JEWISH FOLK STORIES

By OSCAR LEONARD

Grandfather in the United States either does not speak English or he does not know anything about Jewish folk stories. A great many of these folk stories are in Hebrew. The grandfather who knows his Hebrew, as a rule, is deficient in English. The result is that the Jewish child in America is robbed of the fine treasures that would be his.

From time immemorial it has been the function of grandfathers and grandmothers to pass on the folk lore of their particular group to the young generation. Judging from the neglect of this phase of cultural life among us, one would think that we have nothing in our treasure box. Occasionally someone weaves a story around a Talmudic legend. But that is far from opening the treasure house to young Israel.

That the material is ample and could be used to good advantage is certain. One has but to remember the stories which he heard in his childhood, if he is born and reared abroad, to appreciate the wealth of material. There are sources which are almost inexhaustible. At least one is led to believe that seeing the material that is being brought to light in Yiddish, for instance, by Mr. Joseph Margoshes, whose work in the Yiddish daily paper "Der Tog" (The Day) of New York, should attract interest. Week after week he gives these stories to the delight of the readers of Yiddish. It is hoped that somehow these wonderful folk tales trickle down to the kiddies which I know would enjoy them beyond words.

At present Mr. Margoshes is telling stories dealing with the life and exploits of the "A-R-I Hakodesh," one of the Jewish mystics whose school exerted a great deal of influence in Jewish life. I want to re-tell in English one of the stories, taken at random from the series. I have told some of these stories to my own little girls and I know they enjoy them as much as they enjoy fairy tales. They mean more to them because they deal with Jewish life and Jewish ideals. It is that which should make them particularly interesting to Jewish children. It is that which gives them special value from our point of view.

Do not tell me these stories are filled with superstitions simply because supernatural things happen. In all fairy stories the supernatural happens. The child mind craves for the unusual. The child's imagination travels untrammelled into the realm of the supernatural. It is this quality that makes child life interesting and bearable. It is because the child lives in a world of his own that he can really tolerate the world of the imagination and to revel in the supernatural, then read this story and try to tell it to some Jewish children and watch how they will react to it. Now then let's be quiet and listen.

"One day Reb Itzhock Hakodesh called his beloved disciple Reb Jacob Abalfia and asked him to prepare for a journey to Egypt. Reb Jacob was delighted, for he had which you will show to the heads of the communities and the wealthy Jews. They are to gather funds for needy scholars and students of the Torah now residing in the Holy Land. That is the purpose of your journey which I am glad to impart to you. The second purpose will be revealed to you, if you are worthy of it."

"The same day Reb Jacob was called of the leaders of the community and other well-to-do Jews, and large sums were gathered to aid the needy Jewish scholars in the Holy Land.

"Reb Jacob could have remained for many months. He knew that more funds could be gathered had he stayed on, but he was curious as to the second purpose of his journey. He had been promised by his venerable rabbi this would be revealed to him on his return trip. As soon he could gather the funds and make ready for his journey to Zwas, Reb Jacob started back.

"Things went well. There were no mishaps nor unusual occurrences. Reb Jacob thought all along about the promise his beloved teacher had made to him. The journey was almost at an end. In three days he would be back in the Land of Israel and still the revelation had not come. Plans were made for the caravan to spend the night under the open skies so that the journey might continue in the morning.

"At midnight the leader of the caravan thought it would be best to journey part of the night rather than in the heat of the day. He felt it would be best for all to rest during the hot part of the day, and he proceeded to wake the members of the party. In half an hour the caravan was on its way.

"Being tired, Reb Jacob fell asleep again before the departure of the caravan. His donkey followed the other animals, so that the man remained all alone.

"When he awoke an hour after the departure of the caravan, Reb Jacob was frightened, finding himself all alone in the desert. He rose and began to follow the caravan, hoping to overtake them in a short while.

"After walking a short distance he saw, by the shimmer of the moon, a man plowing a field. He rejoiced, hoping the man would be able to tell him something of the caravan. On approaching he saw the man beating the oxen mercilessly with a thick stick. Before he had time to say something to the man, Reb Jacob noticed one of the oxen being transformed into a man, while the man changed into an ox.

"To Reb Jacob's surprise, the man who had just taken on human form began to belabor the animal who had drab world of the grown-ups.

Of course if you are of those who would rob the child the pleasure and joy of living in the fairy world for a few brief years I shall not argue with you. I know you are wrong and this time it is the minority that is in the wrong. But if you are a person ready to concede to the child the right to live in the never been in that land. He was rather curious to know the purpose his teacher had in sending him to Egypt.

"The purpose of your journey will be twofold," he was told by the great teacher. "One of these purposes I shall tell you. The second one will be revealed to you on your way home. I shall give you a letter happy to find a caravan traveling to Egypt. In those days no one dared travel alone for fear of robbers.

"Reb Jacob arrived in Egypt without any mishap in a couple of weeks. When the head of the community heard who he was and the purpose of his visit, he received him with great cordiality and showered many honors upon him. A meeting was changed places with him. As soon as Reb Jacob recovered from his astonishment at what he had seen, he decided he would not leave the place until he learned the reason for these unusual occurrences.

ANTI-ZIONIST DEMONSTRATION IN JERUSALEM.

Lord Milnor's recent visit to Jerusalem was the occasion for an Anti-Zionist demonstration in the streets of the Holy City. Many thousand Arabs, Moslems and Christians paraded the streets and presented petitions to the American, French and Spanish Consuls and the British Military Governor, protesting against the handing over of Palestine to the Jews. The photo shows the crowd proceeding up the Jaffe Road towards the American Consulate. In the background may be seen the old city walls and the Citadel of Zion.

"For one hour Reb Jacob saw the phenomenon of the oxen taking on human form and the man being transformed into an ox. Each time the one who assumed human form belabored the ox mercilessly.

"Suddenly he noticed, instead of two oxen and a man, three men standing before him. They noticed him and approached him, extending their hands.

"Sholom Aleichem," they bid him.

"He made suitable answer, and then they asked him whether he was from Zwas. When he replied affirmatively, they implored him to intercede with his venerable teacher to save their souls, so that they may not have to be transformed into oxen again. They had committed many transgressions on earth and were now expiating their sins by the sufferings which were theirs in being transformed to oxen and being beaten mercilessly. They implored him so insistently that he had to promise.

"Now he understood to what his teacher had alluded when he told him of the second purpose of his journey which would be revealed to him on his way home.

"In a short time Reb Jacob overtook the caravan. He spoke to no one of his unusual experience of the night. In three days he arrived safely home.

"The first visit, of course, was to his venerable teacher, whom he wanted to relate all he had seen. But the teacher said to him:

"I know what you have seen. I have sent you purposely so that you may have the good fortune of saving the souls of these poor men. They are now at rest. Their transgressions on earth are now wiped away and eternal peace will be theirs."

Louis Marshall Pleads for Jewish Education.

Newark, N. J.—At a largely attended dinner terminating the three days' celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the Oheb Shalom Congregation of Newark, N. J., a powerful appeal was made by Mr. Louis Marshall for the support of the synagogue, and especially of Jewish education, in America. Mr. Marshall presented a comprehensive plan for a national program of Jewish education, in support of which all elements of Jewry might unite. His forceful plea made a deep impression upon his hearers, and other speakers, including ex-Governor William N. Runyon of New Jersey and Rabbi Charles I. Hoffman, agreed that the working out of such a plan was the only hope for the maintenance of Jewish life in America. Mr. Marshall said, among other things:

"The synagogue in its earliest days—and it existed alongside of the Temple in Jerusalem—was the center of Jewish activities. It was the house of assembly, the house of prayer, the house of study. Generation after generation in Israel's darkest days gathered in the synagogue for comfort and solace. When persecution sought to destroy, the people took refuge in the synagogue." The speaker referred to many synagogues established in this country between the years 1845 and 1865. "They were established by those who came from foreign shores. They were poor and friendless, but had stout hearts, and no sooner had they established a home for their families than they built a home for their faith. The synagogue means more to us than similar institutions to those of other faiths. It demands our loyalty. No Jew faithful to his religion has sought but the deepest love and devotion to the synagogue.

"In our days of material prosperity some of us forget what the true function of the synagogue is, what it was in the darker days when there were not so many distractions. Today there is a feeling that religion can be minimized and confined to two days in the year. In the days of material prosperity there is danger that we overlook that spiritual content without which life is meaningless. Have we remained as loyal to our faith as our fathers would have had us? Are we better prepared to make the sacrifices they made for their faith? Are we doing in the same proportion to our strength what they did? Are we not disclosing a tendency to depart from the rock of existence, the rock on which our lives and character are built? Do we read our sacred books, and study the principles of our faith? Is every act the occasion for prayer, even though unexpressed? The value of this devotion is not confined to religious life; it makes for good citizenship, true manhood and strong character. Is it our purpose to trample under foot the heritage of forty centuries? Israel has been sustained by its faith when other nations have fallen. We must be prepared to overcome our prosperity. Although called the people of the Book, we know it less than other people. The Jews are held as surety for each other, and although this is unjust, yet I do not regret it. We are responsible.

"Now that the war is almost over and we shall have helped the need of foreign lands, furnishing $50,000,000 within the past five years, now we must do something for ourselves here in America. We must not permit materialism to engulf us. We must provide a comprehensive plan of Jewish education. No trivial program, but a far-reaching plan embracing every shade of Judaism throughout the country. Those engaged in preserving our great heritage must co-operate. We must establish synagogues where there are none and provide a thorough education in our religious schools. To this end we must have more institutes for the training of teachers and preachers, for which there is great need. We must look after our adolescents, establish the Y. M. H. A.'s and also the Y. W. H. A.'s. All must be included, nothing that tends to the promotion of Jewish education can be foreign to us. Such a program requires much labor and large funds—not less than $5,000,000 annually. Nothing can be of more value than this to the Jews of this country, and to America. If we are, in the Jewish way, on a day of rejoicing to make a vow, let it be to aid in this great work."

Senator William N. Runyon, ex-Governor of New Jersey, expressed his strong appreciation of Mr. Marshall's address. He spoke of the noble lineage of the Jew and how he had endured persecution sustained by his faith. "A great treasure is yours," he continued, "a casket full of jewels. Will you prize it, will you add to it, or will you turn away from and neglect it? The spirit of the founders of the congregation looks down upon you to know if you will maintain what they sacrificed so much to establish. Is the contribution of the Jew to humanity ended, or will you yet enrich mankind by adding new jewels to the treasure chest of the past? The clarion challenge rings out to you to keep the faith, the faith of your fathers. No call is more sacred. The disturbed condition of the world today testifies that while all other plans have been tried in vain, religion has not been resorted to. The word will not be at peace until God comes into His own."

Rabbi Charles I. Hoffman praised the harmony and religious accord that had prevailed throughout the three days' celebration and thanked the participants. The men that have gone before joined forces in founding this great congregation and are remembered today because of their solidarity and identity with the working forces of Israel. So it will be of the men and women of today. We have come to the crossroads. The question must be decided in the synagogue between observance of a divinely ordered life and the talk of the hustings, and the disregard of Israel's heritage. We stand for the constant forces that have preserved and ennobled Israel. Let us rally around our great and true leaders and register a vow to support them in the great work to which they have dedicated themselves.

Orthodox Rabbis in Convention.

Lakewood, N. J.—The Union of Orthodox Rabbis of the United States and Canada held its eighteenth annual convention here last week. A three-day session was opened at the Carmel House on April 20, when Rabbi M. S. Margolis read his annual address. He called particular attention to the clouding of the only great hope, the rehabilitation of Palestine, the Jewish homeland, by the mob violence of the misguided Arabs. It was resolved to send a cablegram to the premiers in conference at San Remo, in which the request will be reiterated that civilized nations should help to realize the content of the Balfour declaration. Telegrams conveying the deep gratitude of Jewry were sent to President Wilson and Congress and the English Parliament for the deep interest the two governments have taken in securing minority rights for the Jews of Eastern Europe. The convention re-elected the following officers: President, Rabbi Moses Z. Margolis of New York; treasurer Rabbi A. Silver, Harrisburg, Pa.; secretary, Rabbi C. Preil of New York. Dr. Philip Klein of New York was re-elected chairman of the executive committee of twenty-five.

