"NOT DESTINED"

From the Yiddish of S. Vendroff.

Translated by HANNAH BERMAN

The strong country boy, Yecheal Puprever, of Puprever, was very anxious to marry a town girl. He himself was short, broad and powerfully built. He had muscular arms and strong legs, and a large, round head, covered with wiry, red hair. His face was brown and shiny, like a polished copper pan. And he desired for a wife, "a genteel woman, a lady."

When Jonah, the milkman, his neighbor, returned from the town, he said he had tried to arrange a match for him, Yecheal, with Reb Hersh, the flaxmerchant's daughter. Reb Hersh had taken up the idea eagerly.

The bride-elect was a "silken creature," who could write a letter like an arrow from a bow, did not need to ask anyone to write the address for her, could knit and crochet and embroider and sew and read a book like water, make up accounts like a man. She was, in a word, "a real lady."

When Yecheal heard this, he began to boil with excitement, and would poke his horse at once.

Only for his mother's interference, not a word would have been said about the dowry either. But, Chyena must know "how much is to be expected."

Said Jonah to her: "Five hundred is promised."

"Promising is nothing," replied Chyena. "And what sort of a trousseau?"

"Oh, what are you talking about, Chyena? Surely everything will be as it ought to be. What father would wrong his own child? Then, you ought to know with whom you are dealing?"

"Pshah A joke A man cannot live on honor alone."

"Nevertheless, you cannot make away with Reb Hersh's family by a sweep of the hand," Jonah took care to explain. "Although he is not so well off now as he was, has fallen a step lower amongst wealthy men, still—"

"It's alright. My Yecheal is to me no damaged piece of goods, either," er," said the mother, taking her son's part. "Whoever wishes me well may have such bridegrooms for their

"Oh, what are you bargaining about, mother?" interposed Yecheal. "Are you going to buy a calf—what?"

She did not argue with him. Yecheal was, after all, the apple of her eye. And, in any case, the bride-

Yecheal should go off to "inspect."

Yecheal gave himself a good scrubbing, put on his Sabbath coat, a new pair of lacquered goloshes, though out of doors it was dry and warm, and they started off.

They were already in the cart. Yecheal's mother ran over to him, and thrusting two little packets into his hand, she said anxiously:

"You have eaten nothing this day. Why are you so excited—why? Here is a roll for you. And in this paper there is something to eat with the roll. Eat it, else your heart will fall out of your body before you get into the town."

Yecheal hid the larger packet in the wagon and put the smaller into his pocket. And they started on their way.

But he did not open either packet. He was too busy asking the matchmaker questions about the bride-elect and with deciding what to say to her. He forgot all about eating.

When he saw Reb Hersh's daughter, Yecheal was ready to have the marriage contract written out at once. The small, thin, Tzipka, with the narrow face, the long nose, hair that was built up stiffly on the top of her head like a tower, the thin, white hands and the long fingers, appeared in his eyes to be a queen's daughter. "Ah! That is a genteel creature!"

And the bridegroom-elect pleased Reb Hersh and his wife, Sara-Feiga.

"He is a solid man, substantial," they said to one another.

But, the bride-elect was not satisfied with him. He was too crude. She wanted a "polished" man.

Her father and her mother and the matchmaker all tried to convince her that this match would be a valley of fatness for her. And, at any rate, she must not offend Yecheal but must sit at table with him. She sat at the table, silently, and compressed lips.

The bridegroom-elect dined on a glass of tea after the other guests had eaten their fill. He drank it mercilessly, and shone a little. He had been polished.

daughters. I tell you, Reb Jonah, if the money is only promised, there is nothing more to be said."

I will not marry a country girl, not even if they cover me with money, you understand?"

elect's father was no less a person than Reb Hersh, the flaxmerchant. It was decided that, meanwhile,

Ten o'clock at night, after the tea-drinking, Joe told Yecheal that he might ask Tzipka to go for a walk with him.

Stammering and turning almost blue in the face, Yecheal said to her: "Perhaps we could take a walk?"

Out of doors they both felt freer at once. The night was beautiful. The sky glittered with stars. A soft, warm wind blew in their faces. And, best of all, no one was looking at them with the curious eyes that had covered them in the house.

But, neither knew what to say to the other. Tzipka waited for Yecheal to break the silence. And Yecheal was fretting himself to death trying to think of something to say to the educated town girl. He suddenly remembered a conversation he had read in a highly interesting romance.

"Have you got a sun shade," he asked, all at once.

The ice was broken. Gradually, under the influence of the silent night, they began to feel nearer to one another, as if they had walked together for years, in the remote streets of the straggling town.

"Pardon me for what I am about to ask you," said Yecheal. "Tell me, is your hand a pen?"

"A pen? What do you mean? We know a little—not more than other people," she replied, with a smile.

"I ask this because, you see, I myself cannot do anything with a pen. I write with chalk. The pen does not go in my hand. Not used to it. And of writing, thank God, there is enough. It would be well for me if I had someone in my house who knew how to do such things."

"If it is necessary, they shall be done," said Tzipka, a proud note in her voice.

"Ah! ah! That is what I mean," And feeling a strong bond of affection for the girl walking beside him—the small but clever girl who could write and figure with her pen—he said warmly:

"A woman would be happy with me. She would live like a queen, you see. I have the best of everything. She would put no finger into cold water, only sit and write or make up accounts. Beyond that, nothing, as I live."

Tzipka's heart fluttered at this curious love-making, and, almost unconsciously, she drew close to him and touched his sleeve.

When they got home, everyone understood that it would not be necessary to talk Tzipka into having Yecheal.

This was a fortnight before the Feast of Weeks.

It was arranged that Yecheal should come back with his mother during the festival. And, if the girl's mother was willing, they would make an engagement party.

But, when it came to the actual engagement, Tzipka was dissatisfied all over again. They wanted to know what this sudden change meant. She entrusted her mother with the secret.

"He smells badly," First Sarah-Feiga, and then Reb Hersh himself went over to Yecheal. And they had to admit that he did smell badly. But, would the match be broken off because of that? It would be ridiculous. They told Tzipka it was her imagination and the engagement party was carried out.

A month later the bridegroom-elect was invited over for the Sabbath. That evening the marriage contract was to be written out and the date of the wedding arranged.

When the invitation arrived, Yecheal scrubbed himself again, put on his Sabbath coat and his rubber collar and drove off to the town.

At Reb Hersh's house, he found Tzipka alone in the parlor. This gave him the courage to draw close to her, like a city man. He held out his hand to her and said:

"How do you do? You—Tzipka—how?"

Shamefaced, but smiling, Tzipka approached him. But the next instant she drew back again and unconsciously put her hand to her nose.

Yecheal did not understand what this meant. He followed her. She fell back still further and he again followed her. He looked at her and was frightened. She was pale as death and barely managed to stand erect. He threw his arms about her and asked in alarm:

"What is the matter with you? What is wrong with you? Not well? A little water? Oh, help!"

"Leave me! Oh, leave me! I am choking. I faint!" cried Tzipka, tearing herself from his arms. Yecheal freed her. She flew out of the room. He remained, racking his brains to find out what was amiss. Sarah-Feiga opened the door. From the threshold she demanded:

"Tell me, Yecheal, what have you done to my daughter that she is lying down and sobbing? Eh?"

"Sobbing?" repeated Yecheal, frightened. "I don't know. I have done nothing to her. She did not seem to be very well."

"Listen to me," began Sarah-Feiga, drawing nearer to him, but at once stepping back again. "Oh, what is the matter with you? One cannot stand near you."

Yecheal's face began to burn. He felt he was a lost man.

Reb Hersh entered at this point. He would not believe the women—the fools. He came forward, put out his hand and bade Yecheal a hearty "Peace be unto you." But, on the instant, he withdrew his hand, pulled out his snuff-box and filled his nostrils with snuff. He threw out his words from between sneezes:

"A sharp odor! Hapshee! See, maybe it's the boots. Hapshee! Perhaps you ought to have gone to the baths? Hapshee!"

Yecheal could not stand this any longer. Red as a beet, and with tear-filled eyes, he rushed from the room, jumped into his coat, whipped up the horse and—back home.

For a long time his mother could not get out of him an explanation of what had taken place. It was only when he had resumed his working clothes and felt that he was his own master in his own house, that he told her of the nice welcome he had had from Tzipka and her parents.

Chyena was beside herself!

"Oh, may they stink from their throats like dead fish. Father in Heaven! Did you ever hear? A man fresh and sweet as a little green cucumber, and all at once, here you are. He smells! May they know all the sufferings of all Israel in their bodies and souls, in their hands and feet and in every inch of them, Father in Heaven!"

At the New Year, when Yecheal had to go to the town, he went to put on his Sabbath coat. He found it was impossible to go near the wardrobe in which it hung. He put his hand in the pocket and drew out the packet of melted goose fat and goose livers which his mother had given him to eat with the roll just before he started off on his journey to the town to "inspect" the bride-elect.

The Cherniavskys Coming to New York.

The announcement that Leo, Jan and Mischel Cherniavsky, the world-renowned Russian violinist, pianist and cellist, are to give recitals in Carnegie Hall on the afternoons of January 16 and 23, has evinced a great deal of interest among lovers of music and the public in general, and their appearance is keenly awaited.

The Cherniavskys were born in Odessa, where they received their early musical training from their father, Abram Cherniavsky, who was a leading musician and conductor of the symphony orchestra in Odessa. Their mother was also a talented musician. Leo and Jan commenced touring Europe when they were seven years old, and Mischel made his first appearance on the platform stage at the age of six years after only three months' tuition. The three have since traveled extensively over five continents.

Leo, Jan and Mischel have played before the uncle of the Czar, the Grand Duke Peter Nikolaevich, at his palace in Livadia. This caused a considerable sensation in Russia, the people being astounded that the Grand Duke should allow Jews to enter his home. Another remarkable achievement was the gaining of three gold medals from the Petersburg Musical Society, in spite of the fact that they were Jews. They were only allowed to compete through the influence of a prominent Russian Minister of State. They traveled in Russia for three and a half years, and, in the face of the many disabilities placed upon them because of their race and religion, they made $50,000 during that period. A greater part of this money went to relieve many of their unfortunate relatives who were left in a pitiful state of destitution by the awful Odessa pogrom. They had left Russia before the massacre, and while in Vienna with their father they read in a paper that affairs in Odessa were very disquieting to the Jews. Leo, knowing that a pogrom was imminent, immediately wrote to his mother telling her to leave with the remaining members of the family. She did so and joined her sons and husband in Vienna. Two weeks later the pogrom occurred.

In the interim a distinguished rabbi had made his home in the house formerly occupied by the Cherniavskys. The house was entered by the mob and every one of the rabbi's children was thrown out of the fourth-story windows. Had not Leo written his mother to leave immediately there is not the slightest doubt but that his mother, sisters and brothers would have met with the same terrible fate.

PRIVATE ABY: A GHETTO STUDY IN WARTIME.

By GABRIEL COSTA.

(All Rights Reserved.)

Private Aby is back from the trenches, on a flying visit to his Ghetto home and the folk he'd left behind him. There are great doings in the neighborhood of Marchmont street, upon whose clothes-lines flutter many an apology for bunting. For Marchmont street shares its sorrows and its joys, and the homecoming of Private Aby Levy—"Would you believe it, without a scratch?"—is an event only paralleled in importance with the coming of a government contract.

