on M. Simon Eisenstadt, who is a director of the Russian Wireless Company.

A recent California incorporation is the Ida Straus Day Nursery and Settlement of the Los Angeles Section of the Council of Jewish Women.

A Sabbath Observance Club for boys was recently organized in the West End of Boston, Mass. Permanent headquarters have been secured.

The Federated Orthodox Jewish Charities of Chicago, Ill., expended over $10,000 through its twelve constituent societies during the month of June.

At the recent examinations for scholarships for Cornell University, the majority of those who won them in Greater New York were Jewish boys.

There was an attendance of nearly 4,000 people at the first outing of the United Hebrew Charities of Springfield, Mass., held on July 12, at Imperial Park.

The Hebrew Educational Alliance has completed alterations at the old Harris Mansion, in Roxbury, Mass. The opening of the building is scheduled for September 6.

Within the past few weeks more than four hundred Jewish soldiers have won the Russian Order of St. George. In addition seventy-three Jewish military doctors received various orders.

Governor Edward F. Dunne last week appointed Samuel Alschuler, who is acting as attorney for the car men in the Chicago street car arbitration, chairman of the new railway commission.

The Mayor of Odessa, M. Pelican, who before the war, was a violent anti-Semite, has now veered round, for in a recent statement he praised the loyalty and patriotism of the Jews.

Ira Nelson Morris, United States Minister to Sweden, returned home last Saturday. He went to Chicago to be treated for throat trouble from which he has been a sufferer for some time past.

The United Synagogue has recognized the necessity for the appointment of an additional Jewish chaplain to the British forces and has nominated the Rev. A. A. Green for the position.

The late Charles G. Lathrop, brother of Mrs. Leland Stanford and former treasurer of Stanford University, left a legacy of $1,000 to the San Francisco (Cal.) Hebrew Home for the Aged and Disabled.

The Concordia Club, of Houston, Texas, has just completed a new home at a cost of $65,000. The club house has been informally opened, but a formal celebration of the event will take place some time in the fall.

Mr. Washington A. Marx, of New Orleans, La., died suddenly on July 6. Mr. Marx, who was forty-two years old, came from an old Sephardic family. He was assistant secretary of the New Orleans Sugar Exchange.

The Roumanian Government, in response to the criticism of a section of the press, has issued a statement with reference to the expulsion of the Jews from seven frontier districts. The government announced that it only expelled Jews who were foreign subjects and Roumanian Jews who conducted speculative transactions. Other Roumanian Jews were allowed to remain.

The contract for the new Hebrew Institute of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been awarded. The building, which will cost $30,000, will be ready for occupancy in the early fall.

A number of leading Jewish citizens of Atlanta, Ga., have offered a donation of $10,000 for a municipal golf course. The donation has been accepted by the park commissioners.

The annual report of the Russian Synod stated that 835 Jewish "converts" had returned to their old faith, and puts the total number of baptized Jews in the past year at 1,198.

Sixty-four inmates were cared for during the past year by the Montefiore Home for Aged and Infirm Israelites, at Cleveland, Ohio, the largest number in the history of the home.

Arrangements have been completed for the fifth annual Western assembly of the Jewish Chautauqua Society, which will be held in San Francisco, Cal., from July 31 to August 8.

The well-known Jewish manufacturer of Kieff, M. Halpern, donated 150,000 rubles to the Russian Red Cross Society and further obligated himself to the extent of 1,000 rubles per month for a special bandage department of the Red Cross.

Jacob Adler, the Yiddish actor, is at Battle Creek, Mich., in the Battle Creek Sanitarium, recuperating and getting in condition for a farewell tour of the country, which he will make in the early fall under the direction of Edwin A. Relkin.

Members of the Congregation Machazika Hadath, of Baltimore, Md., have elected Rev. R. E. Zucker, of Boston, Mass., as their spiritual head. An effort will be made to have him exercise the functions of Chief Rabbi over the Orthodox Jews of Baltimore.

The non-Mussulman population, including the Jews, has been expelled from several townlets near Constantinople. The property of the exiles was seized by the authorities. The police also compelled the Jews to remove Hebrew signboards at Constantinople.

The Board of Inspectors of the Philadelphia (Pa.) County Prison have presented resolutions to Mr. William B. Hackenberg commending his work in raising the standard of that institution. Mr. Hackenberg was appointed an inspector in 1896 and retired last month.

The Minister for War, in agreement with the Jewish community at Milan, has appointed four rabbis to act as army chaplains. The spiritual care of wounded Jewish soldiers in the military hospital at Milan has been entrusted to Chief Rabbi da Fano and Rabbi Astrologo.

The Curran Investigating Committee, which is making a Statewide investigation of institutions, etc., in Illinois, recently visited the Marks Nathan Jewish Orphans' Home, in Chicago. The committee was enthusiastic over what it saw and "a plan to be patterned after" was the way Chairman Thomas Curran spoke of the system at the home.

While the pupils of the Jewish schools at Sofia were recently enjoying a country excursion at some distance from the city, a motor car passed them in which were seated the Bulgarian king and his four children. The scholars loudly cheered his majesty, who, alighting from his car, thanked them and their teachers, and with some of the latter discussed the question of Jewish education. In the evening on returning to Sofia the king again encountered the school children, who pelted him with thousands of flowers.

Further evidence of the intense anti-German feeling in England was furnished at the last annual meeting of the London City Chess Club, when the names of Dr. Edward Lasker, champion of the world, and Dr. S. Tarrasch, champion of Germany, were ordered stricken from the rolls.

Rabbi A. M. Ashinsky, who has been officiating in Pittsburgh, Pa., for the past ten years, will most likely return to his former home, Montreal, Canada, where he has just been elected joint minister of the following three congregations: Chevra Kadisha, Chevra Shass and B'nai Jacob.

During June the Transfer Department of the Provisional Executive Committee for General Zionist Affairs, transferred the sum of $31,376.74, covered in 21 reports and 15 cables for 655 individuals in Palestine and vicinity, 44 charitable institutions in Palestine and 40 individuals in Europe.

Mayor Kiel, of St. Louis, Mo., has appointed Mr. Samuel J. Russek as a member of the board to administer the Mullanphy emigrant relief fund, which now amounts to over $1,000,000. Mr. Russek is a retired merchant and was at one time president of the Associated Jewish Charities.

In the special train, which took Governor Dunne and his staff to the San Francisco Exposition, were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Karpen, of Chicago. Mr. Karpen is chairman of the Illinois State Commission, which has perfected the arrangements for celebrating Illinois Day at the Exposition on July 24.

The Chicago Hebrew Institute has engaged Lou Berger as assistant physical director. Berger has been a great factor in football and baseball at the universities of Wisconsin and Chicago. He has been a member of championship teams for many years. He will take full charge of all the teamwork in addition to assisting in the teaching of the classes.

Sixty-five Russian immigrants with their families, who have been living in Paris, arrived in New York on the steamer Rochambeau from Bordeaux last week. They were taken in at the Hebrew Immigrant Aid and Sheltering Society, where they will remain until they have sufficient funds to proceed to their relatives in various parts of the country.

The trustees of the B'nai B'rith Jewish Orphan Asylum, at Cleveland, Ohio, have voted unanimously to build a new modern orphanage on the cottage plan either in Cleveland or its suburbs, at a cost of $1,200,000. The new institution will house 500 children. As soon as the new buildings are completed it is proposed to open a branch at some point in District No. 6, which District Grand Lodge No. 6 shall select.

The patriotism shown by the Austrian Jews and the bravery of Jewish soldiers in the field have in no way influenced the Christian-Social newspapers in Vienna to suspend their anti-Semitic propaganda. The Reichspost, which is under the influence of the Archbishop of Vienna, and the Ostdeutsche Rundschau, in particular, are conspicuous by the vehemence of their agitation.

A Supreme Court Justice in Brooklyn has denied the application of Mrs. Mary Stock for the release of her 20-year-old daughter, who is now an inmate of the Wayside Home. The petitioner alleged that her daughter's life was made miserable because she was the only Jewess in the institution. The girl was committed at the request of her mother, who alleged that she associated with bad companions.

It was announced in London, England, last week that the Hon. Miss Stanley, youngest daughter of Lord Sheffield, leader of the Congregationalist Church in England, had adopted the Jewish faith, the faith of the Hon. Edwin Samuel Montagu, to whom she is to be married. Mr. Montagu's father, the late Lord Swaythling, at the time of his death the foremost orthodox Jew of England, provided in his will that no son or daughter who married outside the Jewish faith should share in his vast estate.

The Student's Union of Switzerland decided to extend assistance, financial and otherwise, to all Jewish students who were connected with Swiss universities when the war broke out. It was also made public that the coveted prize of 100,000 marks which is offered by the University of Goettigen for the highest merit in mathematics was won by a Russian Jew, Shoefinkel. This student is at present held in a concentration camp in Germany as an alien enemy, and the money was deposited in his name in one of the banks of Germany.

A private conference was held recently at The Hague of prominent Dutch Jews of all shades of opinion to discuss the question of the extensive Jewish emigration which is likely to set in after the end of the present war. The conference appointed a committee presided over by Professor J. Oppenheim, Councillor of State, which was empowered to place itself into communication with leading coreligionists in various countries with the view to common action being undertaken.

According to dispatches received in London, England, on the 15th inst., Grand Duke Nicholas told the Jewish soldiers in his command just before the fall of Lemberg that one of the chief aims in the struggle with Turkey was to restore Palestine to the Jews. He is quoted by the journal Neueste Nachrichten as having issued an order to this effect. "We will therefore," says the order, "pave the way for you to join the army of the Caucasus. It now depends on you what treatment your race and coreligionists will receive during the war and after. Reconquer Palestine for yourselves and a new day of glory will dawn for Jewry." Jewish soldiers in the Grand Duke's command have been transferred to the army of the Caucasus.

The Jews in the Palestinian colonies have been waging a bitter warfare against the onslaughts of a species of locusts which threatened to devastate their fields and vineyards. The plague has been most extensive from the beginning, covering the whole range of the Jewish settlements both in Judea and in Galilee, and the means of fighting it were most primitive. Thousands upon thousands of men, women and children were pressed into the service of catching these destructive creatures and killing them. The government has taken a hand in the matter and compelled many Jews from Jaffa and Jerusalem and other cities to go to the colonies and assist in the work. In some colonies, after the locusts had been successfully cleared, a new swarm came from the neighboring Arab farms and the whole work had to be started all over again.

The People's Relief Committee for Jewish War Sufferers.