The convention raised $10,000 for the rebuilding of the Talmudical College at Jerusalem. It also went on record as favoring the raising of $300,000 for the building of Jewish public schools and college in Palestine. It was voted to aid in the $400,000 building fund for the Hebrew Emigrant Aid Society.

Chief Rabbi May Make Tour of British Overseas Dominions to Popularize Jewish War Memorial—Jewish Palestine Editor Speaks Hopelessly and Cheerily—Nailing Another Anti-Jewish Lie Down—Board of Guardians Reports on Jewish Working Class Prosperity—Young Jewish Soldier and the Polish Horrors.

London, March 26, 1920.
The British Chief Rabbi is to be invited to make a tour of the Overseas British Dominions, and a number of the communal institutions are engaged in discussing the matter of funds. One important feature of the suggested tour would be the bringing of the British War Memorial before the Jews of the outlying parts of the empire.

According to Waley Cohen, the Chief Rabbi has never tired of saying that he felt the disadvantage of having been called from abroad to minister to the United Hebrew Congregations of the British Empire. He believed that it would be an enormous advantage to Jewish life throughout the empire if it could produce its own Chief Rabbi. He would undoubtedly in the course of his pastoral tour bring before those he met, in a way no one else could do, the objects the Council hoped to achieve.

At the last meeting of the council in charge of the Jewish War Memorial the members declared their readiness to consider favorably the establishment from the funds of the Memorial of a scholarship for Hebrew studies at the proposed Hebrew University at Jerusalem. I understand that the plans for that university are getting on well. In connection with the above resolution, however, it must be fully understood that any arrangement was subject to a proviso that it would not be in order unless Palestine came under a British mandate, because the Jewish War Memorial was intended for the British Empire.

Ittamar Ben-Avi, editor of the Palestine Daily Mail, addressed an important meeting in London this week, under the auspices of the Zionist Organizations of the United Kingdom, at which an appeal was made to the Jews to subscribe $500,000 for social and educational resettlement and repatriation work in Palestine.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Patterson, who commanded the Jewish Battalion, presided and said it was time the British Government carried out in letter and spirit the famous declaration, which was both shadowy and vague. He warned the nation that if things were allowed to drift they might one day find themselves on the rocks, and that it was up to Zionists to make a push before it was too late.

Ben-Avi, who appears to be a super-optimist and is certainly a most cheering man to speak to, said that within the next few days he was going back to Palestine, and he predicted that the Hebrew nation was again going to take its place among nations of the world. Jews, who must not be ashamed of being Jews, were going to reconquer Palestine, and they were going there, not for any other nation, but for themselves. Before the war Palestine was one of the most desolate lands of the Turkish Empire, but they were going to repopulate the country and to speak their own language—the Hebrew. There were millions who were craving for a new life, and they would get it in Palestine. They owed a great debt to the British Empire for restoring to them their national home. No nation other than the British could understand what Palestine meant to the Jews, and if the British were to leave for one day Egypt would be ruined again. They had already begun to build up the Jewish nation. They were going to spend $500,000 every year on educational instruction and they wanted to erect buildings, to make railways and roads, to drain, till and plant the soil, and otherwise to provide for the comfort of the people. They asked the Jews of London to help in this work, and woe to their name and to their history if they did not make the Holy Land beautiful and prosperous again.

Sir Stuart Samuel and Claude Montefiore, as presidents of the Joint Committee of the Deputies of British Jews and the Anglo-Jewish Association, wrote to the London Times on March 25 to state that "General Knox having reported that Jews were concerned in the murder of the Tsar," they requested the publication of the following letter which had been sent to them by Reuben Blank, "delegate of the Jewish People's Union," under date of March 22, 1920, and which Sir Stuart and Mr. Montefiore say had been submitted to Mr. Starinkevich, who authorizes its publication: "In view of the telegrams of General Knox to the War Office on February 5, 1919, published in 'A Collection of Reports on Bolshevism in Russia' (Parliamentary Paper Russia, No. 1. Abridged Edition, p. 48, No. 38), in which General Knox states that several Jews were concerned in the murder of the Tsar and his family, I think I ought to inform you that in an interview which I had on February 26 last with the Minister of Justice in the Government of Omsk (under the late Admiral Koltchak) in Paris, where he is now staying, the Minister, M. Starinkevich, declared to me that the official report of the inquiry into the murder, instituted by the Government of Omsk, established the fact that while the number of persons directly or indirectly concerned in the case of the assassination of the imperial family was rather considerable, there was not among them a single person of Jewish descent. Moreover, the Minister in a statement given to me, written down with his own hand and herewith literally translated, declared that: 'On the strength of the data of the preliminary inquiry, the course of which was reported to me every week by the Attorney General, I can certify that, among the number of persons proved by the data of the preliminary inquiry to have been guilty of the assassination of the late Emperor Nicholas II and of his family, there was not any person of Jewish descent.' If, as you state, various organs of the press have attributed the assassination of the late Emperor to the Jews, I may say positively that these organs could not have derived their information from a trustworthy source—that is to say, from the data of the preliminary inquiry."

A lecture under the auspices of the Jewish Historical Society was delivered on March 21 in the Mocatta Library by Cecil Roth on "Sir Edward Brampton," H. S. Q. Henriques presided. Roth, in the course of his lecture, traced the remarkable career of Sir Edward Brampton, whom he identifies with one Edward Brandon of Portugal, a converted Jew, godson of Edward IV, who was known to be an inmate of the "Domus Conversorum" in the year 1468. Sir Edward had an illustrious career as courtier, merchant and even (in 1482) as Governor of Guernsey. Sir Edward climbed to fame in the troubled days of the Wars of the Roses, and after the death of Richard III and the accession of Henry VII he disappeared from England, to return once more, in 1488, to take sanctuary in the "Domus Conversorum," the safest place of concealment at that time. After a short stay, however, he returned to Portugal and in 1489 an embassy of Henry VII visiting Lisbon found there the English knight, Sir Edward Brampton. Shortly afterwards a pardon was issued and Sir Edward returned to England, where there is little subsequent reference to his career.

The Board of Guardians has just issued its sixty-first report, and it is happily able to point out that, according to the information coming within its purview, the Jewish working classes in this country have been prosperous beyond all previous precedent. The year 1919—the first of peace—has everywhere been one of unrest, and over a large part of the world there has probably been more suffering and distress than in the time of war itself. For our own Jewish people it will go down into history coupled with the years 70, 1096 and 1492 as one of the black periods when large numbers have been massacred, starved and persecuted. Even in this happy land there have been occasional signs in the press and elsewhere that the evil of anti-Semitism is still in existence. Notwithstanding these ominous symptoms, our Jewish working classes in England, in common with their neighbors, have been prosperous beyond precedent. Wages in many industries have risen out of all proportion to the increase of prices, work has been abundant, the small shopkeeper and trader have made money, and the standard of living has in many ways been raised. There has, however, been one important exception to this general state of well-being, and that a most important one both as regards the present comfort and morality and the future health of the community. Although rent has remained stationary, owing to a special piece of war legislation, and evictions have to a great extent been prohibited, no act of Parliament has been able to prevent the evils of overcrowding when new dwellings ceased to be erected, and it is certain that the Jewish quarter of Whitechapel is suffering severely today from want of sufficient housing accommodation.

A young Jewish soldier, Percy Kern, late of the Durham Light Infantry, whose home town is near the famous city of Teschen, is just back here from Poland, and he tells some awful stories of the Polish pogrom mongers and their followers. Young Kern joined the British army when he was seventeen years of age. On his return to Poland after the war he found things going on, he said, which were beyond belief in the twentieth century and in any land which laid claim to have civilization. He found his father had been robbed and beaten, his girl cousin had been shot dead by a Polish soldier because she was carrying a sack of meal, and practically all his other relations and friends had been assaulted and beaten. The Austrian Government in the old days had its faults, he said, but it kept the rudiments of law and order. Now there is none at all. Here is an extract from his own words: "Relief commissions are organizing help for a Poland which, under a new constitution, has guaranteed equal rights to all, and fair treatment for its large and all important Jewish population. Do you think that in a country where the soldiery and gendarmes are allowed to pull the beards of old men out by the roots for no better reason than that it so pleases them, do you think that in such a country relief sent from Great Britain is administered evenly and fairly?"

Vienna, April 20.—Among the various institutions supported by the Joint Distribution Committee for the benefit of the Jewish refugees from Bukawina and Galicia the Jewish Children's Home holds the place of honor. It is the shelter of 300 Jewish children whose parents either died in the war or were separated from their children in the general exodus and perhaps dragged into the Siberian wastes by the Russians.

The Children's Home is under the supervision of the well-known social worker, Erna Fatak, who spends much of her time and energy in its administration. It is to her credit if the institution has become a model for all others and excites the admiration of all visitors.

Five large, airy, light and sunny barracks of the former-war hospital rebuilt for the purpose, situated in that part of the city known as Baumgarten, serve as quarters for these children. In one barrack live about fifty children, little boys and girls between the ages of two and seven, under the supervision of two kindergarten teachers. In another are found about 120 boys over seven years of age. The third is for 130 girls of the same years. Then comes a large structure holding the school, and associated workshops for basket weaving, table manufacture, and brush making. The last barrack serves as a dining hall and administration building. The whole institution with its spacious playgrounds and small gardens worked by the children gives the impression of a small city, where the children live in a world of their own—a children's world.

The children have extra rooms where they may spend their time when they are not at work, in school or at play, and special rooms to sleep in where each tot has its little bed. Every division has also its wash room, bath and sick room for those suffering from passing ailments. Serious cases of sickness or disease are, of course, removed to the hospital. In a special sewing room for the purpose the larger girls mend the clothing and underwear of the children.

Thanks to the Food Administration, it is possible with the aid of the American Vienna Public Relief and of the Joint Distribution Committee to feed the children. The day begins at seven in the morning and at eight breakfast is served. The second meal comes at ten and dinner at twelve. About four o'clock in the afternoon the children are given lunch and about seven supper is served. At nine in the evening the little city is already asleep. The smallest children are put to bed between two and four in the afternoon. From the Food Administration the Children's Home receives an extra half bread for each child above the prescribed quantity. It also supplies the institution with flour and sugar. From the Joint Distribution Committee the children get extra meat, fat, smoked salmon, cakes, milk and other small things. As a result it is possible to have three meat, two smoked salmon, two vegetable and two farinaceous meals per week. The children, consequently, look healthy and are playful, lively and cheerful. The kitchen is conducted by Frau Rosa Kliner.

The training and education of the children is under the supervision of the well-known pedagogue Dr. Ziegfried Berenfeld, who has instituted a thoroughly democratic system. All the children constitute one unified autonomous school court. The child is not compelled to study. There are no regulations which say that the little ones must learn just at this or that time and whatever the teacher wishes. On the contrary, the pupil learns just those subjects which interest him. And if a subject does not please him he may leave and go out to play. Neither may the teacher set himself up as a sole judge over the pupil to reproach him for misconduct. All that belongs to the pupils and to the pupils' court, which even takes the liberty to judge the teacher, the superintendent or any official of the institution. Whether this system and method will prove successful is a question of the future. As yet the period of experimentation is too short to point to any definite results. We may be inclined to think that before attempting such an experiment it would be well to gain the consent of the children's parents. We must have faith in Dr. Berenfeld, who is an exceptional educator, thoroughly responsible for all his undertakings, and believe that he is doing the very best for the children whose education is entrusted to him.