Rare scenes there were at the railway station on the day when Private Aby returned to town. It seemed as if every man, woman and child in Marchmont street and the adjacent localities had turned out to welcome the homecoming hero. Some came bravely in their Sabbath clothes, others arrived unblushingly with the grime of the workshop still upon them.

A few short months ago and Private Aby had been treading a Singer machine, making up the very khaki that now he wore. In those far-off days of once-upon-a-time our sprightly Maccabee was voted one of the nuttiest of the Ghetto nuts, pioneer of all that was smartest in masculine modes; a veritable Beau Brummel of Aldgate. There was a time when the blossoming belles of London's Ghetto would have given their hearts to Aby for the asking; when he might survey them across his two-penny cup of chocolate as a very potentate might survey his devoted subjects. . . . And he chose to live the life of a cave man; to reduce, so far as was possible, the combatant population of the land of Kultur. . . .

Even the railway porters, accustomed though they were to huge and palpitating crowds, averred that "some big pot" was surely on the boat train. Else why this huge concourse of expectant humanity, in whose ears and in whose cravats sparkled the emblems of thrift well applied?

How they scanned the faces of each boy in khaki! How fearful lest their boy might not have arrived! Here was mother, stately in her festival dress of black satin, with her Sabbath-bonnet and nut-brown-wig, beneath which peeped the tell-tale strands of silver hair. Father, wistful of mien, clad in his faded frock coat suit, defying fashion by wearing a bowler hat. Brothers and sisters, uncles and aunts. The eyes of all Israel peered into the faces of the home-bound men in khaki. . . .

Here, artificially plump in his sheepskin coat, was the man of the moment, blushing furiously, whelmed by the extent and the cordiality of his reception.

"Mother!" Private Aby's cap rolled off in the warmth and vigor of the maternal embrace. Father clutched the boy tightly to his breast the railway porters looking on curiously.

"One 'ud think he was the Prince of Wales!"

IF YOU WANT TO BE HAPPY.

(Written for THE HEBREW STANDARD.)

If you WANT to be happy, there's plenty about
To bring such a view-point, I guess.
You can't mix up sunshine with fear and with Doubt,
And a Cloud makes a horrible dress.
You'll find that this business of Laughing and sigh
Is a matter of WISHING to DO.
Just WANT to be happy, not WANT TO BE RICH,
And th' smiles will be coming to you.

If you WANT to be happy, there's Happiness near,
It's always a neighbor of yours.
It's in children's voices, the songs that you hear.
It soothes and it hopes and it cures.
It may take the form of some deed that is done,
It may be a gift that you make.
It may be some innocent, rollicking fun;
It may even come from an ACHE.

Yes, suffering, sometimes is part of the plan
That Wisdom blends in with our smiles,
True Happiness may mean a lot to a Man,
But to share it is one of the wiles.
You'll lure peace of mind to your own little self
If you'll only use THAT as the bait.
Share half of your joy with some sad sort of Elf,
Who hasn't enough to elate.

If you WANT to be Happy—look 'round you a bit,
There's a World brimming over with bliss.
It comes with frail Youth, and Old Age harbors it;
There's a share in all Babyhood's kiss.
Oh, you who are gloomy and grumpy and cross,
And you who find fault as you go,
Your hearts mean the mood, be it profit or loss,
Be it laughter or Longing or Woe.

—W. Livingston Larned.

"Not arf!" was the ready rejoinder.

"Did they feed you well, my angel?" Mother questioned him with an almost judicial severity.

"Now, mother, do I look like a starving man?"

"No, Imbeschreer, you look just fine, just like you used to look when you came home from the Lads' Brigade Camp at Deal. And now we'll catch the car."

"Car? I don't think. Taxi, if you don't mind. You don't think, mother, I've come all the way from the trenches to ride home in a penny car. Come in, all of you, there's plenty of room."

The taxi eventually arrived at Marchmont street with its record human freight. . . . A festival meal in the Ghetto home, with candles, as if for a wedding, though a warm, spring sun illumined the room. A succession of wonderful dishes, the like of which the Israelitish warrior had tasted in his dreams when hunger gnawed at his vitals. And then, when dessert had been taken away, Private Aby dived into his capacious pocket and brought forth a mysterious something that baffled the ingenuity of the assembled company.

"Bit of a Jack Johnson," averred one. "Bit of Flanders," hazarded another. "Leather from a German's boot," suggested a third.

"All wrong," said Private Aby. "It's one of two pieces of bread I discovered in the trench mud one fine day when we were very, very hungry. Scraped the mud off, and it was delicious. The other I thought I'd save, just to let you see that it's not all lavender."

"My poor angel," moaned mother. "Poor angel?" replied Private Aby. "Why, I wouldn't have missed it for the world, and if you think I'll ever go back to the machine again, you're very much mistaken. Besides, it isn't every fellow that has such hampers as you've been sending, and if only the rats—"

Mother nearly fainted at the misdeeds of those rats, and vowed that father must write to Lord Kitchener. Aby only smiled and puffed contentedly at a big cigar that was far too strong for him, puffed it with a valor fully meriting a V. C. . . .

Private Aby is departing; is rather plumper than on the day he arrived. Marchmont street stands sentinel at its doors as Private Aby staggers forth under the weight of regulation and other impedimenta. A safety shield, fashioned by the Ghetto blacksmith, out of salmon tins, and warranted to deflect anything but shells; a little "Mezuzah" charm from the buttonhole hand, to preserve Aby from visible and invisible powers of evil; a chest protector; a Vienna (trading with the enemy!) loaf; and a collapsible rat trap with a morsel of ripe Limburger wherewith to bait it.

And I almost forgot a generous half of a yellow cucumber, which Cohen, the Ghetto grocer, thrust in his laden arms "for luck!" . . .

"Ta-ta. Write soon." Father looks rather sadder than he did a half-hour ago. Mother seemed to have grown suddenly old.

The train is starting. Mother drops from the clouds. "Nearly forgot it," she murmurs, pressing her hand to her fast-beating heart.

The parcel tumbles into Aby's arms. Too late for a kiss now.

"It" was just a delicious pudding, redolent of spices and of almonds. Private Aby glanced at it, pointed joyously to that portion of his anatomy to which the pudding would most appeal.

Mother turned away with a brave little laugh. Then home—the penny car this time.

Rabbi Professor Gollancz to Act as Cinema Censor—Jewish Ministers and the Cabinet Changes—Chief Rabbi and Herbert Bentwich Reply in Scurrilous Article—Sunday-Closing Regulations in Manchester and Jewish Shopkeepers' Troubles—Peer's Brother Sells Candy to Soldiers—Activities of Claude Montefiore.

London, Dec. 8, 1916.

Very few representative committees are ever formed in this country now without some leading Jewish citizen being invited to take a seat. There has been a big discussion of late about the morals of the movies, or, as we call them, the cinema shows or picture palaces. Fault has been found both with the class of plays presented on the screen and the posters exhibited on the billboards to attract visitors. The various cinematograph trade societies, whether exhibitors, renters or manufacturers, have now unanimously petitioned a body called the National Council of Public Morals to institute an independent inquiry into the physical, social, educational and moral influences of the cinema, with special reference to young people. The National Council has, after careful consideration, decided to do so, and has invited a list of social leaders, numbering twenty, to constitute the commission. The Rabbi Professor H. Collancz, M.A., D.Lit., has taken a seat as representing the Jewish community. As indicating the wide nature of the committee I might mention that the president is the Lord Bishop of Birmingham, and that Sir John Kirk, the director of the Ragged School Union; the Rev. F. B. Meyer, and the National Free Church Council, and Sidney Lamert, director of the London Film Company, are typical members.

Herbert Samuel has been very busy trying to work up some scheme with regard to the enlistment of the Russian-born Jews residing in this country, and the matter was to have been passed on to the hands of Lloyd George as War Minister. Now that this gentleman has become Premier this matter may be left in a bit of a muddle.

The Chief Rabbi has replied in the current issue of the Fortnightly Review to the offensive article, entitled "Zionism," which appeared in the November number of that magazine and which roused keen anger throughout the community. The Chief Rabbi's reply is trenchant and strong. There is also a spirited article by Herbert Bentwich, writing as a Zionist protagonist.

Trouble has arisen in Manchester among the local Jews owing to the police having decided to enforce a practically obsolete statute passed in the reign of Charles II, and known as the Lord's Day Observance Act. The bringing into force of this ancient measure would close every shop in the city on Sundays, and would involve particular hardships for Jews who, observing the Jewish Sabbath, abstain from business on Friday evenings and Saturdays. Asked about the position of the Jewish shops, which close for the Jewish Sabbath and open on Sunday, the chief constable said: "The Jewish shops constitute a problem that has to be dealt with, and one of the reasons why we have postponed action for a week is that we may prepare a workable scheme."

In conversation with a leading member of the Jewish community in Manchester, a representative of the Manchester Guardian was informed that the police order had come so suddenly that up to the present the Jews had taken no steps with regard to it. In all probability, however, the views of the traders professing the Jewish faith will be laid before the Watch Committee and the chief constable during the week. "Hitherto," he said, "we have not been interfered with by the authorities. We close our shops, of course, on the Jewish Sabbath, which begins on Friday at sunset and finishes at sunset on Saturday. Many shops open in the evening of that day, and others on the Christian Sunday, but all our shops do not remain open all that day. A good deal of hardship will be inflicted upon our community if Jews are included in the new regulation. I might point out that we pay rates and taxes like other citizens, and are liable to discharge all the duties which fall to the citizen. It would undoubtedly be an unfair handicap upon us to compel us to close our business two days in every week. We shall do all that is possible to make our position secure."

The Rev. S. Friedeberg, B.A., Minister of the Prince's Road Synagogue, Liverpool, has, in legal phraseology, "renounced, relinquished and abandoned" the name of Friedeberg and has assumed that of Frampton.

The Hon. Gerald S. Montagu, brother of Lord Swaythling, has provided a hut at Waverley Hospital, near Farnham, Surrey, for the sale of stationery, candy, stamps, cigarettes, etc., to the soldiers there, and acts himself as salesman daily.

Claude Montefiore presided over the annual meeting of the Anglo-Jewish Association held last Sunday, December 3, at the Central Synagogue Chambers. He dealt in his address with the educational work carried on by the association, and, referring to their financial position, he showed there would be an absolute deficit on May 31 next of $155, with not one single penny or balance or reserve, and the following year would end—even with the income and expenditure of last year—with the large deficit of $5,345.

Another scheme with which Claude Montefiore is associated himself is the Jewish League of Honor and Service, an outcome of the Jewish Association for the Protection of Girls and Women. At recent meetings there have been large attendances of communal workers. The object of the league is to band together Jewish girls and young women of all classes with the object of raising and upholding the honor of their womanhood, their faith and their country; to deepen their sense of responsibility toward the nation and the community; to provide opportunities for mutual service, help, encouragement and spiritual influence by means of meetings, addresses and suitable literature. The scheme also provided for the constitution and the working of the league.

