"STATISTICS"

From the Yiddish of S. Vendroff. Translated by HANNAH BERMAN.

Listen! There is no worse means of livelihood than match-making.

First of all, every one tries his hand at it. If a teacher wants to earn an extra shable, he tries match-making. A Jew whose business is dealing in flax or grain sees a boy and girl somewhere, and tries to make up a match between them. A young woman, who goes about with nothing to do suddenly begins to make matches. And public men are matchmakers, and muggidin, and beadles and cantors—every sort and kind of men and women are matchmakers.

What more do you want than this? When I come to speak to you of a match for your son or your daughter, you go and ask some one about them; and this some one becomes a partner in the business.

And more than this—there's Love. Since this peculiar disease became prevalent among Jews there's nothing to do. They don't want matchmakers. And, what good is a matchmaker to them, anyway? Can't they manage by themselves—what? Boys and girls go about the streets, openly and freely. The minute they meet its shu! shu! shu! A silly world! You understand me? Then what do they want Jonah for? Well, we've got used to these troubles. Those who want may carry on love affairs and more affairs. There are still some respectable Jews left who will not marry off their children without a matchmaker.

But, that all my calculations should go astray—this has happened me for the first time.

The story runs like this:

Macheal Ginspreger—the same who exports wagonloads—had a son called Chalye—a clever boy at his books, at writing, and also at drinking. He played chess, the fiddle, knew a little Hebrew, and was a good business man. To tell the truth, he was a little too much given up to mathematics. It was a sort of mania with him. No matter when you saw him, or what you said, he was sure to turn to mathematics. Nothing was of any value to him beside mathematics.

"What use is your astronomy?" he argued. "They tell me that on Mars there are hills and valleys and rivers; spots on the sun; on the moon, hills and valleys and I don't know what. Am I bound to believe all this? And if they tell me there's a pair in the sky, must I also believe it?

"Or let us look at geography. This tells me," he went on, "that Europe contains so many square miles; that one, so many; this ocean is so big and that mountain so high. We'll ask you, how do they know all this?

One doctor says cupping; another says leeches; comes a third and gets into a rage at the idea of blood-letting. If one says 'day' the other says

Of the other sciences he had also a low opinion. What difference could it make if a bug had forty-eight or eighty-eight legs? And if you know how long an elephant lives, will it help you to provide for the Sabbath?"

In this he was quite right. And he made nothing of every science in the world. There was only one that was worth while learning—mathematics. This was a science on which one could depend. Algebra, Euclid, geometry, statistics were exact, and had a substantial foundation and a 'mittel of proof. Twice two must be four. If you live to a thousand years, and argue all the time, you will never get three times three to make ten. You may be the greatest non-believer, and even doubt that the Messiah will come, but you cannot deny the truth of mathematics. Nor can you do without it. Whether you build a house, erect a bridge, lay down a railway, you must always calculate how much and what.

This talent for mathematics showed itself in him when he was quite a child. When he started to go to school he counted the steps there and back; counted the houses he passed, and the wooden palings. And for a long time he worried to find out how many rolls he ate in the year, averaging six a day.

When Chalye grew older and his father took him into the business, he sat making calculations all day long. He was ready to count up what income he would have had if all the houses of the town had belonged to him; what his share of the national debt would be if Russia owed 8,626 million roubles; how many Jews eat without washing their hands, and how many matches are used in the world in a single day.

In a word, the young man let himself go into calculations. And if you wished to make away with statistics he got into a rage. When I came to him to speak of a girl he at once calculated how much interest the dowry would bring him in; how much an economical wife could save; or how much a child costs from its birth until it gets married. And he arrived at the conclusion that a young man like him could not marry on less than five thousand roubles.

But I didn't care about that. If you want five thousand, let it be so. I have plenty of goods to choose from.

I wrote to my partner in Minsk, and he sent me word that he had a first-class girl who was of good family and had money. She herself was only so-so, but one cannot get everything.

We managed to get round him all right. He agreed that the calculations we gave him were correct. But he saw Chatzkel, the melamed's daughter—the same who came back from Warsaw and opened a millinery shop—and he began to boil.

Where and what were his calculations? Gone. He forgot that he was a business man or that she was a poor man's daughter; and that, according to his own calculations, he dare not marry on less than five thousand roubles dowry; and he forgot to calculate how much it would cost him to keep her poor relations. He was simply dying for her.

Well, as I know of nothing, I bothered him about the girl from Minsk. I saw he took it coolly; and I spoke out plainly and asked him when he would go to see her. He replied in this fashion:

"Do you know what I will tell you, Reb Jonah? Let us leave the Pinsk girl alone. Nothing will come of it. Do not fear, Reb Jonah; if you are a smart man you will earn your fees. And I will give you the name of the girl, too. Go and make up the match."

"Well, let me hear. Perhaps you have hit on a better match."

He whispered the secret in my ear:

Chatzkel, the melamed's daughter—the milliner from Warsaw."

I did not know whether he had gone mad or not. It was a fine match and no mistake. I looked hard at him.

"Why do you look at me like that, Reb Jonah? She is a lovely girl, from a big town, and has a business in her hands that will in time bring in more than five thousand roubles."

"And what will your father say to it?"

"What do you care, Reb Jonah? You go and talk; and if she consents—there is some doubt about it—I will arrange with my father all right. And about your fees, Reb Jonah, don't let that worry you. You will get as much from me as if I were getting the first thousand roubles dowry."

Did you ever hear the like in your life?

I thought to myself—why should I worry, after all? If you want Chyinka, the milliner, then have her. If you are mad—then be mad, so long as I get my money. I was only afraid of his father. He would be wretched when he got to know of it. That the girl should raise any objection I never imagined. But so it turned out.

"Will I marry that mad melamed's daughter?" she said. "He would count the grains of oatmeal in the pot."

Did you ever hear such a reply from a girl?

But the young man would not rest. He sent me again and again. He wanted no dowry. On the contrary, he was ready to spend all his money on her; would give her father money, too. It was useless. Her father was more than willing. Why should he not want to get into the family of Michael Gmspreger? Gut Chyinka of the bright eyes would not even listen.

Chalye, on the other hand, would hear of no other match.

"It is useless your talking, Reb Jonah," he said. "Either Chatzkel's daughter or no one."

I decided to say nothing. When a boy wants a girl it is as well to leave him alone. He may change his mind in the course of time, but for the present it is best not to interfere.

But the young man would not rest. The more stubbornly she held out against him the more he wanted her.

He thought to himself: Why should he not have a talk with her himself?

But to go to her for that only was impossible. He bided his time. When no one was in her shop he went in, with the excuse that he wanted change for a three-rouble note. He tried to draw her into a conversation, and began by telling her how well off the woman is who marries a business man. And he threw in a word or two that he was his father's only child; and in a hundred and twenty years he would, etc., etc.

But the more he talked the more firmly she locked her lips, and the more sternly she looked straight at the wall.

You must know that Chalye is by nature shy. And when he saw her attitude he completely lost control over his powers of speech, and did not know what to do with his hands.

He was inspired by the idea of showing her that he was no less cultured than the empty fops of Warsaw. And he began to explain to her how clever he was at mathematics.

The moment he started on this theme he was a changed man. He was no longer shy and had no constraint. He was a real professor.

"As regards what you say of mathematics," he cried, as if they had been arguing the subject for the last three hours, "tell me, I pray you, what is so clever as arithmetic? Whether you buy a pound of sugar"

MARCUS B. HEYMAN, M.D.

The Newly Appointed Superintendent of Ward's Island.

Dr. Marcus B. Heyman, who has been appointed Medical Superintendent of the Manhattan State Hospital, Ward's Island, New York city, is a native of Chester, S. C. He was graduated from the public schools, studied at the University of South Carolina, then took the medical course in the University of New York, from which he was graduated in 1890, at that time serving as ambulance surgeon for Bellevue Hospital.

He is not entirely a stranger on Ward's Island, having been a junior assistant from 1890 to 1895, after which he procured a position as second assistant physician in the South Carolina State Hospital, Columbia, S. C. He returned to New York when the hospital on Ward's Island was still under city control, and was assigned to duty on Hart's Island, a branch of the institution. He was transferred to the State Hospital at Central Islip, L. I., in 1897, and became first assistant medical director. His extraordinary ability and knowledge in the care and treatment of the insane was so thoroughly shown in this position that the office of assistant superintendent was created for him at Central Islip in 1902, and this he so satisfactorily filled in every particular that the honor of acting superintendent was conferred upon him, and he so acted in the absence of his superior officer.

In May, 1917, he was appointed medical inspector of the State of New York, the duties of which involved visitation and inspection of all hospitals for the insane under the jurisdiction of the State of New York for the purpose of the enforcement of the laws of the State as applied to insane patients and the hygienic and sanitary conditions of the hospitals, etc.

Dr. Heyman had just entered upon the discharge of these duties when he was notified of his appointment as superintendent of the institution on Ward's Island to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Mabon, who served many years in that capacity and who was noted as one of the State's great alienists. Thus the honors thrust upon Dr. Heyman so rapidly in recent years are a tribute to his worth, his character, but above all his work in behalf of the unfortunate insane wards of the State.

In every position he held his capacity was severely tested. He had many obstacles and prejudices to overcome and numerous problems to solve. He was a pioneer in the policy of "non-restraint" as applied to patients. He introduced the system known as "occupational and diversional therapeutics" in the care and treatment of the insane, and which he so successfully demonstrated at Central Islip Hospital that this treatment is recognized by all prominent alienists and adopted in all the prominent insane asylums of the country.

He is also a staunch advocate of "hydro-therapeutics" and as a reformer in all things pertaining to the treatment of the insane attracted the attention of the medical world and public officials which led to his rapid advancement, so that now he occupies a position of not only great responsibility, but is recognized also as an authority in everything pertaining to his profession, in which he has devoted so much time, care and conscientious endeavor.

At Central Islip he was exceedingly popular. Under his direction the hospital became democratic in its attitude toward the public and at the same time the efficiency of the hospital was maintained and proved an example to many similar institutions.

The employees, the staff of medical officers, and even the patients, regret his departure from Central Islip. The former presented him with a gold watch, chain and fob, valued at $400, as a token of their esteem. Last Saturday night the medical staff of the institution gave a farewell party in his honor, and presented Dr. Heyman with a solid silver loving cup.

From those patients who know, he has the good wishes that could be bestowed by no other class of people. As a man, he has a charming personality, a nature that is truly Southern, and a spirit that must radiate in every department of the Manhattan State Hospital, over which he presides and that now contains 5,335 patients, and employs 900 persons. Of the patients in this institution there are about 900 of the Jewish faith.

Dr. Heyman is the first Hebrew appointed as the head of an institution of this character in this State, possibly in the United States, and he has the best wishes of a host of friends and admirers of all creeds and nationalities in his new duties.

Dr. Heyman was recently elected vice-president of the New York State Medical Society. He is a member of the Lotus Club, the Southern Society and Holland Lodge No. 18, F. & A. M., of New York.

A Tribute to the Jews.