Besides the two kindergarten teachers who devote themselves to the little children, the institution also employs two Hebrew teachers, eleven teachers for general subjects and one instructor for deaf and dumb children.

The administration of the Children's Home is in the hands of Herr Riem, a former preparatory school professor in Bukawina, and his wife. It is unnecessary to say that the kitchen is strictly kosher. On Sabbaths and holidays the children get special dishes in honor of the occasion. Religious services are held for the children with much ceremony, which arouse the enthusiasm of the youngsters.

If 300 destitute, helpless Jewish children are not permitted to die but are given a chance for a healthy development and preparation for life, we should be thankful for that fact to our brethren on the other side of the sea who afford us the means with which to support such splendid institutions as the Jewish Children's Home.

The Coward Shoe

Weakened Arches

Many cases of arch weakness would never develop if the body weight were properly met by the feet.

The Coward Arch Supporting Shoe is made to equalize the strain of walking and standing so that each bone and muscle in the foot does its share of work. Then no part is overworked.

The Coward Shoe if worn in time brings back painful misplaced foot bones to normal.

The Governor General of Eastern Macedonia has ordered the Jewish inhabitants of Drama to close their shops and offices on Sunday, although they already do so on Saturday. They have addressed an appeal to the City Council of Salonika, which in turn has brought it to the notice of the Central Government. The council demands that instructions shall be given to the Governor General to annul his order. Outside Drama the Jews are compelled to cease work on Sundays. In Castoria this order has long been in force.

Henry Mosler, artist, most popularly known for his paintings of American historical subjects, died last week at his home in this city. Mr. Mosler was born in this city in 1841. He won many medals, among them the gold medal in the Salon of 1883 and the silver medal in the Paris exhibition of 1889. The French Government decorated him with the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor, the grand gold medal, and diploma of honor at the Atlanta Exposition of 1895; the Thomas B. Clark prize, National Academy of Design, 1896, and gold medals awarded at exhibitions in Philadelphia (1897). He was the first American painter to win the distinction of having a sample of his work purchased by the French Government for the Luxembourg galleries, and for fifty years he was recognized in Europe and America as one of the great genre painters of the world. His painting, "Washington Crossing the Delaware," has been more favorably received by many critics than the familiar Leutze jaiting of the same subject in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. His painting of Betsy Ross and her companions at the making of the first American flag, and that entitled "Ring, Ring for Liberty," depicting the old bellringer in Independence Hall, are perhaps the most familiar.

Anti-Semitism in Turkey. Turkey could be described, without fear of contradiction, as one of the few countries where anti-Semitism has not taken root, writes the Constantinople correspondent of the London Jewish Chronicle. Jews had never been publicly insulted by Mussulman or Christian for their religion. But since the arrival of Russian refugees, the situation has changed. Forgetting that they are now in a strange country—whose generosity accorded them an asylum—they imagine they are still in Russia, and grossly insult our coreligionists. The particular offenders are the ex-officers, in their tarnished gold lace uniforms, and the members of the theatrical and less respectable professions, who are notorious Judaphobes. So marked has their conduct been that the press has taken note of it, and vehemently protested against this abuse of hospitality. Mussulmans and Christians have been the first to combat this poison, which is such a disgrace to civilization, and which the Russians wish to introduce into the Orient. The Entent authorities have received numerous complaints against the behavior of the Russians.

Zionist Community Decides Rights of a Rabbi. Florence, Italy (By I. J. P. B.).—The representatives of the local Jewish community, all of whom are Zionists, have decreed that special rights be granted to the rabbi. All the measures of the community must be undersigned by the city rabbi before taking effect. The rabbi has the privilege of vetoing all bills which do not meet with his approval. If a Beth Din should be founded in Jerusalem the community has the right to appeal to this judicial body from the judgment of the rabbi.

In Memoriam—Herman Levy.

New York has many monuments testifying to the public spirit, educational endeavor, benevolent ideals, religious devotion and loyalty of its citizens of all creeds and races.

They have been founded or erected by the generosity (pecuniary) of one individual, or are the concerted effort of a group of individuals, for diverse reasons and through differing emotions.

But there is one monument that stands unique and alone, the Jewish Temple on West 88th street.

The beautiful Temple B'nai Jeshurun, from foundation stone to capstone, is the work of one most modest man, Herman Levy. Herman Levy labored arduously and well on many benevolent institutions and undertakings, but this is his outstanding achievement, and at the same time his monument. He needs no other.

It was he who urged the need of removal from Madison avenue. It was he who foresaw the opportunity for wider usefulness on the upper extreme West Side and secured the present site. He procured by his individual effort the money and the loan necessary for construction; spent anxious hours of thought in the selection of the unusually significant and handsome design; he superintended the plans and details; he watched the laying of every stone, and all but handled the trowel and mortar himself—decorations, furnishings, over all he labored.

A world war, strikes, scarcity of labor, increased costs, nothing did he allow to stand in the way of dedicating the building on schedule time. He secured a larger congregational membership, awoke sympathy and fervor in a new and untried neighborhood, increased attendance at the religious school. And during all this time he functioned as president of the congregation, with all the responsibilities the office demands.

Giant strength of will and call upon physical endurance were required, he accomplished the task he set himself, accomplished it by faith; faith in himself, faith in God and by inspiring others with faith. He gave freely of his own means; he induced others to be generous. He worked, worked incessantly night and day, summer and winter.

And he paid the final price. It cost him his strength, his health and finally his life, for he was only sixty-three. It was most truly a sacrifice on the altar of his religion, that Judaism he so dearly loved and lived. The sacrifice is deplored by all, but its nobility appreciated by all, and so deeply mourned by his beloved and loving wife and devoted kinsmen. Now the beautiful temple stands and will stand for generations, a house of worship and prayer, dedicating to Israel's God—a great and lasting monument to a noble American-Jew, Herman Levy.

He needs no other—he could have none worthier. ANNETTE KOHN.

PALESTINE FROM DAY TO DAY

Haifa's Jewish schools were highly praised by Lieutenant Legge of the Educational Department of the British Administration on a recent inspection trip. He was particularly impressed with the Technical school.

Plans to attract Jews from East and North Africa to Palestine, are being put into operation by the General Organization of Sephardic Jews, Jerusalem. The organization, affiliated with the Zionist Organization and recognized by the British authorities, has also instituted a program for the elementary education of all Sephardic children. Hebrew must be the language of every member of the organization, in home and public life, according to its basic principle.

The Board of Education of Palestine (Vaad Hachinuch), will soon have real, instead of advisory powers. Its new members, representatives of the teachers' association, the provisional governmental committee and the Zionist Commission, contain the best educational forces in Palestine.

A fishing company has been organized at Atlit by demobilized soldiers of the Thirty-ninth Royal Fusiliers of the Jewish Legion.

A clerks' union is being organized in Jerusalem.

Each district court in Palestine will have one British and two Palestinian judges, according to plans of the British Administration, in order to acquaint the natives with British procedure.

Jerusalem's chief hotel is now known as the Hotel Allenby. It has both kosher and non-kosher kitchens.

Jerusalem's latest plan for more civic beauty is a Community Hall.

Translation of Palestine's statutes into Hebrew, for the proposed Law College of the Hebrew University and for governmental record, will be undertaken soon by the Legal Department of the Zionist Commission, assisted by well-known Palestinian lawyers.

Rat typhus serum is being used by the Zionist Commission in its war on the rat plague, which is destroying many crops in Palestine.

Survey Shows 8 Per Cent. of Land Under Cultivation.

Over one million Jews could be maintained by agriculture on available land not now cultivated and an additional million by industries, according to a land survey of Palestine just made and published in "Palestine," the official publication of the British Palestine Committee.

The survey shows that but 8 per cent. of the land in Palestine is now cultivated and that there are now available 11,450,000 dunam (4.4 dunam to the acre), uncultivated where one million Jews could easily maintain themselves without encroaching on the possession of anyone.

"It is well known," says the report, "that the Jews, by the application of modern agricultural methods, have so improved land that where an Arab obtained an income of 15 francs per dunam in two years, Jewish colonists have realized an income of 70 to 80 francs per dunam annually from vines, oranges and almonds.

"The Jewish crop-growing farms are also noted for their scientific cultivation, which has doubled the annual harvest. The farmers have introduced pasture growing and an improved system of cattle breeding. Every new Jewish settlement is a model for neighboring Arab villages to copy. Excellent results in this direction have already been noticed. Arab villages, which are near Jewish colonies are much better cultivated than those at a distance. In fact, Jewish colonization has been just as beneficial to the Arabs as to the Jews.

"It may therefore be safely assumed that large-scale Jewish colonization will not dispossess the Arabs of their land, but will help them considerably to improve their harvests and to maintain double or treble the present population."

According to the survey, the area of Palestine is 85,000 square kilometres with a population of 990,500 and a density of population of 11.62 per square kilometre. In the fertile regions of the Hauran, the density is only about 8 per square kilometre, while in the Jewish agricultural colonies of Judea, the density is 75. Around the Hauran there are thousands of acres of land uncultivated, which with the application of modern agricultural methods, including drainage and irrigation, could support thousands of Jewish farmers. These include 6,818 acres of marsh land, 250,000 acres of sand dunes, 50,000 acres of disused land, which has reverted to the government, and large tracts of mountain lands.

"Those who are acquainted with Palestine know that even the poorest land can be transformed into orchards and fruit groves," the report continues. "The Jewish colonies have shown that 30 to 35 per cent. of the whole land can be cultivated without having recourse to terrace culture.

"Apart from agriculture, which it has been demonstrated can maintain a Jewish population of over one million without any injury to the Arabs, there are other directions such as industry and irrigation, in which a livelihood can be found for a further million people. By means of irrigation, Palestine could be made to yield two harvests annually.

Official Statement by Zionist Organization of America on the Political Situation—Regarding Palestine and the Recent Disturbances in Jerusalem.

The Zionist Organization of America announces that it has learned with great satisfaction that Mr. Balfour has been summoned to San Remo to discuss with the conference questions involved in the settlement of the Turkish Treaty. Our associates in San Remo cable that the situation there is greatly improved and that the possibility of an Arab suzerainty in Palestine appears to have passed away and that the attitude of the Zionists toward the mandate is fully understood and appreciated. The British Government has given evidence that it is thoroughly conscious of American Jewish and public opinion, both as to the political situation and as to the recent incidents in Jerusalem. We are, therefore, advised that the improvement of the situation relieves us of the necessity of immediately sending a mission to Europe. (Dr. Stephen S. Wise and several other representatives of the organization were holding themselves in readiness to leave at a moment's notice.)

The Canadian Government has sent a thoroughly sympathetic message in behalf of our cause to Mr. Lloyd George.

Concerning the situation in Palestine and the responsibility for what has happened there, the State Department has acted in accordance with our request. It has already received official advices from the American Consul at Jerusalem and Charge d'Affaires at Cairo. They do not confirm the statements made in the cables published as to the actions and motives of the British officials in Palestine. Representations, however, are being made on these matters to the proper quarters.

Dr. Wizmann has cabled for large funds for immediate use in Palestine and we trust this need will be met by rapid transmission of P. R. F. funds to us here. His cable includes a very grateful appreciation of the work done by the American Zionist Medical Unit during these disturbances in Palestine. He uses these words: "Behavior Hadasah beyond praise."

While in the judgment of the officers of the organization the situation calls for every possible exertion on our part in every direction along the lines hitherto adopted, we shall maintain a policy of critical observation on all passing events and shall be guided by them as to whether any public action is desirable.

Education in Jerusalem.

Sixty-two Hebrew schools with 390 teachers and 8,085 pupils are being operated in Jerusalem by the Board of Education of the Zionist Organization of America, states. The schools are conducted entirely in Hebrew.

