A STRANGE GET

By HALITVACK

"Reb Nachman" they called him all over the neighborhood, and that sounds very much unlike New York. But he was different. He had retired from business with considerable wealth, and he gave himself over to the "Torah and good deeds."

"What a fine old age his would have been, if it wasn't for his daughter Leah!" they all used to bemoan. And it was true. Reb Nachman was the father of several sons and daughters, all of them well-to-do and universally respected. But his daughter Leah had gone a bit wrong. No, not so bad as you might think it. It was just a little matter of geography, as is the case with most morals, or perhaps all. In Newport or at Palm Beach, and certain portions of Manhattan, it would have meant nothing at all. Leah had married a divorced man.

That was how the story went. She was living with a divorced man. And the whole thing is difficult to understand.

It would have been either the one thing or the other. If the law of the land was not law, and a divorce granted by a judge was no divorce, then a marriage performed at the city hall by a city official was not a marriage. In that case, then, the man Leah had married had been neither a divorced man nor a married man. On the other hand, if a civil marriage is considered binding, so also should a civil divorce be loosening. If they had settled down to the point that Leah was living with a man without a ritual marriage, there would have been some logic in that, and sufficient grievance for Reb Nachman. But that point was never raised. The cry was that Leah 'Reb Nachman's was living with a divorced man. But it is no use arguing against popular prejudices.

Reb Nachman was pious, of course, but he was not a hot-headed, unreasoning fanatic. He grieved much over his daughter, but he did not break with her. He did not disown her, nor estrange himself from her. He visited her often, and each time he tried to persuade her to obtain a civil divorce from the husband. It made no impression at all on him that Leah loved her husband. That he had no understanding of. Love? Why, a woman loves her husband when she has him, so it is written. But she gets a divorce from that husband and she goes and marries another, and then she loves that other. One loves what God gives.

A time came and Leah took dangerously ill. The doctor said it was it was. Reb Nachman took it upon himself to tell Leah.

"My child," he began, "you are ill, you—we are all of us but poor mor-yourself of this before you go. May God grant that the doctor is wrong, but he thinks you are in a very poor way."

"Does the doctor say I am going to die?" she asked.

They brought the doctor to her side and he said to her:

"Well, you know, while there is life, there is hope. But if you are anxious to make your peace with your God, why—I—I think you might do so."

"And what would you have me do?" Leah asked the father.

"Just this," Reb Nachman replied, "divorce your husband. You can do that now all by yourself, with only two witnesses. Say before them that you renounce him, that he is nothing to you."

"I'd do it," she answered, "if Jack would promise me that he won't feel hurt. I will ask him."

Jack was the husband. A scoffer at all religions from his earliest days, Jack cared little as to the significance of the proposition. But he was a fond and an indulgent husband, and if it should be the means of securing for her a peaceful death—Why, let her say all the words old Reb Nachman ever cared to put into her mouth. What did words, what did ceremonies, matter?

And so Reb Nachman had his way, Leah made solemn renunciation of her husband before two witnesses, and then she settled down to die. But the strange part of it was that she did not die. She got better, and after a time she was as well as ever.

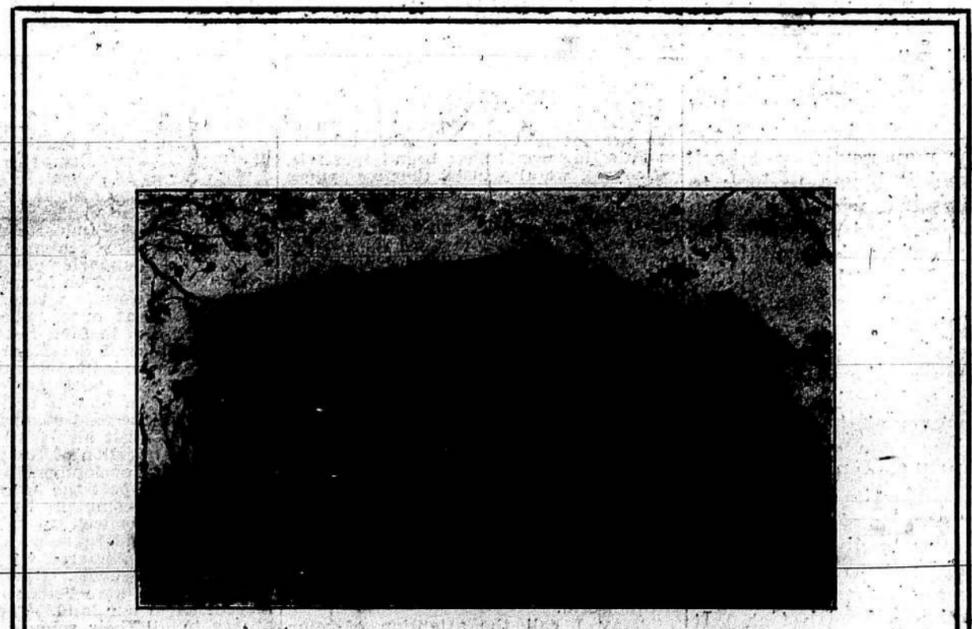

Then another strange thing happened. The husband would not live with her. It rankled in him that she should ever have been willing to renounce him, no matter under what circumstances. He was a man of substance, he left her the house they lived in and made her a liberal monthly allowance, but he would not come near her.

"All she cared," he said, with deep injury, "was to get into heaven for herself, and it didn't matter to her where she left me. It is like the story of two friends traveling in the desert with only one drink of water between them, and one sneaking off with it and leaving the other to perish."

That was what Leah's husband set forth in argument with the doctor, who was a personal friend of the family.

And this is how the doctor tried to answer him back:

"The cases don't compare, there is no analogy at all. But, speaking of a drop of water in the desert,

NEW JEWISH COMMUNAL CENTRE FOR FLATBUSH.

Last Sunday afternoon the cornerstone for a Jewish communal centre was laid at East Thirteenth street and Avenue I, Flatbush—a district which has had a wonderfully large increase in Jewish population lately.

a case of acute blood poisoning, and her days, perhaps her hours, were numbered. He said so to the husband, and also to Reb Nachman. And tals. We may die any time. You may die, and don't come before God with your heavy sin upon your shoulders. You must do something to purge

Now, it is a strange thing that death has its worst terrors to people farthest removed from it. Leah remained surprisingly cool.

I'll tell another more fitting story. I used it once before, by way of showing how either half of the world is using up its energies in trying to bring the other round to its own pet views. This is the story: Omdad and Hamdad were traveling in the desert of Umlalah. They ran short of water, till one day there were just a few drops left in the goatskin, enough for the one man to drink: Now, Omdad and Hamdad were two devoted friends, and each one insisted upon laying down his life for the other. Omdad said Hamdad should drink the water and live, and Hamdad said Omdad should drink and live. Each was insistent, till in the end they both came to blows. You understand? Omdad was smiting Hamdad to make Hamdad live and Hamdad was smiting Omdad to make Omdad live. Every now and then they both stopped to moisten their lips, so as to be able to continue the battle. And in this way all the water was consumed, and the friends died all the sooner from their mutual blows and exertion. There you are, my friend, you are making yourself and your wife miserable, all for the sake of quibbling. There is no sense at all in what you say.

"Well," answered the husband, "sense or no sense, I am not going back to her. But she can divorce me if she wants to, and I'll make it easy for her."

Which would sound as if he had some new woman in mind. But that is not to the interest of the story. The man never went back to Leah, and it began to look to the doctor as if it was all his own fault, for, if he had not made the mistake in saying she would die, nothing would have happened. So the doctor went and told Rab Nachman that he was ready to marry Leah, in the right orthodox way, as soon as she was free and was willing to have him. And it happened that Leah was willing before even she was free. And then it did not take her long to get free. Her husband proved true to his word and afforded her sufficient cause to divorce him. But all did not go so smoothly. Rab Nachman insisted that there should be also a Jewish Get. It took quite a while to induce the scoffer to stand up to it, but he did in the end, for he was not one of those stupid and spiteful ones. And so Reb Nachman had his way. But the Kasha remains. Why a Get where there had been no Kidushin? The answer is, Reb Nachman was deceiving himself, and he knew he was doing it. He wanted to make the entire affair look clean in his sight.

The Jewish Views of Talaat Pasha, Grand Vizier of Turkey.
Various extracts have been published from an interview which Talaat Pasha, Turkish Grand Vizier, gave to Julius Becker, of the staff of the "Vossische Zeitung" (Berlin), and which were published in that publication on December 31, 1917. The Zionist Publicity Department is now in a position to furnish a complete translation of this notable interview.

Mr. Becker begins by saying that "In the rearrangement of Europe, in fact, of the entire world, after the war, a problem previously disposed of merely by words—namely, the Jewish problem—will demand solution. Lately, the German press has been devoting much space to the Zionist aspirations in Palestine, and the attitude of the Turkish Government in reference thereto, was given special discussion. I, therefore deem it proper to ascertain from the leader of the Turkish Government himself just what the attitude of his government is.