In concluding an address before the Transportation Club at Indianapolis, President B. A. Worthington, of the Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Western Railroad Company, said:

"With your kind indulgence, I will digress from the subject of my discourse for a moment, to call your attention to the proposed visit of a most distinguished gentleman—Rabbi Wise of New York, who is to address a mass meeting here in Indianapolis, soliciting aid for the millions of starving Jews in Poland, and I wish to bespeak a few words in their behalf.

"Time forbids my going into the blood-stained history of their past—their fatal dissensions and final destruction with all its incredible horrors, of their exile and slavery, of the dispersion of all of their lands and other personal belongings, of their persecutions, sufferings, wanderings and despair for nearly 2,000 years.

"It is a story that should shame—not only our christianity—but our common humanity, and since this great war began, it simply staggers belief to be told of the atrocities that have been committed towards these poor down-trodden people of Poland—not by blinded heathens or ferocious pagans—but by Christian people and in the name of Him—the meek and lowly—who was called 'The Prince of Peace,' and 'The Harbinger of good will to all men.

"Looking back over the history of the Jews, their social life—considering their struggle for existence—is still more remarkable. There is neither prostitution nor pauperism—and but little abject poverty whenever they get an even chance. Divorce, domestic discord and disobedience to parents are almost unknown among them. History records that many of them have become the leading merchants, bankers and financiers of the world. In many countries, their children were not permitted to enter the schools or to be enrolled in guilds of labor. Therefore, trade was the only avenue left open to them. In many countries they were not permitted to own the soil on which they lived. After many centuries the flames of persecution in most countries on the globe have abated, so that the Jew is permitted to enjoy something more than bare life, and wherever he has been given an opportunity, he has shown by his industry, energy and talent that he is a good citizen and takes his full part in the most important motive powers of the world. He has entered the fields of commerce—handling the most colossal operations. He has become the friend and counselor of kings—the prime ministers of empires—the treasurer of republics—the mover of armies, and the arbiter of public credit.

"Whatever shortcomings may be urged to the Jew, we should not forget that he has acquired them because of relentless persecution, and these objections he is fast removing whenever the cause is removed.

"Therefore, I want to urge upon each and every one of you here tonight to lend whatever assistance you may be able to, to the people of this great race—the people of sorrowful Israel whose children through centuries of persecution and tribulation have struggled with heroic manhood, waiting for the dawning of the day of true brotherhood of man, with a faith whose constant cry through all the dreary watches of the night has been 'Tho he slay me, yet will I trust in Him.'

"Roll, golden sun, roll swiftly towards the West;
Dawn, happy day when many woes shall cease;
Come quickly, Lord, thy people wait the rest.
"Of Thine abiding peace.
"No more, no more, to hunger here for love;
No more to thirst for blessings long denied.
Judah! Thy face is foul with weeping, but above
Thou shalt be satisfied."

A Fine War Prayer.

A feature of the great meeting was the singing, by Madame Clara Butt, of the hymn set by H. F. Charley and J. Ellerton. It is, it occurs to us, a fine conception of what a prayer should be, particularly in war time—one that can be joined in by those of all religious faiths or none. Its verses run thus:

God the All-terrible! King, who ordainest
Great winds Thy clarions, lightnings
Thy sword;
Show forth Thy pity on high where
Thou reignest:
Give to us peace in our time, O Lord!

God the All-merciful! earth hath forsaken
The ways of blessedness, slighted Thy word;
Bid not Thy wrath in its terrors awaken:
Give to us peace in our time, O Lord!

God the All-pitiful, is it not crying
Blood of the guiltless, like water out-poured?
Look on the anguish, the sorrow, the sighing:
Give to us peace in our time, O Lord!

God the All-wise! by the fire of Thy chastening,
Earth shall to freedom and truth be restored;
Through the thick darkness Thy kingdom is hastening:
Thou wilt give peace in Thy time, O Lord!

So shall Thy children in thankful devotion
Laud Him who saved them from peril
abhorred,
Singing in chorus from ocean to ocean,
Peace to the nations and praise to the Lord.

The Chief Rabbi might do worse than to order this hymn to be rendered in all synagogues under his spiritual control, for it is redolent of that fine Jewish aspiration for universal peace which is one of our most glorious traditions, much more truly so than some of the war prayers we have heard in synagogues in recent years. If it were sung, as it was on Saturday evening at the Albert Hall, to the Russian National Anthem music, its appropriateness in the synagogue ritual, in the new conditions that have supervened, would be made all the more manifest.—London Jewish World.

or build a ship you must always calculate.

"Or take, for instance, the science of statistics. Is there a more important subject in the world? For example, you go to get married. It is well that you should know where you are in the world. For example, we have today six million Jews in Russia; of these one million three hundred thousand and thirty-nine are bachelors, and two million two hundred and seventy-five thousand are unmarried women. That means there are one and three-quarter girls for each man. Each year six hundred thousand one hundred and eleven are married, and nine hundred and seventy-five thousand and forty-seven girls remain unmarried. If we were to count up how many girls remain unmarried in a period of ten years he should arrive at the following figures."

Chalye was starting to make out his calculation, when he raised his eyes to the girl. She was deathlike. Her eyes were glazed. She evidently wished to say something, but had lost her voice.

"Eh—eh! How many girls remain unmarried each year?" she murmured.

"Nine hundred, and seventy-five thousand and forty-seven," he replied, and added in an emphatic tone: "Who have not even the hope of getting married."

"Never in their lives?" she asked, trembling.

"Never in their lives? Whom can they marry, when each year there are left so many girls? Take my advice while there is yet time. I will make a good husband.

When the fashionable girl from Warsaw realized how things were in reality she lowered her eyes, and said:

"I am satisfied. . . . Only be good to me."

Well, what's the use in making a long story? A marriage contract was drawn up.

I ran off to the young man: Chalye, where are my marriage fees?"

He only laughed at me.

"Have you brought about the match?" he asked. "Statistics did it."

There's a new matchmaker for you—Statistics!

The news that the whole of American Jewry has rallied round President Wilson and the cause of the Allies, and that Messrs. Jacob H. Schiff and Oscar S. Straus sent greetings to the new Russian Government has provoked the anger of the Austrian anti-Semitic press. The organs of the Jew-baiters printed severe attacks on our American Jews who are of German origin.

At the annual convocation of Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of New Zealand, held at Auckland, M. E. Companion Maurice Joseph Harris was invested, enthroned, and proclaimed as the first grand principal of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of New Zealand. Companion Harris is a native of Balarat, and is the first Jew to occupy this distinguished position.

When the Roumanian King was recently visited by a Jassy Jewish deputation he assured them that all those who are now making every sacrifice for their King and country on the battlefield would have every privilege of a free Roumania extended to them, regardless of their race or creed. The implication is that those Jews not at the front could not look forward to the prospect of equal treatment.

The noted Rabbi Snitkind, who for over fifty years held the position of rabbiner in Kovno, died at Petrograd last month. The old rabbi, ordered to leave Kovno in 1915 with the rest of the Jewish population, settled in Petrograd, where he remained as a refugee. Rabbi Snitkind was particularly noted for his charitable work, and thousands of people honored his memory at the funeral.

During the month of June the Russian Minister of War will raise no less than 2,600 Jewish soldiers to the rank of officers. These appointments will be made at the express recommendation of the many Russian generals stationed in different parts of the country, who have already sent in their lists of names of Jewish young men who are entitled to the rank of officers by virtue of their education and the services rendered while on active duty.

Of all the scholarship prizes awarded at the commencement exercises at Columbia University last Wednesday the most coveted went to Emanuel Littauer, former fullback and idol of the students. The Rolker prize, which is for the member of the graduating class selected by his classmates as most worthy of special distinction for academic work, athletic prowess and other undergraduate activities. The prize consists of the income on $1,000 for one year, and is the gift of Mrs. C. M. Rolker, in memory of her son, Charles M. Rolker, Jr., '07.

Chief Rabbi Hertz was one of the speakers at an important meeting held last month at the Westminster Central Hall, under the presidency of Lord Bryce, to support the plan of a League of Nations, and which was addressed by General Smuts, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Lord Buckmaster, and Lord Hugh Cecil. The chief rabbi, basing his observations on the Vision of the Jewish Seer at a time when the whole world was terrorized by the Assyrian, delivered an address which was well received and heartily cheered.

The Jewish correspondence bureau at The Hague sent a message to Prince Lvoff, the Russian Premier, asking him to define Russia's attitude toward the Jewish question with reference to peace and received a reply from M. Tereschchenko, the Russian minister of Foreign Affairs. The reply says: "The Russian preliminary government leaves to the Jewish people to determine of their own free will whether it must regard itself as a confessional community or nationality. The government will gladly avail itself of the co-operation of this nation in the work of the international and social regeneration of mankind."

An organization of Jewish women just formed at Petrograd is gathering funds to enable them to send necessary presents to those at the front. Of those most prominently connected with this movement are: Baroness Ginsburg, A. Kominika, M. Goldstein, D. Winaver, E. Abelson, E. Shifrin, L. Sheikowitch, D. Eiger and G. Girschowitz. In the first two weeks of its existence this new organization gathered no less than 60,000 roubles. For this money 22,000 packets were forwarded to those at the front. Each packet contained hose, underwear, cigarettes, matches, needles and other comforts. In addition to this quantities of pastry, nuts, handkerchiefs, razors and similar commodities are being sent. Among those who aided in transporting these to the front were Duma Deputy Friedman, L. Sternberg, G. Warshafskaya and Baron A. Ginsburg.

Rumanian Jews and the Promises of Princes—Serious Case of Jews in Palestine—Allied Citizens' Conscription Bill Going Through the House of Commons Slowly—Interesting Legacy Case to Non-Christian Society—More Jewish Charities Show Deficits—Chief Rabbi Issues Helpful Book for Jewish Soldiers—Jewish Performer Tells Some Amusing Stories—Jewish Actors' Union Formed.

London, May 18, 1917.

That the Jews of Rumania have serious grievances we have all along been well aware. That they have also put all thought of these on one side during the war and fought bravely and nobly for Rumania is also a thing which nowadays requires no further evidence. It is therefore something of a shock to read of meetings, both in Rumania and Odessa, in the shape of Jewish demonstrations protesting against the ill-treatment to which Jews have recently been subjected in Rumania. The evidence in some respects is rather conflicting, but it is bad on the whole. Now that attention has been drawn to it it looks as though there will be some betterment. It is stated that the whole Jewish question will be dealt with in the present session of the Rumanian Parliament, and King Ferdinand of Rumania, when he received in audience the Jassy Israelite Committee, declared that all those who were fighting for the national aspirations, whether they be Christians or Jews or belonging to any other faiths, will enjoy equal rights in a free and prosperous Rumania. There is an old saying about "Put not your trust in princes," but we are ever hopeful.

The grave and threatening position of the Jews in Palestine shows no improvement. According to the British High Commissioner for Egypt the whole of the Jewish population of Jaffa was expelled toward the north during Passover. Their homes were sacked and they were robbed whilst in flight. Thousands are wandering hopelessly on the roads starving and at the mercy of robbers. Numbers of young Jews of military age have been deported to the north and to unknown destinations.

