At the Marriage Broker's

By OSCAR LEONARD

Monroe Silver was before the mirror studying himself carefully. His verdict was that a fellow with big dark eyes like his, with such curly raven hair, with a fine complexion, and, above all, a curling black mustache, ought not to be poor. He looked, according to his own opinion, as good as any rich man's son. He had been foolish enough to choose a poor tailor for his father.

His name, Monroe? Oh, that's another story. At the ceremony eight days after his debut into this world, in the presence of ten pious Jews, he had been named Moishe, after the great teacher in Israel. But when he grew a bit and went to school, he decided that Moishe was no name for a self-respecting American born boy. He discovered that whether or not one could change his nose, one could surely change his Mose into Monroe. Fine sounding name, Monroe!

His family name, too, was rather cumbersome. Why Silverstein? He figured it out this way: stone could not be silver, neither could silver be a stone. That much he learned at school. He blushed for the ignorance of his father. How should he have guessed how happy his father was when the Russian officials had handed out the name of Silverstone? It was a well-sounding name, considering that they could, at their caprice, have forced upon him and his whole family a name like Schweinberg or worse.

Anyway, our hero decided that Silver was much better than Silverstone. He became Monroe Silver.

Monroe Silver had ambitions. Wasn't this the land of opportunity? He longed to get out of his environment. But he neglected to cultivate a corresponding longing for honest work. In fact, he could never stay on any job long enough to get chummy. And when he did work, his pay usually slipped between his digits. Had he been the son of a rich man, all would have been well. As it was, he was always in debt. How would it be otherwise when one had to put up a "show?" So he continued to dress like the "Hallroom Boys" and hope that clothes would help lift him out of his environment.

Monroe Silver sometimes read the Jewish Journal. Not the editorials, but here and there a few lines in the social column. An attractive advertisement would sometimes catch his eye for a passing moment. One ad in particular held his attention. It was the ad of a "Schadchen," set up in black type and boxed.

times had to marry the girl along with the money? The proverbial fly in the ointment! Marriage could not escape this universal law, could it?

Monroe Silver was taking stock of himself there before the mirror. He must decide his own worth be-

He picked up the Jewish Journal again and re-read the ad:

GET MARRIED and don't stay single! Small wages need not keep you single. Excellent dowries are willingly given to the right young men.

000? With such a sum in the bank, one could live like a prince. One could ride about in a big machine, smoking a long brown stogie, with the chauffeur ready to take him wherever he chose. Oh, for such a life, thought Monroe Silver as he walked in the direction of Mr. Berl Ghershenstein, Schadchen.

At the door Reb Berl himself met him with a broad smile and a handshake. For Mr. Ghershenstein had come to visit Monroe's father occasionally, and after all the son of one's friends are also one's friends, and in this case perhaps a client, too.

"Vell, vell, Moishe! How I am glad to see you! How fine you look, umbeschreyan!"

"Thank you, Mr. Ghershenstein. You look fine, too. But you know my name is Monroe."

"Mon-ee-ro?" The broker shrugged his shoulders. "At your 'bris' I remember like it was yesterday your father gave you the name Moishe, didn't he?"

"Oh, those Ghetto habits!" Monroe answered impatiently. "We live in a different world today. We're civilized. And we're good Americans, aint' we?"

"Just like a lawyer you talk, Moish—I mean, excuse me, Mon-ee-ro. And now is it something I can for you do?"

"I—I—er, well," hesitated Monroe, "I want to get married."

"It's time, as I'm a Jew. A young feller like you should been married long time and have already a few childr—"

"Never mind the children. Tell me whether you have a girl for me. I want—"

"One girl? I can give you ten. I don't mean it I can give you. You know how it goes—with a good Jewish mother and a pious father, a feller what's edgicated—a worry a girl to find!"

"That's all right. But she must have money."

"Nu! Sure she is got to have money. And I have got just the thing for you, I should live so!" And he hurried to a table in the centre of the room.

Mr. Ghershenstein pulled out a drawer full of photographs, and after searching through them a few seconds pulled one out and held it up for inspection.

"Moish—excuse me, Mon-ee-ro,

SIR STUART SAMUEL.

Sir Stuart Samuel Has Returned to England After a Three-months' Trip in Poland, Where he Headed a Commission Appointed by the British Government to Investigate the Polish Pogroms.

He did know some boys who had married well—that last phrase always meant money to him. Why not see this marriage broker? This ancient and honorable "Ghetto" profession usually brought the "right" persons together. What if one some-fore placing himself in the market. Somewhere he remembered coming across some lines to the effect that the world will value you for what you value yourself. Monroe placed an estimate on himself. He was worth his weight in gold.

See me at once and you will be happy! BERL GHERSHENSTEIN, famous schadchen. P. S.—I have married off over 2,000.

Monroe twirled his mustache. Why couldn't he get a dowry of $20,- look! Ain't it she's a beaut? That girl was just like made for you. Her father—"

"How much money has she got?" interrupted Monroe, looking at the photo.

"Mit her goes two thousand dollars cash," proudly announced the schadchen.

"Huh! I want a girl with money—lots of money."

The schadchen shrugged his shoulders and pulled out another photograph, which he handed to Monroe. This time Monroe beheld the image of a squat, bovine-looking woman, no longer young. But he asked hopefully:

"How much money?"

"Mit her goes three thousand dollars spot cash. And from such a fine family—"

"Never mind the family. I got to get more money."

"Really, Moish—excuse me, I mean Mon-ee-ro—you want it only money?"

"If you can't get me what I want, I go to somebody—some other marriage broker."

"Anodder schadchen? If you wasn't your father's son I should it tell you some things what is not so nice; but you got to understand that there is only one schadchen in this city, and that's me. You want money mit a girl—say so. I can get you anything."

Again the marriage broker went back to his collection of photographs. Again he found one, which he handed to Monroe, a merry twinkle in his eye.

Monroe looked at the photo and drew back. A much bejeweled female looked at him out of a pair of squinting eyes. Her nose was somewhat misshapen and her mouth was grotesquely twisted into a smile. Before he could say anything, Reb Berl began:

"Oh, it is such a fine family she comes from; and mit her goes five thousand dollars and—"

"I want to see the picture of a girl who'll bring me, say, twenty thousand, see!"

"Twenty thousand dollars! A picture from such a girl? Them kinds they don't take no pictures!"

At which Monroe, somewhat disappointed, turned his steps toward the street.

"Safeguard Federation" Campaign

Opened—Mr. Warburg's Statement.

The Mount Sinai, the Lebanon, the Beth Israel and thirteen other Jewish hospitals of New York City will require more than $1,000,000 from the Jewish community of New York for their maintenance during 1920. At least $850,000 will be required for administration of the United Hebrew Charities and other Jewish relief organizations, and a half million dollars will be spent by orphan asylums and other child-caring societies in this city. These figures are furnished by Felix M. Warburg, chairman of the Federation for Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York, which has launched a "Safeguard Federation" campaign to secure $1,700,000 with which to meet the increased budgets of 90 local institutions affiliated with the federation. Mr. Warburg stated that the total amount required by all of these institutions for 1920 would be $3,849,604; of this sum, only $2,100,000 is met by the present annual pledges.

Mr. Warburg pointed out that the present budgetary deficit was due to the increase in costs of maintenance and that in order to safeguard the present standards of the federation it will be necessary that all present subscribers increase their annual contributions, many of which have been unchanged since they were originally pledged in 1916, and that as many new contributors as possible be secured during the fortnight designated to the campaign.

"Few business enterprises are run as economically and efficiently as the federation," Mr. Warburg stated. "Out of every dollar that is contributed for philanthropy less than four cents goes for administration of the federation, which collects and apportions funds for 90 philanthropic organizations. Out of a total of $3,849,604 which will be expended this year, only $150,000 will be paid out for administration. I wonder how many business houses and how many other charitable organizations can give the same figures."

"All of our institutions are carried on with the same efficiency and economy. Nevertheless, for 1920 we face a deficit of $1,700,000. The reason for this is that for the last four years our income has remained stationary, while costs of food, clothing, maintenance, labor and practically everything else have doubled. The dollar pledged for philanthropy four years ago is worth only 48 cents today. Consequently, our task is to see that every New York Jew who contributed to the federation in 1916 and has not increased his contribution since that time increase it, so that the dollar may have the purchasing power which he originally intended it to have. Many people who four years ago were unable to contribute to the federation or were only able to give small amounts are now able and willing to become generous supporters of New York charities. We hope through our trade committee to enroll every one of these individuals."

"The federation through the Jews of New York supports 90 philanthropic institutions. It makes one appeal for 90 charities. It includes every phase of philanthropic work and we feel that every individual in this city who is not himself dependent upon charity should be a supporter of it to the extent of his means."

Mr. Warburg also stated that $535,229.39 will be required for ten child-caring societies, $1,000,532.52 for sixteen hospitals, $853,555.64 for fifteen relief agencies, $21,564.51 for three day nurseries, $220,032.56 for seven religious educational societies, $118,060 for six hospital social service agencies, $183,778.66 for five societies for the delinquent, $431,120.83 for twelve educational and recreational societies, $86,023.44 for three societies for educating the handicapped, $62,561.11 for four vacation homes, $181,257.41 for two technical schools, $36,991 for two societies for Jewish community service, $10,562.10 for one employment agency, and $108,325 for one home for the aged.

New Congregation for Jamaica. The extreme conservatism of the Orthodox Congregation Ahavath Israel and the radical reform of Temple Israel, both of Jamaica, it is said, have caused a split in both congregations, and conservative members of each congregation are about decided to organize a synagogue that will take a middle ground.

Bryan Speaks for Zionist Cause.

William Jennings Bryan was the principal speaker last Saturday night at the Pennsylvania Hotel rally of Zionist workers for the $10,000,000 Palestine Restoration Fund. Among other things Mr. Bryan said:

"The head of your movement, the great jurist who is a member of the Supreme Court, Justice Brandeis, gave me my first clear understanding of the purpose, the reasons and the hopes of this great movement, and it just so happened that during the last three days I have read something that very deeply impressed upon me the very thought that lies at the foundation of this effort.

