THE FALLEN STAR

Adapted from Jacob Gordin's Yiddish Sketch.
"Der Obgestorbener Kinstler"

By MORIS CLARK

The scene is laid in a Roumanian wine cellar on the East Side of New York. It is midnight. A number of Jewish theatregoers are seated at round little tables whiling away a pleasant hour on their way home from the theatre. Some of them relish the choicest Roumanian dishes such as Patlozeli, Karnatzlech and Mamalige, while others indulge in beer and light wine. Most of them are engaged in discussions of theatrical affairs. The following dialogue overheard at one of the tables will show the calibre of mind of the assembled guests:

Joe—Say, Jake, who is the greatest Jewish actor?

Jake—Don't you know? David Kessler.

Joe—Who told you so?

Jake—Nobody told me, I know it myself. Didn't I see Mr. Kessler in Shakespeare's "Omelette"? You should hear him say: Zu sein oder nit zu sein, dus is di kashe, un as Mr. Kessler sugt zu sein, you betch your boots it remains tacke zu sein.

But Joe insists that Jake is all wrong. "Mr. Kessler is tacke a great actor I admit, but the greatest of them all is without a question Mr. Adler."

(Jake is a Latvian and mispronounces the J—Sh—and Ch.) "You sud have seen Mr. Dsacob Adler in Sakespeare's Mertsant of Venice ven he plays for the old Dsew Sylock. In the toid act he cuts out a pound of steak from Tony's heart. I tell you its vunderful, I suld live so."

The orchestra, which usually consists of a pianist who is not too particular about harmony, lends local color to the scene by playing some popular Jewish melody. The entertainment is furnished by various stumorer artists who read or sing and then pass around the hat. They are generally old-timers, either has-been or never-was actors. One of these performers is known as "The Fallen Star." Once the pride of the Jewish stage, today he is old and decrepit, shabbily dressed, and ekes out a miserable existence by amusing the flaneurs of the Ghetto.

He enters the wine cellar, surveys the gathering, raises his old worn silk hat and with a broad smile he greets in the following manner:

"Good evening, gentlemen, my best regards to every one. Once I was an actor of great renown. Now I am poor, old and run down. Anyone here with reason blessed, will surely treat me as his guest. Eh, you offer me some coffee? No thanks, it's as sweet as toffee. A little whisky, don't you know, warms you up a bit, ain't that so? (Laughs sardonically.)

prove that what I say is true, I'll just show you what I can do. Now give me your whole attention, while some radiant blue. And like the clouds up in the the sky my thoughts keep soaring very high. I think no more to you? Are you fond of drama, tragedy or comedy?—Eh, a Jewish song? Which song? 'Bobkelech' you mean. 'Heisse Bobkelech' from Goldfaden's 'Bobe Yachne'? Oh, yes, I know it quite well; but no, I like it not, it is too common. My line is tragedy. I play Shakespeare, Ibsen, Shaw, Jacob Gordin, Schiller and Goethe. Now then, ladies and gentlemen, I will present to you a little scene from 'Uriel Acosta.'

"Imagine the heroine has poisoned herself. She is dying. Uriel Acosta, her lover, stands near by, heartbroken. His rival, the much-hated Bar Yochai, appears on the scene. (He addresses the musician.) 'Professor, please play me some sad music.' (He acts.)

"Now, then, why standest thou so far away? Come hither and trample me under thy foot here at this holy shrine. Ah, thine was a poor business transaction. Thou hadst contemplated buying a human heart for money, for treasure, but no, a thousand times no, the human heart cannot be bought for gold. Seest thou, here lies her body cold and lifeless, her eyes closed, her sweet lips sealed forever; her young heart beats no longer. She is dead, dead. (Cries bitterly.)

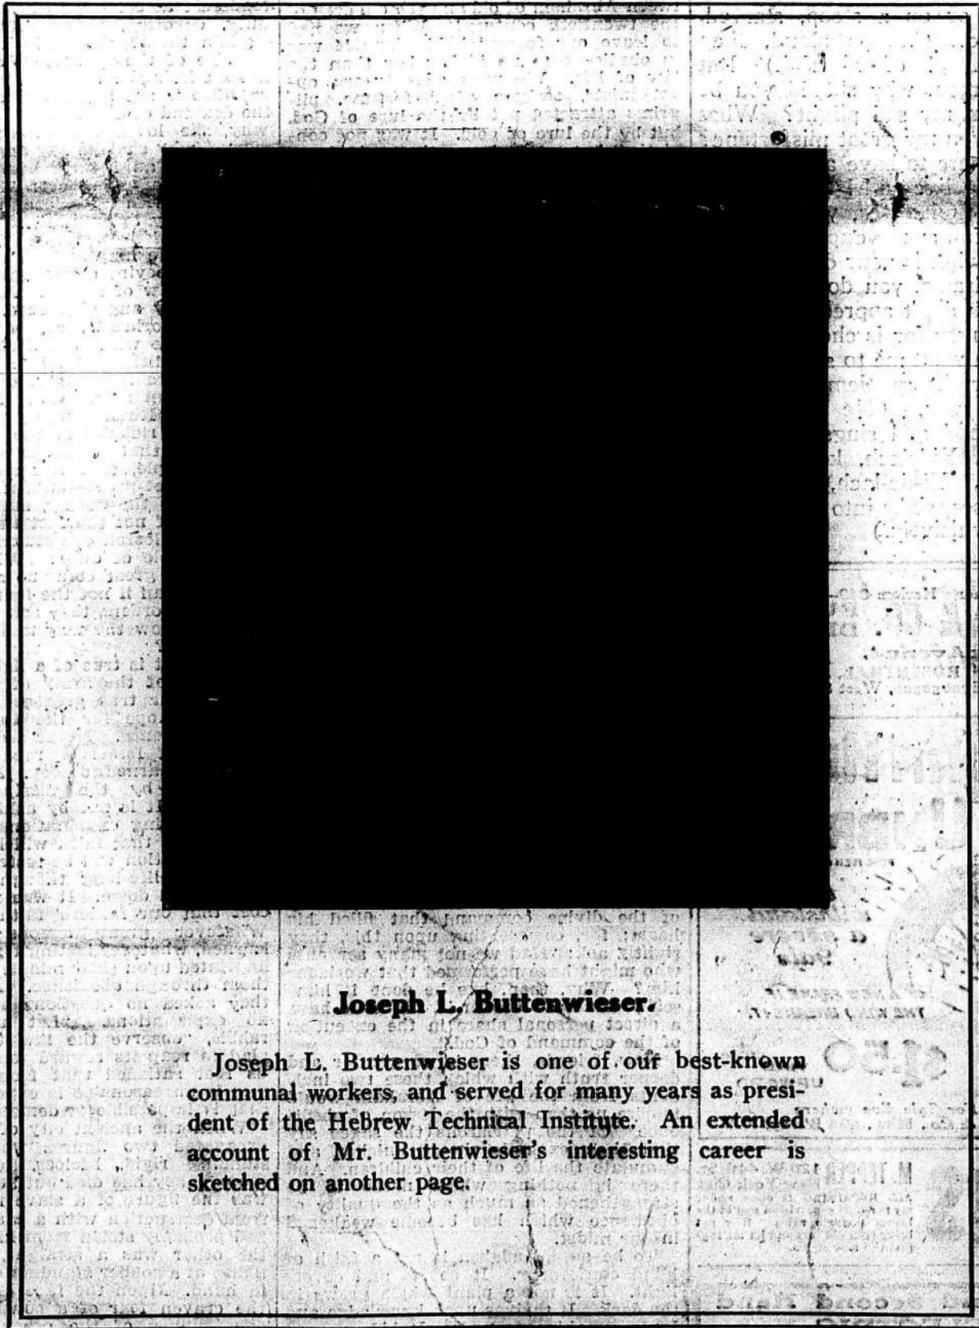

"Kind friends I beg of you this one favor, see that my body is buried near her grave. Let the epitaph on my tombstone read: 'Here lies an unfortunate creature, a man who struggled and suffered all his life, one who searched for truth and finally died like a fool.' (Weeps hysterically.)

"Ah, you applaud. I am glad you like it. Now I am sure you will all treat me. (He passes the hat around.)

"Please, gentlemen, help an old, poor, broken down actor; have pity, I beg of you. Be so kind . . . (Only three pennies are thrown into the hat.)

"Three pennies, three pennies. So—a man who struggled and suffered all his life and finally he died like a fool. (He laughs frantically.)

"You, gentlemen, you laugh at me, you mock my art. You are the critics, the connoisseurs, the patrons of art, and I, what am I? An old actor, a fallen star, a god who has been hurled from his sacred altar. Yes, the stage was my sanctuary. My great love for the heavenly art was my happiness and comfort. (He pauses; then he frowns.) Say, don't you suppose I would have had sense enough in my early days to be a saloonkeeper, or to try different money making schemes like some of famous lines I'll mention. But condition you must meet, when I finish you all must treat. For if I take a drink or two my nose lights up a of all my trouble, the world, to me then becomes a bubble. (Laughs sardonically but heartily.) Now, then, gentlemen, what shall I read you? But no, no, I couldn't even think of it. The stage always held a magnet for me. The Almighty in his wisdom bestowed upon me a love for the divine art. Oh, there was a time when the fire in my soul set aflame thousands of hearts, when my wonderful acting inspired lords and nobles. Aye, even kings were enchanted by my talent. But now, here I am, playing in a saloon, for you, for a drink, for a penny. This is my stage now; there they need me no more; younger men have taken my place. Talent—why, that's entirely superfluous these days. Art? What good is art to you, you who crave for 'Bobkelech' and such rot? Oh, how horrible, how sad is my fate. All those years, my strength, the sap of my life, I sacrificed for the Jewish stage; my only ambition in life was to serve the celestial art honestly and faithfully. But now, in my old age, feeble and poor, forgotten and forsaken, a living corpse I wander from saloon to saloon begging for a drink. Perchance some one will give this tramp a corner to rest his weary, cold bones. One of these cold winter nights you will surely find me in some yard or on a stoop, starved, frozen, dead. (Weeps aloud, then regains control of himself.) But you, gentlemen, why should you be interested in my sad plight? What matters to you my great misfortune? You came here to have a good time. You want to live and laugh, to sing and dance. Oh, yes, you want to have some fun at my expense. Very well, then, what is your desire? You don't like drama, you don't care for tragedy, you don't appreciate art, all you are hungry for is cheap rubbish. You say you want me to sing 'Bobkelech.' All right, gentlemen, be it so, I'll please you. (He assumes a cheerful mood and sings.) 'Heisse bob kelach, Yidelach, koif, heisse, bob-ke-lach, Yi-de-lach, koi—ft.' (He collapses, sinks into a chair and moans convulsively.)

THE DISCIPLINE OF OBEDIENCE.

By RABBI JACOB S. MINKIN.

There are some lives that can be told in a sentence, compressed in a line, described in a phrase and summed up in a single comprehensive word. In the case of Abraham, that word is obedience. It is the most shining jewel, the most sparkling quality, in the casket of his life. It is the most inspiring lesson written across the pages of the life story of the first and foremost man of our race. Of course, different men in different times have spelled out the message of his life in terms otherwise than we would conceive it. But, as the rabbis have said of the Torah, so may we say of obedience: "Turn it and turn it again, and you shall find everything contained therein."

Like a diamond finely cut, so does the story of Abraham reflect light from many facets. Look wherever you will; turn wherever you wish, and you will everywhere discover rich and abundant material to arouse faith; to foster conviction and to inspire conduct. Poets and artists of all times and climes have made his life a theme for thought and reflection, for discussion and speculation. But there is nothing so striking and inspiring in the life of Abraham as much as the quality of obedience. His was not a faith that was inspired by argument, strengthened by discussion and fortified by speculation, but was upheld by obedience.

Upon the very first page of the story of his life is the lesson of obedience plainly written; for, when the command came to him to leave his country, his birthplace and his father's house and unlock the gates of a strange and unknown land—when he was bidden to tear asunder those tender associations which twined themselves around the scenes of his early childhood—he did not argue, did not falter, did not hesitate, but "Abraham went even as the Lord had commanded him."

Now to us, too, such a command has come to leave our country, our birthplace and our father's home and wander to strange lands, for we are either immigrants ourselves or the children of immigrants. But what great difference between Abraham of old and the children of the twentieth century! When we had to leave our former habitations it was in obedience to no higher law than the law of life. We were adventurers, opportunists, seekers after fortune, pilgrims attracted not by the lure of God, but by the lure of gold. It was not conviction, but convenience, that guided our footsteps from land to land and from shore to shore. But not so Abraham. In him we behold a man not striving to be rich, but content to remain poor. The dream that burst upon his mind was not inspired by the love of gold, but by the love of God. He was not a villager seeking a metropolis. For Ur in Chaldea was not a home in the desert. It was a centre of ancient civilization, a seat of worldly prosperity.

But the great test of his life was yet to come; his obedience was yet to be vindicated, his faith was yet to be tried. It no doubt required courage to leave his father's house, but men of smaller faith have been known to surrender home and fortune and follow a great cause. But when it comes to surrender life itself, to yield up one's own child, that is another thing. Here we might have expected him to plead, beg, remonstrate, ask for consideration. Was not Isaac the child of his old age? Was not the very fate of Judaism bound up with him? Would not his great discovery be strangled in its birth were Isaac to die? One would have expected a conflict of duties, a collision of faith, a faltering of the will. But not so Abraham. Here again the lesson of his obedience is wonderfully illustrated. He looks at the command, he listens to the command, and the highest prevails. He knew that God would demand no meaningless sacrifice. He knew that there are occasions in life when the highest affections, the dearest loves, and the fondest possessions must be sacrificed in the name of the higher. Not only was there no remonstrance, no struggle, no pang of heart, but, according to the rabbis, there was a joy at the fulfilling of the divine command that filled his heart; for, commenting upon this, they rightly ask: "Had we not many servants who might have performed that work for him? Why, then, has he done it himself?" And the answer is, "So as to have a direct personal share in the execution of the command of God."

Now, friends, there is no greater and deeper truth with which these two incidents from the life of Abraham would inspire us than with the lesson of obedience. Of the patriarchs the sages say that their example should quicken and stimulate the life of their children. And there is nothing which needs to be strengthened as much as the quality of obedience which has become weakened in our midst.