"In transcribing my interview with that official, I wish to point out that this is the first time that the Turkish Government has, during the entire war, given expression to its views regarding Zionism, in so explicit a manner. Therefore, the views of Talaat Pasha, supplementing the British declaration and friendly attitude of Count Czernin, assume particular significance.

"The following is the detailed conversation I had with the Grand Vizier in the presence of the Shiek ul Islam. "Your highness has been so kind as to grant me this interview upon the recommendation of Count Bernstorff, and are, no doubt, aware of the object of my visit.

"I had intended to avail myself of the kind invitation of the Ottoman Government to visit Palestine in person so as to get first hand information of the conditions prevailing there. My journey, unfortunately, has become impossible, because of the important military developments, and I should, therefore, be thankful to your highness for giving me your view as to what will be the attitude of the Royal Government in the future toward the Jewish aspirations in Palestine.

"To this Talaat Pasha replied: 'We have always been most friendly to our Jewish co-citizens, and the Jews of our empire have always been as dear to us as the other citizens. Turkey is the one land which has never known an anti-Semitic movement such as exists in other lands. In our country there have never been any anti-Semitic influences which have in any way influenced the politics of our land.'

"I am well aware of that," remarked Mr. Becker, "and it would be interesting in the present political situation if the Turkish Government were to announce that it views with favor the colonization movement of the Jews in Palestine." "This movement already has the favor of the Turkish Government, for otherwise, the existence and the growth of the present flourishing Jewish colonies in Palestine would have been impossible. Of course, we also insist that we cannot grant the Jews any right that the other citizens do not enjoy."

"Your highness has no doubt read the letter of Mr. Balfour to Lord Rothschild, in which the British Minister promised, in the name of his government, a national homeland for the Jewish people in Palestine."

"Here the Minister interrupted with the remark: "But it is a bluff" (mais est une blague).

"Perhaps, your highness; but this letter has had a tremendous influence upon the public opinion of the whole world."

"I am absolutely convinced that behind these promises there are no sincere motives. England writes to Lord Rothschild as if it did to Scherif Hussein, and in the end nothing will come of it, be it to Hussein or to the Jews. Their only object is to gain sympathy and to win over to their cause the Jews of the entire world."

"May I call the attention of your highness to the fact that in Balfour's letter there is not a single word directed against the Turkish Government? I have reason to assume that this suspicious circumstance is due to the influence of the English Zionists who, though good Englishmen, maintain as Zionists, a consistently loyal attitude to the Ottoman Government."

"Of course, I have noticed it, and I have also ascribed it to the loyalty of the Zionists. Anyhow, it is an act of wisdom on the part of the Zionists, if they do not permit themselves to be humbugged by the Entente."

"Would it not be possible for the Turkish Government to offer greater possibilities for Jewish colonization in Palestine? Up until now there have been certain administrative restrictions which prevented the extension of the colonization."

"If the Ottoman Government has been compelled to adopt certain restrictions, it is because the Jews who immigrated to Palestine were mostly from Russia, and in consequence of the laws of that land were compelled to retain their Russian citizenship. Out of that arose the quite abnormal and undesirable situation that a great part of the population were not Ottoman citizens. Particularly unbearable was this situation in this, that under the rule of the capitulations and the foreign consular courts, the foreign citizens were able to escape the jurisdiction of the Turkish courts by sheltering themselves behind their consul. The consuls, on their part, sought to extend their position, with the result that there were continual conflicts between their governments and the Turkish authorities. It is obvious that such conditions could not be satisfactory. This accounts for certain restrictions upon Jewish colonization. After Turkey will have been freed of the capitulations and the consular-justices, it will be possible to remove these restrictions. Naturally, there is always the condition precedent that the Jews who remain in the land disavow their former citizenship and become citizens of the Ottoman Empire and assume all the obligations and duties attached to such citizenship.

"Would your highness be good enough to give your particular views of the most important points which concern the Zionists, with reference to their work in Palestine, in the first place, on the question of free immigration and the unrestricted agricultural developments?"

"As far as the question of free immigration is concerned, the explanation I have already made is a sufficient answer. It is self-understood that every immigration must take cognizance of the natural boundaries of the land question, and it would be impossible if hundreds of thousands would stream into Palestine all at once. Such a number the land could, in fact, not support. In their agricultural development we have never placed any hindrances in the way of the Jews in Palestine. On the contrary, we know how to appreciate what Palestine in the field of agriculture."

"But we must also take into consideration the question of the free spiritual and cultural development of the Jews."

"In this respect the Jews have never had reason to complain. They have had in the cities as well as in the colonies their own kindergartens and schools; nor have we interfered with the founding of higher schools. I believe that the Jews have nowhere been so free in this respect as in our land. They enjoy full liberty in all their schools, to teach in their own Hebrew language, and to make use of this language for whatever they wanted. And as regards the free exercise of their religion, the Jews will in the future, as in the past, not be hindered, for, as a matter of fact, tolerance for all non-Mohammedans is taken for granted."

"Does your highness believe that it would be possible to give the Jews in Palestine a certain local autonomy?"

"I must repeat what I have already said, that it is impossible for us to show any preference whatsoever to the Jews. They can enjoy only those rights which our other citizens enjoy. But we have already a law which provides for a quite far-reaching autonomy, and, in a new measure which we are about to put before Parliament, we propose to go further in that direction. The local communities and provinces would receive more independence than they now have. According to these provisions the Jews would be able to fulfill all their justified aspirations in Palestine."

"Would the Turkish Government be prepared to demand autonomy for the Jews in Palestine by abolishing the existing provincial governments?"

"According to the new law, all communities of 5,000 and more will have the right of local autonomy, and even the smaller Jewish communities may depend upon the good will of the Ottoman Empire. In general, I assure you that our government is well disposed towards the Jews, and that it is prepared to deal with all these questions with the same good will that it has already manifested. I am glad to authorize you to publish what I have said to you if you think that it will help to gratify public opinion."

Lady Communal Worker—

Interesting News of the Mission to Palestine.

London, May 10, 1918.

The report that Henri Bergson has offered his services as a member of the faculty of the projected Hebrew university at Jerusalem is not quite correct. The facts, as I understand them, are these: A few weeks ago M. Sokoloff, the distinguished leader of Russian Zionism, who has been in England practically throughout the war, went over to Paris, and there enlisted the sympathy and support of the leaders of French Jewry for a Jewish National Home in Palestine. M. Bergson was particularly attracted by the proposal to found a great Hebrew university at Jerusalem, and offered all the assistance he was capable of. The name of Bergson carries great weight in France, and now, that Ehrlich is dead he is perhaps the greatest academic personality in Jewry. It is worth recalling that Ehrlich, before the war, was enthusiastic for a Hebrew university, and collaborated with Dr. Weizmann in drafting a scheme which the outbreak of the war suspended.

Bergson, though of Russian parentage, has hitherto taken very little interest in things Jewish. His participation in the Hebrew university testifies to the force of the appeal of that project in particular, and of Jewish nationalism in general.

Thirteen members of one Jewish family here are, or have been, serving in the war. This must surely be a world record. It is the Annenberg family. They are twelve boys and a girl, the latter being a staff nurse at the Military Heart Hospital. Of the males, Lance-Corporal B. Annenberg, of the Kensington Rifles; Private B. Annenberg, of the Devonshire Regiment, and Private S. Annenberg, of the West Yorkshires, have been killed in action. Private J. Annenberg, of the London Rifle Brigade, has been drowned at sea, and Trooper D. Annenberg, of the Rough Riders, is missing. Among those that can still be got at are Sapper J. Annenberg, of the Royal Engineers, who has lost the sight of one eye; Private M. Annenberg, of the Border Regiment, and Private A. Annenberg, of the Devons, both wounded. The others apparently have got through so far without injury. They include Lance-Corporal M. Annenberg, of the Judeans; Private H. Annenberg, of the East Kent Regiment; Second Assistant Mechanic Annenberg, of the Royal Air Forces, and Gunner I. Annenberg, of the United States Artillery.

Gasoline supplies are being carefully guarded in this country from wasteful use. There are a whole number of regulations preventing gasoline, or, as we more usually call it here, petrol, from being used for anything but most essential purposes. The automobile, for example, may not be used to go shopping with, or to go to the theater, or for any one of the many dozens of things of that sort, or even to take a party to a railway station, if there be any other means of getting to that railway station. To show how tightly the lines are drawn, I find that one lady of the Rothschild family was fined $15 at Brighton (a popular beach resort for Londoners) for causing gasoline to be used unlawfully. It appears that she hired an automobile to take her from Worthing to Brighton (a distance of a few miles) to preside at a meeting of the Society for the Distribution of Jewish Literature among the Troops at the Front and in Hospitals, of which she is president. It was argued that she ought to have taken a train and walked the little piece at each end of the journey.

A meeting of the Jewish Historical Society was held last week at the Mocatta Library, University College, London, to hear a paper by Cyril Picciotto on "The Legal Position of the Jews in England as Shown in the Plea Rolls of the Jewish Exchequer." The topic sounds a pretty dry-as-dust one, but was found to be exceedingly interesting by the audience, practically all of whom were more or less specialists in these Jewish historical questions.

