An Old-Fashioned Romance

By ETHEL TAUROG.

The old grandmother sat on a bench in the park under a large shade tree. A black flowered kerchief covered her head, and was carefully knotted under her chin. She looked over my shoulder at the book I was reading.

"A romance?" she asked.

I nodded.

"When I was a young girl we did not know anything about books with romances. Maybe there weren't any then; but that I can't tell you because I don't know."

"Surely, there were romances then," I asserted. "There have always been romances."

"Maybe," replied the grandmother. "But, you will believe me, though we knew nothing about romances, there was a romance right in our family."

"Really!" I ejaculated.

"If you're not ashamed to sit and listen to an old woman with a kerchief, I will tell you a true romance which I saw with my own eyes and in which I myself had a little part."

The grandmother folded her hands in her lap and thought for a few moments before she began her tale.

"I myself came from a small town in Russia, where my parents and my grandparents and my great grandparents were born. My great grandfather was Rabbi Ephraim, and there was not his equal in the whole province. Naturally his sons and his grandson—my father—were also learned; but my father was not a rabbi, and with him the long chain of rabbis in our family ended. My father had no sons, only three daughters. You can understand that my father was anxious to get as a husband for his oldest daughter, my sister Rebecca, a well-learned and a pious youth.

"My sister Rebecca was fifteen and a half years old when matchmakers began to come to our house with different kinds of brilliant matches for her. For, let me tell you, besides the name of our family and my father's wealth, which meant a fat dowry for Rebecca, my sister was renowned for her beauty. Sometimes, when a matchmaker was locked in a room with my father, Rebecca and I used to creep up to the door and listen to the virtues of the match which was being proposed.

"However, matchmakers came and went, for my father was difficult to suit. This Rebecca considered very fortunate, for at that time she had already met Samuel.

"I told you, I believe—and if I didn't tell you I will tell you now—that the house in which we lived was a double house, and a heritage from my grandfather—my father's father. In one-half of the house we lived and in the other half lived our Aunt

Goldie, a sister of our father, with her husband and their three sons. The oldest of the sons, Pinchus, was a year younger than our Rebecca. Pinchus, our Aunt Goldie said, did not have the head for becoming a rabbi, so she wanted him to become a merchant. 'In order to be a successful merchant in these modern times,' our Aunt Goldie said, 'a man must know how to write a Russian letter and how to read a Russian letter; and,' she said, 'in order to learn how to read a Russian letter and how to write a Russian letter, they say that it is necessary to learn grammatique. Where,' she asked, 'can he learn grammatique?' As luck would have it, somebody that heard this question recommended to Aunt Goldie a teacher who knew the grammatique. So a teacher began to come to Aunt Goldie's son, Pinchus, to teach him grammatique so that he should be able to write a big and brown, and when he looked at one the heart began to beat strangely. So much fire there was in his look. When I came home I could not tell my sister Rebecca enough about Samuel, the teacher. My mother overheard me and reprimanded me sharply.

"A girl," she said, "does not look at strange young men. If any one should hear of it the disgrace would be great."

not enter her mind that she could find an excuse for going into Aunt Goldie's house to see the teacher.

"Well I asked Rebecca when she returned from my aunt's house with a chopping bowl which we neither wanted nor needed.

"A young man like all young men," she replied; but it seemed to me that she did not mean it. And this is where the romance begins.

"One day I was sent into Aunt Goldie's house to return something we had borrowed. I happened to pass close by the table where my cousin Pinchus sat with Samuel, the teacher. A book dropped to the floor. Samuel, the teacher, stooped to pick it up, and so did I. When he had picked up the book I noticed a folded letter on the floor. I saw the words, 'To Rebecca,' written on it in ink. There was no other Rebecca in the whole house, and not even in the whole street in which we lived, except our Rebecca. I crushed the letter in my hand, and feeling that my face was burning, I ran into our house and gave the letter to my sister. And so it was that I became, like you say here, a letter carrier; and there was not a day that I did not bring a letter to my sister Rebecca from Samuel, the teacher, or a letter to Samuel, the teacher, from my sister Rebecca.

"How long this letter writing went on I cannot tell you exactly. Who knows how long it would have gone on if my father had not come back from another town, where he had gone on business, with some great news.

"Well, my daughter," said my father to Rebecca, "I have found for you a husband whose equal you won't find in all Russia. God luck to you and good luck to all of us. The engagement will take place in three weeks—on the first day of the month."

"When he had finished saying that Rebecca, the bride, got as pale and white as a sheet of paper, and tears filled her big black eyes.

"It is from sudden joy," my mother said.

"When Rebecca and I were left alone she said firmly: 'I will not marry this man that our father has found for me without asking me. I will marry Samuel, the teacher, and no one else.' Then she gave me a

Goldie, a sister of our father, with her husband and their three sons. The oldest of the sons, Pinchus, was a year younger than our Rebecca. Pinchus, our Aunt Goldie said, did not have the head for becoming a rabbi, so she wanted him to become a merchant. 'In order to be a successful merchant in these modern times,' our Aunt Goldie said, 'a man must know how to write a Russian letter and how to read a Russian letter; and,' she said, 'in order to learn Russian letter and read a Russian letter. The teacher's name was Samuel.