"A few weeks ago I read a review of a book written by Benjamin Kidd, an Englishman, 'Science of Power,' which has impressed me more than any book I have ever read since I read the essays of Tolstoi. I refer to it because I don't know anything that has come within my knowledge that better illustrates the power of an ideal and the rebuilding of Zion. It is going to represent all that is embodied in the philosophy I have referred to. The effect of the ideal upon the person, that is one of the things that impressed and conformed with my own ideas.

"It does not take thousands of years to accomplish great things. I thought this afternoon of this idealism that Justice Brandeis spoke of, and then I recall the ideal connected with the names of the leaders of your people whom I have learned to love as I knew them better and better. I have been trying to look forward into the future. It seems more than that which can be put into words, more than that which can be put on paper. The definite thing that you can look forward to is a Jerusalem rebuilt, a Zion restored, a place where the people of each nation belonging to your race, by far the greatest race in the world. It is a realized dream and hope and a joy to the whole world. It is more than a dream; it is an opportunity for comparison when you have set up your model government with freedom of speech and of the press. You are going to have a chance now to put into positive form those things which have come into the minds of your leaders throughout the years. The world will be benefited and you are going to have a place where people can give from all the lands and there develop an ideal condition—a condition that gives expression to their ideas, which is going to be an advantage in that way and in a greater way."

"Palestine Week" Will Be Celebrated February 1-8.

Many Jewish organizations throughout the United States will observe "Palestine Week" February 1-8, the week of the coming of spring in the Holy Land, when a drive will be held, whose purposes are, neither to enroll members nor to raise funds, but merely to inform the public of everything that is to be known regarding Palestine.

In many communities "Palestine Week" will coincide with the dates of the national $10,000,000 campaign for the Palestine Restoration Fund, which opens in New York city January 18.

One of the chief features of this "friendship drive," as arranged by the Department of Education of the Zionist Organization of America, will be the distribution of Palestinian fruits to Jewish children on the celebration of the Jewish Arbor Day, "The Birthday of the Trees," February 4. Opportunity will be taken in the observance of this holiday to explain to the children the urgent need of new planting in Palestine and of the other reconstruction work, which the Zionist Organization will undertake on a large scale, through the funds to be raised by the restoration campaign.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND

(Exclusive Correspondence to the HEBREW STANDARD)

Apprehensions About Syria and Mesopotamia—Annual Meeting of Anglo-Jewish Association—Speeches by Claude Montefiore; Lucien Wolf and Sir Philip Magnus—Denouncing Bolshevism—Interesting Meeting of the Board of Deputies—Scintillae Jew-ries.
London, Dec. 19, 1919.

Some disquieting news is leaking out here about trouble with the Arabs in Mesopotamia, with a possible extension to other Arab populated districts within the French and British spheres. There appears to have been trouble at Damascus and also in the neighborhood of Bagdad, and while the British authorities are, as far as can be gathered from the scanty news available, quite innocent of any offense, they are being pushed, as a result of international politics, into a position that may result in the finish in British troops being used against Arabs—Arabs who, so far as we understand, have been our allies in the war against Turkey.

There is, of course, a great deal behind the visit of Emir Feisal to England and France, and his work is known to be not ended by any means yet. The trouble that has broken out in Mesopotamia and Syria is therefore all the more regrettable, especially as it may have an important bearing upon the future position of Palestine.

So far as Jews are concerned, their wishes are well known to be moderate and well based, but the fear is expressed that something in the flux and movement of international rivalries, mixed with a poverty of understanding on the part of the politicians with regard to who and what the Arabs are, may render the question of the National Home a pawn in an international game. In that case the last people to benefit would be the Jews. Of course, there is a vast amount of mystery about what is happening both in the chancelleries of Paris and in Mesopotamia and Syria. The authorities say nothing. Occasionally in the House of Commons here or the Chamber of Deputies in Paris information is elicited by means of questioning ministers, but as the value of a political question is based not upon the answer it receives, but upon the amount of knowledge dictating the question, the difficulties of the situation are obvious.

The position may be summed up as one that is causing distinct disquiet among many far-sighted members of the community here. Information has been given in these columns from time to time in a necessarily very guarded tone that things are very far from being smooth sailing in connection with the National Home question. The news that emerges from time to time in furtive and odd ways seems to support this view. At the bottom the great trouble appears to be the ignorance of the western government with regard to the true position of things in Mesopotamia and Syria. If the Jews and the Arabs are left alone to work out their destinies themselves, with a few ordinary international safeguards and rules laid down from the two sides, there is an easy prospect of amity and prosperity. Will this be allowed, however, by certain prominent western politicians who have other fish to fry?

Claude G. Montefiore, president of the Anglo-Jewish Association, presided on December 14 at the forty-eighth annual meeting of the association in London. He said it would be wrong to ignore—and it would be equally wrong to magnify unduly—the growth of anti-Jewish or anti-Semitic feeling in the last five years; it was one of the evil by-products of the war. If they could trace it in England—and it was no good blinking their eyes to the disagreeable fact—it was also to be observed in a much more aggravated form in Germany, Austria and Hungary. "So far as our country is concerned," he added, "Englishmen we are, and Englishmen we intend to remain. I have no fear of the issue here. It is a monstrous falsehood to identify the Jews with Bolshevism, but one is constantly harassed by fears as to the fate of Jews in Russia under any government which may succeed it."

Mr. Montefiore also referred to Turkish questions. In the course of this reference he said: "The break-up of the Turkish empire will have, we all trust, to whatever party we may belong, beneficial effects for civilization and for the Jews. The Jewish communities in Mesopotamia under the benign influence of British rule, are already moving forward. There are large prospects for them, as for others, in those enormous territories. And Palestine? All of us look forward with interest to its future; all of us hope to see an increase in its Jewish population, and an increase in their well being; material, moral, spiritual; all of us hope that British sovereignty may bring prosperity as well as equality to every race, and to the members of every creed, within its borders. To this extent, at least, we are all Zionists alike, and it may be that in the promotion of this common goal there may be found more opportunity for common work and more common agreement than has hitherto been thought conceivable or practicable.

Sir Philip Magnus, M. P., said the allegation that the Jews were Bolsheviks had been entirely refuted. It was an undisputed fact that there were Jews among the Bolsheviks, but the number of Jews who were anti-Bolshevist was legion. It was not to be wondered at that Jews, who had been impaled so long behind walls in Russia and deprived of their citizen rights, should now be making an effort to obtain their liberty and were found even among the ranks of the Bolsheviks. No Jews would ever like to see Czardom re-established.

Coleman P. Hyam deprecated linking up the association with the Zionist movement.

Lucien Wolf, secretary of the Joint Foreign Committee of the association and the Jewish Board of Deputies said the peace treaties, so far as the Jewish aspect was concerned, gave them all they asked for, and a great deal more than they dreamed of getting when the Peace Conference opened. It was notable that the word "Jew" did not appear in the formula they presented to the conference. They felt they were not fighting a Jewish battle alone, but a battle for general freedom, political progress and equality.

At a meeting of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, held at Jews' College, Lord Rothschild in the chair, Lucien Wolf presented a report on the position of Jews in foreign countries. In regard to the treaty with Roumania, he said that, in spite of the modifications introduced at the last moment, the chief aims for which the Jews had striven during the last forty years had been obtained. They had in the most specific and detailed form a declaration that Jews born in Roumania and not proved to be subjects of another state, would be treated as subjects and full citizens of Roumania. So far as it could be solved on paper, the treaty provided a complete solution of the Jewish question in Roumania.

"Scintillae Jew-ries," or Flashes of Hebrew Humor, was the topic upon which E. Lawrence Levy addressed the Jewish Students' Society of the Birmingham University in the University buildings last week, E. Eastern presiding. After contending that wit and humor were the happy gifts and compensating possession of the submerged nations he proceeded to substantiate his argument by quoting from the late Eugene Stratton's (Stratton was an American blackface comedian who settled in England and amused us in the vaudeville theatres here for about thirty years dying last year) fine store of Jewish stories. He gave some entertaining specimens of the humor of the Jewish clergy and illustrated in the original Hebrew some admirable examples of riddles and acrostics along with clever verbal juggling with the numerical value of the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Stories from the Talmud were told and interest was enhanced by the recital of some of the amusing tales either "vero" or "ben trovato," connected with Jewish soldiers and the war. Mr. Levy added that the world of the future would find that the Jew enfranchised would contribute to its literary gaiety, just as he had contributed to its sciences and arts.

Oppose Religious Propaganda in City High School.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—On complaint of a number of Jewish students attending the City High School here, that the high school was used as a medium for religious propaganda, a committee consisting of Harry Wise (son of Dr. I. M. Wise), Emil Wassman, Herbert Oppenheimer and Rabbi Abraham Holtzberg waited on the superintendent of schools, Mr. R. L. Jones, to register their protest. The particular instance cited was a convocation called by the principal of the school which was addressed by two revivalists who invited the students to embrace the leadership of Jesus Christ.

Superintendent Jones assured the committee that the public schools of Chattanooga would not be used for the propagation of any particular creed.

The superintendent also agreed to substitute another classic of English literature for the "Merchant of Venice" which is objectionable to the Jews.

Delegates to the Ukraine.

Sailing with the Joint Distribution Committee's relief unit, Judge Harry M. Fisher, well-known jurist and prominent in social work, of Chicago, Max Pine, New York labor leader, and Dr. Israel Friedlander, noted Jewish historian and member of faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary, are en route to Europe to endeavor to ascertain conditions of the Jewish situation in Eastern Europe, particularly in the South of Russia, known as the Ukraine.

MORGENTHAU COMMISSION REPORTS—FINDS POGROMS, BUT EXONERATES POLISH NATION.

Complying with the request of the United States Senate, the Department of State has made public the report of the American commission appointed some time ago by President Wilson to inquire into the pogroms against the Jews in Russia. The commission was composed of ex-Ambassador to Turkey Henry Morgenthau, Brigadier General Edgar Jadwin and Homer Johnson.

The commission gives details in its report of excesses against the Jews in several Polish cities, in which 252 died as the result of mob violence. The commission declares that the excesses were apparently not premeditated and that it would be unfair to place the blame for them on the Polish nation as a whole.

The commission arrived in Warsaw on July 13, 1919, and remained in Poland for two months, during which time it traveled by automobile more than 2,500 miles, making a personal investigation in every town where anti-Jewish outbreaks had been reported. Its report declares that if the outrages had been part of a pre-conceived plan the number of killed would have run into the thousands, instead of amounting to a total of less than 300, and that the commission believes the excesses to have been the result of a widespread anti-Semitic prejudice, aggravated by the belief that the Jewish inhabitants were hostile to the Polish State.

