"TWO PLEASURES"

From the Yiddish of S. Vendroff. Translated by Hannah Berman

"Do we ever get a good sum for making up a match? Oh, yes. I am not speaking of the famous matches. They say that when Leiballe, of Brisk, arranged the match between the Keiff Brodsky and the Moscow Pilakoff, he got nine thousand rubles for it. But it has happened me, too, that I got a nice few rubles. It also happens that the fees are not big; but, this match breaks off, and you arrange other matches for the same couple. It has also happened that I got marriage-fees three times from the same young man.

Just listen to a nice story.

It was between Purim and Pesach, the worst time for match-makers. Who wants to bother about a match before Yom-tov? I was in the Beth-Hamedrash one evening, and I began to wonder where I was to get a few rubles. I was afraid to think of Pesach. But, think this way or that, it was useless? I had nowhere to get even the price of a postage stamp. The truth is, there wasn't a householder in the town who had a marriageable son or daughter from whom I had not already borrowed money. And I must have a few groschens. I dare not go home without a loaf of bread. Why not go into Reb Hersh, I asked myself. It's true his girl is not yet seventeen years old. But I heard he wanted to marry her off. Whether it is so or not, Reb Hersh will surely give me the price of a postage stamp.

I waded through the mud, and came to the house of Reb Hersh, entered the dark passage, and began to look for the door-latch. I felt the first wall, and the second—no door; in the third, I came upon a big inner latch. I opened the door, and found myself not inside the house, but inside a barn that at Succoth served for a Succah and the rest of the year was filled with barrels of sour cabbage, cucumbers, sacks of potatoes, and all the things necessary to a household, but which cannot be kept in the house itself.

I saw I had entered the wrong place, and began to feel my way out again. I tripped up against a windowframe that had been placed against the wall, and fell into a tub in which the day's washing was steeping.

I got up slowly. Wringing wet, I went along, feeling the way with my hands, and again caught my feet in something. This time I fell into a heap of feathers. I somehow or other managed to

"Oh, mother, I am afraid. It's an eagle."

"Do not be afraid, my darling," her mother reassured her. "It's only Reb Jonah. Can't you see his beard?"

said. "It's a strange thing that has happened—eh?"

But the children still shrieked with laughter.

"What are you laughing at?" Reb Hersh demanded, angrily.

I did not wait to be asked again. I took off my coat and sat beside the hot fire. The steam rose up from my drying clothes as from a bath.

"Cold, Reb Jonah?" said Reb Hersh to me. "Come to the table and have a glass of tea. Maybe you'd like a drop of brandy first to warm you up—eh?"

I took the brandy, and drank a couple of glasses of tea, but I was still shivering. My teeth chattered. I have found the best remedy against shivering to be hot tea with brandy and sugar in it. But how is one to ask for punch, especially when Reb Hersh's wife, Sarah-Feiger, is ready to take the eyes out of one's head for a piece of sugar?

I waited until Sarah-Feiga went out to the kitchen. I poured some brandy and put three lumps of sugar into the glass of tea. I covered the glass with my hand so that Sarah-Feiga should not see what was in it. I stirred the glass, talking to Reb Hersh:

"I tell you, I have a match for you, Reb Hersh. A young man possessing every good quality, and very handsome. If you want education, he has it; ability, he has it. He has a good position, makes a good income, and, and—"

At this, the good year brings Sarah-Feiga back. I did not want her to see the sugar in the glass. I stirred it more strenuously and split the glass with the spoon. The hot tea ran out on to the table; and from the table on to my knees.

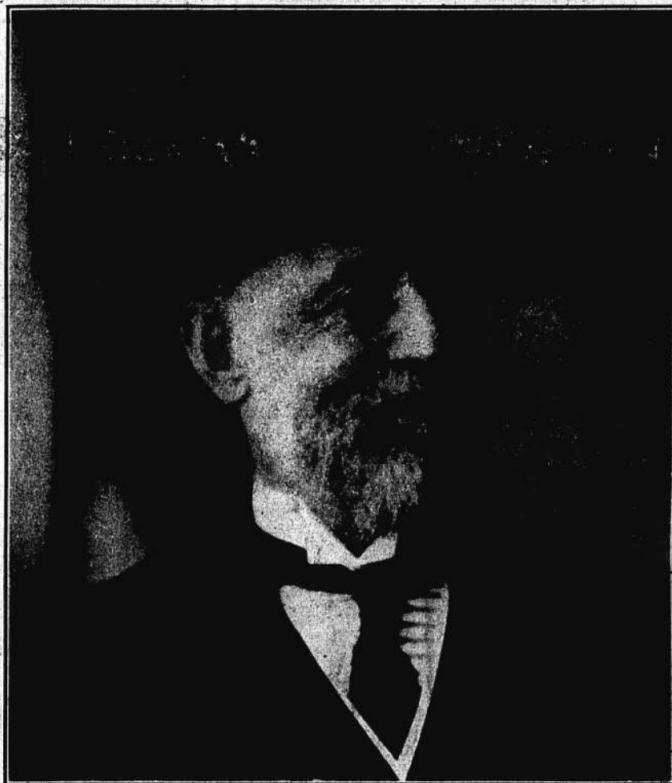

Listen, if a grave had opened for me at that moment, I would have buried myself in it; not because I had scalded my knees, but because of the disgrace of it.

"I do not know how sugar comes to be in the glass," I said. Let her think that Reb Hersh had put it there. The children burst out into a fresh peal of laughter and Reb Hersh, who is a gentleman, reassured me.

"Well, well, there's no danger in it, God forbid!" Sarah-Feiga echoed him, of course:

"A broken glass is a sign that we will soon break pots. Who is the bridegroom-elect's father?"

"The father is a neighbor of yours, Reb Chemalch Brantziter,

NATHAN STRAUS ASPIRES TO BE JERUSALEM'S FIRST MAYOR.

Nathan Straus, retired merchant and world-known philanthropist, has expressed a desire to be the first Mayor of Jerusalem in the event of Palestine being set aside as a Jewish Homeland.

Mr. Straus long ago stated his intention of returning to the Holy Land and devoting his fortune and the remainder of his life to the welfare of its population. When, after its conquest, the British pledged themselves to establish a Jewish Commonwealth in Palestine, Mr. Straus informed his friends and officials of the Zionist organization of his desire to be the first head of Jerusalem, and lately has reiterated that desire. get into the house. The water was dripping from me, and I was covered from head to foot with feathers—a strange bird from the other side of the Sonbatyn.

The baby cried out on seeing me:

The children exploded with laughter. The servant girls shrieked:

"Oh, I'm fainting! Oh, I'm fainting!"

My face was aflame.

"Just see what can happen," I

"And you, too, almost a bride," he turned to his eldest daughter, Shiska.

"But, I can't control myself."

"Well, well, that's enough now. And you, Reb Jonah, take off your coat and dry yourself by the fire."

who owns the Brantztizer forest." "Well, well," said Reb Hersh. "It's nothing to be astonished at. And what does his son do?" "He is with his father in the forest." "And what is he like in—in—" "Leave it to me, Reb Hersh. He is a young man who will please God and the world." "That is the main thing. I don't want a great scholar. For my part, he need know nothing at all. But, nowadays, the young people want men of today. The principal thing is that he should be a man, and a bit of a Jew, too. You see what I mean?" "Of course." To tell the truth, I hadn't much of an opinion of the young man. He was an empty vessel, and had been engaged already—my doing, and was, in general, not suitable for Reb Hersh's daughter. My idea was to get the price of the postage stamps to write to the young man's father. Reb Hersh would not give the money for the stamps. He decided that I should go over to the people on the morrow, see what was doing there, and bring back the young man. You see how things were? It was no joke to do this, but Reb Hersh insisted, offered to pay my expenses. I went over, and brought back the young man. Afterwards he came with his mother, and in a week's time, pots were broken. I got a good sum of money from the young man for the second time, along with which the father sent me in a carload of wood. You see, I had an enjoyable Pesach. But the best part came after the Yomtov. The story goes like this: The first days of Pesach, the bridegroom-elect came to the bride-elect's house. For the latter days, the bride-elect was to go to the house of his parents. The young man arrived two days before Pesach, and by Pesach the girl was madly in love with him. Her little sister's were dying for him, and her mother was swelling out with joy. Only Reb Hersh was not altogether satisfied. "He is too jolly, laughs too much with the girls in corners. And he mocks at everything we do." But, for that again, the girl was delighted with her fiance's wit. His mimicry provoked her to laughter for hours on end. She did not expect he would be so modern. But how modern he was she only realized at the first Seder. The moment he returned from shool with his intended father-in-law, he took up a newspaper, and from time to time winked at his fiancee, as if to say: "Well, what do you say to these foolish ceremonies. We moderns do not believe in such things." At table, he put down his paper and took up the "Haggadah" with such an expression as if to say: "To please the old man! What do you say, little pigeon?" The bride-elect smiled. When Red Hersh was filling the glasses, he again winked, and again opened his newspaper. Reb Hersh had no son. One of his daughters used to ask the "Four Questions." This year, he would give over the "mitzvah" to his intended son-in-law. He said to the young man: "Well, young man, you may put down your newspaper, and ask the "Four Questions." The young man had not expected this honor, and was not satisfied at all. How could he make such a fool of himself, and before his fiancee, too? What would he look like in her eyes? He thought he might get out of this by a trick. And, again winking to the girl, as if to say: "Look, and you will see what a clever thing I am about to say"; he said aloud: "Four questions? I could ask you as many as twenty-four. The first question is: Does a Jew feel unwell at Pesach that he must recline on pillows? The second is: Why should we dip twice? Isn't it wiser to drink once than to dip twice? The third is: Are we turkeys that we swallow matzo-balls? The fourth is—" But, he never asked the fourth question. At the first question, Reb Hersh fixed on him a pair of amazed eyes. At the second, he grew pale as death. At the third, he grew red as a beetroot; and at the fourth, he lowered his arm and gave the young man a box in one ear and a box in the other, and again a box in one ear and a box in the other, crying aloud: "Here is for you, gentile, the answer to the first question '(bang!)' Here is for you, insolent-one, the answer to the second question '(bang!)' Here is for you, independent one, the answer to the third question, '(bang!)' And here is for you for all your cheek, insolence boasting impudence, '(bang!)'." Sarah-Feiga jumped up, like one scalded. The girls screamed wildly at each box the ears the young man got. The bride-elect fainted and the bridegroom-elect took his hands and his feet and flew out of the house, forgetting even his newspaper in his hurry. When I heard the tale in "shool" next morning, I was delighted. I enjoyed two pleasures

ZIONISM IN CHAUMONT AND A SEQUEL THERETO.

By RABBI JACOB GOLDSTEIN, (Formerly Field Representative of J. W. E. in France, and "acting chaplain," 81st Division (Wild-Cats)
A. E. F.)
(Copyrighted by the Author.)

"Un gigantesque reve poursuivait depuis des siecles le peuple juif, et le rajeunissait sans cesse dans sa decrepitude."—Ernest Renan.

This is my confession of a new faith; that of one who has been for twenty years a decided and avowed anti-Zionist. I based my opposition to the movement on what seemed to me to be valid, cogent and convincing reasons. I seized every opportunity to support publicly, with tongue or pen, my views adverse to the movement.

But "times change and we change with them," or forfeit our right to call ourselves reasonable and, reasoning beings.

"Times" have indeed changed in those twenty years. The "great war" has changed not only times, but places and peoples. What appeared to be impractical, impracticable and even mischievous in 1896, is now not only practicable but desirable. Yesh galgat bo'olom! I have, therefore, changed my attitude toward Zionism and am as aggressively desirous of championing the cause as I was formerly of opposing it.