"I remember the first time I saw him. I went to borrow a pestle for our mortar (our maid had broken ours), and I saw a strange young man sitting at a table with Pinchus, Aunt Goldie's son, and on the table there were books. I stood there and could not take my eyes off him, so handsome he was. His hair was brown like a nut, and his eyes were

"Of course, I took care after that to talk to my sister about Samuel, the teacher, when no one was near to listen. For I found many excuses, for going into my Aunt Goldie's house.

"My sister Rebecca listened to me lightly and told me openly she did not believe that this teacher was so remarkable.

"Go and look at him yourself, then," I told her angrily. And, will you believe it, up to that time it did letter to take to Samuel, the teacher.

"I made up my mind to tell my mother about Rebecca's intention to marry the teacher; but when the engagement was celebrated and I saw the groom whom my father had chosen for my sister—a thin youth, with stooped shoulders and a foolish smile—and when I thought of Samuel, the teacher, with his beautiful brown eyes and his kind smile, I felt that if I were Rebecca I would run away with Samuel, the teacher, even to the end of the world.

"Rebecca took the gifts that the groom gave her. The wedding was arranged for four weeks later. In those days we did not wait very long after the engagement to celebrate the wedding. Dressmakers began to make clothes for the bride. A week before the wedding hired cooks and other women began to help prepare for the wedding feast from early in the morning until late at night. A wedding then, you must know, lasted for a week, and sometimes longer. I will leave it to you to imagine all the excitement in our house the last week before the wedding.

"Here, my golden little sister," said Rebecca to me, handing me a letter for Samuel, the teacher. "For what you have done for me I will never forget you."

"In that note, the last one I ever carried from my sister to Samuel, the teacher, they had made the plan for running away.

"The day before the wedding a woman dressed in the clothes of one of the cooks, her whole face covered as if she had the toothache, slowly walked past my father and out into the street. Nobody paid any attention to the woman except I, who had climbed up to the attic and was looking out of the window. I suppose you have already guessed that the woman was Rebecca. She looked back once at the house and nodded her head. I stayed up there until I could hear the rumbling of the wheels of the wagon no longer. Then I wiped my eyes, and went down into the house.

"What else should I tell you? The weeping and the wailing and the seeking that went on when it was found that Rebecca was gone I leave to you to imagine. It was the first and only time I saw my father cry.

"Even when Rebecca wrote to us and said that she had a little son whom she had named Ephraim, after our great grandfather, my father did not go to see her. But my mother went, and I went with her. She wasn't rich, but her husband, Samuel, worked night and day, teaching, writing letters for business people and reckoning up accounts, and he made a living for her. And as much as he made, Rebecca was happy. I used to get letters often from her. But now I haven't received a letter for such a long time. It is hard to get letter from Russia. Her letters used to bring back to me those times when I was a child and when I carried those letters from my sister Rebecca to Samuel, the teacher."

The old woman knotted her kerchief more firmly under her chin and smiled reminiscently at those romantic days of her youth.

Jewish Rights in the Newly Published Peace Treaties.

The publication of the constitution of the Republic of Czecho-Slovakia and the treaties with Turkey and Bulgaria, copies of which have just reached this country, sheds new light on the work and achievements of the delegation from the American Jewish Congress to the Peace Conference at Versailles.

The constitution of Czecho-Slovakia shows that in addition to minority rights which have been secured for the Jews in all of the new and enlarged states, the Jews of Czecho-Slovakia have received practically complete national rights in all aspects.

Part IV of the Turkish Treaty, dealing with "Protection of Minorities," assures full and complete protection of life and liberty to all inhabitants of Turkey, without distinction of birth, nationality, race or religion. It further safeguards by special provision "the civil and political rights of minorities, the free use of their language and the right to establish educational, religious and charitable institutions, and their ecclesiastical and scholastic autonomy."

Right Hon. Herbert Samuel and His Palestine Commissionership—Twenty-first Annual Convention of the English Zionist Federation—Delegates From All Parts of the Country Present—Striking Speech by Dr. Weizmann—Lord Rothschild and the Right of Free Speech, Free Thought, Free Expression in Print and in Writing, and the Right to Live in Comfort in the New Palestine—Palestine Restoration Fund Amounts to $305,000—Palestinian Delegate Urges Desirability of Cultivating Hebrew Among Jewish Children.

London, June 4, 1920.

The Right Honorable Herbert Samuel leaves on June 20 for Palestine to take up his position as Chief Commissioner. The appointment, the official announcement of which is expected shortly, will relieve General Allenby of the administration of Palestine, as the High Commissioner will be responsible directly to the British Government. At present there is a Chief Military Administrator under General Allenby in command. Mr. Samuel will proceed to build up the civil government. It is understood that the details of the mandate are now being worked out. This cannot speedily be done, particularly as the delicate question of boundaries has yet to be settled.