Practically all education in Palestine is directed by the Zionist Commission, whose activities in establishing schools has extended so far as the establishment of a Jewish school solely for Arab children. Included in the schools maintained by the Zionists in Jerusalem are a Hebrew Teachers' Seminary, two high schools, an art school, nine primary technical schools and twenty-eight religious schools.

The technical schools include schools for embroidery and lace work, sewing, copper work, filigree and weaving. Evening classes, including law lectures and advanced courses in Hebrew are held in many of the schools.

The Hebrew University, now under construction on the Mount of Olives, will have several of its buildings completed by the end of this year, according to a recent announcement of its designer and builder, Prof. Patrick Geddes of the University of Edinburgh, a noted town-planner, working on the restoration of Palestine under commission from the Zionist Organization.

Maxim Gorki's Jewish Son Combating Bolshevism.

Paris (By I. J. P. B.).—The adopted son of Maxim Gorki is fighting in the volunteer army against the Bolsheviks. It was some 16 or 17 years ago that this young man, an absolute Jewish orphan, was adopted and baptized by the great Russian writer. When the war broke out he was residing in France and enlisted in the French forces. At the Battle of the Marne he lost his right arm, and then he returned to Russia. He served as a member of a political commission to America after the Russian Revolution. Later he joined Admiral Kolchak's forces and after the defeat of the latter entered the army of General Denikin.

Friday, April 30th, 1920 : : Iyar 12th, 5680

Sabbath begins at 7:45 p. m. (new time). Achare Mot. Kedoshim; Leviticus 16:1-20:27. Haptarah Amos 9:7-15 or Ezek 22:1-19.

The new laws controlling the relations between landlords and tenants in buildings used for dwelling purposes seem to be operating with success, judging from the reports of proceedings of the Municipal Court of this city in districts extensively populated by our people. Such being the case, it is probable that the great anti-rent demonstration scheduled for to-morrow will be a flash in the pan. Aside from the fact that a demonstration of this kind does not belong to the Sabbath, so far as the Jewish people are concerned in it, the responsible heads of it are not affiliated in a proper sense with this community.

The recent seventieth birthday anniversary of Adolf Kraus, of Chicago, the international head of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, was widely celebrated in the ranks of this fraternity. Perhaps the most characteristic form which this celebration took was the recruitment of the order by ten thousand new members, as tangible evidence of the appreciation of the work of Mr. Kraus. Indeed, this was the best method of observing the event. The B'nai B'rith needs new material in the shape of candidates, to carry on its world-work in and for Judaism. Ten thousand new members establish a record.

The March issue of The Jewish Forum, the first number of this interesting magazine to be published since the untimely demise of its founder and editor, Dr. Solomon T. H. Hurwitz, has appeared, and is replete with valuable material. The periodical is now in the hands of a competent board of editors, comprising Rabbi Moses Hyamson, Peter Wiernik, and Drs. Revel, David I. Macht and Meyer Waxman, with Rabbi Bernard Drachman as managing editor and Isaac Rosengarten as associate. In such hands the future of The Jewish Forum may be regarded as assured and the quality of its contents high. What we particularly like about the journal is that now, as in the past, its fidelity to traditional Judaism will be unquestionable.

While in England, the late Solomon Schechter was rightly looked upon as one of the props of the official orthodoxy in and by which Anglo-Jewry lives. When he came to the United States, to reside here permanently as first president of the reorganized Jewish Theological Seminary of America, it gradually became almost universally recognized that, however, faithful Solomon Schechter was, and, to the end of his days, remained, to the requirements of our historic faith, the institution which he so ably led and brilliantly served had not the right to stand forth as a genuine upholder of orthodoxy. Its position was that of the conservative in Jewish practice, and its theological point of view was that known as the "middle of the road." These conditions have not materially altered since the premature passing away of Schechter, the unforgettable scholar. The Jewish Theological Seminary of America is a conservative stronghold. Some of its graduates fill Reform pulpits, and one or two of them have even journeyed to the end of the road—radicalism. Its trustees are to some extent strongly affiliated with Reform movements, and the chairman of the board is the president of the leading Reform congregation in this city and country. We have made the foregoing lengthy explanation for the benefit of The Jewish World, which, drawing its ammunition from the misinformed part of an old-established local Yiddish daily newspaper, animadverts Louis Marshall's chairmanship of the Seminary board the while he is president of Temple Emanu-El. When it is once comprehended that the Seminary is just what it is, nothing else, as we have indicated, the seeming contradiction between Mr. Marshall's two offices is cleared up and fully explained.

Correspondents and subscribers are notified that matter intended for the current issue of the HEBREW STANDARD must reach our office not later than Tuesday, 10 A. M. This rule will be strictly adhered to.

THE BALFOUR DECLARATION REALIZED.

ACCORDING to cable despatches received as we go to press, and not contradicted as yet, the representatives of the entente allies gathered together at San Remo to restore peace to war-ridden Turkey have decided to confer a mandate over Palestine (including Mesopotamia) on Great Britain. Indeed, the first named country, according to the news reports, will be known as "The National Home for the Jews." Syria will be placed in charge of the French republic, while our country is offered the exercise of mandatory power over Armenia.

This is a news item of tremendous first-rate importance. It of 1917, indicative of the program of the British Government with respect to Palestine, has been accepted practically, as it was heretofore already in principle, by all the other entente allies, and will thus be at once realized.

We are delighted beyond expression that Eretz Yisrael henceforth exists under the suzerainty of Great Britain, that firm and great friend of our people, and that that country is indeed become once more the home of Jewry and the seat of our hopes and ideals, just as in the days when the temple stood on Mount Zion and the word of the Lord went forth from Jerusalem. This is the plain implication of the Balfour Declaration, and the realization thereof advances the position of Jewry immeasurably.

It should be noted that in our present remarks we have thus far avoided all references to the Zionist movement in respect of this latest Palestinian development and to the Emir Feisal. Zionism for the present has no concern with the news from San Remo other than that involved in the phrase "The National Home for the Jews." Great Britain, the mandatory, must work out the details of its mandate as soon as she enters upon this duty. Until then, commitments by Zionists and others are premature. These words apply, too, to the Emir Feisal.

What makes us rejoice exceedingly over this newest turn is that Palestine, formerly a pawn in the grasp of one of the most brutal and disorderly governments, is now placed in the care of enlightened, civilized, democratic authority. This fact, standing by itself, augurs well for Jewry. Added to it is the fact that Great Britain has latterly firmly supported our Palestinian ideals.

TEMPLE EMANU-EL.

OUR esteemed contemporaries of Reform tendencies have paid due tribute to Temple Emanu-El of New York city on the recent celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding. Many and varied were the comments offered on this auspicious occasion by our Reform friends. One—that of Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, of Chicago—may be specifically referred to. That doughty champion of radicalism grudgingly praised Temple Emanu-El for its conservatism within the fold of Reform, and signaled out a past religious leader of the congregation, none other than Rabbi Judah L. Magnes, who sought strenuously to restore the synagogue to true conservatism, for his special prayers.

In the face of these expressions of the Reform press in this country we, as an orthodox journal, have a proper right to express our own views. To us Temple Emanu-El was always, is and probably will forever be a true exponent of the principles of Reform Judaism. Its theology is not ours and its approach to the eternal verities of our faith far different from our own. Temple Emanu-El interprets its missions as a fane for Jewish worship in a sense altogether different from that acceptable to traditional Jewish practice.

Yet it were ungracious in us did we deny Temple Emanu-El's just claims to honor as a worthy force in the religious life of New York Jewry, if not of the Jewry of the entire United States. A congregation which disposes over untold riches, which has enrolled in its membership some of our best and most powerful communal leaders, is not a congregation lightly to be disregarded. Within its lights, and according to them, Temple Emanu-El has served Judaism and Jewry seventy-five years. It stands as a sturdy oak, a logical outgrowth of the slight acorn so modestly planted in our midst in 1845.

While we must regret the theological differences separating one Jew from another, we must recognize that there are such inevitably, and in this sense, and appraising Temple Emanu-El's performance by the standard by which it must be judged, we extend our felicitations to the congregation on its recent day of honor and wish for it a continuance of strength and prosperity for the further work it is undoubtedly called upon to do. We may even hope that the coming years will mellow its Reform tendencies.

We have perused with interest the annual report for 1919 of the National Desertion Bureau, Inc., just issued. This institution is an outgrowth of the work of finding and restoring to the bosoms of their families the Jewish wife-deserters who otherwise so markedly complicate the problem of allocating Jewish charitable relief among our unfortunates. This work was formerly carried on by the United Hebrew Charities of this city, and it is now successfully accomplished by the bureau, equipped with the requisite facilities and a legal staff which enables it to function adequately. Just as our system of communal charity is the wonder and a source of profound admiration among non-Jews, so the system of dealing with cases of wife desertion, inaugurated and maintained by this bureau, is strikingly efficient. The years have seen this service become more and more satisfactory. It is a splendid example of self-helping charity.

THE JEWISH SUPERMAN.

"Holy shall ye be, for I the Lord your God am holy." (Lev. xix:1.) THIS is the master-text of the Jewish Bible. It is an epitome of the Jewish world-view. Into this well-nigh inexhaustible verse the Jewish genius has crowded all it knows of the ways of God and man. Indefinite and unattainable as the ideal of holiness appears, the mind of Israel, in formulating it, followed a definite conception of divine nature and human nature, and of their mutual correspondence. God, accordingly, is the pattern of holiness, the one and only complete ideal of excellence: man, who is not the image of God unless he consciously images Him, must imitate this pattern-ideal and approximate if unable to realize it. Such is the command. It evinces a high conception of God not alone, but also of man. And because a universal command, it breathes a spirit of optimism, of high faith in the possibilities of man. Nothing is impossible for the soaring spirit of man: the highest reach of thought, the highest lift of the soul, the most heroic aspiration to embody the godlike in action—these things are all humanly possible because divinely commanded. Man, to be man, must be more than man. He must be Superman.

Recent events have caused the very word Superman to become a stench in the nostrils of mankind. It has been assumed, through error and sundry exaggerations, that the term denotes all that is irreligious and subversive of the higher objects of life. But the notion of a Superman, in itself, means nothing of the kind. As a matter of fact, it denotes something very pleasing to many thinking minds that regard it as a necessary step in human progress. The question is this: How shall human progress be brought about? Through a few outstanding heroic personalities that shall represent the peak of human development, or by the gradual raising of the average to a somewhat higher level? To most minds progress means the improvement of the many, rather than the elevation of a few. But the trouble with this ideal of mass-improvement is that it does not aim higher than a decent level of mediocrity to which all mankind are to be lifted in the course of history. Recognizing that absolute excellence can at best be attained by the very few, this mass-ideal aims at the mean betterment of the many. However, there are those who consider this an inadequate ideal, because it does not reach high enough. The struggles of history, the agonies of men through the ages, can find no adequate justification in merely the average type, as we know it—the task of history is to raise the human type itself to a heroic stature of excellence, to produce, that is, the Superman. In the Superman, or the few Supermen alone, exemplars of human power and greatness, can history find its ultimate justification, and not in the mediocre mass. To this end the ages travail; to this purpose are the throes of men and nations: that an altogether new and supremely worthy human personality may be born out of the common mass, yet standing vastly above it.

Putting the problem in a somewhat different fashion, the question is: Shall the tremendous processes of history taper down into the masses, or shall they taper up into the Superman? It is as when we regard the valley rising into the hills and offering a majestic sight to eye and mind alike. What can be more pleasing than this prospect of the dizzy ascent of man to the Alps of high excellence? What if but a few may rise to such solitary altitudes? Are not the Mont-Blancs and the Jungfraus and the Himalayas far and few between? Such seems to be the argument of the believers in the Superman.