Not that I am on the "mourner's bench," repentant and praying for pardon. No, I am not doing t'shuvah, by any means. I feel no charotah. Were it not for recent developments I should not have changed my position. My antagonism to the movement would still have seemed to me just, wise and well based.

When I was in London in 1897 I paid my first visit to the home of Israel Zangwill. He received me with cordial hospitality. Seated in his library, we chatted about many things. Said he to me: "Do you know that in the very chair in which you are now sitting sat Theodore Herzl last year, when he visited London? It was then and there that he propounded his idea of the 'Jewish state' for the first time in England."

I candidly stated my opposition to the new form of Zionism as advocated by Herzl. Perhaps it might be well to restate by views, briefly:

Zionism in its newest form (1896) was a Jewish reaction against anti-Semitism—and a rather cowardly reaction! In Russia there had been pogroms. In Vienna and Berlin the anti-Semitic agitation was at boiling point. In France the "Dreyfus affair," coupled with and caused by, the pressure of reactionary and royalist politics—the French Jews, to a man, being liberal and republican—had stirred up a vicious and unpleasant anti-Semitism. The movement had even reached the British journals, but had no permanence there. Now, in my view, Continental European anti-Semitism was the compliment paid by religious reaction, monarchial militarism, and anti-liberal politics generally, to the forward-pushing virtues of the Jew. This was as true in France as it was in Russia. The Jew had earned the attacks by his salutary functioning (in my opinion, divinely intended) in the evolution of civilization.

God's justice had not reached a "no-thoroughfare." The onward march of mankind would continue in spite of temporary attacks and local checks. The Jew had no right to turn his back on civilization—a civilization founded on Jewish ideals and dependent on Jewish stimulation for its further development.

It was not because of the defects and faults of the Jew that von Plehve joined hands across Europe with Drumont and Rochefort, that Pobiedonostzev telephated to Ahlwardt and Stoecker. (Doubtless the Jew had his faults, his defects, his vices, if you will. How could it be otherwise? Were they not largely the product—the inevitable product—of twenty centuries of peculiar and hostile treatment of the Jew by a whole world at enmity with, or jealous of, his ideals?) It was not the faults of the Jew that induced the attacks on him. Pogrom and Juden-hetze and anti-Semitism were but varying forms of the hostility aroused by his virtues. They were the proof that those virtues were telling effectively on the march of events equally in darkest Russia as in twilit Teutonia and luminous France.

It would, therefore, be treason against the highest in him for the Jew to abandon the splendid role he was playing on the splendid stage where the world drama was being acted.

Herzism was, in addition, unpractical. It was, indeed, a revolt against evil tendencies—but it was the wrong sort of revolt. Herzl could scarcely be regarded as an unconscious Messiah. His wrath against conditions was almost comical in its revelation of how newly-awakened was his Jewish consciousness. The very qualities—of extreme modernity, of scholastic training, of power of eloquent presentation—which gave attractiveness and force to his proposals were argument against them. Shall we arm and equip soldiers or train intellectual fighters, that they shall run away from the thick of the fight, that they shall avoid the press and stress of the combat?

Moreover, even if we ignored, deliberately, the fact that what gave him his hearing was the undying Messianic hope in the heart of orthodox Jewry—the gigantesque reve, the grandiose dream, which has haunted the soul of the Jew, by day and night, for a score of centuries and nourished a hope and a faith that were beautiful and life-giving—if we put that wholly aside his scheme lacked practicality. An arid, neglected land, ill-governed and oppressed, with Cadi-made law and Turkish modes of justice—how was this to be peopled by a folk unaccustomed to agriculture, not inured to productiveness?

Zionism (the 1896 brand) was impracticable. There was no hope, no outlook, no tachsif, for it. It lacked recognition of stubborn fact just as it lacked vision.

Zionism was mischievous. The movement, impossible of realization in 1896, nevertheless gave to the widest-spread charge against the Jew—that he was Vaterlands-los sans patris, unpatriotic by the very law of his being—a semblance of reason, an apparent foundation in fact.

Zionism was dangerous (in 1896). Sultan—Abdul the Damned; Kaiser—Wilhelm, the Wild; Czar—Nicholas, the Inept; all viewed the movement with strong personal interest. Each hoped for gain, or anticipated loss, to himself from the movement.

Lastly, who was to protect the new State from Kurd and Bedouin? Certainly not the Turk. His sovereignty over the wild desert mounds had never been more than nominal and no improvement in that direction was to be hoped for.

All this and more, I urged to Zangwill. Whether my arguments had any effect on him I cannot pretend to say. I know that shortly thereafter, he accompanied the party of the "Maccabees" in their famous trip of inspection of the Holy Land, and returned not wholly satisfied. Nor has he ever been a thick-and-thin and thorough-going Zionist.

Such, in brief, was my unswerving attitude towards the movement for the 20 years, 1897-1917.

But in the two years since then the aspect of affairs has so wholly changed that those older conditions seem like the vanished fabric of a nearly-forgotten nightmare. Gone are the Abduls with their Turkish Tyrannies. Eliminated are the Wilhelms and their dreams of Teutonic world-conquest. The neber-Mensch is less than man! Nicholas has "freed his weird," poor peoples, weak (if well-meaning) puppet of Fate! Russia is—but who shall say at this moment, what, or whither leading?

The Great War is over. New dreams and old hopes of new dawns are quickening the battle-scarred breast of the world. What the French journals rather finely called la croisade wilsonienne is happily on the march and fascinating mankind. The map of the world is being redrawn and the cartographers' duty is now a sacred and beautiful task, one for poets to sing and heroes to die for.

Nor Turk, nor Teuton, nor Russ, Kurd, nor Bedouin, any longer count in the problem. Half a million stalwart young Jews have learned the lesson of modern warfare and, so doing, have famed themselves. They know how to face death for an ideal; have learned the virtue of suffering and sacrifice; the beauty of manfulness in a hard and bitter school of training. Britain, fecund and successful mother of many nations, now rules over the Holy Land with a mandate from civilization. Behind her stands America, France, Italy. All are ready to support Jewish state settlement. All are approving and benevolent in attitude.

The dream is at length realized. It is no longer mischievous; it has ceased to be unpractical; it has become practicable. In the reborn world where races and peoples are to be self-determined and self-expressed, where fractious and aggressive nations are to be held in awe by the firm determination and supervision (in both senses of the word) of civilization, there is room and welcome for Zion; there is hope of the joy of the realization in these latter days of the "gigantic dream" of the Jewish people and it shall "renew its youth like the eagle."

It is now the duty of every Jew to help to the utmost of his power, the coming of this new day of God.

In Chaumont, General Pershing's headquarters in France, there were about 5,000 soldiers. It was an eminently practical place with a very business-like atmosphere. There was no idling there. Every man, from the highest to the lowest, had a definite task which experience had proved he was best fitted for, and "his nose was kept to the grindstone."

There were about 70 Jewish "boys" there—all specialists, and all of proven trustworthiness. Though it may be rather invidious to mention names, I cannot refrain from naming field clerks A. S. Weisberger and Hittner and Sgt. Manfred Krauskopf, as excellent specimens of the American Jewish "dough-boys." Poor Weisberger was later killed in an accident in Paris. He was a fine lovable lad, of high character, and exercised a most beneficial influence on the other Jewish boys in Chaumont. He was respected in life, and lamented in death by all who knew him. Peace to his ashes!

"Ask Hittner, he knows more about it than I do," was apt to be the response of a higher officer at G. H. Q. to an application for enlightening information from an emissary of a divisional H. Q. Krauskopf has been transferred to Chaumont on the Interpreters' Corps. The son of the Rev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf of Philadelphia, he is a good linguist and, in every way a credit to his family.

I conducted three services for the Jewish boys at G. H. Q. during the third week of February last. Attendances, 17, 38 and 35. The excuses for absence seemed always to be valid, but I felt rather chagrined with the absentees. As an inducement for a fuller attendance I offered to deliver a fourth address on any topic selected by the "boys" themselves, provided always that I felt competent to handle it. I was promptly taken at my word and was asked to speak on "Zionism." In vain I demurred. In vain I explained that I had been a pronounced opponent of Zionism for years and that while my attitude was now changed in view of recent developments, nevertheless, a true-blue dyed-in-the-wool Zionist would scarcely accept me as a brother, even now. All in vain. The boys wanted an address on Zionism, and Zionism it had to be. I insisted on the proviso that I should be free to put both sides of the question. That was readily agreed to.

Building Fund Campaign Growing. More than $2,000,000 has already been subscribed to the $10,000,000 United Building Fund Campaign for Federated Jewish Institutions, according to an announcement made by Col. H. A. Guinzburg, chairman of the campaign committee, at a meeting of leaders of various industries at the Bankers' Club in the Equitable building last week. Of this sum $1,641,000 had been subscribed up to last Friday afternoon by directors and officers of the federated institutions and the remainder in large individual donations.

The sum of $1,641,000 represents nearly one-third of the quota assigned to directors of institutions, who are now being canvassed by a directors' campaign committee, headed by Mr. Jacob H. Schiff. There are more than 1,500 directors and officers of Jewish institutions affiliated in this campaign. Of these, 500 have already contributed. With one-third of the directors contributing approximately one-third of the sum the committee is practically assured that its quota will be attained. This sum does not include gifts previously announced of $150,000 from George Blumenthal, banker and president of Mount Sinai Hospital, and $150,000 from Jacob H. Schiff, president of Montiflore Home and Hospital for Incurables.

Colonel Guinzburg also announced a gift of $80,000 from Mr. Nathan Hofheimer, a leader in the automobile and hardware industry and a director of the Home for Aged and Infirm. A donation of $50,000 was also received from Hon. Louis Marshall, who returned to the United States from France last week, where as a representative of American Jewry he fought for Jewish rights at the Peace Conference. At the banquet given in his honor Monday night he learned of the United Building Fund Campaign and the urgent needs of local institutions and immediately pledged this sum.

Addresses were made at the meeting of the industrial leaders by Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the Federation for Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies; Colonel Guinzburg, William Goldberg, chairman of the campaign among individuals; Louis J. Robertson, chairman of the Trades Committees; Dr. I. Edwin Goldwasser, assistant chairman, and Max D. Steuer. The speakers all reviewed the purposes of the campaign and the methods by which it is to be carried out. They explained the three phases of the campaign—the drive among the directors of institutions, among individuals and a public and trades campaign in September. They also told of the urgency of the needs of the institutions affiliated in the campaign and related that one of the institutions—the Federation Settlement of Harlem—had been forced to close its doors because of inadequate and deteriorated buildings. They stated that the building construction will start as soon as funds are collected, and emphasized the fact that while $10,000,000 had been spent for institutional building construction during the ten years preceding 1914, not one cent had been spent for this purpose between 1914 and 1919.

"Before the war broke out," Mr. Warburg said, "our institutions were spending an average of $1,000,000 a year for buildings. During the five years past no money has been expended on building construction. We must therefore spend $2,000,000 a year for the next five years to cover our neglect. This sum cannot be raised unless every Jew contributes, and he must contribute, for the cause deserves it. That same pride which prompted the Jews to stand by the government during her time of need should prompt them now to stand by their own people."

Brandeis Party Completes Palestine Tour.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, of the United States Supreme Court, has completed a tour of Palestine and is now en route for Paris. The party, which included Jacob de Haas and Prof. Alfred Zimmern, of the University of Wales and former British Foreign Under Secretary, visited Jaffa, Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and over twenty Jewish colonies in Judea, Galilee and Samaria. On the return trip the Brandeis party was joined by Dr. Harry Fr. Edenwald, of Baltimore, and Robert Szold, of Washington. Mr. Brandeis, it is expected, will return to this country in time to report to the Zionist convention, which will begin in Chicago September 14.