The lecturer dealt with the legal position of the Jews in England, mainly in the thirteenth century and prior to the expulsion, and with the nature and functions of the Jewish exchequer of that period, citing various enactments in regard to the Jews who were considered the special property of the King. But he contended that they were by no means the oppressed Jews they were supposed to have been, as the Plea Rolls revealed an extraordinary atmosphere of fairness and impartiality between the Jews and Christians. Mr. Picciotto thought it was demonstrated that the Jews of the period in question had enforceable rights in property, and that a place had been found for them under the feudal system, and in spite of the fact that it had been stated that, while the Jew had belonged to the King, there were many things in law which the King could do, but which were rarely, if ever, enforced. It was true that the Jew was heavily taxed, but the lecturer protested against the theory of rightlessness. The pleas showed that the Jewish exchequers were presided over by justices of Jews, who seem to have enjoyed equal rights with other justices, and even concerned themselves with such crimes as murder.

Sir Lionel Abrahams, in moving a vote of thanks to the lecturer, said that there was a real tendency to take extreme views on such vague questions as to whether Jews had any rights in the Middle Ages. What Mr. Picciotto had set forth in his paper would always be an important stage in the development of the opinion of historians on that subject. In regard to the taxation of the Jew, and imprisonment in the event of his failing to pay, that was an illustration of the instability of Jewish rights.

Lucien Wolf seconded the vote. He agreed with the lecturer as to the status of the Jews of the pre-expulsion period, and said that he had long been under the impression that they had exaggerated the rightlessness of the Jews of that period. Until the religious difference between the Jew and his Christian neighbor became accentuated by passion, there was very little in the situation of the Jew of which to complain.

I have seen a very interesting dispatch about the experiences of the Zionist Commission in Palestine. In Dr. Weizmann the commission has a leader of exceptional ability, and his remarkable personality has met with full recognition from the British authorities, both in Egypt and in Palestine. Recently he paid a special visit to headquarters as General Allenby's guest, and expressed himself as being highly satisfied with the results of his interviews with the military and political chiefs.

"You may say," he told the correspondent I am quoting, "that our program has the approval of the supreme authorities in the country. But tell the Jewish world at the same time that it would be childish to expect the land immediately to flow with milk and honey because a commission has arrived. And especially tell them that of all the needs of Palestine the supreme need is victory, and a complete and definite liberation of the country. All other wants must bow and yield to this imperative necessity. For some time even reconstruction is only desirable so far as it does not interfere with the military task of the moment. This especially applies to politics."

"Those who expect the immediate proclamation of spectacular political formulas must realize at once, and for many days, that nothing is less compatible with military efficiency than political excitement. The commission will not allow any questions to arise on our side which would be likely to distract public or official attention from the one thing that matters—military effort. Within these limits the field lies open before us; we are sure of the friendly help of the authorities and the devoted collaboration of the Palestinian Jewry, that little host of daring pioneers whose work will some day earn the admiration of the civilized world. We have secured complete unanimity with them, and hope to attain the same unanimity with our Arab neighbors. If the Jewish peoples abroad also do their duty in assisting our effort with all their resources, we may be sure that the dawn of peace will unveil a Palestine possessing a well-organized and healthy framework for colonization, armed with modern intellectual, technical and financial apparatus, ready with scientific plants for the systematic development of the country, for the good of Jews and Arabs, crowned by the nucleus of a Hebrew university, and with friendly neighbors within and powerful supporters without."

On April 10 the commission arrived at Jerusalem and was entertained at luncheon by the Military Governor, Colonel Storrs. Among those present were the Mufti, the father and custodian of the Holy Land; the chiefs of the Greek and Armenian hierarchy, and some of the leading Jews. On the 11th a formal reception by the Jews was organized on the Mount of Olives at the former residence of Sir John Gray Hill, which was recently purchased by the Zionists to serve as the seat of a future Hebrew university. Immense crowds gathered with banners.

Dr. Weizmann, addressing them in Hebrew and English, said: "From this summit, where the Prophets once stood, I am proud to express to Mr. Balfour, Mr. Lloyd George, and the whole British nation, the gratitude of the Jewish nation, and I beg the British officers here present to transmit our feelings to General Allenby, the deliverer of Palestine. Conquests and conquerors come and go, but the freedom of Jerusalem and the names connected with its liberation will live forever."

He said that the Jews intended to live in peace and friendship and respect of mutual rights with all the inhabitants of Palestine. Accepting the symbolic silver key made by the pupils of Bezalel Arts School, Dr. Weizmann declared that it would be handed to Mr. Balfour, the great-hearted author of the Declaration, for safe custody until the day of the definite settlement.

A stirring address was also delivered by Captain James Rothschild, of the Jewish Regiment. All the speeches were received with enthusiastic ovations, and the ceremony developed into an imposing and historic manifestation.

It is freely circulated in Washington political circles that the sympathetic declaration of Secretary Lansing in behalf of the Czecho-Slovacks and the Jugo-Slavs may be a forerunner of a similar Jewish declaration. The State Department has refused to comment on the matter.

Prof. J. F. Ritt, a Jewish young man, lecturer of mathematics at Columbia University, has been asked by the War Department to come to Washington for the purpose of rendering expert aid to the Ordnance Division. Professor Ritt is considered to be one of the greatest mathematicians in the country.

Hooligans have looted a synagogue in the town of Viertel Vidicon, near Zurich, Switzerland. The scrolls were desecrated. The vile deed caused deep sorrow among the Jews of Zurich and of Vidicon. About twenty years ago a son was born to Rumanian Jews living in England; a year later they returned to Rumania. When war broke out the boy expressed his determination to fight for England. Washington has received through indirect channels a semi-official report of the protest, which, as has been recently announced, the Moslems had sent to Arthur Balfour, against the declaration of the British Government in favor of a Jewish homeland in Palestine. The protest attempts to prove the inadvisability of the proposed Jewish state, and urges, instead, a Moslem state in Palestine.

The Council of Young Men's Hebrew and Kindred Organizations has notified its constituent societies that, for patriotic reasons, building operations should not be carried on during the war, except where, through small changes by way of repairs, a plant might be increased considerably in efficiency. It was agreed, also, that, where funds were appropriately raised, such funds be invested in Liberty bonds during the war.

President Wilson has been invited by S. M. Solomon, of the Belgian Art Galleries, to inspect a statue group entitled "America Forging the Happiness of France," now on exhibition at the Corcoran Art Galleries. The group is the work of the Jewish artist, Alexander Zeitlin, famous for his statue of King Edward of England, and has been donated to the American nation. It is hoped that the statue will be permanently placed at Washington.

The Russian Jewish youth, especially the demobilized Russian soldiers, are enthusiastic over the formation of Jewish legions for service in Palestine. Thousands are applying to the Zionist organization for enrollment in the legion. The difficulty, however, lies in the fact that there is no way of transporting a legion to Palestine. Nevertheless, the enthusiastic Jewish young men are organizing themselves, and are waiting for the opportunity to go to Palestine.

The Bishop of Cracow, the municipality, the Mayor, and other notables of this second largest city in Galicia are being opposed by the police in their efforts to put an end to the anti-Jewish riots which are of daily occurrence. The police would not permit the publication of a resolution adopted by the municipality condemning these excesses for an appeal signed by the bishop and other leading citizens. On the other hand, the anti-Semitic propaganda is not interfered with.

The Red Magen David Conference. American Jewry has been stirred by the wonderful spirit displayed by its sons in responding to the call for the defense of Palestine. Hundreds of our best young men have joined the ranks of the British unit to reclaim our old home land. They left home and family, often wife and child, because this call of duty was stronger than all their other ties.

Simultaneously in all parts of the United States and Canada many have immediately concerned themselves in providing for the comforts and necessities of these Jewish soldiers and relieving somewhat the burden of those left behind. This was the origin of the Red Magen David.

To-day, but a short time since the first of these originated, there are already branches in Boston, Chicago, Baltimore, Nevada, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Montreal, Manchester, New York, Hartford, Paterson, St. John, Cincinnati, Detroit and others.

It became at once evident that a central organization is necessary to insure uniformity and coordination. With this in view the New York office is calling a conference of the Red Magen David for June 15-16-17 in New York City.

The conference will consider the aims of the organization, medical aid for the Legioners, aid for the families of the Legioners, as well as purely organization problems.

To the conferences are invited all branches of the Red Magen David, as also women's organizations, and all other organizations interested in work for Palestine.

Jewish Women! Respond to this call and help those who are giving their all to reclaim our country Eretz Israel.

The Ukrainians and the Jews in Austria.