At the latest meeting Claude Montefiore read a letter from Arthur R. Moro, who wished the league every success, and hoped its establishment would lead to combatting the alarming increase of juvenile frivolity and consequent immorality. It was realized that it would be very difficult for much to be done during the period of the war, particularly in obtaining financial support. It was not intended to float a new charitable organization and throw it upon the public. It was, however, desirable that something should be done immediately, even if it were only a small beginning. That would give security that after the war it would be possible to set to work with a greater strength and power. The league should not differentiate too much between the different classes of the community; it should be worked so as to reach all classes. It was not intended to apply the scheme to the poorer classes only, but that the more comfortable and well-to-do members of the community might also take part in it.

The Rev. E. Levine, M.A., said that he felt that the synagogues could also take their part in this movement. Although efforts were made to acquaint boys with the tenets of their faith, very little was done for girls. Parents themselves, however, were very indifferent on this question. There was room for a great campaign not only for the East End, but also in the West End, and other parts of London. He, on his part, would do all he could, and hoped that other ministers would do the same. His synagogue was always at the disposal of the league.

The first meeting of the council was then held, and an Executive Committee was elected, as follows: The Hon. Mrs. E. L. Franklin, president; Mesdames L. S. M. Pyke and A. Lesser, honorary secretaries; Lady Battersea, Mesdames A. Benjamin, N. L. Cohen, Eichholz, Gluckstein, E. M. Micholls, Model, the Hon. Marian Montagu, Mrs. Hertz, the Misses Titleboam, I. Samuel, H. Hyam, Messrs. C. G. Montefiore, A. R. Moro, and the Rev. E. Levine, committee.

The Wealth of the Soul.

The wealth of the soul is an inner wealth. It consists of a number of things. When we truly think, when we love knowledge, when we have respect for the pure idea, when we give ourselves, impersonally, to the single-minded devotion to thought, we feel the thrill of the life of the spirit which makes our being and personality. Who has not had the delicious experience of transcending the distinctions of lands and ages, when, with a book in his hand, he allowed his spirit to commune with the one who spoke to him? In all literalness, we were tasting the spiritual life.—Rev. Dr. Samuel Schulman.

Not a Christian Country.

The United States is not a Christian country, nor is it a Jewish country, nor a Mohammedan country; neither is it Protestant or Roman Catholic, but is strictly a secular country, guaranteeing to every man entire religious freedom to follow the dictates of his conscience.—Texas Freemason.

OBITUARY.

ABRAHAMS, MORRIS.—On Friday evening, December 22, 1916, there was called to his eternal rest one who might be called "One of the old guard," at the ripe age of 82 years. Surrounded by his beloved wife, his four children and his grandchildren, he passed into the great beyond. Morris Abrahams came to New York city from Germany when he was 21 years of age; he engaged in the furniture and carpet business and prospered. He was married for fifty-eight years and had retired from active business for thirty-five years. When a young man he affiliated with Congregation B'nai Jeshurun and was a member for more than fifty years. His wedded life was ideal. He was blessed with a wife who served as a "ministering angel." She was in every sense of the word a life companion and partner, ever solicitous for his comfort and happiness. He was an upright, honest merchant. He left behind him the "crown of a good name." He was ever interested in Jewish fraternal and charitable organizations and was a member of numerous societies all of his life. He was "a man in whom was the spirit of God," and this spirit always manifested itself in the love, affection and self-sacrifice in his wedded relationship. In the loyalty and faithfulness to God and the Synagogue, in the uprightness, probity and square dealing with his fellow man, and in the brotherhood, sympathy and charity of his heart. For such gifts and blessings as God sends us, let us all be thankful.

RABBI AARON EISEMAN.—The funeral services were held from his late residence, 68 East Eighty-sixth street, Monday, December 25, at 10.30, in the presence of a vast host of friends. The services were conducted by Rabbis Eiseiman and Blau and Cantor Kartschmoroff. The burial was at the family mausoleum on the B'nai Jeshurun grounds.

Hungarian Jews Convene.

The first convention of the Federation of Hungarian Jews in America was held on Monday evening, December 18, at the Hebrew Technical Institute. Eighty congregations and societies of Greater New York were represented and joined the Federation, among which was Ohab-Zedek congregation, the societies "Kosuth" and "Petoeft," a large number of lodges of the I. O. B. A. and of the Free Sons of Judah. The chairman, Mr. Samuel Bettelheim, outlined the scope of the Federation and in a lengthy address described the unorganized state in which the Hungarian Jewry finds itself at present. Other speakers were Rabbis Fried, Wasserman, Buechler and Tennenbaum.

In their declaration of principles the Federation proposes to engage the religious, communal, cultural, educational and social problems in the Hungarian Jewish communities in America. ### Chanukah in Mexico.

At the suggestion of Rabbi Isaac Landman, secretary of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, the Sisterhood of Temple Keneseth Israel, of Philadelphia, provided a Chanukah feast for all the Jewish men with Pershing's expeditionary force in Mexico. The soldiers, among themselves, at Colonia Dublin and El Valle, conducted Chanukah services with the special army rituals that the Central Conference of American Rabbis provided for all the Jewish men at the front.

The Sisterhood of Keneseth-Israel sent one hundred individual packages of Chanukah goodies to Colonia Dublin and sixty to El Valle, thus providing for all the Jewish men with the force. Each package contained a jar of jelly, packets of dates, figs, nuts, raisins, pumpernickle and a package of cigarettes.

The women who took up the work at the suggestion of Rabbi Landman and formed themselves into a committee, are Mrs. Simon Weil, Mrs. Louis Eshner, Mrs. H. Plonley, Mrs. Louis Sulka and Mrs. Carrie Levy.

Women's Proclamation Committee.

At the mass meeting at Carnegie Hall, last Thursday evening, the 21st, the Women's Proclamation Committee handed in a check for $5,000 to the Joint Distribution Committee, in the name of the Jewish women of America.

The Women's Proclamation Committee, which is the national women's organization for Jewish war relief, will be a most important factor in the campaign of 1917. Its "life for a life" movement has spread throughout the country. Since Thursday evening pledges for very large amounts have been received at the offices, 203 Broadway, New York, from its many branches and co-operating women's societies. It is represented in cities that border the Rocky Mountains and the Great Lakes, and as far South as Georgia. No efforts are being spared to get in touch with the Jewish women in even the smallest hamlet, and the results which have rewarded the Women's Proclamation Committee in the few months that they have been organized as a national body point to very successful propaganda.

The plans for the campaign of 1917 are numerous and there is a spirit of confidence pervading the offices of the National Women's Committee that the Jewish women of America will do as much to help raise the ten million dollars as will the men who compose the constituent committees of the Joint Distribution Committee.

Sinai Temple Notes.

The throngs which crowded Sinai Temple, Stebbins avenue and East 163d street, to its full capacity Sunday afternoon, December 24, were amply rewarded by the splendid Chanukah entertainment which they witnessed. It was a remarkable success from start to finish, and special thanks are due to the Misses Lewis and Wallach, who coached the playlet, to Miss Krellenstein, whose pupils did aesthetic dancing, as well as to Miss Herman and Miss Heilbronner, who assisted Rabbi Reichler in preparing many of the little ones.

The Chanukah candy for Sinai Sunday school was donated by Henry Lowenthal and was distributed to the children in novel-bags donated and made by Mrs. S. Locks, assisted by Mrs. R. Heiderman.

On Saturday night the Sinai Boy Scouts held their annual election of officers: Theodore Marine, president; Jerome Greilshimer, vice-president; Hyman Alexander, secretary; Rabbi M. Reichler, scoutmaster, and Mr. Andrew Schloesinger, leader.

The Sinai Choral Union, under the leadership of Miss B. Lewis, will meet Sunday afternoon, December 31.

At the Sabbath morning services, December 30, Alexander Crystal, Harold Witt and Adolph Wollman will become Bar Mitzvah.

Congregation Shearith Israel.

Chanukah was celebrated by the children of the religious school of the congregation on Sunday morning. A program of recitations and music was given by the children themselves, several of the recitations and of the songs being in Hebrew. The children received flags in celebration of Zion flag day.

In the other religious schools conducted under the auspices of the congregation Chanukah has also been observed. In the school conducted by the Sisterhood in its Neighborhood House at 86 Orchard street the usual celebration for Chanukah was held, and on Tuesday afternoon in its uptown Oriental Talmud Torah Chanukah exercises were held at which addresses were made by the Hon. N. Taylor Phillips and the Rev. Dr. D. de Sola Pool. Toys, books and games, which had been given by the children of the congregational school, were distributed among the pupils of this uptown school.

Orach Chaim Talmud Torah.

An audience of 500 young men and young women was present on Friday evening, December 22, at the celebration of the thirteenth anniversary services under the auspices of the Brotherhood. The first service of the Brotherhood having taken place on Shabbos Chanukah, the services of last week were exceptionally interesting, in view of the special musical program which was rendered for the occasion. Miss Carolyn Netter rendered two solos, and the young girls of the choir also sang traditional hymns appropriate to the occasion. The Rev. Dr. Enelow gave a very inspiring talk on Chanukah and the Brotherhood work.

In his maiden speech as premier of Great Britain before the House of Commons, David Lloyd George made this utterance: "It is true that in a multitude of counselors there is wisdom, but that was written for Oriental countries in peace times. You cannot run a war with a Sanhedrin." Did the distinguished Welsh statesman, somewhere in the recesses of his profound intellect, think of the new attempts over the seas to revive the Sanhedrin of ancient times for the discussion of Jewish problems, even of those produced through this greatest of wars?

If the synagogue does not extend to all and any interested in its services an invitation in the form of a public advertisement to attend them, it is probably because Judaism as a religion has set its face deliberately against all proselytism, and for this reason the casual visitor and the stranger are not welcomed at the manifestations of our faith. This is a satisfactory explanation of the situation, and not even the facile love of publicity, so common to Americans, nor the competition of rival Christian creeds for "hungry souls" should make us depart from our absorbing tradition.

Those who have steadfastly maintained for the past decade that England is no longer the traditionally firm friend of our people seem to have had their dire predictions somewhat confirmed by recent events. The open fight over Zionism shows that England, whether or not this is due to the so-called assimilationist Jews, is no longer as hospitable to foreign refugees as she was. Then, Lloyd George's accession to the premiership is viewed with mingled feelings by loyal members of the House of Israel. They hope and wish to believe that he will continue Britain's traditional attitude toward our people, but they remember that some of his past actions seemed to proceed from doubtful sentiments.

While our sacred literature mentions beverages of several sorts, the fact remains that the Jews, as a race, are probably the most abstemious of all the peoples on the globe. A Jewish drunkard is indeed a vara avis. But this fact does not require the community to take sides on the prohibition issue, the impending topic of the hour, and over which, perhaps, the next national election may be fought. Jews will act in this matter as they do and should act with other questions of practical politics: as good American citizens and not as Jews! The further fact that many Jews have large interests in the manufacture of spirituous liquor shows how next to impossible it would be to align our community on one side or the other of this momentous question.