The bill for conscripting the citizens of allied countries who are residing here and for allowing the conscription of British subjects who are in the same way residing in allied countries is making its slow progress through the British House of Commons. It turns out now that Ireland is being left out of the bill altogether, so that there is nothing to prevent friendly aliens in England, Scotland and Wales from giving up their homes in this country and popping across to Ireland, where they will be quite free from any military interference. Perhaps this matter may be sent to the House of Lords.

A very interesting though long-drawn-out law case has just come to a conclusion in the final court of appeal of the House of Lords. Some years ago an agnostic gentleman died and left a legacy of a few thousand dollars to the Secular Society of Great Britain. This secular society was founded a good many years ago by the famous agnostic and free-thinker, Charles Bradlaugh, Member of Parliament and a fierce, clean fighter. Since he died and since his able coadjutor, Annie Besant, went over to Theosophy, the secular society has been but a small thing. The majority of the people in this country may be indifferent to religion, but the number of professing free-thinkers or agnostics, or secularists, as they sometimes call themselves, is not large. Attempts were made to dispute the legality of this legacy by the other heirs, and it was in this dispute that items of interest to all other religions apart from Christianity were noticeable. It was declared that as the secular society was organized to subvert the Christian religion it was therefore an illegal corporation, because Christianity is part of the law of England. The two lower courts of law through which the case was carried went dead against the heirs and in favor of the legality of the bequest. Then it was taken in the last resort to the House of Lords. Lord Sumner there declared that the phrase "Christianity is part of the law of England" was mere rhetoric. Lord Buckmaster pointed out that if the points were conceded the heirs' claim would mean that Unitarians, Positivists, Comptists and other similar religious and ethical bodies—and he might have added Jews—were, unless relieved by actual law, to be deemed illegal associations. The House of Lords therefore declared its conviction that the bequest should go as the legator intended.

The forty-sixth annual meeting of the Jews' Deaf and Dumb Home produced a report and accounts like so many of these societies, in that they showed a heavy deficit—in this case one $1,200 more than last year. What is to be done toward meeting this does not transpire. Anyhow, the home is well conducted, the boys and girls being taught useful trades.

A very beautiful little volume has been produced for Jewish soldiers on active service by the Chief Rabbi. It is called "A Book of Jewish Thought," and an edition of 10,000 copies has been issued. The little book brings to the Jewish soldier the undying message of his holy faith; memories of Jewish loyalty and martyrdom in the service of God and humanity throughout the ages, as well as of reflections on the higher issues of this world conflict when viewed under the aspect of Judaism.

Every one who had the luck to be at the charity matinee of that wonderful play, "The Jew," the other day was struck with the remarkable performance of S. Teitelbaum as Sheva, who will shortly be seen again in the same part at the Pavilion Theatre, in the East End of London. Teitelbaum is a Yiddish actor, but he speaks four or five languages, and at the performance of "The Jew" he was playing in English for the second time only. He relates a funny incident that happened while he was playing Sheva. "In the scene where I sat down to count my money," he said, "I accidentally used Biblical Hebrew, which I learnt as a rabbinical student. I only had to mutter the words, but I have been told that I was heard. A few minutes later, when I caught my servant Jabal listening at the keyhole, I found to my amazement that I was abusing him in Yiddish, the language in which I usually play. Mr. Landi, the producer, who was playing Jabal, was so surprised that he screamed out a word of protest in Yiddish too. I made a desperate effort to put myself straight. But English was out of the question—the author had not supplied words for this situation, so in dismissing Jabal I showered on him a jumble of my native Russian and Polish and some French which I learned when playing in Paris. It was very funny."

A movement to establish an association for Jewish actors on the lines of the Actors' Church Union has been started by the Rev. A. Mishcon, of the Brixton Synagogue, London. The scheme is the outcome of a suggestion made some weeks ago by Julia Lee, of Hove, near Brighton, in the Jewish Chronicle. The Chief Rabbi has expressed his keen interest in the movement, and the Rev. A. A. Green, of the Hampstead Synagogue, has also promised his support. There will be no membership fee, the only qualifications being that members must be employed in the entertainment world in some capacity—either before or behind the curtain—and that they must be of the Jewish faith. As the union develops it is hoped that many other ways will be found in which to help its members, but at present the work will be confined to supplying addresses of respectable Jewish apartment and boarding house keepers who have been recommended by members of the profession, and to the securing of hospitality in Jewish homes during the festivals. It must be clearly understood that at no time will the union be used as a trade union, but is solely intended to give every opportunity to those artists who wish to do so to keep in touch with their faith.

Russian Jews Greet New Government.

On the first day of Passover a deputation of Jewish representatives came to greet the Russian provisional government and to voice its appreciation at the long-denied rights extended to Russia's Jewish subjects.

The deputation consisted of Duma Deputies Friedman, Bamash and Gurewitch and members of the Jewish political bureau, A. Grusenberg, H. Kitzelneson, M. Frumkin and others.

The first one to be called upon by the deputation was Premier Lvoff, who gave them a cordial reception. Deputy Friedman was the spokesman, and in a very hearty address traced the position of the Jews in the great empire prior to the great change and the fervent manner in which this change had been hailed.

The Premier, in replying to the deputation, said:

"I am extremely thankful and appreciative of your greeting. You have with right pointed out that to the provisional government has fallen a great honor in having been enabled to remove that historical blot from the Russian people—the denial of equal rights to the smaller nationalities. Rarely before have I been overwhelmed with such inspired feelings of fervency and ardor as at this moment. Within the past few days we have had to live through some very exalted and happy moments. In thought and feeling we have ever been brothers, but they prevented us from uniting. Let us forget the dark pages of our past and unite in a brotherly fashion for strengthening the freedom of the new Russia."

The deputation also visited the executive of the Workers' and Soldiers' Council, where, among others, Advocate Grusenberg delivered a brilliant address, during which he made reference to the Beliss case, pointing out that, in spite of the government's systematic plotting, the Russian people could not but acquit him.

The deputation was answered by Leader Schilleff and the Socialist Duma Deputy Stechehaltz. The latter, among other things, pointed out that the Liberals did not previously grasp the importance of winning for the Jews their rights, and, instead of helping the Socialists in this regard, as they might have been expected to, generally hindered them.

The American Jewish Congress Elections.

The popular election for delegates to the American Jewish Congress, which was held throughout the country last Saturday evening and all day last Sunday, proved to be a remarkable event in Jewish life in America. It was for the first time in Jewish history that such an election has been organized, and the Jewish men and women in nearly 150 cities—from coast to coast, who took part in the elections, were fully conscious that they were participating in an extraordinary occurrence.

The great interest and enthusiasm displayed, the keenness of the contest among many delegates, the large vote cast, the holiday appearance which the Jewish neighborhoods assumed, the eagerness with which even the poorest of the poor paid the fee for the privilege of voting—all this marked the day as an occasion long to be remembered. The old as well as the young, providing they were of the proper age, took part in the elections. Old men and old women feeble with age were seen to walk to the polls to deposit their ballots. Many sick persons confined to their beds sent inquiries to the General Board of Elections and to the different stations as to how they may be enabled to vote.

When it is remembered that throughout Greater New York nearly 3,000 organizations held meetings between last Saturday and Sunday evening, and that throughout the country perhaps some 4,000 other organizations met for the same purpose, it will be realized what a busy and even exciting time it was for the numerous members and the active workers in the different organizations. By last Saturday night over 300,000 ballots had been distributed throughout Greater New York and the requests were still coming in. Many of the requests came very late and, of course, this made it all the harder for the persons in charge. Nevertheless, the election was, despite the enormous difficulties, carried off with comparative smoothness and without any serious mishaps. The orderliness which prevailed at the polls and at the special meetings was the object of comment.

In the greater city of New York approximately 125,000 votes were cast. The voting began at sundown Saturday night at the meeting locals of the various Jewish organizations, and continued until Sunday night at 12 p. m. On Sunday public polling places were open in every one of the eight districts into which the greater city had been divided.

The Board of Elections has entered immediately upon the difficult task of counting the ballots. A clerical force of about seventy-five people has been organized under a special committee consisting of Dr. Isaac A. Hourwich, Solomon Sufrin and Max L. Hollander, and Simeon Stamm, a public accountant, who has the supervision over the counting. The smaller districts will be counted first and the complete result will be known in a few days.

The participation in the election in the cities outside of New York was even still larger proportionately than in New York. The elections to the Jewish Congress were interesting even for non-Jews. In Hartford, Conn., the suffragists' organization contributed to the campaign expense of Mr. Jacob M. Silver, who is in favor of women's suffrage as against his opponent, who was known to be an antagonist of the movement.

Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

A meeting of the Executive Board of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations was held in Cincinnati on June 3. Mr. Lipman Levy, of Cincinnati, Ohio, after forty-four years of service as secretary of the union, tendered his resignation. Mr. Levy is over eighty years of age, and is removing from Cincinnati to make his home with his daughter in Pittsburgh, Pa. Mr. Levy's resignation was with regret accepted and he was unanimously elected an honorary member of the Executive Board.

The board then elected Rabbi George Zepin, who has been director of synagogue and school extension; as secretary of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The office of the department of synagogue and school extension is to be united with the executive office of the union and the executive office of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods. The present quarters having been outgrown, a new office has been secured at 62 Duttonhofer Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Hon. Simon Wolf was appointed chairman of the Board of Delegates, and the city of Washington, D. C., was designated as the seat of the Board of Delegates.

The following appropriations were made for the next fiscal year:

For the Board of Governors of the Hebrew Union College—	$55,000.00
For general expenses.....	15,000.00
For scholarships fund.....	70,000.00
For the Board of Managers of Synagogue and School Extension—
For work of synagogue and school extension .....	$55,000.00
For various activities of the Executive Board .....	10,000.00
	$65,000.00
For the expenses of the Board of Delegates .....	2,100.00
	$137,100.00

The report of the Commission on Synagogue Pension Fund was presented by Mr. Edward L. Heinsheimer, of Cincinnati, Ohio. This reviewed the work during the past season. The union is in receipt of $100,000 from Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, New York city, to be devoted to pensioning superannuated ministers. Mr. S. H. Wolfe, consulting actuary, New York city, has been engaged to hand in a report advising the commission as to the best course to pursue under the circumstances.

The following resolution was passed with reference to participation in the proposed American Jewish Congress: Since the first call for an American Jewish Congress was issued, there have been momentous changes in public affairs at home and abroad. Russia has become a democracy and our own country has entered upon a great and just war. Until that contest is over and settled in the interest of liberty, justice and freedom for all peoples, the holding of any congress in this country to debate or determine like questions in the interest of any particular group of people would, in our judgment, be unwise and useless.

We are therefore opposed to the holding of any Jewish congress until the war is over. For these reasons we decline the invitation to send delegates to the proposed Jewish congress and withdraw from any participation therein if it should be held.

Albert Lucas Religious Classes.