The Jewish Press Bureau in Stockholm receives the following communication from Vienna:

On March 25 a conference of representatives of all the Ukrainian parties in Galicia took place in Lemberg. One of the demands of the conference was the formation of a special Ukrainian province within the state home of Austria of Eastern Galicia and the Ukrainian portion of the Bukowina. The conference declared that the Poles, the Jews and other national minorities will be fully secured in the right to national autonomy, and will be given equal political rights. By this resolution the Austrian Ukrainians have doubtless, under the influence of the nationality policy of the neighboring Ukrainian republic, resumed the trend of policy which they entered upon in 1905, but which they afterward regretfully enough abandoned. It was the president of the Ukrainians in the Austrian Reichsrath, who in 1906, during the debates on the electoral reform, demanded the recognition of the Jews as a separate nationality, with a representation of their own. The foundation of a Jewish political club in the first Reichsrath based on general suffrage is largely due to the mutual assistance given by the Jews and the Ukrainians to each other at the elections. The Ukrainians acted on these lines because their own interests demanded it. Without the national emancipation of the strong Jewish minority which has the decisive influence in the towns, the removal of the domination of the Polish nobility and bureaucracy would be rendered impossible. Later on, however, the Ukrainian policy was detracted to the bitter discontent of a good many of the Ukrainian politicians who had the foresight to see the consequences out of considerations of temporary advantage into a compromise with the Poles, which was effectuated at the expense of the Jews. This compromise found its expression in the electoral reform for the Galician Landtag decided upon in 1914. The Ukrainians agreed then to the Jews being included in the Polish registers, and thus the Jews were legally incorporated into the Polish political body. Simultaneously within the Polish political body the Jews were deprived of all representation worth mentioning. The war has rendered the Ukrainian-Polish relations exceedingly acute. The imperial rescript which announced the autonomous organization of Galicia and which stood in connection with the manifesto of the Central Empires on Poland, was nothing less than a conversion of this country into an autonomous Polish State, in which the Ukrainians will enjoy a very modest measure of national cultural rights, and in which the Jews would be fully deprived of national rights, and would even be oppressed politically. The draft of the constitution, as worked out by the Polish club and which has become known in its substantial, leaves no doubts in this respect. The only way out of the difficulty was naturally a "rapprochement" between the Ukrainians and the Jews, which, for the first time, found its expression in the above mentioned Ukrainian resolution of the conference. It does not go, of course, without saying that the Jews can without contradiction accept the division of Galicia into two, and the unification of Eastern Galicia and the Ukrainian Bukowina into one Ukrainian political body. The Jews do not want to be split and atomized by the coming reorganization of Austria, and they must therefore only have the right to national autonomy within the limits of a Ukrainian province, but also be given the possibility of being united in some legally recognized form with the Jewish communities beyond the frontier of the new Ukrainian province. At the same time, guarantees must be given for the actual carrying out of the political emancipation and for the minimum of the national rights in the administration, in the judiciary and so forth. At any rate, the resolution of the Ukrainians must be considered as the first step in this direction, which is to be greeted. Further steps in the same direction seeking the good will of the two peoples are quite within practical possibility.

The National Demands of the Austrian Jewry—The Promise of the Government.

The Jewish Press Bureau in Stockholm communicates from Vienna: A Jewish delegation, consisting of Messrs. Dr. P. Straucher, Dr. Ad. Stand and B. Stricker, members of the Austrian Parliament, lately had several conferences with Prime Minister Zeidler and Minister of the Interior Toggensberg on the Jewish question in Austria. The delegation, which represented the Zionist and nationalist wings of Austrian Jewry, laid down before the government the claims of the Jews in connection with the coming constitutional reorganization of the Austrian empire. The Prime Minister gave his promise to support so far as possible the demands of the Jews.

The memorandum handed to him by the delegation brings forward the following program:

1. The acknowledgment of the Jewish nationality and the liberty of belonging to that nationality.
2. The rights of the Jews to have their own schools and to give their children an education in the Jewish spirit.
3. Representation of the Jews according to their numbers in the Reichsrath, in the Landtags and the local self-administrations. As a means to it, the establishment of Jewish electoral curia and the adoption of the proportional system.

4. The Jews to be represented in the government through a special Secretary of State.

5. The immediate actual emancipation of the Jews in Austria according to the provisions of the constitution.

6. The organization of a Jewish nationality through the creation of a Jewish National Chamber on the basis of general equal direct, secret suffrage.

7. The creation of a system of religious Jewish institutions through the establishment of a Union of Communions.

On Friday, June 7, Rabbi and Mrs. Edward Lissman celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage in an unostentatious manner, owing to a permanent injury sustained by their son Mortimer while serving in the Naval Reserve.

Dr. Lissman was born in Sheffield, England, on July 4, 1870, and received his education at the Lancasterian Grammar School, Central High School, Firth College, and at the Jewish Academy, with the assistance of private tutors.

His first charge was with the B'nai Sholom Congregation, Ninth street, South Brooklyn, in 1899, and eventually he came to Manhattan and founded the Hebrew Tabernacle Congregation, Sisterhood and other kindred societies in 1905, over which he presides as the minister at the present time.

Rabbi Lissman is an honorary chaplain of the Street Cleaning and Fire Departments of New York city, Hebrew Union Veterans of the War with Spain, G. A. R., past chaplain of National Lodge, No. 209, F. and A. M.; honorary president of the Hebrew Tabernacle Sisterhood, honorary vice-president of the Base Hospital Auxiliary Naval Training Camp, U. S. N. Reserve, Pelham Bay, New York, which he inaugurated; honorary member of Baron De Hirsch Ladies' Benevolent Society, B'nai B'rith, Free Sons of Israel, and past president of Merchants' Council, National Union; honorary member of Lena Invalid Aid Society, Cosmopolitan Charity League, and honorary vice-president of Federal Civil Service Employees, Branch No. 2.

He is also a member of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, New York Board of Jewish Ministers, and Eastern Council of Reform Rabbis.

Although an extremely busy man, Rabbi Lissman is always ready to give sympathy and advice to any one seeking his presence, regardless of race, color, creed or denomination, often utilizing all his spare moments to co-operate in laudable movements of a civic or patriotic nature.

Energetic and fearless in his addresses, which often carry conviction to his hearers, he has surrounded himself with a large circle of admirers who assist him in various ways to further the scope of his ministrations.

As far back as 1885 he gained a speed certificate for phonography from Sir Isaac Pitman of England, demonstrating that his boyhood days were filled with ambition. And since that event he has labored arduously for the good of his fellowman, often renouncing opulent followers, rather than forsake freedom of thought and just actions.

In 1893 Dr. Lissman married Miss Hannah Meyers, member of an old New York family, who bore two sons, the youngest died in infancy, while the other, Mortimer Merrick Lissman, married Miss Lillian Gottlieb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Israel Gottlieb of 327 West 87th street, Manhattan, about five months ago.

The minister and his wife were the recipients of many congratulations, and tokens of esteem relative to the event from a large circle of friends, societies and the congregation. The Sisterhood presented the couple with a handsome set of sterling silver, and the Board of Trustees handed Dr. Lissman a check of a substantial amount, in recognition of the event, and also in view of being the founder of the institution, and the splendid services he had rendered for the cause of Judaism to the community.

He Paid His Debts.

(Translated from the Yiddish of MORDECAI KATZ in the New York Jewish Daily News.)

Abraham, the dry goods man, though a plain citizen, studied his Mishnah, and was noted as a pious man. His word was never doubted and the buyer felt he got his money's worth in Abraham's store, and a customer buying there once would come continually, the goods always proving satisfactory and the prices reasonable.

He was a peculiar man, Abraham was, never overcharging a customer nor taking advantage of a neighbor's mistake or blunder. He was offered loans, time and again, his friends telling him to accept the money and purchase stock for it, which he could turn over, while they did not have much use for their resources at that particular time, anyhow; but to these offers and suggestions he had always made answer, sounding as follows: "Why, friend, borrowed money must be paid, and I shall have to increase my stock and further my commercial operations, resulting in constant hustling for trade and customers. No, sir; I am not after the coin and do not want to get rich quickly."

Abraham would have to go through the same experiences in metropolitan cities where he would occasionally repair to purchase his stock. The manufacturers, wholesalers and jobbers would give him no rest, offering him goods to the amount of thousands of dollars, and when Abraham would refuse to buy the goods shown, on the plea of being short of funds, they would ridicule the very idea of his need of money to purchase goods. He did not need any money to purchase goods with. His word is good enough, and he shall certainly send the money after having disposed of the wares.

But Abraham, being human, could not withstand temptation, and eventually decided to yield to pressure and commit himself to the crime of becoming the debtor of several jobbers in the sum of $50, which he would gladly pay when coming to the metropolis the next time for another installment of goods.

Arriving in the manufacturing city one day, Abraham was surprised to see Leib Simon's jobbing place closed. He found that Leib Simon had suspended business, and he wondered how he could pay his debt of $50. He finally spoke to another jobber, with whom he had likewise dealings, and asked his advice on how to pay Leib Simon his debt. "Why," replied the other man, "Leib Simon failed for a considerable amount of money, and you had better keep your $50, which will serve yourself and family for better causes."

Abraham, however, was not convinced, and considered it his duty to pay Leib Simon his money, as he had nothing to do with the other man's creditors and he should not take advantage of money that never belonged to him.