The twenty-first annual conference of the English Zionist Federation opened on May 30 at the Cannon Street Hotel, London. Dr. Weizmann, president of the council, presided, and among those present were Lord Rothschild, M. Sokolow, the Rev. J. K. Goldbloom and Rabbi Dr. Samuel Daiches. Delegates from all parts of the United Kingdom were present. In reply to questions after the opening speeches, the president gave information on some important points. He said that the estimate of emigration to Palestine within the next twelve months ranged from 25,000 to 30,000 people, but when the schemes of electrification and irrigation were undertaken the number of workmen of all kinds for whom provision would have to be made would be from 50,000 to 60,000. What would happen in four or five years afterwards it was not for him to foretell. The administration would be British and not Jewish, and would begin on July 1 next, whether the Treaty was signed or not. Jews might have economic control by arrangement with the government of the country, and it was probable that Jewish councils would be formed to regulate immigration. One cause of friction during the last two years was the Arab. The Arab ought to be made to understand that he would be carried along with the Jews in the development of Palestine, and any deflection from this policy would, he believed, be disastrous. As to the northern boundary, he did not think that the Litani River would be included, but they might possibly get the water for the purpose of the development of Palestine. The British Government had tried hard to get the river, but he doubted whether it would succeed.

In the speech in which he opened the proceedings the chairman said that after centuries of hard work and struggle for propagation of their ideas they stood before the world today with the charter of liberty in their hands. The 24th of April—the date of the San Remo decision—would always be a red letter day in Jewish history. One could discern three lines on which the reconstruction of Palestine was going to be made—agricultural, industrial and educational development. There were great stretches of unoccupied and uncultivated land in Palestine which belonged to the Turkish Government, but which now stood at the disposal of the mandatory powers. This land the Jewish agencies to be set up in Palestine proposed to develop as a settlement for Jewish colonies. There was room on the land for another 100 people per kilometer without encroaching on the ownership of those who were already established in Palestine, and this provision would satisfy the next four or five generations of Jews. The Jew was ready to become a peasant or an agricultural laborer on the fundamental condition that agriculture was raised to the status of a science and would assume the highest possible development. As to industrial development, Palestine fortunately was not a country which had very many natural resources. It was not rich in gold mines. He had heard of a gold mine having been discovered in Jerusalem, but he hoped that it was not true. Neither were there any oil wells; and, therefore, Palestine would never become a country which would attract the rapacious speculator. Palestine had a certain amount of water power, sufficient for the industries that would be developed and for the production of electricity.

Educational development, continued Dr. Weizmann, was so important that those who took care of immigration must see that the schools were developed tenfold and that secondary and higher schools were provided and a national university founded. The political conditions which would be laid down in the mandate were sufficiently strong and clear to admit of this development. Palestine would not attract international capital; but it would attract national capital, which would have to be found by Zionists in order to make it the home of the Jews. They hoped that very soon the ports and doors of Palestine would be open for immigration under British administration. He concluded by moving the following resolution:

"This annual conference expresses its gratitude to the Supreme Council for incorporating at San Remo on April 24, 1920, the Balfour Declaration in the Treaty with Turkey and for granting a mandate for Palestine to Great Britain; it puts on record its high appreciation of the illustrious service to the Jewish nation of the statesmen of the peoples of the Allied and associated governments which have collaborated in this memorable achievement; and it pledges itself that the Zion of England will spare no effort and no sacrifice for the reconstitution of Palestine as the Jewish national home."

Nahum Sokolow seconded the motion. Lord Rothschild, who was received with cheers, supported the motion. He said that there was something more needed in the reconstitution of Palestine than the three points indicated by the president. The right of man was needed, by which he meant free speech, free thought, free expression in print and in writing, and the right to live in comfort. It must be a national home in very truth—a home of peace and comfort and of the highest development of agriculture, which would show the rest of the world that their resources of science and energy were far from being exhausted. The motion was agreed to amid much enthusiasm.

At the opening of the second day's sittings it was announced that Dr. Weizmann, the retiring president, had been re-elected to that position. The chair was then taken by Joseph Cowen.

S. Goldreich stated that the subscriptions received in aid of the Palestine Restoration Fund, which was started after the conference of last year for the purpose of meeting current needs, amounted to $305,000. This fund, he explained, had been subscribed by less than 10 per cent. of the 300,000 Jews in this country, and was capable of great expansion. The fund was not connected with the big scheme which was being launched for the reconstruction of Palestine, and which would require to be at the outset twice as large as the Restoration Fund.

The report of the Jewish National Fund Commission for England stated that the fund was intended to start national colonization. Palestine had a very small percentage of Jewish population, and if the commonwealth was to become Jewish, the question of the ownership of land must be seriously considered. In the majority of the existing colonies, under private ownership, more than three-quarters of the labor employed was Arab; and if this state of affairs went on it would develop enormous evils.

Leon Simon, chairman of the Hebrew Committee, presided at the afternoon session. He said that the more practical work of the rebuilding of Palestine would not in itself be enough. The success of the experiment which they were undertaking in Palestine would depend upon the maintenance of close contact between Jewry in Palestine and Jewry elsewhere; and the Hebrew language would play an important part in maintaining that contact.