The two views thus far outlined meet in one and the same point. With more or less distrust, with greater or lesser sympathy, both disbelieve the possibility of the uncommon rise of the common man. Even the champion of the mass-ideal, scorning the thought of the Superman, does not believe in a higher than average virtue for the average. Just because the average must always remain average—he argues—we must concentrate upon improving the average so far as it is capable of improvement,—and this is progress. Now, my claim is that the Jewish religion accepts both views, yet far from admitting them to be contradictory it regards them as complementary. Judaism accepts the Ideal of the Superman. For Judaism is essentially aristocratic. Judaism has never advocated that cheap degraded dogma of popular democracy, which would level everything down, which would pull the hills down to the level of the valley. On the other hand, Judaism does not distrust the masses. Judaism believes that the common herd can rise to uncommon heights. The average need not stay average. All men are to participate in the ascent Godward. This is the task of civilization: to lift the whole race of men up to the Himalaya of absolute perfection. "And the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea!" Moses himself declared: "Would that all the people of God were prophets!" That is to say, the Jewish ideal is that the whole human race shall become a race of Supermen! And the same ideal is expressed in the command of the text, too, for our text does not say: Let some be holy, or, Let one be holy; it says: "Ye shall be holy!"—all of you. Difficult and almost unattainable as this ideal of absolute perfection—of superman-like excellence—appears, it was placed before all the people, as being within reach of every child of God. Breathes there elsewhere a spirit so confident of the upward ascent of Man?

And according to Judaism the Superman is neither the strong man, nor the intellectual man, nor yet the man endowed with creative power. The Superman is the Holy Man! This is the very reason for believing the Superman ideal within the common reach: since all other forms of excellence may be reserved for but a few, but moral excellence is possible for all. "Be ye holy!"—this means: "Be ye moral Supermen!"

JOEL BLAU.

Golden Jubilee Celebrated at Home for Aged and Infirm.

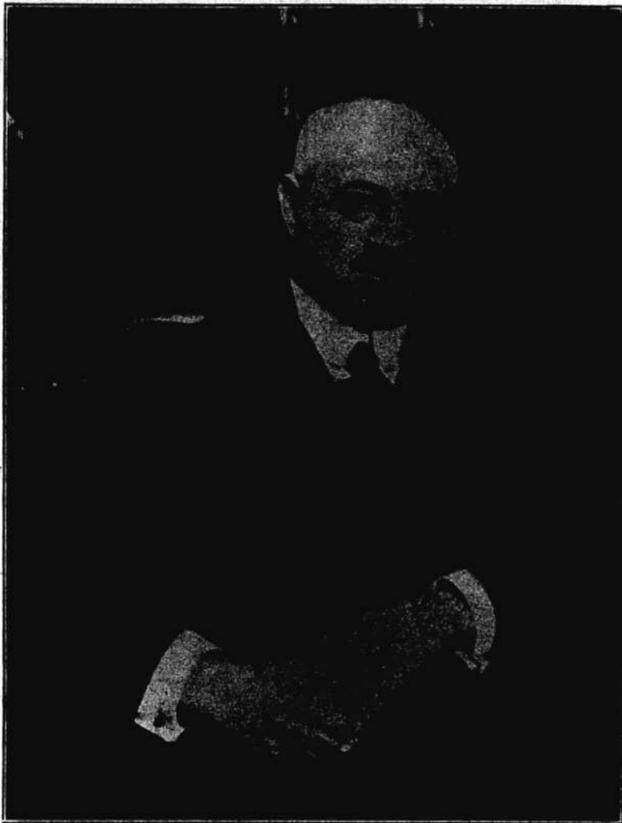

Last Sunday afternoon a celebration was held at the Home for Aged and Infirm, 121 West 106th street, to mark the fiftieth anniversary of the institution. During the afternoon a reception was held and there were over 500 visitors present, including City Chamberlain Philip Berolzheimer, Supreme Court Justices Newberger and Platzek and many others prominent in civic and communal affairs.

A feature of the afternoon was the presentation of a silver loving cup by the inmates to Dr. S. Newton Leo, son of the founder of the institution, the presentation being made by one of the inmates, Gustav Rosenau, sixty-nine years of age. A gold cigar case and gold memorandum book for doctor's notes was also presented by Mrs. Esselborg, housekeeper, in behalf of the nurses and the help. A substantial check was also presented to Dr. Leo by the Board of Trustees, through Mr. Morris Sternbach.

Dr. Leo was a surgeon in the Fifty-fifth Regiment and assistant surgeon on a gunboat during the Civil War. For fourteen years he was visiting physician to the hospital for neurological diseases on Blackwell's Island, and he was a member of the medical commission that went to London to study methods of treating tuberculosis and which included Drs. Osler and Janeway.

The Home for Aged and Infirm Hebrews is supported by voluntary contributions and bequests, and the annual expenses approximate $120,000. The institution is a member of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of this city.

Nathan S. Jonas—An Interpretation of American-Jewish Citizenship

At the end of a long aisle, past many cashiers and tellers and major domos, if you happen to pay a visit to the Manufacturers' Trust Co., in New York City, you will see a middle-aged, quiet gentleman, with a pleasant smile and gentle voice who will give you a warm handshake and make you feel at home, if your visit develops into a business call and you are shown to his desk. This pleasant gentleman is Nathan S. Jonas who, some forty years ago was an errand boy, and today is the president of a great banking institution.

But this is not precisely the fact that makes him the noted member of American Jewry that he is, auspicious as his career in the financial world has been. What endears Mr. Jonas to the hearts of American Jews, and to the Jews of Brooklyn in especial, is his untiring, self-sacrificing interest in Jewish welfare, an interest that began in "utmost" individual acts of charity, passed through the erection of the three hundred bed Jewish hospital of Brooklyn, and culminated (to date) in the development of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities to the point where this organization affliates or serves some thirty Jewish charitable and welfare organizations in Brooklyn, and claims an annual income of a million dollars.

Unlike many of our communal leaders, Mr. Jonas does not come from the other side. He was born in Montgomery, Ala., in 1868. This was the trying period following the Civil War and circumstances decided the Jonas family to move, and so at the early age of one Nathan S. Jonas found himself in the Borough of Brooklyn.

When he was thirteen young Jonas became an errand boy, then he took to bookkeeping, selling, insurance soliciting and finally bridged a connection with banking.

In 1905, Mr. Jonas, with several associates, conceived the idea of organizing a trust company in Williamsburg, that noted and lively section of Brooklyn, and his efforts resulted in the Citizens' Trust Company, an institution which later grew into the present Manufacturers' Trust Company, with four Brooklyn branches and one in Manhattan.

The success of the new enterprise was instantaneous; it gained the confidence and favor of Brooklyn business men and remained unaffected by the period of panic which ensued within a comparatively short time after its organization, and remained sound and prosperous under the capable management of its far-seeing president.

In the next thirteen years Mr. Jonas was instrumental in merging the Citizens' Trust with the Broadway Bank of Brooklyn, with deposits aggregating four and a half millions; with the Manufacturers' National Bank, one of the most prominent banking institutions in Brooklyn, and with the West Side Bank of New York, with deposits of over four million. With its activities thus extended into Manhattan, the renamed Manufacturers' Trust Company became one of the most important of the city's financial houses, possessing resources totaling thirty million dollars. The total subscriptions of the company to the Liberty Loans were $25,000,000—a tremendous sum considering that the Manufacturers' Trust Company is but fifteen years old.

Despite the time and energy which the management of such an organization as Mr. Jonas built up entails, he has devoted himself to philanthropic and welfare work in the same proportion as to his business, heedless of the fact that these humane endeavors set a double tax on his health and forced him often to work into the early hours of the morning.

Together with his associate in welfare work, Mr. Max Abelman, executive director of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, no holidays or leisure hours were known in planning and directing the work that put Jewish institutions in Brooklyn on a sound and solid basis. A few years ago Mr. Jonas underwent an operation. On the first day after the performance of the operation, and while still not fully recovered from the effects of the anesthetic, he was in conference with Mr. Abelman regarding the plans of some campaign. This little episode will serve to illustrate Mr. Jonas' heartfelt zeal in the cause of the community.

After, by prodigious effort, he had established the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, Mr. Jonas turned his attentions to other charitable institutions. As a result of his investigations he found that the multitude of "drives," benefits, concerts, dances, etc., which the various charity organizations held every now and then to obtain funds for their support was tiring even the patient and easy-going public, which would no longer respond to the compound appeals of so many organizations; that when the money was finally collected, a large part of it oozed out for expenses in running the drive or affair; that the business administrations were not, and could not under the existing conditions be, run economically or efficiently. To obviate these faults, Mr. Jonas proposed a federation of all the institutions; a co-ordination of effort and executive direction under one head. This meant doing away with individual campaigns and trifling money-raising plans and, instead, one great campaign, well organized and enlisting the co-operation of every Jewish worker.

The Federation of Brooklyn Jewish Charities was organized by Mr. Jonas and Mr. Abelman in 1909. In the first year of Federation the subscribers were 3,767 and the amount subscribed was $90,901. The next year the subscribers had increased to 4,014 and he subscriptions had mounted to $101,741. In 1918 the subscribers' list stood at 10,249 and the subscriptions at $292,637. Prior to Federation, the total income of all the institutions was $27,000. The income for last year was $404,000.

For three terms Mr. Jonas was the Federation's president; now, in its maturity, he is the honorary secretary. The succeeding presidents of the Federation have been Benjamin H. Namm, Edward Lazansky and Alexander H. Geismar. The affiliated institutions of Federation cover the entire field of Jewish philanthropy and social welfare. Some of these institutions are: The Brooklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum, which cares for and boards orphaned children; the Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, the Hebrew Educational Society, which engages in Americanization, settlement, vocational, educational and recreational work; Training School for Nurses of the Jewish Hospital; Women's Auxiliary of the Brooklyn Orphan Asylum, which provides linens and does other social service work; Women's Auxiliary of the Jewish Hospital, Council of Jewish Women, Big Sister service, immigration and blind aid; Council Home for Jewish Girls, juvenile delinquency; Young Men's and Women's Social Service Auxiliary, Big Sister and Brother and volunteer service; United Jewish Aid Societies, milk stations, relief employment, legal aid and a wide range of social service work; three Y. M. H. A.'s, five Talmud Torahs.

At the present the Federation, under the skillful leadership of the Campaign Committee, Messrs. Nathan S. Jonas, Edward Lazansky, Louis J. Jaffee, Joseph M. May, and the campaign director, Max Abelman, are carrying on a drive for a million dollars, the 1920 budget for the affiliated institutions. Mr. Abelman has the objective of one big campaign year to provide a million-dollar income for the Federation. The methods employed in this campaign are rather original, for it is aimed—and almost accomplished—to organize 400 "Leaders" in Brooklyn who would each underwrite $2,500. That is to say, each of the 400 makes himself responsible for a quota of the million dollars.

This system establishes new leaders by arousing the instinct of responsibility and by providing a well-defined objective for each worker. Numerous get-together-dinners and luncheons are also held in every district and for every profession, thus further accentuating a spirit of fellowship which aids wonderfully the success of the campaign. At the inaugural dinner of the campaign, Fritz Kreisler, the great violinist, who also belongs to the Jewish brotherhood, played for those assembled. This is the first time that this famous artist has appeared at a Jewish gathering, and this Jewish debut speaks well for the persuasive abilities of the campaign committee. Here it will be of interest to mention that Mr. Abelman has had a notable career as a campaign director. In the Liberty Loans he had the distinction of conducting some of the most successful meetings held in the country. One, in special, the Victory Loan meeting at the Academy of Music on March 5, 1919, the sum of $43,960,000 was raised, the largest sum obtained at one loan meeting. For this feat Mr. Abelman was warmly commended by high officials.