To be sure, Judaism is not a faith of blind conformity. It courts and covets light. It is not a plant which grows in the dark. It thrives upon knowledge and loves sunshine and air. It bids us not bind the Samson of our intellect and hand him over to the Philistines of blind and unreasoning superstition. Our doctrines, our beliefs, our opinions and convictions have been weighed and measured in the balance of reason and have been found not wanting. Not only in the days of old, but also in these light-flooded critical days, has Israel and Israel's Torah been placed in the crucible of investigation and came out glorious, exultant and triumphant. There is nothing in Judaism that discredits reason and deprecates investigation. Like the nightingale, the higher, it rises, the sweeter and nobler becomes its song. Look at our greatest religious leaders—Saadyah, Maimonides, Rabbi Judah Halevi and a host of other leaders and guides of Jewish religious opinion, and they were the foremost thinkers, the wisest philosophers, the profoundest men of their time and clime. There was in them a breadth of view and wide tolerance such as to be found nowhere else. But their faith was rooted in obedience.

But this weakening of the quality of obedience, so characteristic of our age—this craving to know the whys and wherefores of every law, this demand for reasons and seeking of explanations, is surely not a healthy sign of our times. It is not a sign of strength, but a confession of weakness. It is not a desire to know, but a wish to refute. It is not a plea for knowledge, but an excuse for indifference. What is it that has made our fathers great and strong men, who, though buffeted by persecution and tossed by suffering, still clung to the ancient faith, if not the fact that theirs was a faith that was founded upon the bedrock of obedience? They required no proof, asked for no reasons and demanded no explanations. To them Judaism was not a laboratory experiment.

It is a mistaken idea that his is the greatest faith who can account for every law and assign a reason for every tradition. The mere knowledge of the law is no guarantee for its fulfillment. I have known men who were trained in all the philosophies of the schools, learned in all the systems of thought, and yet were notorious scamps. The prisons are full of moral perverts—criminally-minded men whose knowledge of the law was made an excuse for its violation.

It was not a mere accident that, in the spiritual life of our people, faith went before reason, but a principle based upon the broad knowledge of human character.

Said a Sadducean to Rabba: "What a thoughtless people you are! Should you not have first understood the reason of the law before accepting its fulfillment?" Said Rabba: "Of us who are guided by faith it is said, 'The innocence of the righteous will guide them.'" (Sabbath 88, a.)

The deepest mysteries of life, the greatest secrets of our existence, the tenderest associations of the heart—love, duty, devotion, self-sacrifice—who dare explain them? What is love if not an impulse of the heart? What is duty if not a stirring of the soul? What is self-sacrifice if not a yielding of the will to the demand of conscience? Ask a mother why she loves her child; question a woman why she sits day and night at the bedside of an invalid husband; fathom the reason of the martyr why he ascends the stake with a smile of triumph upon his lips; try to find out, if you can, why the patriot leaves home and hearth to go to a strange land and an unknown fate. They are obeying a law higher and nobler than the law of reason. And this is the law of duty and obedience.

In the world's history there has never been a time when the need was greater and more insistent to engrain the lesson of obedience into the hearts and minds of men than now. What is it that has made the Russian army an object of scorn and ridicule to the whole world? What is it that has made that brave and heroic people, that has stood countless times bullet-proof—unbending, unyielding—before the enemy, suddenly an unruly mob if not the fact that it has forgotten the lesson of obedience, unlearned the principle of duty? What is it that makes the great columns stagger like a drunken man if not the fact that, instead of obeying orders, they ask questions and wish to know the why and wherefore of everything?

And what is true of a fighting army is also true of the army of the spirit, of Israel. Our true greatness in the past and our hope for the future depends upon obedience. Never will the broken fortunes of Israel be repaired until we will have learned to obey. Israel will not be saved by the dissipation of its strength. It is not by asking questions, by demanding explanations and looking for reasons that faith will be stimulated, that conviction will be fostered and principles for life-long thought and action will be laid down. It was not at such a cost that our fathers' faith was bought. Whatever great lessons they have learned, whatever lasting truths had been imprinted upon their minds, have come to them through obedience. Abraham-like, they asked no questions and demanded no explanations. "Let us," say the rabbis, "observe the law today and be glad to reap its reward tomorrow." Let us rest satisfied that from us nothing that is unreasonable is expected, nothing that is impossible is demanded.

When the ancient city of Pompeii was excavated two figures were discovered standing rigid, lifeless, untouched, as though they had died but yesterday. One was the figure of a slave running away from destruction with a casket which he had probably stolen from his master, and the other was a straight, proud, erect figure of a soldier standing on duty, spear in hand. Upon the face of the one was the craven fear of a coward; upon the countenance of the other was written the self-sacrifice of a hero standing, spear in hand, all these two thousand years in obedience to the call of duty. And, as I think of that brave and incomparable hero, I cannot help but think of that still greater hero, Abraham, standing on duty, standing in obedience, not two thousand, but twice that length of time, warning us, encouraging us, pleading with us, to be true, to be loyal, to be faithful to the old command, to the ancient charge.

Branch of Pro Israele in Switzerland.
 Pro Israele, the well-known non-Jewish organization which was founded in Italy for the recognition of Jewish rights and the realization of the Zionist program, is now establishing a branch in Switzerland. The Swiss press is enthusiastic about the organization, and is aiding in a campaign for a large branch in that country. The program of Pro Israele is, "Liberty and equality of all Jews in all the countries of Europe, and the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine." The propaganda of the organization consists of lectures on the status of the Jews, and its political committee is engaged in making representations on behalf of Zionism and of equal Jewish rights everywhere to all of the European governments.

A Forgotten Page of History.

By BEN ALTHEIMER.

"There is nothing new under the sun."

We were seated—Professor F. and I—in the garden of the hotel die Drei Koenige (the Three Kings), in Basle. We had motored from Mulhouse, Alsace, where we had spent the night, and where we were shown the house in which Captain Dreyfus, the martyr of Devil's Island, was born. We were speaking of the affaire Dreyfus and of Emile Zola, his champion, who in the face of enmity and ostracism secured a new trial for Dreyfus, which declared him innocent and restored him to the ranks.

Professor F. quoted Zola's memorable words published during the trial: "The truth is on the march and nothing can stop it," and continuing, said: "There is nothing new under the sun. I know a similar case that occurred during the eighteenth century, across the border, in Wuerttemberg, excepting that truth was too slow and justice remained blind. I have the story with me and will read it to you—I know you will be interested." Reaching for his handbag he took from it a little, old German book and read to me: "Die Geschichte von Joseph Sues Oppenheimer, geheissen Jud Sues, Erzdielb and Betrueger." (The story of Joseph Sues Oppenheimer: called the Jew Sues, Arch Thief and Rogue).

Joseph Sues Oppenheimer was born in 1686, in Heidelberg. His father, a wandering singer and actor, died when the lad was quite young, and Joseph was placed in the care of an uncle, who undertook his education. After he left school he worked in a store where he showed marked ability, initiative and perseverance. He subsequently obtained employment in large Jewish commercial houses in Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Amsterdam and Vienna, and acquired thorough business knowledge, fine manners and acquaintance with the life of the nobility. His ability soon secured him the position of business manager of an estate of a prominent lawyer in Mannheim. In the year 1733 we find him a court Jew ("Hofjude") in the service of the Elector of the Palatinate, when, through a friend, he became acquainted with Prince Carl Alexander of Wuerttemberg, at that time Governor of Servia. Oppenheimer gained the favor of the Prince and his wife, and was appointed Court Factor and keeper of the Prince's Privy Purse.

In December, 1733, Prince Carl became the Duke of Wuerttemberg. To strengthen his position, he surrounded himself with men of ability and integrity. He appointed Oppenheimer his confidential adviser and gave him charge of the management of his finances and the control of the mint. Under Oppenheimer's management all enterprises proved successful, and the mint yielded unexpected profits to the Duke, who rewarded Oppenheimer with his full confidence. However, sources of revenue had to be sought for from time to time to enable the Duke to carry out his plans. In 1735 a monopoly of the printing of playing-cards was granted to a Jewish firm for a large annual payment. Oppenheimer obtained also for Jews contracts for the supplies of the army on the Rhine. This increased the enmity towards the Jews in the country, and efforts were made to bring about Oppenheimer's fall. Complaints were brought against his management of the mint. These complaints were augmented by a monetary crisis, which prevailed in Germany at that time. He was accused of having minted coin below the standard and in quantities larger than those authorized, with a great profit to the Duke and himself.

Oppenheimer requested to be relieved of his contract and invited a thorough examination of the mint. After obtaining the opinion of experts the Duke proclaimed that Oppenheimer had been an honest, faithful servant, and deserved not censure but the thanks of the country. Oppenheimer insisted upon being released and declared his intention to leave the country. The Duke gave him new evidence of his confidence by appointing him Privy Councillor of Finance. This gave Oppenheimer the opportunity of settling a large number of Jewish families in the cities and towns of Wuerttemberg, in spite of the objection of the people and regardless of the law prohibiting Jews from settling in the country. The Duke sustained Oppenheimer in all his actions. The financial difficulties of the Duke and his military plans compelled him to secure new sources of revenue; and it was Oppenheimer's fertile brain that found means of raising additional funds.

A commission was appointed in 1736 whose duty it was to keep a record of the marriage dowries, on which a certain tax was imposed, as was also on the division of property in case of death—an inheritance tax. This was hard on the people and caused discontent. Complaints arose against the injustice of the members of the commission, who accepted bribes and opposed those who would not bribe them. Another commission was appointed to look into the conduct of officials; to fine them or remove them from office, and to appoint new incumbents. These commissions became a menace; they led to blackmail and bribery. A fiscal agency was established, where applications for positions were received, and Oppenheimer was permitted to accept considerations from the applicants, he and the Duke dividing such payments between them. The sums collected in this manner were very large, and the people—the hand-owners, the aristocracy, the merchants and the clergy; in fact, all who possessed or earned money—became more and more incensed at the doings of these commissions. Every wrong and scheme was ascribed to the evil genius of Oppenheimer. In 1737 the Duke decreed that a duty be levied on leather and hides imported, and that a tax of three kreuzer on the florin (equal to two cents on forty cents or five cents on the dollar) should be deducted from all salaries which were to be paid to the officials of the State. The tax was called "Judengroschen" (the Jew nickel).

The Duke issued an order that all Jews who were obliged to travel through Wuerttemberg should be allowed to enter and leave the country on payment of a tax, and those Jews who wished to remain in Stuttgart, the capital of the State, should report to Privy Councillor Oppenheimer, who would give them that privilege upon certain payments. Efforts were made to abolish the Judengroschen, but with no result. To these regulations were added the monopoly of the coffee houses, of the trade in tobacco and wine, all of which yielded large revenue to the Duke. Even a tax was levied on the sale of tickets for carnival festivals. The States, of course, did not agree to any of these schemes, but the Duke paid no attention to their protests.

Oppenheimer, who was condemned as being the cause of it all, led a very extravagant and luxurious life, which exasperated the people. Efforts to bring the Jew into disgrace were of no avail. The Duke, in a decree of 1737, stated that Privy Councillor Oppenheimer was a loyal and faithful servant, who had the welfare of the State at heart. However, Oppenheimer recognized the danger that threatened him. He submitted his accounts to the Duke and prepared to leave the country. His accounts were found to be correct. On March 11, 1737, the Duke called Oppenheimer to Ludwigsburg to spend the last night with him.

That night the Duke suddenly died, and Oppenheimer was requested to accompany the Duke's adjutant, Colonel Roeder, to Stuttgart, to notify the Duchess of the Duke's death. That same night all the Jews in Stuttgart, including Oppenheimer, were made prisoners. After a futile attempt to escape, Oppenheimer was taken to Asperg, where he was tried December 17, 1737, and condemned to be hanged. The sentence was confirmed by Prince Rudolph, administrator of the Duchy of Wuerttemberg. Oppenheimer was taken to Stuttgart in January, 1738, where his sentence was read to him. He was admonished to repent and accept the Christian faith. Oppenheimer declared: "I am suffering violence and injustice; I will die as a Jew."

Repeated efforts were made to convert him to Christianity, but he resisted. On February 3, he prepared for death in the presence of an official of the State and a few Jews. On February 4 he was taken to the gallows, especially erected for him. A last attempt was made to convert him, but as it proved fruitless he was drawn up the ladder by the hangmen, amid the rejoicing of many thousands of people who had come to witness the hanging of the Jew. Crying aloud, "Shema Yisroel!" "Hear! O Israel. The Lord our God, the Lord is One!" he was pushed into a cage, fastened at the top, and a rope around his neck, tightly drawn, after which a chain was placed around his neck and the cage locked.

His death is admitted to have been a judicial murder. "Koholeth (the preacher) is right; there is nothing new under the sun," repeated the professor as he gave me the little, old German book, from which I have translated this story.

About Senator James Hamilton Lewis.

By Dr. ROBERT KATZ.
Washington.—It has long been the impression, and it has often been said, that the Jews were represented only in the House of Representatives and not in the Senate. As your readers know through the series of articles on "The Six Jewish Congressmen," the Senate never even came in for mention. With the withdrawal from the Senate a few years ago of Senator Guggenheim, of Colorado, there was no Jew in the Senate, and we were quite certain that it was over—that there were no prospects, in the near future at any rate, of a Jew entering the Senate. This belief was well founded, especially if one analyzes carefully the circumstances of the situation. With the increase of the Jewish population of this country, and especially in the recent times when pure "patriotism" and "Americanism" have been taking such a prominent role on the stage of public affairs, it has become more and more difficult for a Jew to receive a majority vote in any of the States. Of course, it is not impossible, but it is hardly likely.