The eight cases of mob murder which the report gives in detail occurred at the towns of Kielce, Lemberg, Pinsk, Lida, Wilno, Koelbussowa, Czestockowa and Minsk on different dates from November 11, 1918, to August 8, 1919. The most serious occurred at Lemberg, Pinsk and Wilno. In the town of Lemberg, on November 21, 1918, the report says that general rioting and disorder took place following the collapse of the Austrian empire and was aggravated by the presence of some 15,000 uniformed deserters in the city and by numerous criminals released by the Ukrainians from the local jails. During these disorders 36 houses were burned, the synagogue was destroyed and 64 Jews were killed. Order was restored by the formation of officers' patrols under experienced leaders, and since then the Polish Government has sentenced large numbers of rioters to varying terms of imprisonment.

The outbreak in Pinsk occurred on April 5, 1919, when a band of Polish soldiers, with the official permission of the town commander, arrested 75 Jews of both sexes on the ground that they were holding a Bolshevik meeting. Thirty-five of the prisoners, the report says, were shot "with scant deliberation and no trial whatever. Early the next morning three wounded victims were shot in cold blood as soon as life revealed itself in them." The report adds that the women prisoners were stripped and beaten.

Bolshevism was also the accusation upon which the trouble in Wilno was based. This occurred on April 19, 1919, after the Poles had taken the city with a loss of 33 killed in three days of street fighting. In the same period 65 Jews were killed, including four women; more than 2,000 Jewish houses were looted, with a loss said by the Jews to total more than 10,000,000 roubles, and hundreds of Jews were deported.

The report deals at length with the causes of the anti-Semitic feeling in Poland, which is declared to be to a large extent political, rather than racial or religious. It is stated that Polish national feeling, is irritated by what is regarded as the alien character of the great mass of the Jewish population.

"This is constantly brought home to the Poles," the report says, "by the fact that the majority of the Jews affect a distinctive dress, observe the Sabbath on Saturday, conduct business on Sunday, have separate dietary laws, wear long beards and speak a language of their own. The basis of this language is a German dialect, and the fact that Germany was and still is looked upon as an enemy country renders this vernacular especially unpopular.

The report adds that discrimination against the Jews finds its most conspicuous manifestation in the form of an economic boycott, and that the National Democratic party has continuously agitated the economic strangling of the Jews. The report, which was written last October, adds: "Even at the present time this campaign is being waged by most of the non-Jewish press, which constantly advocates that the economic boycott be used as a means of ridding Poland of its Jewish element. This agitation has created in the minds of some of the Jews the feeling that there is an invisible rope around their necks, and they claim that this is the worst persecution that they can be forced to endure."

German Government to Transport Russian Prisoners of War.

Jewish Russian prisoners of war held in German concentration camps are to be sent to Palestine as soon as possible, according to cable advices from Copenhagen.

The cable states that the German war department has ordered a registration of all Jewish Russian prisoners, who have repeatedly expressed the desire to live in Palestine, in order that plans may be put in motion for transporting them to the Holy Land.

It is estimated that between 30,000 and 40,000 Jewish Russian prisoners of war are still held in Germany. They have been existing under the most miserable conditions and many of them have died, according to reports coming from Germany.

The action of the German Government comes as a relief of repeated demands from the German Zionist organization, which has been insisting that the plight of Jewish prisoners of war be relieved by transporting them to Palestine, it was pointed out by Zionist officials. The German Zionist organization is conducting agricultural schools in the camps, to acquaint the prisoners with conditions in Palestine.

Jewish prisoners in Siberian concentration camps are also organizing to emigrate to Palestine as soon as the country opens up, according to reports received by the Zionist Organization of America. These prisoners are mostly professional men, numbered among the best families in Germany and Austria, and their presence in Palestine will be of vast economic and social importance to the country, Samuel Mason, Jewish relief worker in Siberia, emphasized in his recent report to the Zionist Organization.

The official action of the German Government in planning to transport its prisoners of war to Palestine, instead of sending them back to Russia, is considered as of the highest importance in the world-wide movement of Jewish mass-migration to the Holy Land.

A Well-Deserved Refusal.

The London Jewish Correspondence Bureau states that the Mysl Niepod gives an account of an incident which has been much talked about in Warsaw circles. Soon after the arrival of Sir Stuart Samuel, two ladies waited upon him on behalf of an institution of the Polish Red Cross. He made them a gift of 500 marks.

A fortnight later two other ladies, belonging to the highest Polish society, who were honorary members of the Polish Red Cross, called at the hotel where he was staying, to ask for a gift for their society. Sir Stuart Samuel replied politely but firmly that he could lend no further support to a society which does not sanction the admission of Jewish nurses to its ranks.

HALEVY'S "LA JUIVE."

By Rabbi Julius Silberfeld, Newark, N. J.

During this season there has been revived on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House an opera written in 1835 by a French Jew, Jacques Halevy. This composer has endeared himself to the synagogue through his immortal contribution of a composition set to the words of a portion of the Hallel service. Naturally, it is of the utmost interest to us to dwell upon the greatest masterpiece of Halevy, which has survived nearly a century of transition and change in music and its interpretation and is still capable of entrancing audiences with its sublime melodies and stirring the innermost depths of the human heart.

The opera in question is called "La Juive"—the Jewess—and, as its name indicates, the heroine in the story is a Jewess, who sacrifices herself for Kiddush Hashem, for the sanctification of God's name. The action of the drama is a strong indictment of Christianity, since it exposes the mockery and the shallowness of its pretensions of love and forgiveness. It shows its adherents and advocates muttering prayers with their lips and with cold-blooded cruelty permitting the burning alive of two innocent human beings for no crime whatsoever, except that they were Jews. At the same time the opera is a glorification of Judaism, since it demonstrates that attachment to its principles and doctrines is not a matter of heredity and birth, but is founded on the purest convictions; that a person born outside of the fold of the Jewish population, once becoming convinced of the sublimity of the Jewish faith, can be just as fervent a Jew, ready to suffer death for his convictions, as the one born within the Jewish fold. And a cursory glance at our history will furnish us abundant examples of genuine converts to the Jewish religion, who became fiery champions of our faith and were ready to suffer martyrdom in its defense.

The story of the plot is as follows: A Jew, Eliazar, had brought up as his daughter a Christian girl whom he had saved from a burning building and whose father afterwards becomes a cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church. This girl, Rachel, grows up a thorough Jewess, imbued with love and attachment for Eliazar, whom she believes to be her father. Unfortunately, Prince Leopold, a general in the Emperor's army, although engaged to marry the Emperor's niece, secretly loves the Jewish maiden, to whom he poses as a Jew. Rachel, on discovering his identity, denounces him in the presence of the whole court, and for this terrible crime of being loved by a Christian she and her father are condemned by the Cardinal to be burned alive. Only after Rachel falls a prey to the flames and Eliazar is about to share her fate does he reveal to the Cardinal the awful secret—that the girl he himself had condemned to die is his daughter.

While the action of the drama has some faulty construction, while it lays too much emphasis on the vengeful spirit of the old Jew, yet on the whole it cannot but produce a tremendous impression upon even a non-Jewish audience. We see a plastic demonstration before our eyes of the terrible persecutions to which the Jew was subjected during the Middle Ages, of the cruel injustice to which he was exposed, how the most trivial incident was sufficient to incite the mob against him, ready to tear him limb from limb. Thus, during the celebration of some religious festival, as shown in the first act, the people going to church are attracted by sounds of working tools emanating from the jewelry factory of the Jew. The mob, harangued by a demagogue, immediately enacts a regular pogrom and drags out the Jew and his daughter and is instantly ready to burn them. In vain does Eliazar plead: "Am I not a son of Israel? Am I bound by the customs of your church?" The mob construes this plea as a sneer at the church, and Eliazar defiantly exclaims: "Do you expect me to love your church from the treatment it accords me?" And the mob retorts that the death of the Jews will add splendor to their festival. Only the timely arrival of the Cardinal saves Eliazar and Rachel from imminent death. That scene is typical of thousands of such scenes that were enacted during those dark ages, when religious bigotry and hatred made life intolerable to the Jew and racked his soul with the torture of perpetual catastrophe hanging like a Damocles sword over his head.

And in contrast with this scene of brutal savagery, parading in the guise of the religion of love, is shown the exquisitely beautiful picture of a Jewish Seder service, the majesty and the religious fervor permeating the Jewish home, even though without its walls persecution, torture and death lurked for the Jew. To see this scene enacted, with Eliazar at the head of the table, personified by one of the greatest singers of modern times, holding the cup of wine and chanting the Kiddush prayer with celestial responses by the whole household, including the guests, is sufficient to send a thrill of ecstasy into the heart of every Jew, and even non-Jews are bound to be charmed by such a wonderful display of loyalty to a faith, that has withstood the persistent hostility of two thousand years; so that when the curtain rose on this charming scene, a storm of applause broke out from the entire audience. But the calmness and serenity of this beautiful picture are rudely disturbed by a knock on the door, and instantly panic seizes the whole gathering, the festive board is immediately broken up, and everybody seeks a place of hiding. For to the Jew of the Middle Ages, a knock on his door in the midst of his Seder service often meant disaster and death. How often was this festival made the occasion for his enemies to hurl the ridiculous blood accusation at him, to charge him with using Christian blood for the Seder ritual, and through this fictitious Christian blood, real Jewish blood flowed like a river in the narrow streets of the ghetto!

The indomitable courage of the Jew, his unswerving loyalty to his faith, also come to the fore in this wonderful opera. When the Cardinal, touched by the youth and beauty of the Jewess, wishes to save her from death in the flames, he tries to persuade Eliazar to become a convert to Christianity. Eliazar stoutly exclaims: "Do you expect me to become faithless to the God of my fathers?" And the Cardinal mockingly replies: "But your God allows you to suffer, he has no mercy on you!" And even this tantalizing remark leaves Eliazar firm and steadfast. And when you study the history of Israel and read of the innumerable instances of massacre and pillage, to which the Jews have been exposed without a seeming intervention from on high to call a halt to the slaughter and the carnage, when even in these modern times you read the report of Brigadier-General Jadwin of the United States Army, that 29,000 Jews have been killed in the Ukraine, and you do not behold the heavens open to hurl down death and destruction upon the cruel murderers of those innocent men, women and children—it is really miraculous that the Jew, despite this appalling injustice, does not lose faith in a divine Providence; that he still clings to the God of his fathers, and remains faithful to Him through all danger and trial.