In reading over the activities of a man like Mr. Jonas, who has given such a large slice of his life for humane work among his fellow-Jews, at a time when in this country every ounce of energy and every hour is eagerly converted by the business man into new enterprises and new acquisitions of wealth, the average reader must be filled with the sense of how little he has himself done in the cause of Jewish welfare. And it behooves him to jump into the breach and do his share, not only in supporting the present campaign of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, Mr. Jonas' especial protégé, but in helping along every cause for which his assistance is solicited and thus create many more American citizens of Mr. Jonas' stamp.

Suicide of a Jewish Playwright.

Vienna (By I. J. P. E.).—Leo Berinsky, a Jewish playwright, recently committed suicide in this city.

About ten years ago, this writer, an inflamed Russian revolutionist, took refuge from Kiev and came to Vienna. Here he won the interest of Josef Kainz, the greatest German dramatist at that time. Through the recommendation of Kainz were produced in Berlin and Vienna two of Berinsky's plays, "Moloch" and "The Governor." Both dramas discussed Russian problems from a revolutionary standpoint and made a deep impression in the two countries. In the last few years very little has been heard of Berinsky's activities, but now through his tragic death, the interest of the world is once again focused upon this talented Jew. He was forty years old at the time of his death.

Parasols FROM PARIS

—a phrase for feminine fancy to conjure with. And, considering their distinguished origin, the long transatlantic voyage from which they have but just disembarked, and their own undeniable novelty and charm, they are really not an unreasonably expensive luxury.

As far as that goes, a parasol never is a luxury, for without it the Summer costume is utterly incomplete and the Summer discomfort quite intolerable. Being, therefore, clearly a necessity, it is a blessing that Madame la Mode takes care to present it in as attractive a form as possible. It might so easily have been otherwise.

These parasols are of the sort that makes a virtue even of extravagance. There are many new and attractive style features among them, and the mountings are a delight in themselves. Every woman who sees them will want them.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Toscha Seidel on "Baptism."
Editor Hebrew Standard.
Only in today's mail the article entitled "The Price of Baptism," presumably copied from an interview which I granted the American Jewish World of Minneapolis, reached me.

I am astonished and more than surprised that the people of my own faith, which I would not renounce for all the millions the entire world could offer, would so utterly misrepresent and convey to the public at large a false impression.

Everything in the above mentioned article is absolutely untrue, and I wish you would kindly give this letter a small space in your estimable paper.

The Pre-Congress Meeting.

The conference of Jewish organizations which was held Sunday, April 18, at the Union Square Hotel was both a success and a failure, depending upon the point of view from which it is considered. In point of numbers it was decisively a failure. Of all the Jewish organizations, hardly a half hundred delegates came to express their set wills for a permanent Jewish Congress.

The small number of delegates, however, showed in grand measure their enthusiasm and resolution for a Jewish Congress in America as a permanent institution, whether the present leaders of the Jewish Congress so desire it or not. Furthermore, the delegates, however small in numbers, did represent the most powerful organizations of American Jewry, the orders, the Jewish labor organizations and relief and "landsman-schaften" societies. All these together constitute the largest element of American Jewry, and if they shall be able to awaken in the hearts of their membership the interest for a Jewish Congress and receive their material support for its work, then the future of the Jewish Congress is assured.

The most vigorous argument in defense of a permanent Jewish Congress was presented by Lawyer Rothenberg. The opponents of the Jewish Congress contend that since this body was called into existence for the express purpose of assuring the rights of the Jews in Eastern Europe, and as these rights have already been safeguarded by the Peace Conference, there is no further need for a Jewish Congress. To this argument Mr. Rothenberg truthfully replied that these rights are already trampled under foot by the governments of Europe. And if there be no Jewish Congress to insist upon these rights and to demand of the Great Powers that they use their influence to insure these rights, then all the guarantees of the Peace Conference against Jewish disabilities are not even worth the paper upon which they are written. And who is to demand these rights unless it be the Jewish Congress of America, the strongest country in the world, which sought to gain no personal benefit from the Peace Conference, but merely to protect the rights of oppressed peoples?

Of the resolutions adopted by the conference, the most important were the protest against pogroms in Palestine, the first of its kind from a representative Jewish body in America; the decision to raise a fund of $100,000 for the further work of the Jewish Congress, and the arrangement of a large mass meeting to show the sentiment of the Jewish public for a permanent Jewish Congress.

Urge Jews to Rally to Cause of Judaism.
(Communicated.)

Under the slogan, "Why give religion a vacation?" Jewish forces throughout the country from every walk of life will be organized by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations to popularize services for Jews in summer colonies and isolated communities, according to announcement made by J. Walter Freiberg, president of the union.

Adolph S. Ochs, Jacob H. Schiff, Henry Morgenthau, Ludwig Vogelstein and many other prominent New Yorkers are interested in making the venture a success. Manny Strauss is acting as chairman of the Advisory Board and is in complete charge of organization work throughout the United States.

Hundreds of rabbis have been mobilized and are being prepared for a strenuous season of missionary work. It will be their task to visit various towns and villages in different sections of the country to keep alive the spirit of Judaism and to prevent what is characterized as "constant leakage." A recent survey made by the union in every State developed the information that there are upwards of 1,000 towns and villages scattered throughout the country without synagogues or religious instruction.

The sentiment of the union is that the great mass of Jews in the United States is really to blame for this condition. It is held that the forces of Judaism organized behind the U. A. H. C. can do much to prevent the process of "leakage" which has been going on for years if the situation is vigorously attacked during the coming summer months. The organization has completed plans to reach every Jewish child in the different communities denied education in its religion and the traditions of the race.

The summer drive to bring vacationists and residents of rural districts back to the House of Israel is one of the many activities featuring the national movement to raise $3,500,000. The purpose of the fund is to enable the union to carry out a ten-year program of expansion. The campaign will last for thirty-five weeks, and to attain the goal it is necessary to raise $100,000 a week.

Fifteen Hundred Prominent National Directors Help Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America.

The Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America is constantly receiving the most encouraging support from 1,500 national directors of 450 cities distributed throughout the country.

The national directors are composed of judges, lawyers, doctors, business men, social workers and rabbis, prominent in their respective localities, who have taken upon themselves the responsibility of raising the necessary quota in their particular communities for the building fund. Thus far they have successfully raised many thousands of dollars for the reconstruction of the historic Astor Library structure in New York for the larger and wider purposes of the institution.

Thousands of dollars have already been raised due to the hard work of these self-sacrificing men who are giving up a great deal of their time for this great and good cause. The following is an extract from a letter received from one of the national directors: "Here in our little city in the West, where there are many of our co-religionists, they seem to know all about the work of our society and are very glad to give, providing that one brings the message of the society's want and purpose to their doors."

Among those national directors who have responded for their respective communities by sending in their quota or a report as to their rapid progress in raising the necessary fund are:

Alexandria, La., S. Shapiro; Charleston, S. C., J. Turteltaub; Goldsboro, S. C., Mrs. Henry Weil; Hibbing, Minn., B. M. Lippman; Madison, Wis., S. B. Schoin; Superior, Wis., A. Siegel; Texarkana, Tex., Louis Heilbron, Dr. R. Farber; Athens, Ga., M. G. Michael; Donora, Pa., H. Rubin; Green Bay, Wis., M. Roseman; Marshall, Tex., A. Waghalter; San Kranson; Nashua, N. H., A. J. CHILDREN'S PAGE

"NOW OR NEVER!"

DEAR CHILDREN:

The Torah tells that if the sinner is very poor and "his means be not sufficient for two turtle doves, or two young pigeons, then shall he bring as his offering for that which he hath sinned the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour for a sin offering." The Safra takes this opportunity to point out a great moral lesson which we should always heed, and that is the motto, "Chabibah mitzvah beshangtah" ("Beloved is the commandment that is performed in time"), as the Torah does not want the poor sinner to wait until he will get rich and be able to bring a sheep or a goat as a sin offering, but is contented with his little flour that he brings immediately. "Even," says Maimonides, "if the poor sinner's wealthy father was on a dying bed and he knew he would soon inherit a million dollars, he should not delay his sin offering, but bring the ephah of flour. He shall not put upon it any oil, nor shall he put thereupon any frankincense, for it is a sin offering."

"Because it is a sin offering," says Rashi, "it is not right that it be offered with embellishment." "And he shall bring it to the priest, and the priest shall take from it his handful as its memorial and burn it on the altar, upon the fire offerings of the Lord: it is a sin offering."

If he took its handful and burned it for the purpose for which it was brought it is valid, otherwise it is not valid. "And the priest shall make an atonement for him—'al chatatho asher chatthah'" ("concerning his sin that he hath committed"). Here the Torah has changed the wording, for concerning the rich man's or the poor man's sacrifice it is said "mechathatho (implying less than his original offering), for if he was rich when he sinned and laid aside money for the offering of a sheep or a goat, and then became poor, he should bring of part of that money two turtle doves; if he laid aside money for the offering of two turtle doves and became too poor even to afford that, he should bring of part of that money the tenth part of an ephah of fine flour. On the other hand, if he laid aside money for the offering of the tenth part of an ephah and became rich he should bring a rich man's offering; therefore it is said here "al chatatho" (implying more than his original offering) "that he hath committed in one of these," in one of the three expiations that are mentioned here—the offering of the rich, or of the poor, or of the very poor. And why is it necessary to teach us that? As otherwise we would have thought that for the greater sin he should offer a sheep or a goat and if he sinned in a lesser degree he should offer a fowl, and for a very slight sin he should offer the tenth part of an ephah. Therefore we are taught "that he hath committed in one of these" to make the slight sins equal to the great sins for the offering of a sheep or goat if the sinner's means be sufficient, and the great sins equal to the slight sins for the offering of the tenth of an ephah if they be very poor. "And it shall belong to the priest as the meat offering." "This teaches us that that which is left of the meat offering brought by the sinner shall be eaten by the priests. This is its simple interpretation, but our Rabbins have expounded it also as meaning that if the sinner was a priest it shall be as any other meat offering brought by a priest, for which it is prescribed.

"And every meat offering of a priest shall be wholly burnt; it shall not be eaten." (Lev. 6.) "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, If any person commit a trespass—that is, if he changed a thing that was set aside for a holy purpose and put it to profane use (even if he did not enjoy thereof) and sin through ignorance against the holy things of the Lord—if he did enjoy of the holy things—the holy things of the Lord—that which is entirely offered to the Lord—this excludes those that are holy in a minor degree (and it is permitted to eat thereof) "then shall he bring as his trespass offering unto the Lord a ram without blemish out of the flocks." The name by which it is called, "ayil," indicates that it was two years old. "And that in which he hath sinned against the holy thing shall he pay, and shall add its fifth part thereto, and give it unto the priest" the principal and the fifth part of its value in addition thereto shall he give for the holy offerings. "And the priest shall make an atonement for him with the ram of the trespass offering, and it shall be forgiven unto him."

Montefiore Home Annual Meeting.
The annual meeting of the contributors of the Montefiore Home and Hospital will be held at the institution, Gun Hill road, East 210th street, near Jerome avenue, on Sunday morning, May 2, 1920, at 11 o'clock. The annual reports of the president and committee will be submitted and there will be an election of ten directors in place of Hon. Mitchell L. Erlanger, Mr. William Goldman, Mr. Benedict J. Mt. Nebo Temple Notes.

The Young Folks League will hold a regular meeting on Thursday evening, May 6, at 8:15, in the vestry rooms of the temple.

The Sisterhood will hold a regular meeting on Monday afternoon, May 3, at 2 o'clock in the temple.

A Jewish War Sufferer's Committee meeting was held on Monday evening in the temple to plan the campaign. Mr. Max Strauss, the chairman of the committee, presided. Rabbi Eiseman outlined the plan. It is the committee's desire to reach every member and friend of the temple. Lists of names were given to each member of the committee. The children of the religious school have been organized to carry on the work, and it is hoped that a very large sum will be realized.