Just as we have come to accept what seemed the inevitable conclusion from these thoughts and observations it becomes publicly known that we have been laboring under a mistake. The press, reporting an important address delivered by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, before a Jewish meeting in Chicago, tells of his public announcement that he is a Jew, a true son of Israel, and that he had been raised in the home of a Jewish aunt. Well, we are not without a representative in the United States Senate after all.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis is one of the few picturesque persons in the political life of the American life. He is known all over the United States as "Jay Ham," and is officially recognized as the "whip" of the Senate. This alone proves how great is his power in that important body, because only the deserving become the "whip" of the Senate, and one must possess the special capabilities and gifts that go with the position. That Senator Lewis has these talents and powers may be taken for granted, for he was elected "whip" by the unanimous consent of the Democratic Senators, who have practically the whole say in the Senate. Therefore it is safe to say that, when Lewis speaks, the majority party of the Senate is speaking, and, since the majority party is speaking, it is the voice of the Senate of the United States. And the Senate of the United States has quite a bit to say in these days—through the mouth and work of this newly discovered Jew.

This is Senator Lewis' first term in the Senate. He was elected in 1913, and in this short time he has won such a name in the important body of which he is a member that many who have served longer in the same position look up to him. Although Senator Lewis is a newcomer in the Senate, he is a well-known figure in the political and diplomatic circles of our government, and in these circles he is a power to be reckoned with. It is said that he is one of the best practical diplomats in America. His experience has been varied, and he is the author of a number of books on diplomatic subjects which have found place in the courses of many universities. It is known to all that when Senator Lewis issues a statement upon the present international situation regarding the outcome of the war or touching upon any of the important international questions now current this statement bears the greatest significance. This is explained by two reasons: First, his specialized knowledge of these matters carries great weight and makes his statements valuable; secondly, he is in close touch with President Wilson and with the other administration officials, and it is known that, when Lewis makes a statement, there is reason for it, and that it is not without the backing of the administration.

Senator Lewis, if my recollection serves me, is the only one in the Senate who wears a well-trimmed, short, red beard, combed to the sides, somewhat in the manner of Max Nordau, but perhaps somewhat longer than that of the latter. This beard, together with his heavy moustache and also his long, curly hair, played a great part in making Lewis a conspicuous figure in the Senate. He is short but firmly built, with a ruddy face that looks well in the beard, with good keen eyes and with a tiny, vanishing smile on the lips. Come to think of it, I can hardly forgive myself for not having made the discovery that this Senator is a Jew; for, if you examine his features closely, you come to realize that this is a Jewish face, and it was only the certainty that he was a Gentile which averted the suspicion that he is a Jew. His "Jewish" looks make me think of the well-educated Jewish merchant of former times.

In conversation with Senator Lewis one soon discovers that one is speaking with some one who knows whereof he talks and who makes it a point to state his thoughts as clearly and definitely as possible. He may sit down to dictate hurriedly a statement, and the result may be an article so thoughtful and full of ideas that it would have caused others weeks to formulate and set down.

Senator Lewis is always kept busy, and frequently he has not even time in which to come to his office in the Senate Building, where his mail waits to be answered. Therefore he sends for his stenographer—who is also red headed, by the way—and he has her wait for him in the waiting-room of the Senate while political matters are up on the floor. Every few minutes or every quarter of an hour, when he has time or when things inside are uninteresting or lagging, he comes out, dictates to his stenographer, re-enters the Senate, comes out a little later, dictates again, and once more re-enters. This goes on, and Senator Lewis thus does two things at once. I have been present when Senator Lewis has in this way dictated articles and even chapters of important books.

Senator Lewis is regarded as the best-dressed man in Washington—many say in the United States. He is called the "Beau Brummel" of the Senate. He is always dressed up and outfitted in finest style. One will never find him wearing shoes that do not go well with his suit or wearing a tie that is at odds with his shirt or a coat that is not up to date in cut and line. It has often been said that his wardrobe contains no less than 365 dressy waistcoats, allowing for a daily change. In addition, his wardrobe is said to contain dozens of suits, many hats and coats and other wearing apparel. When it comes to style Senator Lewis is all there.

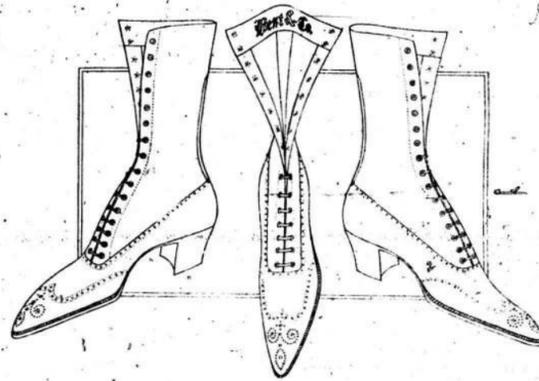

Comparatively speaking, Senator Lewis is a young man. He was born in Virginia forty-eight years ago; was raised and studied in Georgia, and then, returning to Virginia, he was graduated from the university there. Soon he went West to Washington, where he practiced law and was elected to the State Legislature, and later to the United States Congress. Later he was appointed by President McKinley and by other Presidents to serve on various international congresses in foreign countries, and once he was about to be nominated for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket. He was an officer in the war with Spain, and distinguished himself in that capacity, and later he went to Chicago, where he held various offices and was finally elected Senator. This is the new Jewish Senator.

Max Heiman, a very prominent merchant of Little Rock, Ark., died on November 6. He was born at Colmar, Germany, February 24, 1852, and had been a resident of Little Rock since 1872. Mr. Heiman was connected with a number of large business enterprises and in addition he was president of the children's home, a member of the Board of Directors of Congregation B'nai Israel, of the Board of Trustees of the Masonic Temple Building, a trustee of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, at Denver, and a trustee of D. G. L. No. 7, B'nai Brith.

The plan to establish the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, now on upper Amsterdam avenue, in new quarters in the Wakefield section of the Bronx is practically assured. Last week the local board of improvement for that section approved the application permitting the closing of certain streets to make possible the plans of voyage Monday. He will sail from a P-tract containing between 100 and 110 acres in the vicinity of 230th street, lying about midway between the White Plains avenue subway and the New York, Westchester and Boston Railroad.

At a reception given in London, Eng., last Sunday by Lord Rothschild in celebration of the official declaration by the British government in favor of a Jewish homeland in Palestine Lord Rothschild announced that his younger brother, Charles Rothschild, has joined the Zionist movement.

The famine which threatened to kill off the population of Homei and vicinity, numbering thousands of persons, was broken when the Russian soldiers stationed in that section determined to share their food with the inhabitants. They cut their rations in half and distributed this food among the starving people.

The Algemeene Handelsblad (Amsterdam) reports that the Jewish community at Frankfort announced that both in the chief synagogue and in the synagogue in the Boerneplatz, on the evenings of the New Year and on the eve of the Day of Atonement, the women's galleries would be closed on account of dangers from air raids.

The Jewish Theatre Organization of Petrograd has collected about 250,000 rubles with which to found a Jewish Art Theatre. This organization, which was established before the revolution, is headed by the well-known social worker, Senator A. Gruzenberg, and is supported by the most prominent and influential Jews of Russia.

Mrs. Ulrich Ahronheim, of Sacramento, Cal., won a $50 Liberty bond at San Francisco for the best slogan for the Liberty bond. There were about 10,000 contestants, and her slogan, "Don't Deplore the War—End It: Buy a Liberty Bond," was selected. Mrs. Ahronheim is secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary of Temple B'nai Israel, of Sacramento.

Theda Bara, the well-known motion picture star, has been granted permission by the courts to adopt that name legally, and at the same time the other members of her family were also granted permission to be known as Bara. Miss Bara, whose family name is Goodman, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, of Polish-Jewish parents.

Albert Strauss, of the banking firm of J. and W. Seligman, has been appointed personal representative of Secretary McAdoo on the War Trade Board. Mr. Strauss has been actively at work in an advisory capacity under Secretary McAdoo for several weeks without compensation, devoting his whole time to the consideration of questions as to foreign exchange.

In response to a need for a religious service for young people in the southern section of Philadelphia a group of enthusiastic young men and women, guided by members of the Jewish Educational Board, formed themselves, during the summer, into a congregation, which has now attracted to itself a number of like-minded individuals and is to be known as the "Young People's Congregation."

The Jews of London have organized a unique organization, the like of which it is hoped will never be needed by other cities and which it is hoped will soon go out of existence, although the work it is doing is necessary and important. This organization aims at instructing the Jewish inhabitants how to act during a Zepelin raid, and prevents panics, which are more dangerous than the air attacks themselves.

Sol Stern, for over sixty years closely identified with the commercial, social and charitable life of New Orleans, La., passed away last week at the age of eighty-seven. He was a liberal contributor to the Jewish Orphans' Home, the Touro Infirmary (on whose managing board he once served), the Young Men's Hebrew Association, and a number of non-sectarian charity institutions. He was a Civil War veteran.

Good Scheme for Supplying Comforts to Jewish Soldiers—Numerous Queer Religious Claims in Leeds for Exemption from Military Service—Another Jewish Parliamentary Candidate—Scheme to Replace the Conjoint Committee—Israel Zangwill Opens Campaign to Relieve Dependents of Expatriated Russian Jews—Rumania and Its Jewish Promises—Ever Fluctuating Name of Jewish Regiment.

The committee headed by Mrs. Hertz and upon which also sit the Hon. Mrs. Charles de Rothschild, Dr. Vera Weizmann and Mrs. Israel Zangwill, is hard at work now collecting comforts for the Jewish regiment. The appeal, issued on behalf of the Jewish battalions, is addressed to all Jews and to all friends of Jewish people whatever their race or creed. The scheme embraces, they say, material comforts for the recruits at the London depot, as well as special huts at the training camp, and later on at the front with provision for Kosher food. The scheme of spiritual comforts includes reading and recreation rooms at the depot and the training camp and the arrangement of lectures and concerts. The signatories ask specifically for money, for knitted comforts, underwear and toilet articles, furniture for the various recreation institutes, cigarettes and tobacco, instruments and music for the regimental band, books in Hebrew, Yiddish, Russian and Polish. They will also be glad to receive the names of persons, especially ladies, willing to offer their personal services.

An interesting exemption case has just been heard in the City of Leeds (Yorkshire) generally styled by the newspapers here the Leeds "Cohen" case. According to a Leeds newspaper, Samuel Miller, aged 34, had surrendered to the charge of being an absentee from the army, but he had claimed total exemption on the ground that he was a Cohen, born to the Jewish priesthood. An official of the Zionist synagogue in Leeds produced a minute book to prove that Miller was appointed reader of the law in April, 1911. This witness, however, in answer to Lieutenant Freedman, who appeared on behalf of the military authorities, said he thought any educated person, if accredited, could carry out the duties of a reader. This view was also indorsed by the Rev. Dr. J. Ablason, secretary to the Chief Rabbi, who said that in his opinion Miller was not a minister of religion. At this point the attorney appearing for Miller produced a letter written by Dr. Ablason in July last to the effect that on July 10 a letter had been sent to the Leeds recruiting officer stating that "the Rev. Mr. Miller was a minister of many years' standing and was indispensable to the congregation." Dr. Ablason, replying to this, said that the Chief Rabbi in that instance was expressing the view put forward by a Mr. Fellman of Leeds. This letter, he agreed, was unfortunate.

In the end the case was adjourned. Three other somewhat similar cases also came up before the Leeds magistrate and they have likewise been adjourned. In one instance Samuel David Mendelssohn, aged 33, claimed to be a rabbi at the Zionist Synagogue, whilst two other Jews, Marks Reece and Barney Young, also claimed to hold synagogue appointments which should, they contend, qualify them for exemption from military service.

Very few Parliamentary by-elections are fought nowadays. There is a sort of truce between the various parties here to avoid these contests in war-time. Occasionally, however, certain local or special reasons induce the appearance of an independent candidate in opposition to the Coalition candidate. Such an independent candidate is Lieutenant Montagu Lyons, who will come before the electors of the Spalding division for the vacancy caused by the death of the Hon. S. W. S. Maclaren. Lieutenant Lyons is the only son of a big local family, was born and educated in the county of Lincolnshire and is an advocate. He is an invalided army officer, has served as a recruiting officer and as a military representative and deputy secretary of an exemption appeal tribunal. He is very well-known, therefore, locally, and his candidature bids fair to be interesting if he is allowed to go on with it.

At the next meeting of the Board of Deputies arrangements will be made whereby the board is to replace the defunct Conjoint Committee. I understand that a Foreign Affairs Committee of the board will be appointed and this will invite representation from the Anglo-Jewish Association. It is hoped that the last-mentioned society will agree and so help to avoid anything like overlapping in this important matter.

Israel Zangwill is entering very heartily into one special branch of war business—the relief of the dependents of Russian Jews who have left England to go back to Russia and ostensibly join the Russian army. He opened his campaign last week with a big speech at Brighton, a popular south coast beach resort, where large numbers of Jewish visitors go. The Jewish press agrees that this speech is one of Zangwill's best efforts, although there is some disagreement with his objection to the conscription of allied aliens residing in this country. Zangwill expressed deep resentment at the attitude of the Jewish Board of Guardians in reference to this particular question of Russian dependents and declared that to run away from a difficulty was neither statesmanlike nor helpful.

The outlook for Jews in Rumania as a result of the war is a topic that is very fruitful nowadays, and hence statements made by the Rumanian politician, Take Jonescu, in an interview published in the Times of London last week were read with interest. He stated that the policy of the Rumanian Government now is towards the granting of complete equal rights. He mentioned that the King and all the political leaders have pledged their word to this effect, and that, furthermore, Jewish officers would be appointed to the army. Whilst these remarks are very encouraging to the hopeful, other people point out that they are very much like those rumors which go round about the war ending in the fall, but which neglect to say which fall. In some of these things surely dates are the essence of the contract, as one might say. Of course the attitude of mind of Rumanian royalties and statesmen may have changed very considerably now that they have had a basketful of their own troubles to contend against. Sometimes sorrow breeds a wondrous sympathy. Still whilst hopes of this kind are all very grateful and comforting at times, actually written edicts would be more satisfying and that is what Jews are waiting for from Rumania.

The latest news with regard to the Jewish regimental idea is that although Lord Derby declared that there was not to be a Jewish regiment nor a specifically Jewish badge, the address of the regiment is now given as the 38th Royal Fusiliers (Jewish Regiment). Even now the name does not appear to be properly settled and "battalion of Jews" is frequently used in the newspapers.

