"MURDERERS"

(From the Yiddish of Shalom Aleichem)

AUTHORIZED VERSION BY HANNAH BERMAN

"Is he still snoring?"
 "And how snoring!"
 "May he perish!"
 "Wake him up. Wake him up."
 "Leib-Dreib-Obderick."
 "Get up, my little bird."
 "Open your little eyes."

I barely managed to open my eyes, raise my head, and look about me. I saw a whole crowd of rascals, my school-fellows. The window was open, and along with their sparkling eyes I saw the first rays of the bright, warm, early morning sun. I looked about me, on all sides.

"Just see how he looks!"
 "Like a sinner!"
 "Did you not recognize us?"
 "Have you forgotten that it is L'ag Beomer today?"
 The words darted through all my limbs like a flash of lightning. I was carried out of bed by them. In the closing of an eye, I was dressed. I went in search of my mother, who was busy with the breakfast and the younger children.

"Mother, today is L'ag Beomer."
 "A good 'Yom-tov' to you. What do you want?"

"I want something for the party."
 "What am I to give you? My troubles? Or, my aches?"

So said my mother to me. Nevertheless, she was ready to give me something towards the party. We bargained about it. I wanted a lot, and she would only give a little. I wanted two eggs. Said she. "A suffering in the bones!" I began to grow angry. She gave me two smacks. I began to cry. She gave me an apple to quiet me. I wanted an orange. Said she: "Greedy boy, what will you want next?" And my friends on the other side of the window were kicking up a row:

"Will you ever come out, or not?"
 "Leib-Dreib-Obderick!"
 "The day is flying."
 "Quicker! Quicker!"
 "Like the wind."

After much arguing, I got round my mother. I snatched up my breakfast and my share of the party, and flew out of the house, fresh, lively, joyful, to my waiting comrades. All together we flew down the hill to the Cheder.

The Cheder was full of noise and tumult and shouting that reached to the sky. A score throats shouted at the one time. The table was covered with delicacies. We had never had such a party as we were going to have that L'ag Beomer. We had wine and brandy, for which we had to thank Berrel Yossel, the wine merchant's son. He had brought a bottle of brandy and two bottles of wine made by Yossel himself. His father

"Don't you understand, peasant's head? He took it from the shelf when no one was looking."
 "Gracious me! That means he stole?"

"For the sake of the party, fool."
 "Is it a Mitzvah to steal for that?"
 "Certainly. What do you say to the wise one of the 'four questions'?"
 "Where is it written?"

"In the chapter called 'And he took.'"

"Beginning with the words 'Bim-bom.'"

"Ha! Ha! Ha!"

"Hush, children, Mazepa comes." All at once there was silence. We were sitting around the table quiet as lambs, like angels, golden children who could not count two, and whose souls were innocent.

Mazepa was the teacher's name. That is to say his real name was Baruch-Moshe. He had come to our town from Mazapevka not long before, and the people called him the Mazapevkar. We boys shortened his name to Mazepa. And when pupils crown their teacher with such a lovely name, he must be worthy of it. Let me introduce him.

He is small, thin, dried-up, hideously ugly. He hasn't even the signs of a moustache or beard or eyebrows. Not because he shaved, God forbid, but simply because they would not grow. But for that again he had a pair of lips and a nose. Oh, what a nose! It was curved like a ram's horn. And he had a voice like a bell. He growled like a lion. Where did such a creature get such a terrible roar? And where did he get so much strength? When he took hold of you by the hand with his cold, bony fingers, you saw the next world. When he boxed your ears, you felt the smart for three days on end. He hated arguing. For the least thing, guilty or not guilty, he had one sentence: "Lie down."

"Rebbe, Yossel - Yakov - Yossel's thumped me."

"Lie down."

"Rebbe, it's a lie. He first kicked me in the side."

"Lie down."

"Rebbe, Chayim-Berrel Lippes put out his tongue at me."

"Lie down."

"Rebbe, it's a lie of lies. He made a nose at me."

"Lie down."

And you had to lie down. Nothing would avail you. Even Elya, the red one, who is already Bar Mitzvah, and is engaged to be married, and wears a silver watch—do you think he is ever flogged? Oh, yes! And how? Elya says he will be avenged for the floggings he gets. Some day or another, he will pay back the Rebbe in such a way that his children's children will remember it. That's what Elya says after each flogging. And we echo his words:

had given him the brandy, but the wine he had taken himself.
 "What do you mean by saying he took it himself?"

"Fool of the night! Well, what then?"
 "What do you mean? Then he is a thief?"

"He wants us to tell him where it is written?"
 "Tell him it is written in the book of jests."

HERBERT H. LEHMAN.

Herbert H. Lehman, who on November 1 took office as treasurer of the Joint Distribution Committee and of the American Jewish Relief Committee, was born in New York city on March 28, 1878. He is a son of the late well-known philanthropist, Meyer Lehman and Babette Lehman (nee Newgass). He attended Dr. Sach's school in this city and later Williams College, graduating in 1899. He is a member of the firm of Lehman Brothers, bankers.

Mr. Lehman is a trustee and treasurer of the Baron de Hirsch Fund, director of the Hebrew Sheltering Guardian Society, of the New York City Child Welfare Committee, of the Surprise Lake Camp for Boys, connected with the Educational Alliance and the Y. M. H. A., a member of the Executive Committee of the Kehillah and chairman of its Finance Committee, and a member of the American Jewish Committee. He served in 1913 on the Commission to Revise the Banking Laws of the State of New York.

In 1910 Mr. Lehman was married to Miss Edith Altschul, daughter of Charles Altschul, of Lazard Freres.

prayers.) Mazeppa said to us in his lion's roar:

"Now children, wash your hands and sit down to the party. After grace I will let you go for a walk." We used to hold our L'ag Beomer party outside the town, in the open air, on the bare earth, under God's sky. We used to throw crumbs of bread to the birds. Let them also know that it is L'ag Beomer in the world. But, one does not argue with Mazeppa. When he told one to sit down, one sat down, lest he should tell one to lie down.

"Eat in peace," he said to us, after we had pronounced the blessing. "Come and eat with us," we replied out of politeness. "Eat in health," he said. "I do not wish to eat yet. But, if you like, I will make a blessing over the wine. What have you in that bottle? Brandy?" he asked, and stretched out his long, dried-up hand with its bony fingers, to the bottle of brandy. He poured out a glassful, tasted it and made such a face that we must have been stronger than iron to refrain from exploding with laughter. "Whose is this terrible thing?" he asked, taking another drop. "It's not a bad brandy." He filled a third glass and drank our health.

"Long life to you, children. May God grant that we be alive next year, and—and. Haven't you anything to bite? Well, in honor of L'ag Beomer I will wash my hands and eat with you."

What is wrong with our teacher? He's not the same Mazeppa. He is in good humor and talkative. His cheeks are shining, his nose is red and his eyes are sparkling. He eats and laughs and points to the bottle of wine.

"What sort of wine have you there? Passover wine?" (He tasted it and pursed up his lips.) "P-s-s-s! The best wine in the world." (He drank more.) It's a long time since I tasted such wine. (To Yossel, the wine merchant's son, with a little laugh.) "The devil take your father's cellar. I saw there barrels upon barrels. And of the finest raisins. Ha! Ha! To your health, children. May the Lord help you to be honest, pious Jews, and may you—may you open the second bottle. Take glasses and drink to long life. May God grant that—that. (He licked his lips. His eyes were closing.) All good to the children of Israel."

Having eaten and said grace, Mazeppa turned to us, his tongue failing him as he spoke:

"Then we have carried out the duty of eating together on L'ag Beomer. Well, and what next—eh?"

"Now we will go for the walk."
 "For the walk—eh? Excellent. Where do we go?"

"To the black forest."
 "Ha? To the black forest? Excellent. I go with you. It is good to walk in a forest, very healthy, because a forest— Well, I will explain to you what a forest is."

We went off with our teacher, beyond the town. We were not altogether comfortable having him with us. But, shah! The teacher walked in the middle, waving his hands, and explaining to us what a forest is. "The nature of the forest, you must know, is as the Lord has created it. It is full of trees. On the trees are branches, and the branches are covered with leaves that give out a picaant, pungent odor."

As he spoke, he sniffed the air that was not yet either pleasant or pungent.

"Well, why are you silent?" he asked. "Say something nice. Sing a song. Well, I was also a boy once, and mischievous like you. I also had a teacher. Ha! Ha!"

That Mazeppa had once been a mischievous boy and had had a teacher we could not believe. It was curious. Mazeppa playful? We exchanged glances and giggled softly. We tried to imagine Mazeppa playful and having a teacher. And did his teacher also—? We were afraid to think of such a thing. But, Elya stopped us to ask a question.

"Rebbe, did your teacher also flog you as you flog us?"

"What? And what sort of floggings? Ha! Ha!"

We looked at the teacher and at each other. We understood one another. We laughed with him, until we were far from the town, in the broad fields, close to the forest.

The fields were beautiful—a Garden of Eden. Green, fragrant grass, white boughs, yellow flowers, green flies, and above us, the blue sky that stretched away endlessly. Facing us was the forest in holiday attire. In the trees the birds hopped, twittering, from branch to branch. They were welcoming us on the dear day of L'ag Beomer. We sought shelter from the burning rays of the sun under a thick tree. We sat down on the ground in a row, the Rebbe in the middle.

He was worn out. He threw himself in the ground, full length, his face upwards. His eyes were closing. He could hardly manage to speak.

"You are dear, golden children. Jewish children. Saints. I love you, and you love me. Oh, yes, you love me?"

"Like a pain in the eyes," replied Elya.

"Well, I know you I—love me," went on the teacher.

"May the Lord love you as we do," said Elya.

We were frightened and whispered to Elya:

"The Lord be with you!"

"Fools," he said with a laugh. "What are you afraid of? Don't you see he is drunk?"

"What?" queried the teacher, one of whose eyes was already closed. "What are you saying? Saints? Of course. The Guardian of Israel Hal! Hal! Hal! Rrrrrsss!"

And our teacher fell fast asleep. The snores burst from his nose like the blasts from a ram's horn, sounding around him, and our hearts grew heavy.

Is that our teacher? Is that he whose glances we fear? Is that Mazeppa?

"Children," said Elya to us, "Why are we sitting like lumps of stone? Let us think of a punishment for Mazeppa."

A great fear fell upon us. "Fools, what are you afraid of?" he went on. "He is now like a dead body, a corpse."

We trembled still more. Elya went on:

"Now we may do with him what we will. He flogged us the whole winter, as if we were sheep. Let us take revenge of him this once, at least."

"What would you do to him?"

"Nothing. I will only frighten him!"

"How will you frighten him?"

"You will soon see." And he got up from the ground. He went over to the teacher, took off his leather strap, and said to us:

"See, we will fasten him to the tree with his own belt in such a way that he will not be able to free himself. Then, one of us will go over to him, and shout in his ear: 'Rebbe, murderers!'"

"What will happen?"

"Nothing. We will run away and he will shout: 'Hear, O Israel!'"

"How long will he shout?"

"Until he gets used to it." Without another word, Elya tied the Rebbe to the tree by the hands. We stood looking on, and a shudder passed over our bodies.

Is that our teacher? Is that he whose glances we fear? Is that Mazeppa?

"Why do you stand there like clay images?" said Elya to us. "The Lord has performed a miracle. Mazeppa has fallen into our hands. Let us dance for joy."

We took hands and danced around the sleeping Mazeppa like savages. We danced and leaped and sang like lamatics.

We stopped. Elya bent over the sleeping teacher and shouted into his ear in a voice to waken the dead:

"Help, Rebbe! Murderers! Murderers! Murderers!"

* * * * *
 We flew off together like bows from arrows. We were afraid to stop a moment. We were even afraid to look around us. A great dread fell upon us, even upon Elya, though he never ceased from shouting at us: "Donkeys! Fools! Animals! Why do you run?"

"Why do you run?"

"When you run, I run too."

We got into the town full of excitement, and still shouting:

"Murderers! Murderers!"

When the people saw us running, they ran after us. Seeing them running another crowd ran after them.

"Why are you running?"

"How are we to know? Others run, and we run too."

After some time, one of our boys stopped. And, seeing him, we stopped also, but still shouted:

"Murderers! Murderers! Murderers!"

"Where? Where? Where?"

"There, in the black forest, murderers beset us. They bound our

AN ANATOMICAL PRAYER.

A Hymn Based on an Ancient Fragment of Osteology.

By C. D. SPIVAK, M.D., Denver.

The following piyyut is recited in Hebrew by all orthodox Jews in the Musaf prayer on the second day of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish religious New Year. The following is a free translation into English:

The Anatomical Prayer.

"O deign to hear the voice of those who glorify thee with all their members, according to the number of the two hundred and forty-eight affirmative precepts. In this month they blow thirty sounds (on the Shofar, ramshorn) according to the thirty members of the soles of their feet; the additional offerings of the day are ten, according to the ten in their ankles; they approach the altar twice, according to their two legs; five men are called to read the law, according to the five joints in their knees; they observe the appointed time to sound the cornet, on the first day of the month, according to the one member in their thigh; they sound the horn thrice, according to the three in their hips; lo, with the additional offering of the new moon, they are eleven, according to their eleven ribs; they pour out the supplication with nine blessings, according to the members in their arms, and which contain thirty verses, according to the thirty in the palms of their hands; they daily repeat the prayer of eighteen blessings, according to the nine members in their head; spine; at the offering of the continual sacrifice, they sound nine times, according to the nine members in their head; in the two prisons they kneel eight times, according to the eight vertebrae of their neck; he hath ordained the six orders of the Mishnah, according to the six members in the breastbone; their statutes and laws are contained in five books, according to the five perforations; the reins, inward parts, soul, breath, spirit, skin, flesh, sinews and their bones.

"These shall all lift up the eye, and pierce the ear, and open the mouth, that with the tongue and speech of their lips, and from the sole of their foot to their head, may show the particulars of their good acts so that when the sound of the Shofar ascends, their adversaries may be time from their God."

Comment.