But the martyrdom of the Jewish people throughout the ages is epitomized in the last act during the scene of the execution of Eliazar and Rachel. Here a vivid picture is portrayed of Christian hatred and malice towards the Jew, how even in such a solemn moment, when two human beings are about to suffer the extreme penalty, the mob seeks to wreak its wrath and fury upon the poor Jews, even threatening them with physical violence and giving vent to such exclamations as: "What joy! What pleasure! Death to the Jews! Praise be the Lord!" The hideousness of the scene is even enhanced by a solemn procession of priests bearing crosses, and the Cardinal asking everybody to kneel and pray for the salvation of the deluded Jews—all that in the name of the religion of love! No wonder that the poor Jewish girl cries out: "Father, I tremble, their grim prayers freeze my soul!" The father, torn between love and duty, knowing that Rachel was born a Christian, takes her aside and urges her to accept Christianity and thereby save her life; but Rachel with heroic devotion exclaims: "What! I a Christian? I would rather choose death!" And true to the religion in which she was reared she courageously ascends the funeral pyre and falls a prey to the flames. And herein is this opera a glorification of Judaism. There must be something wonderful in a faith which is capable of producing such heroism and self-sacrifice, which makes its adherents abandon earthly wealth and pleasure and undergo torture, agony and even death for a principle. There is a remarkable similarity between this Rachel and the ancient Biblical heroine Ruth. Ruth, too, was not born within the Jewish household; and yet she has immortalized herself with the words: "Entreat me not to leave thee . . . for where thou goest I shall go, thy people shall be my people and thy God my God, where thou diest there shall I die and there shall I be buried . . . only death alone shall part me and thee." These are the lofty words of a heathen converted to Judaism, and these have been the watchword of the Rachels and Esthers and Rebekahs of all times. It has been due to these heroic women of all ages that Judaism has been preserved to the present day. And if the same spirit of loyalty and devotion will animate the Jewish women of the present and the future, then the career of Judaism will march on unhampered and unimpeded, defying the lash of the persecutor and the weapon of the assassin, and continuing to shed its lustre and radiance upon a benighted humanity, until its redeeming truth will penetrate the obdurate heart of all mankind, and establish real love and brotherhood on earth.

Dare-Devil Horsemen to Form Nucleus of a Mounted Palestinian Constabulary.

Palestine's Jewish rural guard, whose romantic exploits of daring read like pages from "The Three Musketeers," is to be converted into a mounted constabulary by the British Government, according to the London Zionist Review.

These Jewish youths, whose rough-and-ready horsemanship and feats of bravery have made them famed throughout the Holy Land, where they are known as the "Ha-Shomerim" or "Watchman of the New Zion," will form the nucleus of an official constabulary, sworn in as a part of the British army of occupation in Palestine, the Zionist Review states.

The history of this celebrated body of rural police in Palestine is one of the most romantic chapters in the great adventure of rebuilding the Jewish National Home. This body of mounted rural guardsmen, would find itself completely out of a job if it did not have the eternal enemies of the Jewish settlements to contend with. They are a body of armed and mounted Jewish village-youths, organized as a self-disciplined, inter-municipal corps of rural police, supported through local taxation.

Raids by Bedouins upon the colonies of Zionist settlers were frequent before the British occupation. In the beginning, the gang-assaults upon Jewish communities were invariably timed for Saturday, because the Bedouin robber-gangs knew the deep-seated aversion of the more pious villagers against Sabbath-breaking even in defense of their lives and homes. The first of these Sabbath-raids upon Petach-Tikvah, many years ago, found the invaded colonists at their synagogue devotions. When the savage battle-cries and defiant blank-cartridge shots of the Bedouins interrupted the service, a number of extreme pietists were resigned to be slaughtered rather than to offer resistance on the Sabbath day. Against this sentiment of non-resistance arose two fighters in Israel, Joshua Stampfer, the founder of the first Zionist colony in Palestine, a Hungarian, and an athletic Russian named Abraham Shapiro. With strong-arm methods and voices of thunder, they persuaded the colonists to arm, led them to battle and drove the Arab invaders, after heavy punishment, beyond the border of Petach Tikvah. The younger of the two fighters, Abraham Shapiro, thereupon began to organize the Ha-Shomerim, whose exploits are not only celebrated in Jewish communities all over the globe, but have become the topics of legend, song and story among the very Bedouins whose attack these watchmen of the New Zion are repelling and whose invading criminals they are tracking down.

One of the earlier Ha-Shomerim chiefs, Mendel Koppelman, has a record of assassins hunted down, plots foiled and loot recovered which could easily make him the hero of a Palestine Nick Carter series. He was a giant on horseback, a formidable rough and tumble fighter, and during his short life-time established an almost legendary reputation for sagacity, immaculate uprightness and fighting valor. Among the Arabs, whose language and customs he knew intimately well, he had connections and blood-brotherhoods that reached from one end of Palestine to the other and beyond to Transjordan and the Arabian desert. In the quarrels of Bedouin tribes and individuals, he was frequently called upon to act as an arbiter, and he always acquitted himself of this difficult office with tact and judgment. In his hunting down of criminals, which was as relentless as that of the famous Royal Mounted Police of Canada, his many Arab friendships were of priceless help to him. After a splendid but brief career of public service to his own people, he died, through the bullets of a Bedouin assassin, fired from ambush.

One of the Ha-Shomerim was killed in warding off a village raid. His comrades sent a letter of condolence to his father in Russia. The old man promptly wrote back that he was in no need of sympathy. He was proud that his boy had met death so heroically, so Jewishly, and he was sending his two younger sons to fill the gap in the ranks made by their brother's death.

Another colony fighter and night-rider of the Ha-Shomerim, called "The Lion Hearted" even by his adversaries, is Michael Halperin. Once he entered the lion's cage of a circus-tent packed to the ceiling with Arabs, and there surrounded by five huge, growling lions, sang the Hebrew national hymn, "Hatikvah" from beginning to end, just to show his contempt of danger to a hand-clapping, impressive crowd of Moslems. The son of a wealthy Russian manufacturer, he spent his last penny on colony improvements, and when he had no more money of his own to spend, he asked, through advertisements, in the London financial periodicals, for a loan of 50,000,000 francs to be used as a Palestinian Restoration Fund, drawing his small pay as a Ha-Shomer for several months in advance and starving himself on meager rations, to pay for the advertisements. The old fighter of the new Judea has now the satisfaction of knowing that the 50,000,000 francs—and a good deal more—will be forthcoming through the $10,000,000, Palestine Restoration Fund of the Zionist Organization of America, that the restoration of a Jewish Palestine will soon be a reality, and that his own rural guardsmen will be watching the new Zion with powerful British assistance.

What You Ought to Know about Matzoth

Passover is approaching and soon you will have to buy your Matzoth. If you will heed the advice of hundreds of thousands of others you will secure them as well as your Matzo Meal, Cake Meal, Pfarfel, etc., of Horowitz Bros. & Margareten, for the following reasons:

Since 1884 the Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Matzoth have been the best.

The fact that this concern has been in existence for over 35 years and in that time has been continually expanding proves that their product is satisfactory. They have installed improved machinery, built large additions to their bakery from time to time, and now Horowitz Bros. and Margareten's Matzoth are sold all over the world. People who have once used them are satisfied with no other.

The user of Horowitz Bros. and Margareten's Matzoth is assured of real Kashruth. The entire establishment is under the personal supervision of those famous ecclesiastical authorities, Rabbis Philip Klein and M. S. Margolies. In addition the members of the firm of Horowitz Bros. and Margareten are known to be real pious and religious Jews with whom religion stands above everything.

Horowitz Bros. and Margareten's Matzoth are a New York product. New York with almost 2,000,000 Jewish residents is the greatest Jewish centre the world has ever known and the Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Bakery is the greatest Jewish Matzoth bakery in the greatest Jewish city. It is obvious that a bakery located outside of New York must spend tremendous sums in freight and transportation charges to reach New York City, the greatest Matzoth market in the world. Possibly 60 of every 100 American families who use Matzoth live in New York City, and consequently Horowitz Bros. and Margareten can sell Matzoth to the majority of American Jews without spending one dollar in transportation charges. The difference is put into the quality of their product. Jews living in New York or vicinity are practically enabled to get the Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Matzoth direct from the oven—warm and fresh.

A Boon to the Housewife—Matzo Meal, Etc., in Cartons

Beginning with the current season all Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Matzo Meal, Cake Meal, Pfarfel, etc., will be sold in either two, three or five-pound cartons. This innovation assures both sanitation and Kashruth. Touch a bag of flour and you will see dirt arise and likewise dirt may enter into the sack. With the new sanitary container all danger of contamination is eliminated. These packages are neat and easily carried home, keep the goods fresh and clean indefinitely and make a valuable kitchen accessory.

To assure your getting the genuine Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Matzoth always look for the trade mark—a Mogen David in red as illustrated above. Horowitz Bros. and Margareten have had many imitators, and even the name "Horowitz" has been used for that purpose. For your own protection they now label all their goods with this Mogen David in red. If you want to be assured that you are getting the genuine Horowitz Bros. and Margareten Matzoth look for this trade mark on every box. These only are genuine.

Sabbath begins at 5.06. p. m. Parashath Bo. Exodus 10:1—13:16. Haftarah Jeremiah 46:13-28.

We were inexpressibly shocked to read of the demise of Solomon T. H. Hurwitz at the early age of thirty-two years. Life seemed to hold so much in store for him; many years of future usefulness lay apparently before him. His scholarly instincts endeared him to all lovers of Jewish culture and his uncompromising steadfastness to orthodox Judaism set him apart in this age of doubt and scoffing.

What has become of the various symposiums on the condition of Judaism, not to mention Jewry, after the world war? They have vanished into thin air. Their dire prediction of a new Jewish religion, their ungovernable view that religion was shifting its ground, has not been realized. The old faith and the old traditions still survive and still are at the disposal of a world which should value them better.