For all baking purposes, Pillsbury's Best XXXX Flour milled from hard wheat has advantages you will quickly discover. It is dry and very rich in gluten. It, therefore, absorbs lots of water in mixing and the dough rises so wonderfully that bigger loaves are obtained than from the same quantity of soft wheat flour

Then, too, the flavor is delicious and the color a rich creamy-white. In nutriment, it furnishes all that can be obtained from the most nutritious wheat in the world.

The closing concert of the series of free concerts at Columbia University, under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman and the New York Military Band, takes place this (Friday) evening. The band and its energetic conductor have achieved such an artistic success, that many managers are now trying to arrange for a tour of the country. These concerts were organized by Edwin Franko Goldman, who raised the necessary funds and assumed entire charge of the management. During the past six weeks there were more than 15,000 people in attendance at each concert and in some instances the audiences numbered between 25,000 and 27,000. It is estimated that nearly three-quarters of a million people will have attended the thirty concerts. Plans are now being made for next summer when the seating capacity will be increased to 30,000. Besides the three concerts a week at Columbia University it is planned to give three additional concerts each week in other parts of the city, probably in the more congested parts. Funds are now being raised for this purpose.

THE CLOSING CHAPTER OF THE JEWISH WELFARE BOARD IN FRANCE.

By Colonel Harry Cutler.
Thousands of men of all nationalities were made happy, and the Jewish spirit brought anew into many lives, and the name of the Jewish Welfare Board enshrined in the hearts of the boys in khaki, before we began the disorganization of our work abroad. When word came that the War Department would take over the work of the war welfare agencies in France, we hauled down the blue and white standard of the Jewish Welfare Board from our forty huts throughout France and Germany, with a sense of accomplishment, of a difficult task well done.

When I came to France, in February, 1919, mine was the task of expanding the work of the Jewish Welfare Board to meet the new conditions which arose after the signing of the armistice.

"It was found desirable that the Jewish Welfare Board, the youngest of the seven agencies engaged in welfare work in the army overseas, be given a wider latitude, and, what was more important, be given autonomy and independence. In accordance with the suggestions received from General Pershing, through Raymond B. Fosdick, we had been functioning and operating under the Y. M. C. A.

My first act was to take up with the proper authorities the status of the Jewish Welfare Board in France, and as a result the Jewish Welfare Board was given authority to deal directly with army departments, transportation, quartermaster, signal corps, commissary and all branches whose work in any way made contact with that of the Jewish Welfare Board. This enabled us at once to extend the work and to carry out the principle for which the American public had generously contributed, namely, hospitality and entertainment to all men in the service regardless of faith or creed, a principle which underlies all the activity of the Jewish Welfare Board.

What followed later constitutes a record of unbroken extension, growth and development of our work overseas. When I came to France we had but a few centers with a personnel of 57. When I left Paris 40 Jewish Welfare Board huts and stations were flying the blue Mogen David. It is only because we had the unstinted and unqualified cooperation of the army that the Jewish Welfare Board huts were erected in quick succession in new areas, points of embarkation, casual camps and occupied territory in Germany, Luxembourg and Belgium, and the work proceeded in full swing. Some people seem to be under the impression that the Jewish Welfare Board was organized to function only for men of the Jewish faith. This is not so. And that this is not so was demonstrated time and again in France. In the Le Mans area, for instance, it has been shown from our records 56 to 60 per cent. of the soldiers making use of the recreational facilities of the Jewish Welfare Board were non-Jewish. In the Treves section of Germany, our quarters were continually visited by about 90 per cent. non-Jewish soldiers, while other sectors averaged about 50 to 60 per cent. of non-Jews in attendance. It is only fair, however, to mention that in all this we did not lose sight of the special needs of our Jewish men.

Full opportunity was given to our own men for the observance of Jewish ceremonies and rites. So, for instance, Passover was made the occasion of a great Jewish rally. Unleavened bread was furnished at the request of the War Department by the Jewish Welfare Board to all Jewish soldiers. 150,000 pounds were baked in France, while large quantities of matzohs were baked at army bases at Coblenz. Through arrangements with the French Government and the Food Commission under Mr. Hoover we were allowed to purchase raw material not obtainable through any other source. The high water mark, however, of Jewish life in the A. E. F. was reached at the great Seder service arranged by the Jewish Welfare Board in Paris. This Seder service will long stand out as a memorable event in the minds of all those who attended it. High personages graced our Seder table. Marshall Poch sent his Chief of Staff and General Pershing was represented. In addition to our own army representatives, many Jewish delegates to the Peace Conference from Russia, Ukraine, Roumania, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Palestine and other countries were present. It was indeed an all-Jewish congress in miniature.

"This was only one way of serving our men, and we served them in more than one way. I might mention one very interesting instance. At the request of the War Department we gave in the second army, General Wiegels' division, a show, entitled 'Who Can Tell?' which was performed by 150 soldiers, 60 of whom took female parts with such success that the general in his speech said he would consider increasing military police at the stage door. The properties and costumes alone cost about 100,000 francs. This was considered the best show in the A. E. F., and was played to about three to four thousand men every night at Grandcourt and other sections of the A. E. F. in France, as well as in Germany. It was at this play that President and Mrs. Wilson favored the Jewish Welfare Board with their presence.

It was activities of this sort carried on by the Jewish Welfare Board as an autonomous and independent member of the welfare agencies operating in France that gave us a chance to prove that the Jewish Welfare Board has rendered distinctive services to all men in uniform, irrespective of race and creed; it further provided us with the opportunity of showing our own boys they were not stepchildren of Uncle Sam, but his rightful sons, with equal privileges as well as duties.

Such was the magnitude of the work that I doubt very much whether any single person could have done full justice to it, and I deem myself particularly fortunate for being in the company of other gentlemen whose aim was to cope with the great task of expanding the work of the Jewish Welfare Board in France. In perplexing questions touching activities of the Jewish Welfare Board in France I had the good advice of Dr. Cyrus Adler, our vice-chairman, and, whenever his time permitted, also of Mr. Louis Marshall, of our Executive Committee. The encouragement given to me personally by these men and the aid they have extended me in the work of the Jewish Welfare Board expansion in France has put me under a great personal obligation to them. When on a tour of inspection through the third army in Germany I was forced by circumstances to return to the States, our vice-chairman, Dr. Adler, assumed my position without a minute's delay, and, judging from reports that have reached me since, helped to write a memorable closing chapter in the history of the Jewish Welfare Board.

Concert to Aid Hebrew Infants.

In aid of the building fund of the Infants' Home now being erected as an annex to the Hebrew Kindergarten Day and Night Nursery at 35-37 Montgomery street, a concert will take place on Saturday, August 9, at the Far Rockaway Club House, Greenpoint avenue, Far Rockaway, L. I. Among the artists to appear will be:—Mr. Max Dolin, the Russian violinist; Mr. Leopold Bubov, the blind pianist; Miss Francesca Marni, the famous soprano, and a number of others.

The institution is carrying on a campaign for $50,000 needed to complete the new Infants' Home. Hon. Otto A. Rosalsky, Judge of General Sessions, is honorary chairman of the committee, which includes Mr. Bernard Reich, Sam Witty, Sam C. Lampert, Hon. Samson Friedlander, Rev. H. Masliansky, Joseph S. Marcus, Jacob Rabinowitz and Louis Singer.

It is expected that the new home will be dedicated in the fall.

The Hebrew Kindergarten Day and Night Nursery takes care of about 250 children, whose mothers go out to work and an Infants' Home which for the summer is located at 155 Cedar avenue, Far Rockaway, for the little babes who have been left orphaned as a result of the terrible influenza epidemic last year.

Temple Sisterhoods to Issue Book of Consolation.

At the request of the Executive Committee of the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods the Executive Committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis has decided to issue "A Book of Consolation and Prayer," containing Biblical and Rabbinical reflections of a cheering and consolatory character.

The publication of this book, which has been authorized by the members of the Conference through a mail vote, is the outgrowth of a need which has long been felt by the women of the congregations affiliated with the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

Rev. Dr. Leo M. Franklin, of Detroit, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, has appointed a committee with instructions to present the material for the book to the autumn meeting of the Conference Executives. The action will assure a speedy compilation of the book and the early appearance of the volume.

Long Branch Synagogue.

Last Sabbath there was an unusually large congregation present when Rev. Joseph Rosenblatt officiated in his unusual unapproachable style. Rev. Prof. M. M. Kaplan made a plea for a new synagogue and his talk resulted in a meeting being called for this Sunday afternoon when some definite steps will be taken.

Mr. Jacob H. Schiff was among those in the audience and was called to the reading of the Haftorah after which he read the Haftorah in a manner to make his orthodox friends sit up and take notice.

Rev. Dr. Max Drob, rabbi-elect of the Washington Heights Congregation will preach this coming Sabbath.

usual. I spoke for about 40 minutes, being skediously simple in diction and straightforward and outspoken in statement. Never had I spoken to a more interested or attentive audience—not a movement, not the slightest token of inattention was to be noted.

I traced, briefly, the story of the urge towards Zion since the Dispersion. I dealt with the latest manifestation with unglved hands. But when I came to state the case for Zion I found the Jew in 'one breaking thought all restraint, and I caught myself pleading with favor for Zion. One of the "boys" told me afterwards that he had been greatly struck by a statement I had made. When a lad, I told them, in a distant land, I had a Hebrew teacher who was an ardent Messianist and who many years before the movement had anticipated in suggesting the ideas of the later chovivai Zion.

"The great Temple," he taught me, "crowned the highest summit of Zion's hills. Its dome was of burnished gold. When the sun rose and set its earliest and latest rays illuminated the golden dome in a gleaming of glory. Far and wide was the splendor visible. The wandering Bedouin marked the scene and found his way over the pathless desert by its glow. At sea, afloat on 'The Great Sea's' trackless billows the mariner steered his bark safe to haven by the light from God's House.

"Whether my teacher's statement was substantially true I could not at the moment say. But I asked the boys to accept it as the emblem of the future of Zionism. Crowning the heights and reflecting God's splendor the restored Zion would be a beaconlight to guide the intellectual wanderer in the Sea of Doubt; a guiding pillar of glory to the straying seeker for spiritual Truth. Once more would Zion 'beautiful in situation be the joy of the whole earth.' Again would 'Torah go out from Zion, and the message of God from Jerusalem.'

The intense interest of the audience reacted on the speaker and I found myself breaking my resolve to be judicially impartial and growing dithyrambic in favor of Zionism. I broke off abruptly and, laughing at my own unwonted enthusiasm, I placed the topic in their hands for general debate. Very quickly a vigorous discussion began. In one instance English was inadequate for the expression of the thoughts of a Jewish heart and Yiddish was employed. There was no criticism adverse to the theory of Zionism. But the great question was, "Can it be me to go?" Unlike myself, who had practically completed my own conversion by speaking on the question, my audience needed no argument in favor of Zionism. There seemed to be no exception to this rule. "Aber," said he whose English was inadequate to the exigencies: "Los uns reden Tachlis." "Let's get at the practical side of the matter."

Question after question poured in on me. I found myself unable to answer some of them, when I was happily relieved from embarrassment by unlooked for aid. Sergeant Krauskopf, glowing of eye and flushed of cheek, rose and modestly thought he might be able to answer the questioner. For high an hour after that he was the unquestioned master of the meeting, to my great delight. I stood aside, a profoundly interested, but silent, spectator. Krauskopf a well-informed young gentleman in any case, was particularly strong with respect to his father's "National Farm School." He gave details about its working, its aims, its results. All difficulties vanished before his suggested solutions.