In order to arouse greater interest among the Jewish masses of this country, in the distress and suffering which has overtaken the numerous Jewish settlements in the European war zone and to extend the work of relief to such circles as have not yet been reached, the People's Relief Committee for Jewish Sufferers has just been organized. The committee, which intends to make an especial appeal to the working class in this and other cities of the country, is made up of fifty representative residents, communal workers and professional people of the East Side. Congressman Meyer London is chairman of the committee; Mr. Sholom Asch, the noted novelist and playwright, is vice-chairman; Mr. Isaac Goldberg, 171 East Broadway, is treasurer, and Bernard G. Richards is secretary.

At a meeting held last (Thursday) evening, July 22, in the Forward Building, 175 East Broadway, the organization was perfected, and plans were adopted for the collection of funds. Steps will also be taken for the calling of a conference of organizations with a view of interesting local lodges, societies and trade unions in the relief work. Among the members of the committee are Dr. S. Ellsberg, Gedalia Bublick, Dr. Fanny Dembo, Rabbi S. Sokolsky, Dr. Samuel Joseph, Louis Lipsky, Dr. J. L. Magnes, Charles Minikes, Prof. Isaac A. Hourwich, Jacob Panken, Dr. B. Hoffman, Leon S. Moisseff, J. Entin, Dr. Charles Schitlowsky, Rabbi Meyer Berlin, Abraham Goldberg, Dr. Henry Moskowitz, Herman Bernstein, Bernard Semel, S. Tau and Meyer Brown. The temporary office of the committee is at 108 Second avenue.

Jewish Chautauqua's Summer Course.

The Jewish Chautauqua Society is now holding a summer course in synagogue and social service in New York city.

This new department was undertaken in response to the many requests to meet the need in this special sphere of Jewish activity. As the society has achieved such distinction and success for religious school teachers through its annual assemblies, it was decided to undertake similar work on these lines for congregations, rabbis, who are members of social welfare committees, and interested in the questions of social reform; social workers, who wished to extend their experiences and increase their efficiency by further study, and the volunteer workers who wished to acquaint themselves with methods and standards used in modern philanthropy.

The opening session of the school was held in New York city on Monday morning, July 12, and will continue until July 25, inclusive.

Addresses were made by Hon. Abram I. Elkus, president of the Jewish Chautauqua Society, who spoke of the practical phases of this new department, and his address held the attention of his audience, which was composed of men and women prominent in social and synagogue service work. He was followed by Dr. Henry Berkowitz, chancellor of the society, who spoke of the conditions and purposes underlying the new department, and mentioned that in the earlier assemblies, the Chautauqua had called together the first meetings in this country of Jewish social workers.

Dr. William Rosenau, vice-chancellor and dean of the faculty of the correspondence school, was also present and spoke of the co-operation of the synagogue and the Federation of Charities. There was registered at the opening meeting, forty-six students, enrolled as follows: Nineteen from New York city; six from Philadelphia; six from Baltimore, Md.; one from Albany, N. Y.; one from Buffalo, N. Y.; three from Louisville, Ky.; one from Providence, R. I.; one from South Bethlehem, Pa.; one from Lafayette, Ind.; one from Atlanta, Ga.; two from Rosenhayn, N. J.; one from Woodbine, N. J.; one from Brooklyn, N. Y., and one from Pleasantville, N. Y.

The directors of the summer course are Rev. Sidney Goldstein, of New York city, and Dr. Boris D. Bogen, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Dr. Bogen's first lecture on "The Extent and Scope of Jewish Philanthropy" elicited a lively discussion and volume of questions from the students.

Dr. Sidney Goldstein spoke of the social service work in the religious school, in the congregations and the training of volunteers, with an outline course in diagnosis treatment and agencies.

Mr. I. Edwin Goldwasser gave an enthusiastic talk on the "Public School in Social Service." Other speakers were Mrs. William Einstein, whose topic was, "Widowed Mothers' Pensions"; Dr. Ludwig Bernstein, on "The Modern Jewish Child's Caring Methods and Ideals"; Rabbi Harry S. Lewis, on "The Synagogue and Social Service."

Students' meetings were arranged in sub-divisions and groups for the field work, led by Rabbi Goldstein, Drs. Bogen, Bernstein and others. Each student who enrolled designated the phase of philanthropy and social service or institution in which he wished to do special field work, and a certificate will be awarded to each student who satisfactorily completes the summer course.

The chairman of the committee on the summer course is Dr. Lee K. Frankel, of New York city, who is one of the most interested members of the Board of Directors of the Chautauqua Society.

It is announced that the Chautauqua will add to its curriculum in the correspondence school, two additional courses for religious school teachers, one on social service for the religious school teacher, and one for congregations, so that the layman may acquaint himself with a thorough knowledge in social service and thus endeavor to link up the synagogue with social service and establish social centres in congregations throughout the country.

of the utmost significance. Already with only two nurses to do the work the effect has been keenly felt. The following is but the merest outline of the work carried on by the two nurses since March, 1913:

(1) School inspection for the detection and treatment of cases of infectious eye diseases, especial attention being given to trachoma, which is abnormally prevalent. Out of 4,525 school children examined under the direction of Dr. Ticha 1,257 or 27.8 per cent. were infected. These cases are not only treated, but the parents are instructed as to the manner of treatment. The mothers, once they realize the nature of the disease which, though easily cured in the early stages, yields less readily later and often leads to impaired sight or even to blindness, are only too anxious to co-operate. During the first year about 10 per cent. of the children treated have been cured.

(2) Another important aspect of their work is the supervision of midwives—a most important thing for the welfare of both mother and child. So far, no case of infection has occurred among the confinements handled.

(3) They maintain a social settlement much like the Nurses' Settlement in New York, where patients are treated, and girls' clubs in hygiene conducted. Often the homes of acute cases are visited and the necessary relief given.

Future Needs.

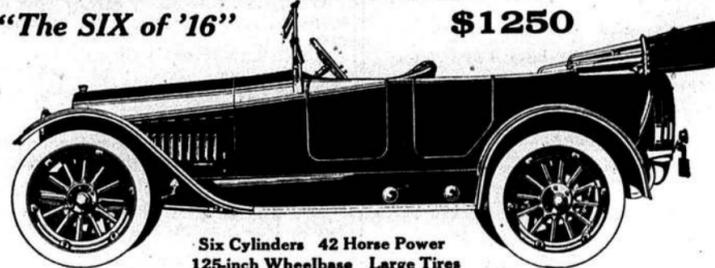

The importance of the visiting nurses in special campaigns such as those against tuberculosis and infant mortality has been definitely established both here and abroad. Education must be the password of public health campaigns of the future. Education as to the modes of transmission and control of malaria has already resulted in greatly abating the nuisance and in a movement for obtaining a proper water supply. The spread of information regarding the danger of excreta in spreading typhoid, cholera and other intestinal diseases must lead to proper disposal of the human waste. An awakening to the importance of cleanliness, care of the hygienic conditions of the person, the danger of direct transmission of disease from the sick to the healthy, will lead to a reduction of tuberculosis, infant mortality

Inexperienced management, an incapacitated individual or death, may prevent the individual trustee (executor, administrator or guardian) from carrying out your wishes. The result would be failure or the replacement of the appointee by some one not necessarily in sympathy with your purposes. Thirty-four years of experience is at the disposal of those who trust the management of their lifetime accumulations to the Metropolitan Trust Company. and other infectious diseases. We need the laboratories for diagnosing and the hospitals for treating disease, but we need our district nurses and other educational agencies to teach the people how disease may be prevented. Already steps have been taken in all these three directions. They are, however, only the first steps; the main work is yet to be done before Jerusalem as a city and Palestine as a country will compare favorably with other cities and countries of the civilized world.

Last year a commission was appointed in this country for the purpose of investigating the conditions in Palestine. Dr. Rosenau, one of the foremost sanitarians in this country, was a member of this commission and last summer he set out for Palestine. It would have been a great good fortune had he gotten there and made the sanitary survey he had intended. Unfortunately the war broke out and he was forced to return, leaving his task undone.

Effect of War on Sanitary Condition of Palestine.

One cannot help but wonder what the effect of the war will be on the work of the international health of fice and the general hygienic and sanitary conditions of the country.

Little news filters through, but we may take it for granted that the International Health Bureau is no more. Thanks to Nathan Straus and the Hadassah, the Health Bureau and Nurses' Settlement are on the grounds attempting to do whatever possible. Poverty and misery must increase as a result of the catastrophe. With it will undoubtedly come a rise in morbidity and a greater prevalence of all infectious diseases. At a time when people are struggling to keep from starvation one heeds but little the danger of disease. But it is just then that the ravages of diseases are at their worst. Weakened physically, broken mentally, herded together in an unhealthy environment, an epidemic is imminent. There is more urgent need now than ever for thorough sanitary control. The tragedy of Serbia is before our eyes.

The vivid description of conditions as they exist given by Wertheimer can hardly tend to allay the fear. A few of his remarks may well bear repetition. "In the cities, and in Jerusalem in particular, there was no work, there was no money, there was no hope of relief. It is only necessary to realize that nine-tenths, if not more, of the activities of Jerusalem are supported by foreign capital, to understand the demoralization that confronted them. Hospitals, asylums, schools homes for the aged and insane had no means of continuing and some had already closed when I arrived. . . . Gaunt frames of the sick and starving were lying tier on tier on hunks of on the filthy earthen floors of little black holes that could not be called rooms."

And so with one stroke the splendid beginning was nipped in the bud. But this war is bound to end and when we begin to clear away the ruins it will be well to remember that the Canal could never have been built

Keeping the Schools True.

A school incident which is of keen interest to Jews took place recently in Amityville, L. I. The village, judging from the incident, gets its name ironically. It seems that one of the members of the graduating class of the local high school was a Catholic who objected to the holding of the commencement ceremonies in the local M. E. Church. The Board of Education heard and recognized her protest, ordering the exercises to be held in a theatre instead. This angered the other members of the class, four of whom deliberately stayed away from the exercises, going instead with their preceptress to a house party. Apparently the preceptress was the life of the revolt and the board has now summoned her to answer to charges of defiance of the board's rulings. Jews everywhere will admit the justice of the Catholic girl's plea. What business has a school holding its exercises in a church? For that matter, why should the exercises have been held in a theatre? It would seem that the proper place to hold them would have been the school building. However, in the absence of good judgment on the part of the board, or perhaps because of limited facilities at the school, none can question the right and duty, even of the Catholic girl, to protest, as a member of the class, against the use of a building devoted to religious teachings differing radically from her own, for a school function, even for not as important an affair as a commencement. This principle cannot be deviated from in our schools, however remote the religious effect resulting or however cordial the intent in the offer to put the building to such use. The example of the Catholic girl might be held up to our children in the Sabbath schools as a living lesson of moral courage. We wonder how many Jewish children, finding themselves in a similar situation, would have dared to do what she did. Of course, the cases are not exactly analogous, for usually where our Jewish children are so outnumbered, their own family as a rule constitutes the only Jewish members of the community, whereas there are probably many Catholics in Amityville who stood back of her, not mentioning the local priest who probably was behind the whole thing.—The Sentinel.