London has been free from air raids now since the moonlight nights passed, but the question of providing bombproof shelters still arises from time to time. Large numbers of East-End Jews during the raids, mainly of foreign birth, flocked to the nearest adjacent tube railway station and the Jewish press is now recommending the Jewish authorities to endeavor to prevent this kind of thing happening again, especially as these tubes, although well sunk below ground and safe in that way, might easily become death traps if the ventilating apparatus were put out of action by a bomb. The Jewish press here recommends rather that the authorities should open the synagogues, where suitable, the schools and the communal offices for refuge wherever these have cellars that can house a certain number of nervous people.

Why America Should Take Palestine

Very impressive reasons why America should take Palestine under its protection have been given in a recent article by Lieutenant-Colonel A. J. Richardson (Distinguished Service Order) of the British Army in which he discussed what he thinks would be America's best plan for striking at Germany. Lieutenant-Colonel Richardson is a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, has been an English Army officer for thirty-five years, having graduated from the British War Staff College, and has seen active service in the front line trenches on the Somme. He advocates the sending of an American army immediately into Turkish territory, which he regards as the most vulnerable point in the Teutonic defenses.

"Turkey is as decisive as any theatre can be. The Central Powers cannot afford to let her be subjugated. The Allies on the Sea of Marmora would mean the close investment, the throttling of the Central Powers and the freedom of Russia."

"Now let us suppose that the United States has ready by October, 1917, armies capable of taking the field. October brings the early rains in Syria, and campaigning in that country then presents no difficulties. It will be well watered till the following March."

"The European politician may be disturbed by thoughts of Palestine in possession of America and perhaps Constantinople in the same keeping. Bulgaria, Greece, Russia, probably Germany, all want the Turkish capital, and the Turk wants to keep it. America does not want it, so by the eternal fitness of things she would seem to be the proper Power to have it, unless, of course, Russia takes it. Just at present it is difficult to diagnose the internal troubles of Russia, but it's an old saying concerning that country that with her it is always the unexpected that happens, and the unexpected may be a vigorous offensive. Of Palestine America would make a land that it would be a pleasure to visit. The nation that conquered disease on the Isthmus of Panama would make of Judea the health resort of the Christian and Jewish world."

"World strategy and the possible political results both demand that the expulsion of the Turk be entrusted to a non-European Power."

Quieting The Troublesome Joint

Skillfully shaped in the leather of the Coward Union Shoe is a pocket that fits the enlargement perfectly.

The accommodation for the bunion is made through special cutting of the leather. The material is not stretched so does not chafe or pull across the joint.

Soft, easy fitting and of such handiwork that the shoe appears practically normal in shape.

A Strange Find in Newport.
 A large sack of papers belonging to Aaron Lopez, one of the most prominent merchants of Newport, R. I., before the Revolutionary War, was discovered by the Rev. Dr. H. Perelra Mendes last summer when he visited that old city to address the Historical Society.
 Dr. Mendes will describe the contents next Tuesday night, the 27th inst., at 8.15 o'clock in the auditorium of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, 2 West Seventy-fifth street. An interesting illustration of the business, social, domestic and religious life of that period may be expected. All are cordially invited to attend.

Unity Needed in Welfare Work
Editor HEBREW STANDARD:
The welfare work which is now being planned and begun in behalf of the Jewish soldiers and sailors in the United States army and navy furnishes another illustration of the lack of unity and co-operation in Jewish life in America.

The new task which now devolves upon us of providing for the spiritual needs of the Jewish boys serving under the Colors is the concern of the whole American Jewry, yet American Israel as a whole has not acted in the matter nor has it expressed its opinion. Only two or three groups are represented in the Board of Jewish Welfare, which, though with the best of intentions, has been very loosely organized and which in seeking to cope with the problem and to secure the necessary funds, will not have the complete moral backing of the various communities of the country. Instead of all the Jewish national organizations of the country, only a few are represented on the Board. The Independent Order Bnai Brith seems to be working separately for the Jewish soldiers and sailors; other separate efforts are being made by similar societies elsewhere, and here in New York a down-town conference is being called for next Sunday afternoon with the apparent object of interesting the Yiddish-speaking elements.

It is a necessary work which we have before us, and all Jews ought to assume responsibility for the task, which is all the more reason for organizing the work in such a way to enlist the support of all of our communities and as to make it possible for all elements in Jewry to express themselves by helping to fulfill our great obligation to our brethren in the army and navy and by testifying in this manner to our strong loyalty to the cause of our country.

Thus the need of one central and representative body of all Jews of America, which has long been felt, should now be recognized more readily than ever. If the American Jewish Congress had met this month as was expected, it would surely have been impelled by Jewish public opinion to deal with the question of the welfare work as well as with the problem of general relief, and it would have added further proof of the loyalty of the Jews to this country if the delegates in Congress assembled took steps to assist the Jewish soldiers and sailors serving under our flag. As the Congress was postponed, some temporary means ought to be found of bringing all elements together in connection with the welfare work. When the Congress ultimately meets it will give its moral backing and possibly also material aid to all work concerning the whole of American Jewry.

Undoubtedly the Congress will give the greatest possible impetus to the ultimate amalgamation of all Jewish groups and to the introduction of co-operation in all of our big work.

At some future time a permanent Jewish Congress will undoubtedly be organized and this will deal with all Jewish questions and problems in accordance with the plan which was advocated as early as 1903 by Rabbi David Philipson and Rabbi Joseph Stolz. Meanwhile it is essential that unity of effort should be brought about right now and as Colonel Harry Cutler, the Chairman of the Board of Jewish Wel-

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Your Part in Lowering Prices.
If you do not get reasonable prices from your retail grocer on canned goods, tomatoes and peas, ask him why not. Inform him that a statement was issued from Washington on November 1 that the effect of the new licensing system of the Food Administration should be felt immediately in lower prices in many stores of the articles named above. Then read this to him:

"Many lines of canned goods were bought by dealers at low prices last spring on future contracts. These goods are now being delivered, the canning season being at an end. If dealers take only a reasonable margin of profit on these goods the prices to the consumer should be correspondingly low. It is expected that goods which the wholesalers still have on hand and which were bought early will be sold on a lower margin under the licensing regulations than has prevailed up to the present; and also in accordance with voluntary assurances given by them to the Food Administration. The Food Administration is hopeful of the patriotic co-operation of retailers in this regard. At a meeting recently held in Washington representatives of the retail grocery trade passed resolutions in which was included the following:

"We pledge ourselves to the United States Government not to sell any of the fundamental necessities at a margin of profit over the delivered cost to the merchant that will yield to him more than a reasonable living profit, irrespective of the market conditions at time of resale, and we pledge ourselves to urge other grocers, whether under the licensing plan or not, to the end that margins of profit by retail grocers throughout the country over the cost to them shall not be greater than prevails under normal conditions. We urge that each retail grocer act individually, and that he sell the staple foods at no greater profit than is reasonable in accordance with their cost and his individual cost of doing business, as sanctioned by the United States Food Administration."

This resolution had the support of the entire Executive Committee of the National Retail Grocers' Association, representatives of the principal State and local retail organizations, and of large systems of chain stores and many prominent independent retailers from Maine to California.

Tell him this is the Food Administration's statement. Every consumer has a right to put this matter up to the retail grocer, and ought to do it in the interest of all. Public sentiment and community co-operation can greatly aid the Food Administration in its steady aim to lower the cost of the necessities of life. Do your part.

RESOLUTIONS.

HUTKOFF, NATHAN.—At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of Beth Israel Hospital held Tuesday, November 19, 1917, to take action on the death of their fellow-director and former president, Mr. Nathan Hutkoff, the following resolutions were adopted:
Resolved, That the Board of Directors, expressing the deep personal sorrow felt by every member of the Beth Israel Hospital Association, desires to record the peculiar honor and affection in which Mr. Hutkoff has been held:

We have been made richer by his animating presence. He was in harness working for the Beth Israel Hospital till the end.

His generosity and untiring and devoted service can never be replaced.

His memory and our pride in his career will be among our most treasured traditions and an inspiration to those he leaves behind.

To his bereaved family we tender our heartfelt sympathy in the irreparable loss which they have sustained.

Resolved, That the Board of Directors attend the funeral in a body.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Board, an engrossed copy presented to the bereaved family and a copy to the press for publication.

JOSEPH H. COHEN, President.
MELVILLE J. SCHOLLE, Secretary.

Temple of the Covenant.

There were few vacant seats at the Temple of the Covenant last Friday evening, when Rabbi Braun delivered the second address of his series on "Religious Science Health." This was a demonstration that the teachings and practices of Judaism had always occupied themselves with the promotion of longevity and the conservation of health.

At the public assembly of the Religious School on Sunday morning the newly organized Temple City of the school was formally launched in the presence of a large audience. Inaugural addresses were delivered by the Mayor, Joseph Lipman, and the Commissioners of Justice, Education, Health and Social Service—Arthur Levy, Adele Weinbaum, Paul Lippman and Rosemary Robinson. The exercises were concluded by an address by the president of the congregation, Jacob W. Endel, and the consecration by the rabbi.

A large stereopticon has been installed in Temple Hall, and the first of a series of addresses, illustrated by stereopticon views, will be delivered on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rabbi Braun.

Rabbi's Night promises to become a regular feature of the temple functions. The one held in October proved so successful that it was determined to repeat the experiment, and the one held on Wednesday evening last proved equally successful.

The Junior League of the temple has completed its organization by the election of Philip Hoffman as president, Lillian Berschansky, first vice-president, Rosa Mary Weinbaum, second vice-president, Jeannette Greenhoot, secretary; Edward Gelbin, financial secretary, and Ben Goldstein, treasurer.

Commissioner Woods to Address The Institutional Synagogue.

Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein will deliver a revival address on "Judaism's Challenge to Socialism," Sunday morning, November 25, at the Mt. Morris Theatre, 116th street and Fifth avenue, at 10.30 a. m. Police Commissioner Woods will also speak on the "Citizen's Responsibility to the Police Force." On Thanksgiving morning, Thursday, November 29, at the Mt. Morris Theatre, at 10.30 a. m., there will be joint patriotic services held under the auspices of the Institutional Synagogue and the Hebrew Veterans of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars. The speakers will be Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, Colonel Mildenberg, Congressman Isaac Siegel and Captain Levy.

A class in English to foreigners open to men and women will be under the direction of Mr. Ralph S. Phillips, who is at present teaching the subject in the public schools in this city. Admission is free.

This Saturday evening, November 24, the Synagogue is holding a dance. The purpose of which is to start the Synagogue library. Admission to this dance will be only on the presentation of a book, by those who attend. Members and their friends are cordially invited.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Hebrew Educational Society
Miss Edith Hillman has been appointed directress of social work of the Hebrew Educational Society, to succeed Miss Bertha Brenner, who was recently married. Miss Hillman was associated with the United Hebrew Charities of New York City, and participated in playground and settlement work.

Dr. Krass will speak on Sunday afternoon, November 25, on the subject, "Ingersoll and the Bible."

The Brownsville Educational Theatre will give a revival performance of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," preceded by a curtain raiser, "The Philosopher in the Apple Orchard," on Saturday evening, November 24.

The senior clubs will give a suffrage dance on Sunday evening, November 25. An entertainment and dance under the auspices of the Potans Club will be held on Wednesday evening, November 28.

Temple Petach Tikvah.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the annual theatre party to be given by the Sisterhood of the temple on Monday evening, December 17, at the Liberty Theatre. The Sisterhood raises annually the sum of $1,000 toward the reduction of the mortgage fund, and this theatre party is for the purpose of helping to raise the fund.

Kyra, the beautiful poem of motion, will be the spectacular feature of this season's offering of the "Charming Widows," which will play its annual engagement at the Star Theatre this week. Kyra will present herself in an entirely new spectacle of dances, for which elaborate scenic settings have been created. She will be assisted by her unsurpassed corps de ballet. The attraction of the "Charming Widows" is built on a more pretentious scale than in former seasons. Eddie Dale is again at the head of the merry cast. Ada Lum shares second honors, while of almost equal importance are the roles entrusted to Yeyer Harris, Harry Peterson, Earl Hall, Rena Vivienne, Connie Lehr Fuller and Guddie White. The usual Sunday concerts will be given.

Specializing in one line, Mr. S. Katz, the proprietor of "The Baby Carriage Shop," at 209 Lenox avenue, near 120th street, probably has had more experience in that business than any other retail baby carriage dealer in the city. For eighteen years he was with the Bloch Go-Cart Company and later for a period of twelve years was with the baby carriage department of Messrs. R. H. Macy & Co. Now in business for himself he still confines his activities to the same line exclusively. He carries a full line of Bloch carriages and makes a specialty of repairing carriages of all makes at most reasonable prices.

Sometimes the daily newspapers hit it off very well. Here is The Democrat and Chronicle of Rochester in this State which recently reported on the activity of a "Hebrew" Republican club under the rubric, "Evangelist-Missionary Preaches." These hybrid political organizations belong with the "knightly" meshummodim.

In a recent issue of Jewish Comment our Reform rabbis return to the charge that Zionism through its adherents is continually "picking a bone" with non-Zionists and especially with non-Zionist Reform rabbis, hanging their new challenge on some remarks which we printed in this place some time since. While we assure our Baltimore contemporary with gladness and pride that we stand, indeed, without fear and trembling in the presence of the great and lordly Zionists, still we do believe, and hope for the honor of Zionism, that the Zionists use their funds, talents and material for propaganda for their own legitimate ends, and not to attack Reform rabbis.

That the truly pious orthodox Jew, who understands the teachings and the ceremonial practices of his ancestral faith, is not a fanatic, is a matter which requires no demonstration. Occasionally an orthodox rabbi of Jesuitical tendencies may be discovered who would invoke the cherem, employed by Chief Rabbi Solomon Hirschell of London nearly a century ago, against our modern backsliders and heretics. But the truly orthodox is benevolently tolerant and uses the method known as moral suasion to convince his brethren of the error of their ways. He thus stands out as an intelligent exemplar of true religion and a fine supporter of the claims of historical Judaism.

In the Thanksgiving number of The Sunday School Times is printed a paper from a professing Zionist and loyal Jew in answer to the query, Why the Jews now need their own land? With the writer's arguments we need not deal at length; they are of the staple made familiar by Zionists. What we may say, however, is this: the paper is published in the series on Jewish topics provided by our contemporary, most of which emanate from the pens of "Hebrew" Christians and similar "distinguished," disinterested "friends" of our people. Now that The Sunday School Times has given space to the Jewish Zionist article, we fancy it will take the position that it is well-advised to print any and all fulminations of non-Jewish and anti-Jewish and pseudo-Jewish Zionists.