An Anglo-Jewish lady, of course not ordained in any manner or degree, recently occupied the pulpit of the synagogue of the Jewish society in the University of Cambridge. The Anglo-Jewish press "side-steps" the question of whether this innovation is permissible or even desirable, awaiting an authoritative pronouncement on the subject from the Chief Rabbi. It is hardly to be expected, however, that the latter will see it needful for him to intervene in the situation, since the Cambridge synagogue scarcely acknowledges his ecclesiastical authority and is considerably patronized by so-called "liberal" Jews.

It is hardly correct to say that the entente allies are making use of the various treaty provisions affecting the rights of minorities for the purpose of bargaining among themselves. To utilize human beings (since this is what the contention implies) for such inhuman uses were, indeed, a travesty of all the high ideals assumed to have suffused the victors of the world war. Specifically, the Jews would be made the playthings of fate and ill-usage, in countries where their lot is not a happy one, even more than any others. But, as stated, we cannot credit such a contention with any amount of substance and regard it as the vaporings of amateur political scientists.

We note that a bill has been introduced into the United States House of Representatives the aim of which is to create special naturalization courts. We regard this measure as a most salutary and important one. Hitherto naturalization has been relegated to unimportant sides of our courts, and the process has not been invested with that dignity which its solemnity demands. Indeed, the entire subject should be placed in the care of a special tribunal. At the same time we would call attention to the desirability of so amending this bill as to provide for special immigration courts as well. The boards of special inquiry at our ports have not worked well uniformly, and there is need of establishing their procedure and jurisprudence on an ordered basis. If our authorities, then, were to create special courts for immigration and naturalization matters it would be a distinct advantage to all concerned.

Oh inconsistent Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch! He who is, despite his Jewish incoherence, a real lamdan, whose sallies at the expense of historical Judaism proceed out of a love of contrariety and not out of the fulness of his ignorance, he tells us now that "for all practical purposes, a technical drill in the Moreh, in Eminah Ramah, in the Emunoth ve-Deoth and the like is of slight importance"! And he has ever insisted that for a rabbi to be really a spiritual guide and leader of his people a deep abiding knowledge of Judaism and its literature is not only fundamental but an absolute and essential prerequisite. No wonder the Reformers take heart of grace from this message of the great Western radical. The graduates of their seminary knew little enough of our deathless heritage in the past. Now they are licensed to know and to understand even less. For Rabbi Hirsch says that technical drills are out of date, even when related to the great monuments of Jewish literature. Fortunately the orthodox section of the community pays no attention to his outpourings. Fortunately, those who minister to its spiritual need will remain as ever well grounded in the very technical drills which Rabbi Hirsch, for a moment only it would seem, so practically condemns.

SIR STUART SAMUEL AND POLAND.

THE correspondent at Warsaw of The Jewish Chronicle, of London, recently reported to that journal that Sir Stuart Samuel, the President of the Board of Deputies, who has just returned from a careful investigation of the Polish outrages on the Jews of Poland, "won the esteem of Polish Jewry. The absence of parades and pomp from his program," etc. In short, Sir Stuart succeeded in his task, conducted in the interest not alone of Anglo-Jewry but of all the Jewries of the world, because he approached it in the proper Jewish spirit.

A perfervid nationalist as Jewish "ambassador" to Poland would have blundered as egregiously as one who represented the opposite pole (no pun intended) in Jewish policy. An anti-nationalist was bound to err in his diagnosis and treatment of the situation of Polish Jewry just as grievously. The ideal Jewish "ambassador" is a man who is steeped in our traditions, who knows and understands the strivings and the aims of all and sundry Jews, to whom, in short, nothing Jewish can be foreign. We are free to think that Sir Stuart Samuel is such a man. His communal position in England is dignified; all his life he has borne his share of the work of the community; he comes of a family to which Judaism and its traditions are a tree of life. Such a man, then, is ideally fitted to investigate the Jewish situation in Poland, and his report on the subject will form an epoch-making document.

The Jewish community in Poland was latterly and still is in such a state of unstable equilibrium that capacities for disturbance thereof are legion. Sir Stuart sought to attain a clear view of conditions; he aimed to learn just what took place and why these occurrences resulted. In other words, he reports what took place and does not read into the events his own views of the wisdom or the folly of Polish-Jewish ideals.

We, certainly, do not look upon Polish Jewry as a fit subject for nationalist propaganda. At the same time we would never regard it as a will-o'-the-wisp for anti-nationalists. We are glad to have the verdict of a Jewish statesman on the condition of Polish Jewry, for such will enable their fortunate brethren to aid best in their reconstruction and eventual happiness. Sir Stuart Samuel, we repeat, is to our mind a Jewish statesman of this type.

CONSERVATISM.

OUR Jewish and editorial heart was particularly rejoiced to read the last sentence in a communication from Rabbi Maurice H. Harris to Temple Israel of Harlem, which we recently published in our correspondence columns. That sentence was of the following tenor: "At the last meeting (of the congregation) it was proposed to hold morning and evening services should the neighborhood call for it."

We sincerely congratulate Temple Israel of Harlem and its spiritual guide, Rabbi Maurice H. Harris, on the step thus foreshadowed by the latter. This signalizes a return to the Judaism of our traditions which Temple Israel of Harlem, along with so many other synagogues in this and other cities, discarded lock, stock and barrel years ago under the burdening influence of Reform. Temple Israel of Harlem now ought to realize that a Judaism without our historic liturgy and ceremonies is only a travesty. There is but one Judaism, pure and undefiled, and this is the Judaism of our fathers, to which Temple Israel of Harlem is, in the interest of its neighborhood, thus again to return after an overlong wandering "in the wilderness." Let us hope that this "return" is the precursor of a true return.

Rabbi Harris' proviso, "should the neighborhood call for it," is in reality not such at all. The neighborhood to which Temple Israel of Harlem ministers embraces Jews and Jewesses who forbear from entering upon nice distinctions between this or that theology. They, like the mass of our people all over the world, know but one Judaism, the Judaism we have described. Indeed, we are persuaded that the laity would never have instituted Reform; this proceeded originally and is still kept alive through the pugnacious activity of misguided religious leaders, rabbis as they called themselves, who interpreted their call to minister to the people as a call to innovate.

Our preceding remarks may serve to detail the basis of our pleasure at this action of Temple Israel of Harlem. For this reason its rabbi and its trustees and members may accept our felicitations in the spirit in which they are offered. We always are glad to record our pleasure over actions calculated to raise the respect in which the Jewish name is rightly held. Temple Israel of Harlem, by its latest step, has made kiddush Hashem. We hope its example will promptly be followed by other Reform, and even radical, synagogues.

President Wilson was well advised to transmit to Congress General Jadwin's report on the outrages which were perpetrated on the Jews of the Ukraine. The general was a member of the Morgenthau commission to Poland, but this report, which has thus been given wide currency, relates only to the Ukraine. It will be recalled that divers tales have been heard regarding the extent of the Ukrainian excesses on the Jews. General Jadwin declares he found that twenty-nine thousand of our co-religionists in that section of the world perished as the victims of pogroms. It will also be recalled that Secretary of State Lansing recently informed a representative Jewish delegation that our government was powerless to effect a mitigation of untoward Jewish conditions in the Ukraine. Since others have grappled with the distressing situation and have even gone far to perfect arrangements whereby a Jewish commission may be despatched to that unhappy land. Perhaps one can see in President Wilson's message to Congress a revision, or possibly the corrective, of the expressed attitude of our Secretary of State.

HAND, EYE, MOUTH.

"And it shall be for a sign unto thee upon thy hand and as a memorial between thine eyes, that the Lord's law may be in thy mouth." (Ex. xiii, 9).

CONSECRATION means more than ordinary devotion. It means an infinite reference for finite action. What we do with our perishing hands goes out and beyond itself, has a meaning larger than we perceive. To believe in this larger meaning of human action does not signify an overemphasis of the self; a proof of human vanity; a vain watering of the stock of the Ego. It means rather a deep recognition of the world as a spiritual organism, in which every man is a member with a definite function; in which no task can remain, as regards effect or influence, at its source; but in which every deed is actuated by the directive force of the whole, for the purpose of an ever-tightening integration of the disparate members of the moral universe into complete unity. To feel the force of the integrating and directing influence of the Spirit; to act under its ceaseless spell; to conform consciously while maintaining a sense of individual freedom, to the far-sweeping trend of things towards divine ends: this, surely, is consecration—not a petty ritual performance, nor a selfish votive act, but a sacrificial gesture whose altar is the world.

In this large sense of spiritual consecration alone would I have you understand the text. To consecrate hand, eyes and mouth to God means to consecrate the whole life to that larger service for which He has appointed every man a priest, every woman a priestess. Whatever the outward symbols of this consecration be, its inner meaning must be revealed—and not concealed, as is often the case—by the mechanics of symbolism. The instruments we employ by way of symbolic presentation of religious truth must unmistakably set forth the thought that we ourselves are but instruments in the hands of God for the performance of His world-work. Man is the highest created symbol, the divine phylactery. The rabbis are right: God wears phylacteries. And the writing on the divine phylacteries proclaims man's position in the world. For man to assume his place in the world, perform his divinely appointed task, adjust himself to the vast scheme of which he is no more but no less than a part; this is consecration.

Let the human Hand lay hold of eternity; let the human Eye see through the crust of matter to the mystic centre; let, finally, the human Mouth pour into sound that the Hand has grasped and what the Eye has seen, so that the Hand become as the everlasting arm, the eye as the window of heaven, and the mouth as the oracle of God: this is the high aim of consecration. It is enough to fill any man's heart with longing for perfection; it is the lofty ideal whose partial fulfilment even may lend force to any life.

First, mark you, in the order of consecration is the Hand. "It shall be for a sign upon thy hand." The first virtue of the Jew, and of every believer, is Obedience. Before the mind knows, the hand must do. The first desire of the Jew, and of every true believer, is not for creed but for deed. When the children of Israel stood before Sinai, engaged in the greatest act of consecration any nation ever undertook, their first pledge was naaseh—action—while their second, and secondary, pledge was nishma—understanding. By remarkable spiritual insight they divined what modern psychologists are only beginning to grasp, namely, that the best way to know is to do! Thought often delays action, but action always stimulates thought. Thought is the father of doubt and hesitation, but action promotes certainty and confidence. Would you understand the world? Find something to do therein, and having found that something, make it a gateway not alone to further action, but to the understanding of the whole. What comes first within the grasp of the fingers may ultimately come within the grasp of the mind, but what comes first within the grasp of the mind may slip through the fingers. First, therefore, in the order of consecration is the Hand.