That one who is not familiar with Jewish traditions may be enabled to understand the rationale of such a prayer and the causes which induced the author to blend anatomy, the "ungodly science," with a hallelujah, it is necessary to become familiar with the following historical facts, which will serve as a background. It is to be borne in mind that all the laws and precepts laid down by Moses ashamed; that they may be justified on

1. Piyyut (plural, Piyyutim), hymn added to the older liturgy of the Jews that developed during the Talmudic era and up to the seventh century. The piyyutim are recited on the holy days. The word piyyut is derived from the Greek term for poetry.
2. Musaf, additional prayer recited on holy days after the regular daily morning prayer, Shacharit.
3. The first day of the Jewish month of Tishre. It falls late in September or early in October.
4. The ten commandments are called by the Jews the ten words, the same as in Greek—decalog.
5. The Jews call the 613 commandments collectively by the word Taryaq mitzvot, coined from the numerical value of the letters: T equals 400, R equals 200, Y equals 10, G equals 3.
6. Haggadah, the nonlegal part of the old rabbinic literature, contains homilies, narratives, stories, legends and references to or short essays on medicine, astrology, magic, theosophy, mathematics, etc.

the day of judgment, and hear the second in the Pentateuch for the guidance of the Jews are called commandments, Mitzvot. The number of such commandments is 613. The commandments are divided into prohibitive commandments, Mitzvot lo taaseh, whose number is 365, and the mandatory commandments, Mitzvot asch, whose number is 248. Rabbi Simlai, a Palestinian haggadist, says: "Six hundred and thirteen commandments were revealed to Moses, 365 being prohibitive (negative), equal in number to the days of the year, and 248 being mandatory (affirmative), corresponding in number to the bones of the human body." The enumeration and the division into prohibitive and mandatory commandments was undertaken by many Biblical and Talmudic scholars, and gave rise to endless disputes as to which of the passages in the Bible are to be recorded as commandments, and whether they belong to the prohibitive or to the mandatory group." While the expounders and commentators were busily engaged in settling this controversy, each compiling a list of the commandments which differed from all the others, the stylists, grammarians and poets bestirred themselves and composed hymns whose central theme was the enumeration of the 613 commandments, all of which are known under the term Azharoth. There is no doubt of their antiquity, as they are mentioned by the well-known Gaon Saadia¹⁰ and by the Bible commentator and grammarian Abraham Ibn Ezra¹¹, who was conversant with the medical writings of his day, and who speaks in disparaging terms of their blunders in their enumeration, using a medical simile, "that the authors of Azharoth in general resemble a man who counts the various medicinal herbs mentioned in medical works without knowing anything of their virtues."¹² But none could accuse the author of the foregoing anatomical piyyut, Rabbi Eleazar Kallir,¹³ of ignorance. He was one of the greatest hymn writers the Jews ever had, and the structure of his hymns remained a model which was followed for centuries after him, and indeed constituted what is known as the Kalliric school.

"All My Bones Shall Say, 'Lord, Who Is Like Unto Thee?'"

Now, the Jewish religion, perhaps more than all others, abhors lip-prayer. The most sacred prayer of the Jews—a prayer which is recited three times a day and is on the lips of every dying Jew—is the Shema, which includes the following verses: "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, with all thy soul and with all thy might." Prayer is considered an expression of love for the Deity. Hence, according to the Talmudist,¹⁴ prayers must be recited in the manner of David the psalmist: "All my bones shall say, Lord, who is like unto thee?" "David said, I praise thee with all the members of my body by performing with them your commandments. On my head I wear phylacteries at prayer.¹⁵ I do not round the corners of my head.¹⁶ On my neck I wear the fringes at which I look with my eyes.¹⁷ My mouth speaketh the praise of the Lord.¹⁸ My lips shall utter praise.¹⁹ I do not round the corners of my beard.²⁰ With my tongue I speak thy righteousness.²¹ Thy words have I hid in my heart.²² With my right hand I copy the law, and on my left hand I bind the phylacteries.²³ I bless the Lord, my strength, who teacheth my hands to war.²⁴ My feet stand in an even place.²⁵ My membrum virile is circumcised.²⁶ With my nails I perform Periah.²⁷ My reins also instruct me in the law.²⁸ Thy law is within my entrails.²⁹ All that is within me blesses the Lord,³⁰ and, finally, all my bones shall say: 'Lord, who is like unto thee?'"³¹

The Talmudists, with their heightened imagination, allowed themselves the poetic license of giving the words "my bones" the interpretation of a figure of speech, and therefore quoted many passages from psalms wherein parts of the body praise the Lord. But no bones are mentioned in the Psalms. In David's day the majority of the bones of the human body were an unknown quantity. There are mentioned in the Bible the names of a few bones, but it is uncertain whether they refer to the bone itself or to the outer form of the body which includes the bone. The words arm, forearm, shoulder, knee, elbow, hip, etc., may mean the bone or the part of the body including the bone and the soft parts.

The Ancient Fragment of Osteology.

Rabbi Kallir, in composing an Azharah, a hymn on the 613 commandments, treated the subject from a poetic as well as from a scientific point of view. His poetry he derived from the sweet singer David: "All my bones shall say, 'Lord, who is like unto thee?'"³² His science he derived from the Mishnah,³³ in which is preserved an osteologic fragment which reads as follows:

Man has 248 bones, divided as follows:
In the foot, pissath ha-regel..... 30
In the ankle, kursal..... 10
In the shin bone, shok..... 2

In the knee joint, arkubba	5
In the thigh, yarek	1
In the hip bone, kotliih	3

There are a number of difficulties which we encounter. We are uncertain as to whether our translation of the osteologic fragment into modern nomenclature really corresponds to the nomenclature of those days. But no matter what the meaning of each word is, it is evident that the number of bones does not correspond with the modern findings. It would be a miracle if it were otherwise. When we examine the osteologic fragments in the works of Hippocrates³⁴ we find that the cranium is composed of only one bone; that there are only seven ribs, and that the hand has many joints. From another fragment of Hippocrates³⁵ we learn that the hand has 27 bones, the foot 24, the neck 7, the hip 5, the back 20, the head, together with the eyebones, 8. The number of all the bones is 91, and with the nails 111. We see that Hippocrates recognized only half the number of the bones. Galen speaks guardedly of the number of bones, and commits himself to an indefinite statement: "There are more than 200 bones in the human skeleton."³⁶

The Incentive for the Study of Anatomy by the Hebrews.

The discrepancy in the enumeration of the bones by the Talmudists may perhaps be explained by the method they used in the study of anatomy. They did not study anatomy as the foundation of the medical sciences.³⁷ All their scientific studies had as an incentive some religious precept or rite. The following is the origin of the anatomical studies of the ancient Hebrews:

According to the Mosaic law,³⁸ any one who comes in contact with a dead body or any part thereof or remains in a tent wherein a corpse is found is considered tameh, infected, unclean, for seven days. The Mishnah teaches that this tent infection, Tumath-ohel, takes place in the presence either of a complete corpse or of an anatomical unit, an eber, member—that is, a bone covered with its soft parts. A bone stripped of its soft parts does not infect. Should, however, a collection of such bones by either their bulk or number constitute more than half of the skeleton, sheled, their infecting power is equal to that of a complete corpse. This law made it imperative that the number of bones of the human body be ascertained. The idea that there exists a complete analogy between the bodies of animals and men was generally discouraged by the Talmudists,³⁹ although in some cases the analogy was relied on.⁴⁰

Direct observations, therefore, on the human body were resorted to, as, for instance, on the bodies of those killed on the battlefield, on the wounded, the maimed, the drowned, and on the bodies of those condemned to die. The Talmud relates the story, in the name of Mar Samuel,⁴¹ that the disciples of Rabbi Ishmael⁴² obtained the body of a harlot who had been executed, and having subjected it to prolonged boiling, Shelikah, and then counted the bones and found their number to be 252.⁴³ Neither of the numbers given agree with modern anatomic knowledge. It is probable that the author of the Mishnah, which gives the number of bones as 248, derived his knowledge from an investigation performed in a similar manner. The explanation of the discrepancy is probably to be found in the youthful age of the subject used, many of the bones not having been completely ossified. The prolonged boiling, on the other hand, caused the bones to be separated into their original component parts, so that the disciples of Rabbi Ishmael counted the epiphysis and diaphysis⁴⁴ as separate bones.

I venture to assert that there is not to be found in the liturgy of any religion, Christian or pagan, a prayer or hymn Kallir, represents undoubtedly a page of osteology from a chapter of anatomy which was taught 2,000 years ago, and in which the leitmotif is that "All my bones shall say, 'Lord, who is like unto thee?'" Eve of Rosh Hashanah 5677.

German Jewish Soldiers Get Holiday Leave.

The Department of War issued the following regulations to govern the grants of leave of absence to the Jewish men in the German army during the fall holidays:

(1) Concerning the men at the front:
(a) Time off for the Day of Atonement to begin one hour before sunset on the day previous and to end at night on the following day. If feasible the men shall be freed from duty on the other festivals.
(b) Services to be arranged for the New Year and Day of Atonement, and if possible also for the other holidays. Inasmuch as traveling is prohibited to them on these days, those of the men who will go to the central services may remain there until the close of the holidays.
(2) Concerning the men on home duty and at stationary garrisons:
(a) Leave shall be granted to them, as far as possible, either to go home for the holidays or to go to the nearest Jewish community. If, however, this is not possible, they shall be excused from duty during the festivals, bearing in mind the fact of their religious prohibition to travel on Saturdays and holidays.
(3) Finally, all time for vacations and leave of absence granted to the Jewish soldiers in the field shall be arranged with a view in mind of the holidays.

The scheme for the establishment of the Jewish Polytechnic at Ekaterinoslav is making good progress, but its opening is not expected this autumn owing to lack of funds. The large sum of 500,000 roubles has already been raised, but it is not regarded as sufficient.

A meeting was held in Glasgow, Scotland, last month, and a movement was launched for the foundation of a fund of $15,000 with which to emigrate consumptive Jews to a more favorable climate. The fund will be raised to mark the jubilee of the Board of Guardians' work.

The Louis D. Brandeis Zionist Society, of Washington, D. C., will in future be known as the Washington Zionist Circle. The members of the society thought it might prove embarrassing to Judge Brandeis calling the society by his name, now that he has been placed on the Supreme Court Bench.

A class of 500 candidates, probably the largest number initiated in a Jewish lodge at one time, were enrolled as members of Samuel Sheinfeld Lodge No. 40, Independent Order Scns of Israel, at Boston, Mass., last week. This completes the campaign for 1,000 members, begun about two months ago.

At the request of Rabbi Max Heller, and in lieu of a personal gift to him, last year's confirmation class of Temple Sinai, of New Orleans, La., has furnished the largest room of the synagogue. It is Rabbi Heller's plan to have each succeeding class furnish one room each year, instead of accepting class presents on Shabbath.

At a cost of $200,000 a Home for the Aged and a hospital for Jewish people in the Northwest will be erected on a site in the Merriam Park district by the Jews of St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. It has been decided to combine interests assuring a larger and better institution than were separate institutions operated in both cities.

According to information received by the Petrograd Relief Committee, the first party of refugees which left Dvinsk recently has settled in the Government of Perm. The second party has been left temporarily in the Government of Yaroslavl. The third party, numbering 300, has started out for Sarapul, Government of Viatka.

The Hungarian Government has decided to expel Galician Jews who have taken up their residence there since the war broke out. A petition to Premier Tisza was forwarded by the unfortunate refugees, in which the injustice of the decree is dwelt upon. The decree, however, is being carried out with great severity, and, according to reports, the Hungarian Jews themselves are not only inactive in behalf of their brethren, but assisting the government in carrying out the cruel decree.

The commander of the forces at Kieff has permitted all Jewish students at dental institutes to reside in the city.

The members of the Judith Montefiore Society, of Tacoma, Wash., have voted to affiliate with the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

He will remain in Cleveland and will conduct the Jewish World, of which he has been the editor for some time past. Rabbi Margolies is a son of Rabbi M. S. Margolies, of this city.

The Federated Jewish Charities and the United Hebrew Charities of Baltimore, Md., have disapproved of the opening of the Home of the Daughters of Hannah as a Jewish infant asylum. They claim that experts in the care of infants testify that the infant asylum is not in accordance with the modern approved method of caring for the very young children.

The Russian Ministry has issued an order to all military commanders, informing them that Jews now transported from the war zone could choose any town as their residence with the exception of those situated in the districts under martial law and in the provinces of Nijnj Novgorod, Voronez, Penza and Tambov. The Ministry explained that the reason for the closing of the four provinces to new Jewish settlers was the fact that those districts were already crowded.

The Federation of Jewish Charities of San Francisco has elected I. Irving Lipsitch as its superintendent of social service, of which office he is to be the first incumbent. Mr. Lipsitch has had much experience in communal work, and in September, 1914, was appointed General Manager of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, continuing until October 1, 1916. The San Francisco Federation, of which Mr. I. W. Hellman, Jr., is president, was organized in 1910, and includes thirteen societies, with an annual budget of early $200,000.

An effort is being made to form a Young Men's Hebrew Association in the Washington Heights section of this city.

Mr. Julius Rosenwald has pledged $5,000 toward a fund which will be used in spreading the propaganda for universal military service among the people.

Mrs. Hannah G. Solomon, founder and first president of the National Council of Jewish Women, is the Democratic candidate for trustee of the University of Illinois at the election on November 7.

The Montefiore Home for the Aged, at Cleveland, Ohio, one of the oldest institutions of its kind in the State, has succumbed to the encroachments of business, and has been sold to builders. A new home will be erected in the East End.

At the first meeting of the newly elected Pretoria (South Africa) and District School Board, the Rev. Lewis Phillips, J. P., was unanimously elected vice-chairman and a member of the School Management Committee of that body.

In connection with the latest decree at the Moscow Stock Exchange fifty-five Jews were expelled from the city. M. Gutchkoff, a member of the Upper House and of the Council of the Ministry of Commerce and the leader of the Octoberists, has protested against the orders.

With the completion and dedication on September 17 of a large and handsome synagogue by the Jewish community of Berlin, Germany, the total of large synagogues now numbers twenty. Berlin's Jewish population is estimated at 140,000.

Of 1,200 applications for admission to the Women's Medical Institute at Petrograd, 425 have been admitted. Of that number, 13 Jewesses were admitted within the norm and 42 in accordance with the circular about the admission of relatives of participants in the war.

Addressing a deputation of Jews, Armenians and Tartars at Tashkent recently, General Kuropatkin, the Governor-General of Turkestan, admitted that some nationalities were restricted in their activity. He hoped, however, that their useful work would demonstrate to Russia the need of relaxing the restrictions.