Mrs. David E. Goldfarb, the president of the Mt. Nebo Sisterhood, has charge of the women's division on the Heights, and is very actively organizing her forces for the drive.

The Girl Scouts of the temple gave a reception to the Boy Scouts troop on Saturday evening. There was an entertainment, refreshments and a dance.

At the annual meeting of the congregation held on Thursday evening, April 29, President Edward R. Cohn read his annual report and seven members to the Board of Trustees were elected.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

When the manuscript for "Tiger! Tiger!" came to Mr. Belasco from Captain Knoblock, then fighting the cause of the Allies in the trenches of France, Frances Starr was rehearsing "Over the Hills," but Mr. Belasco cast it aside to do the Knoblock play. The great public and popular success of the play which held the record for the biggest continuous receipts the Belasco Theatre ever had for a period of six months, proved the shrewdness of Mr. Belasco's judgment. Miss Starr will be seen at the Bronx Opera House the week starting Monday, May 3.

The original distinguished cast will be seen here together with the same production that delighted New York playgoers. The leading support to Miss Starr embraces Lionel Atwill, Wallace Erskine, Thomas Loudon, Whitford Kane, Mary Moore, Helen Andrews, Daisy Belmont and Edward Denison. Fiske O'Hara in "Down Limerick Way" will be the attraction at the Bronx Opera House week of May 10.

Because of the unusual success of the Columbia University Free Concerts, which are given "On the Green" on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, for a period of twelve weeks, it has been decided to extend them to all the more congested districts of the five boroughs of Greater New York. The concerts will be given by "The Goldman Concert Band" under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman. The following parks have been chosen for these extension concerts and in some of them two, three and more concerts will be given: Central Park, Prospect Park, Seward Park, Hamilton Fish Park, Columbus Park, Highland Park, Poe Park, Thomas Jefferson Park, Kings Park, Richmond Hill High School ground, and Curtis Field (Staten Island). One concert will also be given at the Montefiore Home and Hospital. The first of these extension concerts, which are given under the auspices of Columbia University and dedicated to the people of New York, will be given on the steps of the City Hall on June 8, at 12 o'clock. The dates of the other concerts will be announced in the near future. The same programs that are rendered at Columbia University will be repeated in the parks, and a noted soloist will appear at each concert.

BROOKLYN NOTES.Council of Jewish Women.

The annual meeting of Brooklyn Section, Council of Jewish Women, will be held at the Garfield Place Temple, Eighth avenue and Garfield place, on Tuesday, May 4, 1920, at 2.30 p. m. The following nominations for officers and directors of Brooklyn Section, Council of Jewish Women, have been submitted by the Nominating Committee, Mrs. E. Everts, chairman; President, Mrs. A. H. Arons; first vice-president, Mrs. Isaac Sargent; second vice-president, Mrs. Max Meyer; third vice-president, Mrs. Oswald Schlockow; treasurer, Miss Emma Brown; recording secretary, Mrs. Mortimer Brennes; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Emanuel Celler.

Directors renominated for a term of three years, 1920-1923: Mrs. Isaac Bennett, Mrs. Max Brandenburger, Mrs. Max Meyer, Miss Rose Brenner, Miss Etta Gold, Mrs. Louis Petchesky, Mrs. Emil Weil.

New directors for one year, to May, 1921: Mrs. Max Sklar, Mrs. Victor W. Filler, Mrs. M. A. Brandt and Mrs. Harry Weisburg.

A meeting was held last Tuesday evening at Temple Emanu-El, Borough Park. Mrs. Otto Kempner was chairman and the speakers were Judge Salmon, who spoke on "Cause and Prevention of Delinquency," and Mrs. Ettlinger of the Lakeview Home, whose subject was "The Unmarried Mother Problem."

New Rabbi for B'nai Israel.

Rabbi Jacob Katz, for some years rabbi of Congregational Tifereth Israel, Kensington, was recently elected as rabbi by Congregation B'nai Israel, Fourth Avenue and Fifty-fourth Street, Borough Park, and the formal installation ceremonies took place last Sunday.

The program included the chanting of the Minchah services by Cantor M. Zornitsky and addresses by the following speakers: Mr. Abram Fisch, presiding officer; Dr. Cyrus Adler, acting president of Jewish Theological Seminary; Hon. Leon C. Weinstock, vice-president of State Commission of Prisons; Mr. Benjamin Veit, district superintendent Board of Education; Mr. John L. Bernstein, president of Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society; Rabbi I. H. Brownsville Hospital to Open on Decoration Day.

Memorial Day is the date set for the opening of the Brownsville and East New York Hospital. This was the declaration of the board of directors at a meeting held recently at the hospital headquarters, 1855 Pitkin avenue. President Meyerson has been authorized to appoint a committee of fifty men and fifty women, which will have charge of the arrangements.

Equipment is the only thing lacking at present, but the Rev. Dr. I. H. Levinthal of the Brooklyn Jewish Center, who is chairman of the equipment committee, promises to have every item necessary to completeness in its place by May 30.

Federation's Closing Rally.

A buffet supper-dance in the interest of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities' 1920 Million Dollar Annual Income campaign will be held on Saturday evening, May 1, 1920, 8 o'clock, at the Hotel Pennsylvania, Seventh avenue and Thirty-third street, New York city. The final reports of the campaign will be made at this meeting.

Sim Williams' all new 1920 version of "The Girls From Joyland" the big burlesque success, will be the offering at the Star Theatre next week with a brilliant galaxy of true and tried burlesque favorites and with the prettiest and best dressed chorus seen in this city in years. "The Girls From Joyland" this season as in the past was written by Sim Williams, and Billie Barker's enchanting music fits in nicely. In the cast are Billy Gilbert, George Wright, Pinkey Willour, Ida Nicolai, Roy Burke, Jean Schuler, Billy Le Roy, and Doris Clare. Two good wrestling bouts are promised by promoter George Bothner for Thursday evening's special feature, and the usual Sunday concerts will be given.

Bank to Fight Jews Financed by Jewish Money.

Graz, Austria. (By I. J. P. B.)--In Graz, the capital of the Austrian province Steiermark, there was recently established the Steier Bank. Its directors officially announced that it is the specific purpose of this new bank to free the Austrian people from the claws of Jewish capital. The anti-Semitic gentlemen failed, however, to inform the Jew-hating public that their "patriotic" institution is financed by the Vienna State Bank, which is controlled by Jews.

Hotel Marlborough, Avon-by-the-Sea, Changes Hands.

Mr. Arthur E. Wetzlar of Asbury Park, N. J., has purchased the well-known Hotel Marlborough at Avon-by-the-Sea, N. J., just two miles outside of Asbury Park. The hotel has always been well patronized under the management of Mrs. S. L. Lowy.

Mr. Wetzlar and Mr. Mendelbohm, the new proprietors, are installing electricity throughout the building, adding baths, modernizing the sleeping rooms, redecorating and other improvements.

Mrs. Mendelbohm, who for years has enjoyed enviable popularity at the Fifth Avenue Inn, Bradley Beach, N. J., will supervise the management of the Marlborough through her husband and son-in-law. Fifth Avenue Inn, however, will continue to be under her personal supervision.

For a Permanent Jewish Court of Arbitration.

A conference was held yesterday (Thursday) afternoon at the Hotel McAlpin for the purpose of laying the foundation for a permanent Jewish Court of Arbitration in this city. Dr. Samuel Buchler is honorary secretary of the movement and Mr. Louis Richmond executive secretary. A court is now functioning regularly in this city. At each session a rabbi, a justice and a business man compose the court and selections are made from the following:

Rabbis—B. Fleischer, J. E. Fried, S. L. Hurwitz, B. Z. Pearl, M. H. Rabinowitz, A. A. Yudelowitch.
Justices—William Blau, Morris Eder, Samson Friedlander, Louis D. Gibbs, Edgar J. Lauer, Jacob Panken, Jacob S. Strahl.

Business Men—Jacob Cohen, Arthur Concors, Elias Diamond, Lewis Dorfman, M. Fisher, Israel Friedkin, M. Jacobs, A. L. Katlin, T. Krainin, Joseph Smolensky.
The following lawyers have volunteered to serve the court: Samuel Buchler, Sol Friedland, Jonah J. Goldstein, Gustave Hartman, Emanuel Hertz, Samuel Markewich, Solomon Sufrin, Irwin Untermeyer.

Tremont Temple Bazaar.

Extremely brilliant was the successful opening of the long heralded bazaar of the Sisterhood of the Tremont Temple held in the new building on Monday evening, April 26. An opening prayer by Dr. Ranson and brilliant speeches by prominent men, cleverly introduced by Mr. Seymour Mork, added much to the attractiveness of the booths which, like the entire interior of the building, were spotlessly white. They were labeled aprons, cafe, candies, dolls, domestic science, groceries, gents' furnishings, handkerchiefs, novelties, towels, waists, etc., etc. "The Country Store" was there and the wheels of fortune were always revolving. Hand-some Egyptian maidens offered "sinkers" to the ever changing crowd, many of whom were made happy by winning the gorgeous things that were raffled from time to time.

The chairlady, Mrs. Goldsmith Hahn, and her efficient staff of assistants, are entitled to much of the credit for the success of the bazaar which will close tomorrow night with a dance.

A chain is as strong as its weakest link, and so a motor car is as weak as its tires—in fact poor tires are the bane of all autoists and many a trip which started out as a pleasure trip has degenerated into just the opposite through faulty tire equipment. If you want good tires and tubes for your car get them from Maurice M. Stone, No. 420 Main street, New Rochelle, N. Y. His slogan "Stone's Tires and Tubes Wear Like the Name" is comprehensive and you will find them to do just that. Mr. Stone also carries a complete assortment of auto supplies and accessories. He does not say that his goods are the cheapest, but he does say that they are the best value for the money.

WHAT IS "HONESTY"?

By Rev. Ezekiel Jacobson.

No legacy is so rich as honesty.—Shakespeare.
 The shortest and surest way to live with honor in the world is to be in reality what we would appear to be. And if we observe, we shall find that all human virtues increase and strengthen themselves by the practice and experience of them, and all other knowledge is hurtful to him who has not honesty and good nature; and he who says there is no such thing as an honest man is himself a knave. True honesty takes into account the claims of God as well as those of man; it renders to God the things that are God's, as well as to man that are man's. Therefore, let honesty be the breath of thy soul; then shalt thou reach the point of thy happiness, and independence shall be thy shield and buckler, thy helmet and crown; then shall thy soul walk upright, nor stoop to the silken wretch because he hath riches, nor pocket an abuse because the hand which offers it wears a ring set with diamonds. It is with honesty in one particular as with wealth; those that have the thing care less about the credit of it than those who have it not. What passes as open-faced honesty is often masked malignity. When anyone complains, as Diogenes did, that he has to hunt the streets with candle at noonday to find an honest man, we are apt to think that his nearest neighbor would have quite as much difficulty as himself in making the discovery. If you think there isn't an honest man living, you would better, for appearance sake, put off saying it until you are dead yourself. Honesty is the best policy, but those who do honest things merely because they think it good policy are not honest. No man has ever been too honest. Cicero believed that nothing is useful that is not honest. He that walketh uprightly walketh surely, but he that perverteth his ways shall be known.
 There is an alchemy in a high heart which transmutes other things to its own quality. Honesty is the best policy. But no man can be upright amid the various temptations of life unless he is honest for the right's sake. You should not be honest from the low motive of policy, but because you feel the better for being honest. The latter will hold you fast, let the element set as it will, let storms blow ever so fiercely; the former is but a cable of pack thread, which will snap apart. In the long run, character is better than capital. Most of the great merchants whose revenues outrank those of princes owe their colossal fortunes principally to a character for integrity and ability. Lay the foundations of a character broad and deep. Build them on a rock and not on sand. The rains may then descend, the floods rise and the winds blow, but your house will stand. But establish a character for loose dealings, and lo! some great tempest will sweep it away. The religious tradesman complains that his honesty is a hindrance to his success; that the tide of custom pours into the doors of his less scrupulous neighbors in the same street, while he himself waits for hours idle. My brother, do you think that God is going to reward honor, integrity and high mindedness with this world's coin? Do you fancy that He will pay spiritual excellence with plenty of custom? Now consider the price that man has paid for his success. Perhaps mental degradation and inward dishonor. His advertisements are all deceptive; his treatment of his workmen tyrannical; his cheap prices made possible by inferior articles. Sow that man's seed and you will reap that man's harvest. Cheat, lie, advertise, be unscrupulous in your assertions, custom will come to you; but if the price be too dear, let him have his harvest, and take yours. Yours is a clear conscience, a pure mind, rectitude within and without. Will you part with that for his? Then why do you complain? He has paid his price; you do not choose to pay it.