Second in the order of consecration, and the result of the first, is the Eye. "And as a memorial between thine eyes." Right action almost inevitably produces high vision. Understanding follows the lead of the hand. Preconceived notions may prove futile in actual practice, when grappling with the realities of life, but the conclusions tested by previous action are bound to be correct. It is not intended that obedience be blind, and though faith often demands action that is not understood or is but half-understood, it does so in the assurance that action will lead to perfect understanding; so that if obedience is first blind or purblind, it opens its eyes gradually towards complete enlightenment. Faith is a process of education whose last results are slow to appear. To those, for instance, who express doubt concerning that system of practical observance which we call Judaism, who question as to whether Judaism can be intelligently carried out by the modern man, we would say: "Live Judaism, and Judaism will prove itself liveable. First, Do!; then, Know!"

Last in the order of consecration is the Mouth. "That the law of the Lord may be in thy mouth." Judaism, unless it resign itself to silence, must utter its truths in words that shall live. But the word must be tried and tested, first by action, then by knowledge. There is altogether too much half-baked utterance. Words are fruits that hang on the tree of life; only he who has lived the truth may speak the truth. Words are mere empty sound, mere hollow echo, when underived from the deep sources of experience; but when bursting from the profundities of true living, they are the highest form of action, for they become the formula for further deeds—they assume the force of divine law. May we not paraphrase the Kantian norm: So act that from your action such knowledge shall spring as shall assume the force of universal law?

This is the climax of consecration: the finite action raised to infinite worth.

JOEL BLAU.

THE JEW TO THE NATIONS.

By Rabbi Joseph Glushak, Newark, N. J.
(Translated from the Yiddish.)

I am the Jew, the wonder of wonders, the hero of heroes. I stand alone, different to others, none is equal to me and that is my pride.

I am unconquerable, all swords waged upon me were broken; all implements were destroyed and I remained unhurt; fires did not burn me; waters did not drown me.

Like a powerful rock I emerged above the surface of the ocean of nations. They stormed me, beating with froth but were brushed to atoms and withdrew; new nations appeared, throwing their waves with full force against my fence, licking my granite-like rock and withdrew with the result of being sunk in the depths of ancient history.

And I stand erect dreaming the reverie of eternity.

I Am the Jew.

I was chosen by God the creator of all worlds and father of all nations. He said to me: "Go, My child! You will sustain much suffering, but I will indemnify you. I will bestow upon you the greatest endowment I possess and that is—Eternity. Thy eyes will behold how thy mightiest opponents one after another vanish and thou wilt happily survive all of them. You shall live as long as the mountains will exist, and that will be thy reward for thy suffering."

Thus said God, transmitting to me the secret of eternal life and everlasting youth—a secret unrevealed to no nation—and ever since I stay young, fresh and strong, and will continue to be such because I absorbed the elixir of perpetuity.

I Am the Jew.

I am as young today as in the time of the defeat of the Assyrian kings, as the time when the Maccabees annihilated the Siric-Greek armies.

I am full of vigor and may commensurate in power, skill, wisdom and valor, yea, even in physical power with all the nations of the world.

I am aware of the fact that I am disliked for my unusual abilities but have grown accustomed to it. I calmly and unconcernedly accept a venomous glance and pass on my way, for I am protected by the armor of self-consciousness. I know that the hatred is due because of my virtues and not to my faults, and am proud of the fact that the whole world is so thoughtful of and seek to conquer me, a proof of my significance.

I am the Jew and you can not remain impartial towards me; you must either love or hate me.

I detest impartiality, genius mentality does not tolerate it; neither would I endure had the world ignored me. I possess a burning fantasy, a warm heart, and wish always to be the center figure of the world. I am contented with your sometime-praises and all-time curses since you do not forget me at all.

I take revenge from my enemies by their continuous talking of me. I avenge them for by their constantly meeting me everywhere; in the stock exchange, government cabinet, in the art galleries and scientific academies. Wherever there is a competition for skill and ingenuity I am there. I search for food for my brains, a field for my energy.

Who that wishes to escape me shall resort to the jungle among animals, but in the presence of civilization I am present there and must be reckoned with.

I feel gratified when my opponents' children meet me in the schools, despite the venomous hatred in their hearts against me, they are unable to avoid my history, they must learn my Moses and my prophets. In vain all their efforts to minimize my greatness; I remain unforgetful.

There is a remedy to get rid of me by crushing civilization, erasing the past of kindred and begin history anew; even that would scarcely do, for I will build a new civilization and will also then be the center figure of it.

And when my enemy visits the church he is unable to release himself from me because his lips tremblingly utter the prayers that the church has taken from me and seeks inspiration in the chapters of the psalm of my David.

I have conquered the place of civilization forever and you cannot drive me out therefrom; you are powerless to defeat me, you are incompetent to overthrow the Jewish spirit.

I am the Jew. I dwell among you for two thousand years and you do not understand me.

When you despised me you did not feel how I retaliated with the same coin of contempt; you were unable to suppress my soul, my spirit was free: I was like a prince that was captured by slaves; that you did not realize, it was beyond your conception.

And when you proposed to me to enter your society and accept your dogmas as a means to buy our repose and safety I refused. Your anger was furious, for you failed to understand the sublime object of my stubbornness. I did not yield.

I am not only stubborn, but also a dreamer. For two thousand years I dreamed of my home from which I was forcibly driven. I clung to my hopes with all my might; I never gave it up. Only a nation that is convinced of its eternity can dream of a great ideal.

Having been waiting for a period of generations I see at last the sun of my redemption rising, an occurrence which human history is unable to show its equal. Did I not state that I am different to others and there is no comparison to me?

I am the Jew, the bearer of ideals, of justice, of peace and humanity. The voice of my prophets stirred the world, my country produced the best and noblest that humanity owns. I return back to the wonderful place to continue the work of everything that is good, noble and sublime.

Cleansed by innocent suffering, strengthened by a long combat with a world of opponents I return not old and broken but young and vigorous in spirit, rich with experience and full with renewed encouragement to the land, that was the center of all my thoughts and senses.

Happy are they that will assist in the building of my home, for they will atone the wrongs the world committed against me in the past; they will place a wreath of perpetual fame.

And when they will come to me to Zion to seek for light and warmth when they will search for the ideals of justice in my country, then will also be the end to all wars and strifes among nations and to the contests the world carried on against me.

I am sure of my future, I am the Jew.

Near East Relief Cares for Jewish Orphans.

More than 450 Jewish children who are refugees as a result of the persecution of non-Mohammedan residents of Turkey, have been cared for by Near East Relief, 1 Madison Avenue, New York, during the past year, at Aleppo in Northern Syria.

In addition to this, the Aleppo headquarters of the organization has cared for many hundred destitute Jewish residents.

In the Jewish Hospital at Aleppo, the Near East Relief has paid the salaries of a native doctor and a graduate native nurse, who operate this establishment of some fifteen beds, and a clinic at which forty or fifty people are treated daily.

About $500 monthly is contributed by Near East Relief to the support of the hospital, as well as mattresses and blankets for the use of the patients. The work is carried on in co-operation with the Jewish relief organization at Aleppo.

THE HIGHEST CHOICE

Do not let it be merely a question of initial cost when you make your choice of pianos. The matchless music of the Steinway has lifted it above the "price" atmosphere for all time. It is true, the Steinway does cost a little more. But no one who owns a Steinway has ever a shadow of regret for the price paid. It is but little higher than the cost of other pianos, and the Steinway carries within its perfect mechanism the guarantee of a satisfaction beyond all price.

For more than three score years it has been the ideal of the greatest music masters of their day. So the Steinway must command your respectful attention before your choice is made.

Motion Pictures in Palestine.

The moving picture industry has been launched in Palestine, and several films featuring contemporary events in the Holy Land have been taken and are on their way to England, according to a statement of the Zionist Central Organization, London.

Productions on a large scale of an historical and religious nature are being planned by English and American motion picture men. Recently Harry Goldman, St. Louis business man, took 100,000 feet of American movies with Hebrew subtitles to Palestine to show in the movies there and in others that he planned establishing. Already there are three theatres in Jerusalem and several others in Jaffa, Haifa and the other cities of Palestine.

Mr. Goldman has also organized "Menorah Films," to produce feature pictures with historical Palestine as the settings.

Syrians Hostile Toward Jews and English on Account of Zionism.

London (By I. J. P. B.).—Kamel Ayu Bey, the leader of the Syrian Christians, in an interview by the correspondent of the London Daily News in Cairo, Egypt, declared that the recent appearance of anti-Semitic feeling in Syria is due to the Zionist aspirations to make Palestine a Jewish homeland.

Another reason which Kamel Ayu Bey gave for the opposition both to the Jews and to the English authorities was that the latter preferred that agriculture and trade in Palestine should be in Jewish hands rather than in those of the Christians or Mussulmen. Palestine, according to Syrian views, ought to be united with Syria.

The High Cost of Living in Palestine.

The London Jewish Correspondence Bureau learns that the cost of living in Palestine grows daily more threatening. The increase in prices of different commodities range from 20 to 100 per cent. Milk, cheese and butter have risen 100 per cent., and wheat is also 100 per cent. up. Vegetables have either vanished altogether from the market, or are only obtainable at exorbitant charges. All goods imported from Egypt, such as rice and sugar, have very much increased in price.

Ezekiel Leavitt on "Shylock."

Boston, Mass., Jan. 18, 1920.—Under the auspices of the Radcliffe Menorah Study Circle, Mr. Ezekiel Leavitt, the famous poet and scholar, the leader of this circle, delivered a lecture at the Agassiz House on "The Merchant of Venice." In his introductory remarks Mr. Leavitt said that it is a herculean task for a non-Jew to understand the Jewish soul, his inner ego, his feelings, his aspirations and inspirations, and he sharply rebuked those Gentile writers who, knowing the Jew superficially or not at all, take the liberty to speak of the chosen people, of their distinctiveness and specific traits, of their so-called shoddiness and of their greed. Then Mr. Leavitt analyzed the character of Shylock and said that Shakespeare dipped his pen in the ink of national prejudice and painted a monster, a devil, not a human being. The word Jew is not and should not be a synonym for money, Mr. Leavitt continued, for often it is the antonym of this word; and that there is more usury, more injustice, more fallacy beneath the standard of the cross than under the star of David. After the lecture followed discussions, in which most of the students participated, thus showing their understanding of the lecture and their appreciation of it. The president of the circle is Miss F. Berlin, Roxbury, and its secretary is Miss S. Gelfand, Chelsea, Mass.