In the Kieff military court the case of twenty-one peasants accused of anti-Jewish riots was tried recently. The riot took place in the village of Vissli Tashlik, government of Poldolia, on August 25, 1915, because of the refusal of a dealer to give change of a three-rouble note. Rumors were spread that the Jewish dealers are hiding silver money and refused to accept paper money. The mob demolished the stores and carried off the goods. The court sentenced one defendant to one year imprisonment; one to six months; six to four months, and the rest were acquitted.

One hundred and forty-eight Jews were admitted to a new Russian university at Odessa within the norm, and 93 above the norm. One hundred and fifty Jews were refused admission for formal reasons, there still being 500 vacancies. Among those rejected there is one who has received two St. George crosses and left the army because of illness. The circular of the Minister about the admission of students above the norm on the ground of war privileges is being interpreted restrictively. Scores of complaints are being sent to the Ministry.

The following Jews in the Russian army have been decorated: Hirsch Normstein, St. George medal, fourth degree; St. George cross, third and fourth degrees; Elias Novak-Nonakov, St. George cross, fourth degree; Benjamin Granovsky, St. George cross; Leba Resnikov, St. George cross, fourth, third, second and first degrees; St. George medal, fourth, third and second degrees; Mayer Petrovitzky, St. George medal, fourth degree; Moses Lukin, St. George medal, fourth degree; Joseph Kushner, St. George medal, fourth degree; Solomon Dreyer, St. George medal, fourth degree.

Work Among Jewish Immigrants in War Times.

The broad scope of work among immigrants can best be seen by a visit to the main office of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, No. 229 East Broadway, New York city.

The countless number of persons who seek information, the countless variety of subjects on which information is sought, the attention given to each and every request, the satisfactory replies all give proof to the position now occupied by the society.

The greeting which the immigrant receives on his arrival at our shores so binds him to this organization that he depends on it for advice and guidance during the formative period of his American life and ever after.

The report of the society's activities for the month of September, as herewith briefly stated, throws light upon its accomplishments, both for Jews in America and abroad.

Your Duty to Your Child The Coward Shoe

Look at your child's shoes. If the counter runs over on the inside, or if the ankle bone protrudes on the inside, (as in figure 1), the arch is weakened, and if not promptly attended to, your child will have "flat foot". Your child should stand as in figure 2.

We have specially constructed shoes to remedy these troubles — shoes that will produce sound, shapely feet, in years to come.

It is your duty to see that your child wears Coward Shoes now.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

WACHTEL.—To Mr. and Mrs. Julian Wachtel (nee Kapner), a daughter, on Wednesday, October 25.

OBITUARY.

HARBY.—Entered into eternal rest at the residence of his son, M. E. Harby, Esq., Huntington, L. I., on October 25, 1916, Jacob De La Motte Harby, Charleston, S. C., in the sixty-eighth year of his age.

Mr. Harby was born in Mobile, Ala., but had long lived in Charleston, S. C. He was a Confederate veteran and served throughout the Civil War, and was probably one of the youngest, if not the youngest, soldier who served on the Confederate side in that conflict.

He was a member of a Camp of Confederate Veterans and was a member of many other societies, which were organized for the purpose of keeping alive that spirit of comradeship which was engendered by the memory of very many comrades who served in that conflict.

Mr. Harby was well known in the South, where he was very popular and was highly respected and esteemed for his many good qualities.

His remains were taken to Sumter, S. C., where funeral service and interment was made.

He is survived by his son, M. E. Harby, Esq., a prominent lawyer of this city, and by a daughter, Mrs. L. L. Harby, Charleston, S. C., and also by his widow, Lee C. Harby, a lady of considerable literary attainments and well known in the South as a writer of prose and poetry and where her writings are highly esteemed.

In pious memory of a true and loving relative and friend these few lines are penned by

JOS. P. JOACHIMSEN.

Social Service of the I. O. B. B.

The following story appeared in the October issue of the B'nai Brith News, and we republish in our columns, as shown in concrete form, how the Social Service Department of the Independent Order of B'nai Brith is doing constructive work.

SOCIAL SERVICE DEPT. I. O. B. B.

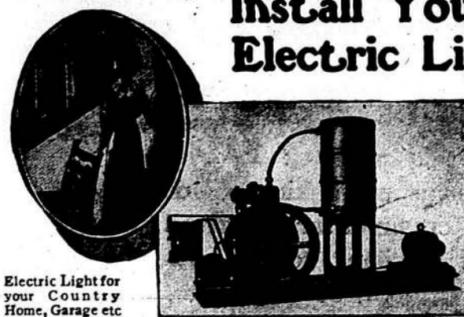

Last May the Social Service Department of the Independent Order of B'nai Brith was asked to provide a Big Brother for a Jewish lad named Thomas Shapiro, who was running around in the neighborhood, apparently beyond parental control. The facts were investigated and found to be correct. A member of the order was appointed as Big Brother, and he took steps at once to influence the future conduct of Thomas. Very little was accomplished, because soon after Thomas ran away from Chicago with two other boys and could not be located.

Early in September Doctor Coffee returned from his vacation and found a note from the Big Brother of Thomas, stating that the dead body of Thomas Shapiro had been found outside the city of Toledo, Ohio, alongside the railroad tracks on August 29. Two boys, one of them Samuel Edelson, Jewish, were imprisoned in Toledo, suspected of having murdered Thomas. The following week, on September 12, Doctor Coffee visited Toledo Lodge to speak at the fall meeting. In company with Brothers Harry Levison and Rabbi David Alexander, members of the Toledo Social Service Committee, Doctor Coffee visited the District Attorney and also the two boys in prison. According to their story, the three boys were stealing a ride on a freight train from Toledo to Chicago. Shapiro undoubtedly fell off and was killed by the fall. Brother Levison promised to look after the legal rights of the boys. A careful investigation was made, which showed that there was very little evidence, if any, on which the boys were being detained in prison. When the cases were presented to the Grand Jury the evidence presented by the detective was attacked as being insufficient to hold these boys for trial on the charge of murder. The following day they were released.

On returning to Chicago Samuel Edelson visited the office of the Social Service Department and was referred to the B'nai Brith Free Employment Bureau, which will find him a position.

Incidentally, it may be remarked, the families of these two boys had paid a Chicago attorney $200 as a retainer, but the boys were released without any aid whatsoever from this lawyer. Without the aid of the Toledo Service Committee both boys would have undoubtedly been held for murder. They and their families were spared the expense, the shame and mental strain connected with a trial on so serious a charge by the active co-operation of this department.

Barnert Memorial Hospital Dedicated

PATERSON, N. J., Oct. 24.—The new Nathan and Miriam Barnert Memorial Hospital, erected at a cost of $150,000, and presented to the city of Paterson by former Mayor of Paterson, Nathan Barnert, as a memorial to his wife, the late Mrs. Miriam Barnert, was dedicated today at exercises in which many prominent citizens of Paterson took part. Mayor Amos Radcliffe accepted the building on behalf of the city.

Those who spoke were Henry W. Morgenthau, former United States Ambassador to Turkey; United States Senator William Hughes; Rabbi L. J. Getz, and Judge Leon Sanders, of New York.

Dr. Marius Ranson, rabbi of the Nathan Barnert intimately know how imprinted the dedicatory address at the exerof worship. The Nathan Barnert Memorial Temple, named in honor of Nathan Barnert because of his extraordinary services and the gifts to the congregation which worships in that temple, was the first of the institutions served or founded by him.

"It is not a matter of chance that the gifts of Nathan Barnert did not end with this house of worship, but instead branched out into the various fields of social service. For the religion which Nathan Barnert, the Jewish religion, is a religion of humanitarianism.

"The worship of God is, of course, the foundation of Judaism. But Judaism does not end with theology; theology in Judaism leads to ethics. Judaism teaches that the worship of God includes ises, and paid a glowing tribute to the donor." The rabbi said:

"It is a significant fact that, as rabbi of the Nathan Barnert Memorial Temple, I have been selected to deliver the dedicatory address this afternoon. For the dedication of this magnificent hospital is not a haphazard event in the life of Nathan Barnert, but is the culmination of a number of acts of public service and deeds of social benevolence which were inspired by the Jewish religion.

"Religion has been the dominant influence, inspiration and ideal in the life of Nathan Barnert. They who know Nathan Barnert Memorial Temple, deliver a factor religion has always been in his life. It is significant that the first public institution in the city of Paterson to receive his personal service and to benefit by his munificence was a house the service of man. The Jewish belief in the unity of God is not a philosophic conception of only intellectual value to the world, but is a practical philosophy making for the brotherhood of man. For if God and the world constitute a unity, then every man is related to his fellow men, for he is only part of the great unity of the universe. Most of the laws of the Bible are social laws, regulating not the relation between man and God but the relations between man and his fellow men.

"I wish to emphasize this fact as the philosophical interpretation of the life work of Nathan Barnert and as the fundamental cause whence springs this hospital."

The hospital covers an entire city block at Broadway and East Thirtieth street.

Slur on Jews Ordered Expunged from Army Officer's Book

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 31.—Capt. Le Roy Eltinge, U. S. A., will be directed by the War Department to expunge from a book recently written by him statements regarding Jews being regarded as "highly objectionable" by the department. President Wilson's secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, was so informed today by W. U. Ingraham, acting Secretary of War.

Attention was taken as the result of a protest made by Louis S. Berlin, of Chicago.

Capt. Eltinge's book is quoted as containing the following:

"Another large proportion of our population is made up from the Jews. It is said there are today more Jews in Chicago than in Palestine. For centuries the Jew has been without a country. He doesn't know what patriotism means. Recruiting officers find he does not average up with the other applicants physically. He has not been a soldier for more than 2,000 years. For the same length of time he has preferred trading to doing work with his hands.

"The soldier's lot is hard physical work. This the Jew despises. He does not have any of the qualities of a good soldier. Nevertheless he is highly religious and very susceptible to the moral sentiments of his race. He has tenacity of purpose and under pressure can patiently endure much.

"In a cause which appealed to his peculiar kind of mind and led by officers who knew how to get the best out of him he might do surprisingly well as a soldier, but unless we can touch the latent main springs of character that twenty-five hundred years ago made him a soldier to be respected we will find him of little account."

Women's Proclamation Committee

The Women's Proclamation Committee, the national women's organization for Jewish war relief, 203 Broadway, is in receipt of the following communication from its Buffalo branch:

"Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 30, 1916.

"Dear Madam: Enclosed find check for three hundred dollars, our contribution for the month of October.

"As you see by this, we have continued our work and hope that we will be able to send at least that much every month.

"We had a meeting of the women interested in this work, and they all pledged themselves anew to do their utmost as long as the need lasts, to get money together to help our suffering sisters and their children.

"We expect to have other meetings and hope to be able to devise some means whereby we can raise more money. It is our sincere desire to co-operate and make ours a society to be proud of.

(Signed) "CAROLINE KAVENOCKY,
Chairman, Buffalo Branch, W. P. C."

Young Judaea

Young Judaea will hold its third annual leaders' conference at the Hotel McAlpin, New York, beginning Saturday evening, December 23, and with sessions continuing on Sunday and Monday, December 24 and 25. The leaders' conference has for its purpose the discussion of problems arising in club leadership, and papers on the various phases of club work will be presented by leaders from the various sections of the country. There will be a reception and dance on Saturday evening, and a literary evening on Sunday, to which Jewish students and public school teachers of the city will be invited. The full program of the conference will be announced later.

Montefiore Home and Hospital.

The annual meeting of the contributors of the Montefiore Home and Hospital will be held at the institution, Gun Hill road, East 210 street, near Jerome avenue, on Sunday morning, November 5, 1916, at 11 o'clock, at which time the annual reports of the president and committees will be submitted; proposed additions and amendments to by-laws which have been heretofore submitted to and approved by the directors will be presented for approval, ratification and disposition; also such other business as may lawfully be brought before the meeting.

After the adjournment of the annual meeting there will be a special meeting to consider the resolutions of the board of directors, recommending that the institution, provided the membership shall approve, join and become affiliated with the Federation of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City.

Polls for the reception of ballots will be open for the election of ten directors in place of Hon. Mitchell L. Erlanger, Mr. William Goldman, Mr. Benedict J. Greenhut, Mr. Bendet Isaacs, Mr. Berthold Hochschild, Mr. Samuel Kridel, Mr. Herbert S. Martin, Hon. M. Warley Platzek, Mr. Jacob Rossbach, Mr. Max J. Sulzberger, to serve for three years, and two directors in place of Mr. Leon Wallerstein and Mr. Henry A. Dix, to serve for one year.

At the conclusion of the meeting, which will be held in the synagogue, a reception will be held in the new private pavilion which has been erected just opposite the main buildings and which is connected with them through an underground tunnel.

The private pavilion was constructed through the generosity of four of the directors—namely, Messrs. Jacob H. Schiff, Samuel Sachs, Sol R. Guggenheim and the late Ferdinand Sulzberger—each of whom contributed $50,000 (total, $200,000), for which amount this new building was built and equipped.

With the opening of the private pavilion facilities will be provided which have long and sorely been wanting in the community. Henceforth the chronic invalid of the well-to-do class, to whom scientific treatment, obtainable only within a hospital, was denied because the general hospital does not accept sufferers from chronic diseases, can obtain in the private pavilion of Montefiore Home and Hospital the great benefit of systematic treatment, with the aid of apparatus and facilities frequently needed, and by which it often becomes possible to effect marked improvement and cure. The pavilion will be opened for the reception of patients on Thanksgiving Day.

Women to Assist in Federation.

At a conference held at the Young Women's Hebrew Association, 31 West 110th street, on Tuesday afternoon, October 31, under the direction and co-operation of the Young Women's Hebrew Association for the purpose of discussing federation in a campaign to raise $2,000,000 for Jewish charitable, educational and philanthropic societies of New York city, the following addressed those present: Mrs. Israel Unterberg, president of the Young Women's Hebrew Association, and also on the Committee of Organization; Mr. Max Abelman, executive secretary of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, and Dr. Nathan Krass, of Temple Israel, of Brooklyn. Dr. David de Sola Pool opened the meeting with a prayer. The meeting was largely attended and all women present pledged themselves to help and aid considerably in the movement to raise the $2,000,000.