The closing exercises of the Albert Lucas religious classes were held on Sunday, June 3, in the Pike Street Synagogue. The event was made the occasion for the presentation to Miss Augusta Wolf, principal of the Rivington Street classes, of a wedding gift which consisted of a chest containing a solid silver table service, by the classes of the Albert Lucas Religious Schools, the Allas (the junior association) and the Albert Lucas Association.

A very excellent program, all of it of exceptional merit, and the composition of the children themselves, was produced, under the direction of Mr. Morris Meister, principal of the Pike Street School. Mr. Conrad J. Saphier, who had been principal of the Pike street school for so many years, was in charge of the celebration. The program was as follows:

1. Prologue, Minnie Goldman.
2. The Lord Is My Shepherd, the School.
3. Address, Mr. Meister.
4. Our School, Anna Rosenthal.
5. Just for Today, the School.
6. A Good Name, Lillian Silver.
7. Knowst Thou the Land, the School.
8. A Great Woman, Bella Fein.
9. To Miss Augusta Wolf, Esther Jaffe.
10. Epilogue, Minnie Goldman.
11. Address; Mr. A. Lucas.
12. Star-Spangled Banner, the School.
13. Closing Prayer, the School.

Ladies' Society Talmudical Institute of Harlem.

A strawberry festival and the annual meeting were held by the Ladies' Society of the Talmudical Institute of Harlem, 56 West 114th street, on Sunday evening, June 10. The president, Mrs. J. Richman, opened the meeting with a review of the last year's work.

The financial report was read, and proved satisfactory. Rabbi B. Pearl delivered an address, and refreshments were served. The committee in charge were Mesdames Richman, Pearlstein, Frank Brodskie, Kaplan, Wotel, Hopper, and Karon.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

To Carve Fish.

A silver slicer or trowel should be used for carving fish. A steel knife applied to fish often spoils the delicacy of its flavor. Great care must be taken to prevent breaking the flakes, which ought to be kept as entire as possible. Short-grained fish, such as salmon, etc., should be cut lengthwise not crosswise.

Rice With Stewed Prunes.

Wash and pick over prunes. Put in a saucepan, cover with cold water and soak two hours; then cook until soft in same water. When nearly cooked, add sugar to sweeten. Many prefer the addition of a small quantity of lemon juice. Serve with any left-over cold rice. Any dried fruit may be cooked and used in place of prunes.

Celery and Almond Salad.

One spoonful oil, 1 yolk of egg, 1 table-spoonful lemon juice, 1 table-spoonful vinegar, 1 head celery, 1/2 cupful blanched almonds, 1 crisp lettuce, few drops green color, 1/2 teaspoonful sugar, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1/2 teaspoonful mustard, red pepper to taste. Prepare celery and cut into very thin strips and plunge in ice water until wanted. Blanch and shred almonds; wash and dry lettuce leaves. Put yolk of egg into bowl, add mustard, salt, oil and other ingredients.

Indian Pudding.

Bring 1 quart of milk to a boil. To the milk add 1 cup of Indian meal and 1/2 cup flour stirred together with a little cold milk. Allow all to boil up together. Add to the mixture 1 cup molasses and 1/4 teaspoon of salt. Take from the fire and add 1 pint of cold milk. Bake in a slow oven until done.

To warm over baking powder biscuits or rolls, sprinkle slightly with water, place pan containing them in a pan of hot water and put in the oven for a few moments.

New Editions.

James Joyce's two books, "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man" and "Dubliners," which were recently issued by B. W. Huebsch, have gone into a second printing. The first edition of "A Portrait of the Artist" is already commanding a premium, collectors prizing it because of the unusual fact that the Irish writer's book appeared first in America and subsequently in London.

A new book on Mr. Huebsch's list that is now in a third printing is "A German Deserter's War Experience." Indeed the second printing of this work was called for before the first was off the press. Lalpat Rai's "Young India," the passionate statement of the aspirations of the Indian Nationalists, published last fall, appears with a new preface by the author, touching on the developments in his country since the book's appearance.

The second printing is announced of "What Nietzsche Taught," by Willard Huntington Wright, this being a compact statement of the German philosopher's life work. It has been called, incongruously but expressively, "The Busy Man's Nietzsche."

Mr. Wright's latest book, "Misinforming a Nation," the criticism of the Britannica, and Bolton Hall's "Thrift," the philosophy of saving by spending, have gone to press again to satisfy a lively demand.

A book of American dramas that has achieved deserved popularity, "Wisconsin Plays," including one-acters by Zona Gale, Thomas H. Dickinson and William Ellery Leonard, also appears in a second printing.

Time was when the housewife prepared everything for her table in her own kitchen, but, with modernization of housekeeping, this has changed, and today the delicatessen store is as essential to comfort and practical housekeeping as is the electric light, the hot water supply, the telephone and the many other things which have done so much to relieve housekeeping of the drudgery and fuss which formerly accompanied it.

And the delicatessen store has also been revolutionized, and the up-to-date establishment, such as is conducted by Mr. R. Slansky at 189 Main street, New Rochelle, does not merely consist of a stock of tinned goods, but it supplies every conceivable want of the table. Smoked fish, meats, etc., of every description, salads and table dainties of every kind are found here in profusion. They have as, their base the best of ingredients, and are put up in such an appetizing manner as to satisfy the most exacting gourmet, and they can be obtained at less cost than if prepared in your kitchen. To those who dwell in the vicinity of New Rochelle a trial will prove convincing.

With the advent of hot weather, naturally one's thoughts turn to cool and refreshing dishes and of these ice cream is unexcelled, provided it is made from pure and wholesome ingredients. Mr. D. Monti, of 2696 Broadway, has no superior as an expert ice cream maker and prior to embarking in business for himself, he was with Mares's for 27 years.

In the making of his ice cream Mr. Monti uses only the best and freshest of materials to which are imparted a delicacy and perfection of flavor which is unequalled elsewhere. Orders will be delivered to any part of the city and for convenience sake may be phoned to Riverside 7670. Mr. Monti also manufactures superior pastry and confectionery and his prices are extremely moderate when the quality and perfection of his wares are considered.

We cannot conceive what useful purpose is served by criticizing the Jewish Publication Society on the score of its corporate shortcomings. This organization exists by virtue of the laws of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; from them, and them alone, it derives its title and authority to transact business and to them it must strictly conform. If any large proportion of the membership of the Jewish Publication Society is seriously dissatisfied with the corporate functioning of their organization, they ought in all fairness seek to remedy the condition in the legitimate way which is open to them by amending the charter and by-laws of the organization and by evidencing their ability practically to do better for the membership than the present executive. In other words, criticism to be fair and worth while should be constructive in part, and not altogether destructive.

War inevitably destroys a great deal that, when it does not exist, all the more makes life worth the living. In the domain of social legislation the incidence of war prevents that steady progress from being recorded which is one of the most inspiring signs of our national life during the past couple of decades. Hence, it is very probable that so long as the present war continues the leaders in social service in this country must simply mark time. This does not mean, however, that the great principles of social justice, with which the Synagogue is so effectively and honorably identified, will be forever engulfed or even that they will be lost to sight or action for any considerable period. We do not for a moment believe that anti-child labor laws, to mention but one aim of these devoted individuals, will be repealed from the statute-books or that the present war will be deemed to excuse their enforcement. This scented danger is, therefore, not a serious or vital danger at all.

The provisions of the selective draft law whereby ministers and theological students of all recognized faiths are exempted from service will presumably meet with general approbation. The clergy is not sacred or sacrosanct, but, at the same time, the "men of religion" should be placed above the necessity of "shouldering muskets" and fighting in the ranks, the more especially since they have a very useful function to perform, even in war-time. The question how far a Jew may claim exemption from the draft as a conscientious objector to war, while very interesting, is far different. Judaism as a religion has as its mission peace, but that is not saying that Judaism as a religion opposes righteous war. Doubtless the experiences of Anglo-Jewry in the matter of compulsory service during the present war will be useful to our community; in Great Britain the Jewish ecclesiastical authorities, as they are there called, issued a ruling in the premises, and the vast number of British Jews "doing their bit" for king and country prove that the Jew is a good and loyal citizen of the state.

Since the demise of the first Lord Rothschild, his brother, Leopold de Rothschild, was, by common consent, the lay head of the Anglo-Jewish community. Now he, too, has passed away and the British community is quite the poorer for this new loss. Leopold de Rothschild was, equally with his late brother, deeply impressed with the sense of his responsibility as a communal leader. He was a staunch supporter of the United Synagogue of London, in fact, every enterprise and movement which had for its object the advancement of Jewry along religious, educational or philanthropic lines strongly appealed to his ungrudging aid. In the large life of the English Leopold de Rothschild bore his due part; "he walked with kings" and "he talked with crowds." His death, at a ripe age, removes the last of the great English Rothschild philanthropists of his generation. Fortunately for his house, and even more fortunately for Anglo-Jewry, his place will be filled, and we anticipate adequately filled, by his direct descendants who bear his honored name and fully appreciate his sturdy Jewish ideals.

THE FUTURE ERETZ YISROEL

WE are not disposed at this writing to share the optimism of some of our Zionist friends concerning the future of Palestine as an autonomously independent Jewish state either under American suzerainty or by other and proper international guarantees. Their report is to the effect that the entente allies, among which this country must be included, have agreed to look with favor upon their plans for the realization of the practical Zionist ideal. Our reason for proceeding a trifle cautiously in this matter is that the war has, as all of us must regret, not yet reached the preliminary stages of its close, and hence any attempt to forecast individual settlements are obviously premature.

There is no apparent reason operating to prevent, once the war has run its course, Palestine from undergoing a change in political allegiance. Assuming that the Turks lose control of that country, what better disposition can be made of it than to place this in Jewish hands? This question and its obvious answer, however, are not the same as stating that such a disposition of it will be made affirmatively. When the peace conference finally meet, who knows what will move them and what will have further transpired to make them act as our Zionist friends would behold them acting?

The present war was not begun or foreshadowed by any distinctly Jewish causes. Palestine played no part at all in the European melting-pot and the Zionists have had but little influence on the march of events culminating in the fateful 1st of August, 1914. As a subsidiary element of the conflict, the condition of Palestine has undoubtedly exerted some influence, but not as much, perhaps, as has the situation of Belgium, or the massacre of the Armenians.

We think we have sufficiently shown that the affairs of Jewry are a minor consideration, at present, in the minds of the leaders of the various belligerents. For the aims of the Zionists to receive practical support, then, from them there is required an altogether different situation, and one, moreover, that can only shape itself in the course of the next few months or the coming year, or, at all events, when the war will once finally and definitely have reached its inevitable close. Until then, we must simply bide our time!

The Russo-Jewish intelligenzia is reported, on credible authority, to be going back to Russia. They have resided in this country for some years now, and our Jewish life has been undoubtedly enriched by their presence here. Now we shall have to get along, as best we may, without the stimulus their presence here affords. The wonder to us is, how are we going to do this?