"The world has learned, in the hard school of failure, that charity is a double-edged sword. It often defeats its own ends. It always-brings more misery in its wake, if misapplied, than blessing. A great responsibility is involved in the dispensing of charity. Individual charity is, therefore, in most cases, of evil. Organized charity alone may hope successfully to cope with the great task."—Jewish Spectator.

The death within the last few days at Riga of Dr. J. L. Kantor removes from the field of Jewish literary action the man who was mainly instrumental in establishing the first Hebrew daily journal. His Ha-Yom did not have a long and lusty life—it survived barely two years—but the fact that it did exist for this length of time deserves to be recalled with gratitude in marking his departure to that bourn whence no traveler has ever returned.

Herr von Bodelschwingh, of the German National Defense League, declared that "Dernburg, who has been betraying Germany's cause in America," is a Jew." Tut nichts, der Jude wird verbrannt! Even if, as in the case of Dr. Dernberg, the "Jew" is only the grandson of a Jew, he nevertheless remains a Jew to anti-Semitic minds. What surprises us in connection with the statement cited is that a German should have uttered it. We thought that at all events since the outbreak of the present war there was no more anti-Semitic feeling or sentiment in the Fatherland.

The Statesman, an English literary weekly, declares that "Preaching is a method of forcing our individuality down other people's throats. It is the most satisfactory way of expressing our want of sympathy with our neighbors. Sermons, in other words, are in great measure just bullying." This is putting the matter rather bluntly and roughly, we must admit, but the outspokenness of the words quoted does not rob them of the grain of truth in them. Apparently those to whom traditional Judaism is the rod and the staff of their life must have realized the force of words such as the foregoing, for their communal and religious economy had an abundance of room for the teacher, but little or none at all for the preacher.

The editor of The Jewish Advocate, with the recent Zionist conventions in mind, "opines" that Boston in 1915 will bear to the future course of the Jewries of the world the same relation that Basle in 1897 bore to the Zionistic movement. This statement he makes having the projected American Jewish Congress in view. If our friends the Zionists are sincere in their wish to have such a body, altogether democratic in composition, and results, and there is no reason whereof we know to cast doubt upon their openness of purpose, let them take up the task of bringing such a congress into being. Proceeding from the premises they lay down, it is safe to say, perhaps, that their congress will be more truly representative than the conference the American Jewish Committee is calling.

In a letter to our local contemporary, in which he deals as only he can with the problem of summer religion, Rabbi Simon R. Cohen, of Brooklyn, delivers himself of the following remarkable bit of "self-criticism":

Of course I desire to say right here that, so far as attendance at my temple is concerned, I have no complaint to make as I always have large congregations during the winter, but I am also candid to confess that this is due to the fact that the sermons and the subjects discussed in my pulpit attract rather the desire on the part of the worshippers to derive spiritual comfort from the services themselves, which, from the standpoint of religion is not at all satisfactory.

The learned pulpit orator from the Borough of Churches declares further on his "inspiring" epistle that he is willing to permit the Holy One, blessed be He! to have a summer vacation. We think we know why. If the Almighty, has had to bear the "incense offered at this altar" in the shape of sermons and subjects that attract all through the long winter season God (and we say this in a spirit totally free from any irreverence) is amply in need of a respite for a few short weeks.

AN ERRAND OF MERCY

THE week in which falls the anniversary of the destruction of Jerusalem is ever a time of sorrow and mourning for our people. This year Tisha b'Ab takes on a heightened significance, for it commemorates the trials of our ancestors and serves at the same time markedly to call attention to the suffering which is the present portion of our coreligionists in the war zones.

In our issue for last week we published a full account of the new work which the Rev. Dr. Bernard Drachman and Mr. Morris Engelman have undertaken on behalf of the Central Committee for the Relief of Jews Suffering Through the War. These devoted communal workers are now on the journey which will, ere it is ended, have brought them from the Atlantic seaboard to the Golden Gate and up and down the length and breadth of our land.

Their purpose in thus traveling through the United States is, as our readers well know, to set in motion the machinery whereby a large and substantial sum will be realized here for the benefit of the stricken Jews in Europe and Asia. We have heretofore carefully reported from time to time the status of the collections to this end. A reasonably large amount has been gathered together by the various agencies charged with this important duty. Much still remains, alas! to be done.

We hope, indeed, that the mission on which Dr. Drachman and Mr. Engelman have set out with such singleness of purpose and in the olden Jewish spirit of hallowing the name of the Most High will be gloriously crowned with success. The cause which has enlisted their devotion is worthy of it.

Nay, more; it is the bounden duty of the Jews of the United States who are fortunately placed above the horrors of war to contribute liberally of their substance to the relief of the widow, the orphan, the wounded and the homeless in all the countries affected by the tremendous debacle now raging, if not ravaging, the continent of Europe. Our community has not up to now done its duty in this respect. But the time for the righting of the record has not yet irrevocably passed. The opportunity is still before the Jews of America to act and to act Jewishly. May Dr. Drachman and Mr. Engelman return from their wanderings with the message of hope and gladness on their lips.

Mr. Benjamin J. Rosenthal, of Chicago, is the author of an informing and well-written pamphlet on "The Need of the Hour: An American Merchant Marine." Specifically, of course, the booklet is devoid of Jewish interest, but it has an unmistakable American appeal. As such we cordially commend it to those of our readers who wish to examine the matter of which it treats.

All the vehement protestations of all the rabbis in this country and elsewhere throughout the Jewish world that the ministry is a noble calling and profession and should be valued and popular as such will not bring this result about if our rabbis do not themselves set a good example by their lives and actions in this direction. We hear much even now that the Torah is not a spade to dig with, yet we do not find that many rabbis, except some of those whose way of life is in strict accord with the undying traditions of our holy religion, carry out this precept into practice. If the calling of the ministry entails sacrifice on him who embraces it, if the rabbi can make himself a tower of light to his people, because he is in very truth intellectually, morally, religiously, inspirationally a tower and not a truncated bush, then his calling and profession will soon be restored to their pristine nobility, influence and popularity. A river cannot rise higher than its source; the layman's conception of the ministry in its functioning and prerogatives is conditioned upon the estimate and the work of the rabbis themselves. Let them, then, see to it that the layman is inspired by the example of their devotion.

It gives us pleasure to state that amid all the war comments with which the editorial page of The American Israelite has been disfigured for some time past space was found in a recent issue for the expression of the sentiments of our Cincinnati contemporary on the subject of the coming congress. True, our contemporary fortified itself behind the views of a number of estimable gentlemen whose names and activity are commonly associated with the division of our people known as upholders of "American" Judaism. But now we know where The American Israelite stands—in a manner of speaking. That journal opposes a congress, but is willing to have a conference called so that Jews as a unit may at the close of the present war secure an amelioration in the condition of their abject and persecuted brethren abroad from the powers of Europe. We little thought that such a gulf separates those who desire a congress to be held from those who wish to confine the work of the approaching meeting to what may innocuously be called a conference. We believed that both sides in this discussion had the same end in view and that the advocates of the congress idea were thoroughgoing in their democratic insistence on adequate representation for all elements in our Jewry. If the autocratic conveners of the Washington meeting now are able to rely upon the aid the representatives of "American" Judaism can supply to them, then we have little doubt that the result of their "great stroke of statesmanship" will leave them thoroughly discredited and unrecognized, and the association of which they expect so much utterly condemned and overthrown by the large part of the real Jewry in America.

THE VOICE OUT OF THE FIRE

השמע עם קול אלקים מדבר מתוך האש כאשר שמעת אתה ויהי: "Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of the fire, as thou hast heard, and live?" (Deut. iv, 38.)

IN sweet accents does the prophetic message of Consolation reach the ears and the heart of the sorrowing nation year by year, after it has donned the sack-cloth of despair and wallowed in the grey ashes of despondency. "Comfort ye, comfort ye, my people—speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem, and cry unto her that her warfare is ended!" These words fall upon the soul of every true Jew as dew from heaven falls upon the languishing rose; for just as the dew revives the color of the flowers, so does this comforting message revive the hope of Israel. Israel will live—Israel must live! For Israel is eternal—even as God is eternal. "And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed: for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it!"

By a coincidence, this same abiding hope of the survival and eternity of Israel is voiced repeatedly in this week's Parsha. Only, here a sterner note is struck: one misses here the softer tones of the Prophet. God is spoken of as warning, threatening and punishing; the dread appearance of God on Sinai's height is appealed to as emphasizing, as heavily underscoring the dark fate in store for backsliding Israel. Still, the hope is held forth that ultimately after many trials and tribulations, God would save the people from utter extinction. For Israel possesses, to a superlative degree, the power of survival; for—says Moses—"Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking out of the midst of fire as thou hast heard, and live?"

We need not think that these sterner words are the less comforting because ringing with the sounds of dread and awe. We should rather regard the prophetic message and the pentateuchal message as complementing each other. The prophet interprets God's voice in its gentler inflections; Moses interprets it as the Voice that speaks out of the Fire. It is easy to recognize the Voice of God when speaking out of the quieter moods of nature—out of the purling brook or the caroling bird; out of the gentle zephyr and the laughing child. It is not so easy to recognize the Voice of God when it speaks out of the noisier moods of nature—out of the heaving billow and roaring thunder; out of the deadly cyclone and the destructive earthquake. God weaves gay garlands of roses for our head, and our heart is filled with gratitude; but when iron fetters are forged for our feet, we fail to hear the music of His words in the clanking of the iron. God irradiates our life with the light of joy and happiness, and we re-echo His goodness in our hymns of praise; but when lightnings flash about us, when disaster like a devouring flame eats up our substance, when destructive fires spread around about us and deprive us of that which is dearest to us—do we hear "the Voice of God speaking out of the Fire?"

But Israel—we are told—heard the Voice out of the Fire and lived. The secret of Israel's survival is its ability to perceive the presence of God in its national misfortune. What people was there on earth so sorely tried as Israel? Whom did the fires of persecution scorch and sear so fatally as Israel? Yet, out of the Fires of Persecution our people heard the Voice of God. Each new blaze of hatred, each new blow of enmity, was to Israel a new revelation. Israel saw God's mercy in the dispensations of God's justice. Israel saw in the Hand that hurteth the Hand that healeth. Hence Israel's unshaken optimism. Though the blows rained thick and fast upon its bent body; though the thunderclouds hurled their arrows upon the exiled people, though the very foundations of the earth seemed to be crumbling away beneath the driven nation, Israel hoped on, prayed on and—sustained by the Voice that spoke out of the Fire—lived on!