Among those present were Mrs. A. N. Cohen, Mrs. Nathan Glauber, Miss Benita Guggenheim, Mrs. Samuel I. Hyman, Mrs. Morris Jacoby, Mrs. Maurice E. Shrier and Mrs. Felix M. Warburg. At the close of the meeting tea was served.

The Emanu-El Brotherhood.

Due to the closing of several Hebrew and religious schools in the immediate vicinity of the Brotherhood, we have been compelled to refuse admission to many who have applied. At the present time over 400 children are regularly attending the Hebrew School, and about 160 attend the Bible and Hebrew classes on Sunday mornings. This is the largest attendance in each of these departments that has ever been recorded in the history of the school.

On Sunday evening, November 5, there will be held at the Social House an open debate, participated in by three members of the Brotherhood—a Republican, a Democrat and a Socialist—the subject of the evening being "Why My Party Should Be Elected."

Cornerstone for Home of Daughters of Jacob Laid.

Last Sunday afternoon, in the presence of over 2,500 well-wishers, the cornerstone for the new home of the Daughters of Jacob, which is to be erected at 167th street, Teller and Findlay avenues, Bronx, was laid. Judge Otto A. Rosalsky presided and made an address, in turn calling upon Rev. Dr. Moses Hyams, Mrs. A. J. Dowsky, the president; Superintendent Albert J. Kruger and Mr. Elias Surut, chairman of the Building Committee. Nathan Straus was to have set the stone but was unable to be present.

The property covers thirty-six lots and is the site of the old Gouverneur Morris homestead. The old house is still standing, with the date plate of 1812 over the front door, but this will be torn down as soon as the ground is needed for the home.

The new building, which was designed by Louis Allen Abrahamson, is novel in design, being in the form of a wheel. The administrative offices are the hub and the wings in which the inmates will be domiciled radiate from the center. The top of the tower, which rises from the center, will be the highest point in the Bronx.

B'nai Israel of Washington Heights.

Temple B'nai Israel, of Washington Heights, will hold services at their temporary quarters, 535 West 148th street, as soon as alterations are completed.

The Sisterhood of Temple B'nai Israel was organized on Monday last, with a membership of fifty-five ladies. Great enthusiasm was displayed and a number of affairs were planned to be held in the near future.

Mr. Leo Arnstein has been named executive manager of the public schools, a new position created in New York city, and carrying with it an annual salary of $10,000. Mr. Arnstein was secretary to George McAneny when he was President of the Board of Aldermen, and was until recently a Commissioner of Education.

"Flora Bella," John Cort's production of the seductive operetta by Charles Cuvillier and Milton Schwartzwald, in which Lina Abarbanell is the star, is now in its third month of tremendous business at the Casino Theatre, where it promises to remain throughout the entire season. The excellent cast of singers and funmakers includes Lawrence Grossmith, Charles Purcell, Robert O'Connor, Roydon Keith, Adolph Link, Muriel Hudson, Juliette Lippe and others.

"Upstairs and Down," Oliver Morosco's successful production of the Hattons' latest comedy, will begin the seventh week of its run at the Cort Theatre Monday night. The splendid cast includes Christine Norman, Courtney Foote, Juliette Day, Mary Servoss, Leo Carrillo and many others, whose popularity arouses interest.

"So Long Letty," Oliver Morosco's peppery musical farce, will enter upon the third week of its engagement at the Shubert Theatre Monday night, where it is doing a large business and can easily be classed among the five best sellers of the present season. Charlotte Greenwood, Walter Cattlett, Sydney Grant, Frances Cameron and other prominent players are in the large cast.

Out of Cincinnati a voice has proclaimed the startling truth that Jewish affairs in that city are in a state of spiritual famine! Better late than never!

Has Julian Morgenstern, that great Reform exponent of Biblical truths at the Cincinnati "forcing-plant," emerged only recently from a severe illness? We ask this because he might have succumbed to so olden a Jewish practice as that of changing his name after a sickness! Perish the thought, in this case! Then, why does the American Jewish Chronicle speak of him as Henry Morgenstern?

Jewish Comment, of Baltimore, has been rejuvenated, are pleased to note, and will be published every Thursday by a board of nine editors, all of whom are Reform rabbis. This may or may not be a handicap, for the rabbi-editor removed himself from the field of Jewish journalism many years ago and has not been missed in it since. All the same, we wish long life and abundant prosperity to our Baltimore contemporary under its new conductors.

A West Virginia Reform rabbi has gone openly "on the stump" as a partisan political spellbinder in favor of woman suffrage. As an individual he is, of course, privileged to follow the dictates of his mind and conscience, withersoever these lead him. But a rabbi owes a duty to his sacred calling and to the community he is supposed to serve. He may advocate woman suffrage, but he has no business for it to go "on the stump." No wonder, in the presence of this and other examples of modern rabbinical vagaries, the Reform rabbinate is losing, pay, has irretrievably lost what little influence it latterly possessed.

The House of Deputies of the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, recently in session at St. Louis, unanimously adopted a resolution, the purport of which is to suffer Jews "converted" to the faith of this denomination to preserve "the national rites and ceremonies of Israel." Coupled with this is a more or less pious ejaculation to the effect that Jews will be "won to Jesus" by this church. Hence the reason for the "beneficial resolve" is plainly visible. The only difficulty with it is that the House of Deputies will probably never behold it in practical operation, even the "knightly" meshummodim do not succumb to such patent subterfuges!

"The glory (of the old) is departed." Anglo-Jewry has, indeed, ceased to be that great and representative community of our people when one of its leading synagogues—the New West End, of London—witnessed the singing of "God Save the King" at the conclusion of the Neilah service on last Yom Kippur. We hope not, that the members of the New West End Synagogue, of London, are wholly "slackers and shirkers," who thus seek to demonstrate their patriotism by lustily singing an earthly tune amid the service to the Most High instead of demonstrating this necessary and useful quality before the conscription tribunals. Even the Anglo-Jewish press, latterly fallen from its former estate, condemns this ineptitude.

The striking setback to the Roumanian troops administered by the forces of the Central Powers, coupled with the decisive defeat of the Russians and Roumanians by the army under Mackensen, will not, we feel reasonably certain, fill the hearts of even the most perfervid pro-ally Jews with anguish. No misfortune and no disparagement are too great for the modern representatives of Pharaoh and Haman. We shall not endeavor to determine which of these two benighted nations is the worse offender against civilization in the treatment meted out to the Jews within their borders: suffice it to say, they have both "met the enemy" and failed, and righteously failed, to triumph over him!

JEWES AND THE NATIONAL GUARD

THE decision of the Adjutant-General of New York in the matter of the charge that discrimination against Jews on account of their race and faith prevails in the National Guard of the State seems to be eminently sane and sensible. That officer finds that there is no "general prevalence of discrimination against Jews in the matter of enlistment." This, as our readers may well recall, was the contention we advanced in this place at the time the hearings into the Klein and other complaints were progressing. This decision simply confirms the view we have always entertained of this subject.

The Adjutant-General finds, however, that petty acts of discrimination have been practiced by officers of sub-units and that, therefore, the burden of proof resting upon the complainants in the particular cases under review has been successfully borne, so far as these cases and they alone are concerned. That such an individualistic condition should exist in the military organization of the State and in any of its component parts is cause for regret; but in this instance, too, the Adjutant-General's ruling serves to enforce our original contention, that acts of such a nature depend upon their own circumstances, that correctives must be applied in each specific case upon its own merits, and that the National Guard as a whole cannot and should not be condemned and revolutionized by reason of defects revealed through isolated occurrences.

It is well known that the Seventh Regiment and Squadron A of this city are so thoroughgoing (in a diabolic sense) in their prejudice against Jews that they pointedly refuse to accept any recruits of our race and faith for their respective organizations. This condition, purblind and regrettable as it is, should be met on its own merits; neither the Seventh Regiment nor Squadron A makes up the entire National Guard of this State, while the constructive suggestions embodied in the report of the Adjutant-General point out for this result a distinct method of adjustment, if not of total elimination.

We observe, moreover, that the Governor has supplemented the findings and conclusions of the Adjutant-General by an acceptable memorandum of his own. We must now patiently wait and see if the words of these public officials mean anything, so far as the particular offenses complained of are concerned, or if they are simply words.

In the Menorah Journal, Lowell Brentano, a young Jewish student at Harvard, who was brought up in an almost totally Christian environment, writes "almost as an 'outsider'" concerning the problem of bringing the youth of today in America within the pale of the synagogue. Here is an adolescent and enthusiastic soul desirous of drinking in the undying truths of Judaism and of visualizing for himself our sacred heritage. He compares the rabbinate, however, with the ministry of the Christian Church and finds that the former is not so saintly, scholarly and capable to serve socially as the latter. Mainly his complaint against our rabbis is that they have succumbed too much to the things that are of the earth, earthly. We suspect that this young Harvard man has not come into close contact with our orthodox rabbis, for surely these evince a strong scholarly and saintly character, even if their capabilities for what is known as social service have not been developed. The Reform rabbis, with whom social service is practically an obsession, cannot on the average lay any strong claims to saintliness or scholarship. The trouble with this young man is, he makes unjustifiable comparisons and argues from the intangibly known to the evidentiary unknown. Let him attend not one, but many synagogues, let him drink at the fountain source of Judaism, then his difficulties (largely of his own manufacture) will be speedily dispelled!

Chairman Oscar S. Straus, a Hughes Presidential elector from this State, characterizes as "an insult to the patriotism and intelligence of the Jews" of this country the "unpatriotic and un-American" appeal to them by Treasurer Henry Morgenthau of the Democratic National Committee on behalf of the re-election of President Wilson. While we believe that religion has absolutely no place in partisan politics, for which reason we have always condemned Hebrew (?) "Democratic" and "Republican" clubs and other "miscegenations" of that ilk, we do not fancy that the cause of pure and uncorrupted politics is served by partisan appeals on the one hand and partisan denunciations on the other. We have heretofore expressed our opinion on the record of President Wilson as a friend of our people, and do not abate one jot or tittle of our remarks, despite the passionate denunciation which has been meted out to this record by eminent Jews, all of whom are today staunch Republican partisans and thoroughgoing followers of the banner-bearer of their party, no matter what they were in the past. Take Mr. Straus' own case. Distinguished as his work for city, State and nation is and has been, high as his personal merits and attainments undoubtedly are, did the adherents of Colonel Roosevelt ever set their faces sternly against mention of Oscar S. Straus, the Jew, the only Cabinet official of our race, when the truly noble record of the warrior of San Juan Hill as a friend of our people was catalogued? This is but one instance, but a striking one it is, and many others of similar import might be detailed. We confine ourselves to it, however, because it directly refers to Mr. Straus himself, and abundantly proves that, in this matter, it all depends upon whose ox is being gored!

EAST AND WEST

ויעתק משם ההרה מקדם לכית אל ויט אהלה בית-אל מים והעי מקדם ויבן שם מזבח לך ויקרא שם בשם יי:

"And he removed from thence unto a mountain on the east of Beth-el, and pitched his tent, having Beth-el on the west and 'Ai on the east: and there he builded an altar unto the Lord and called upon the name of the Lord."—(Gen. xii, 8.)

WHERE shall we pitch our tent? Where shall we build our altar? Can we, modern Jews, pitch our tent in a place of safety where each chance gust will not threaten to overthrow the stakes and tear the canvas into useless rags? Can we, who are equally devoted to the olden spirit of Judaism and the newer aspirations of the times, build our altar in a place where each haphazard wind of doctrine will not quench our altar-fires?

These questions are being asked with increasing disquietude by all kinds of Jews nowadays. We hear the whistling blasts all about our tent: must we pull up stakes again and again? Is there no stability for Israel? We see the column of smoke once a stately pillar that found its upward way straight to the heart of heaven—swaying ominously in the agitating winds: must we abandon the ancient altar? Is there no firm faith for Israel?

The answer may be found in our text. The difficulty of our position is due to the fact that we are essentially and inalienably an oriental people, with oriental spirit throbbing in our life and our religion, with ages and ages of oriental culture tinging our views no less than our blood; nevertheless an oriental people placed amidst occidental surroundings, exposed to the allurements, more or less genuine, more or less justified, of the occidental spirit and occidental culture. Between our eastern heritage of blood and belief and our western acquisition of custom and culture the conflict is inevitable and the harmony most difficult. But, this difficulty despite, might we not act exactly as our ancestor Abraham did: taking up our position between East and West, between Bethel and 'Ai, and there and thus building our altar to the God of our fathers?

The question would lend itself to treatment both from the standpoint of Israel and from that of the western world. I am inclined to discuss it rather from the latter standpoint. The western spirit seems to exhibit this peculiar contradiction that on the one hand it emphasizes individuality and on the other it undermines individuality. I am not sure that I understand the source of this paradox, but I am keenly aware of its existence. Nowhere and never has the voice of the individual been heard in such strident tones as in our westmost west; yet nowhere, by a system of living which calls for exaggerated standardisation, is so much being done as here to reduce all men to a dead level of uniformity. All tyrannies having been dethroned, we are subjected to the worst kind of tyranny—the cruel tyranny of the majority. We are making a fetish of the average—this modern Moloch to which we are sacrificing our children, and in whose creed the greatest sacrilege is: to be different. Now might we Jews, by our sheer existence and by a dignified upstanding attitude, not protest against this shallow view of life, according to which all men must be made equal? Is this forcing of all men into the same narrow mold not like trying to abolish the waves of the ocean for fear of sea-sickness? Nay, let us, who are and wish to remain an eastern people, teach our western brothers nature's lesson of variety. Nature glories in its resplendent heterogeneity. Nature is too much of an artist to employ shop methods; everything in nature points away from homogeneity, from deadening selfsameness. If naught else, our service to the west should be to relieve its tendency to grey monotony. We Jews are the one dash of oriental color on the broad canvas of western civilisation, enlivening it as the golden sun sifting through the leaves enlivens the shadows of the forest; and western life would be infinitely poorer if we removed this bit of bright eastern decoration, with all its rich suggestion of romance, from the occidental scheme of existence.