We are not surprised to learn that the Roumanian authorities are taking active steps to clothe the Roumanian Jews with all the rights of other Roumanians before the law, nor do we see the slightest necessity to be skeptical concerning the reported promise of the king of Roumania to a Jewish députation on this head. Roumania has, at last, awakened to the totally indefensible nature of her conduct toward her Jewish subjects of upwards of thirty years, and seems at last disposed to accord them a proper and sufficient measure of human rights. Thus the present war has justified itself; thus it is making the world safe for democracy. Nowhere throughout the Jewish world have Jews been under more grievous disabilities than in Roumania, for in that land their condition was even more rightless, if possible, than it was in Russia before Nicholas was recently forcibly ejected from the throne of his ancestors. As Russia has reversed altogether her traditional attitude toward her Jews, her example in this regard was bound to exert a profound influence on the neighboring small state in the Balkans, and we look to see the vouchsafing of justice for the Jews of Roumania completely and gloriously realized in their case with but slight delay.

We can comprehend why certain elements in American Jewry have seized upon the announced plan of the leaders of the Jewish Congress to raise $100,000 from its constituents, as spelling the divorce of that organization from democracy. Large sums of money are held by them to be peculiarly within the province of the classes, instead of the masses, and they, therefore, take serious exception to the securing of so large an amount because of the powers it confers and the dangers it is supposed to hide. Yet, the Congress requires money for its legitimate expenses, and the sum named is well within the amount thereof. If we examine the plan for raising this money closely we shall find that it is conceived upon a strictly democratic basis, although some of the constituent organizations may experience difficulty in meeting their share and may object to this feature of the work for this reason. But American Jewry having been successfully educated along democratic lines by the Congress, there is no reason why this education should not embrace all departments of communal democracy, and one of the most important of these is that which relates to the raising of the Jewish people's money and the spending of it by the fiat of this people.

SPY OR PIONEER?

הם כלב אח העם אל משה ויאמר עלה נעלה וירשנו אתה לא כיוול נוכל לה: והאנשים אשר עלו עמו אמרו לא נוכל לעלות אל העם כי חזק הוא ממנו:

"And Caleb stilled the people before Moses and said, Let us go up at once and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it. But the men that went up with him said, We are not able to go up against the people; for they are stronger than we." (Num. xiii, 30-31.)

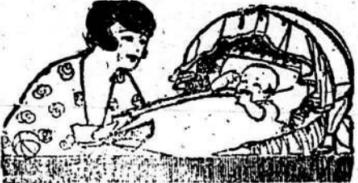

HERE is an essential difference between the Spy and the Pioneer. Not in procedure, perhaps, but in principle; not in outward manner, but in inward manhood. The difference is a spiritual one. The pioneer may have to perform the same kind of work, and employ the same methods, as the spy: both are often under the same military necessity of espionage which they must perform. Nor does the difference lie in the resulting mood after the unsavory task of spying, but in the spirit they bring to bear upon their work. It is not that Caleb and Joshua emerged from the scouting expedition with a more hopeful view of the prospective conquest of Palestine, while the rest of the party returned craven and discouraged; it is that they had gone to this expedition with a different spirit. "But my servant Caleb, because he had another spirit with him," Scripture plainly declares, "him will I bring into the land whereinto he went." That is to say, the result of any human experience often depends not so much upon the actual contents of that experience as upon the manner of spirit which was ours before we entered upon our venture. The experience, or venture, acts but as a stimulus, arousing in us, for good or ill, the hidden potentialities of our nature. Caleb, who "had another spirit with him," matured into a hero by the Palestinian venture, while the rest did but bring their own cowardice back in a much aggravated form.

What, then, is this "other spirit" of which the Bible speaks so exaltingly? It is the pioneer-spirit. And what is the spirit that informed the rest? It is the spy-spirit. And wherein exactly do these two kinds of spirit, these two mental attitudes, differ? Our text shows that: Fundamentally, the spy's approach to the territory that is to be conquered is the resolve to take advantage of its weaknesses. The pioneer's approach, on the contrary, is the determination to overcome its strength. The former, appeals naturally to cowardice, the latter is a call to courage. It is the white-feathered specimen of mankind that constantly seeks for some hidden loophole where through, at the least risk to himself, he may sneak his way to some profitable goal. But it is the real man, crowned with the dignity of manhood, who would openly face difficulties and attempt to overcome obstacles, matching his own strength with the might of opposing circumstances. The infamous scouting party went to Palestine with the spy-spirit in search of this loophole which might prove a sop to their essential weakness: therefore, when they found strength in the place of impotence, giants in the place of pigmies, the rugged road in the place of the primrose path, they declared themselves unequal to the undertaking: "We are not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we!" And right they were; because they were only looking for weak spots. Caleb and Joshua, however, went to Palestine with the pioneer-spirit, prepared to meet any emergency, to shoulder any responsibility, to surmount any obstacle. They would overcome the land and the people, no matter how strong these were. They would seek out not the easiest path but the hardest way: "for we are well able to overcome it." The scouts were mean-souled spies, while Caleb and Joshua were heroic and courageous pioneers.

From this exposition, advisedly minute, it may be gathered that the matter is of a wider sweep than appears at the first blush. We are dealing here not merely with the conquest of Palestine, but much rather with Life's conquests. Who hath not his Promised Land? But how would he conquer it? Now, there are those who would conquer by evasion. But there are others who would conquer only by invasion. The former are the spies of life, the latter are Life's bold pioneers. To the former class belong all those—and they are the majority—who are constantly on the lookout for some weak spot, some loophole, whereby to gain an unfair advantage, an unearned prize. They are the persons whose line of conduct is stretched along the line of least resistance; they are the knights of the short-cut; they are the valiant hunters of moral bargains. They are unwilling to pay the full price of courageous living. But to the latter class belong those—and they are the minority—whose objective is some point of strength, some fortress to lay siege to; some enemy to defeat; some tremendous impediment to be got out of their conquering way. These are men and women who value strain above gain; effort above comfort; courage above cunning. They are the real conquerors of the earth, to whom all that is great in life is pre-eminently due.

If you sneak your way through life, you may to the eyes of the world be successful and prosperous—until found out. But God will find you out long ere men will. For nothing worthwhile has yet been accomplished that way. Truth, Beauty, Goodness; Science, Art, Religion—all these have their spies and pioneers, respectively, even as strategy, statecraft and commerce; but real science, real art, and real faith, owe their victories to the daring spirit of the pioneer, and not to the mean, underhanded methods of the spy. All history testifies to this. Humanity knows that there are yet many Promised Lands to conquer, many unknown territories to open; but these future conquests call for Calebs and Joshuachs. Which, then, will you be—Evader or Invader: Spy or Pioneer?

reation he acts as trustee of the Jewish Agricultural Experiment Station, and he lends his name to the Advisory Board of those individuals who call themselves the Federation of Oriental Jews of America.

May we not see, perhaps, in this astonishing concentration some of the responsibility for the comparative failure of so many of the organizations entrusted to Dr. Adler? The Dropsie College is only an empty shell.

"The dead hand?" Yes, it exists. The congress will provide the long overdue Magna Charta of the people which will once and for all wrest the control of such organizations and of the whole Jewish community from the mortmain or dead hand of men like Dr. Cyrus Adler, and place it where it belongs—in the living hands of the Jewish people.

BEN I. COHEN, Central avenue, Far Rockaway.

Federation of Oriental Jews Against a Congress.

For some time I have been wanting to lay before the public certain facts with reference to the decision of the Federation of Oriental Jews of America not to participate in the deliberations or to take part in any of the preliminary activities of the American Jewish Congress movement.

The Federation of the Oriental Jews agrees with unrestricted unanimity to the following principles:

- 1. That the American Jewish Congress at the present state of international affairs is not only condemned to futility from its birth, but may prove a source of danger by meddling in affairs which are altogether beyond its scope under present conditions, and which form the subject-matter of the serious deliberations of our government.
2. That the problems originally surrounding the Jewish issue which existed at the time when the Congress was first proposed no longer, happily, exist, since Russia has liberated its Jewish population.
3. That the status of the Jews in Roumania is not in any way jeopardized at the present time, and will not be before the issue of the present conflict.
4. That the only problem which may legitimately be taken up at this time is a political and national problem, one of the solutions of which is Zionism.

only agency which can be trusted to deal justly with the issue with some hope of success.

The Turkish Jews can neither uphold the idea of a Jewish Congress at this time nor attend its deliberations, because the Turkish Jews in Turkey have no quarrel with their government and there exists no Turkish Jewish problem outside of the coffee house.

However, the Turkish Jews in America do not isolate themselves nor are they indifferent to the historic events now shaping themselves and which ultimately should effect for the better condition of the Jews all over the world.

New York Young Judaea Convention.

The Young Judaea clubs of New York city are busily preparing for their annual convention, which will be held next Saturday evening and Sunday.

The convention will open Saturday evening, June 16, with a literary and musical evening at the Washington Irving High School, 40 Irving Place, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets.

At the morning session, which will be held at the University Settlement, 184 Eldridge street, the district supervisors will offer their reports. The afternoon session will take place at 2.30 at the University Settlement, when the Credentials Committee together with the Resolutions Committee, will report.

The evening session, held at the same place, will be devoted mainly to the social reunion of the delegates and friends.

The Jews of Ukraine Demand Palestine and National Rights.

At a Jewish conference in Kiev, composed of 360 delegates, representing two million Jews of the eight governments of the Ukraine, 324 delegates voted to demand of the peace conference an autonomous Jewish center in Palestine and the granting of national and civil rights to the Jews of all countries, especially Roumania.

In the cablegram announcing this conference received by the Provisional Zionist Committee it was stated that this action was displeasing to the thirty-six delegates representing the bund, who withdrew from the conference demonstratively.

Distinguished Jews of America

JEWES WHO MADE THEIR MARK IN COMMERCE,
PROFESSION, PHILANTHROPY, SCIENCE, POLITICS, ETC.

Some individuals think that most successful men owe their good fortune to favorable circumstances. Others, on the other hand, feel that men of genius have been great enough to mould successful careers for themselves in spite of unfavorable environment and humble origin. Mr. Benjamin S. Moss, one of the foremost younger showmen of today, typifies the aggressive individual of the latter class. By sheer force of character and tenacity of purpose, Mr. Moss has succeeded in making his way from poverty to fortune and fame. Being the oldest of a family of six, the burden of support rested upon him even in his early boyhood and it was undoubtedly the exigency of the moment that brought out the finer qualities within him. At the age of ten he was already selling papers, and with his earnings helped support his mother and other members of his family. Mr. Moss still remembers of the blizzard of '88 when, a lad of eleven, he ventured downtown and brought back his newspapers, happy at the thought that the day afforded a lucky harvest—the papers sold at a quarter apiece. But those days are only little incidents in a life of great commercial endeavor. As Mr. Moss grew older he established himself in the cloth-sponging business, which he still conducts, but his real success came when he ventured into theatricals. During the last four years Mr. Moss has built and conducted some of the finest vaudeville and motion picture houses in the city and in addition to building up a fortune has made an enviable reputation for himself. His life story is another example of the opportunities that this country affords to boys and young men who are earnest and willing to apply their energies into proper channels.