For Israel in the midst of the flames of persecution remembered that early Fire on Sinai's height out of which God spoke of law and justice. It was the Eshdas, the Fire of the Law, the flame of Faith, the ardor of religion. When a devastating fire breaks out on a prairie, spreading too fast and furious to be extinguished, men blaze a wide trail through the prairie-grass in order to raise a barrier against the onswEEPing fiery tide. They fight fire with fire. They pit flame against flame. A similar method did the Jewish people employ through the dark centuries: it fought the fire of persecution with the fire of faith; it pitted against the blaze of hatred the burning religious enthusiasm of the Jewish heart. And then God's Voice spoke out of the Fire doubly: both out of the Fire of hatred that flashed within the sinister bosom of the foe and out of the fire of faith that glowed within the furnace of Israel's soul.

Rightly did Moses point to God's unique manner of revelation in the Fire as the source of Israel's miraculous endurance. It were wrong to interpret Moses' saying in the sense that God revealed himself to Israel alone. This would not agree with the teachings of History. Did not our Rabbis too say that God spoke to "seventy races in seventy tongues?" But the emphasis in our text does not lie on "Did ever people hear the voice of God speaking"—of course, it did; the emphasis lies on "Did ever people hear the Voice of God speaking out of the Fire." No other peoples did that as much as Israel. Other peoples heard the Voice of God speaking out of glimpses of the Beautiful or sparks of the True; but neither Art nor Science could secure survival for any people. But Israel alone heard the Voice of God speaking out of the Fire of Faith—and lived.

In this world of death and decay, neither men nor nations can live once their vital force is spent. There is one law of change for beast and man, for buds and blades, for plants and peoples. The Prophet expresses this thought most beautifully when he says in his consoling message: The grass withereth—surely the people is grass! Ah, but in the midst of all these changes there are some things that cannot pass away: The grass withereth—but the word of our God shall stand forever! Therefore Israel, the recipient upholder and apostle of the Divine Word must live, too, by the sustaining power of that Word. Or as Moses says in the Parsha: Ye that cleave unto the Lord are alive every one of you this day.

That surely was a terrifying loss to Judaism and consequently a great gain to Catholicism when the noble scion of a wealthy house, himself the son of one of our chief communal workers and leaders, was married in a Roman chapel the other Shabbos morning. Meyer Robert Guggenheim thought, perhaps, he was specially hallowing the day by the deed he performed thereon. We note with interest the biography of the young gentleman, a college graduate, of course. "He is a member of two clubs—the Bulldog Club and the Kennel Club."

The four members of the Bayonne Independent Hebrew League whose bank accounts were attached by an irate and persistent creditor desirous of securing payment for the dinner he supplied the association will not receive much sympathy for their plight from members of the community. In such a case who will venture to assert that the "punishment" did not fit the "crime"? If one of these miscegenated organizations wishes to dine and wine its benighted adherents let those who supply the "piper" pay that insistent functionality.

The Christian Work, a local religious publication, evidently believes that the "millennium" is at hand. Otherwise why should it print the following "choice bit of news" in its latest issue?

An awakening to Jewish evangelism is apparent in America. The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church has directed its Home Mission Board to cooperate with any Presbyterians willing to undertake missions among Jews. Mr. Henry Hellyer, a graduate of Princeton Seminary and an earnest Hebrew Christian, has been engaged to direct this work, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Presbyterian missions to Jews have been organized in both Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Mr. Lichtenstein, who is preaching Christ to Jews in St. Louis, has opened work among the 40,000 Jews in Kansas City also. With him is associated as field agent Mr. William Lowenthal, a Jewish traveling man who was converted about a year ago. Mr. Lowenthal has been telling the story of his conversion in the churches of the Southwest. Missions to the Jews of Birmingham, Memphis and New Orleans are also in operation. In the last named city $30,000 is to be expended in the erection of suitable buildings. The Hebrew Christian Alliance of America has been organized with the Rev. Dr. Rohold, of Toronto, as its president. Mr. Rohold is at the head of the Hebrew Christian Synagogue of that city, a flourishing church composed wholly of Christian Jews. A synagogue of the same type is to be opened in Montreal also.

"A good fight is never for its day alone — it is for many days; and it is not alone for him who bears its utmost stress. No man can live his own life bravely and quietly and not be an energy of social good, virtue proceeding forth from him to heal some brother's wounded heart."

He is so infinitely blessed, that every perception of His blissful presence imparts a vital gladness to the heart. Every degree of approach to Him is, in the same proportion, a degree of happiness. And I often think that were He always present to our mind, as we are present to Him, there would be no pain, nor sense of misery.—Susannah Wesley.

The Nabob's Son.*

(From the Hungarian of Edward Sas. Translated by William N. Loew.)

He was a hero. None had this opined When to the trenches he had been assigned. Wasn't he a Nabob's son? Fair fortune's pet, Who spent more time his fingernails to mind Than other human beings do to get Their daily bread? Howe'er the dawn of great times moved him, too; The trench, it seems, created him anew. He proved himself a man who cut such swath As any other lad who never had Seen Budapest, who but Kun's† plains beheld Before him spread; 'Twas he who loudest "Forward!" yelled.

Then came a mighty storm and he was lost; Swept—who knows where—by the dread holocaust. Is he dead or alive? A prisoner Of war? An hundred were found who aver They saw him fall. Where had he been interred? In one great common grave was sepulchred His form, all dainty, neat and delicate?

I'll have raked up all of the land of great Galicia, the Carpath Mountains each Peak, pass and cave and vale my search must reach; All giant, common graves I'll have laid bare; Terrific depths I shall have mined with care, I'll be a miner of paternal love; Must I for years live on bleak heights above, Or dwell below in some dread wilderness; And may the cost be all that I possess; I'm bound to find him, bound to bring him home. I'll clean him of his pall of lime and loam, I'll build a stately tomb; its mighty dome Shall reach the sky and loudly shall proclaim To all the world my dead son's deathless fame.

And he went forth. He roamed all o'er the waste, Deserted lands in which horror had placed Its iron heel on all green spots of grass And crushed all life into a dreadful mass; Roamed over plains where death such seeds had sown To which a springtide's dawn remains unknown, And where mute villages to heaven appeal While they resignedly the curses feel Of their forsaken state; the courtyards bare, Smoke-tainted wrecks and ruins everywhere Depopulated 's the day, but all the more Alive 's the night when shades and spectres soar Over the reedy marsh, in crown of trees— By shrapnel torn and cut—and never cease. To soar and soar and each other salute.— On fields all bleak, with aching eye—acute His eagerness—the many crosses scans For that one name. Throughout the wide expanse Of all that zone his workmen toil with zeal, Ope caves, move rocks to find if they conceal Whom he doth seek. Heart-rending is his plea; Big, common graves, oh, give him back to me! Alas! his dead has disappeared for aye!

One frosty, dreary night when into gray Mist turns the breath, to squallid hamlet nigh, The feeble, hoary man sat down, his eye Beholds a half-ope grave which on that day His workmen reached. Again earth did not pay Its debt. Will on tomorrow he again His eager search have to pursue in vain? His mole-like burrowings come all to naught?

*This beautiful poem was read at the March meeting of the Petofi Society, one of the three great literary bodies of Hungary, the other two being the Academy and the Kisfaludy Society, at Budapest. The inspiration to the poem was the reported disappearance of the son of the Hon. Adolph Ullman, Knight of the Order of Leopold, etc., and member of the House of Lords of Hungary. †Kun, a district of the Magyar Lowland.

Not one bright shining star the night had brought; —Long since hath turned from here God's guiding eye!— Portentous fate's dull murmurs slowly die: The blind night re-echoed with cannon's roar, Which had grown faint and fainter more and more, As if this region now would only dream Of war—then silence comes which reigns supreme.

Soft, solemn peace, the battlefield's calm. Sainly. And then a something moves. There! Faintly A sound's heard. From the hollow of the grave Lime-whitened steps his son. The old man thought An apparition had his fancy caught. He tries to rise; he has no strength. At last His will succeeds and standing there aghast He stretches forth his arms; but when he tries To speak a spell his power of speech denies. He falls 'upon his knees as one praying devout, From heart and lip then comes a joyous shout, And pain and bliss alike betrays his call! "My son! My son! My darling boy; my all!"

Yes, it was he, the soldier who was dead. So sweet, so grave the smile which overspread His face. That look of his which sees the hearts, So serious, yet which sweet grace imparts, This lowliness which is sublime withal: Are not men's who dwell on this earthly ball, 'Tis given to us when we at last go home, And our souls pass the gates to heaven's dome.

Midst churchlike stillness then the hero said: "Why seekest, father, me who I am dead? I'm not with thee, although I know that still I'm in thy heart. This fair Carpathian hill Encloses now my corpse. For which I gave My life, my native land, is now my grave. 'Tis bliss to rest in this great, common tomb, And fairer, sweeter will be the perfume Of flowers which shall spring here from my dust Than from a grave where o'er my mortal crust A weighty, marble stone is placed, and why Should I within a mausoleum lie?

There are indeed more worthy lads than I, Although they 'neath a straw thatched roof were born. They too, with me, within their hearts had borne Their love undying for our fatherland, As if dear brothers they, I clasped their hand, Their blood and mine commingled in its flow. We, who in this grave sleep here below, We all, thy children are, dear father, know. For all of you at home, the young, the old, For all of you to fight we had enrolled, And all who fought deserve your loving tears And words of praise. Give them your cheers, sincerest, Blessed martyrs of your cause, who fought your fray. We ask not for a more gorgeous parade Than that when we into our tomb were laid. To Kings there had not been such homage paid, No man was e'er thus to his grave conveyed: A squadron honor guard, a prayer, and a volley fired, our dead hearts e'en expand:— Our comrades rising, then with eagerness From our graves to new triumphs press. We did the sowing, theirs the harvest is! Most beauteous are the soldiers' obsequies.

Such was my own.—This is my regiment, Dear father, pray, do no longer lament, That 'mongst my comrades I rest be content. The beaming, snow white figure raised his hand And tremblingly the old man looked up, and Amazed and awed,—bedazzled with the sight Beholds how o'er the sky had spread a bright, Resplendent light, a myriad stars aflame. It seemed all of the universe became One temple with its boundless dome illumed, Became a crypt the like of which presumed E'en can not be and which no wealth can build. Lo! from the common grave with corpses filled A lustrous ladder rose into the sky, Such on which Jacob had ascended high; He almost faints from dizziness when he Makes an attempt its pinnacle to see. A thousand heroes on that ladder press

Upward to take the heaven by storm and stress, A mighty, stalwart invincible horde. His son's ahead, a flaming cherub-sword In hand, to the celestial sheen within The heavens above, he leads his rustic kin To Him, the Lord of Host's heavenly throne, Amidst the song of Seraphs who entone Hosannahs! and death's reign is overthrown. And through and through the father's heart is stirred. His painful, still all blissful sobs are heard. And then the gates of heaven slowly close.— Lo! in the East another light arose: It is the dawn all steeped in blood it breaks, The dawn their own blood gained, and there awakes An animated breeze blowing faintly.— A radiant dawn. A battlefield's morn. Sainly.