 Some in their passion for sudden accumulation, practice secret frauds, and imagine there is no harm in it, so they are not detected. But in vain will they cover up these transgressions, for God sees it to the bottom, and let them not hope to keep it always from man. The birds of the air sometimes carry the tale abroad. In the long web of events be sure your sin will find you out. He who is carrying on a course of latent corruption and dishonesty, be he president of some mammoth corporation, or engaged only in private transactions, is sailing in a ship like that fabled one of old, which ever comes nearer and nearer to a magnetic mountain that will at last draw every nail out of it. All faith in God and all trust in man will eventually be lost and he will get no reward for his guilt. The very winds will sigh forth his iniquity, and like a partridge hatching what it had not laid is he that getteth riches and not by right he shall leave them in the midst of the days, and at his end shall be base (Jeremiah 16:11).
 Strict honesty is the crown of one's early days. "Your son will not do for me," was once said to a friend of mine. "He took pains the other day to tell a customer of a small blemish in a piece of goods." The sales boy is sometimes virtually taught to declare that goods cost such or such a sum; that they are strong, fashionable, perfect, when the whole story is false. So is the bloom of a God-inspired truthfulness not seldom brushed from the cheek of our simple-hearted children. We hope and trust these cases are rare, but even one of such houses as we allude to may ruin the integrity and the fair fame of many a youth. God grant our young men to feel that "an honest man is the noblest work of God" and under all temptations to live as they feel. The possession of the principle of honesty is a matter known most intimately to the man and his God and fully only to the latter. Rabbah said: When one stands at the judgment seat of God the first question asked is, "Hast thou been honest in all thy dealings?" On the great day of account it will be found that men have erred more in judging of honesty of others than in any one thing else, not even religion excepted. Many who have been condemned and had the stigma of dishonesty fixed upon them, because misfortune disabled them from paying their just debts will stand acquitted by the Judge of quick and dead, whilst others cover dishonest hearts and actions, undetected by man. No man knows the extent and strength of his own honesty until he has passed the fiery ordeal of temptation. Men who shudder at the dishonesty of others at one time in life, then sailing before the favorable wind of prosperity, when adversity overtakes them, their honesty too often flies away on the same winds with their riches, and what they once viewed with great horror, they now practice with shameless impunity. Others at the commencement of a prosperous career are quite above any tricks in trade, but their love of money increases with their wealth their honesty relaxes, they become hard, honest men, then hardly honest, and are finally confirmed in dishonesty. It is a sad state of things when the confiding are laughed at for their simplicity, and overreached because they are not adepts in the tricks of trade. To say that these arts have become necessary is to justify an evil on the ground of its prevalence. For all the purposes of general trade they are useless, for while they may impose on some, their very existence puts most men on their guard, and thus they defeat themselves. Let all remember that the curse of God rests on dishonest gains; they are often blasted in this world, and bring an everlasting blight on the soul. How can a man be profited in gaining the world at such an expense! The truth of the good old maxim that "Honesty is the best policy" is upheld by the daily experience of life. Uprightness and integrity being found as successful in business as in everything else. As Hugh Miller's worthy uncle used to advise him, "In all your dealings give your neighbor the cast of the bank—good measure, heaped up, and running over—and you will not lose by it in the end."

 God only looks to the pure, not to the full hands.—Liberius.

Sailing to Aid in Near East Relief.
 Miss Rose Klombers, 566 West 162d street, and Miss Leah Kolker, 152 East 110th street, will sail for Constantinople on May 15 for special duty with the Near East Relief.

Miss Klombers has already had several years of foreign service. For a year she was supervising nurse under the Zionist organization at Jerusalem, and organized a nurses' training school there, as well as several clinics. Previous to that she was in charge of social service work in the New York Health Department for four years. She is a graduate of the Lebanon Hospital.

Miss Kolker has done special work with the Anti-Tuberculosis Society in Cincinnati and three years' social work in the medical department of the Jewish Charities in St. Louis. She has also been a nurse in the U. S. Army.

The campaign for $175,000 to build and furnish a home for the Nashville (Tenn.) Y. M. H. A. is meeting with success. Mr. Joseph S. Eskind and his sons have given $5,000 towards the project.

"Borden's Milk, from cows in clover, Makes us kids feel good all over."

This rhyme was written by little David Seliger, who knows that the Glass of Borden's rich, pure, wholesome milk which he drinks each day is doubtless the reason why he plays such good baseball and hits the ball over the fence. BORDEN'S MILK is a safe and dependable food for children.

Menorah Symposium at Columbia.

A student symposium will be held under the auspices of the Menorah IntersVarsity Council of New York City on Sunday evening, May 2 at Earl Hall, Columbia University (117th street and Broadway), on the vital and interesting subject "The Synagogue in American Jewish Life. Has It Outlived Its Usefulness?" Dr. Abraham A. Neuman of the Dropsie College, Philadelphia, will preside and act as critic. Menorah members representing the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia, City College, New York University, Adelphi and Hunter will participate in the discussion and present the following aspects of the situation:—The History and Function of the Synagogue, The Orthodox Viewpoint, The Conservative Viewpoint, Reform Judaism, The Free Synagogue, The Institutional Synagogue, The Ethical Culture Society and The Community Church. The meeting will begin at 8:15 sharp. Dr. Neuman will be presented by Charles Mantinband, field director of the Intercollegiate Menorah Association. The public is invited.

Jewish Politics in Sieben Bergen.

Bucharest. (By I. J. P. B.)—The Jews of this former Hungarian province, now under Roumania, have formally demanded Jewish national minority rights. This new policy is favorably greeted in a special article by the local "Kronstadter Zeitung." It says that Jewish politics of the past have made many enemies among the other nationalities of this province, and have not even won the friendship of the Magyars, whom their policies supported. This newspaper expresses the hope that the Jews will persist in this national political attitude and will not become futile Roumanian patriots as they were Hungarian until now. Only thus will the Jews gain the respect and friendship of the other peoples in the province.

That the Jews of Sieben Bergen are earnest in their new demands and political stand is well brought out by the statement of their Central Zionist Committee, located in Clausenburg (Clus). No less than 95 per cent. of the Jewish population have already declared themselves Zionists and have enrolled as members of the Jewish National Party.

A weekly periodical, "Uj Kelt," is now being issued in support of the Nationalist movement and preparations are now being made to publish a daily newspaper with a Hebrew page. The Jewish School Society is undertaking the establishment of Hebrew kindergartens in the whole province. The first Hebrew gymnasium is already established in Tennesvar. A lack of good Hebrew teachers is impairing the educational work of the society. But, according to the program which the organization has worked out, it is hoped that in a period of ten to fifteen years all Jewish children will be able to get a thorough Jewish national training.

Large sums of money have already been granted the School Society for its work by the Jewish population.

Ex-Premier Scheidemann on Anti-Semitism.

Kassel. (By I. J. P. B.)—In the local city assembly one of the members inquired what that legislative body intended to do about the Jew-baiting propaganda which is spreading in the city. To this ex-Premier Scheidemann, now the Mayor of Kassel, replied that he was absolutely opposed to propaganda of any kind in the schools, whether it be social, political or religious. He would adopt all possible measures to stem out this vile influence.

The ex-Premier was answered by two school teachers who demand so-called liberty for the schools. One of these declared that Scheidemann is an anti-Semite, and casually reminded the assembly that in a polemic with Maximilian Harden, Scheidemann slurred his opponent's Jewish ancestry.

Scheidemann, with much earnestness and passion, said that it was a libel to call him an anti-Semite. For the last twenty years he has been carrying on a constant unmitigated warfare against anti-Semites, and has succeeded in totally annihilating many of them politically. He admitted that in a polemic with Harden he reminded the latter of his Jewish descent, but contended that he did not do so out of disrespect to the Jews but rather out of feeling for them. Harden is a man who voluntarily renounced the faith of his people and cast off his Jewish name to masquerade under a new cloak. It was this dishonorable conduct which he desired to exploit in his polemic in order to stamp his opponent. Persons who cast off their own birthright and individuality and mask themselves can never hold the respect of honorable men, whether these be Jews or Christians.

Colonel Harry Cutler is Decorated by French Republic.

Providence (By I. J. P. B.)—In recognition of his services during the war as chairman of the National Jewish Welfare Board, Colonel Harry Cutler of this city has been decorated with a gold medal of honor by the Government of the French Republic.

The medal, together with a diploma signed by ex-President Poincare, and Minister Stephen Pichon, was received by Col. Harry Cutler today. Both the medal and the diploma were transmitted through General Collardet, military attaché of the French Embassy at Washington.

The main consideration in selecting a pharmacist is confidence in his ability and in his accuracy in compounding prescriptions, and if ever there was a record calculated to instill confidence in the intending customer it is the record attained by Dr. A. Lichtermann, whose up-to-date pharmacy is located at North avenue, directly opposite the High School, New Rochelle, N. Y.

In his 17 years in the drug business Dr. Lichtermann has been employed by some of the largest concerns in the world. At an examination held for pharmacists in the city of New York out of 175 applicants just 50 passed the examination and he was at the head of this list. Those pharmacists were to be employed by the Bellevue and allied hospitals. He was appointed as food and drug inspector of the Health Department after a competitive examination and it was his duty to inspect all the drug stores in Manhattan (2,000). Dr. Lichtermann received a letter of commendation from Commissioner Copeland for the excellent work he did and was chosen to compound a difficult prescription for the commissioner's personal use. Surely this is a record to be proud of and worthy of consideration by all.

Wadsworth Cases

FOR FINE WATCHES

An interesting feature of this case, and of all Wadsworth strap cases, is the detachable pin bar (obtainable only in Wadsworth cases) which permits of easy replacement of the strap.

Simply press down the plunger in pin bar (see illustration to right) with an ordinary pin and the strap slips off, as shown. A new strap can be sewed its entire length before being put on the case. This eliminates the necessity of sewing the strap onto the case itself, which often results in damage to both case and movement, and delay and inconvenience to the owner.

Refinements that lend utility —and beauty—to your watch

A SIMPLE THING—this detachable strap—but it is little things like this that add to the utility and appearance of your watch. And Wadsworth has contributed many such refinements to the making of watch cases.

For instance, Wadsworth popularized wrist watches for women by making them very attractive through the introduction of the odd shape in filled as well as gold cases, and by adding beautiful decorations of engraving and hand chasing. The old art of enameling was introduced on filled cases by Wadsworth. Likewise the use of green gold for filled cases was introduced and added by Wadsworth to give variety and added beauty.

So to Wadsworth is due much of the credit for the development of style and artistic beauty in cases. For thirty years Wadsworth has been making cases for the watch movements of leading manufacturers and importers. Many of the most beautiful, most popular designs with which you are acquainted are Wadsworth creations.

When you buy a watch, select any standard movement that your jeweler recommends and have him "dress" it in a Wadsworth case. The name Wadsworth in a watch case is your guarantee of correctness and beauty of design—of highest quality materials and best workmanship.