BENJAMIN S. MOSS

Benjamin S. Moss was born August 20, 1875, in a little town near Vienna, Austria. He is the son of Albert and Rose Moss, who came to America in the year 1877, when Benjamin was not quite two years old. He was given a grammar school education, having been a pupil at P. S. 70 on East Seventy-fifth Street. However, before he had completed his third grade, he was compelled to leave school and help in the support of the family. His first position was that of messenger boy. He remained at this for one year and then associated himself with a wholesale grocer, where, at the age of sixteen, he was selling on the road. His folks disliked his being on the road and to satisfy them he took a position in the city with a wholesale clothing concern. He gradually worked his way through the various departments. He realized that the sponging department required little financial investment, and as he had mastered that end of the industry, he formed a partnership with Mr. William Fox. Their business experiences at first were a series of trials and difficulties, but eventually they managed to establish themselves permanently and business was fairly prosperous. After being in business about six years Mr. Fox became interested in penny slot machine enterprises, and he sold out his interest in the sponging concern to Mr. Moss. Little by little Mr. Fox drifted into the theatrical field and persuaded Mr. Moss to make similar investments. At first Mr. Moss made his investments together with Mr. Fox, but later branched out for himself. Mr. Moss' career has been a most active and successful one. Within a short time he had erected some of the finest moving picture houses in the city. His first venture was the Washington Theatre, located in the Washington Heights section. Next he erected the 86th Street Theatre, the Hamilton at 146th Street, and the Jefferson on East 14th Street. Later he acquired the Regent, 7th Avenue and 116th Street, the Prospect on Westchester Avenue, and the Flatbush at Flatbush and Church Avenues, Brooklyn. Mr. Moss' energy at present is directed toward the completion of his new million dollar theatre at 181st Street and Broadway, where he will show high class vaudeville and feature photoplays.

Despite his phenomenal success Mr. Moss makes no pretenses. One is struck by the matter-of-fact way he looks upon his achievement. His manner and bearing is plain and simple. No frocks or frills about him; no affected airs. He is what he is and assumes nothing else. He looks down upon no one and treats everyone as his equal. He is a keen, intelligent, sober-minded man. During the past years Mr. Moss has done much for the improvement of the poor. Not only through personal gifts but through offering the use of his playhouses he has been instrumental in raising funds for various charitable organizations throughout the city. He has made liberal donations to various hospitals and has done everything within his power to help the poor and needy. In addition to being honorary director of the United Krakauer Aid Society, Mr. Moss is also secretary of the Vaudeville Managers' Association and president of the Amalgamated Vaudeville Agency. On November 12, 1901, Mr. Moss was married to Miss Estelle Dreyfus and they are the parents of two children, Beatrice and Charles. Hard work, loyalty and honesty are the three qualities that Mr. Moss thinks are essential for success in the business world.

The career of Bernard Brindze, his rise to a position of affluence and influence in the Jewish community and in the commercial world proves that success is due not merely to a lucky turn of events in one's life, but to a constant steady grind and to an unquenchable desire to get ahead. At the age of eleven Mr. Brindze landed on these shores alone with practically no hope of assistance from any one, but his persistent, "never-give-up" spirit carried him through many difficulties and made it possible for him to hold out where other men of less courage would have failed. Today Mr. Brindze is recognized as the foremost painting contractor in the city and both the city and private corporations turn to him when they have large contracts on hand. Some of the contracts completed by Mr. Brindze include the Municipal Building, United States Express Building, Hudson Terminal Building, Hewitt-Bryce Building and others.

BERNARD BRINDZE

Bernard Brindze was born April 15, 1877, in Krakow. His father, Solomon, died when Bernard was an infant, and from his early boyhood the lad was filled with the desire to make his own fortune. He attended grammar school and in spite of the protestations of his mother, who wanted him to enter college, he had left for America, trailing after some friends who were coming to this country. At first he found employment as stripper in a cigar factory where he received three bright silver dollars as his first week's salary. Two weeks later his envelope contained five dollars. He was surprised, and suspected that some error had been made. After inquiry this proved to be the case, but he was rewarded for his honesty, his salary continued at five dollars thereafter. Indoor work did not agree with him and he apprenticed himself to a painting contractor. He remained with one firm more than six years, and mastered every detail of the business. At the age of eighteen he opened a shop of his own, but eventually lost all that he had invested. This did not discourage him. He started over again canvassing for trade from house to house until he finally built up the wonderful reputation that the firm Bernard Brindze now enjoys.

But it is not only in business that Mr. Brindze has shown remarkable activity; he is also a prominent figure in the charitable work of the Jewish community. He has been one of the most active directors of the United Krakauer Aid Society and he contributes to almost every worthy charitable institution in the city. He is a member of the Temple Israel of Harlem and a contributor to the Denver Consumptive Home, Mt. Sinai Hospital, Montifore Home, United Hebrew Charities, Home for Hebrew Infirm and others. Mr. Brindze is also a member of Empire City Lodge F. & A. M., a Shriner and an Elk.

On December 18, 1892, Mr. Brindze was married to Miss Anna Kóhender and they are the parents of four daughters. Harriet and Frances are graduates of private colleges, and spend much of their time in social work on the East Side. Ruth, who is only thirteen, attends Wadleigh H. S. and Dorothy Naomi is at school.

"Never give up, never be discouraged by financial difficulties and face the music like a man" is Mr. Brindze's advice to young men. But above all he advises young men to be straight and always make their promises good.

Among the Jews in America there are many who display genius in business and industry. Yet had they remained in their native towns and hamlets they would probably have been unheard of, and would have ended their lives in poverty. But this country opened a world of opportunities to them and afforded ample means for developing their inborn powers.

LEON JOFFESS

Among these may be included the person of Mr. Leon Joffess. He is in this country only eleven years, having arrived in 1905 from Stora Scla, Province of Wolinow, Russia, where he was born the 15th of April, 1885. In the few years that Mr. Joffess has been in this country he has accomplished much. Today he is one of the leaders of the automobile tire industry and there is no doubt that there is a great future open before him. Mr. Joffess operates a large plant at 252 West 55th Street and a similar one in Cleveland, Ohio.

In his native town Mr. Joffess was a Yeshivah Bocher and his father hoped to prepare him for a rabbinical career. However, from his early boyhood Mr. Joffess showed unusual business abilities and he gradually drifted away from his studies. When he realized that his opportunities in his little home town were limited, he came to America. His first job was with a cousin in a delicatessen store and for some time later he was a dishwasher in a Broadway restaurant, but he saved his money and bided his time until the proper moment arrived. With limited capital he started in the coal business and later drifted into the rubber business. He bought and sold old rubber tires and was practically the first man to remodel old automobile tires. His business grew steadily and he is one of the leading men in this industry.

Although Mr. Joffess manifests unusual business talent, he does not devote all his time to business, for he spends many hours in communal activities. In his native country Mr. Joffess was a Zionist and later became a Territorialist and was also an active participant in the Revolutionary movement in Russia. Since Mr. Joffess has established himself in this city, he has taken active part in many worthy causes. He is a member of many charitable organizations and since the war has given almost ten per cent. of his earnings toward the war relief fund.

Mr. Joffess is a man of refinement. He has a big heart and is touched by the sufferings of others. He is always ready to give a helping hand when necessary. All who come in contact with him in business or in a social way love him.

In 1909 Mr. Joffess was married to Miss Yetta Dolka and they are the happy parents of four children, Helen, Harry, Rose and Jacob. When asked to give his opinion on the subject of success, Mr. Joffess answered "Ambition and will power are two qualities that a person must possess in order to carry out his undertakings, for without these two, nothing can be accomplished."

Program of the Baltimore Zionist Convention.

The twentieth annual convention of the Federation of American Zionists and the conventions of subsidiary organizations will be held in Baltimore, Md., from June 24 to 28, 1917. The program will be as follows:

Saturday morning, June 23.—Special religious services, details to be announced.

Sunday morning, June 24.—Registration of delegates; gatherings of State delegations.

Sunday afternoon, June 24.—Opening session of the Federation of American Zionists at the Academy of Music, Howard street, near Franklin.

Sunday evening, June 24.—Mass meetings at the Academy of Music and other adjacent theatres. Special provision is being made for delegates.

Monday morning and afternoon, June 25.—Sessions of federation, Hadassah and other organizations.

Monday afternoon, 5 p. m.—Automobile trip through the city. Details to be announced.

Monday evening, June 25.—Reception to visiting delegates at Hotel Belvedere, Charles and Chase streets. Delegates will be furnished with special tickets.

Tuesday evening, June 26.—Hebrew evening. Young Judaea demonstration. Details to be announced.

Wednesday and Thursday, June 27-28.—Business sessions of the convention.

The sessions of the convention will be held in the Academy of Music, Howard street, near Franklin, within easy reach by trolley from all the hotels and business sections of the city. The auditorium in which most of the sessions will be held seats 1,500; is large and comfortable, and has a special cooling system. In addition to this there is one other hall in the same building which will be used for meetings.

The convention headquarters will be the old Hopkins Club, Howard street, corner Monument, almost directly opposite the Academy of Music. These headquarters will open June 22 and will remain open throughout the convention week.

Special reception committees will be at all railroad stations and steamer landings on Friday, June 22, and on Sunday morning, June 24, to meet delegates and to give information.

Arrangements are being made to provide a strictly Kosher meal daily at Kernan's Hotel, just around the corner from the meeting place. All matters relating to Kashruth will be under the supervision of Rabbi S. Shaffer.

The Convention Committee headquarters, at 406-408 Equitable Building, Baltimore, Md., will be open daily, and will remain open until June 22. All questions relating to the convention, hotel accommodations, etc., should be addressed to this office.

Temple Pen-El Activities.

The Sisterhood closed its season's work last Tuesday evening with a strawberry festival. About 300 were present. There was an entertainment and refreshments. This has been one of the most active and most successful years in the history of the Sisterhood. Many new members have been added and a great deal of work accomplished. The finances of the Sisterhood are in excellent shape. Mrs. Rose Josephs is president; Mrs. Brotman, secretary; Mrs. S. Grant, treasurer, and Mesdames Martin Barkin and Frankel Friedman, directresses.

The Women's War Relief Society of the temple is busily at work preparing comfort bags for soldiers and sailors. A number of sewing machines have been installed in the workroom and materials are being contributed in large volume. The rooms are open every Monday and Wednesday afternoons between 2 and 5 o'clock. Mrs. S. Martin is chairman; Mrs. Max Frnakel, treasurer, and Miss Lydia Barkin, secretary.

The Religious School of the temple held its closing exercises last Sunday morning. Rabbi Eiseman addressed the children, also Mr. Martin, the chairman of the school board. Many prizes, medals and certificates of merit were distributed.

A Young Men's Committee to Assist Federation of Philanthropes.

The Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City has received new impetus through the addition of the Young Men's Committee to its group of workers.