David Yellin, a Palestinian, who has been elected the vice-president of the Jerusalem Town Council and is a member of the Palestine delegation, read a paper in Hebrew urging the desirability of cultivating the language among Jewish children. Similar views were expressed by H. Zlatopolsky (of Russia), who also spoke in Hebrew.

A resolution was submitted by the Hebrew Committee asking the conference to decide, seeing that Hebrew education in England was not organized, that Zionists should establish an effective education committee, which should at once proceed to elaborate one program for all educational institutions, and that Zionists should call upon existing educational institutions to endeavor to establish schools for the young and evening classes for adults. The recommendation was agreed to.

The Jews of Denmark.

Copenhagen (By I. J. P. B.).—In 1922 it will be 300 years since the Jews first came to Denmark, and the Jews of that country are already planning to celebrate the anniversary in a fitting fashion. The Jews first settled in Denmark in 1622. Thirty-five years later, in 1657, the Jewish Kehillah of Copenhagen was founded. In 1814 the Jews were granted equal political rights, and since 1879 they played an important role in the affairs of the nation. The best known Jews of Denmark are the famous critic, Georg Brandes, and his brother, Edward Brandes, who served for a long time as a member of the Danish Cabinet.

According to the last census there were 8,000 Jews in Denmark, or about 4 per cent. of the whole population. Of these, 4,000 lived in Copenhagen. During the war there was a stream of Jewish immigration to Copenhagen, and the old figure is now probably doubled or trebled. The new Jewish influx has attracted the attention and interest of the Danish press, which is giving the newcomers and their problems serious and sympathetic consideration.

Plans for Permanent Congress.

In accordance with the resolutions adopted at the Conference of Delegates to the American Jewish Congress, which was held immediately upon the adjournment of the old congress, plans are being worked out by the Executive and Administrative committees of the new body for the organization of the whole of American Jewry on a democratic basis and in line with the precedent which has been set by the American Jewish Congress.

The permanent American Jewish Congress is to be made up of delegates to be chosen in general elections to be held under the auspices of local Jewish organizations and committees in all parts of the country. At the same time there will, as on the previous occasion, be given special representation to the large national and central organizations throughout the country.

The Executive Committee perfected its organization with Morris Rothenberg as chairman, Max Mitchell as treasurer and Bernard G. Richards as executive secretary at the meeting held on June 9, and made provision for the creation of an Administrative Committee to be in charge of all the immediate activities of the organization. The Administrative Committee, which met on June 11, elected Abraham S. Schomer as chairman and selected a number of standing committees which are to work out the different plans for the creation of the permanent American Jewish Congress.

Pending the establishment of the permanent American Jewish Congress the Provisional Organization for the American Jewish Congress as formed in Philadelphia, will through its Executive and Administrative committees, continue to work for the protection of Jewish rights in Eastern Europe as conditions make necessary, and will in this connection co-operate with the Committee of Jewish Delegates and other bodies abroad. The Committee on Jewish Rights, which is to have charge of the work done in furtherance of Jewish interests abroad, is made up of the following: Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, chairman; Julian W. Mack, Gustave Hartman, Joseph Baroness, Mrs. Joseph Fels, Julius I. Peyser, Max Shulman, Dr. Harry Friedenwald, Louis E. Kirstein. The constitution of the new body is to be formulated by a sub-committee of which Solon J. Liebeskind is chairman. The other members of this committee are as follows: Sol Schelinsky, Joel Enteen, Joseph Gross, Benjamin Koenigsberg, Leon Wolfson, Emanuel Newman, Maurice Avner and Israel B. Brodie.

The other committees named are made up of the following: Committee on Elections: Louis Lipsky, chairman; Max Stern, Meyer L. Brown, Solomon Sufirin, Jacob Dunn, Jacob Ginsburg, Morris Kramer, Ephraim Kaplan and Philip J. Shotland. Committee on Organization: Judge Leon Sanders, Louis Lipsky, Ad. D. Katcher, H. American Jewish Relief Committee Raises Over $4,000,000 in 1920. Non-Sectarian Campaign.

Over $4,000,000 has been raised by the American Jewish Relief Committee in its non-sectarian campaign for the relief of Jewish war sufferers from January 1, 1920, until June 30, according to a statement issued by Henry H. Rosenfelt, national director of the committee.

This includes the following campaigns: Los Angeles and Southern California, $250,000; Toronto and Ontario Province, $230,000; Washington, D. C., $75,000; Delaware, $155,000; Georgia, $250,000; Des Moines, Ia., $100,000; Sioux City, Ia., $66,000; St. Louis, Mo., $300,000; Joplin, Mo., $15,000; North Dakota, $75,000; Ohio, $1,438,000; Oklahoma, $230,000; Harrisburg (Pa.) district, $80,000; Utah, $50,000; Vancouver, B. C., $25,000; Wisconsin, $225,000, and Tennessee, $200,000.