There are many Jews in the different countries on the globe who believe in bearing attacks upon our race and faith with resignation, and who roundly object to any prominence which is thrust by Jews upon themselves in hours of crisis. In defense of their position they inquire, Mah yomru ha-Goyim? As if Christians will respect in non-Christians an exhibition of the theoretical Christian "virtue" of humility and meekness. Such Jew are affrighted whenever a fellow-Jew speaks up in support of his opinions or attempts to swim against the current of respectability. We do not for one minute defend those who are not patiently and cheerfully loyal to their government, but we do perceive that a force resides in the position of a man, and even of a Jew, who brings his Jewish intelligence to bear upon the solution of pressing problems affecting the Jews.

Unless Foreign Secretary Arthur J. Balfour is in possession of information, presaging an early termination of the war and meanwhile withheld from the general public in the entente countries, the declaration of his favorable view of Zionist aspirations does not appear to us to have that transcendent importance which The Jewish Chronicle attaches to it. True, Mr. Balfour states that his thought about Zionism has been endorsed by the British cabinet, certainly an interesting development in the political implications of the great movement initiated by the late Theodor Herzl. But, until the present war will have run its inevitable course and the peace negotiations be eventually under way, the British government's "best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of" a Jewish state for Palestine must remain benevolent intentions, gratefully received by Zionists as such with the hope that circumstances will soon so shape themselves as to transmute them into veritable deeds.

THE COMING CAMPAIGN

THE title to these remarks has no reference to political events, but reflects solely on the efforts that will be made in and by this community during the first few days of the next month, December, to secure by pledges and actual subscriptions the balance of the moneys required for the relief of the Jews suffering through the war. A portion of this fund to be thus raised will be diverted to the important and useful purposes of the Jewish Board for Welfare Work in the United States Army and Navy.

One would think that sufficient publicity has already been accorded the cause represented by the foregoing activities. The need of the Jewish war sufferers is great and appalling, and American Jewry has been frequently importuned to do its full duty by and toward our brethren in distress overseas. Now, with the great, final "drive" toward the completion of the ten-million dollar fund which is to be devoted to alleviate their misery in sight, we add our word and our appeal to our readers on behalf of these unfortunate wards of the Joint Distribution Committee and the other important American Jewish relief agencies which are co-operating in its gigantic and truly benevolent and humanitarian task.

This appeal is specifically directed to the Jews of New York, and, from what we know of our Jewry and its splendid record of service and helpfulness, we feel reasonably certain that it will not fall on deaf ears, nor will ironbound hearts refuse to act. But the whole country may join in this noble undertaking, and we hope it will rise to the occasion and do its full duty along with New York's.

A word may be spared for the welfare board which has charged itself with the duty of caring for the many Jews who have enlisted or been drafted in our military and naval forces. They require aid and support for the trials that are before them; their comfort and happiness are dear to us and hence the communal agency, approved by our government authorities, which is working in the cause of this comfort and this happiness of theirs, should have our earnest, ardent, and most generous support.

We trust, indeed, American Jewry in general and New York Jewry in particular will so act during the next few weeks in these directions as to ensure the success and the permanence of these desirable objects.

Why should we, at this stage of the development of the war, waste time discussing the reaction on the Jewish position in Poland which the plans of the Teutonic confederates for the future of that country will undoubtedly produce, if they mature? The last three words sum up the ineptitude of the situation in a nutshell. The war is not yet over, and, until it is, none may forecast positively what the future of Poland and of Poland's Jews will be.

We observe that The American Jewish Chronicle recently advocated editorially the calling of a conference of editors of Jewish newspapers to deliberate on both political and professional questions. We imagine this idea will strike favorably all those interested in the suggestion; of our own adherence to such an enterprise there is no question. At the same time we would recall a few recent facts for the benefit of our young, local contemporary, so recently established that these "recent" facts must be exhumed from the "catacombs of antiquity." Late in 1912 or early in 1913 an American Jewish Press Association was established in this city, as the result of a more or less enthusiastic meeting at one of the hotels, which organization was stillborn. The late Joseph Jacobs was its president, and Mr. Abraham Rosenthal, of St. Louis, the energetic editor of The Modern View, was its ubiquitous secretary. As stated, it ceased to live almost in the hour of its birth. What causes operated to bring about this regrettable situation it were invidious, and assuredly unnecessary, to detail here. Suffice it to say, the formation of such an organization is attended with dangers and difficulties, and if the conference which The American Jewish Chronicle seeks to further is not maintained with tact and discretion, history will repeat itself even in this insignificant department of American Jewish communal development. Qui vivra verra!

Israel Zangwill's brilliant address at Brighton, England, in October at a meeting to raise funds for the support of the dependents of Anglo-Russian Jews repatriated to Russia through the exigencies of the conscripting of friendly aliens by Great Britain was a masterpiece. It tackled all the questions which affect our English brethren at this juncture and eloquently characterized the ineptitude, or worse, of a community that supinely suffers itself to be attacked by mendacious Anglo-Christian journalists of an anti-Semitic stripe, that opposes the creation of Jewish military units when this has been decreed by the government and then arrives at a compromising Ausgleich which sacrifices Jewish dignity on the altar of hyperpatriotism, and that cannot extend its communal economy sufficiently to care for the victims of circumstances beyond their control. Trust Israel Zangwill not to mince matters, nor to refrain from calling a spade a spade, nor from attacking highly-placed Jews because of a possible fear that they will repay his temerity by vengeful spite. He is, indeed, in these respects like our own beloved "Terrible Teddy," and does not "pussy-foot." Particularly we were delighted to read the words he employed as castigations of the anti-Semitic press in Great Britain. This vehicle of a public opinion has been suffered to hurl its offensive diatribes at Jews and none in the Jewish community arose before Israel Zangwill took the duty upon himself of giving the retort quick and decisive to their mischievous fulminations. As a scolding critic Israel Zangwill deserves high praise.

THE GREAT ILLUSION

הייתי כיום אכלני הרב וקרר בלילה וחדר שנתי מעיני:

"Thus I was: In the day the drought consumed me, and the frost by night; and my sleep departed from mine eyes." (Gen. xxxi, 40.)

THE parting scene between Jacob and Laban is a fitting conclusion to their sordid relations. It was as inevitable as the appearance of slimy earthworms at the end of a rainy day. In this last unseemly quarrel the worse side of their natures gains the upper hand. Both had been scheming, crafty, treacherous: their mutual approach was the approach of preying beasts slinking up to each other in search of a weak spot. How might they take advantage of each other? their chief concern had been these many years. It is amusing to hear them mouthing at each other, each with a ludicrous show of righteous indignation. These two who knew each other thoroughly; knew each other's tricks and subterfuges; between whom there had existed a tacit agreement of doing business on a basis of reciprocal exploitation, each hoping all the while to get the better end of the bargain: these two are now reproaching one another on the ground of religion and morality!

Such is this scene, tho' pious souls may object to the truthful interpretation. There is no escape: lives ruled by greed cannot grow into the dignity of the spirit. Let this, however, be said: that Jacob's was a curious dual nature in which the good was at odds with the bad; through which the nobler part was constantly trying to break forth. Our text is a gleam of that nobler part, shining out of the sinister tegumen of evil. There is here, to be sure, a note of querulousness, the revelation of a whining disposition, which one cannot, in all truth, overlook; but still, beneath it all there is something genuine: a warm human touch, tender with the deep pathos of human living and the futility of human striving. Jacob is here counting the cost—was it, after all, worth the while? He had gotten himself great wealth; but at what cost? Constant strenuous hustle and bustle; exposure to wind and weather; final ruin of health and happiness; loss of sleep attended by drowsy nightmares; unceasing anxiety and carking care—ruin not only of the body but of the soul! In the end he finds himself with sheep, sheep, thousands and thousands of them; but somehow their bleating has spoilt the tune of his life! Once upon a time he heard the rustling of angels' wings—but now there's nothing but this bleating of sheep, so utterly meaningless! Once upon a time he dreamed his dream—but now all his ideals are gone and there's nothing but this oppressive sense of futility arising out of the knowledge that in recklessly pursuing wealth as he did, he was chasing after an unreal phantom—a vain illusion.

This text, old as it is, might be written above the door of every office or shop this very day. It contains the life-story of the average American business man. Jacob complains that he had been "hustling" for twenty years. This number represents accurately the years the average man can stand of "hustling." At forty or forty-five your shrewd business-man "breaks down," his sleep gone, like Jacob's, his zest of life gone, like Jacob's; and then begins a dyspeptic course of health-seeking on seaboard and mountainside, at springs and watering-places; in Europe or Egypt; in the office of this and that specialist; or perhaps of quacks and "scientists." One scarcely knows this to fail: at forty the "homo Americanus" is a prematurely old man. Shrewd as he is, why does he seek his health everywhere, except where he has left it—in his "safe"? Marvellously safe that "safe"!

It is pathetic! Underlying all this hustle and bustle, all this greed and speed, all this shameful acquisitiveness of man is the most pitiful of all illusions. It is the most pitiful because seemingly bearing the most solid aspect, far removed from all that is unreal and illusory. Solid they appear to him: his goods, his possessions; his clothes that leave him naked, his jewels that leave him unadorned, his houses that leave him unprotected! He calls it "wealth," yet it robs him of his wealth; he calls it "substance," yet it is most insubstantial. How real is his Real Estate?

This is the Great Illusion: that any man can in any real sense attach to himself mere goods and call them his own! That he can, by some mystic process at which later generations will yet laugh, assimilate into his life mere material things until they become somehow not sheer incidents but veritable parts of his very self! Ah, your true mystic is the hard-headed practical man! Possession is at best a fiction, a mean legal makeshift, and not a fact. But the "business-man" accepts this fiction for fact, this make-belief for staunch truth. What greater illustration than this?

There will yet come a morality which will destroy the Great Illusion. It will declare "possession" unreal because utterly impossible. "Having" will be ruled out of the vocabulary of mortals, and its place will be taken by "Being." Bear in mind that the Hebrew language cannot, except in a roundabout way, say: "I have." It says: "Yesh-lee"—there-is-to-me; as though something incidental were added to, and not incorporated with, the inviolate Me. On the other hand the Hebrew knows how to express the fullness of being when it uses the verb Hayoh—to-be. For in Hebrew Hayoh, to-be, is similar in sound as Hhayoh, to-live. Thus does the genius of the Hebrew tongue convey the lofty thought that to-live means—to-be!

JOEL BLAU.

SOCIAL NOTES.

The Sisterhood of the Congregation Mount Zion will hold its annual affair on the evening of Thursday, November 29, at the Palm Garden, 58th street near Lexington avenue.

Last Sunday evening at the Lexington there was celebrated the nuptials of May Herman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Berman, of 51 East Ninety-seventh street, and Charles J. Pearlstein, of New York city.

Jewish Participation in "Hero Land" Bazaar.

"Hero Land," the war relief spectacle which for months past has engaged the energies of hundreds of the most prominent men and women in New York will be opened at the Grand Central Palace at 7 o'clock tomorrow (Saturday) night.

Jewish war relief day will be celebrated on Wednesday, November 28, by the joint distribution committee of the American Fund for Jewish War Sufferers which has taken charge of the program under Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the committee, and Mrs. Daniel Guggenheim, chairman of the "Hero Land" committee.

One of the largest spaces in "Hero Land" is to be occupied by the Joint Distribution Committee. The committee is to show a reproduction of Bowling Green as it appeared in 1680, with its picturesque Dutch settlers, Indians, fur traders and others; and designed by Paul Chalfin. The first synagogue in America is shown in the picture.

Some of the entertainment features are to comprise the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band, Dutch folk dancing of east side school children, Russian dances from the Henry Street Settlement, the Music School Orchestra, an historical pageant to be given by the Young Women's Hebrew Association, Boy Scout and Girl Scout drills, folk dancing by the Emanu-El Sisterhoods, a drill by the pupils of the Hebrew Technical School for Girls and many other features, interspersed with prominent professionals. This department will be under the direction of Mr. M. H. Hanson.

Mrs. Abraham Bljor is chairman of the ticket committee in this section of "Hero Land" and has sold more than 25,000 tickets. Members of the committee are to appear in the costumes of the period, designed by Mrs. Theodore Bernstelp.

Mrs. S. M. C. Borg is chairman of the flower booth, Mrs. C. I. Stralem of the tobacco booth, and Mrs. William Einstein is in charge of what will be known as the mystic booth.

At Booth No. 11 of which Mrs. Albert Lucas is chairman, on the day that Mrs. Walter H. Stiner is hostess, Miss Mary Garden of the Chicago Opera Company, has consented to receive the visitors. Miss Garden has just returned from France, where she spent a year as an ambulance assistant on the Western front. Miss Garden will entertain her visitors with recitals of her actual experiences.

Other noted stage and opera favorites will appear at this booth from time to time.

Mrs. Israel Unterberg is in charge of the candy and cake booth, with Mrs. Felix M. Warburg as vice-chairman. Mrs. Oscar S. Straus heads the perfume booth, Mrs. Morris Loeb of books, music and stationery, Mrs. Arthur Lehman fancy articles, Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim dolls and toys, Mrs. Ernest Croonsfeld "ye provision marte" and Mrs. Myron Oppenheim fur trading post.

Mrs. Isabella Freidman heads the reception committee, which is to receive distinguished guests of the committee during "Hero Land."

Samuel Mason, Special Representative of Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid, Leaves for Japan.

Mr. Samuel Mason, special representative of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America to investigate conditions among the Jewish emigrants stranded in Japan, started on his voyage Monday. He will sail from a Pacific port, but before doing so he will visit the Seattle and San Francisco branches of the society. Mr. Mason's principal mission is to extend prompt relief to the emigrants now stranded between Harbin, Manchuria and Yokohama, Japan.

Considering the present world conditions and the best interests of our own country these unfortunates will be aided and advised according to their physical, mental and moral state. Such as are inadmissible under our immigration laws will, if possible, be assisted to return to their native countries, while proper connection will be made for the others with their relatives and friends in the United States.