By way of London, and The Jewish World in especial, we learn that Yiddish has finally habituated itself as a subject of university instruction. At the University of Wisconsin courses in the language, dialect or jargon—call it what you will—are now offered. Our contemporary affects to believe that thereby those who pursue such training will be led to take up Hebrew. Fond delusion! If Yiddish literature be taught at our universities—and surely this is worth while—the probability is that only Jews, presumed to know some Hebrew, will be attracted to it. Unless, indeed, Wisconsin be the exception, and that because, in those Western groves of Academe, a new "prophet" of the Jewish people and our ideals has come to thrive, his name being Horace M. Kallen!

If we shall ever have a five-day industrial week, with Saturday and Sunday equally "days of rest," would the attendance at our Reform temples on an average Sabbath be any greater than it is now? We are frank to record our belief that, even with such an incentive to frequent our Reform synagogues, the attendance thereat would not materially increase. If Saturday becomes universally a "day of rest" those Reform Jews who do not now go to synagogue because, doing so, their business is "interfered with," would seek and find a new excuse—golf, cards and the like! As a matter of fact, they're not to blame: theirs is a religion of convenience, making no demands upon them for personal sacrifices of any sort, or if making demands upon them, indeed, such are quite unheeded by those whose Judaism is far to seek.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WITHIN the past few weeks two formal, public and communal celebrations, in the nature of dinners, have taken place, which seem to give the upholders of traditional Judaism in this country considerable ground for a hopeful view of our responsibility as a community. We refer to the banquet tendered Hon. Simon Wolf, of Washington, by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, and to that at which Felix M. Warburg was the guest of his fellow-workers in the new federation of charities.

The former was a strictly kosher dinner, the latter a purely milchig one. What a contrast these two functions present to the practice on similar occasions a few years ago, when organizations calling themselves Jewish and foregathering with a similar object regaled their guests with dinners where oysters and lobsters, butter and treifah meat, abominations of the orthodox kitchen, formed the staple of the pabulum offered? We repeat, such chillul ha-Shem appears no longer to be possible or permissible in this community, and we are heartily rejoiced because of this change!

The Warburg dinner, moreover, amounts to a resplendent answer to those who pretended that violations of orthodox susceptibilities on this point cannot be avoided. Here half a thousand men and women sat down at a board whereon were placed dishes which would satisfy any stomach and which were served with the tempting delicacy and deftness of touch characteristic of one of the leading hostesses of our great world-city. The orthodox Jew ate his fill of this meal without feeling disgraced and distressed by a blatant defiance of our traditions; the follower of Ethical Culture was able to do justice to the repast and rose from it with a new feeling of respect and regard for the religion and its ceremonies which he or his forebears left out of sheer obstinacy.

The spectacle thus presented serves to prove, also, that this community is capable of federation in other respects than along the line of its philanthropic societies. The day when "American" Judaism, all American and no Judaism, was worshipped here has passed, never, we believe, to return. Well it is that all sections of our Jewry have reached so unique and helpful a stage where all may unite together for right action without any violence being done to any of the cherished ideals of any individual thereof!

The Social Service Department of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, under the efficient and enthusiastic guidance of Rabbi Rudolph I. Coffee, its director, is working zealously along three important lines of activity. The first of these is the so-called Big Brother movement, the second the problem of Americanizing the immigrant, while the third has for its end the caring for released prisoners. On the Big Brother campaign this department issued a brief but useful manual some time ago, on which we then commented. It has now followed this up with a similar handbook on the question of Americanizing the immigrant, and this, too, appears to us to be adequate and complete. In this the problem is set forth, a plan for its solution presented and recommendations as to how the different lodges of the order may help in this matter are offered. Finally, a short bibliography is added.

Some Anglo-Jewish publicists are troubling themselves about the form of faith adhered to by the high nobility of the Court of Prussia and hazarding the guess that this is of that nebulous and amphibious variety known as mild atheism. Frederick the Great's life and actions are the authority for such a pronouncement, which is equivalent to a denial that these Prussian leaders have felt or even feel the sentiments which religion is supposed to inspire in any human breast. As a matter of fact, despite Frederick's notorious agnosticism, the Prussian Court, and particularly the Junker class of the country, are zealous Lutherans. Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott! This hymn of old Martin Luther himself has inspired them for countless generations to deeds of daring; it has also made them believe in the essential oneness of German racial solidarity, and thus rendered their minds fertile to receive the seeds of anti-Semitism.

In its December issue The New Age, the magazine of Scottish Rite Freemasonry in the Southern jurisdiction of this country, reprints Hon. Simon Wolf's eightieth-birthday letter to the Washington Evening Star. In this our distinguished co-religionist roundly castigates those who speak of and deal with a so-called hyphenate vote, whether this be Jewish, German, negro or any other. He also clearly sets forth his belief in the right of Jews to be appointed to high public office, not because they are good or bad Jews, but because they are worthy American citizens. It goes without saying that Mr. Wolf is absolutely right in his position. It was necessary for him to formulate his views on this subject, thus emphatically because, now and again, irresponsible leaders of our people, in common with such of other strands of races in our population, act in a manner which runs counter to all good and hallowed principles of American development.

THE CLIMAX

רב עוד יוסף בני חי אלקה ואראנו בטרם אמות:

"Joseph, my son, is yet alive: I will go and see him before I die." (Gen. xlv, 28.)

HERE is something melancholy to the average mind in the last flicker of a flame: more brilliant than the steady, quiet outpouring of light that preceded it, it is a dazzling prophecy of the darkness that is to follow. But to the more than average insight, the melancholy element in the dying blaze is eclipsed by the majestic display of power which crowds all its energy into one superbly heroic moment. As if the flame said: "Before I die—as die I must—I will yet flood the world with light, let this be my supreme experience of fulfillment!"

Jacob's saying, "Let me see my son before I die," may be considered as an expression of melancholy resignation, or as an assertion of tremendous vitality. Do you put the emphasis on the words "before I die," or on "let me see him"? You betray your own nature according as to whether you conceive of the aged Patriarch as contemplating with pining regret the coming end, or as declaring himself ready for the Supreme experience of his life, after which, come what may, he can depart with the consciousness of having lived abundantly. The deeper intuition inclines to the latter view: Jacob regarded the coming reunion with his son as a stupendous climax towards which all his days have been steadily ascending. The past was wiped out; the future held no terrors; all his existence, with its trials and tribulations, its hopes and disappointments, was gathered up into this one meaningful moment. His riddle was solved: the last brilliant flash, though a dying flash, made everything obscure as plain as day. He asked for nothing more.

Stevenson has a fine word to say about dying young: "Does not life go down with a better grace, foaming in full body over a precipice, than miserably straggling to an end in sandy deltas?" But if he meant that a beautiful end is that which allows life to depart in an impressive climax, his saying applies to old age as well as to youth. What we ask is neither that we die young nor that we die old, but that, whenever we die, our end do not present the sorry aspect of a straggling delta, but the splendid aspect of a heroic climax: "foaming in full body over a precipice." Can there be anything more majestic than such a hurtling termination of the life-current?

Lives, indeed, do not usually end in such a climax. Most lives just barely trickle and ooze away as if through a leaking vessel. And undoubtedly this trickling from day to day and year to year is quite satisfactory to most of us. But there are natures to whom such a weak dribbling through the years appears a meaningless thing. They want life to thrill and throb through them, to race and pound through them, to storm and thunder through them, until some earthquake finale, in which the heavens are rent asunder as if for an act of revelation, shall bring life to a dramatic close. This abundant sense of living asks for its final satisfaction in an abundant sense of dying. And such natures probably inquire if it is possible to lead life consciously through a series of ascending experiences to some all-overlooking summit? Can the quest of a climax be consciously pursued?

One doubts it. It is rarely that lives can be so carefully laid out, so meticulously ordered, that each successive step should lead gradually upward to the highest. In very rare instances this has been done; and great lives have been consciously guided to some one crowning event. But on the whole this cannot be done successfully; and the greater the life, the further removed is the possibility of its being led up to a well chosen climax. The art of the orator consists in this very skill of previously determining at which point the climax of the argument should be reached. But life is not an oration, which may be built up symmetrically; whose harmony may follow the rigid outlines of a preconceived plan: life is a drama in which the forces of the human soul are pitted against the unaccountable forces of destiny; in which surprise is the ruling element. The greater the life, the more fertile it is apt to be in surprises, in startling turns, in tortuous windings; and yet, it usually climbs up to a climax. Commonplace lives may be more easily planned and ordered; say, with the punctillious tidiness of a grocery-shop; and yet, they seldom work up to an impressive finish. Thus, the conclusion is that the Quest of a Climax is seldom a conscious one.

Nay, more: were it possible with greater accuracy to arrange for a set climax, it is doubtful whether such a pre-arranged culmination of a well-ordered career is of extraordinary value. To be sure, there is something attractive in a life that is gradually mounting to its zenith, like the sun which goes on increasing to the perfect day; only the heroic element is missing in such a case. Life is ennobled by its difficulties and uncertainties, its wonders and surprises. Life is ennobled by faith alone, faith which turns towards life a wistful, expectant face. Faith is an attitude of expectancy: life is abundant, and God is lavish, and some good must come out of this vast world some day. Some natures—someone said—are always waiting for the "Wonder Around the Corner." The straight, hard road may blunt our sense of the lurking existence of this Wonder Around the Corner. All this does not mean that we are not to plan our life. By all means—only not too rigidly. We must make allowance for God to enter our life somewhere and lead us towards His ends. Thus, naught else is left us in our Quest of Climax than to wait, wait, wait. While waiting and watching, we must keep in intimate touch with life's deepest meaning, and from its depth derive the confidence that some day we shall stand on the Peak, and send up the last flash of our flame to dwell among the brilliant company of the stars.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS

To Be Convened at Washington Not Later Than May 1, 1917.

Two years after its inception, the idea of an American Jewish Congress seems assured of life. For the first time an executive met on which all elements of American Jewry were fully represented. It is safe to say that as a body of men, those who met at the Savoy Hotel and worked out the definite details of time, place and object of the Congress compare well with any similar body of any nation. Indeed, such a collection of power, ability and brilliancy is rarely, if ever, met at one time: Simon Wolf, Oscar S. Straus, Henry Morgenthau, statesmen of the first rank; Jacob H. Schiff, Adolph Lewisohn, Julius Rosenwald, A. Leo Weil, embodying power untold; Louis Marshall, Adolph Kraus, Judge Julian W. Mack, Judge Hugo Pam, judicial and executive ability; Professors Deutsch, Kallen, Hurwitch and K-hler, educators of the highest type, and orators, poets and journalists all were here gathered to organize for the rehabilitation of Israel.

The meeting had three sessions and all were intent with vital life and the spirit of a great movement. Adolph Kraus, head of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, was chosen temporary chairman by a majority of four over Louis Marshall, the only other candidate. Mr. Kraus was also the choice of the majority of the Nomination Committee for permanent chairman. To insure complete harmony, both Louis Marshall and Adolph Kraus, at the suggestion of the latter, withdrew, and Nathan Straus, warm nationalist and generous philanthropist, was unanimously elected first chairman of the Administrative Committee for the American Jewish Congress.

There were a few critical moments, when it seemed as if one or other of the varying elements would withdraw completely from participation in what promises to be the greatest Jewish movement ever launched on this continent. The most serious hitch in the proceedings was occasioned by the representatives of Jewish labor, who insisted that Congressman Meyer London should be honored with a seat on the Administrative Committee. Meyer London had incurred the displeasure of the nationalist elements by some public utterances at Boston a little while ago. After London himself explained his position the meeting added his name to the committee.