The Peace Conference of the Roumanian Jews of America.

On February 1, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, there will be held a "Peace Conference" of all the Roumanian Jewish organizations in the United States and Canada.

Up to the present time there have existed two great organizations of the Roumanian Jews in America: The American Union of Roumanian Jews, and the Federation of Roumanian Jews. As a result of this division considerable friction has been evident at times. But now, owing to the great work ahead for the Roumanian Jews, they have united into a single organization and are to hold the conference.

At this conference, the chairman, Dr. P. A. Siegelstein, will read a report on the activities of the Roumanian Jews in America in behalf of their countrymen in Europe, and he will offer a plan for reconstructive work for the Jewish war sufferers in Roumania. Here, it may be mentioned, that the Roumanian Jews, in distinction to other "Landsmanschaften" organizations, do all their relief work solely through the Joint Distribution Committee. Mr. Leo Wolfson, who has recently visited Roumania, where he had interviews with the King, all the ministers and the leaders in Jewish affairs, will lead a discussion on the political situation and the future of the Jews in Roumania, and will make suggestions as to how the American Jews can help those Jews in Roumania, who have not yet obtained civil rights.

German Minister of State Urges Internment of All "Alien" Jews.

Berlin (By I. J. P. B.).—The German Minister of State in an address before the Prussian Parliament has formulated a plan in reference to the question of the "Alien" Jews now in the country. In his address the Minister said:

"We Germans cannot be benefited by their (the alien Jews') presence in large numbers. At the same time, however, we cannot turn them over to the Poles and Russians now in power, who are in readiness for them with knives in their hands. We must forbid the Jewish refugees from the East admission to our larger cities. And there is only one course to pursue: We must place them in prison and later send them to concentration camps."

This plan is finding support in the Prussian Parliament.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

THE ICONOCLASTS.

Dear Children:
When we pray to the Almighty for special privileges it devolves upon us to use our efforts to be worthy of those privileges and make them effective. Moses prayed that the Jewish nation should be distinguished from all others, and the Holy One, blessed be he, told him that the only way that this could be accomplished was by Israel becoming a nation of iconoclasts, and he said to him: "Observe thou that which I command thee this day; behold, I will drive out before thee the Emorite, and the Canaanite, and the Hittite, and the Perizzite, and the Hivite, and the Jebusite." Six nations are mentioned here, says Rashi (although there were originally seven), but the Girgashite arose from his country and made way for Israel. "Take heed to thyself lest thou make a covenant with the inhabitants of the land against which thou goest up, lest it be for a snare in the midst of thee; but their altars shall ye destroy and their statues shall ye break, and their groves shall ye cut down." The "Ashera," which is translated "grove," was a certain tree that the heathens used to worship. "For thou shalt worship no other God, for the Lord's name is Watchful." He watches to take revenge and does not forgive those who forsake him. "Make thou then no covenant with the inhabitants of the land, lest that, if they go astray after their gods, and sacrifice unto their gods, any one call thee, and thou eat of his sacrifice." Thinkest thou that there is no punishment for eating thereof? I will account it to you as if you acknowledged your belief in his idol worship, for through that you will come to take of his daughters unto your sons, and when his daughters go astray after their gods, they make thy sons also go astray after their gods. "The feast of unleavened bread shalt thou keep, seven days shalt thou eat unleavened bread, and I have commanded thee, in the time of the month of Abib." (Abib means the spring month when the grain first begins to ripen.) "All that openeth the womb is mine," of man, "and every firstling that is a male among thy cattle, whether ox or lamb, but the firstling of an ass (but no other unclean animal) shalt thou redeem with a lamb." He should give the lamb to the Cohen (Jewish priest) who may have the use of it for himself, whilst the firstling of the ass may be used by its owner in his work. (This is unlike other sacred offerings that became unfit for sacrifice and are redeemed by another animal, says the Sifse chachomim, in which case they and their substitutes are forbidden to be shorn of their fleece, or to be used in labor.) But if thou redeem him not, thou shalt then break his neck (with a cleaver) inasmuch as he deprived the Cohen of his dues, therefore shall he lose his property. All the first-born of thy sons shalt thou redeem, five "selaim" is the standard of the redemption, as it is said, "And those that are to be redeemed from a month old shalt thou redeem, according to the usual estimation of five shekels of silver" (Numbers 18). "And none shall appear before me empty," according to the simple meaning of this paragraph, it is a command by itself and has no reference to the first-born, as the command concerning the first-born does not include the appearance in the Holy Temple, but it is a separate command. When ye go up on a festival to appear before me, do not appear in my presence empty handed, but it is incumbent upon you to bring a sacrifice of a burnt offering when appearing before me, but it is expounded in a Beraitha of the Treatise Kedushin that inasmuch as this paragraph is superfluous in connection with the command concerning the redemption of the first-born, its proximity is intended to teach us concerning the liberal furnishing of the Hebrew servant when he goes free from service (it is said there Lo theshalchenu rekam). "Thou shalt not let him go away empty," and it is said here Velo yerau fonei rekam, "and none shall appear before me empty," which in proximity to the redemption of the first-born means five selaim (sifse chachomim), so do the Rabbins infer that the Hebrew servant should be furnished at least to the value of five selaim each, of the flocks, the threshing floor and the wine-press (Deuteronomy 15). "Six days thou mayest work, but on the seventh day shalt thou rest, even in ploughing time and in harvest shalt thou rest." Why is ploughing-time and harvest mentioned here? Some of our Rabbins say it refers to the ploughing time of the eve of the Sabbatical year which enters the seventh year, and the harvest of the seventh year, which leaves the closing of the Sabbatical year, to teach us that we must add from the profane to the sacred, and it means, there are times when you must rest in the ploughing and harvest time, as above set forth. (It does not refer to the Sabbatical year itself as concerning that the command was given. "Thy field shalt thou not sow," etc.) But other Rabbins say it really refers to the Sabbath and teaches us that just as we are forbidden to plough on the Sabbath for our own use, so are we forbidden to reap on the Sabbath for our own use, making an exception of the reaping of the Omer which is a Divine command and abrogates the Sabbath in that respect.

כּוּ אָמַר

What the Y. M. H. A. Can Do for the Synagogue.

Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 13, 1920.—Editor Hebrew Standard:—Last Friday night was Y. M. H. A. and Y. W. H. A. night at the Junior Congregation services. Rabbi Israeli spoke on "What the Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. Can Do for the Synagogue," and Mr. Arthur Kornstein, president of the Y. M. H. A., spoke on "What the Synagogue Can Do for the Y. M. H. A." Rabbi Israeli said in part: "We are beginning to read this Sabbath the life story of Moses, a story to which it is well worth to devote many an hour. But tonight we want to consider only one incident in the life of Moses.

"When Moses had grown up he went out to his brethren and saw their burdens. Moses gave up not only the luxuries of the palace, but also the opportunity of obtaining more 'culture' education, which was open in Egypt only to the royal family and the military classes, in order to share the burdens of his brethren, improve their conditions, if possible, and help them preserve the precious teachings of Abraham.

"This incident in the life of Moses has its powerful message for all of our people that have drunk deep of modern culture or have partaken of modern social life. For nineteen centuries the Jewish communities throughout the world have been as completely excluded from 'general culture' as were the Jews of Egypt in Moses' days. When emancipation came and the palace of modern culture was thrown open to the Jewish people, many of our brethren kept away from the brethren who were brought up under different environments. This incident in Moses' life should teach them their duty to mingle with their brethren and share their burdens and help them in the task of preserving Judaism.

"The Y. M. and Y. W. H. A. organizations that take full advantage of modern culture and social life are often tempted to keep away from their brethren that are working hard to keep up Jewish life and to say, as Herbert Samuel is reported to have said in his younger days, 'I leave my religion to my older brother.' These organizations, too, must heed the message of the life of Moses. They must mingle freely with their elder brethren, leaving as of. en as possible the palaces of culture, and help their brethren.

"They must take part in Jewish religious work, not only for the sake of Judaism, but for their own sake.

"The Y. M. H. A. did an excellent service in the beginning of its career to Judaism by suggesting the only solution for the problem of bringing the Jewish youth back to Jewish life, namely, self-help by the young people themselves. This principle, however, has now been adopted by other organizations, and in order that the Y. M. H. A. should have a raison d'être, it must take up some special phase of the Jewish work, as the young Zionists take up the national phase and the Junior Congregation the religious services for the youth.

"That phase should be Jewish education and preparation for the synagogue."

Palestine May Relieve the Present Acute News Print Shortage.

Will Palestine be the means of lessening the world's acute news print shortage?

This hope is advanced by the London Zionist Bulletin, which claims that with the establishment of the paper industry in Palestine that country will assume an important place in paper making, because of the large quantities of the necessary materials found there.

"Paper making is an industry which should find a place in the future Palestine," declares the Bulletin. "The raw materials exist in sufficient quantities to warrant expectations of success, especially as these materials are certain to increase considerably with the development of agriculture."

"The raw materials for paper making are rice straw, papyrus, reeds (bourdie, etc.) and bagasse (sugar cane refuse). All these are found in Egypt and, with the exception of bagasse, in Palestine also. Samples of Egyptian rice straw have been tested at the London Imperial Institute and also in America, with results showing that if treated by the soda or lime process they yield pulp of good quality suitable for white and brown paper or strawboard."

"It is certain that the area under rice will be considerably increased in Palestine, while it may also be anticipated that the surplus straw of Egypt and also of Syria will be available for exportation to Palestine."

"Soda and lime for the manufacture of paper exist in great quantity in the Dead Sea and in the very soil of Palestine."