But we have a still more substantial contribution to make to the life of the occident. We do not contribute mere external coloring to the west, we have something to give it of our inmost spirit. Civilisations tend to lopsidedness. They glory in some particular excess. It is this very excess that causes civilisations to topple when it has reached dangerous proportions. The particular excess of the East is spirit, of the West—matter. Let us at once admit that excess in spirit, while not desirable, can never become as dangerous as excess in matter. Matter running amuck, without the restraining and guiding influence of spirit, constitutes the grave menace of western civilisation. Hence it is that the west has always exalted Power above Piety and Pity, while from the east—though the east has not been without its wars and violences—has gone forth the message of peace. One need not at all be astonished at the carnage which hurls this glittering western civilisation of ours into utter ruin before our very eyes: it was written in the beginning, when the west first went forth on the road of ruthless power, that the journey will end in a pool of blood and tears. Consider that the east alone is the Home of Bibles and the cradle of religions: why has the west not produced a religion or a bible? The bibles of the west are, at best, Homer and the Niebelungen, the one coming from the south and the other from the north, but both celebrating the tense muscle and the dripping sword. Hence follows that the west stands in need of impregnation by the spirit of the east, in order that its material excess may be tempered into spiritual greatness. And this infusion of eastern thought into Europe and America can best be done by the present-day Jew.

We modern Jews can disprove Kipling's famous saying: "East is east, west is west, and the twain can never meet." For we are of the east, we are in the west. In our heart is the meeting-place of two worlds.

Wilson Keeps Us Out of War!

How Our President Applies the Golden Rule in a World Aflame

By GEORGE A. DORSEY, Ph.D., LL.D.

Before the Great War had fairly got its rivers of human blood well started toward the sea of oblivion, American public opinion voiced a belief and a prediction:

Civilization Is Bankrupt; Europe Will Not Let Us Stay Out of the War

The month of August, 1914, was for every American hours and days of fear, dread, consternation. As the days wore on, each more red, sullen, bloody; as each day saw the unexpected happen; as the flood of human blood widened, deepened, reddened; the world's marts closed, one by one; as the world's purse-strings tightened ever tighter; and as the world's business closed down upon thousands and ever-increasing thousands of unemployed; strong men looked each other in the face and with bated breath asked each other, "What next? What is to be the end?"

The year 1914 dragged its monstrous, loathsome length along, and 1915 came—with new forms of International hatred and new expressions of International frightfulness. Then came the Lusitania!

Public belief now became certainty—Civilization is bankrupt; and public prediction saw itself fulfilled—Europe has dragged us into war!

Right there, please bear in mind that this Democratic Administration on March 4, 1913, inherited bad times, Boss Rule, and an "affair" with Mexico. Before the war was up bad time had given way to confidence, and we were on our way.

Then that Great War Cloud began to spread like a pall over American business—trade was paralyzed, the banks began to hoard gold and issue clearance house receipts, confidence was destroyed. "It comes," whispered scared souls, "it comes—the Panic! The War!"

Wilson Was in the White House

"We can't keep out," timid souls kept saying: "Europe won't let us stay out of this war. Do you suppose they are going to tear each other's throats, drain each other's blood, and blow up each other's wealth—and let us stand by and pursue the paths of profitable peace?"

That question was asked not by this or that man, but was the big question that traveled back and forth and up and down the continent from Maine to California, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf. It was asked by presidents of railways, of banks, of corporations, of trusts; by the man in the street, the blacksmith at the forge, and the farmer at the plow. And the opinion actually prevailed in America that in some way, somehow, we would be dragged into this monstrous thing. And panic got its myriad slimy legs at work and began to crawl forth—but it never reached the Man in the White House!

Public opinion had overlooked our greatest asset for sanity—

Wilson Was in the White House

Wilson administered the nation's affairs in conformity with the spirit of American independence and in accordance with the principles of humanity.

His four years' experience pre-eminently gives him that "efficiency" which Mr. Hughes properly demands shall be the equipment of the man who is to guide the nation's destinies during the next four years.

His opponent—lawyer that he is—failing facts for honest criticism, resorts to unseemly abuse, finds fault where none exists, ignobly overlooks obvious virtues, and thus seeks under cheap ridicule and carping criticism to reinstate his backers, the Old Guard, who while preaching "Liberty" and ranting "Rights of Man" stole the country blind.

Wilson's democracy is as broad as his republicanism, and his progressiveness is based on conceptions gained from a knowledge of history and his belief in the nation's destiny.

He Has Kept Us at Peace

With the world afire he has kept us at peace. He dared the nation to do right—as became a statesman, and a man, and the President of the richest, strongest and most self-respecting nation in the world. Every American can thank God for his citizenship and look his flag in the face—its record has never been cleaner or more honorable. Nor have we had to surrender a single conviction of honest and fearless men. Our national consciousness has been robbed of the brutality of a mob swerved by passion and the greed of those who profit by the flow of blood.

He has not been stampeded to do the bidding of reckless capitalists who would exploit the national resources of Mexico.

Daring Predatory Wealth, both in Wall Street and at the ballot box, he had the courage to throttle an antiquated financial system based on a fifty-year-old Government-need to sell bonds and which had been so manipulated as to concentrate the people's cash in the hands of the ring and restrict credit for the use of its friends.

He dared remove the tariff so far from politics that it no longer shuts us out of world-commerce, violates every decent principle of taxation, and makes our Government a facile tool and a silent partner in the hands of private interests.

He Brought Prosperity

He brought to the nation a degree and a kind of prosperity unparalleled in world history, and enabled us in four years to reach a position in resources and resourcefulness, in wealth and in individual and collective intelligence, supreme among the nations of the world.

His far-reaching intelligence saw that we were from fifty to one hundred years behind in scientific, economic and business-like methods of agriculture—hence the Rural Credits Bill which gives to agriculture the efficiency of great business enterprises, and to the farmer the same access to credit that has hitherto been reserved for the merchant and the manufacturer; hence also the Good Roads Law, which will save hundreds of millions of dollars, facilitate human intercourse, check the urban tendency, and add enormously to the value of farm land.

He humanized human labor—freed it of its enslavement to insensate corporate greed; gave it a Bill of Rights, a Magna Charta; and abolished Child Labor. By law, the injunction can no longer be abused in labor disputes, nor is man's labor a commodity open to barter and sale like inanimate things.

He has prepared us to defend our national honor, as we were never before prepared; insured us against war and its indescribable horrors and iniquities; and guaranteed the nation against foreign aggressions.

Is Not That a Record?

The future historian will agree with Dr. Eliot, the distinguished leader of American scholarship, that this Administration has done more for the nation than the Republican Party accomplished in five times as many years, and that the period from 1912 to 1916 will be memorable in the history of the United States for the extraordinary amount of good work that Wilson's Administration has accomplished.

"Speak Softly and Carry a Big Stick" is a good motto for a prize-fighter, and Might Makes Right conquered Belgium—but neither is a worthy slogan of the Leader of a civilized nation! Humanity has not won its victories in that sign nor has civilization made permanent headway under that banner. If the Golden Rule is good conduct among the men of the earth, it is better conduct for the nations of the earth; and until international ethics are at least comparable to business ethics and the code of honor among gentlemen, we must go on with reasonable preparedness and continue to expect wars.

Woodrow Wilson is the greatest President America has produced since Lincoln. He has done his duty. By his works you may know him. He has never disappointed nor deceived. There is no "bully" in his vocabulary, nor "big stick" in his armory. And he has made good! His administration has prepared and defended us; abolished panics; levied income taxes; controlled iniquitous trusts; conserved national resources; stamped out graft and special privileges from legislation; slain the Bosses and wiped out the Lobby; made agriculture a business, and humanized labor; and added so much progressive, constructive, business-like and humanitarian legislation to the statute books that the Progressive Party had to go out of business. The country needs him. He has been fair to the American people—the American people believe in fair play—they know a good man when they see him. Would you like to go back to Taft? Roosevelt chose Taft—who betrayed the people, says Roosevelt; yet today both back Hughes—as do also Penrose, Smoot, Crane, Barnes, Mann, and Cannon; and what else? The G. O. P.! Same old Crowd. Same old Bosses. Same old Lobby.

Civilization Is Not Bankrupt

Its greatest commandment has been written into the nation's law. We are not at war. We have won our victories by the reasonableness of our cause. We know where Mr. Wilson stands. We know what we may expect of him. If the Golden Rule is good enough to guide us in our dealings with our brother, it is good enough to direct our course with our neighbor nations; and it should serve to point the way on November 7th!

Cheese Soup.

Saute in butter 2 tablespoonfuls of finely chopped carrots and half the quantity of chopped onion, using 1 tablespoon of butter. Gradually add 2 cups of hot vegetable stock; boil 15 minutes altogether, then strain and add a cup of scalded milk, 1 1/2 teaspoons of salt and 1/2 saltspoon of pepper, and thicken with 2 tablespoonfuls of flour creamed with 1 of butter. When ready to serve stir in 1/4 cupful of grated cheese and cook until it is melted.

Scalloped Potatoes with Cheese.

Put in a well-buttered pudding dish alternate layers of thinly sliced potato, covered with butter, pepper and salt, and a very thin layer of grated cheese; dust a few bread crumbs over the top, add a cup of milk and bake in the oven until done.

One may use one's favorite cookie recipe and after the dough is rolled out, sprinkle it with chopped dates or figs, then cover with a thin layer of dough, sprinkle with sugar and bake.

Healthy Food.

By DR. ELIZABETH HAMILTON MUNSEY.
Pure blood is essential in order to refresh the cells, purify the brain, and in general to make one feel good. If poisons are carried into the blood through the food that we consume, then the system is constantly busy ridding itself of the poison, resulting in its getting weakened, and disease then comes. This was the case twenty-five years ago, when one of our family noticed that, with the use of a certain baking powder, she suffered an attack of indigestion; and as we come from a family of doctors, and my father was a stomach specialist, he immediately made a thorough investigation of all food used in our home. We discovered that a certain kind of green sour pickle caused a similar attack in the stomach, and, at the same time, that biscuits made in the old style with cream of tartar and soda were perfectly healthy. Again, sour pickles made in another style did not harm the sufferer.

My father discovered that alum was used in the baking powder and in the preparation of the sour pickles. Since then we used in our house only cream of tartar and soda, until some time later we adopted Royal Baking Powder, which we have used until the present time in our home and in our sanatorium.

This is a time of progress, and we do not have to look for the cause of certain diseases which come from certain foods. Nowadays we have chemists who can ascertain what we should eat; what is best fitted to be eaten by the person who performs physical labor, for the brain worker, what should be eaten by a child and what by an adult.

The old Biblical laws were compiled by a lawmaker who knew what was good for mankind. If we had followed them until now we should not require food which is prepared by chemists. As the situation now is, the human family has to such an extent strayed away from nature that disease and death are common occurrences. In olden times grapes, figs, etc., were the main food of these people, who almost reached Methuselah's age. Fruit is real food for the blood. It was recently proved that disordered stomach conditions spread rapidly among the Jewish people, particularly among those who are compelled by circumstances to buy cheap food. This led to an investigation of the different baking powders, of which the Jews use more than others. It was found that most of them used cheap baking powders, which contain alum. This proved a deviation from the old and good laws of nature. In order to be healthy we must all return to nature's own food, and in the grape we find the cream of tartar. Taking it out of the fruit just as in nature's own laboratory, the tartar's cream is used as the main element in Royal Baking Powder, which brings to the food a natural relish, which is the contrary of food which is made with minerals, such as alum and phosphate, of which the cheap baking powders are made. The tendency to sacrifice quality and health in consideration of economy is the result of negligence. The best economy in the home is to use fresh nourishing food, and to this a good baking powder is essential.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Sephardic Jews of New York.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The letter of Samuel M. Auerbach, in which he recounts at length his knowledge of and services for the Oriental Jews, is as inconsistent as it is insincere. Although he claims to have written several articles about the Oriental Jews, I have never come across any of his articles, excepting the one recently published in The Immigrants in America Review, and I must tell him that if this is a sample of the others, it is a very poor method to write articles by gathering what other men have written on the same subject and adding a few fringes to it, especially when these decorations are of such poor taste as those that Mr. Auerbach has fastened to his article in order to give it some originality.
The article to which the name of Samuel M. Auerbach is signed is nothing more than a popular hashing up of Dr. D. de Sola Pool's original investigation of the Levantine Jews in the United States presented before the Eighth Biennial Session of the National Conference of Jewish Charities at Memphis, May 6, 1914, and published in Jewish Charities, June, 1914, pp. 12-27.
Paragraphs and sentences, fact after fact, and phrase after phrase, in the article to which Mr. Auerbach's name is attached are taken bodily from that survey without credit being given for the source of his knowledge and words. This fact will suffice to characterize the nature of Mr. Auerbach's claims. Poor enough must have been the sincerity of his investigations into the Oriental Jews in this country and his surveys of their social, industrial and economic conditions, if he allows himself the credit of the work done by Dr. D. de Sola Pool. For the taxpayers' sake, I hope that he does more original and valuable work in all the different departments of the various States for which he claims in his letter to have been official investigator.
The founders of the Federation of Oriental Jews have very little to be proud of, although Mr. Auerbach claims it as an honor to himself to be one of them. Naturally, as such, Mr. Auerbach will not confess the truth of the complete failure of the Federation, although at the end of his article in The Immigrants in America Review, he admits its weakness and comparative failure. Let him be sincere and write the epitaph of this unfortunate organization.

Mr. Auerbach also shows himself a remarkably poor investigator when he admits that he does not know of my work, which has been going on for the last three years in the very heart of the district where more than half of the Oriental-Sephardim live, and where it has grown to such dimensions as to have completely outgrown the comparatively large house which the Sisterhood of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation occupies, at No. 86 Orchard street. I am almost inclined to believe that this Mr. Auerbach based his investigation and surveys more on what the so-called leaders and would-be leaders tell him than on what he does himself. So far as the social and spiritual conditions of the Oriental-Sephardim is concerned, he shows himself to be in complete ignorance. Without commenting on his lack of wisdom in writing a letter, the main, almost only, purpose of which is to advertise an organization, which only exists on paper, I do not know how good a Jew or American Mr. Auerbach may be. But he deserves the severest condemnation for trying to foment discord in the community by making it appear as if Sephardim and Ashkenazim are two opposing factions in the community. The community knows that Americanism and Judaism are based on character, and that our Americanism is in no way affected by whether we are Sephardim or Ashkenazim. These are historical, traditional and sentimental differences of the utmost value, and in order to be true to themselves, both Sephardim and Ashkenazim must maintain their valuable traditions, by loyally preserving which they will prove themselves the best Americans.