At length, Weisberger turned to me and said: "Why not strike while the iron's hot, Rabbi? Let's establish a branch of the Zionist Society here and now. Do you think there can be any objection to our doing so?" I could not see, at the moment, what objection there could be or from whom; and I said so. On the motion of Weisberger, the Chaumont Branch of the Zionist Society was founded at about ten o'clock on the night of Sunday, February 24, 1919. Some of the "boys" had been forced by duty to leave the meeting before this point was reached, but thirty-seven names were enrolled, my own heading the list. Then Weisberger—practical man—called for "shekels." But what was a shekel? was the question. Weisberger decided that a franc and a half from each would be an acceptable substitute. We all paid. I being again the first. Before the end of the following week, as I was afterwards told, every Jewish lad in Chaumont was enrolled. Thus was formed the first and, so far as I know, the only branch of the Zionist body organized in the A. E. F.

A day or two later I recalled the incident, gleefully, to Dr. D. S. Bloodheim, at that time "Overseas Director" of the J. W. B., in Paris. Bloodheim was an ardent Zionist, but, to my great surprise, took the matter very seriously. He argued that my action was inadvisable as the J. W. B. might be, in consequence, amenable to the charge of conducting political propaganda in the A. E. F. He begged me very earnestly not to let the thing happen again. This aspect of the matter had not occurred to me at all. Of course I gave the required promise and, so far as I know, it did not happen again.

There was a somewhat surprising sequel to the foregoing incident and the reader may find it interesting.

About two months later I was again in Paris, interviewing Col. Cutler, the chairman of the J. W. B., at the moment in charge of the Overseas Work. My business over I was on the point of retiring when he asked me to remain. I might be needed presently, he said. I waited for a brief period, the door opened and Dr. Cyrus Adler, the vice-chairman, accompanied by a stranger to me, entered the room. I greeted Dr. Adler and was about discreetly to retire when Col. Cutler said: "Don't go. This gentleman wishes to see you." He introduced the stranger, whose name I have now forgotten, saying: "This gentleman is a Federal Secret Service officer. I may tell you that G. H. Q. has cabled to Washington asking for an investigation into the activities of the various welfare workers, and Mr. — wishes to question you on the matter."

The Washington man then said that one result of his inquiry had been a charge that I was active in the interests of an association—for which I was forming branches among the Jewish soldiers in the A. E. F.—called, he thought, either "The Knights of Jerusalem" or "The Knights of Judah" or "Judas"—he was not sure which. I smiled and said: "I suppose you refer to 'The Knights of Judas Iscariot?'" "Yes," he replied, "I think that's the name." "Are you sure," I continued, "that I am the man now referred to? Was my name really mentioned?" "Oh, yes," he returned. "Rabbi Jacob Goldstein?" "That's my name, certainly," I said. "Where am I supposed to be organizing this association?" "It is charged," he answered, "that you began the work among the Australian forces, and have since been continuing it in the A. E. F."

I pledged my word of honor that there was no truth in the rumor; that I knew nothing of the societies mentioned; that I regretted I had never had an opportunity of addressing the Australian soldiers. Perhaps the whole absurd story was based on the Chaumont incident, which I recounted in detail. I had been asked, I said, not to let the incident recur and it had not done so. He listened to my statement and made no comment nor had he any further questions to ask.

I do not flatter myself that he was specially sent from Washington to investigate me, but the rumor about my activities was a lesson to me on the exquisite care with which it was desirable to guide my steps and watch my actions while working with the A. E. F. of glorious memory.

Roumania Asks Jews to Protest Against Minority Rights—Wants Jews to Work Against Own Interests.

London, July 31.—The Roumanian Government asks the Jews to work against their own interests and to protest against the concessions given the Jews by the Peace Conference. While Roumania does not express it in the same words, it practically amounts to the same thing when it issues an appeal to the Jewish population similar to the one issued by the Polish Government calling upon the Jewish citizens to protest against minority rights on the ground that such rights given to small nations are tantamount to an insult to the sovereignty of their country. The Jews, of course, refuse to comply with this request of their government, which, if granted, would amount to the Jews' asking the Peace Conference to return the Jewish status to its pre-war condition. The government, naturally, is not satisfied with the Jews' refusal to obey the appeal.

Ben-Ami's Struggles for a Better Yiddish Stage.

One of the most interesting figures in Yiddish theatricals is Jacob Ben-Ami. Ben-Ami, in the few years that he has been in the United States, has done more for the elevation of the Yiddish stage than any other actor or group of actors. In justice to those other members of the profession, it should be noted, that most of them aspired to higher levels, but could not rise to any great heights. Ben-Ami is one of the few Yiddish artists, who in early life conceived the ambition to become an actor. He was not content to fritter away his youth with amateur theatricals, but went directly to the professional stage. Being the son of well-to-do, orthodox Jewish parents, he encountered parental objections which he overcame. Young and immature as he was, Ben-Ami quickly realized the utter degradation of the Yiddish theatre in Russia. Young Ben-Ami aimed higher, and to attain his goal he joined a Russian dramatic troupe. This he did for the purpose of mastering the technique of the stage.

After spending a few seasons with the Russian troupe, Ben-Ami returned to the Yiddish stage. It was at this time that he met Peretz Hirshbein, who had organized a company of Yiddish players. Ben-Ami joined Hirshbein, and together they toured the larger cities in Russia. This enterprise did not prosper, because of a Czarist decree which prohibited the use of the Yiddish tongue on the stage, and rather than deliver their lines in the jargon adopted by other Yiddish actors Ben-Ami abandoned the Yiddish theatre.

The four years or more since his arrival in the United States Ben-Ami devoted to efforts to establish a Jewish art theatre. With the exception of a brief season at the Neighborhood Playhouse in conjunction with Henrietta Schnitzer, a talented young Yiddish actress, and his purely personal success at the Irving Place Theatre, where he was instrumental in producing Hirshbein's plays, his efforts were practically fruitless.

It was Ben-Ami who recognized the great value of Emanuel Reicher as an art director of a Jewish art theatre. It would not be violating any confidences to record the fact that Mr. Reicher saw Ben-Ami act, and that he was deeply impressed with this young Jew's talent, intelligence and temperament. Mr. Ben-Ami feels that the creation of the Jewish Art Theatre, for which he strives these many years in Czar-ridden Russia and in this country, will place the Yiddish stage in a position where true Yiddish art will find its sincere expression.

Mr. Ben-Ami is particularly gratified at the fact that the Jewish Art Theatre will open its season with a Peretz Hirshbein play. The play selected is the "Puste Kretschme," (The Deserted Inn) and is already in rehearsal.

A Historic Jewish Gathering.

The recent return of the Jewish Congress Delegation to the Peace Conference, and their achievements in the securing of full rights for the Jews in the lands where they have been discriminated against, as evidenced by the treaty with Poland and the assurances of similar rights in the treaties to be signed with Roumania and other countries, makes particularly timely the recent appearance of the complete proceedings of the American Jewish Congress, published by the Congress Committee, at 1 Madison Avenue, New York. The historic Congress sessions were held in Philadelphia in December, 1918, and at those sessions were adopted resolutions which have become the basis of the rights granted and clauses of which resolutions have been substantially incorporated in the treaty with Poland, and will, it is expected, be incorporated in the treaties with Roumania and other countries.

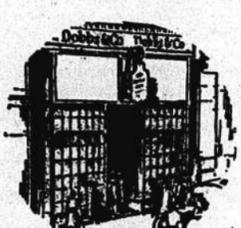

The report is a complete record of the proceedings of the eight sessions that made up the first gathering of the American Jewish Congress. The speeches delivered by Mr. Nathan Straus, Judge Julian W. Mack, Mr. Louis Marshall, Colonel Harry Cutler and others are given in full, from the impressive opening session in the Metropolitan Opera House to the closing and solemn ceremonies of the last session. The full text of all the resolutions adopted are given, together with the interesting discussions leading up to their adoption. The book contains the congratulatory messages received from America's most prominent statesmen and private citizens, and from Jewish communities and organizations in all parts of the United States. A complete list of the delegates to the congress and of the congress officers is included. Altogether the book presents a desirable and accurate record of a great and democratic achievement in American Jewry.

Copies of the book may be had by applying to the American Jewish Congress, 1 Madison Avenue, New York.

Rabbis Ask Roumania to Occupy Kaminitz-Podolsk and Surrounding Cities. London, July 30.—The situation of the Jews in Ukraine is getting worse from day to day. No day passes without new massacres on Jews. Seventy-seven Jews were killed in Kitoegrad and many hundreds were wounded; five Jews were killed in Urinji; several hundred Jewish families were completely annihilated in Uman.

The newspaper "Rosta," which appears in Chernigov, reports that no less than 190,000 Jews were killed in Ukraine since the armistice was signed.

The rabbis of Kaminitz-Podolsk sized up the situation and know that further massacres may be expected. They appealed, therefore, to the Roumanian Government to take over Kaminitz-Podolsk, Chatin, and the cities within a radius of 25 miles.

CORRESPONDENCE.

An Appeal for Roumanian Jewish Unity.

Editor Hebrew Standard: On the 24th of this month the American Union of Roumanian Jews received a communication from the Joint Distribution Committee, signed by the secretary, Mr. Albert Lucas, which reads as follows:

"I take this opportunity to inform you that in an account just received from Miss Lowenstein, I find that $340,000 in money was sent from our branch in Paris for distribution in Roumania. This money was taken into Roumania by two of our own representatives. The shipment of clothing, etc., for Roumania, about which I previously advised you, is now being loaded although I understand that there has been some delay caused by the strike."

Simultaneously with the receipt of afore-mentioned communication, our attention was called to a circular announcing the fact that certain Roumanian Jews are organizing mass meetings here and elsewhere for the purpose of soliciting, raising and collecting, from Roumanian Jews, money to be sent to Roumania for the relief of the Jewish war victims, etc.

We do, therefore, deem it our duty to appeal to, and warn our countrymen not to organize themselves into a separate clan and thus ostracize themselves from the rest of the American Jewish community.

It is not our purpose to attribute any ulterior motive, dishonest or dishonorable intention to the action of the gentlemen in calling the mass meetings alluded to above; but we are convinced that they are ignorant of the true state of affairs and unfamiliar with the facts, or are being misled.

The Jews of this country, wherever they may hail from, have contributed millions of dollars for the relief of Jewish War Sufferers, to be distributed by the Joint Distribution Committee (a committee composed of, and represented on its executive body by every shade and element of American Jewry) without any distinction or specific stipulation whatsoever. The Joint Distribution Committee, by the inauguration of a thorough system of scrutiny, investigation and analysis, second to none, succeeded in reaching every unfortunate man, woman or child in the lands of the belligerents, and relieving them in a manner which challenges the admiration and approval of the Jews throughout the world. Now, more than ever, millions of dollars will be needed for rehabilitation and construction purposes, for clothing, raw material, food, etc., which our unfortunate brethren abroad could not even buy with money.

Who is in a better position to buy all the clothing and whatever material they need abroad, at cost price, if it need be, than the Joint Distribution Committee?

Why give us Roumanian Jews undesired notoriety, compromising publicity, and a black eye, to be pointed at by all others of our brethren.

Please discourage such meetings of Roumanian Jews for Roumanian Jews, refuse to give money for Roumanian Jewish War Sufferers exclusively. Give as much as you can directly to the Joint Distribution Committee, 20 Exchange Place, towards the "General Fund" for the relief of all the Jewish War Sufferers, wherever they may be.

In this calamity and catastrophe, more than any other, we are Jews, children of one people.

DR. P. A. SIEGELSTEIN, President American Union of Roumanian Jews. New York, August 1, 1919.

Editor Hebrew Standard: Herewith enclosed find a letter from "The Ontwood" at Mt. Pocono, Pa., which might interest you and which you may use as you think proper.