Mr. Mason is well qualified to undertake the difficult problem which is confronting him. For seven years before he started upon his present career as a newspaper publisher he was general manager of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America, and at present is one of its directors and chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. It was under his guidance that the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society developed into a national organization, with branches at Baltimore, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Seattle.

The society decided upon sending a special representative to Japan, in response to urgent demands for help which had come from Yokohama. There are at least 3,000 stranded Jewish emigrants between that city and Harbin, Manchuria, and most of them are women and children eager to join the heads of their families, already settled in the United States. It is estimated that several thousand more are stranded at different points in Siberia. A few weeks ago the society cabled, through Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, $3,000 to B. W. Fleisher, publisher of the Japan Advertiser, to meet the immediate needs of those refugees who, according to the report of the Department of State, were in danger of being exploited. A temporary home has been opened for them in Yokohama, and Mr. Mason is empowered to take such further steps as will assure their safety.

Kosher Food for Soldiers.

The question of providing kosher food for soldiers and of seeing that proper religious instructions are given to the Jewish soldiers in the camps was taken up at a joint meeting of representatives of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations, United Orthodox Rabbis of America, Vaad Morabonim and Jewish Board of Ministers' Association at the Central Jewish Institute recently.

The meeting was opened by Dr. Bernard Drachman. Rabbi M. S. Margolies was chairman and Morris Engelman secretary. The following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, The organizations represented at this meeting are the rightful representatives of the religious organizations of America; and

"Whereas, They are very much interested in seeing that the proper religious instruction, etc., are given to the soldiers in the camps; and

"Whereas, The Jewish Welfare Board has been organized for the purpose of negotiating with the government officials and to carry out the plans for religious education and recreation; therefore be it

Resolved, That a committee consisting of Rabbis Philip Klein, M. S. Margolies, H. Pereira Mendes, Moses Hyamson, Bernard Drachman, D. de Sola Pool and Israel Rosenberg be appointed to prepare a brief and to confer with the Jewish Welfare Board; and be it further

Resolved, That those present, representing the above organizations, cooperate in every way possible with the Jewish Welfare Board."

Those present were: Rabbis Bernard Drachman, Moses Hyamson, S. L. Horowitz, Philip Jaches, S. H. Glick, Philip Klein, M. A. Kaplan, M. H. Klein, M. S. Margolies, H. Pereira Mendes, H. D. Buegeleisen, Morris Engelman, M. Gottesman, Dr. E. Goldberg, Simon Roeder and G. S. Roth.

Montefiore Congregational Notes.

A large attendance of enthusiastic women marked the first social gathering of the season held by the Montefiore Sisterhood last Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was addressed by Rabbi Basel, who lauded the eagerness of the women and spurred them on to continue their efforts and thus enable the Hebrew school authorities to maintain the large number of free pupils who have registered for instruction.

Rabbi Basel delivered a sermon last Saturday on the occasion of the anniversary of the death of Prof. Solomon Schechter, in which he praised at length the valuable accomplishments of the man. After a survey of the noble work of the eminent Jewish leader, who was at one time his teacher, Rabbi Basel concluded with a prayer of thanksgiving for our having been given the opportunity of enjoying the fruit of Prof. Schechter's genius, and expressed the desire that we be inspired to perpetuate his efforts in the cause of Judaism.

The group of men organized for the study of the Talmud under the guidance of Rabbi Basel meets on Wednesday evening in the vestry room of the Temple. All men interested in the work are asked to affiliate themselves with this movement, which aims to raise the standard of Jewish scholarship.

The Junior Montefiore Congregation is planning a more elaborate musical program for its services than it has hitherto practiced and with this aim in view the organization is now seeking a leader, who is to conduct its musical activity in the proper channels.

The Zionist Ball.

Jews of Greater New York will have an opportunity for a gigantic Zionist demonstration at the Zionist ball, which will be held Saturday evening, December 29, at the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, Twenty-fifth street and Lexington avenue, New York. Mrs. Nathan Straus is chairman of the General Committee on Arrangements; Mrs. Israel Friedlaender, vice-chairman, and Mr. Samuel Blitz, secretary. Dr. S. M. Melamed is chairman of the Committee on Publicity, and Mrs. Barney Bernard is at the head of the Committee on Entertainment. Music will be furnished by the Sixty-ninth Regiment Military Band, under the direction of the noted conductor, William Bayne.

Art Classes at the Educational Alliance.

The Educational Alliance announces the opening of a series of art classes in the Alliance Building, at 197 East Broadway, for the people of the East Side. Mr. Abbo Ostrowsky, the Russian artist, is conducting the advanced and the beginners' groups in sketching and painting; Mr. Victor Brenner, of Lincoln head fame, is leading the modeling and sculpturing class; Mr. Hauptman, a graduate of Munich Art Academy, is the leader of the art poster work, and Mr. William Auerbach Levy, whose Jewish studies have been reproduced in these columns, will take charge of the etching classes.

The East Side is full of the art impulse and possesses an unusually large number of men and women boys and girls, who are possessors of talent, but not of genius. Here is offered an opportunity for their artistic instincts to find adequate expression. Here in the Alliance they may meet with kindred spirits under the tutelage and direction of some of the leading artists in the community.

Can the spirit of the East Side find expression in painting, in sculpture and in metal? Can the atmosphere of Jewish life be given permanent embodiment by Jewish men and women through the media of crayon, paint, plaster and bronze? It can, and it is being done in these classes now developing in the Educational Alliance.

To all men, women, boys and girls of the East Side in whom this art impulse is struggling for expression and who are looking for a long-hoped-for opportunity to develop their power a cordial invitation is extended to join the groups already organized or in process of organization. Application may be made either to Mr. Abbo Ostrowsky, leader of the art groups, or to Dr. Nathan Peyser, executive director of the Educational Alliance.

Ninth Annual Convention of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America.

The ninth annual convention of the Federation of Jewish Farmers of America will be held at the Educational Alliance Building, East Broadway and Jefferson street, New York City, from Sunday, December 9, to Wednesday, December 12, 1917, inclusive. While the definite program is not ready for publication, the following tentative program has been arranged.

As heretofore, the convention will open with a public session which will be held at the Straus Auditorium, on Sunday evening, December 10, 1917. At this session speakers of national reputation will address the delegates and their friends.

The first business session will open on Monday, December 10, at 10 o'clock sharp. All the rest of the sessions will be devoted to reports of officers, delegates and also to the consideration of various important problems of the farmers, such as marketing of milk and its products, promotion of co-operative organizations, co-operative insurance, the question of co-operative credit unions, Federal Land Bank and other co-operative financing.

On Monday, December 10, a special session will be devoted to the interest of farm boys and girls and women of the farm. Delegates from the Baron de Hirsch Agricultural School, National Farm School, as well as other agricultural schools and colleges in the Eastern States, are expected to be present. The Farm Boys' and Girls' Clubs and Farm Women's associations will send in delegates.

Judging from the preliminary reports received at headquarters, the convention will be attended by a large number of farmers and members of their families. Every Jewish farmer as well as any other member of his family are welcomed to attend any of the sessions and participate in the discussions.

Talmudical Institute of Harlem.

The Ladies' Society of the Talmudical Institute of Harlem will give its annual Theatre party on November 27, 1917, at the Lenox Theatre, 111th street and Lenox avenue. The proceeds of this theatre party will be devoted to the needs of the institution.

It is the aim of the Talmudical Institute not only to give its pupils a thorough course in the Hebrew language and literature, but also to provide them with an English education equivalent to that given by the public elementary schools. Many of the graduates are now in the New York city high schools. Besides having completed the course of study prescribed for the public schools, these graduates have attained a degree of proficiency in the Hebrew language and laws rarely found among adults of the new generation in this country. The Talmudical Institute of Harlem is trying to combine Judaism with true Americanism. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. B. Wartel, 95 West 119th street.

Council of Jewish Women to Dedicate Home.

On Sunday, November 25, at 4 p. m., the New York section, Council of Jewish Women will dedicate their Home for Friendless and Homeless Girls at 418 East Fiftieth street. This home deals with those unfortunate girls who have been discharged from correctional institutions or have been released on parole. The estimated cost of maintaining the institution is approximately $4,000 per annum.

At the dedication Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, Rev. Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Deaconess Young and Hon. William McAdoo will speak.

Young Women's Hebrew Association.

A concert was held on Sunday, November 10, at 8 p. m. The eminent tenor, Mr. Giuseppe Goggetti, gave a splendid recital, which was heard by more than 400 men and women. The next concert is to be held on Sunday, November 18, at 8 p. m., in the auditorium. The public is cordially invited.

The Esther J. Ruskay Religious Circle held a memorial program in honor of Esther J. Ruskay. Essays and poems written by her were read. Many personal friends of Mrs. Ruskay's were present and gave intimate recollections of her and her influence. Cecil J. Ruskay gave a beautiful reading of some of his mother's favorite essays and poems. The whole evening was a beautiful tribute to the woman who has meant so much in the lives of hundreds of our people.

The American pianist, Dorothy Berliner, gave a repetition of the recital she gave at Aeolian Hall at the Young Women's Hebrew Association on Sunday evening, November 18, at 8 p. m.

The Women's Zionist Committee.

Spurred on by England's momentous declaration in favor of a national Jewish home in Palestine a vigorous campaign has begun throughout the country to enroll as many Jewish men and women as possible in the International Zionist Organizations.

The first mass meeting will be held at Morris High School, 166th street and Boston Road, November 24, 1917, at 8 p. m., under the auspices of Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America. Addresses will be made by Louis Lipsky, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Federation of American Zionists; A. H. Fromenson, publicity director of the Provisional Zionist Committee; Henrietta Szold, chairman of Hadassah; Mary Antin, author of the "Promised Land," and Dr. Ben Zion Mossinson, principal of the Jewish High School at Jaffa. Palestinian songs will be sung by the Hadassah Choral Union. Admission is free.

The Harlem Forum.

The monthly musical and lecture of the Harlem Forum, which will take place on Sunday evening, November 25, 1917 at 8.30 p. m. sharp, in the main auditorium of the Wadleigh High School, promises to be one of extraordinary interest to music lovers. The participants in the musical program will be Mr. Micha Violini, the violinist; Mrs. Morris Endel, alto; Miss Estelle Schriener, soprano, and Lynette Avenue, the classical dancer; all are well known artists.

Dr. David de Sola Pool will deliver the address of the evening on the timely topic of "Food Conservation."

Jewish National Fund Bureau for America.

The following monies were received by the office of the Jewish National Fund Bureau for America, 44 East 23d street, New York, during the month of October, 1 to 31, 1917.

Table with 2 columns: Item, Amount. Includes General Donations ($1,426.26), N. F. Boxes (1,191.66), N. F. Stamps (539.39), Golden Book (528.48), Tree Donations (232.28), Dunam Land (100.00), Self Taxation (10.00), Total ($4,028.07).

Collegiate Zionist League.

At the next meeting of the Collegiate Zionist League a symposium will be held on "The Secular and Spiritual Phases of Zionism," in which Professor S. T. H. Hurwitz, Mr. Leon M. Herbert and others will participate. There will also be musical numbers. The meeting takes place at the Central Jewish Institute, 125 East Eighty-fifth street, on Saturday evening, November 24, at 8.30 o'clock.

The function following this meeting is the annual rally on Saturday evening, December 8, at the Savigny, 229 Lenox avenue, where an informal dance will take place.

Hadassah School of Zionism.

The next lectures on Zionism and Jewish history scheduled for Hadassah's course in the elements of Zionism are: "The National Element," to be given Monday, November 26, at 8.15 p. m., by Dr. Paul Chertoff, at the Salanter Talmud Torah, 118th street and Park avenue, and "The Kingdom of Israel," November 28, 8.15 p. m., at Public School No. 10, 117th street and St. Nicholas avenue, by Mr. David Tannenbaum.

Annual Meeting of the Spanish and Portuguese Sisterhood.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Sisterhood of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue will be held on Monday evening, November 26, in the assembly rooms of the synagogue, 2 West Seventieth street, at 8.30 o'clock. Besides the report of the president and an election of officers there will be an address by Hon. Abram I. Elkus on "Our Responsibility to our Oriental Neighbor."

At the outbreak of the war the Rev. Michael Adler was the only commissioned Jewish chaplain in the British army. The number has now increased to sixteen, there being nine on the western front (one of whom, the Rev. D. I. Freedman, is with the Anzacs), two in England, two in Egypt and one each in Salonika, Canada and South Africa. The areas in France and Belgium have been divided up into bases and armies, and a Jewish chaplain placed in charge of each district. By addressing a letter to the "Jewish Chaplain, Base or Army" (as the case may be), a Jewish soldier can at once get into touch with his local chaplain.

REPRESENTATIVE FROM D. G. L. NO. 2: Isaac A. Losh.
M. SAMUEL STERN, Past Grand Master; HENRY J. PICK, Chairman Finance Committee.
District Grand Lodge No. 1. MAURICE FLEISCHMAN, Grand Master; ABRAHAM HAFER, Grand Secretary; ADOLPHUS E. KARELSEN, Grand Treasurer, District Grand Lodge No. 2. SOL. KAHN, Grand Master; Eli Brandt, Secretary.

Solon J. Liebeskind, United States Grand Master, is en route through the far Western States making official visits. He is scheduled to reach Chicago, November 25, to attend the large class initiation of the local lodges who have upwards of one hundred and eighty (180) candidates already enrolled for initiation. The event will be held under the auspices of District Grand Lodge No. 2, of which Mr. Sol Kahn, of Chicago, is Grand Master.

National Fraternal Day (subject to bill presented to both Houses of Congress on January 15) was celebrated in New York on October 28, under the auspices of the Committee of Education, of which Henry J. Hyman is chairman. The chairman of the evening was Solon J. Liebeskind, United States Grand Master, who introduced the following representatives of fraternal organizations: Hon. Samuel Strasbourger, Free and Accepted Masons; Edward Becker, Past Grand Regent Royal Arcanum; Charles W. Endel, Grand Chancellor, Knights of Pythias; Hon. William L. Ransom, representing National Fraternal Congress; and Joel Krone, Past Grand Master, Independent Order Odd Fellows. Hon. Abraham G. Mayer, Hon. Marcus M. Marks, President of the Borough of Manhattan; Philip Goodhart and Maurice Fleischmann, officers of District Grand Lodge, also delivered brief addresses on Fraternalism. Dancing followed the exercises. Several hundred people were unable to obtain admission for lack of room.