Although in his letter to you he regrets my use of the term Sephardim in reference to the Oriental Jews, yet he himself in his recent article gladly takes over from Dr. Pool's article the term Sephardim. It is interesting to note further that in the current number of La America, one of the Spanish Jewish journals of this city, I am taken to task in a long editorial for using the term Oriental in describing the Jews from the Levant. The editor states that Oriental Jews do not exist, only Sephardic or Ashkenazic Jews exist, and the only name that may be given to the Ladino-speaking Jews is Sephardim. I leave Mr. Auerbach to make up his mind as to what he really knows about the Oriental-Sephardim of this city, when he has not Dr. Pool's article to draw upon, and to fight out with the editor of La America the question of whether the Oriental-Sephardim of this city are to be known as Orientals, as he claims, or as Sephardim as "La America" claims. To me the important point is not one of words. Mr. Auerbach may continue to deal in them. I am continuing my work among the Oriental-Sephardim of this city.

A Warning to Those Remitting to Roumania.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The National Conference Committee of Roumanian Jews beg to call the attention of the general public, that certain people, misinformed about the true conditions in Roumania, are organizing relief committees with the object of collecting moneys for Roumanian Jewish war sufferers. The public is therefore warned and urged not to give them any. However, people desiring to assist the Roumanian Jews are requested for the present, until the National Conference of the Roumanian Jews will be held on December 31, 1916, at Philadelphia, to send their contributions to either of the three relief committees now in existence, to wit:
The American Jewish Relief Committee, 58 William street, New York.
The Central Relief Committee, World Building, New York.
The People's Relief Committee, 171 East Broadway, New York.
Remittances may be marked to be used for Roumanian Jewish war sufferers.
Very truly yours,
EDWARD HERBERT, Sec.

The Federation and the Central Jewish Institute.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies have not taken the Central Jewish Institute into the Federation. However, according to their rules, a contributor to the Federation may designate what amount is to be paid out of his subscription to any society, unaffiliated with the Federation.

May I call the attention of your readers to the fact that if they desire to contribute to the Central Jewish Institute they should indicate the amount of their donation when filling out the Federation's subscription blank? Yours very truly,

EDWIN KAUFMAN,
Chairman Membership Committee, Central Jewish Institute.

One of the Submerged.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
Having traveled extensively and coming across numerous rabbis, preachers, ministers, instructors, Hazzanim, Schochetim and Melammedim of all shades and qualifications, armed and equipped as most of them are with testimonials and credentials, your correspondent was amazingly surprised to meet Rev. Nathan Sandler, the minister of the small Jewish congregation of Roanoke, Va., who displays written testimonials and letters of the highest praise, penned by the distinguished men of light and learning, the Right Reverends Joseph Baer Solowetzky, of Brest-Lithausk; Elias Hayim Meisel, of Lodz, and Hayim Herz Halperin, of Bialystok. The last-named city being the birth place of the writer of this letter, your humble servant indulged in the reading and perusal of the certificate that bears the signature and seal of its rabbi, his countryman. Men of the rabbinical, ministerial, instructive and ecclesiastic professions have been examined before the writer by the hundreds, their qualities verified and qualifications established by scholastic indorsements and clerical recommendations, emanating, however, as the latter did from mediocre rabbis and insignificant sources, reflecting but little if any glory upon their respective bearers and producing, therefore, doubtful effects. Nathan Sandler, on the other hand, is skillful in his ministerial exercises and versed in theology. And yet he is almost passed in oblivion and left in obscurity, serving a handful of co-religionists in Roanoke. The Rev. Mr. Sandler should have been called to minister and officiate in prominent synagogues and serve in the capacities of Hazzan, Schochet, Mohel and minister in any of the large and prospering temples of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston or Baltimore? Well, Probitas laudatur et alget!
Very truly yours,
NACHMAN HELLER.

Doctor Coffee in Canada.

Doctor Rudolph I. Coffee, social service director of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, just returned from a very successful trip to the Northwest and Canada, stopping off en route. He occupied the pulpit of Dr. Rybins, of St. Paul, Wednesday evening, October 25 (Shimini Azereth), and of Dr. Delnard, in Minneapolis, Friday evening, October 27. On Thursday morning Doctor Coffee preached for Rabbi Matt, of Minneapolis, and Thursday evening (Simchas Torah) in the pulpit of Rabbi Kahn, of St. Paul.

In Winnipeg, Canada, the B'nai B'rith meeting on Sunday was most unusual. Once a year the local lodge celebrates "B'nai B'rith Day," and this year some members of the order traveled hundreds of miles to attend the gathering. Two of the men in particular came almost 400 miles. The following day Doctor Coffee spoke on the "Big Brother Movement" in the Congregational Church of Winnipeg, Chief Justice Samuel Mathes presiding. The return trip included a visit to Grand Forks, N. D., where Doctor Coffee delivered a public address in the City Hall on "Judaism and Social Service." In this section a large number of Jewish merchants may be found, successfully improving their condition. The big brother movement is being encouraged by the Social Service Department of the B'nai B'rith and making rapid headway in many parts of the country.

To Raise $10,000,000 for Jewish War Sufferers.

A national campaign to raise at least $10,000,000 in 1917 for the relief of Jewish war sufferers in all parts of Europe will be launched shortly by the Joint Distribution Committee, representing the American Jewish Relief Committee, the Central Relief Committee and the People's Relief Committee. Felix Warburg is chairman of the committee.

The new campaign was awaiting the arrival of Dr. J. L. Magnes. He has been investigating methods of distributing relief in Germany and Austria, but was barred from Russia because of speeches he has made.

At a meeting to be held at Carnegie Hall on Thursday, November 23, Dr. Magnes will describe conditions as he saw them in Europe. Cantor Joseph Rosenblatt will recite an El Molay Rachamim, and it is expected that Mayor Mitchell will preside.

Sinal Temple Notes.

Elaborate plans are being made to insure the success of the theatre party, which will take place at the Bronx Opera House Monday night, November 6. The play to be produced is "Just a Woman."

The Religious School opened last Sunday with an unusually large enrollment. The ten classes, which have already been formed, are commodiously located in the beautiful new vestry rooms of the temple. The school is in session on Sunday mornings from 10 to 12 and on Monday and Thursday afternoons from 4.30 to 5.30 p. m.

ANS. TO CORRESPONDENTS.

KATE C. FRANK.—We refer you to Dr. Moses Hyamson's article on "The Jewish Dietary Laws," which appeared in the HEBREW STANDARD of April 23, 1915. This article will answer your questions fully.

MUSIC NOTES.

The first "Explanatory Talk" at the piano by Walter Damrosch for the Music Lovers' Club will be given on Monday, November 6, at 3 p. m., at the Cosmopolitan Club, 135 East Fortieth street. Raff's symphony, "Lenore," and Cesar Franck's symphonic poem, "Les Djinns," which are programmed for the Symphony Society concerts on November 10 and 12, will be discussed by Mr. Damrosch.

On November 4, at Aeolian Hall, a very interesting recital will be given by Miss Beatrice Harrison, cellist; Mr. Samuel Gardner, violinist, and Mr. Clarence Adler, pianist. They will do the Tchaikowsky trio, and solo numbers will be given by Miss Harrison and Mr. Gardner.

Miss Paquita Madriguera, the Spanish pianist, who arrived in this country last week, will give her first recital of the season on Tuesday afternoon, November 7, at Aeolian Hall. Miss Madriguera, who gave her first New York recital last season, and praised by the critics will give a very interesting program, including numbers by Beethoven, Haendel, Granados, Schumann, Chopin, Rachmininoff, Miss Madriguera herself, Debussy, Paganini and Liszt.

Marcella Craft will give her first song recital this season at Aeolian Hall on Saturday afternoon, November 11, at 3.30 o'clock. The eminent American soprano has decided to sing an all-German program on this occasion. For her next recital, which she will give early in January, the clever American woman has deecided upon a program of all-American songs. Kurt Schindler, the celebrated conductor of the city's exquisite choral society, the Schola Cantorum, and director of the music at Temple Emanuel, will assist Miss Craft at the piano. The program is as follows:

- I.
- Die heiligen drei Konige aus dem Morgenland Richard Strauss
- Das Rosenband Richard Strauss
- Einkehr Richard Strauss
- Freundliche Vision Richard Strauss
- Sling Richard Strauss
- II.
- Ich hor ein Voglein locken Hans Pfitzner
- Venus mater Hans Pfitzner
- Sonst Hans Pfitzner
- Hast du von den Fischerkindern Pfitzner
- Frieden Hans Pfitzner
- Verrat Hans Pfitzner
- III.
- Allerseelen Richard Strauss
- Nacht Richard Strauss
- Morgen Richard Strauss
- Schlagende Herzen Richard Strauss
- Zueignung Richard Strauss

The second of Max Sander's Sunday night elite musicales at the Harris Theatre will contain a number of very interesting novelties. The string and woodwind sections of the Russian Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Modest Altschuler, will play several compositions written for those instruments only, which will include Charles Wakefield Cadman's "To a Vanishing Race," played for the first time in New York, and also works of Mozart, Tchaikowsky, Arensky and Godard. Charles Wakefield Cadman, the composer, will play his suite "Thunderbird," based on Blackfeet Indian tunes, and transcribed from the full orchestral score of incident music to Norman Bel-Geddes' play of that name.

Charles Harrison, the American tenor, will sing two groups of American songs by Chas. W. Cadman and H. T. Burleigh, with the composers at the piano. These composers are great admirers of Mr. Harrison's art, and will thus show their admiration for this American artist.

Distinguished Jews of America

SAMUEL CHARLES LAMPOR.

Young and Successful and a Communal Leader—Director of Many Institutions and Promoting Jewish Ideals.

Samuel Charles Lampport is the mainspring of the Lampport Manufacturing and Supply Company, of No. 511 Broadway, this city, and that is all that should be necessary to say about Mr. Lampport's commercial and financial activities, for the firm is the largest of its kind dealing in remnants, in the world, enjoying the largest capital and highest credit ratings given by the commercial agencies.

But Mr. Lampport's importance is not reckoned by his financial status, for he is a large Jewish communal figure, and the wave of material prosperity has not engulfed him and carried him away from the faith of his forefathers, for he has consistently remained a Jew, with Jewish conceptions, Jewish aims and Jewish ideals.

Mr. Lampport was born in Marienpol, Poland, on April 4, 1880, and is very proud of his ancestral tree, for his grandfather was the Rav of Stallowitz, a famous lamdam, darchan and author. He also glows with pride at the mention of his father, Mr. Nathan Lampport, whose interests the firm purchased some ten years ago in order to enable the father to devote his time to communal and charitable affairs exclusively. And Mr. Lampport also speaks with reverence and pride of his mother, Mrs. Sarah Lampport, an Esheth Chayil, whose untimely demise was recently recorded.

Samuel Charles Lampport came to America when he was but one and one-half years old. He went through public schools, graduated from City College and later on attended Brown University, at Providence, R. I. But he was never estranged from the traditions of his ancestral faith, and today is one of the most active spirits among the younger leaders of American Jewry, as may be gleaned from the fact that he is a member of the American Jewish Committee, a director of the Beth Israel Hospital, of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, of the Uptown Talmud Torah, of the Central Jewish Institute, the Home of the Daughters of Jacob (his mother-in-law, Mrs. A. J. Dworsky, is the president and leading spirit of this organization) and many others. In addition, he is an active member of the Jewish Publication Society of America, of the Brown University Club and is a director of the Greenwich Bank. He is also active in the councils of the Awkright Club, which is composed of the leaders of the dry goods trade. It was rumored that there are anti-Semitic tendencies in this club, but Mr. Lampport has proved to the contrary and is proud of the fact that he is a member and that his firm commands the respect of the American merchants with whom it has dealings.

Mr. Lampport is greatly interested in the Jewish problem and Judaism in general, and his highest ambition is to prove to the world that when Jews receive equal rights and opportunities they do not remain as simple materialists, but devote themselves to charitable and spiritual affairs. He believes in conducting business according to all rules of business ethics, and the success of the Lampport Manufacturing Company is ample attestation of the soundness of his theories.

SAMUEL BAYER.

An Example of How a Russian Jewish Immigrant Made His Mark—Strictly Orthodox.

Bayer Brothers, cotton converters at No. 53 Fifth avenue, are recognized as one of the wealthiest firms whose members are composed of Russian Jewish immigrants. But apart from the firm's wealth, Mr. Samuel Bayer, one of the partners, has a most interesting personality, as the writer gleaned when interviewing him among the "Distinguished Jews in America." He was born fifty-five years ago in Usishka, near Kovno. His grandfather was famed as Rabbi Elijah, for forty-two years the Rav of Rumsishka; and his father, though a wealthy owner of a flour mill, was one of the famous scholars of the vicinity.

Samuel Bayer came to America in 1893, and like most of his countrymen, when he first came here, he took to peddling. He met with success from the start and after being in the country only one year, opened a little trimming store in Eldridge street, eventually drifting into the cotton converting business, where today he stands as one of the leaders in his line.

Mr. Bayer is a strict adherent to orthodox Judaism, and is interested in all Jewish movements. He is the president of the Uptown Talmud Torah, vice-president of the Congregation Derech Emunoh, of Arverne; a director of the Chesed Shel Emeth and is a contributor to almost every Jewish cause extant.

Mr. Bayer was married in Russia when he was twenty-two years of age, and to him and his wife, Sarah, six children have come. Two of them are married—one a son-in-law of William Fischman, the well-known philanthropist.

Mr. Bayer was asked what he considered the most necessary element for a young man in order to succeed in life. His reply was "in giving my answer, I have in mind only Jewish young men, and it is my opinion that one in order to succeed, must possess some knowledge, must be a good American and most important of all, must be a Jew and know Jewish history, in order to know how to remain a Jew."

SAMUEL BERNSTEIN.

A Simple but Good-Hearted Man—Modest, Honest and Fair-Minded—Believes in Doing the Right Thing All the Time.

The writer had an opportunity to interview Mr. Samuel Bernstein, of the firm of Bernstein & Co., manufacturers of cloaks and suits, of No. 38 West Thirty-second street. He did not go to Mr. Bernstein as one of the wealthy members of the community, although Mr. Bernstein is fast making his mark in the commercial field, nor did he have cause to interview him as a philanthropist and communal worker, for Mr. Bernstein thinks he is still at that stage where he must devote his attention to his business. But the writer had heard that Mr. Bernstein was the possessor of good-heartedness, that highest qualification of a man.