About 125 out of the 140 executive members were present, and among those who took a leading role in the proceedings were Simon Wolf, Col. Harry Cutler, Judge Mack, Judge Pam, Louis Marshall, Henry Morgenthau, Oscar S. Straus, Dr. Stephen Wise, Dr. Samuel Schulman, Dr. Harry Friedenwald, Dr. Kallen, Dr. Magnes, Sholom Ash, Louis Lipsky and a number of others. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes opened the meeting with a prayer and Colonel Cutler had charge of arrangements.

The Congress is to meet at Washington not later than May 1, 1917, and will take up, in addition to the question for which it is convened, Jewish rights, the economic reconstruction of the Jewish communities in the war zone. Elections are to be proceeded with immediately, all Jewish men and women over 21 being in a position to vote. The following were elected: Chairman, Nathan Straus; vice-chairmen, Harry Cutler, Harry Friedenwald, Morris Hillquit, Isaac Hourwich, Leon Sanders; treasurer, Adolph Lewisohn; executive secretary, Bernard G. Richards; administrative committee, Dr. Louis S. Rubinsohn, Israel B. Brodie, M. Katz, Leo Wolfson, Judge Aaron J. Levy, Simon Wolf, Bernard A. Rosenblatt, Joel Enteen, Rabbi A. M. Ashinsky, Rabbi B. L. Levinthal, Jacob Pankin, Sholom Ash, J. B. Salutsky, Dr. F. Rosenblatt, Rabbi H. Pereira Mendes, Joshua Sprayregen, Meyer London, Senior Abel, Maurice L. Avner, Isaac W. Bernheim, J. I. Bluestone, Meyer L. Brown, Jacob Carlinger, Jacob de Haas, Max Goldfarb, Max L. Hollander, Louis B. Kirstein, Adolph Kraus, Louis Lipsky, Julian W. Mack, J. L. Magnes, Louis Marshall, Jacob Massel, Martin A. Meyer, M. J. Olgin, Hugo Pam, Julius I. Peysor, David Pinski, Edwin Romberg, Victor Rosewater, Jacob H. Schiff, Benjamin Schlessinger, Joseph Shlossberg, Bernard Semel, Max Silverstein, C. D. Spivak, Oscar S. Straus, Solomon Sufriin, Cyrus S. Sulzberger, Mayer Sulzberger, Isaac M. Ullman, Stephen S. Wise and B. Suckerman.

Young Judaea Leaders' Conference.

The National Leaders' Association of Young Judaea held its third annual conference at the Hotel McAlpin, Thirty-fourth street and Broadway, opening Saturday evening last and continuing until Monday evening. Delegates from New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Connecticut, Colorado, Rhode Island and Canada and hundreds of visitors from New York and vicinity were in attendance at the several sessions.

The conference was launched by a reception and ball in the Winter Garden of the hotel on Saturday evening. The garden was tastefully decorated with Zionist and patriotic emblems, and a beautiful floral display. The New York leaders acted as hosts to the visiting delegates and a large gathering of their friends. Short addresses of welcome were offered by the officers of Young Judaea.

On Sunday morning the visitors attended the several Chanukah entertainments offered by Young Judaea in the various districts of the city in fourteen theatres, the use of which were donated by B. S. Moss, William Fox and other theatrical managers. In all some 20,000 children were entertained.

On Sunday evening a Chanukah gathering was held in the ballroom of the hotel, in which over 700 Jewish teachers and college students participated. Mr. Isaac Rosengarten, the president of the National Leaders' Association, introduced Hon. N. Taylor Phillips as the chairman of the evening. Professor G. Deutsch, of Cincinnati, was the guest of the conference, and Prof. Israel Friedlander, of the Jewish Theological Seminary, and Dr. D. de Sola Pool, the president of Young Judaea, were the other speakers. Mr. Phillips welcomed the gathering and had much praise for the work of Young Judaea which he regarded as laying the foundation for the harmony of Americanism and Judaism of the future. In concluding, he expressed his confidence in Young Judaea's power to overcome all obstacles and lay a clear path for the future. Following Mr. Phillips' address, Rabbi Moses Rosenthal chanted the blessing over the lighting of the Chanukah lights and the assembly joined in the singing of the Chanukah hymn, Moaz Tzur.

Professor Deutsch spoke on the philosophy of the historic movement. He emphasized the fact that America is the only place where the Jew can solve his problems. Here, in the land of the free, the Jew can raise the intellectual and moral status of his brethren in Palestine. Here, in the land that knows no oppression, the Jew can make possible the establishment of a genuine home for the Jew in Palestine.

Professor Israel Friedlander was the following speaker, and spoke of the remarkable progress both in the extension and the variety of Young Judaea activities during the past few years. Professor Friedlander was the former president of Young Judaea, and he felt greatly encouraged by the growth of the organization.

Dr. D. de Sola Pool, the president of Young Judaea, was the last speaker, and he emphasized the necessity of a Jewish organization which shall hold the Jewish youth within the spirit of Judaism. "Young Judaea gives the Jewish boy and girl what he or she is craving for; puts him where he belongs, and supplies all his intellectual needs." Dr. Pool appealed to the general Jewish public for more encouragement and for a larger measure of financial assistance.

The musical part of the evening included Jewish folk songs by Mme. Shomer Rothenberg, accompanied on the piano by Miss Helen Kroll; a Chanukah reading by Miss Selma Cohen, of Yonkers, and a violin solo by Mr. William Kroll.

The sessions on Sunday afternoon and Monday morning and afternoon were devoted to the presentation and the discussion of the several problems of Young Judaea leadership. The Sunday afternoon session was presided over by Dr. D. de Sola Pool, and papers were presented by Israel Goldberg on "The Jewish Congress in the Young Judaea Club"; by Miss Sarah Kussy and Isaac Rosengarten on "Co-education in the Young Judaea Club"; by Rabbi Eugene Kohn, of Baltimore, on "The Merit System in Young Judaea," and by Emanuel Neumann on "The Future Policy of the Young Judaea Magazine."

The Monday morning session was presided over by Mr. Rosengarten and was devoted to a thorough discussion of the educational requirements in the Young Judaea program. The session on Monday afternoon was presided over by Dr. Pool and the several papers were presented and discussed. In the evening, a dinner was served to the delegates and their friends at the Central Jewish Institute, 125 East Eighty-fifth street, by the New York Leaders' Association. Mr. Sylvan Kohn acted as toastmaster and brief addresses were made by various delegates from out of town. The conference was concluded with a business session, at which the reports of the national officers and of the editor of the Leaders' Bulletin were received. Resolutions were adopted identifying the national officers of the association with those of the national Young Judaea organization and providing for an Executive Committee, which shall supervise the conduct of the leadership department of Young Judaea. The National Executive Board was increased to twenty-five members.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Sour Beets.

Two cupfuls of beets, boiled and cut into cubes; 2 tablespoonfuls butter, 2 of flour; 1/2 cupful of the water in which the beets have been cooked; 1/4 cupful vinegar; 1/4 cupful cream; 1 teaspoonful sugar; 1/2 teaspoonful salt; melt the butter and stir in the flour; being careful that the mixture does not become too hot, else it will be lumpy; put this in a double boiler, the water jacket of which is boiling actively; stir in the beet juice and cream; add slowly the vinegar, stirring constantly till the mixture thickens; cook till it tastes done; add salt and pepper, and finally the beets.

Baked Egg Plant.

Boil the egg plant until tender, cut in half, remove the heart of the plant, and mash it to a pulp, then mix with an equal quantity of bread or cracker crumbs; add salt, pepper and two tablespoonfuls of butter; put the mixture in the halves of the plant, sprinkle with crumbs, and bake.

Hot Potato Salad.

Wash 6 medium-sized potatoes, and cook in boiling, salted water till soft; cool, peel, and cut crosswise into very thin slices; cover with these slices the bottom of a large graniteware pan, and sprinkle with 1/2 cupful celery chopped fine (or 1 teaspoonful of celery salt), 1 tablespoonful chopped parsley, 1/2 medium-sized onion chopped fine, salt and pepper; mix together 2 tablespoonfuls of vinegar and 4 of olive oil; bring this slowly to boiling, and pour it over the potatoes; cover and let stand in the oven till thoroughly heated.

To wash woolen blankets put the blanket in hot soapsuds with a little borax in the water. Do not rub, but just raise them up and down in the water. If you rub, it hardens and shrinks them. Rinse in clear water the same temperature as suds. Run through wringer and hang up to dry.

No matter how many patented helps to your work you may possess, don't neglect to have a pair of good rubber gloves. The second New York recital of the young Canadian violinist, Evelyn Starr, will be given in Aeolian Hall on Wednesday afternoon, January 3. Her program follows: Chaconne (by request).....Vitali Concerto in D major.....Mozart Serenade Melancolique.....Tschalkowsky Humoresk.....Tor Aulin Vaggsang.....Tor Aulin Habanera.....Sarasate

The Symphony Society of New York, Walter Damrosch, conductor, will begin its second series of Sunday concerts at Aeolian Hall Sunday afternoon at 3. The program will contain a suite taken from Strawinsky's "L'Oiseau de Feu," which received its first performance in this country by the Diaghileff Russian Ballet. This will be the first concert performance of this work. Because of the many requests received, Mr. Damrosch has placed the ever popular Dvorak symphony, "From the New World," on this program. The soloist will be Mme. Olga Samaroff, who will be heard in the Saint-Seans concerto for piano with orchestra in G minor. At the pair of concerts of Friday, January 5, and Sunday, January 7, Alma Gluck will be the soloist.

DISTINGUISHED JEWS OF AMERICA

WILLIAM C. RITTER.

His Career a Page in American Romance—From a Penniless Cobbler Boy to a Wealthy and Influential Citizen.

The story of William C. Ritter's career, his rise from the humble and obscure calling of cobbler to a position of wealth and influence, adds an interesting page to the history of Jewish American Romance. He has refused to be held down by the old maxim of "Shoemaker Stick to Your Last." He has put a crimp in the ancient aphorism, robbed it of its effectiveness, and rendered it obsolete.

William C. Ritter was born at Bergasz, Hungary, on March 30, 1873. Ere the lad had reached his fourth birthday, his father died, and it was not many years after that the boy expressed a desire to become self-supporting. His native town, however, offered scant opportunities to the rising generation, and for want of better occupation he took to shoemaking.

Several years of apprenticeship then ensued, but all the while the boy cobbler was stirred by a feeling of unrest and spurred on by ambition. These emotions finally culminated in his bidding good-bye to the Fatherland and emigrating to America, that land of opportunity, peace and plenty, whose fame had reached across the waves and brought about William's resolve to carve out a career in its wider fields of endeavor.

On September 2, 1887, he landed here and went to McKeesport, Pa. The munificent sum of twenty-nine cents constituted his entire active and reserve fund, so he was thrown on his own resources from the very start. He was equal to the occasion, however, and the trade learned in his old country netted him a wage of $4.50 per week. On this income he lived and even saved something. While in McKeesport he boarded with a family having several school children. He made friends of these children, soon borrowed their books, and even enlisted their aid to acquire an education.