Almost two hundred members of the order are thus far reported as having enlisted in the army and navy. Boys' brigades composed of member's sons are now being recruited in several large cities. Weekly drills are already being held in New York city by the local brigade.

The latest balance sheet dated September 29, shows the capital of the order to be $1,184,924.73. The capital of the lodges approximates $2,000,000 more. Mr. T. F. Tucker, official examiner for the Insurance Department, commends the officers for economy in management and the very low rate of expense in the conduct of the institution.

New President for Central Jewish Institute.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Central Jewish Institute, held on November 13, Mr. Jacob D. Rubin was unanimously elected president to succeed the late Samuel I. Hyman.

Cafe Boulevard Reopened

In an entire new dress the Cafe Boulevard has come out of the decorator's hands and has been formally reopened for the season. The dining room has been given the character of an Italian garden with stucco walls, showing above them a picturesque garden scene in bright, sunlit colors, with the ceiling carrying out the picture of a summer sky, with an elaborately decorated pergola around the room. The entrance to the restaurant has a beautiful coffered ceiling, copied from an Italian Renaissance Venetian palace. The lighting effects are derived from overhead bowls, so contrived as to cast an amber glow over the entire room. The Grill room has also been entirely redecorated.

By having two orchestras, the entertainment and the dancing are continuous from six until the closing hour, and, for the benefit of the devotees of the dance, a new dance floor has been laid. The cabaret entertainment is provided by Evelyn Tonge, Senior Setola, Ruth Emerson, Lillian Leonore, and Kirmey and Hall, exponents of the dance.

Soldiers to Be Entertained by Sinai Temple.
 In response to a suggestion made by Rev. Dr. Max Reichler, the rabbi of Sinai Temple, Stebbins avenue and 163d street, the Bronx, the members of the congregation have invited a number of soldiers to celebrate Thanksgiving Day with them. The soldiers will be the guests of individual families at dinner, and will then be entertained in the afternoon by the Sinai Temple League. This league will hold a reception and dance in a hall in the Bronx in honor of those serving under the colors. Every effort will be made by both the individual families and the young people to make the soldiers feel at home. The chairman of the Committee on Soldiers' Entertainment is Miss Florence Locks.

Thanksgiving Dinner for Soldiers at Y. M. H. A.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association, Ninety-second street and Lexington avenue, is making elaborate plans for entertaining 200 or more soldiers on Thanksgiving Day. A dinner will be served at about 1.30 p. m., and the rest of the day will be spent in Thanksgiving festivities. A very attractive vaudeville program is being arranged for the afternoon, with the aid of one of the prominent Jewish theatrical managers of the city.

For those of the soldiers who expect to stay for the evening entertainment a buffet luncheon will be served at 6.30 o'clock. In the evening the association will hold its regular Thanksgiving entertainment, which will include a short play to be presented by the Association Players, music by the Y. M. H. A. orchestra, and a very fine feature film. After the entertainment a dance will be held in the gymnasium of the association. The chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements is Mr. Simon Gottschall.

Cultural Endeavor Society.

MUSIC NOTES

Margaret Matzenauer, the celebrated prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, recently bought $20,000 worth of Liberty bonds.

At the Saturday evening concert on December 1 in Carnegie Hall the orchestra of the Symphony Society of New York, Walter Damrosch, conductor, will play Tschalkowsky's symphony No. 6 in B minor (pathétique), revived by Mr. Damrosch at the concerts of the Symphony Society in response to popular request.

Rudolph Reuter, the young American pianist, who will give his second New York recital at Aeolian Hall on Wednesday afternoon, November 28; spent three years in Japan as head of the piano department of the Imperial Academy of Music in Tokio.

Jack Osterman is truly a "child of the stage," being the son of J. J. Rosenthal, manager of the Bronx Opera House, while his mother is Kathryn Osterman, the well-known actress, Little Jack, who is sixteen years of age, is probably the youngest comedian now on the boards. He is a member of the "Oh, Boy!" company, now playing under the management of Comstock & Gest.

Mme. Gabrielle Gills, the French soprano, will give a second recital in Aeolian Hall on Friday afternoon, November 30. Mme. Gills, who will be assisted by Richard Hageman at the piano, will sing a varied program of songs in French and English.

For his second violin recital, to be given at Carnegie Hall on Saturday afternoon, December 1, Jascha Heifetz will open his program with Haendel's sonata

No. 4, in D major, which he will play in conjunction with Mr. Andre Benoit, Saint-Saens' concerto, No. 3, and Bach's chiconne for violin alone will also be given, and the recital will close with a group of shorter selections, including Romance by Wagner, scherzo by Tschalkowsky, Un Poco Triste by Suk and polonaise by Wieniawsky.

The third recital of Joseph Bonset's historical series will be given in the Hotel Astor ballroom on Monday afternoon, November 26, and will be devoted to works of Handel, Mozart and masters of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The program follows: Prelude and Fugue in F minor; Concerto in D, No. 10; Noel sur les Flutes; Gavotte on the Gregorian song; Fantaisie in F; Prelude on a Christmas Carol; Andante con moto; Fantasia and Fugue in B flat.

The third week at the Metropolitan Opera House will be ushered in Monday night with a performance of "Faust," with Farrar and Martinelli. Hempel and De Luca will appear in "Traviata" on Wednesday. A special Thanksgiving matinee performance of "Carmen" will be given Thursday with Farrar and Martinelli, and the same evening Muzio and others will be heard in "Boheme."

The Flonzaley Quartet will give its first subscription concert of the season in Aeolian Hall on Tuesday evening, November 27, playing works of Mozart, Dohnanyi and Haydn. The Mozart quartet in A major, which will open the program, is one of a set of six primarily written for the composer's own amusement and dedicated to Haydn.

De Gogorza, the distinguished pianist, has prepared an unusually interesting program for his annual song recital which will be given at Aeolian Hall on Sunday afternoon, November 25, at 3 o'clock. Miss Helen M. Winslow will be at the piano and the full program is as follows:

- a. Recitatif et air from Iphigénie en Aulide "Diane Impitoyable".....Gluck (1774)
b. Air from "Anacreon" "De ma barque léger".....Gretry (1797)
c. De "Deserteur" "Adieux chère Louise".....Monsigny (1769)

New Oakland Sensible Six Makes its Bow.

New lines, more body room, increased power and greater ease in handling are the outstanding features of the new Oakland Sensible Six model for 1918, now on view in the show rooms of Mr. L. R. White, 57 North avenue, who is the New Rochelle agent for the Oakland automobiles.

"While refinements and improvements extend to all parts of the car, it remains in every sense an Oakland Sensible Six," said Mr. White, discussing the new models. "The several improvements merely strengthen the right to the term 'Sensible Six.' The fundamentals of previous models are strictly adhered to, but the body has more room, the new pleated upholstery adds to comfort and appearance of luxury and the new lines give even a more dashing appearance. One of the biggest single achievements comes in the power plant. Naturally, after Oakland's successful experience with the valve-in-head design, the engine is of that type. The use of new aluminum alloy pistons and the lightening of reciprocal parts add snap and pulling power. It is now so simple that we believe it to be the easiest engine in the world for the motorist to take care of. It now develops 44 horsepower at 2,600 revolutions, making car weight 48 pounds per horsepower—a truly remarkable achievement. The problem arising from the use of the grades of gasoline now on the market has been met by improvements in carburetion through the improved intake and exhaust systems. "The new model comes in five body styles—a five-passenger touring car, three-passenger roadster, four-passenger coupe, five-passenger sedan and a two-passenger roadster-coupe." A complete Oakland service station is maintained by Mr. White.

The Y. M. H. A. Faux Pas.

Secretary of War Baker undoubtedly acted wisely in limiting the organizations permitted to erect recreation buildings within the army camps. He explains that only the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus were allowed to have headquarters in the cantonments, because they are representative, respectively, of the Protestant and the Catholic churches in the United States. According to Secretary Baker, the Young Men's Hebrew Association automatically excluded itself by identifying itself in its recreation work with the Y. M. C. A. We do not know why the Y. M. H. A. chose to adopt this course. Possibly there are weighty reasons that can be urged in its defense. We believe, however, that it erred and lost a splendid opportunity to emphasize the importance of Judaism in American life alongside the two great Christian groupings recognized by the Government. The Y. M. H. A. is bound to suffer for its excess of modesty. Jews will everywhere wonder if the Y. M. H. A. permits itself to be incorporated within the Y. M. C. A., what reasons there are for the perpetuation of the organization, except as a Hebrew branch of the Y. M. C. A. The Y. M. H. A. movement is too important to work under this heavy handicap, but if it finds its influence waning it has only itself to blame.—The Sentinel.

The National Special Assembly of October 28.

An Impression.

By REV. DR. BERNARD DRACHMAN.

Ex Oriente Lux. The sun of hope for which loyal adherents to Judaism have looked for so many years seems to be beginning to shine. Jewish union—the sincere and genuine joining together and co-operation of all the children of Judah in any work for the benefit of their people and faith and the highest ideals of humanity—seems on the verge of realization.

The National Special Assembly called by the Joint Distribution Committee of the various war relief organizations, which held its session Sunday afternoon, October 28, in the synagogue of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation, at Central Park West and Seventieth street, and in honor of which a banquet was held at the Hotel Astor in the evening of the same day, was indeed remarkable and exceptional, in very truth an unprecedented gathering.

The great world war has brought about many astonishing and revolutionary changes in the conditions and in the thoughts of men—some for evil, some for good. Its effect is no less marked upon the Jewish people than it is upon the broad masses of humanity. The first demonstration of this revolutionary effect was given by the very place of the meeting. The synagogue proper of the ancient and venerable Spanish and Portuguese Congregation, which has never before been used for any gathering at all secular in its nature, but has been exclusively reserved for purposes of worship and devotion, was the scene of what might be called a "secular convention." Its walls, which hitherto had heard only the voice of prayer and chanting and the sound of admonition and exhortation, echoed now to the secular phrases of parliamentary procedure, of resolutions, speeches and debate. But the truly orthodox and law-respecting congregation which worships here had felt that in this case it was proper to permit the change; that the purpose of this gathering, though in form secular, was really religious in the highest sense, was devoted to work of the most splendid and genuine Jewish character, and that its coming together in a place of orthodox spiritual purpose could not degrade or in any way lower that place, but could only add to the dignity and the loftiness of character of the assemblage gathered therein.

The character of the assembly was equally noteworthy. We had democracy, Jewish democracy, and brotherhood in the finest and truest sense of the terms. Every element of the Jewish people was represented. There were present millionaires, men of the highest standing in the financial and commercial world, sitting side by side with persons of moderate or humble means. There were representatives of the most radical school of Jewish religious thought side by side with the conservative and the orthodox, and a goodly sprinkling also of those who do not conceive Judaism primarily at all as a religious force, but are more concerned with the secular and economic welfare of the Jewish people. Sephardim and Ashkenazim, Jews of American birth and of origin in all other countries of the world were met together. And from every nook and corner of this vast continent delegates had come to participate in the proceedings. Brotherhood and amity, peace and friendship reigned in the fullest sense of the word.

There was not even a suggestion of disharmony or discord, of dickerings, strife or contention. The complete union of sentiment was so absolute that the meeting almost became uninteresting, so thoroughly were all the delegates present actuated by the same impulse and the same purposes of patriotism. The evening banquet was characterized by the same features. It, too, presented a scene of perfect accord and unity of sentiment. And interesting indeed it was that this unity of Jewish sentiment, both in the afternoon session and at the evening banquet, brought about a distinct rapprochement to Jewish traditional usages and customs. In fact, to that which not so long since was decreed in many "advanced" circles as "orthodox."

The afternoon session took place with all the delegates wearing their head coverings, in accordance with traditional Jewish usage. The repast of the evening was strictly kosher. It began with the pronouncing of a Hebrew benediction by a venerable orthodox rabbi, and concluded with the chanting of the traditional Hebrew grace by another member of the orthodox rabbinat. And, strange to say—or, perhaps, it would be more correct to say that in the not distant past it would have seemed strange—every one seemed to find this perfectly natural, and members of the reform rabbinat present openly showed their pleasure at the observance of the ancient Jewish forms. The speeches and addresses by a number of the most distinguished representatives of Jewish work throughout the country were all actuated by the same spirit—that of devotion to the common Jewish cause and of patriotism and loyalty to our country in the present crisis.

What was the impelling force which brought about this wonderful gathering and filled it with such an incomparable and sublime spirit of devotion to the Jewish cause? It was one of the good and blessed effects of this so terrible war. It was the recognition by all faithful Jews without distinction as to their theological points of difference, that the Jewish people is in grave peril, and that the cause of our ancient faith is hardly less endangered. It was the stirring of the fundamental Jewish impulse which is in the heart of every loyal member of the Jewish people, whether he be a strict observer or not. It was not the cause of charity in the ordinary sense which had called together this great and representative outpouring, it was a higher impulse, although it needed to deal with that which is also the basis and main source of philanthropic activity—money. It was the question of saving the Jewish people from destruction. From every quarter of stricken Europe, from which so many cries and appeals of agony constantly pour, had come a greater wall of pain and suffering. The wailing of the hundreds of thousands of starving Jewish men, women and children, appealing in accents whose agonized intensity had crossed even the great ocean to their more prosperous brethren in this great land for help, for rescue from death. To this appeal there was and could be but one response. It was that of unconditional acquiescence, of absolute determination to strain every nerve to save the afflicted ones on the other side of the ocean, and primarily to raise the fund whose collection is now contemplated—the $10,000,000 to which, when it is complete, Mr. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago will add his single gift of one million.