The non-sectarian campaigns of the committee were extended to Canada this year. The Province of Ontario raised $230,000, while the total amount contributed by Toronto up to the present year was $9,163.80. For the first time in the history of Jewish war relief, both the Province of Ontario and the municipality of Toronto made official grants of $10,000 each to the committee. Widening the scope of the committee's work still further, Mr. Rosenfelt is arranging for campaigns in Cuba and Porto Rico this fall.

Sir Stuart Samuel Says Palestine, to Succeed, Must Have a Religious Foundation.

Sir Stuart Samuel, brother of the newly appointed High Commissioner for Palestine and himself a noted civic figure, is firmly convinced that Palestine must be rebuilt in the spirit of the Jewish Bible and traditions. In a recent address he said:

"The Jew has been sustained throughout the centuries only by his steadfast faith in the Bible. We today are the living examples of the truth of the Bible prophecies. We see an inspiring drama being enacted before our eyes, and now we are face to face with the realization of our dreams. It rests with us to lay the foundation of tolerance and humanity which are to find expression in the Jewish land. We must give examples of unity and loving kindness among ourselves; we must all work with our eyes turned towards Mizrah, towards the East. In Palestine of old our forefathers were actuated in their high principles by the Bible. Shall we prove traitors to our forefathers? Let us take and catch hold of their heritage and prove worthy of the holy trust."

Sir Stuart deplored the tendencies in certain quarters to belittle the importance of the Bible and the Jewish traditions in the regeneration of Jewish life in Palestine. Discussing the matter, he made the following striking declaration:

"Palestine would become an arid waste if the fountains of religion were stemmed and did not flow once more throughout the length and breadth of the land."

GINGER ALE

HERE'S a delightful, safe drink for children overheated by play—Clicquot Club Ginger Ale. Its bubbling, sparkling coldness makes an irresistible appeal to hot little throats. And the mildly stimulating warmth of its pure ginger content safeguards against too sudden chill.

Made of real Jamaica ginger, pure juices of lemons and limes, clean cane sugar, and clear, sweet spring water—carbonated. Serve plain or with any kind of fruit juices, as fancy dictates.

Buy Clicquot by the case from your grocer or druggist, and help the kiddies to it whenever they're hot and thirsty. Two large glassfuls in every bottle.

We observe that James Metcalfe, the celebrated editor of Life, has become a contributing editor of Judge. Does this imply that Judge is seeking the mantle of Life?

For the sake of the editor of The Scribe, of Portland, we wish to say that we have not as yet "hit the pipe." Nor is it our intention to become addicted to the use of opium. This assurance is needed because, forsooth, we do not and cannot "uphold" "American" Judaism, and so are charitably consigned to the users of "dope" by the oracular "moving finger" of Portland. Yes, were we to be purblind supporters of "American" Judaism our readers might well suspect that we had been "doped."

Statistics prove that out of 208 graduates of the Hebrew Union College 161 rabbis are still actively engaged in the work of the Jewish ministry. Not a bad record, although our orthodox and conservative seminaries have undoubtedly a better proportionate result to exhibit. And, really, the 161 "stickers" are not entitled to the order pour le merite for their persistency. They probably on the average did as well, if not better than, in the ministry in a financial sense as in almost any other field for which they were fit.

Reading the story of the life of Vladimir Jabotinsky, the Russian Zionist, who has filled so large a space in the recent incidental development of the movement associated with the name of Herzl, one feature is to our mind entirely admirable. We refer to Jabotinsky's realization that to the Jewish people must be fully and completely restored the Hebrew language. Had he proceeded one step—and a logical one at that—further and sought to restore their ancient religious traditions to our people he had been worthy to stand with the greatest figures of Jewry of all time.

On the 14th of the present month fifty years will have elapsed since the United Synagogue of London came into actual being by law, for on that date in 1870 the act of Parliament under which it has existed received the royal assent. The late chief rabbi, Dr. Nathan Marcus Adler, the father of Dr. Hermann Adler, his successor, who in turn was the predecessor of the present incumbent in this exalted post, may truthfully be called the father of the United Synagogue. In fact, Dr. Nathan Marcus Adler was the first chief rabbi in England who became a public figure in a wider sense. His predecessors as chief rabbis worked and were known only within their own community. Dr. Nathan Marcus Adler was the first of the chief rabbis who may be succinctly denominated shtadlonim.

We are not surprised that so many of our contemporaries the world over are devoting considerable of their editorial space to the Jewish policy of the hour in respect of Palestine. We are, as our readers have undoubtedly observed, paying close attention to the developments of this matter, for we regard it as the present supreme item of interest for the Jews of the universe. Still, this does not signify that, having discussed the Jewish Palestinian policy by and large, we must continue the subject in and out of season. On the contrary, the world Zionist Congress, now meeting in London, and the contemplated arrival of Sir Herbert Samuel in the Holy Land may be suffered to become part of Jewish history before we pursue the fascinating quest further.

Subscribers going away for the summer may have their papers transferred by notifying this office at least one week in advance. Be sure and send in your city address as well as your country address.

Correspondents and subscribers are notified that matter intended for the current issue of the HEBREW STANDARD must reach our office not later than Tuesday, 10 A. M. This rule will be strictly adhered to.