It seems to me that the present is a very poor time to draw race lines. The proprietors of this wonderful establishment, which cannot tolerate Hebrews, evidently forgot that a great deal of Jewish blood was shed during the war, so that they may feel safe and protected at home.

I firmly believe that publicity should be given this establishment so that fair-minded people may condemn them.

Zionism Revives in Germany.

"During the war Zionism in Germany has had to cope with many difficulties, which need not here be descanted upon. Suffice it to say that the policy which led to such great success in London could not possibly have been tried in Berlin," says a correspondent of the London Zionist Review. "It required all the efforts of the executive, while its headquarters were still in Berlin, to relieve the economic distress of the Jewish colonies in Palestine and to protect them from the persecution of the Turks, especially of Djemal Pasha. The greater part of the relief funds, it is true, was provided by the American Jews, but the work done by German Zionists in this field was very considerable. For political protection also the colonies had to turn to the Berlin executive and their representatives at Constantinople and in Palestine. In spite of all impediments and difficulties the success which attended the efforts of the Berlin 'central office' in this sphere was very marked.

"In German Zionist circles the reports of the economic difficulties of the colonies of the persecutions under the Turkish regime and finally of the successes of the British troops in Palestine were followed with the greatest interest. Nowhere probably was the British declaration or the entry of the British into Jerusalem greeted more fervently than among the adherents of the Zionist movement in Germany. The Judische Rundschau, the official organ of the German Zionists, in spite of the censorship, welcomed these events with an enthusiasm which caused no small sensation, not only in Germany itself, but in many parts of the old Hapsburg monarchy and of Russia, where that organ circulates.

"With the Zionist idea apparently so near to its realization the possibilities of going to Palestine are being eagerly discussed. The conference of delegates of the Zionist Federation of Germany, held last December—the first since the outbreak of the war—was permeated with a Palestinian spirit. An excellent paper on Palestine was read by Mr. Lichtheim, who, basing his remarks on Dr. Ruppin's work, discussed the possibilities and capacities of Palestine, the cost of colonization, the problems of social status and the question of mixed industries. The outline which he drew of Jewish work in Palestine was more complete than that contained in any of his previous reports given at Zionist congresses and conferences. A special Palestine commission was elected to deal with questions relating to the nationalization of the land and similar matters; and a special conference will be called later on for the same purpose. The commission will be composed entirely of men with intimate knowledge of Palestine conditions. The most pressing problem with which it will have to deal is the prevention of land speculation; it will also devote its attention to the adjustment of social conditions on a righteous and equitable basis. Another important question is the pace at which colonization is to proceed during the next few years. Many Zionists share the view of Dr. Ruppin and Mr. Lichtheim, that immigration should not exceed 20,000 in the first decennium, 40,000 in the second, and so on, and that it should be mainly agricultural at first and industrial only later on. Others, however, are of opinion that it is imperative to do something to relieve the need of the Jews of eastern Europe, and that therefore larger numbers than those mentioned above must be provided for, and so attention should be given in the first place to industrial development.

"The great interest displayed in Palestine has led to the foundation of a new periodical, called Volk und Land. The donations to the Jewish National Fund are also increasing. A movement is on foot to collect a million marks in 1919 in Germany alone, and it may be safely assumed that this sum will be exceeded. The last week of April was celebrated as the Palestine week of the J. N. F. throughout Germany. All meetings were so crowded that overflow meetings had to be held at the same time. Among the speakers at the Berlin gathering were Warburg, Ruppin, Klee and Lichtheim.

"While the interest of German Zionists has tended lately to concentrate on Palestine, yet propaganda work among the assimilated Jews has not been neglected. There is, perhaps, no country in the world where assimilation was so firmly entrenched, and where the fight between the assimilating elements and the Zionists was so obstinate as in Germany. The "Germans of the Jewish persuasion" have not been converted even by the lessons of the war; but they have at least learned to face facts. They no longer dare to pooh pooh Zionism as a mere dream, nor have they the face to declare that they will have nothing to do with Palestine. The unexpected political success of the Zionist movement, and the triumphant manner in which the unity of world Jewry has withstood the shock of the war, have forced the German assimilationists to make far-reaching concessions, and their leaders can no longer refuse the demands made of them to take part in the work of building up the new Palestine. They also agree to the principle that the rights of the Jewish minorities in the east of Europe should be effectively secured. In one point, however, they are still offering resistance. They still deny that the Jews are a nation, and therefore oppose the Zionist endeavor to reorganize the Jewish communities in Germany on a democratic and national basis. The German Zionist Federation intends to convoke a Jewish Congress for Germany, which only those who espouse the national idea will be invited to attend. The whole controversy between the Zionists and Assimilationists really revolves round the term 'national.'

"The Zionist program for the proposed Congress demands not only a Jewish and autonomous Palestine, but also the introduction among the Jewish communities of Germany of a democratic franchise, and their transformation from religious into national communities (Volksgemeinden). At present the franchise in the Jewish communities of Germany is incredibly reactionary. It is graduated according to the amount of tax paid, so that the poor are disfran-ched altogether. The officials of the communities are also excluded from voting, and the 'foreign' Jews likewise, so that a representation of minorities is impossible. In other respects also, Zionists have grave cause of complaint against the communal organization. A very large part of the Jewish youth in Germany is growing up without any knowledge of the Hebrew language and of Jewish history. Not a single community is competent to deal adequately with social questions, with the tending of the poor and sick, and with the care of emigrants passing through Germany. In short, the Jewish communities, as they are at present, are not centers of Jewish life, and form no link in the chain of world Jewry. One can, therefore, understand why the German Zionists have inserted these demands in their program. It is evident that only through the reorganization of the Jewish communities can a new Jewish life arise. The coming generation, especially, must be made familiar with Zionist ideals, and it is gratifying to record that the Jewish youth of Germany shows strong Zionist leanings as is evidenced by the 'Blau-Weiss' Jewish Touring Clubs, to which several thousand boys and girls belong, by the great Zionist Students' Associations, and the Gymnastic and Business Men's Associations.

"Thus Zionism in Germany is again showing great vitality, in spite of the terrible sacrifices in human life which the Jews have suffered here as in all other countries. Most Zionists would like to take a personal part in the rebuilding of Palestine, but, as not all will be able to do so, they can at least work here for the reorganization of German Jewry."

The governor may designate justices of the supreme court to fill vacancies. No justice shall serve as associate judge of the court of appeals except while holding the office of justice of the supreme court, and no more than seven judges shall sit in any case. We observed an advertisement of the Texas Christian University in a recent issue of The Jewish Monitor, of Fort Worth, Texas. Here is food for a sermon. An educational institution, in the title and work of which Christianity undoubtedly plays a considerable part, advertising its facilities to the readers of a Jewish journal! Surely no conversionist thoughts underlay this courteous act.

The dinner tendered to Louis Marshall last week upon his arrival from Paris was held at the Waldorf-Astoria, which is still regarded as the representative hotel of America. The management went out of their way to provide a meal in strict accordance with the dietary regulations and at the conclusion Rabbi M. S. Margolies benshed, the diners joining in the responses. And yet there are those champions of reform who will insist that traditional Judaism is a dead issue and fast decaying.

The Scottish Court of Session at Edinburgh recently decided that a hotel is a common inn, the proprietor of which is accordingly bound to supply travelers with refreshment and accommodation. This judgment was pronounced because, it appeared, a railway company's hotel had refused accommodation to an intending guest on the score of his being a Jew. The decision harmonizes with earlier adjudications in this State. A hotelkeeper is required to place his facilities at the disposal of all intending guests, who demean themselves properly, as far and as long as these facilities extend.

Of course, The Jewish Chronicle as a good Zionist organ is not completely satisfied with the new Polish treaty and with the complete provision for the civil, religious and political rights of minorities, including Jews, in Eastern Europe, vouchsafed by the Peace Congress. Nothing will satisfy the "old lady of Finsbury Square" but the speedy realization, in terms of nationalism, of the Zionist program for Palestine. So, The Jewish Chronicle bemoans and bewails the great delays which have ensued in the negotiations for the Turkish treaty of peace. As if Jewish nationalism, under the glare thrown on it, still had a chance?

We learn that a movement is now on foot to erect a monument to Heinrich Heine, Germany's great poet of democracy in an appropriate part of Berlin. It is high time that the capital city of the German Reich should contain such a memorial, for in that country there are all too few of such statues. We do not discover in this reported action a proof that anti-Semitism in Germany has ceased to be. On the contrary, we look upon it as demonstrating that such Germans as admire Heine the democratic lyricist, Heine the iconoclast of imperialism, rather than Heine the Jew by race, are prepared to carry out their professions in imperishable bronze and marble. Not until we shall behold a monument, say to Meib of Rothenburg in the principal square of the chief city in Southern Germany, shall we say that anti-Semitism there is indeed, a dead issue.

M. Israel Levi, the new Grand Rabbin of France, is exceptionally well known and favorably regarded in the world of Jewish scholarship. For a long number of years his name has been a household word among Jewish learned men the world over. He has made substantial contributions to a number of departments of Jewish learning and has done considerable to lift the scholarly position of French Jewry to its present high plane. M. Levi comes by inheritance, as it were, to the exalted post he was recently chosen to fill. He is the son-in-law of the late Zadoc Kahn, one of the greatest Grand Rabbins of France in modern times. While, of course, M. Levi was elected Grand Rabbin on his own merit and by reason of his own attainments, yet it must not be forgotten that one born to the purple wears it oftentimes better than the man who achieves such a distinction through pushing persistence. For one thing, M. Levi understands how to represent his great community worthily and with dignity. This is a highly important feature of the duty of the Grand Rabbin of France.

THE MORGENTHAU REPORT.

EX-AMBASSADOR HENRY MORGENTHAU, the head of the commission appointed by President Wilson to investigate the Polish pogroms, is quoted in newspaper dispatches from Paris as having stated to pressmen there that his brief visit to Poland had convinced him that the reports of the pogroms were tremendously exaggerated. In the absence of a definite account of his trip and of the detailed conclusions found by the commissioner himself, in other words, in our present lack of a clear-cut narrative emanating from Mr. Morgenthau, all we can do is to comment on the foregoing declaration in very general terms.

The Polish pogroms were accepted as notably sad but irrefragable facts by a large part of the Jewries of Europe and America, and here as well as in London protest parades, meetings and similar demonstrations occurred. From the outset this situation has been enshrouded in a good deal of mystery, those of the community who accepted the tale of the pogroms being opposed by others who scouted it and who were reinforced in their opinions by the testimony of some Polish Jews and of United States Minister Hugh S. Gibson. Especially did the Zionists "whip up" the outrages perpetrated on the Jews of Poland as advantageous though regrettable elements of their propaganda, and the conflict they waged in opposition to anti-Zionists on this head went on apace.

Mr. Morgenthau has of late adopted an attitude of uncompromising hostility to the nationalist claims of the Zionists, for which reason his rather informal statement to the newspapermen at Paris will be literally torn to shreds by organs in sympathy with Zionist aims. This fact the ex-ambassador must have considered when he spoke as he did, according to the press dispatches. This circumstance lends additional weight to his utterance. At the same time it serves to make essential the direct report from Mr. Morgenthau himself, to which we alluded at the outset of these remarks.

Until such a report is forthcoming, and, under the indicated conditions, it should be forthcoming forthwith, we think it but fair to all concerned, and not least to the unfortunate victims of the outrages, to suspend judgment in the matter. Mr. Morgenthau was sent on his official mission by the President of the United States; he is, therefore, entitled to be heard fully and patiently.