In a couple of years he managed to save $135 and ventured to open a little shoe establishment of his own. His little business thrived for a while, but illness suddenly overtook the youth and he was, perforce, obliged to transfer the reins of management to other hands. A few months later, when he returned to resume charge of his business, he found neither stock nor trade.

Without wasting time in fruitless recrimination, he again sought employment. In his new position he remained long enough to save $450, and then ventured into business again, this time in Pittsburgh. However, this second venture fared no better than the first, for the constant indoor work undermined the young man's health and on advice of physicians he reluctantly abandoned his new enterprise and returned to Europe to recuperate. Fifteen months afterward he again set foot in Pittsburgh with as much (or as little, rather) capital as when he had first landed. For the third time he started anew; secured a position as a shoe salesman and later became an agent for a life insurance company.

To remain in the employ of others, however, was distasteful to the young man, the spirit of independence and ambition, which had impelled him to seek a new sphere of endeavor, instead of being content with conditions in his native town, made itself again manifest, when (after having saved a few dollars) he came to New York to join his brother Leo in business.

The road to success is rarely strewn with roses; unforeseen obstacles blocked their path and wrecked their plans. Eventually, they were overwhelmed by financial difficulties, and (unable to weather the storm) they voluntarily requested the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the assets for the benefit of their creditors.

The failure was but a temporary check upon their exuberant ambitions; the effects of their reverse (although at first a considerable damper in their hopes) soon disappeared beneath their inextinguishable zeal to attain the goal of success. With renewed energy, they started out once more, determined to utilize the experience gained previously. William C. became a manufacturer's agent; Leo, a designer and manager for a cloak house. Close application, constant grind and economic living enabled the brothers to save about $2,800 in two years, and, although that sum might seem little enough to most men, it was sufficient for these two, fortified as they were by their determination and faith in the belief that everything would come out all right in the end. With this capital, in 1903 they rented a tiny loft at 62 East Third street, and embarked again on the waves of business. Long hours of hard work followed. The brothers encountered one handicap after another, but each time the sterling ability inherent in each found a way to solve the difficulty. Throughout, however, they maintained their unshaken conviction that this time they would not fail, and eventually Fortune crowned their efforts.

From that small beginning has evolved the present firm of Ritter Brothers—a monument to the sagacity and industry of the erstwhile cobbler and his brother. Their offices, showrooms and stock rooms only, occupy the complete sixth floor, covering an entire block on Broadway, from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-sixth streets, and are considered one of the most successful cloak houses in New York.

It is particularly worthy of note, and a striking commentary on the characters of the two brothers, that after their discharge from bankruptcy and consequent release from all legal obligation, they nevertheless felt themselves morally bound to repay their creditors. The consequence was that within three years after their re-establishment, every cent which was owing when they failed had been paid voluntarily—their name was clear before all the world. No more lasting testimonial to the honesty and integrity of the two brothers could have been devised. The first outcome was to restore the full confidence of all; the most skeptical were convinced that here were two honest men.

Despite the fact that he has every reason to be proud of his success, William C. Ritter does not preach or sermonize to others about the "Gospel of Success"—a very different trait from the great majority of other successful men. While he believes that perseverance, steadfastness and honesty of purpose are the principal ingredients from which success is moulded, he knows that other elements (beyond mortal control) also enter into it. This viewpoint proves that he has not only acquired knowledge in the school of experience, but also in the school of letters.

During all these years of incessant toil and striving, Mr. Ritter has not failed to enrich himself spiritually. His spare hours he has spent in study (a more laudable pursuit than pinochle, as many would do well to heed). Unlike many of his business confreres, he has come to realize that material welfare is not the all-essential in life. He has always respected learning, and has always cherished a desire to get the education he was deprived of in his boyhood days. As a consequence, he is, today, a fairly well educated man.

He is deeply interested in political economy, theology, astronomy, mineralogy and kindred sciences. He is the owner of a library replete with bulky volumes, which are not on the shelves for ornaments.

His collection of minerals includes some rare and very fine specimens, others of scientific value; in fact, a mineralogist once termed Mr. Ritter's collection "a miniature museum." Artcraft, too, has not gone unnoticed by him, for the Ritter home has some excellent ornaments, hewn out of stone and carved from wood, by Mr. Ritter's hands.

Mr. Ritter is a man of simple habits and prepossessing personality. He has a quiet, suave manner, never imposing or overbearing. He does not suffer from an exaggerated ego, so common among self-made men. His conversation and bearing reflect refinement, culture and intelligence.

Given though he is to business and study, Mr. Ritter, nevertheless, takes an active interest in social, charitable and educational work, many good causes having his financial and moral support. He has been a charter member and president of the West End Forum, an educational league organized in Bath Beach for the purpose of giving lectures free to the people, and for years he has been practically the mainstay of the undertaking.

Mr. Ritter is a director of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, a president of the Bath Beach Hebrew Free Loan Association, a thirty-second degree Mason, and member of Kismet Temple of Mystic Shrines, director of the Bath Beach Young Men's Hebrew Association, an active member of the building committee that is doing so much toward obtaining a new synagogue for the Congregation Sons of Israel, a director of the Zion Hospital, and a trustee of the Bath Beach Hungarian Benevolent Society (a well-known charitable organization).

He is also an honorary member of the Grand Army of the Republic, which recently presented him with an engrossed set of resolutions, in grateful acknowledgment of his interest in and services to veterans and the widows of old soldiers.

Mrs. William C. Ritter was formerly Miss Tillie Schlanger, of Pittsburgh, Pa. Their union has been blessed with a daughter, Lillian, and three sons, Sidney, Alfred and Milton, the two elder children (Lillian and Sidney) attending high school and the other two grammar school. A Hebrew tutor has the children in charge, and they are being reared in the atmosphere of a thoroughly Hebrew home, the kind of a home that produces real men and women.

The Ritters reside in Bath Beach, a suburb of Brooklyn, and are looked upon in the community as being among the foremost of its members and ever ready and eager to do their share and more on occasions when it is possible to do something for the public weal.

ISIDORE BEILEY.

Even on the Heights of Material Success One Can Remain Idealistic.

The opinion is current that a man can be successful only if he is possessed of much egotism, forgets all about his fellowman and constantly has in mind his own interests only. If one gets acquainted with Mr. Isidore Beiley, head of the I. Beiley Company, manufacturers of petticoats, at No. 133 West Twenty-first street, he at once sees the falsity of this theory.

At the outset, let me state that Mr. Beiley is a successful business man, but when you talk with him, and when you inquire about him and become acquainted with him and his mode of life, you come to the conclusion that it is not his business success which is the most interesting thing about him, but he is more interesting as a man of idealistic inclinations and one ready to perform real uplift work. He firmly believes that one has to live in the interests of mankind, and this belief he carries through in his practical life. True, he is not one of those who hold office or play an active role in public institutions, although he gladly subscribes to many charitable causes. But he is a man who does good, and he does it for his relatives, his friends and for all those who require his aid or assistance. His friends point to a few families that are actually supported by him.

Isidore Beiley was born in Wallika, Province of Wilna, on May 15, 1879, where his father (a man of remarkable intelligence, who died not long ago in this city), was very active in communal circles. He came to this country in 1894, and it is almost superfluous to add that he came here without a cent and began his career by peddling. Later he left for the South, and after peddling in Georgia for two years, he came back to New York and started in business with a capital of $250, taking his brother with him. Later he dissolved the association with his brother and started for himself. How successful he has since been is a matter of record. Mr. Beiley also was the organizer of the Tip Top Waist Company.

Mr. Beiley is a very intelligent man. He attended night school, studied a lot, and has also been an apt pupil in that great school of democracy—the school of life. He believes that honesty, hard work and a determination not to get discouraged through early failure, will eventually bring a man face to face with success.

It frequently happens that a man and wife have different views regarding the problems of life and unhappiness is often the result. But Mrs. Beiley (who before her marriage in 1906 was Miss Fannie Weston), like her husband, is very charitable and humanely inclined. She is not all interested in luxuries and style, as are so many others in her financial station, but she is particularly active in charity work and finds much happiness in aiding others.

IRVING E. KREEGER.

Youthful but Important Business Figure.

The writer had the opportunity of interviewing Mr. Irving E. Kreeger, of the firm of Kreeger Bros., of No. 105 East Twenty-ninth street, one of, if not, the largest dealers in woollens and dress goods. He found

The will of Raphael Kirschbaum, of Indianapolis, Ind., disposes of an estate of $1,500,000. He provided $80,000 for Indianapolis charities. He left $50,000 to erect a home in that city for aged and infirm Jews and orphans. It will be a memorial to his wife, and known as the Flora Kirschbaum Home. It will be under the supervision of the Jewish Federation of Indianapolis, which was given $10,000 as a maintenance fund. The Indianapolis Hebrew Congregation receives $5,000. The rest of his estate will be divided among his four children.

Central Committee Raises $1,500,000

The officers of the Central Relief Committee, one of the three agencies responsible for the raising of several million dollars for the aid of Jews suffering in the war zone, announces the collection throughout the country of $1,515,359.38. This announcement is made on the eve of what bids fair to be a very strenuous and interesting campaign to raise for the year 1917 $10,000,000.

The campaign conducted throughout the year 1916 by the Central Relief Committee constitutes one of the most interesting chapters in the history of war relief work in this country.

The little more than $1,500,000 raised by the committee came from as many as 28,693 sources, and is the individual and collected contributions of men and women to whom a dollar represents hard toll and real sacrifice.

The methods employed to get the maximum of funds from these comparatively poor people throughout the country was evolved after very careful, mature thought and planning. The most important means employed may be classified in three divisions.

Efficiency and economy has, since the inception of the committee's activities, been the watchword of its relief work. So carefully is the work conducted that a machine calculated to record the expenditure of every government stamp was purchased, so that the committee might know at any time what it actually costs to mail the various necessary propaganda materials. The best evidence, however, of the pains and thorough care taken by the committee in its effort to minimize the necessary expenses of the campaign which resulted in the raising of more than $1,500,000 is the exceedingly low figure of $50,000 for both administration and propaganda for two years. This sum includes all expenses incurred for transmission of moneys through the State Department as well as telegraphic communications, for institutions and individuals residing in Palestine and elsewhere.

City Co-operates with Jewish Organization.

The New York city authorities, recognizing the great value of educating the immigrant, and making him self supporting and independent in the land of his adoption, and inculcating American principles are deeply interested in the work being done in this direction.

The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, among its many activities conducts a series of lectures on Sunday evenings in the auditorium of its building at 229 East Broadway.

Lectures are given on government, civics and kindred subjects, and the city departments are co-operating to the extent of assigning members to speak on topics connected with the respective departments.

The Fire Department has already been represented by a lecture on fire prevention delivered by Mr. Julius Goldberg. The Police and Health Departments have also assigned speakers, and the street cleaning and other departments have signified their intention to join in the work.

The speaker for the Police Department will be Sergeant Rafsky, who understands and speaks Yiddish, and who has been especially detailed to lecture on the work of the Police Department, and its methods throughout the city.

The lecture given by the Health Department is especially valuable on the question of the relation of sanitation to health and the lecturer is assisted by a set of stereopticon views.