THE COMMUNITY VS. HENRY FORD.

WE regard it, as we have said, as the immediate, insistent duty of our community to fight Henry Ford, to answer in terms the false and dangerous anti-Semitic arguments he has dared advance through his agents, servants and employes of The Dearborn Independent. We must fight him, too, on his own ground and expose the flimsy and specious character of the charges he has hurled against us. What matters it that there are thirty-two hundred workers of our faith in the factories of Henry Ford's great organization; that, if goaded, this man may ruthlessly drive them from his employment; that calling him "names" will but stiffen his backbone to attack us? There is a time to speak, and this is the time. There is a time to speak forthright and unmistakably, and this is the time. We cannot, we must not, we dare not sit supinely by while Henry Ford (through his scribes) returns to the attack against us. We must meet him (through his scribes) on his own ground, and refute by careful citation of the true facts the silly and ridiculous statements leveled against the Jews.

Accordingly, we do not regard the attempt of the Anti-Defamation League of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith to reach an accord with Henry Ford on this matter as either useful or honorable. Useful, because thereby we shall be foreclosed once and for all from resting the Ford charges on their true foundations—ropes of sand. Honorable, because thereby Henry Ford will undoubtedly obtain the impression that the community fears him.

The only men who are strong enough to meet Henry Ford on his own ground, and thus utterly to confute his attacks on us, are such as are energetic, aggressive, progressive, creative, endowed with inflexible wills and able to size up existing situations correctly. If we leave our defense to whisperers, as it were, to such as have no virility, or if they possess it do not know how to exhibit this, we run dangers of incalculable extent. The good name of the community, of the Jews of the entire globe, is involved in this enterprise, and it, therefore, we must dedicate all our strength and the very best ability that is in us.

Two events in the present year are to be appropriately marked, in customary British fashion, by the United Synagogue of London: The one, to take place next week, marks the golden jubilee of the foundation of the institution. The other, to occur early next autumn, will signalize the departure of the Chief Rabbi on his projected pastoral tour of the British dominions and colonies. About the former tender memories cluster; the United Synagogue has, on the whole, meant much to Anglo-Jewry. The unfolding of the pastoral tour will be expectedly looked forward to and its outcome awaited with interest. At all events there is abundant justification for the two observances in question by the London body.

Because, following our never-to-be-forgotten founder, we persist in calling the grave and reverend Central Conference of American Rabbis the "annual picnic" we are solemnly convicted by The American Israelite of the crime of exhibiting Yiddish chutz pah. Terrible accusation. More terrible crime. Of course, the Central Conference is an extremely and worthwhile organization. Of a surety none in his more serious moments would dare dub it the "annual picnic." And yet, contemplating the fact that our circumambient atmosphere is stifling at the moment and that the Reform rabbis are instantly disporting themselves by the cool shore of Lake Ontario, what harm is caused by speaking of their foregathering as the "annual picnic"? We suspect that most of them regret that it happens only once a year—the "annual picnic."

The Salzberg Family Association, of Paterson, N. J., is the newest organization of its kind. It is designed to encourage a spirit of relationship among its members and to knit them more closely to one another. We believe there are not many organizations of this kind among our people, although a precedent for such exists in the family associations of the Rockefellers and other wealthy Americans. Whether the purpose be purely philanthropic, historical or genealogical, such associations have their undoubted use. Jewish families as a rule have long and honorable histories. A family association, for one thing, preserves solidarity. For another, it may sponsor an authoritative account of the family fortunes throughout the several generations thereof. At all events here is an interesting development of the beneficial corporation idea.

We do not know who suggested the thought to The New York Times that it is seriously contemplated to introduce formal instruction in religion into the public schools of this city. We note, however, that recently our neighbor dealt with the proposal in a careful editorial pronouncement, and criticized it from our own point of view. That is to say, the Times objected to this suggestion on the ground that instruction of this kind furnishes a complete departure from the traditional American attitude of that complete divorce between church and state which is so thoroughly grounded in our national polity. We rejoice that an organ of public opinion so powerful as The New York Times shares our thought on such a project. We hope the idea will never advance beyond the stage of Newspaper discussion. As a matter of fact, to our notion the question is not to be taken seriously. We can hardly believe that the Board of Education of this city would even countenance, much less contemplate, any proposal that has for its object so radical a change in the fundamentals of public instruction. Religious education is a necessity, but should be confined to the church and the home.

MOUNT ABARIM.

"Get thee up into this mount Abarim, and see the land which I have given unto the children of Israel. And when thou hast seen it, thou also shalt be gathered unto thy people, as Aaron thy brother was gathered." (Num. xxvii.)

IF you have created a beautiful dream, be content with it. If out of the fibre of your being you have woven the insubstantial texture of a great vision, colored it with the iridescence of your hope, stained it with your heart-blood and illumined it with the light of your soul, be satisfied. Be satisfied with the vision for its own sake, be content with the dream for its beauty. If something lives in you that is immortal, be not afraid to die with it. If the wings of your aspiration touch with their tips the high peaks of eternity, lost in the clouds of the yet-to-be, fear not the future. If there is a power within you that goes beyond time and place and the whole circumstance of earthly living, if your desire is so mighty as to defy, deny and decry death itself, why despair? Why ask for merely the possible, when the impossible is as possible to you?