LITTLE FELLA DOES WRONG

(Written for THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

*He's up there, crying in the dark:
Th' little Chap's done wrong,
He's won a strict demerit mark
That's extra black an' long.
I hear him cryin' on th' bed;
As if his heart would break.
'Twas something Pretty Muv'er said
That caused th' extra ache.*

(You bad boy. Mother is very displeased and disappointed. And you were to grow up a fine, big man, like your Daddy, and become President or something. Naughty, naughty. I'm ashamed of you. To think a boy of mine would do a thing like that. Tease the poor kitty and throw him on the flypaper! Whatever possessed you to think of that? It's cruel, Sonny Boy. Boys who put kitty cats on flypaper will surely come to some bad end.)

*His yellow curls are damp with tears,
His red cheeks burn with fire.
His slippered pride is past its fears:
But not parental ire.
To think that Dad should spank him—oh!
'Tis degradation deep.
And Dad—well, if you're bound to know—
I've joined—and helped him weep.*

(Son, what is this Mother tells me? You took Tabby Cat and put her on flypaper. How many times have I told you not to harm poor dumb animals. They are unable to defend themselves and you—a coward—so big and strong—you impose upon the poor little kitten. We will have to send you away to some school. That's what we'll do—a place where they keep bad boys and make them behave. Now, sir, if I ever hear of your doing anything like this again, I'll use twice as much slipper.)

*Th' Littul Fella's grief is such
The wide world seems a foe.
And slippers have no gentle touch
In Daddy's hands, you know.
But—hark! a step upon the stair;
A whisper at his side.
It's Gran'ma, bending near him, there,
With arms in which to hide.*

(S-h-h-h! Not a word, Little Fellow. I'm not supposed to come up to your room. If Daddy knew I was here he'd make me leave immediately. Don't cry. He didn't realize what he was doing. Bless his little heart! And they expect a mere baby to have all the reasoning power of the grown-ups. The horrid kitten scratches, too. Who wants an old cat around? Don't cry. There, there, stop crying. See, Grandma has brought her boy up a piece of cake wrapped in her handkerchief.)

Frying Fish in Oil.

This method of cooking fish requires the utmost care. It is more important that the fish should be very carefully dried and that the oil should be at the right temperature. To test this throw in a small piece of bread, and if it browns in less than a minute the oil has reached the correct heat. When the oil is perfectly still and a blue smoke rises, the temperature may also be considered right. The fish must be well covered in oil and the pieces must not come in contact with one another.

Clean the fish, then cut it as required and dry it very thoroughly. Beat up an egg, mix some flour, pepper and salt on a plate, dip the fish into this seasoning, then into the egg, and when the oil has reached the right temperature fry the fish a golden brown. Place it on soft paper on a basket lid to drain. When the oil has cooled, strain it, pour it into a jar, cover it and it will be ready for use another time. It can be used again for fish only.

To economize the eggs, mix a little water with them.

To utilize any scraps of fried fish, heat them in melted butter, flavored to taste.

To Bake Fish.

Clean and dry the fish very thoroughly, put it on a baking tin, greased with a little oil or butter, sprinkling pepper and salt over it. Cover with a well-greased sheet of paper; bake from 10 minutes to half an hour, according to the size of the fish. Remove the paper and serve the fish with chopped parsley and the strained liquor from the tin.

Vegetable Soup.

One quart water or pot-liquor, 2 carrots, 2 turnips, 2 potatoes, 2 onions, 3 sticks celery, a few sifted herbs, 1 oz. dripping, 1 tablespoonful flour, 1 teaspoonful mustard; salt and pepper to taste.

Prepare the vegetables, cut them into slices, fry them in the dripping, add the water or pot-liquor, the salt, pepper and herbs. Boil till quite tender, mix the flour and mustard to a cream with the cold water, and add to the soup. Simmer for half an hour longer and then serve.

Rice Croquettes.

Warm one pint of cold boiled rice in double boiler, mix a few tablespoons of milk. When soft add one well beaten egg, one tablespoonful of butter, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-quarter teaspoon of white pepper, a few grains of red pepper and one heaping tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Shape, roll and fry a light brown in sawtaylor.

To Boil Fish.

When the fish is thoroughly cleaned put it on a strainer or dish, place it in a saucepan with boiling water sufficient to cover it, some salt and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Simmer gently till the skin begins to crack.

Some of the liquor in which the fish was boiled can be used for making a sauce.

Cocoanut Custard.

Two sponge cakes, 1 egg, 1 gill milk, 2 oz. grated or desiccated cocoanut, 1 teaspoonful castor sugar.

Butter a small pie dish, cut the sponge cakes in slices, make two layers of them, strewing cocoanut between. Beat up the yolk of the egg with the milk, pour it over the sponge cakes, and strew the rest of the cocoanut over. Beat the white of the egg to a stiff froth, add the castor sugar, and spread over the pudding. Bake in a moderate oven till the white of egg has become a pale brown.

Rolls Oats.

A great many people do not cook rolled oats properly in order to secure the full food value. Use one cup of oats to one pint of boiling salted water. Mix the oats slowly with the boiling water, cook rapidly for fifteen minutes, then place in the double boiler and cook one to two hours. This method breaks the husk of the kernels and gets at the starch inside, thus making it more digestible.

Onions with Rice.

Chop five onions and fry with a tablespoonful of butter. When tender add a cupful of boiled rice, season with salt and paprika and a teaspoonful each of lemon juice and catsup or chili sauce. Serve hot.

When washing real lace let the final rinsing be in skim milk if you would give it a soft, creamy tone.

Iron garments with buttons by laying the garments face down on a thickly folded sheet or Turkish towel.

If maple syrup has turned, pour into a large kettle, add one cup sweet milk, boil, skimming frequently. Boil until no scum rises. Bottle and seal.

A little powdered sugar sprinkled on a fire, which is almost out, will invariably revive it. Salt sprinkled on a fire clears it for grilling, roasting, etc.

ECONOMY IN EATING

While "Greco" Jellies and Jams appeal to the epicure who does not mind any expense to get the best, they are also bought by the economical housewife. For this fine edible costs less than meat and is only half the price of butter. It is a splendid substitute. When bread and jelly or jam are eaten, there remains that much less room in the diet for meat and butter and accordingly there is economy. Here at a glance you may see the contrast in economic values:

How to Keep Milk Clean and Pure.

Milk contains all the elements essential for the maintenance of life. It is often called a perfect food—and it is a perfect food for the young of the animal which gives the milk. That is to say, the milk of a cow is a perfect food for the calf. But milk is not a perfect food for the child. At the same time, it represents in some measure all the elements that are necessary to life, and to this extent it is a wholesome food.

Milk is made up of fats; carbohydrates; proteins, or the nitrogenous elements; mineral salts, and water. It contains more nutritive matter than many of our other fats, in spite of the fact that it contains so high a percentage of water—about 86 per cent., to be exact. It contains on an average, about 14 per cent. of nutritive matter, which is more than fruits contain.

It should be remembered that milk is bound to contain some bacteria, since they grow and multiply almost from the time the milk is drawn. These bacteria require three things for their growth: first, moisture, which they find abundantly in milk; second, food, which they find in the lactose, and third, warmth—a temperature of about 100 degrees F. being the normal medium, though they grow in a temperature ranging from 50 to 100 degrees F. But the lower the temperature the less rapidly they grow and multiply, which explains why after it is drawn the milk should be cooled as quickly as possible, reduced to 50 degrees F., and kept at this point until delivered, and if possible until consumed.

An important factor in the keeping of milk by the consumer is the refrigerator. This, as nearly as possible, should be kept filled with ice. It is poor economy to allow the refrigerator to become almost empty before filling it with ice. It should be filled every day, so that the temperature can be kept at practically the same point—preferably at 50 degrees F. Milk is best kept in the lower part of the ice box, although it may be placed directly on the ice if desired.

The most desirable milk is known as "certified milk." This is milk that is obtained under as nearly ideal conditions as possible, and that consequently can be guaranteed or certified by a board of health or by a body of physicians—hence the term, "certified milk."

If it is impossible to obtain certified milk—as is often the case in the smaller cities—then the next thing is to obtain the best milk possible and pasteurize it. Pasteurized milk is milk that has been brought to a temperature of 145 to 175 degrees F.—never above 175 degrees F., since a higher temperature has a tendency to coagulate the albumin of the milk. The casein is also changed to some extent, as is also the fat. These changes also alter the flavor. Therefore, the temperature should never exceed 175 degrees F. Many authors claim that 145 to 155 degrees F. held for twenty minutes is sufficient to destroy tubercular and other germs contained in the milk.

A good method for pasteurizing milk is to heat it to 155 to 165 degrees F. for fifteen to twenty minutes at most, then cool as rapidly as possible. If the milk bottle is placed in a container with water, the water should be ten degrees more than the milk. The best way to test the temperature is to puncture the cap at the top of the bottle, place a thermometer in the milk, and watch the temperature until the desired degree is reached.

Cool the milk by placing the bottle and container under the water faucet and allow the cool water to run in the container—cooling gradually for a few minutes, and then cooling more rapidly by changing the water entirely. An inverted perforated pie tin in the bottom of the container serves as a rack for the bottles and prevents them from coming in contact with the intense heat at the bottom of the container.—Good Health.

"The Fight Against Dyed Macaroni."

Under the above caption, Mr. C. F. Mueller, Jr., recently contributed an excellent article to the Housewives' League Magazine. As Mr. Mueller is chairman of the Macaroni Section of the American Specialty Manufacturers' Association and president of the National Association of Macaroni and Noodle Manufacturers, it is obvious that he is thoroughly qualified to write on the subject and his article is well worth a perusal by any one interested in the subject of pure food. It is as follows:

As the price of meat has gone up the housewife has more and more been urged to serve macaroni and other edible pastes to her family, but when she has followed the advice the results have often been unsatisfactory. The macaroni had neither the palatable nor the staying qualities which she had been led to expect. She did not know that there is macaroni and macaroni; some made from soft starchy flours and colored artificially to cover its deficiencies, and some made from the semolina of hard durum wheat, as nourishing as beefsteak and with nothing added to it but water. And even when she did know these facts she has usually been quite unable to distinguish between the two kinds.

The law, it is true, requires that the presence of artificial coloring matter shall be stated on the label, but as seventy-five per cent. of these products, probably, are sold in bulk from containers that the consumer never sees, the information profits him, or her, very little.

The manufacturers of honest pastes, using expensive high-grade raw materials, are thus obliged to meet the competition of those who use inferior materials, with very little help either from the consumer or the law, and are almost compelled to lower their standards if they wish to remain in business. For their own protection, therefore, as well as for the public good, they are now asking for the enactment by the Federal Government and all the States of a uniform law forbidding the addition of coloring matter to edible pastes.