This great gathering, while the cause and motive of its coming together are of unspeakable sadness, nevertheless contained much which is consoling and hope-bringing to the Jewish heart. It showed that Jewish brotherhood is no dream. It demonstrated that there is an underlying sentiment of unity among all the various elements of the Jewish people. And while contemplating it the thoughtful observer could not fail to come to the conclusion that if the union of all Israel, if a Pan-Judaic movement is possible and feasible for one cause, it should be possible and feasible for another. Why should Jews only be able to come together in order to assist those who suffer physically, who are in need of food and clothing and housing. Why should it not be possible to co-operate for the promotion of those ethical and spiritual interests which are equally or even more important to the true welfare of Israel. And the true lover of his people who hopes for a great and glorious future for the holy people, through which blessing shall come to all mankind, could not fail to indulge in the fond anticipation that somehow and in some way, in God's own time and in God's own way, which perhaps are very near, which perhaps are in the immediate future, there will be such an ingathering of Israel.

Over against such an impressive and doubly significant event, it seems petty to speak of individuals to whom a meed of praise and recognition should be paid on account of the wonderful spirit of Jewish loyalty and earnestness which they have shown and the great part which they have played in bringing about this impressive movement which may be the beginning of a new future for the Jewish people and the Jewish faith. Unstinted praise must be given to Mr. Felix M. Warburg who was undoubtedly the dominant figure of the whole gathering and occasion. His Jewish earnestness, his tact, his generosity, and his truly democratic demeanor could not fail to make the movement which he heads an unqualified and absolute success. Recognition is also due, it seems to the writer, to the Union or Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America from which the idea of the war relief work took its inception and to those who undertook to promote its realization, and in particular Mr. Morris Engelman so active and earnest in every Jewish cause making personal self-sacrifice, and Mr. Albert Lucas, who is now laboring indefatigably as secretary of the Joint Distribution Committee. But disregarding all personalities, the effect of this gathering was a magnificent tribute to the essential unity of American Jewry as of world-wide Jewry and justifies an anticipation of splendid and far-reaching results in all domains of Jewish life in the future.

Holland's Leading Statesman Strongly Advocates Zionism.

More than ordinary interest has been aroused in the declaration in favor of a Jewish state in Palestine, by the Dutch Minister of Finance, W. F. Van Treub, who is recognized not only as the political leader of Holland, but as one of the most clear-sighted statesmen of Europe. His opinions on this subject are important; not merely because of his personal views, but also because his utterances reflect the natural conclusion of the government and people of one of the leading neutral lands—the one which harbors the Carnegie Peace Palace, where it is expected by many that the peace congress will convene after the war.

The Zionist publicity department is indebted to the Jewish Correspondence Bureau of The Hague for a verbatim report of the interview with M. Treub by the well-known Jewish journalist, Jacob Landau, who writes under the pseudonym, "Ben Mose Zeel," during which the Dutch Minister said:

"I have often talked with Herr Jacobus Kann, the leader of the Dutch Zionists, about Zionism, its aims and its importance, and he knows my sympathy with the Zionist idea. The Jewish question is an international problem, the solution of which is of worldly interest. If the international solution of the Jewish question is possible, and if one of the results of the war will be the foundation of a Jewish state, it would be, in my opinion, a very fine thing. One condition, however, is obviously necessary: that the Christian holy places should be placed, somehow, under control of Christian authority or internationalized. But I do not believe there will be any difficulty about this. To give back its own home to the Jewish people is, from the humanitarian point of view, a very desirable ideal, so that philanthropists must wish the Jewish problem to be solved in the Zionist sense. All the efforts to eliminate this question, so painful for the Jews and the world, will therefore have to be directed toward the rehabilitation of the Jewish people in its ancient land.

"The Jewish Congress movement strives to create a legitimate representation of the Jews at the peace conference," suggested the interviewer, and asked, "What does your Excellency think of the chances of these strivings?"

"That is a very difficult question for a statesman of a neutral country," was Minister Treub's reply. "One cannot yet say with certainty what questions will be discussed at the coming peace conference. It will depend on how the peace conference will be held whether the Jewish problem will be discussed. It will depend also on whether the peace conference will concentrate only on the most important points or it will attempt to solve all international questions. If that should be the case, then we may hope that the Jewish question will not be forgotten. As a statesman of a neutral country it is difficult for me to say more. We cannot dictate to the powers what they will discuss at the peace conference."

The "strong man" of the Dutch Ministry ended the interview with these words: "Holland is interested in so reasonable a solution of the Jewish question as the Zionist program strives for. It is easy to understand that, therefore, also large circles in Turkey and its allied countries are working for the realization of Zionism. It is in the line of the historical development of humanity that each people be given the possibility to display freely its forces."

In connection with Minister Treub's views on Zionism and on the effectiveness of the Jewish congresses which are being organized throughout Europe and America, it is interesting to note that the Jews of Holland are planning in the same direction.

At a mass meeting recently held in Amsterdam, and attended by about 600 representatives of the Jewish communities of Holland, S. Kaplansky, the president of the Jewish Socialist Federation, delivered an address on the aims of the American Jewish Congress. A resolution was adopted welcoming the congress in its program. The resolution pointed out that this movement, which had extended to Russia, Poland, Canada, Austria, Greece and other countries, is the beginning of an organization embracing the whole Jewish people for representation at the peace conference. The meeting issued a call for a congress, chosen by plebiscite, to convene in Amsterdam.

The Dutch division of the Alliance Israelite Universelle, the Dutch Zionist Federation and the Dutch branch of the Territorialist movement have jointly selected a committee to organize a demonstration on the day the American Jewish Congress is convened.

Non-Jewish Names of Soldiers and Sailors.

Many Jewish young men enlisting in the army and the navy have adopted the custom of changing their names when these sound, as they think, too Jewish. This habit leads the Chicago Israelite to say:

"In glancing over the names of the men who had won commissions at Fort Sheridan one finds, seemingly, the names of Jews, 'like angels' visits,' few and far between. The inference formulated itself that racial discrimination may have been at the root of this. However, it was the racial discrimination of our Jewish young men to their own Jewish names that accounts for this gap!"

"It seems that Jewish young men disown or disavow their Jewish surnames when enlisting, and if present war history does not exactly team with Jewish names it is because our young men recast their names into a more Anglo-Saxon mold. The son of a prominent local Zionist and writer is known in camp by the unhebraic pseudonym of 'Carr'; another Jewish young man shines under the nom de plume of 'Russell'; Mr. Painkovsky prefers the more illustrious name of 'Paine,' ad infinitum, and only very few seem to stick to their right names. These painful efforts to change Jewish names into some non-Jewish cognomen goes deeper than the perfunctory flinging away of a name. It hurts the Jew racially; for when one looks over the army list, instead of seeing a splendid roster of Jewish names that reflect the patriotism of our co-religionists, exemplified in full measure, the serried rows of non-Jewish names would make one believe that very few Jews had responded to their country's call. "In England not so long ago two young men won the Victoria Cross for unusual valor. The name of one was Smith and the other Burke, and only when it was revealed that Mr. Smith had been Mr. Snitkowsky, and Mr. Burke had been Mr. Berkowitz, could the Jews thrill with the consciousness that it was their own flesh and blood who had done their glorious bit in their country's trial and hardship and so shone in the glory! It will also be remembered that a few years ago when Sammy Meisenberg was brought back a hero it was disclosed that he had enlisted under the name of Samuel Martin. "For many years the cry has been flung at the Jew that he has not been patriotic, but proud memories of patriotic service by the Jew can hardly be evoked by non-Jewish surnames. The Jewish names that are repudiated are certainly no less euphonious than Richardson, Russell, Carr or Riley, etc. The man who flounders when giving a Jewish name may possess a personality of the right stuff, but it can only be reached under many, many flimsy names. A name is so valuable an asset that men generally commit felonies only under aliases or assumed names, and penitentiaries meet out punishment by taking away the distinguishing mark of a name from a man and assigning him a number instead. "It is more than an individual matter when Jews in the army and navy cast off their Jewish names like one would an old cloak, but they incidentally toss away some grip of loyalty, some grip of reality, some drop of Jewishness, that looms high and higher with the years in the scale of proportion. "We Jews have a hard task before us in every country, and the cry that the Jew is not a patriot is far-flung. May it not be that this light renunciation of Jewish-sounding names by Jews in the army and navy is accountable? "In serving one's country one may add glory to one's name. So why unlik honor from a name that is specifically yours and weave it round some meaningless, unrecognizable name, and thus discount the patriotic traditions of our race? "The Jewish young men by eliminating their Jewish surnames are permitting a slur to be cast on the patriotism of the Jew in the army and navy."

THE SEVEN YEARS' SLAVE.

Once upon a time there was a man who wished above all things to have a son, that he might instruct him in the Torah. At last God heard his prayer, and granted him a son, who, as he grew older, became so learned in the law that his father was exceedingly proud of him.

When the youth reached the age of twenty-five, a grave misfortune befell him. His good and noble father died. After the time of mourning had elapsed his mother said to him: "My son, here is the money your father has left you. Go out into the world and seek your fortune." So the young man obeyed his mother and left her house.

He traveled many days until at last he saw a man plowing. On the plough there was a book, and as the man worked, he read.

"Peace be unto thee, father," the youth greeted him.

"Tell me, father, why, since thou seemest to be a scholar, dost thou do such humble work?"

"My son," answered the old man, who was none other than Elijah the Prophet, "I till the soil that my wife and children may have plenty; that the poor and needy who come to my door may eat; that the cattle of the fields and the fowl of the air may also eat. For this reason am I doing such work."

"God gave you knowledge. You have taught me an occupation. Now what I need is a good and faithful mate with whom I may walk in the path of righteousness all the days of my life."

"That I can easily give you," promised the prophet, and he led the youth before a maiden who was as good as she was beautiful.

"Will you take this man for your husband?" asked Elijah.

"If it is God's will, it is also mine," she answered modestly.

A week after the wedding Elijah came to visit the pair. He found that the young man had entirely forsaken the study of the Torah and was idling away his time in his bride's company.

"You shall serve in slavery for seven years, as a punishment for the seven days you have wasted," the prophet cried, and left the house.

The young wife, who knew nothing of what had happened, noticed her husband's gloomy face and believing that he missed his mother, proposed that they should visit her. In the course of their journey, they came upon a great river where they sat down to rest. The young man went to swim in the water, but a strong wave carried him away. Elijah wrapped him in his mantle and carried him far away into a distant land, where he was sold into slavery. The wife waited for a long time, but he did not return. With a breaking heart she tried to bless the Lord. "For," said she, "God's will be done. Shall I not thank him for the curse as well as for the blessing?"

The unfortunate woman begged her father to build an inn for her. She could in this way meet many travelers, and perhaps obtain information of her lost husband. Many wanderers came and went, but her patience still remained unrewarded. One day a company of merchants and slaves stopped before the inn. Among the latter she saw one who made her heart beat quickly. It was her beloved husband. He told her all that had befallen him since he had left her, and the cause of his exile. He had still two years to serve, after which he would return to her a free man. They bade each other a loving farewell, and once more he followed his master into slavery.

After two long and weary years, he returned. Elijah brought him home safely, and he lived happily for many years with his wife, nor did he again neglect the work of his hands or the study of the word of God.—The Ark.

A Restored Eden.
Canon Parfit, regarded as one of the leading authorities on economic conditions in Mesopotamia, has written an article on the marvelous changes which have occurred in that country since the British occupation. He says:

"In less than two years British occupation has transformed Lower Mesopotamia into something approaching a paradise. The population of Bussrah has enormously increased, and the inhabitants have never been so well off. Excellent wharves have been erected on the banks of the great Shat-el-Arab for the ocean-going steamers which admits of as much work to be done economically in a few hours that under the Turkish regime took days to accomplish. Every creek has been bridged in this 'Venice of the East'; numbers of roads have been made, electric lights have been installed, electric trams have invaded this long-neglected port, while an equally wonderful transformation is already taking place in the city of Bagdad.

"Thousands of men have repaired the river banks; the Euphrates is becoming navigable, and, for the first time in centuries, there have been no pernicious floods this year in Lower Mesopotamia. Two railway lines are spreading away to the north; an embankment twenty miles in length has recovered for agricultural purposes a marshy area of forty-eight square miles, where wheat fields, vegetable gardens, dairy farms and poultry farms, all under the care of professional farmers from India, are adequately providing for the needs of the British forces in Mesopotamia and preparing to send food supplies to the British Isles.

"These astoundingly rapid changes are only illustrations of what can easily be done by a just and wise administration of a fertile country like Mesopotamia."

The Jew Reigns
Leon Trotzky is a Jew whose real name is Braunstein. It is a strange irony of history that the Jews, who invented capitalism, should lead the movement to destroy it. In ancient times Jews were the capitalists, the money lenders; of the Roman world. Through the crash of the barbarian invasion they saved enough to be the financiers of the middle ages. When the industrial revolution came and new, huge demands arose for the means to finance the buildings and machinery of production, it was the Jews who taught those streams to flow from savers to investment houses, and so to industry. In all lands they have been the kings of finance. Finance is the life blood, the vital elements, of the whole capitalistic order.

Perhaps it is not strange that the keen eyes of a race which saw the possibilities of capital should also be the first to see its flaws. Jews like Karl Marx and Ferdinand Lasalle, who saw these flaws, founded the socialist school. And so today, in all lands, we see the penetrating Jewish intellect engaged both in managing capitalism and in working to undermine it. Leon Trotzky in Petrograd, Morris Hillquit in New York, these are types of the underminers. The Rothschilds, Jacob Schiff, Otto Kahn are types of the upholders. Both the Jewish capitalist and the Jewish socialist are necessary. Without capitalism we should still be back in the mire of barbarism. Upon our material prosperity are built all our institutions of education, art, democracy. Upon that prosperity rests, in a large degree, the possibility of mass morality. Yet, without the restraining criticism exercised by socialism, and crystallized in social reform, the capitalistic order would have made of us a world of proletarian slaves, living under the lash of masters. The Jewish intellect has set the riddle. Can it solve it? Can a new Karl Marx, a new Baron Rothschild, arise to the conception of a new social order which will give us the vast productivity of which the capitalists rightly boast, and at the same time a fairer distribution of that productivity and prosperity which the Socialists justly demand?—New York Evening Mail.

The Italian Government has recognized the Jewish nationality, and has classified it as "friendly alien." A decision to that effect was issued recently by the Italian War Office, following the protests of a number of Jews who had migrated to that country from Turkey against their removal from the war zones. After careful consideration of the protest, the Minister of War pronounced it meritorious, and granted permission for them to remain on the ground, that they did not belong to the Turkish, but to the Jewish nationality.