It is well that prohibition has not become the order of the day in England, else the Anglo-Jewish press would be compelled to end its accounts of the drinking power of the partakers at communal banquets in days long gone by. Such topics, even though they deal with the remote past, are taboo in a community which has perforce made itself "bone dry." The thought of Sir Moses Montefiore, of blessed memory, being a moderate but highly intelligent friend of the seductive port wine of his ancestral Portugal is enough to make him who reads the narrative sigh for the days that are gone but not forgotten. And the reader who cannot exercise more than an ordinary amount of self-control or will-power, may well be driven to the expedient of seeking out a physician, to enable him to imitate Sir Moses' illuminating example safely and sanely and, what is now of supreme importance, within the law.

The actual right to exist of the Jewish Welfare Board inevitably ceases with the conclusion of the demobilization process at present under way. The board was created to subserve a temporary need. That need has now in large part ceased to operate and, when the final stages of demobilization are concluded, it will wholly end. Such being the fact the Jewish Welfare Board should go gracefully out of existence along with the need responsible for its creation. How the board responded to the demands made upon it is not the question which concerns us here and now. We state frankly that, to our mind, there is no occasion for the board to continue as a permanent institution of American Jewish life. It should arrange its affairs now and set its house completely in order, making adequate provision for the permanent preservation of its useful and highly creditable records by an appropriate communal agency. Beyond this we should not further hear of or from it.

This is the day when more than one minister of our own and other faiths chafes under the galling restraints that bind him to his calling. Why? Is not the rabbinic the noblest work to which man can dedicate his life? Is not the ministry, so far as the non-Jews are concerned, the most soul-satisfying vineyard in which the workers of the Lord may labor? On the face of it, all return an unhesitating and ungrudging "yes" to this query, and yet, the fact that many a minister is deflected into other fields of usefulness contradicts the affirmative reply. What, then, is the impelling motive which produces such shifts? Are the emoluments held out to ministers, including rabbis, not sufficiently great in these days of swollen profits and gigantic incomes to keep these men in their chosen life work? We should hate to believe that this is the main motive which prompts so many ministers to forsake their noble calling, yet it is true that the hope of bettering one's condition, or of financial reward, is largely responsible for this result. Of course, there are other compelling causes. The minister may not be happy in his environment and there are a thousand and one little situations which influence this happiness and react on his temperament. In the foregoing remarks we have simply stated the facts. We have not upbraided those responsible for the conditions we are considering, nor have we attempted, to preach at them. Finally, in this case no solution which is satisfactory to all finite beings can be propounded.

ISRAEL'S COMFORT.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God."—(Isa., xl, 1.)
CONSOLATION is compassion in action. It is sweeter than charity, it is stronger than pity. It is sympathy plus helpfulness. Tears are unavailing, and words the mere echo of passing emotion, but comfort is abiding. Sympathy in itself is but fellow-feeling; but consolation is fellow-living and fellow-acting. It is complete vicariousness—the shouldering of alien burdens, a healing capacity that reaches down to the eternal abyss of pain.

When God promised to have compassion upon His people, say the rabbis, He likened Himself to a father: "As a father has compassion on his children." But when God promised to console His people He likened Himself to a mother: "Like a man whom his mother comforteth." For, they say, a father pities, but only a mother can tender comfort and consolation. She, whose life is in the life of the babe, she alone can completely identify herself with the anguish of her nearest and dearest. And God, who bears All, and whose life is in the life of the All, is the supreme comforter of the world's sorrow, of the world's unspeakable pain. "I, even I, am He that comforteth you!" Consolation is, more than any other grace,—divine.

And now God Himself calls upon the nations to assume the supremely divine task of consoling Israel. The nations of the world and Israel! Can a wolf console the sheep it has rent in pieces? Can a tiger console its victim? Can a hawk console its prey? Israel has barely looked for pity from the world, let alone for comfort; scarcely for justice, let alone for consolation! How can the nations comfort Israel?

Consolation has three sources: Self, God, and Others. The most difficult source of consolation, as already hinted, is the heart of Others. For to be touched by alien sorrow to the point of heroic helpfulness requires on the one hand identification with the life of the sufferer, and on the other, with the life of God. How can the nations of the world identify themselves with the cause of their perennial victim, how can they, whose concern has been conquest and killing, identify themselves with the cause of God?

Israel indeed, in the midst of its age-long misery, has derived consolation from the first two sources more available than the comfort of the nations. Living in the most complete isolation any nation or individual has ever been doomed to, not only by reason of its aristocratic ideals of living which made for proud but legitimate separativeness, but by reason of the cruelty and hatred of the world, Israel has been thrown largely upon itself, drawing strength from the hidden wellsprings of the soul. When a man is forsaken and left to himself, he has the most precious privilege left him: one that the world cannot take from him—to consort with his own soul. How can a man, who dares to stand up in the naked white light of his own soul, be really left alone? The soul would be triumphant over circumstances; the soul would laugh injustice to scorn; the soul would with one wan martyr's smile set at naught all the nefarious designs of the destroyer—being its own earnest and witness of immortality. You say, if a man weeps he weeps alone? Not if he is a man, a real man, conscious of the eternity within him. He is not alone: he is with his soul—the best company in circumstances wrought by injustice and cruel hatred. Israel was never alone. Israel was with the deathless soul of a martyr-nation. Israel's consolation was derived from Israel.

And Israel's consolation was derived from God. He who weeps alone can for this reason too not weep alone, because he has God with him. On the mourner's bench there is always room for two: the sufferer and God. But from God the human soul expects more than the whispered comfort of divine sympathy, more even than strength for the faltering spirit. The heroic soul asks for heroic comfort, for its suffering is heroic. Petty sorrows are soothed by petty consolations, shallow pains by surface balm. There are natures that are incapable of great sufferings, and equally unsusceptible to great consolations. Their wounds are scalp-wounds, their remedy is adhesive plaster. They are like children who thrust their hurt finger into their mouths: they find healing in their own spittle. Not so great souls—their hurt goes deep, and their forter's high task. Let them come, not with idle pity, but with helpfulness; not with vain promises but with deeds of long-healing must reach to the depth of things. When they are hurt, they feel something greater is hurt with. The world sobs through their tears, and their groans sigh in every wind. Job felt that his misery was part of the world-woe, a flaw in the perfection of the whole. And that is what hurts: not the pain, but the why and wherefore of pain; not the pang but its futility—not the writhing flesh but the soul in torment. Therefore, we ask of God to reveal to us that pain is not futile, that suffering has its appointed place in the scheme of things, that there is a reason why the heavens ache with the agony of unfulfilled desires, and why the mountains are desolate with foiled aspiration, and why field and valley are hushed in the breath of death that blights the virginal bloom of flower and fruit. This is the healing we ask for, nothing less can satisfy us. This is the healing Israel sought and—found. Israel was convinced that its martyrdom served the cause of humanity, that its blood was not spilled in vain, without fructifying this earth;—that is why its sons and daughters went into death singing.

And if in addition to these two kinds of comfort—derived from Self and drawn from God—the nations of the world have some comfort to tender this much-abused race, why,—let them come, but let them come with clean hands and purified lips. Let them come, but let them first qualify for the comdeferred justice. The only comfort they can tender us is the comfort of security and safety. Are they ready for this? Are they?

Judaism—Liberal or Orthodox.
There was a time, not so long ago, when we Jews were wont to make fun of the dominant faith and its many divisions into Presbyterian, Methodist, Anglican, Low Church, High Church, etc. We flattered ourselves that our Judaism was more consistent, more sensible. Either a man was a Jew or he was not a Jew. But today he who is interested will find almost as many divisions in our Judaism. Orthodox Judaism itself breaks up into two classes: those who are rigidly orthodox and those who are willing to make certain compromises, but who persist in regarding themselves as orthodox. Where such compromises begin and where they must end no one seems to know, and the compromises that seem right and proper to one man, according to his own personal needs, seem all wrong to the next man. As there is no fixed standard, every man is ready to become a law unto himself, and therein lies the danger to orthodoxy.
In the field of so-called liberal Judaism one is even more at sea. There are so many divisions that a man must indeed be hard to please if he cannot find one to suit his own individual taste or to fill his particular spiritual needs if he still possesses such a thing. Religion is being modelled according to apartment house standards—containing all conveniences according to the purse, or, in the case of religion, according to the spiritual capacity of the seeker. Religion is no longer a duty for which one must make sacrifices. It has been turned into an adaptable garment to suit the requirements of the wearer, and insofar as it produces satisfactory results in this respect it may escape utter annihilation. And yet, after twisting it and distorting it and moulding it to his own supposed needs, mankind querulously demands, "What has religion done for me?" not realizing that in the very question lies the answer.

For only he who has given need expect to receive, and he who has made no sacrifices for religion need not expect that in his hour of need his religion will suddenly become all-sufficient and all-consoling.

The great war has not left us spiritually strengthened, because the great war did not find us spiritually strong. The man who went into the trenches had been accustomed to having his religion wait on his pleasure, and because it was not served out to him according to his trench life needs he became profoundly dissatisfied. Did he say, "There is something wrong with me?" No, indeed, he was too pleased with himself to say that, but instead he began to clamor, "There is something wrong with religion," and everybody sat up and demanded, "What's wrong with religion?" But there's nothing wrong with religion. It is we, who are wrong, because we thought we could dispense with bread and eat cake all the time. Naturally, we are fed up with cake. Our souls are crying out against being continually pampered. We have gone so far away from truth and the simple, elemental things of life, that we are actually groping in a wilderness of our own making, a wilderness from which it becomes ever more difficult to find the way out. We need to get back to the simple truths of our Judaism, for our Judaism is as much the "Rock of Salvation" as it ever was. We shall not find our Judaism in architecturally beautiful temples; we shall not learn it from high-priced rabbis who pamper their congregations with worn-out platitudes; we shall not capture it by making it subservient to our own needs. But if we are ready to accept in all sincerity the simple Judaic laws as Moses brought them to us at the foot of Sinai, and if we are ready to live according to these principles in the spirit of sacrifice that distinguished our ancestors as Jews, we shall find that our Judaism is still the fountain of eternal, spiritual life and that no radical changes are necessary to bring it up to date. The war showed us that we were really not as civilized as we flattered ourselves with being. It showed us that the garment of so-called civilization could drop off at a moment's notice and leave us mere children of nature. We have been concealing our religion in attractive wrappings that some persons have actually mistaken the outer garment for that which it conceals. They found shallows only because they did not probe to the depths. If we persevere we shall find the truth and we shall find also that which is based on truth, namely, Judaism—but a Judaism without any frills or wrappings, without any modern conveniences or dumwaiters to haul it up to us. It is a Judaism based upon personal effort and individual seeking, upon self-sacrifice and humility. It is the Judaism that served our ancestors in many an hour of trial. It is the Judaism that is ready to serve us, if we but will it.—Canadian Jewish Chronicle.

entertaining the children and young women at their own homes.
The tour was followed by a tea and reception at the home of Mrs. I. D. Levy, on Broadway, Cedarhurst, who generously offered her hospitality to the 250 women who were present. Mrs. Isaac Kuble, chairman of the Long Island committee, made the opening address; Mrs. Israel Unterberg, a trustee of the federation, spoke about the federation's work and its plans; Mrs. Edwin Sommerich, president of the Children's Haven, described the activities of that place and told how much they need the money which the United Building Fund Campaign is endeavoring to collect for them. At present they are only able to accommodate a limited number of children, who receive the most careful attention, but with added means they will be able to enlarge their work considerably. Mrs. Max Levenson, a member of the board of the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children, represented that institution and showed how necessary this institution is in the community. Mrs. Schlesinger, of the Jewish Big Sisters, represented Mrs. Sidney C. Borg, the president, who is away. The Anchorage in Arverne is conducted by the board of the Jewish Big Sisters, and Mrs. Schlesinger explained to the women how they have tried to reach working girls who need help most urgently on account of not having large enough salaries to pay for a vacation at any other resort. The girls are charged one-third of their salary, regardless of what they may be, and they all enjoy the same privileges.
The second affair of the season conducted by this committee will take place on August 16. It will be a lawn fete and dance, and an exhibition of the federation moving pictures will be held on the lawn of Mrs. Samuel C. Lamport at Lawrence, Long Island. A great many hostesses have promised to serve on this occasion and it is expected that the affair will be one of the most successful of the season.