At its annual meeting held in Philadelphia a few months ago, the Macaroni Section of the American Specialty Manufacturers' Association unanimously adopted a resolution urging the general enactment of such a law, and the National Association of Macaroni and Noodle Manufacturers has taken similar action.

The measure agreed upon was subsequently introduced into Congress and into the Legislatures of New York, Kansas, Michigan, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Minnesota, Ohio, Wyoming and Oklahoma.

Most of these bodies have now adjourned, without taking action, but a very important educational work has been done, and when the bills are reintroduced next year, as they will be, they will stand a much better chance of getting through.

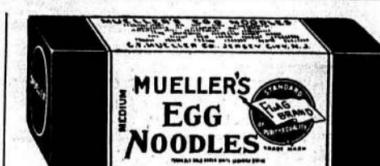

When the matter comes up again the progressive housewife, who appreciates the value of honest macaroni and the present helplessness of the consumer to distinguish between kinds and qualities, can do much to secure favorable action by calling the attention of the public to the facts. This year the general public was hardly aware of the issues at stake, while those who wish to see the use of coloring perpetuated brought a tremendous amount of political influence to bear.

In urging this legislation the manufacturers of uncolored edible pastes are not entering upon the question of whether or not the added coloring matter is harmful. They object to it simply because it is a fraud and used for the sole purpose of working a fraud. It gives to an inferior article the appearance of a better one, and in the case of the egg products is actually substituted in whole or in part for a highly nutritious ingredient.

Eggs are used in the egg noodle, or noodle (the terms being synonymous), in egg macaroni and similar pastes for the purpose of imparting additional flavor and food value. The eggs also impart to those products an attractive and distinctive yellowish color which exactly measures the quantity of eggs present.

Noodles of the best grade are made from fresh eggs and selected wheat flour. They are highly nutritious and are so easily digested, even by delicate stomachs, that they are frequently recommended for invalids and convalescents, a circumstance which makes the substitution of an inedible substance for any of the expected ingredients all the more serious.

Eggs are expensive and coloring matter cheap, and by the use of the latter the same appearance is obtained as by the use of eggs. Therefore we find that in many of the so-called egg pastes, the yellowish color is produced entirely or almost entirely by the use of yellow coloring matter.

In the case of the eggless pastes the added artificial coloring matter is used to give the product the appearance of having been made from the best, most expensive and most nutritious macaroni wheat. Macaroni of the highest grade is translucent and of a very light amber color, and has a high food value. The use of cheaper and less nutritious raw material produces a darker and duller color, and in order to make the article more merchantable artificial coloring matter is added. Thus the consumer is unable to distinguish between the real article and the imitations.

The proposed law would enforce the sale of these articles entirely upon their own merits, enabling the consumer to make his own distinction between the better and the poorer, between the genuine and the imitation.

Borden's Malted Milk

The word "BORDEN" is all that you need to know when you want to have the genuine, Kosher, pure, clean and wholesome MALTED MILK.

There has now appeared upon the market an imitation MALTED MILK, which some dealers desire to substitute for the BORDEN'S MALTED MILK, because it costs them only one half as much as BORDEN'S.

See that you are not misled. Insist upon the name BORDEN'S. See that this name is on every package or jar and that BORDEN'S is served to you at the soda fountain.

BORDEN'S MALTED MILK has no equal in the world for quality and cleanliness.

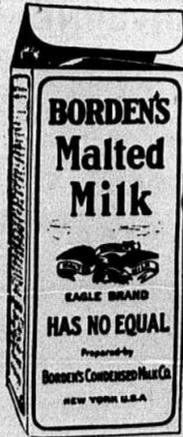

BORDEN'S name on a jar of MALTED MILK is like the United States' seal on gold coin.

will be paid to any person causing the arrest and conviction of any person, firm or corporation who may be found selling any substance which is not genuine as for BORDEN'S MALTED MILK.

Ask for BORDEN'S MALTED MILK. Buy only BORDEN'S MALTED MILK. Accept no substitutes.

 Who dares say that Judaism is waning should have witnessed the Tisha b'Ab services last Monday evening at the beautiful new Long Branch Synagogue on Bath avenue, where was observed in pious prayer some of our well-known New York merchants, who have large volumes of daily routine business, and after a hot day to and fro tiresome traveling, it is certainly a sign of live Judaism when such people do attend divine service.

Nathan Straus has given his handsome yacht to be sold for the benefit of the Zonist Fund. The Jews in Palestine, in Poland, in other localities—one-third of all the Jews in the world—are said to be starving or in need of help, and an emergency call for relief is issued. Christians should join in a prompt response to this appeal, for Jesus was a Jew, and, without the Jewish religion, there could be no Christianity, as all the prophecies would be eliminated. Religion aside, the Jews have been always good friends to this country; they largely financed our Revolution; they have been and are among our best citizens—we have been most liberal in assisting strangers who are in trouble; now let us be equally liberal in relieving our constant friends.—New York Town Topics.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Remarkable Case of Alfred Schwitofsky.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
 In the month of November, 1913, the Rev. Jacob Goldstein, chaplain of the Tombs, published a lengthy account of the case of Alfred Schwitofsky, in which the following facts were called to the attention of the people of the State of New York:

A man named Theodore Dale became involved in a sordid squabble with a 22-year-old youth. A friend of the youth, in an attempt to bring Dale to terms, created a commotion and a scandal and escaped from the city.

Simultaneously, a robbery occurring in Dale's apartments, the police, to serve their own ingenious ends, deliberately selected Alfred Schwitofsky, an old victim of theirs, and fastened upon him the burden of two charges—assault and robbery—for which he was duly sentenced to twenty years of confinement in Sing Sing.

Dr. Goldstein, in his consummate resume of the case, taking up 174 printed pages, appealed to the Administration of the State of New York, then headed by Governor Glynn, to investigate the charges made and right the monstrous wrong perpetrated against the unfortunate lad. In response to this appeal Governor Glynn appointed a commission to investigate into the matter. Although the verdict of this commission was never made public it was made known to the writer that the result was a complete vindication of the case as stated by Dr. Goldstein, and a conditionless pardon was recommended to the chief executive of the State.

However this may have been, the verdict was not made public and Governor Glynn passed out of office without acting upon the recommendation of the commission. Meanwhile, the friends of Alfred Schwitofsky and those interested in his case, did not surrender the hope of a just readjustment of his affairs. Acting on their advice, the imprisoned lad addressed a letter to Governor Whitman on April 22 of this year, in which he recalled to the interest of the Governor the following facts concerning his trial:

1. At the hearing and investigation into the plight of the prisoner Assistant District Attorney Delahanty stated: "We admit that the assault in the first degree in this case was committed by no one." And yet Schwitofsky was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for this very assault;

2. It was established by the testimony of the attorneys, Messrs. George Gordon Battle, Albert B. Rieger and Bernard Sandler, and also by Dr. Herman F. Wordeman and Mr. James Parker that Dale confessed to having sent Schwitofsky to prison on perjured and false testimony;

3. The testimony of two more disinterested witnesses, Messrs. Simon Gonsberg and John J. Duffy, who caught the supposed intruder, further proved that Schwitofsky was not the person who entered Dale's premises;

4. The investigation also brought to light that Attorney Sandler's stenographer made an affidavit in behalf of the defendant in the presence of Assistant District Attorney McCormack, more than a year prior to the hearing and investigation into his case. The testimony of the stenographer also brought to light that, when calling at the District Attorney's office to sign the affidavit, she was told that the affidavit was dead;

5. Assistant District Attorney Delahanty, at the motion for a new trial, strenuously opposed the motion on both charges of the indictment, having full knowledge that the assault in the first degree was committed by no one. For, Mr. Delahanty also stated before the Investigation Commission that it was the late Judge O'Sullivan's desire that ten years of Schwitofsky's sentence be taken off in the first degree charge;

6. On the appeal for a new trial, Mr. Delahanty further contended that Schwitofsky was properly identified by all the witnesses of an audience at the Magistrate's Court, according to evidence. By State witnesses it was proven that no identification took place. One of the State's witnesses, a Miss Murphy, testified and was positive at the investigation that the party who was in Dale's house had no noticeable scar or scars on his face; when asked by Mr. Untermeyer, the attorney in defense, if she could plainly see and would have noticed the scar on the defendant's forehead, she replied, yes. When further questioned by Mr. Untermeyer, Miss Murphy replied: "Well, I don't know; he looked somewhat like the man who was at Dale's house."

It is also a matter of record that the State's witness, Anna Hart, a colored woman, pointed to one of the court clerks, at the hearing, as the man who entered Dale's house; but when many of the onlookers laughed she retracted her identification.

7. By a letter read before the court and stamped January 17, 1911, 10.30 p. m., received by the defendant January 18, 1911, about 9 a. m., it was proven that on the eighteenth day of January (the day and time it was alleged Schwitofsky was seen loitering around Dale's Forty-fifth street residence), he had an appointment with Mr. Parker, at the Mills' Hotel on Rivington street, in regards to a position, and was in his company from 10 a. m. to 11.30 a. m., at the hotel, and again, about 12.30 p. m., at the Park Row Building. This evidence was not upset by the District Attorney office.

The matter rested in the Governor's hands. "Therefore, Your Excellency," wrote Schwitofsky, "I appeal to your sense of justice to right the great wrong done me, as well as my family, who suffered likewise and with me for four years, though innocent of any crime."

And now the friends of Alfred Schwitofsky have learned that the Governor, notwithstanding all this, has refused to do anything for the imprisoned lad.

The plea before the Governor having failed, those interested in the case have decided to place the matter before the highest court in the land, Public Opinion. The public will receive full details as to the relentless persecutions carried on for years against the person of Schwitofsky by the New York police; it will also know why it is to the interest of the police that Schwitofsky serve twenty years for a crime committed by no one and a crime he could not possibly have committed.

The public will learn that though witness after witness who rose against Schwitofsky perjured himself and was proven perjured, no steps were taken against them, and that, though nothing was proven against Schwitofsky and the presiding justice, Judge O'Sullivan, could not, because of a positive deafness that had seized him prior to his death, have heard half the evidence given—Schwitofsky was sentenced to twenty years' imprisonment.

The public will be interested to know why it was to the interest of certain

Increase of Consumption Among English Jews.