The immigrant Jews who have been successful in America, like every other class, consist of many different elements. Some are interesting for their Yichas, others for their ability, others for their philanthropy, and others for their wealth. Mr. Bernstein belongs to that class whom the writer would term as "heart-aristocrats," which is, indeed, a most expressive term.

Born in Kalvarie, Suwalk, in 1874, Mr. Bernstein came to America in 1892, and as is usual, came here very poor and had to struggle in the beginning. He worked at different trades and many were the disappointments with which he met in his first years in America. But fired with an indomitable determination eventually to better himself, he was able to leave the class where thousands of Jewish immigrants still find themselves, namely, poor, struggling workmen, and today he heads a very large firm.

His personal character during all these years has been spotless, and his business career has been in keeping. He is not personally active with many charitable organizations, because he is rather modest, and as he expressed it, "I don't like to mingle in politics"; but Mr. Bernstein is a man of good heart, noble intentions and with a free hand gives to every cause to which he is asked to contribute.

When the writer propounded the question as to what he considered the most essential element to success, Mr. Bernstein at first declined to reply. He is very retiring and could see no reason why his advice should be considered of importance. He shrinks from the limelight and publicity, but when the interviewer explained to him the importance of this series of stories and their possible influence upon the rising generation, he readily consented. "As far as my experience goes," he said, "one must have two qualifications in order to succeed, and they are honesty and diligence. I attribute my success to these two practices and I believe that they will help every one who applies them constantly."

Mr. Bernstein was married in 1899, and two children afford him much pleasure in a happy domestic life and completing a happy domestic circle.

MAX ROTH.

A Man Who Has Made and Lost Five Fortunes—Still a Young Man and One of the Kings of the Waist Trade.

When you mention the name of Max Roth in New York no one will inquire who he is, for he is well known as one of the leading factors in the waist trade. Mr. Roth is only 44 years old, first having seen the light of day on April 12, 1872. He has accomplished wonders in formulating his career. Mr. Roth told the compiler that five times he had lost a fortune and stood on the brink of ruin, and several years ago it was generally known that Mr. Roth had lost several hundred thousand dollars in one day through unfortunate real estate speculation. But Mr. Roth was undaunted and today he is at the head of a big waist concern at No. 1115 Broadway, where he employs over 1,000 hands.

Mr. Roth did not care to discuss very widely his experiences in his ups and downs. He limited himself to a few biographical facts, stating that he was born in Mekillinitz, Galicia, and his father died when Max was but an infant, the father being but 19 years old at the time. When Max was fifteen years old he took charge of a big business which his grandfather had carried for years. He came to America in 1893 and at first worked for others, but at the first opportunity entered into business on his own account.

Mr. Roth contributes liberally to all the Jewish charities, although he is active in none. He has one son, who is engaged in business with him. Mr. Roth thinks that attending strictly to business is the most essential thing to success in life. He thinks that education doesn't matter so much, but if one attends strictly to business he will be bound to succeed.

HARRY ELIAS LAZARUS.

A Very Entertaining Personality—Active and Has Shaped a Very Interesting Career—Future Promises.

The compiler had an opportunity to interview one of the most intelligent and interesting personalities he has so far met in the world of Jews who have risen from the ranks. Said he, "if you wish to interview someone worth while and interesting, I would advise you to see Harry Elias Lazarus," and taking the cue, I did so, and without regret.

At the outset I might state that Mr. Lazarus cannot be put in the category of very wealthy Jews, nor has he achieved any niche in the hall of fame for his Jewish activities, but the writer unhesitatingly feels him well worth a place on the lists of those who have worked their way up from the lowest rung of the ladder, eventually reaching a place at the summit. What stands out most forcibly is his democracy and extreme courtesy, and he at once impresses you as a man who does not follow the beaten path, but displays much originality.

Born on July 12, 1871, in Yeshinowka, Province of Grodna, Mr. Lazarus is a scion of a family which boasted of many rabbis and famous Lamdanim. At the age of five his parents emigrated with him to Canada, where he received the education which a poor immigrant family can afford to give their offspring, and began the struggle of life. He remained in Canada for twenty-six years, but realizing that the opportunities there were more limited than those in the United States, he decided to leave Canada and, accordingly, came to New York, poor as the average immigrant just landed, but in his favor being the fact that he was conversant with the language. He soon discovered that he had made no mistake, for he obtained a position as salesman for a firm manufacturing soda fountains, remaining with the firm for four years, and while earning a successful living, he was not satisfied. He went to Chicago as Western representative of a similar firm and met with greater success. Recognizing in himself his business ability he demanded an interest in the firm, and upon being refused, he embarked in business for himself. He started a mineral water business, which proved so successful that five years later he was able to sell out to the trust at a very large figure. Feeling that he had earned a rest, he spent a year abroad in travel and recreation and returning, remained in New York, where he entered business with a partner, but the business not being to his liking, he soon dissolved the partnership. Some of his friends advised him to go into the raincoat business, suggesting as a partner a gentleman who was recognized as an expert in the trade. Mr. Lazarus listened to their arguments, and seeing the great possibilities in the business, determined to embark in it, but rather than be handicapped with a partner, decided to go in for himself and if necessary pay the penalty of inexperience. But that was never necessary, for today he is at the head of the Lazarus Raincoat Company, which has its office and factory at No. 682 Broadway, another factory at No. 57 Hope street, Brooklyn, and still a third one at Montreal, Canada.

Mr. Lazarus employs 400 people and has achieved fame as a United States Government contractor, and is held in high esteem by many officers of both the army and navy branches, with whom he has business dealings. He is one of the largest manufacturers in his line, and is president of the Raincoat Manufacturers' Association. He has taken a liking to fraternities and is somewhat of a "jiner," being a prominent Ben B'rith, a Scottish Rite Mason, an Elk, a Knight of Pythias, a member of the Royal Arcanum and other fraternities. He enjoys a wide circle of acquaintances and is well esteemed as a very pleasant companion.

His wife (nee Fanny Seligman, of Montreal) comes of a very prominent Jewish family. Three children complete a happy family circle.

Young Men's Hebrew Association.

Beginning this evening, November 3, there will be a series of lectures on the general subject, "Jewish Life in America." Miss Sadie American will give the opening address, taking as her topic "The Girl in Jewish Life."

Last Saturday evening, October 28, the Schechter Literary Society presented to the association a very beautiful portrait of Dr. Schechter. It was accepted on behalf of the association by Rabbi A. G. Robison, and Mr. Frank Schechter then addressed the society. He expressed his appreciation of the fact that this group of young men had chosen the name of his father for their society, and pointed out the many problems with which they would have to contend as members of a Jewish literary organization.

On Sunday evening, October 29, the Schechter Club met the Menke Social and Literary Society in a debate on the subject, "Resolved, That Strikes Should Be Settled by a Board of Arbitration." Decision was given to the Schechter Club after a spirited contest.

On Sunday evening, November 5, a members' social will be held, at which Miss Lucille Landers will recite "Daddy Long Legs."

On election night returns will be received at the association, a special wire having been secured for this purpose.

Beth Israel Notes.

Rabbi Elseman will visit the Florence Critterton League every Wednesday afternoon and conduct a religious service for the Jewish girls. This is being done under the auspices of the Religious Committee of the Council of Jewish Women. Mrs. Joseph Mayor Asher is the chairman of the committee.

The Junior League of the temple opened its year's activities on Sunday evening last, with an entertainment and dance at the Central Jewish Institute. The meeting was opened by Mr. Edelman, the chairman, who called upon Rabbi Elseman, who outlined the purposes of the league, which are social, educational and philanthropic. An entertainment and dance followed, with about 150 young men and women present.

A New Anthology of Jewish Poetry.

A new anthology of Jewish poetry, compiled and edited by Dr. Joseph Friedlander, rabbi of Temple Sholem, Plainfield, N. J., will shortly be published. The author has been engaged on the work for ten years, and it will undoubtedly be hailed as a distinct achievement in American Jewish scholarship. The anthology will be a standard book on the subject. It will consist of eight divisions, covering the entire field of Jewish verse. It will be out for sale about the middle of December.

Mr. L. Raphael, who for a period of eighteen years has been well and favorably known among our co-religionists in Yorkville and Harlem as a butcher who is thoroughly reliable as to the Kashruth of his meats, poultry, etc., takes pleasure in announcing that he is now the proprietor of the Mid-West Market, 588 Amsterdam avenue. Mr. Raphael has the indorsement of Rabbi M. S. Margolies, of the Kehilath Jeshurun Congregation, and other rabbinical authorities, and in his present establishment keeps meats, poultry, etc., of the highest quality only. He will be pleased to call for and deliver orders.

I WANT A "HOME"

ROOM and board wanted with a private orthodox family by an American-born young business man. None need reply who do not measure up to the following requirements:

Their orthodoxy must not be of the apologetic brand or half-baked kind, but must be stringently observed at home and abroad according to no less an authority than the Shulchan Orach.

Their home should not be a "stopping-off" place, but should represent the height of aestheticism combined with Jewishness, reinforced with an abundance of refinement and unalloyed Americanism.

If there is a family living within the T'Chum Sabbath from the Orach Chaim Synagogue (85th street and Lexington avenue) possessing these qualifications who want their home brightened by one who will bring to it good cheer, refined humor and a liberal financial recompense, please answer this advertisement. Apply to "HOME," care of this office.

The above advertisement appeared in last week's Hebrew Standard. I am still looking for an ideal Home.

One response stated that they would accommodate me for Sabbath only, if I could find some one else to take care of me for the other six days.

Another answer states: "We cannot give you a home, but can find you a wife."

Another: "Who and what are you that you are so particular?"

In answer to the above and, to the many others will say:

I am famous for my amiable disposition, and eat sparingly. Am more than willing to consider any reasonable proposition, but don't want any one to palm off a wife on me—anyway not during this busy season. If, however, I do not find what I want in a hurry I am likely to become desperate.

A program of lieder will be given by Clara Clemens in Aeolian Hall on Monday evening, November 13. Among other numbers which the contralto, whose accompaniments will be played by her husband, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, will sing are Brahms' "Mädchen's Lied," "Der Sandmann," "Mahnacht," "Nachtigale" and "Ständchen"; Clara Schumann's "Was weinst Du, Blüemlein?" and Robert Schumann's "An den Sonnenschein" and "Hochlaender wittwe."

JOSEPH STEINBERG, a member of the law firm of STEINBERG & LEVIN, with offices at No. 320 Broadway, Manhattan, New York City, was nominated as the candidate of the Republican, Progressive and Independence League Parties for Senate of the 20th Senatorial District. Mr. Steinberg was the Progressive Assemblyman from the 26th Assembly District, New York County, during the year 1914, and the Progressive-Republican Assemblyman for the year 1915. He was born April 22, 1883, at Manasquan, N. J., and received his education in the Public Schools at that place and graduated from the Manasquan High School; attended at the College of the City of New York; graduated from the New York University Law School, and was admitted to practice in February, 1905, and since then has been engaged in the active practice of the law. Mr. Steinberg is a member of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Hebrew Orphan Asylum, Uptown Talmud Torah, Marchzekel Talmud Torah, Yesheva Eitz Chaim, Yesheva Jacob Joseph, Congregation Orach Chaim and a member of many other fraternal and charitable institutions, and has devoted much of his time and means to charitable causes. While in the Assembly he served on the Assembly Committee, Electric, Gas and Water Supply, Canals and Social Welfare Committees. His record while in the Assembly was considered excellent and was highly commended for his work while a member of that body. He was instrumental in the passing of the bill prohibiting the reading of the Bible in Public Schools, and in other important legislation.—Adv.

Death of Famous German Scientist.

German Jewry, and the Order of the B'nai B'rith of that country particularly, is mourning the death of one of its most prominent leaders, in the person of Dr. Moritz Freyer, of Stettin, who died as the result of an operation in Berlin, aged sixty-seven years, on August 8, 1916.

The son of a rabbi, who occupied positions of distinction in Guttstadt and Marggrabowa, East Prussia, for more than sixty years, Moritz Freyer passed from the Gymnasium at Lyck to the Albertina University, Koenigsberg. In 1871 he took his degree of doctor of medicine, and very soon distinguished himself by his researches in connection with vaccination, which attracted the attention of the government, who sent him to Italy to examine and report on the vaccination institutions in that country.

During the present war Dr. Freyer's work was in connection with the Red Cross, the training of the German Red Cross nurses having been entrusted to his supervision.

Dr. Freyer was after Dr. Vogelstein—the most prominent Jewish leader in Stettin, both as president of the great synagogue and also as president of the local B'nai B'rith lodge for many years. Dr. Freyer's relatives in America are very numerous. Two sisters—Mrs. Isidore Lindner, of 134 West Eighty-sixth street, and Mrs. Fromholz—reside in New York, as does a nephew, the well-known lawyer, Mr. Walter Lindner, and a niece, Mrs. Dr. Henry Moskowitz. Two other sisters of Dr. Freyer reside at Houston, Tex., and other relatives are scattered all over the United States.

A Jewish Literary Club has been formed at Ottawa, Canada.

 If you envy us because we are free, because we do not go to Cheder (The Rebbe is lying ill), it is for nothing—for nothing. No one knows whom the shoe pinches—no one. No one knows who the real murderers are. We rarely see one another. When we meet, the first words are: "How is the teacher?" (He is no more Mazeppa.) And when we pray, we ask God to save the teacher. We weep in silence: "Oh, Father of the Universe! Father of the Universe!" And Elya? Don't ask about him. May the devil take him—that same Elya!
 * * * * *

EPILOGUE.
 When the Rebbe recovered (he was ill six weeks, in the height of fever, and babbled constantly of murderers), and we went back to Cheder, we hardly recognized him, so greatly had he changed. What had become of his lion's roar? He had put away his strap, and there was no more: "Lie down" and no more Mazeppa. On his face there was to be seen a gentle melancholy. A felling of regret stole into our hearts. And Mazeppa suddenly grew dear to us, dear to our souls. Oh, if he had only scolded us! But, it was as if nothing had happened. Suddenly, he stopped us in the middle of the lesson and asked us to tell him again the story of that Lag Beomer day, and of the murderers in the forest. We did not hesitate, but told him again and again the story we knew off by heart—how murderers had come upon us in the forest, how they fell upon him, tied him to the tree and were going to kill him with a knife, how we rushed excitedly into the town, and by our shouting and clamors, saved him.
 The Rebbe listened to us with closed eyes. Then he sighed and asked us suddenly:
 "Are you quite sure they were murderers?"
 "What else were they?"
 "Perhaps bandits?"
 And the teacher's eyes sought the distance. And we imagined that a curiously cunning smile was hovering around his thick lips.