Returning home, Abraham related to his wife the story of the $50 and asked her what there should be done to find Leib Simon and repay the debt. She, however, shared the opinion of the other business man and told her husband not to worry about Leib Simon, advising him to deposit the sum of $50 in the bank as a start for their daughter's dowry. But Abraham had his own way and put $50 aside, hoping to come across Leib Simon some day and pay him.

Abraham continued to search and inquire for Leib Simon whenever he went to the manufacturing place, but all his quests proved fruitless, as if the earth had swallowed up Leib Simon.

Times changed, Abraham met with reverses, his income would not yield as much profit as it formerly did, his family increased in numbers, his expense assumed larger proportions; yet he would never touch the $50, which, in his opinion, was some one else's property, his wife's propositions and suggestions to the contrary notwithstanding; he having made up his mind to keep that money, even to the end of his life, and return it to the owner as soon as he discovered Leib Simon's whereabouts. In the meantime, Abraham never stopped asking dry goods men, both in his native town and in the metropolis, whether Leib Simon, the dry goods jobber, was seen or heard from. At last he succeeded in obtaining the good news of his creditor having moved to the capital city, where he conducted a commercial enterprise of extensive dimensions. Of course, Leib Simon was proverbially rich and would think nothing of the $50 that Abraham was indebted to him. But Abraham never knew any rest, and would not comfort himself while being in possession of money that he knew not to have been his own. He inquired how to get there, and found that the distance was quite considerable, requiring almost another sum of $50 for railroad, hotel and other incidental expenses. Abraham had to abandon the notion of going to the capital with the only prospect in view of paying the opulent man his debt. Simple and old-fashioned, as Abraham was, he never knew the modern ways and the advanced methods of buying a postal money order or a bank certificate, thus paying his debt by proxy.

There, however, came a chance for Abraham to visit the capital and refund to Leib Simon his $50. Dry goods centers opened up in the capital, and the railroads reduced fares in order to increase traffic and make the place a mecca for merchants to buy their goods. It goes without saying that Abraham was among the first to avail himself of the opportunity and go to the capital, not so much for buying his dry goods as for the purpose of paying Leib Simon his money. Coming thither, Abraham almost ran to Leib Simon's place to pay the debt, but experienced some difficulty in seeing that Croesus. As he was shabbily dressed, Abraham was at first refused admission into the rich man's sanctuary. He, however, was permitted to enter, but became confused and did not know exactly how to begin. Taking him for a beggar, the host ordered his eviction, at which juncture, however, Abraham regained his pride, and, casting the $50 in front of Leib Simon's nose, told him that he was paying him thusly his debt.

Performance of Allah Karim to Be Given.

On Sunday evening, June 16, there will be given at the Irving Place Theatre a Hebrew performance of "Allah Karim," a 3-act play dealing with Jewish life in the new Palestine. The play will be given under the auspices of Habima Haiy'nt, under the personal direction of Messrs. Mark Schweid and Henry Linn. Among the participants will be the Palestinian actors, Mme. Elisa Waron and Mr. Ezra Hasare.

We invite attention to a unique eating place located at No. 439 Sixth avenue, between 26th and 27th streets, in the heart of the manufacturing section. This establishment, instituted about a year and a half ago and conducted in strict accordance with the Jewish dietary laws, dispenses the celebrated products of the Hebrew National Kosher Sausage Factory. It was the intention of the founders to establish a place where the Jewish business men of the vicinity could go with the assurance that everything served was as home-like as possible. There is an all-day a la carte service. This restaurant is closed on Saturdays, but opens on Sundays.

country. He said, according to a special cable dispatch received by the Provisional Zionist Committee, that the clauses which refer to this question were framed solely to give Germany an additional pretext for interfering with the internal affairs of Roumania. The British Government, he went on to say, have full sympathy with the cause of Jewish enfranchisement in Roumania and elsewhere. But it is to the full program of liberation which the Roumanian Government had itself adopted prior to the treaty, and not to this restricted scheme, which His Majesty's Government will adhere.

Columbia University has conferred its highest distinction, the honorary degree of doctor of laws, on the Earl of Reading. If such recognitions are maintained Columbia will soon have a long and distinguished list of honorary Jewish alumni.

Our enterprising Pittsburgh contemporary, The Jewish Criterion, has just celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding and, in honor of the event, issued a special number of its interesting journal. This, while containing much to interest and attract the reader, is chiefly distinguished for a lengthy paper by Charles I. Cooper on the history of the Jews of Pittsburgh.

Professor Thomas Garrigue Masaryk of Bohemia, at present again on a visit to this country, is a sincere friend of the Jewish people. As such he deserves to receive the attention of the community. He was one of the first firm and non-Jewish friends of the unfortunate Hilsner. He was and is outspokenly anti-Teutonic, which means that he opposes all forms of anti-Semitism.

Probably the strongest figure among those whom the war has brought back to Judaism is Maximilian Harden's. The gifted German publicist wields a trenchant pen and has not scrupled to lay hands on the Holy of holies in German life. But his greatest interest for us is represented by his recent utterances on the British declaration on Palestine. He accepts this as a signal event for Jewry and thus proves that, no matter how attenuated has been his connection with our community in the past, he is still a Jew at heart.

As an orthodox Jewish journal we are well aware that, in the Jewish acceptance, there is no such term as Jewish theology. This is a blemish, perhaps, to President Kaufmann Kohler's recently-published work under this title. Of course, Dr. Kohler writes from the Reform point of view, which excuses much. Still, a Jewish theology properly so-called is far to seek. More correct would it have been to say that the rabbis elaborated a system of theology, which, in course of time, has crystallized into a more or less definite body of views. Thus, the late Solomon Schechter's book, "Aspects of Rabbinic Theology," by its title struck a better Jewish note.

The American Israelite has begun to devote a corner of its editorial page to what it calls "Gems of Jewish Journalism." Under this rubric our contemporary prints tidbits of editorial rage, wrath and rancor which are culled from the pages of its contemporaries and which lose nothing in being thus prominently featured with an appropriate commentary. If our Cincinnati contemporary succeeds in driving out of the field of Jewish journalism those utterances of editors which are indicative of want of good breeding, acceptance of the little amenities, etc., its "corner" will have more than filled a long-felt want.

We did not need to learn of the latest attack on the Jews in the lower house of the Prussian Diet to realize that a vigorous campaign of anti-Semitism is about to open, if, indeed, it has not been ere this begun, in the dominant kingdom of the German Empire. The Junkers and their myrmidons having been prevented from lording it over the civilized world, have turned on those victims whom they can villify with ease, the German Jews. And when it is recalled that the Jews of Germany have made sacrifices for their fatherland and its mistaken ideals without parallel, we see the Prussian militaristic Junker in his true colors as he launches dastardly attacks against them and their honor. Perhaps the German Jews may stand forth as the force which shall rid the German people of the cancer gnawing at their vitals, the Junkers and the militarists from von Hindenburg down to the lowest lieutenant. If so, they will have served both the world and themselves well.

Owing to labor conditions, poor postal service, etc., many of our subscribers have been getting the HEBREW STANDARD Saturday morning and later. In order to have our publication delivered on Friday morning we have decided to go to press a day earlier than heretofore, and in future our forms will close promptly at 4 P. M., Tuesday. Correspondents will please take note that matter received after that time will be too late for insertion in the current number.

JEWISH UNIFICATION

AT the recent convention of the Kehillah, Jacob H. Schiff, one of the speakers, declared that the great war has wrought a wonderful condition of unity among the Jews of the civilized nations of the world, but more especially among those of our own country. Mr. Schiff never speaks without his book, as it were, and, in this instance, it will be apparent on reflection that he is quite right in his assertion.

The war has brought the Jews in the lands of the entente allies more closely in touch with one another. Minor differences which formerly existed have been swept aside in face of the common peril. The suffering entailed abroad and the concentration of energy produced at home have sufficed to bring all the Jews affected thereby into a more perfect accord.

Before the war came to America our journals were full of the acerbity of contending factions. Conference and Congress adherents, jostled one another in their effusions in the Jewish press as well as in their contacts in daily life. At one time, indeed, the gulf between them seemed almost, if not quite, unbridgable and threatened disaster for the future well-being of American Jewry. Nous avons change tout cela. Now, all Jews are united and wholeheartedly supporting our government in its stupendous task of winning the war. They seek the ties that unite them rather than the points on which their thought is sharply divided.

So, we may regard the present unification of American Israel and of all Israel as a very hopeful sign of the times; one, too, that promises much for the further assurance of the race. To this result the remarkable declaration of the British government with respect to Palestine has assisted materially, for it has served as an outward force and direction to the Jews everywhere and lifted the Zionist aspirations out of and above the muddled stream of Jewish party-politics.

Consequently we are here provided with another illustration of the working of Providence for the good of man ultimately through present ill. The war has wreaked an appalling amount of havoc and destruction among the children of men. It has, however, knit those of our side more firmly and closely together for their ultimate good. In this sense, then, the unification of American Jewry has been brilliantly achieved for the good of us all.