The Annual Meeting of the Members of the HEBREW TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

The Jewish Situation in Poland.
 The London Jewish Correspondence Bureau learns from Warsaw: The severe crisis in both internal and foreign affairs through which the Polish State is now passing is not without its serious consequences for the Jews. The people, incited by the anti-Semitic press, declare that the Jews are responsible for the difficulties arising both at home and abroad. Although it is the landowners, both large and small, who are really answerable for the unfortunate food situation, the Polish papers make no mention of this fact and only the Jews are cursed and persecuted everywhere as speculators and profiteers. The diplomatic defeat of Poland is said to be the result of the influence of Jewish financiers and Jewish advisers behind Lloyd George. In Eastern Galicia the position of the Jews is especially acute and they are harassed on every hand. The vexation of the Jewish officials, the persecution of the Jewish Boy Scouts and the measures of economic pressure which are imposed upon them are a daily feature of their situation.

As an illustration of the conservative tendency of the Polish Jews, it is remarkable that, in spite of the anti-Jewish attitude of the Liberal parties, who are as strongly opposed to the Jewish demands as are the reactionaries, the Jewish masses are supporting the progressive elements. The Jewish National Parliamentary Club, though small, holds none the less a strong position in the Polish Chamber, being often the decisive element in the struggle between Right and Left, which parties in the Polish Parliament are very nearly of the same strength.

The Greeks and the Pogroms in South Russia.

The Parisian paper, La Petite Republique, reports: The sad occurrences in South Russia have found an unexpected echo in the Greek Parliament. According to a telegram, Dr. Kovinas, the Jewish member, has protested in the Greek Chamber against the pogroms under which the Jews in certain Eastern European countries are suffering. He asked the Greek Foreign Minister to act as the interpreter of the feelings of exorcration which the pogroms had aroused among them to the whole of the civilized world. Mr. Politis, the Foreign Secretary, in response to the wish of Dr. Kovinas, promised that his sentiments should be conveyed to the foreign parliaments by means of the Greek Parliamentary Bureau. He added that the government indorsed the feelings of Dr. Kovinas in the matter, and should any occasion present itself to them, the Prime Minister and he (Mr. Politis) himself would not fail to join their efforts to those of the other governments on behalf of the protection of the Jews. He reminded them of the benevolent attitude of the government towards the Jews of Greece, and expressed the sympathy of the members towards the establishment of a Jewish National Home in Palestine.

Peni-El Notes.

Last Tuesday night, January 13, was a memorable date in the annals of the Sisterhood of Temple Peni-El. The occasion was marked by two significant events. One was the presentation to the retiring president of a beautiful silver vase appropriately engraved. Mrs. Louise H. Brotman has served the Sisterhood for a number of years in various capacities and for the last two years as its president. She has always shown untiring zeal and loyalty in the conduct of her office and has particularly distinguished herself during the various war activities, which have placed the Sisterhood and congregation high in the list of communal achievement. She is now relinquishing her charge owing to the advice of her physician, and in recognition of her splendid efforts the Sisterhood has tendered her this token of appreciation. The presentation speech was made by Rabbi Joel Blau, minister of the congregation, to which Mrs. Brotman feelingly responded.

The second event was the installation of the new officers by Rabbi Blau. The incoming officers are: Mrs. R. Martin, president; Mesdames Josephy and Wasserman, vice presidents; Mrs. Joel Blau, treasurer; Mrs. E. Friedman, secretary; Mesdames Rodman and Kling, conductresses. The installation is declared to have been the most impressive in the history of the Sisterhood.

The evening was marked by many pleasing features. A very large assemblage of men and women filled the Social House to capacity, enjoying the varied program of speeches, music and recitations. Among those who entertained were Miss Helen Brotman, who played piano selections, and Miss Lillian Friedman, who charmed the audience with clever recitations. Refreshments were served and the evening was voted to have been most enjoyable.

Death of Mrs. A. S. Bettelheim.

Mrs. Lavinia Bettelheim, widow of the Rev. Dr. A. S. Bettelheim, died at the home of her daughters in New York City on Saturday, January 10, in the 75th year of her age.

She was a woman of rare charm of personality, born and reared in the South, and it was in Richmond, Va., where she spent her early girlhood and where she was an ardent communal worker as wife of Rabbi Bettelheim, that she was laid to rest. Keen and intelligent, well versed in Jewish affairs and progressive in her ideas, she was an ideal helpmate to her husband and an efficient agent in promoting the moral and spiritual welfare of the various communities wherein Dr. Bettelheim served as minister. His tragic death and burial at sea in August, 1890, caused a great sensation not only in Jewish but in Christian circles. It will be recalled that he was on an intimate footing with Cardinal Gibbons and that two Catholic priests recited the Kaddish over his ocean grave.

Mrs. Bettelheim left a host of devoted friends, who loved her for her sterling character, her modesty, her exquisite poise and her unflinching sweetness and gentleness of manner. She was a Southern lady in the noblest sense of the term.

She is survived by a son, Mr. Paul Bettelheim of Visalia, Cal., and by five daughters, Mrs. A. A. Adler of San Francisco, Mrs. C. S. Rothenheim, Mrs. Jacob Thalheimer, Miss Cyd Bettelheim and Mrs. Rebekah Kohut, all residing in New York City, the last named being the widow of the noted scholar and preacher, Dr. Alexander Kohut.

Noted English Artist Visiting America.

Mr. Alfred Wolmark, the well known English artist, who was a regular exhibitor at the Royal Academy for many years, is a recent arrival in New York. Fifteen years ago Mr. Wolmark broke away from the established conventions of painting and immediately became one of the foremost colorists in England. He is at present in New York to arrange for exhibiting a number of his important paintings, and at the same time he will paint his impressions of New York.

Y. M. H. A. to Hold Annual Meeting.

The annual report will be read by its president, Justice Irving Lehman, and the speaker will be Dr. Nathan Krass. An excellent musical program has been arranged under the supervision of Mr. A. W. Binder. The public is invited.

Mincha Services at C. J. I.

A mincha service is held every Sabbath afternoon at the Central Jewish Institute, No. 125 East 85th street, participated in by young men and women of the neighborhood and to which all interested are invited. The Horowitz Family and Their Traditions.

The recording of a successful institution is always a pleasure to the scribe and it always makes pleasant reading, especially if it recites the success of an enterprise which is more or less concerned with the general Jewish community, as is the firm of Horowitz Bros. & Margaretten, the well-known manufacturers of Matzoth, who this year will commemorate 35 years of successful growth.

The history of the firm of Horowitz Bros. & Margaretten does not begin with their American success in the last 35 years, but is steeped with the traditions of centuries and can be authentically traced back to the 18th century, when there was a famous Gaon, in the person of Rabbi Zwi Hirsch Horowitz, the rabbi of Chortkov, located in Galician Poland. Rabbi Horowitz was the father of two sons who attained great prominence in Jewish circles in that era. They were respectively Rabbi Pinchas Levi Horowitz, who became rabbi at Frankfort-am-Main and was a pupil and disciple of the great Rabbi Baer of Mezeritz, famous as the founder of the Chassidim, and Rabbi Schmelke Horowitz, one of the greatest gaonim of his time and, later, rabbi at Nickolsburg.

Rabbi Schmelke Horowitz had a son Jacob, who left Galicia and settled in Hungary. He in turn had a grandson, also Rabbi Jacob Horowitz, who was a noted Lamdan. This Rabbi Jacob Horowitz came to America in 1883 and, his fame having preceded him, he was deluged with many rabbinical offers, all of which he consistently refused, but instead he opened a Matzoh bakery. The business of the first season consumed just 50 barrels of flour. Since then it has grown and now, known as Horowitz Bros. & Margaretten, has developed into one of the largest in the world, uses thousands of tons of flour annually and is always oversold.

Rabbi Jacob Horowitz when he came to America was accompanied by his helpmate, Mirel Chaya Horowitz, who was one of the most pious women in New York. Upon the death of her husband she assumed active charge of the business and remained there until her death last year at the ripe old age of 89—89 years spent in activity, piety and doing good—and when she died she left over 100 direct descendants, all of whom are carrying out the Biblical injunction, "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." With Mrs. Horowitz's death the business went over to her four sons, Asher, Levi, Moses Aaron and Samuel Isaac, and her daughter, Mrs. Rebecca Anna Margaretten, and the latter's husband, Chaim Isaac Margaretten, who is also a direct descendant of a famous Jewish family. "The apple falls not far from the stem" is shown in the case of the family having all, without a single defalcation, remained strict adherents to the tenets and teachings of traditional Judaism.

The Horowitz family have always paid the strictest attention to the minutest detail affecting Kashruth, but have never neglected quality. The bakery is under the direct personal supervision of those respected rabbis, Philip Klein and M. S. Margolies.

In the past 35 years the physical growth of the Horowitz Bros. & Margaretten bakery has been marked and new additions have been constantly made until now the business occupies the entire premises at Nos. 369-373 East Fourth street, this city. New and up-to-date machinery, assuring absolute cleanliness and evenness of production, has been constantly installed, most of it being the invention of Asher Horowitz, who has developed into a mechanical genius.

The name of the Horowitz family is indissolubly linked with that of almost every local charity and Asher Horowitz was twice president of the Ohel Torah Talmud Torah. For the past sixteen years, or since it was established, his sister, Mrs. Margaretten, has been president of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

J. D. C. Gives Aid in Czecho-Slovakia.
More than one million kronen have been spent by the Joint Distribution Committee for the relief of the Jews in Czecho-Slovakia since the establishment of relief headquarters in Prague in March, 1919. The Joint Distribution Committee in this country has provided proper food and clothing for children and has cared for students, who because of the war have been cut off from their homes. Several hundred children were sent to the country to recover their health. The monthly expenditures for the care of children is 85,000 kronen.

The Joint Distribution Committee is also supporting hundreds of persons who because of economic conditions are at present without employment, and is subsidizing hospitals, orphanages and other institutions, whose income from the government has been cut off, so that these institutions may not be forced to close their doors. The sick and aged are provided with food, clothing and shelter through the Joint Distribution Committee.

For the maintenance of a colony of Jewish refugees, the Joint Distribution Committee spends nearly 250,000 kronen each month. These refugees come from Galicia, Bukowina and Palestine, and because they are unable to return to their homes and cannot care for themselves they have become public charges. On December 24, the Joint Distribution Committee cabled an appropriation of $35,000 for the support of the Czecho-Slovakia work, including relief work for refugees at Nickolsburg barracks.