This co-operation between the authorities and the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society is evidenced in every department of the society's work.

New York Board of Jewish Ministers.

At the annual meeting of the New York Board of Jewish Ministers, held December 21, the following officers were elected for the year 1917: President, D. de Sola Pool; vice-president, Isaac S. Moses; treasurer, Barnett A. Elzas; secretary, Max Reichler.

In the past year the board has increased the number of institutions visited by its chaplains, despite the fact that it was transferred to the Council of Jewish Women the work of religious visitation in the institutions for delinquent girls. A further extension and development of the chaplain work done by the board will take place in the coming year.

Mr. Kreeger to be a very intelligent young man, with a knowledge of Talmud and Hebrew and one who enjoys reading the latter. At the same time, he is thoroughly Americanized and familiar with the modern English literature. Coupled with this, he is an astute business man, and charitable to a degree.

Mr. Kreeger was born on August 1, 1888, in Kadany, Province of Kovno. In his boyhood he learned Talmud from his brother-in-law, Rabbi Eliazer Gordon, the famous Lamdan, who was the Rav and Rosh Yeshivah in Telz, and who later died in London. He went to South Africa, where he had some interesting experiences and where he was an active Zionist worker. Mr. Kreeger's father had for fifty-three years in succession conducted a successful woolen business and Irving had learned the trade. So, when he came to America in 1908, already having a thorough command of English, he started in that line with his brother Bernard. A year later they dissolved and Mr. Kreeger formed the present partnership with his brother Arthur. They have prospered immensely.

Mr. Kreeger is a very interesting conversationalist, being exceptionally intelligent and well posted on many topics. He is charitable, doing his share for mankind, although his devotion to business precludes him taking more active participation.

On November 11, 1913, Mr. Kreeger married Miss Beatrice Bornstein, daughter of Mr. N. H. Bornstein, a prominent business man. On November 5, 1914, their union was blessed by a daughter, Gladys Shirley, who, of course, is the apple of their eye.

SOLOMON BECHER.

Important Figure in the Galician Colony.

An interview with Mr. Solomon Becher is a pleasant affair, for Mr. Becher is one of that type of men, a conversation with whom leaves a pleasant sensation in the mind and heart, just as there is a pleasant taste in one's mouth after satisfying the palate with attractive food, and after my interview I felt that I had added another portrait to the gallery of those worthy of being pointed out.

Mr. Becher was born at Stryj, Galicia, on September 21, 1865, and comes from a family which takes particular pride in their famous relative, Dr. Becher, one of the important heroes of the Austrian revolution of 1848 and whose monument occupies an important site in Karlsbad. At the age of 16 Mr. Becher went to Russia and for several years traveled through that country representing the Singer Sewing Machine Company. Later he came to America, where he began by peddling. Then he worked in the cloak industry and in 1892 he started for himself, manufacturing ladies' dresses, and today heads the Progressive Dress Company, at Nos. 110-12 West Thirtieth street.

Mr. Becher was one of the founders of the great Strier Society and one of the first and leading members of the New Sandetzer Society. He is also a member of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. He married in the old country and has seven children, five daughters and two sons. One of the sons, Mr. J. Carl Becher, is a practicing attorney at No. 299 Broadway.

Mr. Becher possesses a very fine character and is one of those men not anxious to amass all the world's wealth, but contented with his lot, friendly and benignly inclined to all mankind.

LOUIS ROTH.

Religious, Charitable, Intelligent and Interesting.

Mr. Louis Roth, of the Randall Underwear Company, No. 99 Madison avenue, is one of those interesting young men that one meets among the successful Jews of America. He was born on December 16, 1877, at Serre, Province of Suwalk. He is a son of one of the oldest and most prominent Jewish immigrants in America, who is now associated in business with him.

When Mr. Roth came to America in 1892 he obtained employment at $2.50 per week, and for ten successive years worked for one concern in the clothing line. Then, for a time, he traveled and later came back to New York, where he joined his father in the manufacturing of ladies' underwear, and the success of this firm is largely due to his energy and ability.

Mr. Roth's communal activities include being a director of the Borough Park Young Men's Hebrew Association, the Borough Park Hebrew School, and the Congregation Shamray Emoonoh. He is a member of many charitable organizations and a director of the Cotton Garment Manufacturers' Association. On March 23, 1903, he married Miss Sarah Smolensky, a daughter of a prominent family of Fall River, Mass., and their union has been blessed with two sons and a daughter. Stanley, the oldest son, will celebrate his Bar Mitzvah on January 7, 1917.

Mr. Roth, who is a strict Sabbath observer, is a firm believer in modern orthodoxy and gives a thorough Jewish training to his children. He is a devoted son and practices the fifth commandment and believes that the young should try to follow in the footsteps of their elders.

Newport News, Va.

Unusual in so many Jewish communities in the South, the greatest interest is being taken here in things Jewish, due to the zealous and untiring efforts of Rabbi Moritz Speier, who is about to enter upon the fourth year of his ministry here. A wonderful revival in all Jewish affairs has taken place, which is steadily increasing.

the dedication of their new home the soldiers were presented with a Mezuza by Rabbi Speier, their chaplain, who compared it to the American flag. The truly Jewish spirit and atmosphere prevailing among the members of the Y. M. H. A. is indeed inspiring. Twice a month they are visited by Rev. Speier, who lectures to them on Biblical and Jewish history. Next month the soldiers will give a ball in the administration hall of the fort for the benefit of the war sufferers and also to furnish their new home.

Old and young, boys and girls, are participating in the various courses of study conducted by our rabbi. An interesting course in Biblical history is given to the local Jewish High School students every Sunday morning, in accordance with the "Official Syllabus of Bible Study for High School Pupils," approved and authorized by the State Board of Education, Richmond, Va., August 29, 1916. Upon successful completion of Course I—Old Testament History and Course II—Old Testament Literature, one unit of High School credit will be allowed in lieu of regular elective courses. This course is attended by twenty-six students. Recently the Jewish soldiers of Fortress Monroe organized a Y. M. H. A. and have their own quarters at Phoebus. At

On Sunday the annual Chanukah entertainment of the Hebrew daily and Sunday schools was held. The program included a Chanukah play. The affair was a great success.

Mass Meeting for War Sufferers. With the great Carnegie Hall mass meeting, at which the campaign was launched for the raising of $10,000,000 for the Jewish war sufferers as an incentive, Brooklyn Jews are preparing to have a similar gathering in this borough on January 7.

The Brooklyn Jewish Volunteer Relief Committee, with offices at No. 76 Graham avenue, is arranging the local meeting at the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory. Brooklyn Jews are then expected to do their share toward helping war-stricken Jews in the belligerent countries.

While plans for the meeting are not yet completed, it is expected that the large gathering will be addressed by the following men of prominence: Governor Charles S. Whitman, Mayor John Purroy Mitchel, Oscar S. Straus, chairman of the Public Service Commission; Borough President Lewis H. Pounds, District Attorney Harry E. Lewis, Dr. Schmaryah Lewin, George W. Perkins, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Dr. Nathan Krass, Judge Benjamin Cardozo, Judge Jacob S. Strahl, the Rev. H. Masliansky, Rev. Dr. Max Raisin, and Rabbi Judah L. Magnes.

Bessie Posner Pavilion for Consumptives.

The Bessie Posner Pavilion for Consumptives is conducting a buy-a-plank campaign for its sanatorium, which is now being completed at Medford, Long Island. The institution will be non-sectarian in the admission of its patients, but will be conducted strictly in accordance with the Mosaic dietary laws. The Jewish patients at the Medford Sanatorium, which is conducted by the Brooklyn Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, will be transferred to the Posner Pavilion.

Plans are being made for the dedication of the pavilion to be held at the Synagogue B'nai Israel, Bedford avenue and Hewes street.

The buy-a-plank committee consists of Gabriel Bellin, chairman; Eva Rosenson, Esther J. Shapiro, Gertrude Posner, Sadie Brodsky, Mrs. Jacob Jacobson, Louis Kowarsky and Maurice Goldman. The proceeds of the recent dance of this society will aid greatly in its work. The next meeting of the Bessie Posner Pavilion will be held on January 4, 1917, in Bedford mansion, Bedford and Willoughby avenues.

The play will be given at the spacious auditorium of the Commercial High School building, on Dean street and Albany avenue. The author of the play, Miss Eleanor Densmore Wood, will herself appear in the cast. Others to take part in it will be Dr. John Haynes Holmes, Rabbi Max Raisin and Mr. Whitman, one of the editors of the Boston American. CORRESPONDENCE.

The Kehillah and Dr. Abelson's Indictment.

Editor HEBREW STANDARD: I am inclosing you two statements—one by myself and one by Dr. Paul Abelson, director of our Bureau of Industry—in reference to our connection with the poultry situation.

As you are interested in a more organized Jewry than we have, I deem it wise that you should be in possession of these statements. Very truly yours, J. L. MAGNES, Chairman.

Statement of Dr. J. L. Magnes, Chairman Executive Committee, Jewish Community (Kehillah) of New York City: The indictment against Dr. Paul Abelson would be a ludicrous affair were it not a serious reflection on a man whose integrity is beyond suspicion. He is one of the best known Jewish social workers in this city, and is recognized by all who have come in contact with him as a man of the highest principles and devoted to the public welfare. He has been instrumental in solving many difficult industrial problems, and his fairness and impartiality have made him a most useful factor in the settlement of strikes. I have regarded my association with him as fortunate, and my confidence in him is unbounded.

He became a director of the Harlem and Bronx Live Poultry Associates as the representative of the Kehillah at my request. I had been informed that the plan under which that organization was established had received the unqualified approval of the District Attorney. The evidence presented on that subject seemed to be of the most conclusive character. The Kehillah had for more than five years been engaged in an effort to remedy serious abuses which have arisen in the kosher poultry business. The orthodox Jews, as is well known, will eat only such poultry as has been ritually slaughtered under Jewish religious auspices. The frauds and swindle which have been practiced upon the Jewish public, and especially upon its poorer members in this connection, are beyond belief. Not only are they called upon to pay for overweight due to all manner of dishonest practices, but a large proportion of the poultry sold to the Jewish public as kosher is in fact not so. The result is to create complete demoralization in the religious life of the orthodox Jews of the community. In recent years, in consequence of this fact, there have occurred strikes and lockouts, riots and raids, and a disturbance of the public peace, and the Baff murder is a direct outcome of the chaos which has existed.

It has not been pleasant for the Kehillah to deal with this situation. Because it has attempted to prevent and obviate the fraud and exactions to which the public has been subjected, it has incurred the enmity not only of many dealers in poultry, but also of a certain class of lawyers, politicians and gangsters. It has, nevertheless, regarded it to be its duty to find suitable remedies for those intolerable conditions. When, therefore, it was assured, during the past summer, that the District Attorney had approved of a plan for the regulation of the industry, the Kehillah regarded this as an opportunity to serve the public by designating Dr. Abelson as an agency to prevent unjust exactions and extortionate charges. When, some time ago, it was learned that the District Attorney questioned the legality of the plan and claimed that he had been misquoted, Dr. Abelson at once ceased his connection with the poultry dealers' organization.