The annual report of the Medical Officer of Health for Stepney (Dr. D. L. Thomas) refers in disquieting terms to the prevalence of tuberculosis among English Jews. He states that the number of Jews in the borough notified last year to be suffering from the disease was 616, as compared with 916 Christians. Dr. Thomas goes on to say that:

"In Whitechapel, as in previous years, the death-rate per 1,000 of the population from phthisis is greater than in the rest of the borough, although this is not the case with regard to the general death-rate. This may be due to several causes. In the first place, as I pointed out in my last annual report, there is a greater proportion of Jews living in this part of the borough than in any other part, and consumption is undoubtedly on the increase among them. There is another factor which refers to the number of persons occupying a room. In the premises where cases of consumption occurred, the average number of persons occupying the room with the consumptive was 1.99, in Whitechapel, whereas it was 1.67 in Mile End, 1.43 in Limehouse and 1.81 in St. George's."

Dr. Thomas gives a table showing the number of persons notified, and the number of deaths from tuberculosis per 1,000 of the population last year, in certain model dwellings in different parts of the borough which are occupied by Jews and non-Jews. These buildings are occupied by 5,984 Jews and 3,325 non-Jews. In the former, 7.52 per 1,000 of the occupants were notified to be suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, and 1.66 per 1,000 died. In the buildings which contained no Jews, 6.31 per 1,000 were notified to be suffering from the disease and .9 per 1,000 died. The doctor adds, however, that this difference is not so marked as in the previous year. He further remarks that the notification rate and the death rate are lower than in the previous year, both in the buildings referred to and in the rest of the borough. Of the Jewish consumptives notified during the last year, 10 were dressmakers and blouse-makers; 136 tailors; 13 hawkers; 77 housewives, and 27 insurance agents; while 139 were school children.

SOCIAL NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Simon and daughter are in Portland, Ore., where they will remain for some time.

An affair in aid of the poor and destitute was given at the Hollywood, West End, N. J., last Wednesday. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Abraham Levy.

Miss Blanche Lillian Kaplan and her mother, Mrs. Rev. Bernard M. Kaplan, are at present visiting friends on the Pacific Coast. They will return to New York in the early fall.

For the benefit of the 196 aged inmates of the Home of the Daughters of Jacob, on East Broadway, there will be an entertainment and reception at the Hotel Prince, Arverne, Saturday night. Prominent vaudeville stars will appear.

Among the popular young folks who have recently won silver cups at the dances at the Hotel Prince, at Arverne, are the Misses Marguerite Bloom and Eleanor Klein, and Mr. Harold Stein. Tennis prizes have been won by Mr. Lawrence Cowan and Miss Sylvia Tobias.

Among those who donated the use of their automobiles to convey guests to the Cedarhurst Country Club to attend the card party given under the auspices of Mesdames Samuel Elkeles and Israel Gaul, are the Mesdames Horatio S. Simon, Joseph Bach, Samuel Cohn, Joseph Blau, M. Rosenberg, Mr. Moses Booth and Mr. George Beudieu.

A card afternoon will be given under the auspices of Mrs. Horatio Simon at her summer home, La Grasse Cottage, Far Rockaway, on the afternoon of August 20, in aid of the upper Manhattan branch of the Widowed Mothers' Fund Association, of which Mrs. Samuel Elkeles is chairman. Beautiful and costly prizes will be given and refreshments served. Automobiles will convey the guests from the station to the cottage.

A card afternoon, under the auspices of Mrs. Horatio Simon, will take place at her summer home, Far Rockaway, this (Friday) afternoon, August 20, in aid of the upper Manhattan branch of the Widowed Mothers, of which Mrs. Samuel Elkeles is chairman. Beautiful and costly prizes will be awarded. Refreshments will be served and automobiles will be on hand to convey the guests from the station. Two hundred subscription tickets have been sold.

Mrs. Phil. Walcoff will give a charity bridge and whist for the benefit of the Ladies' Auxiliary Society of Beth Israel Hospital, at No. 110 Seaview avenue, Arverne, L. I., on Tuesday, July 27, 1915, at 2 p. m. She will be assisted by Mrs. Jack Schwarz, Mrs. Max Schwarz, Mrs. Levinsky, Mrs. Harry Walcoff and Mrs. Phil Katz. The president of the auxiliary is Mrs. Sarah Straus Hess, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Straus.

Rabbi Max Reichler was married to Miss Edith Naomi Maisner on Thursday afternoon, July 22, at the bride's residence, 247 W. 130th street. Rev. Dr. Moses Maisner, grandfather of the bride, officiated. The wedding, a strictly private one, was attended by members of the family only.

Dr. Reichler is a graduate of the Hebrew Union College, of Cincinnati, and rabbi of Sinai Congregation of the Bronx, which he organized four years ago. Miss Maisner is a graduate of Hunter College. Rabbi Reichler and his bride left immediately after the ceremony for Niagara, the Great Lakes, Yellowstone and the Panama Exposition.

Upon their return, early in September, they will reside at the "Great Northern," 860 East 161st street, Bronx.

An Act That Failed.
 The action of Governor Brumbaugh in vetoing the bill designed to prohibit discrimination against persons who desire to frequent places of public resort, when such discrimination is based upon race or creed, has been commented on in the editorial columns of the Exponent, regret having been expressed that the Governor did not see his way clear to sign the bill. His excellent record in dealing with the other legislation submitted to his scrutiny precludes the assumption that he did not give the subject careful and deliberate consideration. When the bill was before the Legislature its true import and intent were not understood by many of the members. They appeared to regard it merely in the light of an amplification of the existing law to secure civil rights. The fact that it was specifically designed to prevent the odious and unjust form of discrimination directed against Jews who apply for accommodations at hotels and summer resorts, was not made entirely clear until a late stage in the proceedings. We believe that the Governor was advised of the main object of the bill before he acted on it. From his veto message it appears that he is of the opinion that the present law is sufficient to answer all the requirements. As a matter of fact, it is because the present law is deficient that the bill in question was introduced. There is no law now on the statute books in this State which prohibits the proprietors of hotels or other resorts from issuing obnoxious circulars such as those which announce that they will not provide for the accommodation of Jews at their places. The New York law, on which the bill in question was patterned, was enacted to prevent such publications, as well as the actual carrying into effect of the offensive announcements. The circulars in the Empire State no longer contain the obnoxious statements, but other ways of saying the same thing have been resorted to. One hotel last year announced that it had never entertained any Jewish guests. No court was called upon to decide whether this statement, which certainly violated the spirit of the act, was likewise a violation of the letter of the law. No doubt the person who sent it out had the advice of counsel that it was not. Legal opinions are not always given with the care and conscience that might be desired, but often with the object of giving the client a cloak to cover his delinquency.—Jewish Exponent.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND

the pastry cooks of "the Lane" are making as brave a show as ever. Israel's sweet tooth seems quite unaffected by the war. Sticky "bolas," rich "stuffed monkeys," fragile almond puddings and tempting eclairs, see them all in brave array, cajoling the cents from the dark-eyed lasses.

At the marble-topped tables, sipping chocolate and exchanging confidences, the Ghetto soldier recruits sit with their fair admirers. Leave is infrequent, all too rare, so the lasses fete their loved ones. "I'm paying this time," says pretty Rachel. "Chocolates and cakes for two, please." And Rachel plays the hostess, and charmingly, too. "Aren't you guarding our hearths and homes?" The young Israelite in khaki explains that that is what he is training for, and that if it comes to guarding Rachel—"Another cup?" she inquires, just sweetly. Young Israel drops to earth again. Petticoat-lane today is the Petticoat-lane of yesterday, with the only difference that the military element in this greatest Sunday market in the world is more pronounced than ever before. There is still the same suggestion of hilarity in the air, the same blandishments of the cheap-jack with the silvery, persuasive tongue. Perhaps there are larger crowds than ever around the military accoutrement stalls, and happy is he who, from the chaos of straps and halters, buckles and belts, can unearth so obvious a treasure as a German soldier's helmet. The transaction is completed. Another "relic from the battlefield" for some snug retreat in Suburbia!

Here you shall find regimental badges of every conceivable kind, spare uniforms for privates and field marshals. Where they come from is a mystery; whither they are destined, a mystery, too. Possibly they figure in suburban drama, in which case suburban playgoers can at least count upon sartorial accuracy. Petticoat-lane has an eye for details, knows the ins and outs of accoutrements to a nicety. The second-hand dealer knows his stock-in-trade well. His knowledge proves an asset in these martial days.

Near by, Wentworth street, redolent of fish and cheese and grated horseradish, which latter commodity is purveyed in greatly reduced pennyworths "owing to the war." Fish, one of the staples of the foreign Jewish element (said by this journalistic investigator to be notable by its absence), is a luxury at the price, and hardly an appetizing luxury at that. "Like buying diamonds," observes an Anglo-Jewish matron. "Diamonds?" repeats the salesman. "Diamonds are cheap compared with them." He looks resentfully at the cod that will not sell. The cod stares dully in reply. Such philosophy is unanswerable.

The terrific storm which passed over Cincinnati, Ohio, on July 7 and left in its path death and destruction unparalleled in the history of that section, seemed to visit heaviest in the thickly populated Jewish quarter of the town. The list of dead numbers 15 coreligionists, three entire families being almost wiped out of existence.

"The great unifying force of Zionism was never more evident than when on the same platform with the same ideal of a Jewish renaissance, espousing the same cause, at one with themselves and with the world, stood Rabbi Meyer Berlin, representative of the extreme orthodox settlement, a Stephen Wise of the extreme reform wing, and between these roles representatives of every shade of orthodoxy and reform, making up the long list of those whose noble purpose it is that the land without a people be once again come to the people without a land."

To Send No Jews Back to Russia.

The idea of hunting up insane Jews in the hospitals of New York State and "deporting" them to Russia, by way of Archangel, just at the present time, was about as inhuman as any idea of crass officialdom in recent years. The State Deportation Bureau actually had twenty-six such persons on shipboard ready to go off. Then interference came from the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society. It was pointed out that many of the relatives of these insane Russian Jews had been driven from their homes by pogroms and continued persecution; that Archangel is hundreds of miles from any place the victims were said to have come from, and thousands of miles from the supposed homes of most of them, and that considering the war, justice and humanity forbade the return of any Jews to Russia now. After considerable deliberation, the State Hospital Commission has decided Party Organization and Communal Work.

By RABBI MEYER BERLIN.
 It was only in the last few years that there arose among Jews a tendency towards party or organization work. Up till these days, in the "old" countries as well as the "new," Jews knew only that they were Jews, and each one of them was conscious of his duty to do all the good he could both in his relations to God and to his fellow men. Not all Jews, of course, could be philanthropists alike; not all had the facilities or opportunity to create and build, or even to identify themselves with any definite endeavor. Yet he who could not undertake communal duties himself assisted the official workers, and thus all Jews participated, more or less, in every department of communal labor. Besides, even if there were Jews opposed in principle, as, for example, those who were interested in "poor relief" work only and not in spiritual and educational effort, and vice versa, this was not on account of certain fixed theories. In the end the former usually acknowledged that the spiritual branch was also important, just as the latter recognized the value of concrete charity work. Each appreciated the other's service and understood and acquiesced in the mutual endeavor. The only difference was in the personal predilections of either; but in reality there was no faction, for everyone conceded that in fact there was necessity for all kind of philanthropy. If a person wouldn't do a certain task himself, he still desired others to do it and lent his approval.