BROOKLYN NOTES. Dr. Elzas in Brooklyn. Rev. Dr. Barnett A. Elzas has been engaged to conduct the services and deliver the sermon on Friday evenings at the Hebrew Educational Society. These services will be inaugurated for the season on November 10. A volunteer choir will assist. It is expected that the young people of the neighborhood will avail themselves of the opportunity of attending the services in large numbers. President Aaron W. Levy presided over a very interesting and enthusiastic function on Sunday afternoon. It was the convention for nominations to the house conference. It was attended by members of senior, intermediate and junior clubs of the building. The following were nominated: For president, Isadore Silverstein, Benjamin J. Asherowitz; for vice-president, Florence Shapiro, Isaac Levinson; for secretary, Jacob Etkin, Louis Krone, Harry Stern. The exercises were concluded with an address by Dr. Oswald Schlockow. The election will take place on Sunday, November 4. In the evening members of the senior clubs participated in a Hallowe'en dance. The auditorium was beautifully decorated by members of the clubs. The first of a series of neighborhood receptions to working young women was held on Sunday afternoon, with Miss Bertha Brenner in charge and Mrs. Aaron W. Levy and Mrs. Oswald Schlockow assisting. For the benefit of high-grade pupils of the neighborhood the first vocational guidance lecture of the season was arranged to take place on Wednesday after-

Shaari Zedek Notes. The annual meeting of the congregation took place last Sunday afternoon with a goodly attendance of the members. Reports were read showing the congregation to be in splendid condition. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Max Reiss, the president; Dr. Max Ralsin, the rabbi of the congregation; Mr. John Bogart, and others. At the election of officers which took place, the same officers of last year were re-elected; namely, Max Reiss, president; Harris Brown, vice-president; Sigmund Cahn, treasurer; Albert Linneman, financial secretary, and Harris Waldeck, recording secretary. In recognition of his completion of ten years of successful service as Cantor, Rev. J. M. Richardson was presented with handsomely engraved resolutions. The second meeting of the Temple Auxiliary took place Monday evening, with a very good attendance. After a brief business meeting, at which the recommendations of the organization committee were ratified and steps were taken toward the election of permanent officers, there was an interesting address on "Housing Conditions in Brooklyn" by Mr. John P. Gebhard, of the Tenement House Commission. Dr. Max Ralsin will conduct a class in Jewish literature for the Menorah Circle of Hunter College. He will begin his work there on the afternoon of Monday, November 6. The annual luncheon of the Sisterhood of the temple will take place on Thursday, November 9, at Willoughby Mansion, 667 Willoughby avenue.

Temple Petach Tikvah. The first meeting of the Congregation Temple Petach Tikvah for this season took place last Thursday evening in the vestry rooms of the temple, and was attended by a large majority of the members. Mr. Wm. B. Roth, the president, outlined several of the plans which the congregation is about to undertake for the coming year. Rabbi Levinthal in presenting his report of the various activities in the temple, made an appeal for the establishment of a library of Jewish books for the benefit of the children of the religious school. In response to his appeal Mr. Morris Halperin presented $100 as a nucleus of a library fund; Mr. P. Willinsky presented $25, Mr. Moses Sax presented a set of the Jewish Encyclopedia, and Mr. Henry Seinfeld presented a set of Graetz's History of the Jews. The names of fifteen new members were proposed by the chairman of the Membership Committee, Mr. Henry Seinfeld, making the total membership of the congregation 250. A special delegation of twelve members were appointed to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of Dr. Levinthal's father in Philadelphia on Sunday, October 29.

Hospital Cornerstone Laid. The cornerstone of the Bikur Cholim Kasher Hospital, Sumner and Lafayette avenues, was laid last Sunday at 3 p. m. A parade from Royal Palace Hall, No. 16 Manhattan avenue, to the hospital grounds, preceded the ceremonies, over which Judge Jacob S. Stroh presided. The hospital, which will accommodate 150 patients, will be completed in December. The officers are: M. Arbeit, president; A. Dworetzky, first vice-president; R. Gross, second vice-president; Mrs. Glickman, treasurer; A. Schifstein, R. Meerovitz, S. Quinn and J. Preekin, trustees; A. Teitelbaum, secretary. Board of Directors: T. Levin, N. Canno, A. Ettinger, S. Korenberg, J. Gordon, A. Cholodenko, R. Mantel, J. Wecht, R. Hirschleifer, J. Brecker, M. Epstein, B. Mushkin, G. Kunin, Mrs. Gluckman, A. Robinowitz, P. Friedman, Mrs. Diamond, Mrs. Rubinstein, M. Goldberg, J. R. Ratzan, Mrs. Weinberger.

New Rabbi for Bath Beach. Congregation Sons of Israel, of Bath Beach, have elected Rev. Samuel Sachs as their rabbi. The formal installation of the new rabbi as well as that of the other officers will take place Sunday, November 7, at 8.30 p. m., at the synagogue, No. 71 Bay Twenty-second street. The following will participate: Rabbis Moses Hyamson, E. L. Solomon, Benjamin A. Lichter and Cantors Rosenblatt and Malloswky. Rabbi Sachs will preach this Sabbath morning.

On Monday afternoon, November 6, at 3 o'clock, Harold Henry, American pianist, will give a recital at the Comedy Theatre, 110 West Forty-first street. His program follows: Toccata in G major.....Bach Allegro, Adagio, Allegro e presto. Vivaldi-Bach Rondo from Sonata, Op. 23.....Weber (Perpetual Motion.) Novelette, Op. 21, No. 8.....Schumann Preludes, Op. 28, Nos. 18, 11, 13.....Chopin Bolonaise, Op. 52.....Chopin Sonata, Op. 57, No. 3.....MacDowell Mesto, ma con passione. Tristemente, ma con tenerezza. Allegro con fuoco. Cynth Scott Sonetto 123 del Petrarca.....Liszt Le Vent.....Alkan Auf den Bergen.....Grieg

Louis Cornell, at his piano recital in Aeolian Hall on Monday afternoon, November 20, will play, among other numbers, the Beethoven sonata, Op. 90; the Chopin variations, Op. 12; the Dohnanyi "Winter Reigen," Op. 13, and two compositions by Rudolph Ganz. Governor Dunne has appointed Mrs. Hannah Solomon a trustee of the University of Illinois.

Why Rabbis Leave the Pulpit. In view of the fact that three rabbis of prominence and high standing have resigned their positions within the past two months, a contemporary raises the question why it is that rabbis, even those of leading congregations, should feel impelled to leave the pulpit for other fields of endeavor.

The lack of responsiveness in modern Jewish congregations is another fertile source for the rabbi's discouragement and disheartened attitude to his pulpit work. Congregations who regard the synagogue as a living force and as an influence in the life and conduct of its members are exceedingly few in this country.

The annual fall meeting of the Executive Committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis was held in Cincinnati, Ohio, at the Rockdale Avenue Temple, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 24 and 25.

Men and women throughout the country who are interested in philanthropic endeavors are watching with interest the campaign of New York Jews to establish a central agency for the collection of all charitable contributions.

Among the many congratulatory messages that have come in is one from Mr. Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and the leading spirit in philanthropic endeavor in Chicago, who wired the following to Mr. Warburg:

Heartiest congratulations upon your having reached the million mark in federation. It is a wonderful start. Sincerely hope the enthusiasm of your committee will not be permitted to wane until goal is reached.

Reclaiming of Palestine.

The well known German scientist, Prof. Carl Ballod, has published in the Staats und Wirtschaftszeitung an estimate of the capacity of Palestine to absorb a new population, coming to the conclusion that under scientific management, Palestine can provide for about 6,000,000 people.

Prof. Ballod believes that about one-quarter of the country could be irrigated and made useful for agriculture. The land on the western slope could be brought under cultivation only by artificial irrigation.

That part of the country which would not directly come under cultivation could be used for other purposes. Some of it could be used for market gardening and poultry raising.

This is not the first time that a scientist has made public constructive ideas about the reclaiming of Palestine, but in view of the possibilities for the regeneration of the land that may arise as a result of the war, Professor Ballod's estimates, based upon expert knowledge, is creating considerable interest in Europe.

Central Conference Executive Committee Meets.

The annual fall meeting of the Executive Committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis was held in Cincinnati, Ohio, at the Rockdale Avenue Temple, on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 24 and 25.

Dr. Stols presented a report on the work now in process by his committee for uniting the pension fund of the conference and the superannuated ministers' fund of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations into a single institution, to be known as "The Synagogue Pension Fund."

It is the aim of the conference and the union to raise $1,000,000 for this fund, and to include in its working not only the reform rabbis of America, but also the orthodox rabbis and the teachers in the three institutions of higher Jewish learning of the country—the Hebrew Union College, the Jewish Theological Seminary and the Dropsie College.

Federation Campaign Passes Million Mark.

Men and women throughout the country who are interested in philanthropic endeavors are watching with interest the campaign of New York Jews to establish a central agency for the collection of all charitable contributions.

dollars necessary to establish firmly the organization is continuing. The city has been divided along trade lines, and leading Jewish merchants in each trade are heading the committees to secure subscriptions.

God Is With Us And God said unto Moses, I will be with thee, and I was with thee, thus shall thou say unto the children of Israel, I will be with thee, and I will be with thee.

The above quotations, in connection with the one preceding the same, evidently contain very interesting, very important, and highly philosophic teachings.

On the question as to a suitable name by which He, the Lord, should be known to the children of Israel, the Lord's answer was, "I was with thee, and I shall be with thee."

God, the Almighty, Who has nothing material in Him, can have no name in accordance with the conceptions of material beings. We may only call Him "I was with thee," as he was already found out, to a certain degree at least, by Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who have been so much advanced morally and intellectually as to receive divine inspirations; and "I will be with thee," meaning that scientific researches and studies, as mentioned above, are the proper means to solve the mystery of the Creator and of His creation.

The late Marrin A. Marks, of Cleveland, Ohio, remembered a number of charities in his will. The Federation of Jewish Charities and the Cleveland Federation of Charities received $1,000 and $500, respectively; the Jewish Orphan Asylum, $1,000; Hebrew Union College, $500, and the National Jewish Hospital, at Denver, $500.

RUPPERT'S Knickerbocker The Beer that Satisfies BOTTLED AT THE BREWERY

CHILDREN'S PAGE

"THE EARTH WITH WHAT FILLETH IT."

Dear Children:

The light of the second day of creation revealed the great masses of water covering the entire face of the earth. On the third day the great Architect of the Universe commanded the waters under the heavens to be gathered together unto one place and let the dry land be visible; that one place, says Rashi, is the great ocean. And when the waters were all gathered together He called them "Seas." Why did He call them "Seas" in the plural? Was it not one great Sea of water? But the taste of the fish that is found in the waters of Acce is not the same as of the fish that abound in the streams of Spain, therefore, He called them Seas—"Mazriang Ze-rang," that he (man) may cause the seed to yield its seed in other places.

Now Rashi is telling us how, when the Almighty created by His command all the vegetation of the earth He made them subservient to man—wherever man desires to plant them they must furnish the seed that will obey his wish and grow the same fruit, flower or vegetable. "Etz peri" the "tree-fruit"; the taste of the tree shall be like the taste of the fruit that it produces. This, says Rashi, is the kind of tree that the Lord desired the earth to produce, but the earth did not do so, but it brought forth "Etz oseh peri" trees, yielding fruit, but not "Etz peri" tree fruit. Therefore, when man was cursed because of his sin the earth also received its punishment.

Dear children, when you will read the eleventh paragraph of the first chapter of Genesis you will notice that it is written that the Creator commanded the earth to bring forth grass, herbs yielding seed—but it does not say "after their kind." And in the twelfth paragraph it is said, "and the earth brought forth grass, herbs yielding seed after their kind." Rashi explains this in accordance with the Agadah, and says when the herbs heard the Eternal give the command that the trees yield fruit after their kind they said to each other, "If the trees, which are so large and brave, such long and thick branches, making it impossible for different trees to be merged together, and even if they should be mingled together each tree could still be distinguished from the other, and yet they were commanded to yield fruit after their kind; we, who are so small and if we should be mingled together, we would be unrecognizable, how much more so ought we to produce seed after our kind."

"Let there be lights," said the Lord. That does not mean that the lights were created on the fourth day, for we have already learned that light was created on the first day, but it means, says Rashi, that on the fourth day He commanded them to be suspended in the sky. He also tells us that not alone were they created on the first day, but everything in the world was created on the first day. Therefore it is written, "es hashomayim," the heavens—"hashomayim" would have been enough, but the "es" indicates the heavens and all their productions; and it is also written, "es haaretz," the earth, when "haaretz" would have expressed the same meaning, but the "es" is added to teach us that He created also all the productions of the earth. But on each day of creation the Creator decreed when each created thing should take its place in the universe. "And these lights should divide between the day and the night"—in the future, after the first light of creation was hidden away and reserved for the righteous in Paradise. But during the first seven days light and darkness served together, both by day and by night. "And let them be for signs," an eclipse of these lights is a bad sign for the world, as it is said in the tenth chapter of Jeremiah, "At the signs of the heavens be ye not dismayed, for ye need fear no punishment when ye do the will of the Holy One, blessed be He."

Several Reasons Why Editors Are Rich.

A child is born in the neighborhood; the attending physician gets $10. The editor gives the loud-mouthed youngster and the happy parents a send-off, and gets $0.

When it is christened the clergyman gets $10 and the editor $00.

It grows up and marries. The editor publishes another long-winded article and tells a dozen lies about the "beautiful and accomplished bride." The clergyman gets $10 and a piece of cake and the editor gets $000.

In course of time it dies. The doctor gets from $25 to $100 and the undertaker gets from $50 to $200; the editor publishes a notice of its death and an obituary two columns long, lodge and society resolutions, a lot of poetry and a free card of thanks, and get $0000.

No wonder so many editors are rich.—Pittsburgh Catholic.

It is estimated that the Jewish farmers of the Montefiore colony at Saskatchewan, Canada, have lost over $75,000 through the severe frosts which recently visited their lands.