Dr. Abelson has not in any way profited personally from his connection with this business. He received a regular salary from the Kehillah. Whatever amount he was to receive for his services from the poultry dealers' association was to be applied by him on account of his salary. It is apparent that interested persons imposed not only on the District Attorney, but also on Dr. Abelson and the Kehillah. It is our purpose to continue our interest in this subject, and, through constructive suggestions, to do whatever is humanly possible to put an end to the disgraceful conditions which surround the poultry industry.

The Following Statement Is Issued by Dr. Paul Abelson, Director of the Bureau of Industry of the Kehillah (Jewish Community).

In reference to my indictment by the Grand Jury as one of the directors of the company which is charged with the violation of the Donnelly Anti-Trust law, I desire to state that I am an innocent victim of circumstances which were in no way of my making. I assumed directorship on the Harlem and Bronx Live Poultry Associates by the direction of the Kehillah and against my personal wishes and inclinations. I undertook the office for a period of six months only. The duty which the Kehillah imposed upon me was to endeavor, by immediate contact with the business, to help solve and rationalize the perplexing question of the live poultry business, which touches the life of almost every Jew in the community on the religious and economic side. The work that I have done in connection with that experiment was taken at a personal sacrifice and at no material gain, directly or indirectly.

In the work that I have done, a full and detailed report of which will appear in due time, I have endeavored to find a solution for the problems that beset that industry from the point of view of the public and the public only. I am conscious of having done no wrong. To all my friends, and to all those whose respect I command, I wish to say that I have applied to that problem the best that is in me, and have acted in a most honorable way. I have no doubt that the near future will vindicate my position. In the meantime I am placed in the unfortunate situation of being the target of unworthy attacks which are aimed at the Jewish community by those whose interest it is to destroy or, if possible, check its usefulness for the Jews of the city of New York.

A portrait of Mr. Leon Huhner, curator of the Jewish Historical Society, is one of the paintings at the winter exhibition of the National Academy of Design, which opened on the 15th inst. The picture is the work of Mr. William Meyerowitz, an artist whose work, both as painter and etcher, is rapidly coming to the fore.

The Frankfurter Zeitung contains some remarkable figures on intermarriage in Germany during the war. From 1901 to 1913 the intermarriage of Protestants rose from 3 per cent, that of the Catholics about 4 1/2 per cent, while among the Jews it went up from 16.97 per cent in 1901 to 30.98 per cent in 1913.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

A TIME FOR EVERYTHING.
Dear Children:

Rashi is now telling us that the Torah has set us a great example by telling us in human language that "it repented the Lord that He had made man on the earth, and it grieved Him at his heart," in order to teach us to be true to the occasion in which we find ourselves. A certain skeptic said to Rabbi Joshua Ben Koscha: "You claim that the Holy One, blessed be He, sees the future?" "Yes," he answered. "Is it not written 'and it grieved Him at His heart'?" queried the skeptic. "Was a son ever born to you?" asked Rabbi Joshua. "Yes," answered the skeptic. "And what did you do at that time?" asked Rabbi Joshua. "I rejoiced and caused everybody else to rejoice," answered the skeptic. "And did you not know that in the end he would die?" asked Rabbi Joshua. "Well," answered the skeptic. "in the time of rejoicing we must rejoice, in the time of mourning we must mourn." "Thus it is with the works of the Holy One, blessed be He," said Rabbi Joshua. "Although it was revealed to Him that in the end mankind would sin and be destroyed, He yet did not refrain from creating them for the sake of the righteous ones, who were destined to arise from them."

And the Lord said: "Emchah es haadam," "I will wipe man off the face of the earth; he is earth, and I will bring the waters upon him and wipe him off the globe." Both man and beast, for the beasts, too, corrupted their way upon the earth. Another reason for the destruction of the beasts was this: Inasmuch as they were all created for the benefit of man what use is there for their existence when man is destroyed? Yes, indeed, dear children, it was worth while creating mankind for the sake of the righteous who were destined to arise from them, for these are the generations of Noah. Noah was a just, perfect man; inasmuch as he mentioned him, he speaks in his praise, as it is said in the tenth chapter of Proverbs: "The memory of the just is to be blessed." Another reason for the Torah telling us that "the generations of Noah is Noah," whereas it should have been written "the generations of Noah were Sham, Ham and Japheth," to teach us that the real generations of the righteous ones are their good deeds—"Bedorothov" in his generation. There are some of our Rabbins who consider this complimentary to Noah; even in his wicked generation he was so righteous, had he been in a better generation he would have been still more righteous. But others of the Rabbins consider it derogatory to Noah; in comparison with the wickedness of his generation he was a righteous man, but had he lived in the generation of Abraham he would not have been considered as anything. Noah walked with the Lord, but of Abraham it is said: "The Lord, before whom I have walked" (Genesis 25-40). Noah required to be supported in his righteousness, but Abraham strengthened himself and walked in the righteous path by his own efforts. The earth was corrupt and filled with violence. Immorality raged in all its hideousness amongst man and even amongst beasts. And added to this was idolatry in every form, and where there rages these two terrible sins, an epidemic is sent upon the earth that destroys the good and the bad. Still their decree of destruction was not sealed until the earth was filled with violence. Robbery was the capping climax of their crimes and the immediate cause of their destruction.

"Make thee an ark," was the Lord's command to Noah. "Many are the ways in which the Lord might have saved Noah," says Rashi. "then why did He trouble him to build an ark?" In order that the people of the generation of the flood should see Noah working at the building of the ark one hundred and twenty years, and when they would ask him what he is building, he would answer them, the Holy One, blessed be He, intends to bring a flood upon the earth. Perhaps they would repent of their evil ways. He made the ark of the wood of Gopher. The name of this wood was "gopher" and was expressly intended to signify to the sinful generation that they would perish through "gophrith" sulphur. The ark was pitched within and without, but the box in which little Moses floated upon the river was daubed with slime within and pitch without for the reason that the water was smooth and it was sufficient to have the pitch on the outside, also that the righteous Moses should not be annoyed by the smell of the pitch. But in the waters of the flood, on account of their strength, it was necessary to pitch it within and without.

"Don't you know you will be punished for fishing on Sunday?" asked the shocked minister of the little boy on the river-bank.

"Not on your life!" replied the young angler. "Dad's fishing himself a little way down the stream."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A good story is being told of a reply given by a student to a question set in an examination paper:

"If twenty men reap a field in eight hours," ran the question, "how long will it take fifteen men to reap the same field?"

The student thought long and carefully before setting down the answer, and when he handed in his paper this is what the examiner read: "The field having already been reaped by the twenty men, could not be reaped by the fifteen."

The Menorah Movement.
The Menorah movement, represented by over fifty Menorah societies in American colleges and universities, held its annual convention this year at Minneapolis and St. Paul, under the auspices of the University of Minnesota, on December 26-29, 1916.

This Jewish student movement, devoted to the "study and advancement of Jewish culture and ideals," initiated by a handful of students at Harvard in 1906, has grown rapidly and spontaneously until now, through its constituent societies in the leading universities of the country, it is a recognized force for intellectual and moral betterment.

In these momentous days, when the Jews of America are organizing their economic and spiritual resources to meet the obligations and responsibilities of leadership, it appears important to give more than a passing consideration to the aspirations and achievements of the Menorah movement. With the advent of thousands of our numbers to the universities in the last two decades, followed by the prominence of Jewish students in the fields of scholarship, their awakening to a sense of loyalty and appreciation to their Jewish heritage, has come a change of attitude from the old laissez-faire position. The Jewish students are slowly but unmistakably shaking off the old conception that the years of college life should be free and unperturbed of Jewish thoughts and problems. They are coming to the realization that their university training is incomplete and inadequate if it does not also give them an outlook on Jewish life, based upon a study of Jewish ideals and problems. With the new order being established among our university students, the men and women of the community are beginning to take a more active interest in moulding the welfare and progress of this student-body, destined to exert no small influence upon the policies and development of American Jewry.

The primary object of a Menorah Society is intellectual and cultural. It inspires its men with a desire to study the history, the literature, the religion, the problems and ideals of the Jew. Working in entire harmony with the freedom and liberality of the American universities, it brings the Jewish historical and literary contribution out from the dusty shelves of Semitic treasures and curios into the lecture room and study halls. By establishment of Menorah prizes and study groups opportunities are given for earnest, intensive, fruitful endeavor in the fields of Jewish scholarship and thought.

A Menorah Society is instrumental in inducing Jewish students with virile moral fibre, through the process of self-realization and reawakening that follows association with Menorah ideals. The feeling of shame and concealment, or even incongruity, is succeeded by the manly recognition of the Jewish heritage. There comes a spirit of reverence for the ideals and achievements of the Jewish past, a true appreciation of the problems of the present and a spirit of consecration to serve for the future of the Jew. The spirit of class antagonism and snobishness is often succeeded by a new attitude of more mutual understanding between the rich and the poor Jewish student, the orthodox and the reformed.

A Menorah Society exerts a beneficent influence of a patriotic nature. In training its men for a harmonious adjustment of their American and Jewish loyalties, by inculcating in them a strong devotion to the ethical and social ideals which are at the foundation of our American democracy, it is preparing them for service to the State and to their fellow Jews. Our multiplying communal problems, our increasing measure of responsibility, calls for servants and leaders of the new generation who will combine an understanding of the deep, underlying roots of American institutions with a warm devotion to the tradition and ideals of their Jewish heritage. This double function the Menorah societies are serving.

The Menorah Society functions as a university agency. It has been a salutary force in its co-operation with university authorities for the general promotion of Jewish student welfare; it has done much to enlighten the general student-body to a proper appreciation of the Jew, his contribution and ideals. Operating as a cultural force, an open forum it has been accorded a position of dignity and respect. Its influence is ever widening in the field of Jewish scholarship by encouraging and making possible at our leading universities the establishment of chairs and courses in Hebrew learning.

The attitude of university and faculty authorities is notably illustrated in the cordial support given by such leading educators as President Eliot, of Harvard; President Wheeler, of California; and President Hadley, of Yale. The faculty members who have come into touch with the societies have noted the remarkable influence exerted by the Menorah idea. The observation of Professor Edward C. Baldwin, of the University of Illinois, is but characteristic: "Even now I can see in the Jewish students whom I meet a change of mental attitude from that which was common a few years ago. The Jewish student of today seems to me to have developed a racial self-respect, not aggressive nor blatant, but rooted in a recognition that he belongs to a gifted race possessed of a splendid past. The Jewish student now is more commonly a man proud of his heritage and sensible of his obligation to live in the light of his racial ideals. Such a change of mental attitude I attribute in no small degree to the influence of the Menorah movement." The Jewish community, too, is beginning to feel the influence of the Menorah societies. Whether in the fields of Jewish education, social service, community enterprises, Menorah graduates are being actively enrolled, while the undergraduates are receiving that academic training in Jewish lore and ideals which makes them ideal candidates for these fields of pursuit. The Menorah movement, with a membership of 3,000 Jewish students, with an ever-increasing body of university and non-university men and women in the general community associating themselves with the movement may confidently be expected to contribute in no small measure to the progress and advancement of the Jew in America. The Jewish student generation, aroused and mindful of its obligation and opportunity, will give a creditable accounting for itself.