An enthusiastic meeting was held at the Hotel Astor on the evening of Thursday, June 7. It was largely attended by representative young men, all of whom are interested in Jewish philanthropic work in the city. They all pledged themselves to work without stint for the furtherance of the federation and the increasing of its support from the general public.

The following officers for temporary organization were elected: Mr. Sam A. Lewisohn, chairman; Aaron H. Singer, vice-chairman; Arthur J. Goldsmith, treasurer, and Albert Arnstein, secretary. The Executive Committee consists of the four executive officers and the following: Alexander Appel, Edward S. Greenbaum, Lois C. Levison, Lawrence H. Marks, Bernard E. Pollak, Isaac N. Rothschild, Nat Samuely, Samuel Strauss, Byron Van Raalte, S. J. Weinberg and Myron E. Whitehead.

The meeting was addressed by Mr. Felix M. Warburg, president of the federation, who welcomed the young men into the ranks of the workers for federation and assured them that the most encouraging sign of complete success that had yet been afforded to those who had launched the federation was the co-operation shown by the organization of the Young Men's Committee.

Addresses were also delivered by I. Edwin Goldwasser, executive director; Benjamin Perlstein, business manager; Julius Tannen, of Chicago, and Dudley D. Sicher, who described how the young men in his establishment had banded themselves into what they called the Sicher group, for the purpose of increasing the number of subscribers to the federation. The permanent organization of the Young Men's Committee will be effected in the fall of the year.

Over 2,000 Attend Revival Meeting of the Institutional Synagogue.

Every seat of the Regent Theatre (116th street and Seventh avenue) was taken last Sunday morning when the Institutional Synagogue held its second religious revival meeting. Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein delivered a most stirring address. The Jewish Protective Band of Hawthorne, N. Y., and Miss Alice Schuman, furnished the music. Congressman Isaac Siegel, president of the Institutional Synagogue, presided.

Over 200 new members were recruited to the Cause as a result of this meeting. A most touching scene was witnessed after the meeting when fathers and mothers, with tears in their eyes, came up to thank Rabbi Goldstein. The most encouraging feature of the morning's revival was the fact that a throng of both young men and young women came up to the rabbi to tell him of their return to traditional Judaism, and of their joining this "synagogue movement."

Young Judaea Convention.

The ninth annual convention of Young Judaea will be held at Asbury Park, N. J., opening Saturday evening, June 30, and continuing until Wednesday, July 4. Headquarters will be at Bradley's Auditorium. Services will be held on Saturday morning, a mass meeting and reception on Saturday evening, a banquet Sunday evening, a Hebrew evening on Monday, and a leaders conference on Tuesday evening. Business sessions will be conducted on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and afternoons. July 4 will be devoted to a patriotic gathering and sightseeing.

The Women's Proclamation Society.

The Women's Proclamation Society, the national women's organization for Jewish war relief, has begun its summer campaign in behalf of the ten million dollar fund by distributing a large number of its table banks among the Jewish homes of the city.

This organization, which has been in existence as the national committee for about a year, has spread throughout the country, and there are well organized branches in many of the larger cities of the United States as well as in small communities.

Atlantic City Aids War Sufferers.
 Atlantic City (N. J.) Branch of the American Jewish Relief Committee held a mass meeting of its residents on Sunday evening, June 10, 1917, at the roof garden of The Breakers for the purpose of raising additional funds for Jewish war sufferers.

Mr. Samuel Grabfelder presided and the principal speaker was Isidore Hershfield, who deeply moved those present by his vivid and touching description of conditions in Poland, Lithuania, Courland and Galicia, through which the speaker had extensively traveled last year in the course of his relief mission. The appeal which followed Mr. Hershfield's address realized $8,800, and additional subscriptions are expected from those who could not attend.

Mayor Baehrach, of Atlantic City; Rabbi Fisher and Joseph P. Perskie also spoke. Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, of Chicago, now summering at Atlantic City, added his eloquence in a masterly appeal. Mrs. Joel Hillman is the chairman of the local committee.

Mr. Hershfield has devoted almost every Sunday to addressing meetings in various parts of the country and has already raised over $100,000 through his eyewitness accounts of Jewish war suffering.

The following, among other cities, have had the benefit of Mr. Hershfield's volunteer services: Utica, Wilkes-Barre, Springfield, New Haven, Chelsea, Washington, Brockton, New Britain, Bethlehem and Jersey City.

Y. M. H. A. Choral Society.

The Y. M. H. A. Choral Society, under the direction of Prof. Leon M. Kramer, gave a very fine concert on Sunday evening, June 10. The program consisted of numbers by the society and solos by several of the members. The most striking selection by the society was "The Day of God" and an English adaptation of "Kol Nidre." Solos were rendered by Mr. A. Drucher, Mr. H. Dwarlin, Miss F. Friedman, Mr. William Glasser, Mr. Chas. Kelserman, Miss Sybil Rochmes and Miss E. Schattner.

Poale-Zion Defeats Bund.

The Poale-Zion, the Socialist wing of the Zionist movement, has gained political ascendancy over the Jewish "Bund" (the Jewish socialist organization without any specific Jewish interest), defeating the latter at the municipal elections which recently took place in Poland. In Lodz the Poale Zionists elected two council members, the Bund one; in Bendzin, Poale Zion, three; Bund, one; in Siedlice, the Poale Zionists joined with the "bourgeoisie" to elect a Zionist for the only seat in the council to which the Jews are entitled. The Bund elected the single Jewish councilman in Wlotzlavak.

The Jewish population of Bendzin is 70 per cent. of the total. The Poles demanded a majority of the seats in the council as the price for their participation in the municipal election. The Jews offered to compromise on a basis of equal division. The Poles rejected this offer, abstained from the election, and the 24 council seats are all filled by Jews.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

The Hershfelds Celebrate. The silver wedding of a most energetic Jewish communal worker took place June 7, the celebrants being Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Hershfeld, who only received a very small number of their own relatives at their home, 1067 East Fourteenth street, Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Hershfeld, whose names have been identified with many of the largest and most notable public charities for a number of years, made the occasion of their silver wedding an opportunity for bringing a ray of sunshine into the lives of hundreds of Polish refugees who are now sheltered in the reception house of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, 229 East Broadway. Every one of the refugees was given an exceptionally fine dinner, and they were unanimous in their thanks and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Hershfeld.

Mr. Hershfeld has been closely identified with the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society for a number of years, and is one of its trustees. Only recently he returned from Europe, where he made a close study of conditions among the Jews of Poland, Galicia, Lithuania and was the means of re-establishing communication between the families there and their relatives in America, which had been stopped for nearly two years. He is identified with almost all Jewish public charities and has been chosen delegate of the Union of Orthodox Congregations to the Jewish Congress.

Hebrew Educational Society. The Glory of Zion gave a performance of "The Dream of Bath Zion" at the Hebrew Educational Society on Saturday and Sunday evenings, June 9 and 10, respectively. There were also musical and literary exercises.

The concluding formal musical event of the season of the Hebrew Educational Society was a pupils' recital on Saturday evening, June 2. The participants were pupils of Mr. Louis Schwaber, piano teacher, and Miss Martha G. Kaiser, instructor in singing.

William Belfert was the winner of the final senior declamation contest on Sunday evening, June 3, with honorable mention of Hilton Mirkinson. There were seven participants.

The Mothers' Club will give a dramatic entertainment on Saturday evening, June 23. It will include a Yiddish play, "The Marriage Broker."

The senior clubs will have a rally on Sunday evening, June 24, the intermediates on Tuesday evening, June 26, and the juniors on Wednesday evening, June 27.

Federation of Jewish Charities. At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, held at the Unity Club of Brooklyn, Messrs. Samuel Rottenberg, Joseph Baroness and John Sklar were unanimously elected to fill vacancies on the board caused by the resignation of Samuel Rottenberg, Isaac Hamburger and Bertram N. Manne, respectively.

Zetzi Zion Society of Borough Park. The Zetzi Zion Society is to be congratulated that it now has under its supervision six branches of Young Judea, all under the leadership of Zetzi Zion members. Much praise for this activity is due to Mr. Adolph Brinberg, whose energetic work in the interests of Young Judea has resulted in a splendid Jewish training for the boys and girls of this district.

The leader of the Zetzi Zion, Dr. Saul Cohen, was pleasantly surprised last week by the presentation to him of a certificate for five trees planted in his name in the Hertzl Wald, in Palestine, by the Zetzi Zion, as a token of appreciation for his good work in the society.

If present plans develop in the right direction the Zetzi Zion will soon be housed in its own home. No stronger impulse to Zionism in this district can be given than the opening of a center for all Zionist activities, and such a central building is now being negotiated for. The substantial progress so far made indicates that the "Zion Home" plans will materialize solidly within the next month.

By a unanimous vote Chavers Ch. Zinner and Cohen have been elected delegates to the Zionist convention.

Jews Appointed to Important Positions in the United States Department of War.

Washington, D. C.—The appointment of Walter Lippman, of New York, and Professor Felix Frankfurter, of the Law Department of Harvard University, to the posts of "confidential assistants and advisors" to Secretary of War Baker is deserving of more attention than this matter has been receiving in the Jewish press generally, particularly in view of the importance of the War Department in the government in the present crisis. A little thought will reveal to one the significance of such appointments.

To have been selected for such important offices speaks in the highest terms for these two Jews, both of whom are still young.

Lippman is about twenty-eight years of age and the Harvard professor is not much older. Yet, in their comparatively short lives of activity, they have made their impression on their time, achieving reputations in their respective fields.

Lippman, who is a graduate of an American university, is the son of a clothing manufacturer. In his college days he manifested a deep and keen interest in the political sciences, and before long he was making his way well into the front ranks of the writers on political subjects in this country. Even in his radicalism Lippman was true to type.

He became an active member of the Socialist party, serving as private secretary to Mr. Lunn when he was elected the first Socialist Mayor of Schenectady, N. Y., and, by the way, the first Socialist Mayor in the history of the State.

Shortly after the New Republic was founded Lippman became attached to the staff of this influential publication, and his contributions to it soon began to win a wide circle of readers. There is no doubt that Lippman was in a very large degree responsible for the prestige won by the New Republic, which seemed to be making its impression even upon the government in Washington.

Professor Frankfurter, while not so well known in the world of publicists, has won a place of the highest standing in the legal circles in the United States. As a teacher of law he is regarded everywhere as a man of unusual talent, and it is generally conceded that, pronounced as his success has thus far been, he will forge ahead to posts of even greater responsibility.

Professor Frankfurter's name is better known, perhaps, than Lippman's to the Jewish people, since he has been more active than Lippman in Jewish affairs. It was scarcely known that Lippman is a Jew. Frankfurter, however, has addressed Jewish gatherings and has written and lectured on Jewish questions.

Not only does Frankfurter stand in the front rank as a theorist in jurisprudence, but he is also a practitioner of no mean ability. When Justice Brandeis was elevated to the Supreme Court of the United States Professor Frankfurter assumed control of many of the important litigations which Brandeis had been handling.