The late Abraham Moses Luncz, the Hebrew scholar and archaeologist of Palestine, who died at Jerusalem last month, was one of those modest workers in and for the science of Judaism whose loss will be felt considerably by Jewish scholars everywhere. Luncz, in spite of his many years of blindness, unfolded a large literary activity. He edited and published a yearbook and an almanac of Palestine which did much to advance the Jewish knowledge of and interest in the Holy Land. Perhaps his most important literary undertaking, which unfortunately never reached completion, was his project for a new critical edition of the Talmud Yerushalmi. Had he been spared to finish this he would live forever in the history of Jewish letters by this outstanding service to the cause. As it is, however, he will not be forgotten because he labored diligently and well to advance Jewish literary interests in Palestine.

That the war will inevitably leave open wounds in its wake goes without saying. Years after its conclusion will have to elapse before the present enemies among the nations of the world will agree to restore one another to good grace. Therefore, one wound, a national, or rather an internal, one must not be permitted to fester, if even to gape at all. This is the wound of animosities between the followers of different religions in a state. In one land the struggle may exist between Catholics and Protestants; in another between Protestants of two different denominations with positive notions on the subject of war that are quite irreconcilable; in still a third there may be elements of controversy between Jews and non-Jews. A crass time like the present is quite likely to produce such results, but, as this is a period in the history of the world when men, women and children are being appealed to nobly to manifest a spirit of self-sacrifice, it is not too much to hope that in these matters national, by which we mean the citizens or subjects of a particular nation, will sink their little differences in the effort to advance the common good. That is a sacrifice which requires little work, but means much.

"The War and the Coming Peace," by Dr. Morris Jastrow, Jr., professor in the University of Pennsylvania, is a striking contribution to the philosophic literature of the present conflict which the J. B. Lippincott Company of Philadelphia has just published. Professor Jastrow is an original thinker and ranks high as an authority in his chosen field of Assyriology. In this work he discusses the war and the peace which it precedes from the angle of the moral issue. This, underlying the struggle, represents that fight which the entente nations are making against the unholy alliance between power and national ambitions. Through this alliance of force and desire Germany has constituted herself a menace to the welfare and security of the civilized world. The author develops his theme along these lines, pointing out the steps by which the present German Empire has reached, and attempted to maintain, her state of opposition to the great and inevitable forces of democracy. With the peace issue Professor Jastrow is rightly deeply concerned, for all thinking men are agreed that the close of this war must so safeguard the nations of the earth in their self-determination and pacific development as to make a repetition of the tohu va-bohu now raging impossible.

DEMOCRACY—FALSE AND TRUE

מדוע התנשאו על קהלך?

"Ye take too much upon you, seeing all the congregation are holy, every one of them, and the Lord is among them; wherefore then lift ye up yourselves above the congregation of the Lord?" (Num. xvi, 3.)

THE universality of human experience, as shown in the records of history, is one of the standing marvels. Men have been essentially the same through the ages. Certain situations are causing the same mental and moral reactions today as thousands of years ago. There is no such thing as Modernity, there is only a persistent Eternity with its stubborn recurrences. Time never was, never is, nor will be. One gets an alternate impression of the world being very old and very young. How the venerable beard sprouts from the youthful face of humanity! How the young dream of this tomorrow is but the second birth of the faded vision of yesterday! "All has been"—yes, and all will be. Time is an illusion: only the human spirit, with its undying aspirations, is perennially true—true, above all, to its own law.

This controversy between Moses and the party of the Korahites, old as it is, revolved around a question which is not satisfactorily solved to this very day. The Korahites disputed the leadership of Moses and Aaron, charging them with high-handedness and un-democratic behavior. That the charges were untrue is proven not so much by the recorded miracles that settled the controversy as by the fact that Aaron's fame survived through the ages as that of a "man of peace" and that Moses' memory is still revered as that of the " meekest of all men." Did not Moses utter the pious wish: "would that all the Lord's people were prophets?" Yet in the face of all this testimony of fact, the charge was hurled at Moses by these rebellious Korahites that he set himself unduly above the "Peepul"; that he acted as an autocrat. And the Korahites expressed this accusation in words that sound strangely modern in their meaning and spirit: "All the congregation are holy, every one of them," is the claim made by the Korahites: as though one were to say in this day and this land that every citizen is competent to sit in the White-House!

Korah's stand was due to a mistaken notion of democracy. And this mistaken notion persists to this very day. Your proud member of a democracy is convinced of the all-around competence and unerring wisdom of the masses.

The great danger of all democracy is resistance to proper leadership. The resistance shown by the Korahites in ancient Israel is not the only example of its kind History tells of. It is well-known how the Greek commonwealth soon developed jealousy and suspicion against the most excellent leaders. The Greeks had a rather convenient way of getting rid of men whose power and influence, due to personal merit, threatened to increase: the cup of hemlock soon put an end to all greatness. The hemlock cup is still a menace to intellectual and moral excellency: if not a physical fact, its figurative or symbolic counterparts are still employed to embitter and banish all who would not stoop to conquer. The man who would lead must be no better—only noisier, and slightly more articulate—than the masses, he must be essentially a man of the crowd: pandering to the prejudices, the shallow assumptions of the crowd. The muscular smile, the hollow handshake, the flamboyant phraseology—all the cunning equipment of the petty politician—must take the place of honesty, originality and genius.

What other result can this peculiar so-called "democratic" resistance to competent leadership have than the eventual nipping of the bud of genius in the life of the nation? The end must be that if a democracy discourages genius it will fail to develop genius. If it exalts the "common man" above the uncommon man, it will never be lifted up above the average. The very greatest danger of all democracy is this glorification of mediocrity. "Wherefore lift ye up yourselves above the congregation?" is the age-long cry of the mob. That some men are, by the wisdom of nature or the grace of God, lifted up above the congregation is a truth the mob refuses to countenance. Indeed, the prevalence of mediocre human stuff in a democracy has given much concern to the serious-minded. Why is it—some ask—that since the spread of the democratic idea throughout the world there has been no conspicuous genius in the high places? Why this dearth of outstanding leadership over against this plethora of commonplace men? Is there something in democracy itself, some fatal warp, that prevents the efflorescence of genuine human greatness?

If this were so: if democracy necessarily meant the rule of the mediocre, then democracy would stand condemned by its own operations. The test of democracy is just this—whether it can develop genius to a greater extent than an aristocracy? The theoretic assumption is that, by the very freedom it makes possible, democracy ought to give birth to greater men than an aristocratic order of society. If, practically, democracy failed to do this it would be its own doom. Let us admit that it has largely failed to do this; nevertheless, let us recognize that this rarity of genius in a democracy is not the fault of democracy itself, but rather of the cheap popular conception of democracy. False democracy is that which would level down; true democracy is that which would level up. False democracy would raise the hills; true democracy would raise the valleys. In true democracy, the apparent contradiction between aristocracy and democracy disappears. Aristocracy means the rule of the best, and democracy means that, given proper conditions of progress, the best are to be found not among the few, but among the many. This ideal of aristocratic-democracy has not yet been realized. It will be realized as soon as it is understood that aristocracy is more fundamental than democracy. The law of life is not democracy, but aristocracy—for Life ever mounts to the heights. But in mounting, Life beckons to all men to follow. The hills shall never be brought low—unless they are of sand; the valleys shall ever be exalted—unless they are mere marsh and morass.

Dinner of the Men's Club of Temple Anshe Chesed.

The Men's Club of Temple Anshe Chesed, of Harlem, held its last meeting of the season in the vestry rooms of the synagogue on Wednesday evening, May 29. It was made the occasion of a reunion dinner, to which all the seat holders, the ladies associated with the various activities of the temple, and others connected with the congregation were invited to take part. It was attended by about two hundred persons and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed, as the meeting not only manifested the great success of this new organization, but also the intense patriotism of those present.

The fine musical program was rendered by the student choir under the direction of Mr. Alois Bartschmit, organist.

After the exercises the graduates, accompanied by Mr. J. Walter Freiberg, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations; Alfred M. Cohen, president of the Board of Governors of the Hebrew Union College, and Dr. Henry Englander, Registrar, repaired to Dr. Kohler's bedside, from whom they received their solemn ordination and blessing.

Heights Branch Scores at Y. M. H. A. Meet.

On Sunday, June 9, 1918, the eighth annual outdoor track and field meet of the Metropolitan League of the Y. M. H. A. was held at Macomb's Dam Park. Every Y. M. H. A. of the metropolitan district was represented. The highest honors went to the Washington Heights Y. M. H. A., which scored 32 points. The next best competitor was the Ninety-second street branch with 29 points. This is the first year that the Heights Y. M. H. A. has competed in the Metropolitan League championships, and the showing made last Sunday prophesies a most successful career for this association, which is the youngest in the metropolitan district. In fact, it appears that the leadership of Y. M. H. A. affairs will now emanate from the Heights branch.

A Prospective Soldier's Letter.