Doubt Expressed as to Accuracy of Quotation From Mr. Morgenthau.
The following letter sent by the Secretary of the American Jewish Congress delegation to the Peace Conference appeared in the New York Times of August 2nd.
To the Editor of the New York Times:
In the report of the massacre of Jews in the Ukraine, printed in the New York Times today, the following statement appeared:
"The Ukrainians reported guilty of these massacres have been warring with the Poles, who have been largely exonerated by the reports of Henry Morgenthau and others of pogroms attributed to them. The alleged massacre of Jews by Poles at Binsk occurred when Poles were passing through the city to fight the Ukrainians."
It is true that a few days ago a dispatch from Paris quoted Mr. Morgenthau as saying that there had been exaggerations in some of the reports. Mr. Morgenthau is still in Poland and if his plans are carried out will probably not be through with his investigation before the middle of August. Would not Mr. Morgenthau be indiscreet to make such a statement in advance of the official report, which would be made to the President? How can it be asserted the Poles were exonerated when Paderewski, the Polish Diet, (General Pilsudski and General Haller have all admitted that there have been persecution of the Jews?
The paragraph is also unfortunate in speaking of the alleged massacre of Jews by Poles at Pinsk. There is no question that 34 Jews were murdered by the Polish military authorities at Pinsk under conditions which have been fully detailed in The Times and which cannot be controverted.
Although the map of Europe is undergoing a great transformation, it is going a little too far to say that the massacres of the Jews by the Poles at Pinsk occurred when the Poles were passing through the city to fight the Ukrainians. Pinsk is far to the north of the Ukraine and from the front where the Poles and the Ukrainians have been in collision. That has been in East Galicia, near Lemberg, 250 kilometers to the south of Pinsk. Nor is it true that the massacre of Jews by Poles at Pinsk occurred when the Poles were passing through the city. The soldiers who committed the outrage constituted a part of the garrison at Pinsk, and placed the Jews whom they slaughtered under arrest while the latter were engaged in arranging for the distribution of food among the starving.

Theology in Street Cars.
A Christian lady in St. Louis is spending $500 a month for street car advertising of theological texts, such as "The Blood of Christ Saves," and like admonitions.
The lady means well, but how about saving the souls of those who ride in automobiles instead of street cars?
We are not trying to arouse class feeling—but sinners are as numerous in autos as in street railways.
Then again, does theology save from sin? Suppose there were Jewish sinners in the street car where appears the sign: "The Blood of Christ Saves."
We admit there are a few Jewish sinners whose souls need saving—or rather awakening.
Will it be necessary to put Jewish texts in the street cars, also, to win those to virtue and salvation, to whom the supernatural theory of vicarious atonement does not appeal?
We would suggest another text—and wish we could afford to set it side by side with the Christian lady's street car counsel.

Our text would be from Isaiah:
"CEASE TO DO EVIL, LEARN TO DO GOOD!"
This is so much simpler, so much easier to comprehend, and so much more difficult to do!—The Modern View.
War Killed Anti-Semitism in France, Says Chief Rabbi.
Paris, July 30.—The new grand rabbi of France stated in an interview with a French newspaper man that there is no more anti-Semitism in France. The war, he said, killed the hatred of Jews. The Jews sacrificed themselves for the country as much as the best of the natives, he stated, and with this sacrifice they succeeded in killing the hatred towards Jews and in winning for themselves the love, respect, and tolerance of all those who formerly disliked them.
Chief Rabbi Levi also stated that the war had ruined most of the Jewish communities in the districts occupied by the Germans.

Lamport is the vice-chairman. The institutions visited were the Sanitarium for Hebrew Children, the Anchorage, the Jewish Working Girls' Vacation Society and the Children's Haven. Mr. Richards Returns From Paris Conference.

Bernard G. Richards, secretary of the American Jewish Congress, returning from France last week on the Lorraine after an absence of nearly five months, expressed much satisfaction with the results which had been achieved at the Peace Conference through the representation of the delegation from the American Jews and the delegations from Jewish communities in other countries in behalf of the securing of full civil, political and minority rights for the Jews in Eastern Europe.

He said that the guarantees already granted and those held forth for the protection of Jewish rights everywhere as well as the assurances given of the recognition of the historic title of the Jews to Palestine as their national homeland—both of which objects were embodied in the resolutions of the American Jewish Congress—constituted a triumph of the new spirit of humanitarianism and democracy which, despite discouragement, raised high hopes for a new era of peace and brotherhood. The victory is distinctly a victory of Americanism as applied to the rights of the lesser nationalities, and he said that he was strongly impressed with the spread of the American idea of fair play throughout Europe.

The Jews, as well as the other minorities who sought to secure the protection of their rights through the Peace Conference, were fortunate in having the powerful support of the leading and most enlightened nations among the Allies. He said further, that the Jews are to be congratulated on the broad and democratic manner in which they organized the movement for Jewish rights and which enabled them to appeal to the largest number and to influence the enlightened public opinion of the world.

"We, of course, represented a just cause and every high-minded statesman and every right-thinking man was generally inclined to favor our demands, but even a just cause requires advertisement and it was of the utmost importance to bring our demands to the attention of the larger public through the means of organization and publicity. To this end the holding of the American Jewish Congress in this country and the organization of large popular Jewish assemblies in other countries helped immeasurably. The American Jews have, therefore, also a special reason to be gratified in that they were enabled here to pursue the most effective methods of American organization.

"The time, of course, has not yet come for presenting a complete report of the work of the Jewish delegations at Paris. That will be done when the American Jewish Congress reassembles, we expect sometime in the fall, to receive such report. It will then be shown in detail what difficulties were experienced and what a tremendous amount of work these efforts involved.

"But it may well be said now that we were fortunate in having among the delegates from the American Jewish Congress to the Peace Conference some of the finest minds in American Jewry, men of high wisdom and much experience, through whose untiring efforts and great love for their people the gratifying results were achieved or are about to be consummated."

J. D. C. Will Transmit Money to Your Relatives Abroad.

The Transmission Bureau of the Joint Distribution Committee has sent abroad this year to relatives of people in America nearly half a million dollars in individual remittances and has located thousands from whom parents, children, or brothers and sisters on this side have had no word since the beginning of the war. The semi-annual report from January 1 to June 30 places the total of remittances handled in this period at $467,877.28. The average single remittance is about $25. Poland, Lithuania, Galicia, and Czechoslovakia are the chief regions to which private funds have been sent.

No charge is made for this service. Receipts from abroad are returned to America through the bureau after they have been signed by the recipients, many of whom live in districts where no mail can be sent. These signatures show that the person to whom the remittance goes is still alive.

Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee, issued a statement today calling attention to the fact that his bureau, which is practically the only channel of communication between this country and many sections of Europe, is open to everyone who desires to send funds to long-lost

Paderewski Advises Polish Parliament to Ratify Polish Treaty.

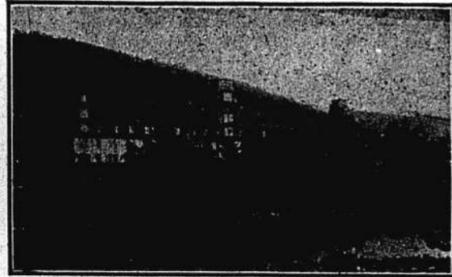

London, July 30.—In an address delivered before the Polish Parliament by Paderewski regarding the Jewish rights granted by the Polish peace treaty to be ratified by Parliament, the Premier said that the question of minority rights had been settled even before the armislice had been signed, in order to satisfy the Jews who are very powerful in financial circles.

Paderewski admitted that from the Polish point of view there are many clauses in the peace treaty which are very objectionable. This, he said, could not, however, be helped, because the allies have put their foot down on the maximum concessions they were willing to grant Poland. Before concluding, Paderewski reminded Parliament that the allies conceded Poland the right to demand that Polish be taught in Jewish schools.

CONSTRUCTIVE RELIEF FOR JEWISH WAR SUFFERERS.
 By M. F. Seidmann.
 A national conference of the Joint Distribution Committee will take place in New York on the 10th of August. We want to make the following suggestions to the conference:—
 1. It should be resolved to found a large Jewish bank which should be authorized to help the Jewish war sufferers by giving them loans under securities, and thereby aid in the reconstruction of their businesses and occupations.
 2. All Jewish organizations, institutions and orders should be called upon to deposit their capitals in this bank. We hope that this suggestion will be taken up earnestly, and will finally be adopted, and that Jewish energy will be centered upon the materialization of the above suggestions.
 The national conference of the Joint Distribution Committee is being called for the purpose of finding means and ways of increasing the relief fund. It is necessary and also possible to increase this fund.
 The workers whom the Joint Distribution Committee has sent to the war countries have already returned. Their reports concerning the condition of the Jewish war sufferers surpass even the most pessimistic imaginations. They die en masse and suffer hellish tortures. These reports are well known to everybody now. They have been printed both in the Jewish and non-Jewish press. The impression they make is earnest and deep. There is no doubt that every one will be ready to help to his utmost.
 We hope that the relief campaign for the war sufferers which is now being organized will be a tremendous success. Let us assume that the sum of money that will be collected will amount to $50,000,000.
 This is a very large sum; no one expects this sum to be any larger. And still, considering the missionary work that this sum of money has to do for the sufferers of the war countries, this sum is decidedly small and insignificant. The number of Jewish victims in the war countries amounts to at least 4,000,000 people. This is the number of such war victims who were left destitute, breadless and naked. They must resort to charity in order to obtain simple help. To help these 4,000,000 destitute human beings there is going to be $50,000,000—that is, taking it for granted that the campaign will be the greatest success imaginable.
 Fifty million for four million people! That means twelve and a half dollars for each individual!
 Imagine how far twelve and a half dollars, at the present high cost of living can be of service to one who is starving and naked!
 Many have realized this; and that is why we have the general opinion now that the American Jews must do "constructive relief work" now for the Jewish war sufferers.
 -But where shall we get this money, this large sum which is necessary for this constructive help?
 It would be sheer cruelty if we were to hold back the collective relief moneys and keep it for "constructive help" at the time when millions of Jewish human beings are starving and naked.
 First must the hungry be fed and the naked clothed; then we will be in a position to accept the aid which will also necessarily have to be constructive. They will work if there will be the possibility for work.
 This possibility for work must be created, and it can be created by loans under securities. These loans must be given to former manufacturers so that they may be able to buy raw material in order to build up their factories. These loans must be given to former merchants so that they may be able to carry on their business, and to tradesmen so that they may be able to buy tools for their work; and finally, these loans should be given to private people so that they may be able to rebuild their destroyed and devastated homes in order to have homes to live in.
 In order to do all these things a large sum of money is necessary, and money in general is not to be found in those countries. In order to borrow money one must pay such exorbitant interests that all the possible earnings of the manufacturer, the merchant and the tradesmen are thereby swallowed up.
 And here is where the American Jews can bring a great and essential help—a help which will not cost any one anything and which will bring about conditions so the Jewish war sufferers shall be able to become self-supporting and earn a livelihood through their own means.
 There are large sums of money with American organizations, orders and institutions—all sorts of funds. These

Some New Projects in Palestine. Steps are being taken to open a hospital for animals at Jaffa, which will be of great benefit to Palestinian agriculture. The absence of veterinary provision for animals has been to a very great extent responsible for the absence in the Jewish colonies of cattle breeding on a large scale. The Turkish Government entirely ignored the importance of such provision, as is shown by the fact that there are only four veterinary surgeons in the whole of Palestine, and the colonists themselves could not afford to make good the shortcomings of the government in this respect. As a result, the cattle-breeding industry suffered. Moreover, the absence of veterinary help precluded the insurance of cattle, which is a great stimulus in all civilized countries to the successful development of this industry. It is hoped, therefore, writes a correspondent of Palestine, that the new institutions, established by Dr. Caspi, will be of great advantage in promoting the growth of cattle breeding.