About a year ago Harvard University offered Frankfurter a professorship in the Law school of the university. It is recognized generally that the Administration showed the best judgment in appointing Lippman and Frankfurter to these important positions, and that it would be difficult to find two others who could discharge the onerous responsibilities of the posts with greater efficiency.

A Jewish Mayor. There has not been much noise over the pleasing fact that St. Louis, Mo., for the last weeks has had and still has a Jewish (acting) Mayor, a city of nearly a million population. And Mr. Louis Aboe, the Mayor, is just as modest about it as are we and nearly a million more, because true excellence and distinction need no hue and cry.

Italians for a Jewish State. A member of the Italian mission now in this country in the course of a recent interview said: "It is very difficult for Italians to realize that there is a Jewish problem. Jews in Italy enjoy the best reputation, hold some of the most important positions and have never been required since the constitution of the kingdom to declare their faith in the census blanks."

British Army Closing in on Jerusalem.

The military expert of the New York Evening Post deduces from the announcement that the Turks have decided, at the instance of their German allies, to hold Jerusalem against British attacks, that the Gaza-Beersheba line of defense in the extreme south of Palestine has been abandoned.

THE TEPHILLIN.

By RABBI LEON HARRISON, St. Louis, Mo.

And it shall be as a sign upon thy hand and as frontlets between thine eyes...

This verse occurs again and again in the Scriptures. Its meaning is perfectly evident. The thought of the law and of its performance was to be attached as a sign upon the hand.

But language always has a tendency to petrify; and the fluid poetry of one age becomes the rigid custom and ceremonial of another.

They were a symbol of consecrated thought, of religious emotion. They have passed out of our lives. I am not pleading that they should have been retained.

You may claim that we have outgrown such symbols, all symbols. But have we? Is it not possible that we have not grown up to them?

I am not pleading for Tephillin. I have no special religious emblem in mind. But I am pleading for the poetry of religion, for its substance as opposed to its elusive spirit.

These symbols are Jewish, and symbolism is still reasonable and necessary. And it also bespeaks its individuality as nothing else can.

The Tephillin, properly understood, contain a summary of Judaism, and I make bold to say a summary of all simple, true and noble religion.

And there, too, we are told what we are to do. To know God and to love God is a barren thing unless we obey God.

It is much for an ancient symbol, the first perhaps of all to be discarded by the liberals, to teach us these sublime lessons. They are not only taught to the mind; they were impressed upon the heart.

"I will betroth thee unto Me forever. Yea, I will betroth thee unto Me in righteousness and in justice, in loving kindness and in mercy. I will betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness, and thou shalt know the Lord."

World's Need of Food Told at Farm School.

Amidst a throng of some 2,000 people, coming from practically every part of the country, the twentieth annual spring exercises of the National Farm School were held in an outdoor amphitheatre in the center of the vast grounds of the institution on Sunday, June 3.

The program included addresses by Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, expert on nutrition in the Department of Agriculture at Washington; Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the apostle of forest conservation; Mr. Edwin Markham, one of the foremost of American writers and lecturers and author of "The Man with the Hoe" and other poems.

After an invocation by Rev. Montague N. A. Cohen, of Hazleton, Pa., Dr. Krauskopf, in an introductory address, opened the program, reviewing the remarkable growth of the institution during the last twenty years and the opposition that had to be overcome before the school received recognition.

Mr. Untermyer in his address struck a note of warning against the wastefulness of the American people, and asserted that the moral discipline which would be afforded by the war would be of value to Americans beyond all estimate.

"As I read the interesting history of this school and note its accomplishments, the things that impress me most are the far-reaching wisdom of its founders and the rich crops of achievement that may be harvested as the results of the steadfast and untiring devotion of a single human being."

"Indeed of us it might be said, as of old in Isaiah, 'Ye shall go out with joy and be led forth with peace and the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you with singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.'

"And more fitting is the memorial tree than the marble shaft or granite obelisk; for the tree has ever been the symbol of persistence of life. Indeed, we are told that in the center of Eden was the Tree of Life.

"Bare, ruined choirs, where late the sweet birds sang, Are again filled with bright winds and wings and warblings of happy song."

"Thus the tree is an eternal denial of death and an eternal avowment of immortality, a proclamation that life is at the heart of the universe. So a tree is most fitting as a memorial of our living friends yet walking under these skies and of our departed friends who are walking under the invisible yet immortal skies, where noble spirits renew their faded youth."

Mr. Pinchot stated that, in its final analysis, the success of the war will depend entirely upon the farmers.

Another thing is that we have not been told just how badly food is needed in Europe. It may be just as well that some of the details are being withheld, but we must realize, and realize quickly, that the success of the war depends almost entirely upon the United States.

Dr. Taylor, in a ringing message, impressed the audience with the grim fact that everywhere in the world there is a shortage of cereals. That is due to the fact that millions of men have been withdrawn from agricultural pursuits. It is up to America to relieve this situation, and she can do so only in three ways:

"There is not going to be sufficient wheat," continued Dr. Taylor, "to give white bread as it is now demanded. Corn and rye are just as good food, except that they have not yet received the stamp of Anglo-Saxon civilization. In every family will agree to cut down the consumption of white bread on certain days in each week millions of bushels of wheat can be saved."

CHILDREN'S PAGE

ISHMAEL.

Dear Children:

After Abimelech apologized to Abraham and Sarah and gave them many presents and after Abraham prayed to the Lord for the healing of Abimelech, his wife and his maid servants so that they could bear children, the Lord caused Sarah to give birth to a son, "because," says Rashi, "one who prays for his neighbor and is himself in need of the favor he prays for, obtains the favor of the Lord for himself first." And Sarah conceived and bore unto Abraham a son in his old age, at the appointed time of which the Lord had spoken to him. When the angel had brought the tidings the year before he made a mark upon the wall and said to Abraham, when the sun will shine upon this mark in the year to come Sarah will give birth—"lezkunor" in his old age, maybe interpreted "zivekunin," "the child was the exact image of the father." And Abraham called the name of his son that was born unto him, whom Sarah bore him, "Itzhak" (Isaac). Abraham circumcised his new-born son at eight days old, as the Eternal had commanded him. And Abraham was a hundred years old when his son Isaac was born unto him, and Sarah said, The Eternal hath made me joy-whoever heareth it will laugh concerning me ("Itzhakli"), "will rejoice on account of me." The Medrash says many barren women were answered by the Lord on that day, and they gave birth, many sick people were healed on that day, many prayers were answered together with hers, and there was great joy in the world. And she said, "Mi mil el Abraham." Who would have said unto Abraham. She praised the Lord and said, "Who is as great as the Holy One, blessed be He, to fulfill his promise." "Milel" is an unusual word as "diber" is generally used for "spoke," the Torah purposely uses it here to signify that at the end of one hundred years of age Abraham begot a son, as "milel" is "one hundred" in numerical value. Who would have said "Sarah should have given children to nurse?" Why does she say "bonim" children, in the plural? asks Rashi, "because at the feast they made, the ladies that came brought their children and Sarah gave them to nurse, for they had said "Sarah did not give birth to a child, but they adopted a foundling from the street." And the child grew and was weaned at the end of twenty-four months, and Abraham made a great feast on the day that Isaac was weaned. It was a great feast because the great men of that generation were present there, Shem, Eber and Abimelech. And Sarah saw the son of Hagar the Egyptian, whom she had born unto Abraham, mocking ("metzachek"). "That word means, says Rashi, "that Ishmael was guilty of idolatry, immorality and bloodshed." Wherefore she said unto Abraham, "Cast out this bondwoman and her son, for the son of this bondwoman shall not be heir with my son, with Isaac." "From this remark of Sarah, we may infer," says Rashi, "that Ishmael was quarreling with Isaac over his inheritance. He said to him, "I am the firstborn son and will inherit a double portion," and he went in the field and took his bow and shot the arrows at Isaac (that is also inferred from the word "metzachek," Proverbs, ch. 26, v. 18-19). "He shall not be heir with my son, with Isaac," because he is my son, even if he were not as good as Isaac, or with any one as good as Isaac, even if he were not my son,

Ishmael is not worthy of inheriting, and especially with my son, with Isaac possessing both qualities (Medrash). And the thing was very grievous in Abraham's eyes because of his son, because he heard that he took an evil course (Medrash), the plain meaning of it is, says Rashi, because she told him to send him away, but the Lord said to Abraham, "Hearken unto her voice" (the voice of the Holy Spirit which is in her), hence we infer that Sarah's prophetic power was even greater than Abraham's. When Abraham sent them away he gave Hagar bread and a bottle of water, but neither silver nor gold, for he hated Ishmael because he took an evil course. And Hagar had to carry Ishmael on her shoulder, because Sarah saw with her stern glance the evil of his nature, and the look she gave him put him in a fever, and he could not walk upon his feet. "And Hagar departed and wandered astray," she returned to the idols of her father" and the water was spent from the bottle" because sick people drink much water. And the Eternal heard the voice of the lad, hence we infer that the Merciful One hears the prayer of the sick person in preference to the prayers of others, for although the mother wept, too, the Eternal only accepted the prayer of the sick child. "There where he is," according to his actions at that time was he judged and not according to what he was destined to do, because the ministering angels said accusingly "Master of the Universe, Him who is destined to kill Thy children with thirst, wilt Thou let live by the miracle of a well?" and the Lord answered, "What is he now deserving death by thirst or not?" "Now he is not," said the angels. "According to his present actions only do I judge him," said the Lord, and therefore does't say, "the Lord heard the voice of the lad, there where he is." And where did Ishmael's children kill the children of Israel through thirst? That was when Nebucadnezzar exiled them from their holy land, he led them near the forests of Arabia and the Israelites were pleading with their captors "Bring us to the children of our Uncle Ishmael and they will have compassion upon us." When Nebucadnezzar's hordes brought them there the Arabians came to meet them with salted meat and fish, and gourds inflated with air; the Israelites after eating the salted food thought the gourds were filled with water, but when they took them in their mouths they inhaled the foul air and died. The lad Ishmael grew up and dwelt in the wilderness and became an archer, robbing every wayfarer, as it is said "His hand will be against every man and every man's hand against him." And he dwelt in the wilderness of Paran and his mother took him a wife out of the land of Egypt, from the place where she was born. Thus the people say "throw a stick up in the air and it will fall upon its stem."

בו אהרן

"Any rags? Any old iron?" chanted the dealer, as he knocked at the suburban villa. The man of the house himself opened the door. "No, go away," he snapped, irritably. "There's nothing for you. My wife is away." The itinerant merchant hesitated a moment, and then inquired: "Any old bottles?"

CONUNDRUMS.

Which is the favorite word with women? The last one.
Why is a coachman like a lover? Because he always desires to be remembered by his fare.
Why are hot rolls like caterpillars? Because they make the butterfly.

THE making of a Home is a continual and never-ending process. It is a constant source of pleasure, something of which we never tire. To make it so attractive that the parents may be proud of it, that friends may feel at once its pleasant atmosphere of comfort and hospitality, that the children may carry it in their hearts and minds all their lives as one of their dearest memories. "THAT IS HOME AS IT SHOULD BE."