Party organizations originated among Jews when differences of opinion arose as to essentials—when the question forced itself to the front—How and what to do? When finally the chasm became so wide that what one thought as beneficial to Judaism was regarded by another as destructive, when not only the practical attempts, but also the very thoughts conflicted, then the party movement came into being. It is remarkable that at the moment when the idea of party organization was clearly grasped the tocsin of all became, "Work for the community!" Just as formerly no Jew connected himself with a certain party, so he did not think or speak of the Jewish "community." Each did as he pleased without stopping to consider if his activity in any way affected the whole Jewish people. It was sufficient that everyone did his work in his self-appointed place. When the various theories began to crystallize in Jewish minds, occasions arose to demonstrate that it was not enough to labor for one's self, for one's party and ideas; it was necessary in certain circumstances and enterprises to emerge from the narrow, exclusive circles and to think and act for the whole Jewish community. For since party effort consumes the full energy of its adherents, and every leader, every worker does only what he considers beneficial, the community reaps no advantage, because what some seek to build others want to destroy. Only in the event of the party organization's unity in certain directions aiming to co-operate harmoniously and to discover common interests can communal activities be carried on with the energy of all parties combined.

There is no doubt that the matter of the restoration of the Jews to Palestine—or, as the movement is called, "Zionism"—should be placed above all party considerations. All Jews must recognize in Zionism a pan-Jewish ideal—and, in fact, it is so established. The Zionist organization is composed of "great" men, and men of the rank and file, men of all parties, of all opinions. Those who keep aloof are mistaken if they think that all who are attached to the Zionist movement have a common viewpoint on all topics. In their eyes all Zionists have one aim and method. The fact, however, is that those who are intimately connected with Zionism know how divergent the views of Zionists often are, and yet no matter what differences otherwise exist, on the question of the work in Palestine they are all united. Opinions as to the methods of reviving Jewish national life and culture may vary—each party according to its theory—but all are agreed that without "Erez Israel," and without a Jewish re-settlement there, there can be no complete Jewish emancipation and no perfect Jewish culture.

In undertaking to spread its propaganda in countries not immediately involved in the present terrible events—the United States and Canada—the "Misrahi" by no means contemplates abandoning its party work, which in all matters embraces in its first and most sacred effort the orthodox Jews. On the contrary, the "Misrahi" as a growing and progressive organization is only now beginning to occupy itself with the matter of Jewish education, Sabbath observance and everything that contributes to the strengthening of the Jewish spirit; but even so, as a party organization of the majority of the Jewish people, the "Misrahi" must have as its foremost consideration the "work for all Israel" principle—Zionism, the repatriation of the Jews in Palestine.
 Orthodox Jews should be made to realize that only by organization can they accomplish any real good in every respect. But even with the strongest party organization and acting as an organization, we must devote all our energy of body and mind to the "work for all Israel," in which all Jews, all parties are interested—and that is Zionism.—Canadian Jewish Chronicle.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Bay Ridge Jews to Build.
 Last (Thursday) evening delegates to the recently-formed Hebrew Association at Bay Ridge, met at the Harmony Club to decide on the site upon which they are planning to build a social centre, which will be somewhere in the neighborhood, the approximate cost to be $100,000. It will be fully equipped with a gymnasium, club-rooms for the different societies and special reading rooms for educational purposes.

Young Women's Hebrew Association.
 Among the summer activities of the Young Women's Hebrew Association is a trade class in millinery. Forty girls are enrolled, all of whom, although working for the past two or three years, have held no regular position owing to their having no definite trade. Of the many applicants for the class only those were selected who have special aptitude for this particular trade. The work is under the supervision of excellent instructors, and the girls will be ready to accept positions at the opening of the millinery season.
 In addition to the Hebrew classes of the Bureau of Education, which meet each morning, sewing and embroidery classes have been opened for the children of the neighborhood during the mornings.

On Monday morning, the 19th, a kindergarten was opened on the roof, with Miss Deborah Wolf in charge.
 Through the kindness of Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, a group of children is taken on an outing to the country every week.

Justice vs. Love.
 The friend of the human race is not the moral deformity who is wedded to the fashion plate, and revels in the exercise of the senses man enjoys in common with the brute. That type of creature believes in letting well alone, lest the majority learn to understand how their rights are flched from them and their opportunities are destroyed. He does not wish men to hear of a God of justice; he prefers to have them learn of a God of love, who may soothe men to sleep with His mercy and pity, instead of stirring them to righteous rebellion through considerations of justice. But as for us we preach, in the first place, a God of justice who comes, as it were, the eternal differences, between right and wrong, between justice and injustice, and who says, "Clear away the evil that equity may be done!"

Let it not be understood that Judaism has naught to say of a belief in a God of love. It revealed also a God of infinite manifestation of God under the guise of justice. First let justice be done; then love will find its place prepared for it; such is the gospel of Judaism.—Rabbi J. Levy, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The oldest and most favored of the German restaurants in New York is Luchow's, on Fourteenth street, near Fourth avenue. Mr. Luchow is a pioneer among those men who first conceived the idea that the public would appreciate good food cooked in German style. He built up an enviable reputation in this respect, and despite the uptown movement Luchow's still retains its old friends and gains new ones every day. Luchow's is the place where the Wurzburger flows in fact and the Rhine in fancy.—Adv.

FIVE POSSESSIONS

Dear Children:

Five possessions the Holy One, blessed be He, made especially His own in His world, and these are they, the Torah, heaven and earth, Abraham, Israel and the house of the Sanctuary. Whence know we this of the Torah? Because it is written, the Lord possessed me as the beginning of His way, before His works, from of old (Prov. 8, 22). Whence of heaven and earth? Because it is written: Thus saith the Lord, the heaven is My throne, and the earth is My footstool. What manner of house will ye build unto Me? And what manner of place for My rest? (Isaiah 66, 1) and it says, How manifold are Thy works, oh, Lord! In wisdom hast Thou made them all; the earth is full of Thy possessions (Psalm 104, 24). Whence of Abraham? Because it is written: And He blessed him and said, Blessed be Abram of the Most High G— possessor of heaven and earth (Genesis 14, 19). Whence of Israel? Because it is written: Till the people pass over, oh, Lord, till the people pass over, which Thou hast acquired (Exodus 15, 16), and so says As for the saints that are in the earth, they are the noble ones in whom is all My delight (Psalm 16, 3). Whence of the house of the sanctuary? Because it is written: The place, oh, Lord, which Thou hast made for Thee to dwell in the sanctuary, or, Lord, which Thy hands have prepared (Exodus 15, 17), and it says, And He brought them to the border of His sanctuary, to this mountain, which His right hand had acquired (Psalm 78, 54).

The Torah is the beginning of the ways of the Almighty, the plan by which He created heaven and earth—this plan He gave His chosen people, Israel, to study unceasingly, in order that the heaven and earth that He created may be maintained—but before Israel came upon the scene how was the earth maintained? Through the merit of Abraham, because it was he who made known to the world that there was One Holy Supreme Being who lives forever, who created the heaven and earth from naught, and finally the house of the sanctuary, which was the abode of the Divine Presence on earth and which, alas! is now destroyed because of our sins—but the fast of the Ninth of Ab has passed and the Sabbath of Comfort has come and the Lord says to His prophets, "Comfort ye, comfort ye My People!" The Dubner Maggid says that the Holy One, blessed be He, loves Israel despite their shortcomings and he explains it by the following story:

A rich man made an alliance with a poor youth, to whom he caused his daughter to be betrothed, the date of the wedding was fixed for the end of the twelve months. In the meantime, it happened that the father of the bridegroom won a large prize, which made him rich, and he promised the bride's father to give also a certain amount as a dowry, inasmuch as he was now rich. When the time came, shortly before the wedding, for both parties to deposit their respective dowries in the care of a third party, the bridegroom's father regretted the promise he had made, and refused to give the dowry; the bride's father thereupon summoned him to the Beth Din for a "Din Torah." When the bride's father had finished making his complaint before the "Dayan," the bridegroom's father said, "I am greatly surprised at my son's prospective father-in-law by what right does he claim a dowry from me? Did he make an alliance with a rich man? At the time the alliance was made I was a poor man, and what harm has he now through the fact, that I became rich?" It is thus with Israel—when the Lord took them out of Egypt they were poor, without any commandments performed; when he brought them to Mount Sinai, Israel said, "We will do and we will hear," and became rich with the Torah and the commandments. The Divine Psalmist said, pleading for Israel, "Remember Thy congregation, which Thou didst acquire of old (Psalm 74), when You loved them as they were in their extreme poverty, at the time that they gave for Pharaoh; they afterward became rich with the Torah and the commandments, have You, oh, Master of the Universe, any harm from that fact?" In view of that plea, we hope the Lord will remember His love as of yore and make the five possessions which He especially made His aim in the world again complete by rebuilding the Holy Temple speedily in our days.

בן אהרן

At the funeral of Baron Lionel de Rothschild, father of the recently deceased Lord Rothschild, a poor old man wept loudly and bitterly.

"Why are you crying?" inquired a bystander. "You are no relation of Rothschild."

"No," howled the mourner; "that's just why I'm crying."

"Don't you get tired of answering foolish questions?"

"Yes," replied the policeman; "I've answered that one twenty times to-day."

A Long Life.—Sir Walter Scott, while traveling in Ireland, was one day accosted by a beggar. He felt in his pocket for a sixpence, but finding that he had nothing smaller than a shilling with him, gave it to the woman, with the words:

"You must give me the change next time we meet."

"I will, sorr," replied the beggar, "and may yer honor live till ye get it."—Los Angeles Times.

Teacher—Tommy, you are too great an idler. Do you know what becomes of people who won't work?

Tommy—Yessum. They gets supported by the rest o' the family.

Judge—You say you caught sight of the assailant. Describe him.

Witness—Sure, your honor, he was a small insignificant man—about your size, your honor.

History Professor—Why are the Middle Ages known as the Dark Ages?

Wise Freshman—Because there were so many knights.

"A man is soon forgotten after he is dead," mused Mrs. Gabb.

"Not if you marry his widow," replied Mr. Gabb.

"Well, the Panama Canal wedded the Atlantic to the Pacific. Isn't that romantic?"

"But it also divorced North and South America. Isn't that sad?"

Small Johnny was wriggling and twisting in a vain endeavor to put his arms through the sleeves of an undergarment and then get it over his head. After several futile attempts he called out to his mother:

"Say, mamma, when I get to be an angel, and have wings, I don't see how I'll ever get my shirt on!"—New York Times.