Realisation? The inner realisation, before ever things are, before ever men see, before ever they can grossly enjoy the dream that has become fact: that is your need. When the dream has become fact, then alone can they grasp it in their belated fashion. And even then, what do they grasp? The fact alone, and not the dream—you dream—which still lies like a benediction, like dew upon the grass, on the solid fact. Does the noonday-sun take with it the dawn-beauty of the morning hour, its flush of hope, its happy promise? Yours the dawn-beauty—theirs the noon. Yours the fair promise, the thrill of unborn things sending their messages to the heart from the trembling edge of infinitude—theirs the compact satisfaction of fulfillment. Would you exchange this tender dawn-beauty for the broad glare and heat of the midday-hour? Would you live in the Now, rather than in the Morrow?

You must make your choice. And know that, once made, you cannot take back your decision. You must choose to which tribe you would belong: to the tribe of the angels who daily hymn the morn anew, or to the tribe of mortals living in a world of fact, moving along the highway from cradle to grave with heavy feet unwinged? You must choose between the dream and the fact, between the dawn and the day, between heaven and earth. Would you inherit two worlds? You cannot. 'Tis not the way of God with men. You cannot dwell with both God and men. Why? We know not. But it has ever been thus, and thus it will ever be. There are those who dream, who see—but not with their eyes; and there are those who do not dream, whose eyes are married to the light without and not to the light within; and it is these: these groundlings who lack inner illumination, these worldlings of the gross taste and the purblind sight, these uninspired, uninstructed, unrefined dust-clinging creatures of flesh and blood,—these alone are the ones to enjoy the actual fruit of great dreams; to see with blinking eyes what the Seer has beheld ere it was; to live with titillating senses what the Prophet has lived with thoughts and feelings and deathless desires alone.

Perhaps—though, who can penetrate the mystery?—perhaps the very quality that makes for the dreamer, the very capacity that refines his nature to the point where sight is other than a mere chemical function of the excited cell, unfits him for enjoyment. Were he of those whose life is suspended from the fingertips, who must needs touch the immediacies of existence in obscene contact, without being able to enclose within their soul the vastness of God's universal life, he would for that very reason be unfit to create out of the abysmally profound nothingness of his being the redeeming dream, the transforming vision. And God needs the Dreamer. For God Himself is the Great Dreamer; and He has set the Dreamer apart from all men, in order to build His own dreams out of the prophet's hopes and desires—if needs be, out of the prophet's pain and agony.

Yes, the prophet's agony. He is human enough, he is mortal enough, to feel the pain of wishing. To wish with all his might and main for some ideal, to throw the ardor of his prophetic soul into some grand cause, to wear the crown of divine election and walk among men as one lifted above the crowd: and then to feel that all this is more a burden than a blessing; to feel the sting of loneliness while passing through the teeming average mass; to feel the crown turn into a wreath of thorns, when all hopes are dashed within sight of the longed-for goal—aye, this is agony and mortal pain. To be permitted to reach the very border of the long-awaited-for fulfillment, and then to have the prize wrenched from the outstretched arms, only that it might be given to others who have not prayed, nor suffered, nor agonized for it—aye, this is the fierce testing of the greatest men, this is the lip-blanching ordeal feared by the most heroic heart!

Yet, not even the agony of vain wishing, the mortal anguish of prayers answered with rebuff, nothing, nothing, can change the divine decree. There is a Mount Abarim for every high aspiration. There is a frontier-line from which the greatest and best are turned away by the forbidding hand of a mysterious God. "Thus far and no further!" is the command that seals the death-sentence of the deathless. The usual satisfactions of the living are denied to the ever-living.

This alone is their satisfaction:—that out of their wishes a spirit rises that spreads glad wings towards the future; that out of their pains is born the joy that shall light up the life of millions with smiles and laughter; that they have given their dreams as the setting sun gives its afterglow, dying in the giving in order to bless a darkened world.

Thus it has ever been, and thus it ever will be: Some receive the Promise, others receive the Land. Or better still: Some are given to see the Promised Land, others—the Land of Promise.

THE RECOGNITION OF JEWISH NATIONALITY IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

By LEO HERRMANN.

Delegate of the Jewish National Council for Czecho-Slovakia to the Committee of the Jewish Delegations at the Peace Conference.

Jewish nationality has been recognized in the Czecho-Slovakian republic, and the recognition has been made irrevocable by the very constitution of the state. In its explanatory introduction to the new constitution of the state. In its explanatory introduction to the new constitution the Government has responded fully to the wishes and demands of the Jewish people by declaring that part of the Jewish population of the republic which feels itself to belong to the Jewish nation to be a fully privileged national minority possessing all the rights which are assured to such minorities by the special Peace Treaties concerning the protection of minorities.

This express recognition of the Jewish nationality in the constitution of one of the new European states created by the Peace Conference closes an eventful and important chapter in the modern history of the Jewish people.