The following letter, written by a young man to his lodge brethren upon the eve of his joining the colors, speaks for itself. It breathes a spirit of true patriotism, and we are certain that Abraham Leon Rubin will give a good account of himself when called upon.— [Editor Hebrew Standard.]

My Dear Brethren: Permit me to inform you that I am about to respond to the call of duty, and leave this city for the camp on Saturday, May 25, at 7 a. m., and I regret very much that I cannot meet you all in person to take a proper leave from all the brethren and sisters of Beth-El Lodge, as I have been busy of late arranging my affairs, and have just returned from Pittsburgh, where I took leave of my dear father, and now, with but a few more details to settle, I shall be ready to respond promptly and take my place in the line alongside of those who, perhaps, have a more rightful claim on this glorious country than myself.

To me, too, like Father Abraham, came the call of God, "Leave your home, your adopted country, your relatives, your newly acquired friends of Beth-El Lodge, to a place where a divine decree has chosen to test the sincerity, devotion and patriotism of each and every lover of liberty and democracy, particularly the "stranger," the Jew, who, after being persecuted for nearly two thousand years, has at last found a haven of rest, a place where he may enjoy all the rights and liberties under the Stars and Stripes of this glorious country of the United States of America.

I wish to assure you, my dear brethren and sisters of Beth-El Lodge, that I accept this challenge cheerfully and with full realization of the fearful task before me; realizing that I am in duty bound to my dear adopted country for the many privileges which I have enjoyed during the short twelve years that I have lived in this blessed republic. I go with a consciousness of being ready and willing to prove my allegiance to this country, being thankful for the privilege of being one of the many who shall help our government to pave the way for true democracy, and incidentally hasten the realization of our prophets that militarism and wars shall forever be exterminated from the earth, that true brotherly love may reign supreme, and the world made a fit and ideal place to live in.

And now, my dear friends, if I am guilty of inactivity in our worthy lodge, due to my absence from the city at the regular meetings, yet do I hope to redeem myself by proving myself worthy of being the first representative of Beth-El Lodge on the great battlefield of nations who, having raised their sword and staked their all, are fighting for the same principles which has given so much color to our beloved order—liberty, unity and justice—and, although small in quantity, I shall endeavor to the best of my ability to measure myself up to the high standard and lofty ideals of Americanism and patriotism, as manifested by many of our brethren of Beth-El Lodge.

I am leaving here for Camp Hancock, Ga., and will keep you informed of my whereabouts and activities in the future, and should it be the will of a kind Providence to bring me back after our aims have been accomplished, we shall relate our experiences with a joyful heart to the dear friends I am now leaving behind. In the meantime, I bid you all farewell and my best wishes, and hope that Beth-El Lodge may continue in its good work for many years, all its members intact and enjoying health and prosperity, with real good fellowship. Fraternally yours, (Signed) ABRAHAM LEON RUBIN.

Flag Day Celebration at Ohab Zedek.
The Jews of New York are going to take an active part in the celebration of Flag Day this evening at 7 o'clock, says a statement issued by the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America. One of the most elaborate ceremonies attendant on the events of the day will be presented this evening by the members of Congregation Ohab Zedek, 18 West 116th street, New York City, where there will be special music arranged by Cantor Josef Rosenblatt and appropriate services under the direction of Rabbis Phillip Klein and Bernard Drachman. Officers of the Union of Orthodox Congregations of America, including Albert Lucas and Morris Engelman, will attend the ceremonies.
The synagogue, of which Moritz Neuman is president, will be magnificently decorated with the Allied colors. It is expected that more than 2,000 persons will attend the services tonight and tomorrow morning. This will be the last appearance of the famous Jewish cantor for the season.

About six years ago Mr. L. Spielberger left the Ocean View, Hammels, L. I., which house he conducted very successfully for nine successive years, in order to undertake new enterprises. Since that time the Ocean View has been in the hands of other owners, none of whom stood the test of being able to manage it for any length of time. Mr. Spielberger has again undertaken the management of the Ocean View, which has been entirely renovated and newly decorated. He is now ready to receive his numerous friends and patrons there, and assures them that everything in his power will be done for their comfort. Mr. Spielberger will conduct the Ocean View in strict accordance with the dietary laws and invites the members of the societies to which he belongs as well as the members of the Ohab Zedek Congregation, of which he is a trustee, to visit the Ocean View.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

MOSES AND HIS BRETHREN.
Dear Children:

When we read the wonderful history of Moses, we are reminded of the words of the Divine Psalmist, "Wherefore do the nations rage and people meditate a vain thing?" The kings of the earth raise themselves up, and rulers take counsel together against the Lord and against his anointed (they say). "Let us break asunder their bonds and cast away from us their cords." "He who dwelleth in the heavens will laugh; the Lord will hold them in derision" (Psalms 2). Pharaoh wanted to destroy all new-born males; he did not spare even the children of his own Egyptian people just to prevent the bringing up of the Deliverer of Israel, and, yet, it was his own daughter who saved him from death! It was in his own palace that he was brought up! Does it not remind you of the words of the Psalmist? "He who dwelleth in the heavens will laugh, the Lord will hold them in derision!" And it came to pass in those days when Moses was grown up. Rashi says, "Is it not already written 'And the child grew up?'" but he answers, quoting from the Talmud in the name of Rabbi Judah, "the first 'Vayigdal hayeled,' and the child grew," refers to his physical growth, but 'Vayigdal Masche,' "And Moses grew," refers to his growth in grandeur, for Pharaoh appointed him overseer of his palace. The glory of his high station did not fill him with pride or make him forget his downtrodden And Pharaoh heard this thing, because they turned informers against Moses, and he sought to slay Moses. He turned him over to the executioner, but the sword had no power over him. Therefore, did Moses say later, "He (the Eternal) delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh" (Exodus 18). Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh and tarried in the land of Midian, and he sat down by a well. He followed the example of Jacob who found his match at the well. Now the priest of Midian had seven daughters. He abandoned the idol worship of the Midianites and, therefore, they separated from him. And they came and drew water, and filled the troughs to water their father's flock, and the shepherds came and drove them away, because they communicated him. But Moses arose and helped them and watered their flocks, and when they told their father what happened he said unto them: "Wherefore have ye left the man?" He recognized in him a descendant of Jacob, for the water rose toward him. "Call him that he may eat bread, perhaps he will marry one of you"—as it is said (Genesis 30): "Potiphar left all that he had in Joseph's hand save the bread, which he did eat" (meaning his wife). And Moses was content to dwell with the man. "Wayoel" "and he was content," says the Medrash; also means "Alah," "an oath." He made him take an oath that he would not leave Midian without his permission. And he gave Zipporah, his daughter, to Moses. And it came to brothers, but he went out unto his brethren and looked on their burdensome labors. His eye beheld and his heart was broken because of their sufferings. And he saw an Egyptian man, one of the taskmasters who was appointed over the officers of Israel, and who awakened them as soon as the cocks crowed to go to their appointed tasks, smiting a Hebrew man, one of his brethren. And he looked this way and that way, and in every way he found him one of the greatest miscreants that ever lived. And when he saw "Ki ein ish" that no good man would ever come out of him, he smote the Egyptian and hid him in the sand. And when he went out the second day, behold, two Hebrew men were striving together. They were Dathan and Abiram (they who later left of the Manna against the orders of Moses) (Exodus 16). And he said unto the wicked one (who raised his hand to smite); "Wherefore wouldst thou smite thy fellow?" Although he did not yet smite him, but because he raised his hand to smite him the Torah called him "Wicked."

"Wherefore wouldst thou smite thy fellow, thy fellow who is as wicked as thou." And he said, "Mi samcha loish," (literally) "Who made thee a man? Why you are naught but a child!" Halhorgani atah omer? (literally) "Wilt thou say something to kill me, as thou hast killed the Egyptian?" "Hence we infer," says Rashi, "that he killed him by pronouncing the ineffable name." "And Moses feared," the Medrash says. "Moses was greatly concerned because he saw that there were informers in Israel, and he thought, perhaps, they are not worthy of being delivered." And he said, "Surely the thing is become known. The Medrash says, "He thought now I know why they are suffering more than the other nappass in this long time that Moses remained in Midian that the King of Egypt died, and Israel needed some one to deliver them, and the deliverance came through him. Therefore are these narratives written together. And the King of Egypt died, that is, he was stricken with leprosy. And he killed the little infants of Israel and bathed in their blood, and the children of Israel sighed by reason of their bondage; and they cried, and their complaint came up unto the Eternal by reason of the bondage. And the Eternal heard their groaning, and the Eternal remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac and with Jacob, and the Eternal looked upon the children of Israel. And the Eternal took cognizance of them. He paid attention to them, and was not oblivious of their suffering.

Abraham Ebn Ezra.