Another project of Dr. Caspi's deserves mention in this connection. In order that the colonists may procure immediate help for their animals in case of an accident, when it is often impossible to send the animals away, it is necessary that every colony should have always at its disposal at least an assistant veterinary surgeon. To make this possible Dr. Caspi has initiated courses on the medical treatment of animals. The Zionist Palestine office advertised for six trained agricultural laborers willing to study this subject, offering to assist them financially to the extent of five pounds per month per head. The students were soon forthcoming, and the courses are already open. During the first half of the day the students are engaged in practical work, helping their teacher to perform his medical duties; the second half is devoted entirely to theory. The duration of the course of study is one year.

It is interesting to note the contrast between the former and the present regime. Under Turkish rule, when some plan for a new institution, either private or public, was complete, it was certain from the first that it would take years to carry it out. But now during the short period of British occupation, a good many plans of far-reaching economic significance have already been laid before the authorities, whose authorization is awaited daily. Two may be mentioned here: the shopkeepers' organization and the "Hashahar," a building society. The merchants of Jaffa, finding the number of storehouses in the town insufficient for the requirements, and in view also of the exorbitant prices demanded by the proprietors, which put the shops beyond the reach of small merchants, have applied to the authorities of Jaffa for permission to lay a pavement along the whole sea-front, on which a board market-place, with a fountain to commemorate the British occupation, will be laid out, and, in addition, a number of big storehouses, sufficient for the needs of the inhabitants, will be built. The plan for this work is already in the hands of competent advisers, and the originators of the scheme have undertaken to find the necessary means for carrying it out. The "Hashahar" is another new society, which aims at relieving the acute shortage of houses and of building materials. Founded on a sound business basis, it has already succeeded in storing thousands of pounds' worth of building material, and has acquired a number of sites for houses.

Cantor Rosenblatt in Edgemere The Reverend Joseph Rosenblatt, the famous cantor, will give a recital on Sunday afternoon, August 10th, at 3 o'clock, at Hotel Lorraine, Edgemere, L. I. This will be the only recital Cantor Rosenblatt will give in the Rockaways this season, and music lovers should take advantage of this opportunity to hear this noted singer. It may be mentioned that the proceeds of the recital will be devoted to charitable purposes.

The Best Situation on the Heights. Resident of Washington Heights and vicinity are fortunate in having in their midst Mr. H. Goldberg, furniture dealer at 2070 Amsterdam ave., corner One Hundred and Sixty-second street, in the Triangle building that runs through to St. Nicholas avenue, where there is also an entrance to the Goldberg store, and show windows displaying an excellent line of new furniture for the home. He is doing good business since opening. Having purchased his complete stock of furniture before the recent advance in prices Mr. Goldberg is able to save customers considerable money on all sales. He carries a splendid assortment of medium and high quality furniture and invites prospective purchasers to visit his show rooms before buying elsewhere. All Amsterdam avenue and Broadway cars pass the door, also the St. Nicholas avenue buses.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

"I WILL MEET WITH THEE."

Dear Children:

The Torah continues to describe the holy instruments of the tabernacle, as follows: "From the Kaporeth (cover) itself shall ye make the cherubims on the two ends thereof." "This," says Rashi, "is the explanation of the command 'of beaten work shalt thou make them'; thou shalt not make them separately and fasten them to the Kaporeth." "And the cherubims shall be spreading forth their wings on high, overshadowing the cover with their wings, with their faces turned one to the other." "Spreading forth their wings"; their wings shall not be made drooping, but outspread and high above, on a level with their heads, so that there be a space of ten hand-breadths between their wings and the Kaporeth, as the Talmud describes it in the treatise Succah.

"And in the ark shalt thou put the testimony." "I do not know," says Rashi, "why this command is repeated here, as it has already been said, 'And thou shalt put into the ark the testimony'; but," he adds, "it may be said that this teaches us that while it is an ark alone without a Kaporeth he should first place the testimony within and then put the Kaporeth on." And thus we find that when the tabernacle was reared up it is said: "And he took and put the testimony into the ark, and he put the mercy seat upon the ark above" (Exodus 40). "And I will meet with thee there," when I will appoint a time to speak with thee; that place will I appoint to speak with thee there at that time. "And I will speak with thee from above the Kaporeth."

And elsewhere it is said: "And the Lord called unto Moses and spoke unto him out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying." (Leviticus 1.) This refers to the tabernacle that was outside of the Parocheth or veil. Thus two verses contradict each other. There is a third verse that reconciles them, as follows: "And when Moses went into the tabernacle of the congregation to speak with Him, then heard he the voice speaking unto him from off the mercy seat." (Numbers, 7.)

Moses entered the tabernacle, and as soon as he came inside of the door a voice descended from heaven to the space between the cherubim, and thence it went forth and was heard by Moses in the tabernacle of the congregation. "Thou shalt make a table . . . and a cubit and a half (shall be) its height"; that is, the height of its feet with the thickness of the table. "And make thereto a crown of gold round about." This is a symbol of the crown of royalty, as the table typifies wealth and honor, as it is said, "a royal table." "And thou shalt make unto it misgereth, a rim of a hand's breadth round about." Onklos translates misgereth, a wing; and the sages of Israel are divided on this subject. Some of them say it was a rim encircling the table above it, as is usually found in tables of princes, and some say it encircled the table underneath it, fastened to the legs of the table on its four sides, and the top of the table rested upon this misgereth.

"And thou shalt make a golden crown on its rim round about." This is the crown referred to above, and described here as resting upon the rim. "And thou shalt make for it four rings of gold, and thou shalt put the rings on the four corners that are on its four feet." "Close under the rim shall the rings be" fastened to the feet of the table toward the tops of the rim. "As receptacles for the stairs" these rings shall be "the receptacles in which the stairs shall be placed," the stairs wherewith the table shall be borne. "And thou shalt make its dishes and its spoons." Its dishes; that is, the form that was fashioned according to the form of the bread, and the bread was made box shaped—open from both sides, with edges on the bottom and folded from each side toward the top-like walls. Therefore it is called "show bread," as it showed from both sides of the house. The length of the bread was placed on the width of the table, and its sides resembling walls (as there was a space between and it (the bread) resembled the letter "chetch." Sifse Chacomim) were erect toward the the edge of the table, and a golden and also an iron form were made for it. It was baked in the iron form, and when it was taken out of the oven it was placed in the golden form until the following day, the Sabbath, when it was arranged upon the table; that form is called Kearah, "a dish."

term of court. Of the one hundred on the list not one of them is a Jew. And there are approximately one hundred patriotic Jewish citizens in Beverly. Justly aroused by this unfairness, a local Jewish citizen and merchant has written an open letter of complaint to the Times of that city. We quote a paragraph which is very significant and exactly apropos:

It is not very long ago since the United States conducted Liberty Loan campaigns. Did Beverly at that time overlook the Jews? No! Jews were then a nice people. At least, their money was good. I dare say that if a jury list were then drawn up it would have contained the name of a Jew. But now the war is over. Beverly has no more Liberty Bond quotas to fill. And what good are Jews in Beverly when their money is not needed? I am reminded of the old man who said to the youth who carried him across a stream: "Now that I am over you can go to h—l."

Of course, the memories of some work perfectly well when it comes to matters involving personal gains. Another abstract from the letter referred to illustrates this existing phenomenon in Beverly:

Only a few months ago some of the members of our present city government in their mad rush for votes were very eager to get Jewish support. At that time they knew that there were Jews in the city of Beverly. But it is a curious fact that, as if by some divine inspiration, they forgot all about the Jews when they voted to accept the jury list.

It is to be regretted, indeed, that those steering the wheels of a municipality here in America should make themselves the subjects of attack for outright discrimination against citizens who have helped to make the record of that municipality enviable in every patriotic endeavor.—The Jewish Advocate.

The Situation of the Jews in Poland. By DR. GOTTHARD DEUTSCH. Facts and Reports. Under severe mental stress people cannot be expected to be accurate in figures

What Are the Facts. Eastern Galicia is Ruthenian. The Ruthenians are a Slavic race, speaking the Little Russian language, a dialect akin to the Russian

Lemberg. The city of Lemberg, the capital of the former Austrian province of Galicia, is the center of a Ruthenian (now usually called Ukrainian) territory

So the city of Lemberg has 50 per cent. Poles, 30 per cent. Jews and 20 per cent. Ruthenians. The latter, with the support of the surrounding country population, occupied the city November 1, 1918

The claim that the victims of the slaughter of Pinsk were Bolsheviks is refuted by Baruch Zuckerman, representative of the American Relief Committee, who called this meeting to devise means for distributing local relief

Speaking broadly, the Ruthenians are more friendly to the Jews than the Poles, although the Jews, representing the merchant and professional classes, were in Galicia siding with the Poles and in Russia with the Russians

ed with prominent positions in the new republic. The masses are evidently not equally broad, as would appear natural in a backward people

The most convenient excuse of the Polish leaders is that excesses are apt to happen in times of excitement, that they happen in the United States in days of political strife, in times of labor trouble and even independently in race riots

A Tricky Defense. The claim that the victims of the slaughter of Pinsk were Bolsheviks is refuted by Baruch Zuckerman, representative of the American Relief Committee

Parliament, was hissed and dragged from the platform when he tried to discuss the atrocity in open session.

The Case of Vilna and Other Cities. As Poles clashed with Ukrainians in Lemberg, so they clashed with Lithuanians in Vilna.

Testimony. Neutral countries, like Sweden and Holland, where the means of obtaining direct and reliable information are much better than in this country, have voiced protests.

The earnest effort of the Jews of the United States to induce our executive to remedy the intolerable condition of their co-religionists in the backward countries of Europe has often been met and defeated by the argument that our government cannot interfere with the domestic affairs of another nation.

"There is much evidence accumulating to show that the pogroms and abuses of the Jews continue in the countries where they have heretofore existed and that the chaotic and lawless condition in these countries has offered an opportunity for the cruel gratification of race and religious prejudice.

"In their sad story we find the Jews in the middle ages seeking refuge from the oppression and cruelty of western Europe and in rushing to the great empire of Poland, then stretching from the Baltic to the Black Sea, to take advantage of a charter of religious tolerance.

"One of the great projects of this Congress of Powers at Versailles is to set up independent governments in these territories of the Russian Jewish pale. We shall be derelict in our duty if we do not require, as part of the fundamental law of these new republics, that the Jews shall have as great religious freedom as they have in the United States.

Mr. Goldfogle introduced in the House of Representatives the following resolution May 21, 1919, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs:

"Resolved, That we deplore and express our horror and indignation at the outrageous and atrocious treatment of innocent men, women and children in Poland, Roumania, and Galicia and the frequent barbarous massacres in those countries. Such conduct justly merits the condemnation of all humanity and the President of the United States is most respectfully requested to cause such steps to be taken as in his judgment may tend to bring about a condition that will so far as possible prevent a recurrence of such outrages in the future and assure humane treatment of the peoples against whom those persecutions are being directed."

Senator Calder of New York introduced the following resolution in the Senate May 26, 1919, which was considered and agreed to:

"Whereas, It is reported that innocent men, women and children, particularly of the Jewish faith, are being outraged and massacred in Poland, Roumania and Galicia. Therefore be it