Out of the numberless and numerous commentaries on the Bible and Scriptures, that added and augmented the Hebrew, exegetic, homiletic and theological literature, but very few succeeded in having their lucubrations and investigations grace the Pentateuchal books and prophetic volumes, as marginal remarks and footnotes, becoming thusly saved from oblivion and spared the humiliations of obscurity. Ebn Ezra, indeed, turned fortunate in this particular respect and became identified with the Holy Writ, appearing next to Rashi in the so called Mik-rooth Gedoloth or Enlarged Edition of the Bible, which, however, belongs but to the chosen few and which makes the vade mecum of the profound thinker and the philosophical student. Pundits and scholars, thinkers and grammarians, wishing to undergo some mental gymnastics, intellectual drills and metaphisic stunts, would take to the Ebn Ezra, ponder upon its subtleties and solve its sagacities, riddles and intricacies. While a commentary, a collection of expositions and elucidations on the Books of Moses, the prophets and the rest of the Scriptures, the Ebn Ezra displays, time and again, philosophical principles, theological doctrines, grammatical rules and dogmatic comparisons of its master, Rabbi Abraham Ebn Ezra. It turned a particular study of its own, the Ebn-Ezra did, over the profundities and casuistries of which men of learning and lore would debate and deliberate for hours, unable to settle agreeably or define properly the mysteries, depths and erudition of the master mind, Abraham Ezra. In the long run and in the course of time, Ebn Ezra became an object of holiness and a subject for discussion, on a par with the very texts of the Bible and the latter's dispensations, manifestations and promulgations. This brought about the need and necessity of writing some few notes and comments on the very comments and notes of the Ebn Ezra. Honos alit artes (Baba Bathra fol. 21, a) and there soon sprung up an entire literature, dealing exclusively with the reflections and declinations of Ebn Ezra, which certainly brought in stores of knowledge and ammunition of wisdom into the homiletic and exegetic literature, sources of information and pabulum for inspiration for scholar and lay, theologian and thinker, Biblical student and Hebrew pundit.

Although known as Ebn Ezra, the name of Abraham's father was not Ezra but Meyer, to whom he was born in the year of 4833, at the city of Toledo, Spain. Of his early youth, rearing raising and domestic environments there is little known, one thing, however, is positively proven, that Abraham possessed marvelous gifts and wonderful talents, having acquired both, secular education and Jewish learning. In fact, he made knowledge his personal goal, his greatest achievement, his aim in life, his very hope, aspiration and strivings, firmly believing that education and enlightenment are the only means and media for the individual's life, stay and existence. Small wonder then that he struggled continuously and suffered enormously, undergoing, every now and then, hardships and vicissitudes, want and failure, privations, troubles and tribulations. For a time he made astrology as a source of income, telling fortunes and predicting the future, which traits and plights he disclosed and displayed by his knowledge of the stellar system and heavenly beings. At times, Abraham would be engaged in writing and compiling calendars and almanacs for general use and public intelligence, which all forces combined, would barely secure one's daily commodities and first necessities. He pokes fun at himself because of his abject misery and indescribable poverty, when he writes in one of his epigrammatic outbursts, that had he dealt in candles, the sun would have never disappeared from the heavens above; had he prepared robes for the dead, people would discontinue that process of dying.

It goes without saying that folk-lore and legend revolved around the life and doings of Abraham Ebn Ezra, supplying therefore, quite abundantly the historian and scribe with all sorts of tales and stories in connection with the great man's environments, circumstances and surroundings. The following episode in the life of Abraham may be taken for its face value, lacking as it does additional coloring and augmenting hue of the Arabian Nights' anecdotes and the tales from the herculean Bova. Jehudah Halevi, the great poet and the prominent philosopher, who lived at the same time, had but one daughter, who was very beautiful and attractive. Becoming of the marriageable age, her mother wanted to see her wedded to the proper party, as a matter of course. She, therefore, insisted upon her husband, Halevi, to consult matchmakers and have their daughter procured a suitable life partner. Absorbed in his lucubrations and taxed with his investigations, the Rabbi turned furious at his wife for her annoyance and interference, and in order of getting rid of the feminine insults and wifely interruption, vowed to have his daughter given in marriage to the first man that he meets the next morning. Ebn Ezra, chanced to arrive in that city on the very next day, and approached the Rabbi, wishing to procure quarters for his sojourn in that town. Shabbily dressed, roughly speaking, with a peculiar countenance, Ebn Ezra certainly represented a very poor specimen of humanity, with no attraction whatever for a young lady, as his daughter really was. The mischief being done, the oath taken, Rabbi Jehudah could not help taking the wanderer into his house, with the prospects of making him his son-in-law, giving him however, some rudiments in learning and knowledge first, before introducing him to the members of his household. Aware of the anticipated change in his life or unconscious of the entire plan, Ebn Ezra thought best to conceal his identity, never showing any signs or traces of his marvelous gifts and phenomenal abilities. Slowly but surely, Halevi instructed Ebn Ezra in elementary Hebrew, Bible, Talmud, theology and grammar. Rabbi Jehuda experienced some trouble in his composition, one day, of a Hebrew poem, during the making of which he went out to the yard for a little recreation. Having noticed the master's confusion and anxiety in failing to obtain some connecting links in the chains of his compound ingredients, Ebn Ezra snatched the paper from the Rabbi's desk, furnished the missing part and replaced it where it belonged. Rabbi Jehudah returned and was amazingly bewildered to find the sentence written on the paper before he had ever fully made it up. There being no scholars, pundits and poets in the house, he could not help but suspecting his poor wayfarer in having concealed his capacities, all the while being certainly the qualified man to marry his daughter and affiliate with the Rabbi's family.

Abraham Ebn Ezra died at the age of 75, and it is related that at the last moment of his life, knowing that his end was approaching, he quoted the passage of "and Abram was seventy-five years old as he departed out of Haran" (Genesis xii.4), pun being played on Haran, which means anger. Ebn Ezra, departing from this world of struggle and suffering, certainly left all the anger behind him. It is interesting to note that one of the pious men of the Gentiles, Robert Browning, paid a glowing tribute to the memory of Ebn Ezra in his beautiful poem, entitled "Rabbi Ben Ezra." A "Seder" "Over There."

(Letter from American Soldier Describes How the Seder Was Conducted on the French Battlefield.)

Somewhere in France, April 29. Dear —:—You don't deserve any more mail from me (if I am right in assuming that you never responded to my letter back in October), but, like a good Christian, I can't resist the temptation to write you about a Hebrew topic which I know you want to hear so much.

It's about the first Seder I ever saw and participated in on French soil. We congregated in the town synagogue, as a preliminary, some 100 khakis strong. Though the town cannot boast of more than fifty Jewish families, the synagogue is quite modern and rather pretentious. In order to provide us with proper lighting facilities, our hosts sacrificed a generous portion of their electricity (which is distributed under a ration system). Here the services were brief and attended by no special features, except three Y. M. C. A. secretaries, two of whom were preachers, and one American woman, a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News.

I ought also to mention the fact that there were several Parisian refugees who had fled from the Hun bouquets, which had at that time been generously showered throughout the capital. I gladdened one heart by talking real "mame-loshen" to him. (There is so little spoken in France on account of its similarity to German, he appreciated it.) He was of the peasant type, without means and alone in a strange village. Wandering about with his mind fixed on a Seder objective, his happiness knew no bounds when I invited him to join the party. Several poilus also marched along with us from the "shool," and by the time we reached our destination (a tailoring establishment converted into a huge Seder table) our numerical strength had increased more than 35 per cent.

We found the table all set and accommodations provided for something like 150 covers. Nearly all the Jewish women in the community had contributed some service toward the occasion, and no less than twenty of them appeared in response to our invitation to participate in the festivities. We also had as guests the rabbi of the synagogue, who conducted the services; the Mayor, who happened to be a Jew; three Y. M. C. A. secretaries, and the Chicago Daily News correspondent. In connection with the Y. M. C. A. secretaries, I know this incident will amuse you. One of them had a dinner engagement with me a couple of nights before the Seder. There was a committee meeting scheduled that same night at the "shool," at which he and I were to attend. At the last minute I learned that a friend of mine had just arrived in town and was to be at the Y. M. C. A. after 8 o'clock. I, therefore, left my guest after dinner to go to "shool," and I to the Y. M. C. A. The most curious thing about the incident is that he happens to be a Presbyterian preacher.

To come back to the Seder—at which Joe Stein presided, by the way—the ceremonies proceeded in businesslike fashion, and, despite the peculiarly emotional type of guests, there was little speech-making. A mutual word of thanks passed around, naturally enough, and our sole female comrade, from the Chicago Daily News, who had lived many years in France, delighted the French townfolks with her French speech, being amply rewarded, however, by the gray-haired Mayor, who thanked her with a kiss on both sides of the face that came from the depths of his heart—and body. I had the good fortune to sit at her side and explain to her the significance of the services as the rabbi proceeded to read from the Hagadah. The occasion struck me as a unique community expression. The townfolks provided us with the synagogue, festive hall, souvenir floral decorations and a printed program and prepared our ritual necessities; the military authorities supplied us with the matzos in plenty, and the liberty of the evening (an official decree being read at the table by an officer); the Y. M. C. A. contributed apples, smokes and table utensils, and we ourselves paid for the provisions, which were purchased under a special dispensation from the quartermaster, from a fund to which only the boys themselves were permitted to contribute. B. L.