As is well known, the question of Jewish nationality was already one of practical politics under the Austria-Hungarian monarchy. It was in Austria-Hungary that the attempts to obtain a definite national autonomy for the Jewish population first matured. However, it was not possible to bring into harmony the various ideas as to the best form for the recognition of Jewish nationality which were held in the nationalist Jewish circles of Galicia, Vienna and Bohemia; still less possible was it to overcome the determined opposition of the assimilationists throughout the monarchy, and to persuade the Government that it had no interest in refusing to the Jews the recognition of their Jewish nationality.

The same difficulties continued to beset the Jewish nationalists in Austria-Hungary during the war. The struggle for a national recognition assumed a different aspect when the monarchy was broken up and the separate states came into being. While the establishment of the Czecho-Slovakian state was still in preparation, there was formed in Prague the Jewish National Council, first from representatives of the Zionist and Poale Zion organizations, and later with the addition of representatives of the orthodox party, of the Jewish communities of Moravia and of the Slovakian Jews. The object of this body was to obtain recognition for Jewish nationality in the coming Czecho-Slovakian state, and to raise Judaism out of the rut of assimilation by securing to it its own cultural, social and political institutions.

Its first task was to unite at least the majority of the Jewish population in the new state in adherence to its program, and to obtain for that program the sympathy and support of the Czech people, its leading statesmen and its political parties. It had also to get into touch with the Jewish National Councils and congress delegates of other countries, in order, by a united demand to win the Peace Conference to the recognition and permanent international guarantee of the rights of the Jewish minority.

For gaining the adherence of the Jewish population of the Czecho-Slovakian state the prospects were highly favorable from the beginning. Perhaps nowhere was the policy of assimilation so bankrupt as in that state, since the assimilationists, in their blind chauvinism, had hitherto been chiefly on the side of the Germans against the Czechs and of the Hungarians against the Slovaks. The tables were now turned, and it was evident that the Jewish nationalist policy had been and would in future be not only the more upright but also the more prudent. Consequently, the program and the work of the Jewish National Council appealed to large circles of the Jewish population, and met scarcely anywhere with open opposition or contradiction, so that that body obtained a really authoritative position. The efforts of a small group of assimilationists who desired to be Czech Nationalists remained without effect; because the Czech people themselves did not take this group seriously. Thus the congress held by the Jewish National Council in Prague at the beginning of January, 1919, was able with the fullest right to speak in the name of the Jewry of the whole state, and to elect delegates to the congress of the Jewish National Councils, from which the committee of the Jewish delegations in Paris was subsequently developed, without any risk of being disavowed.

This at the same time opened up a prospect of winning the Czech people and its representatives for the national Jewish program. It was not very difficult to demonstrate to thinking and politically enlightened Czechs that, apart from all considerations of justice and honor, they would not gain anything even from the point of view of their own political interests if they compelled the Jews, as in the old Austria, to mix in the national struggles. But now the Czech people had learned from its own experience the fruitlessness and the senselessness of the policy of national oppression and forcible assimilation, with the result that it possesses, at any rate in the persons of its best citizens, a strong sense of justice and liberty which gives it an understanding of the point of view of the representatives of the Jewish people. Further, the spokesmen of the Czech people who had paved the way for its liberation and political independence during the war in foreign countries, President Masaryk and the minister for foreign affairs, Benesch, had been in close relations with the able and influential leaders of the American Zionists, and this fact also contributed to securing a favorable hearing for the Jewish nationalist claims.

Strong, therefore, in the confidence of the Jewish population and in the sympathy of the Czech people, the Jewish National Council sent its delegates to London and Paris, and through them took part in the formation of the committee of the Jewish delegations in Paris, and in the elaboration of its program, as formulated in the memorandum, laid before the Peace Conference.

When the treaty with Poland concerning the protection of national minorities was concluded in Paris, containing as it did two paragraphs devoted to the Jews, and placing all minorities including the Jewish, under the protection of the League of Nations, and when Clemenceau in his accompanying letter to Paderewski had stated expressly that the same treaty would be concluded with all the new states, it seemed that the program of the Jewish National Council for Czecho-Slovakia was practically realized. Just before Minister Benesch was about to sign the treaty concerning the protection of minorities, in the name of the Czecho-Slovakian republic, it was discovered that the special paragraphs mentioning Jewish rights were missing from this treaty. This seemed to show that there was a danger that the protection accorded to minorities might be lost precisely by the Jews, who through the Committee of Delegations had been most instrumental in establishing the principle not only for themselves but for all minorities. The Jewish National Council in Prague sent a special delegation to Paris which consulted with the committees of the Jewish Delegations and entered into negotiations with the leader of the Czech people at the Peace Conference. Minister Benesch, in order to get the same paragraphs which fixed the Jewish rights in the treaty with Poland, inserted in the treaty which was to be signed by the Czecho-Slovakian republic. The latter, however, declared that the republic which he represented had no need to be compelled to fulfill its pledges to the national minorities, where the Jewish minority was concerned. The Jewish minority would obtain the recognition it desired in the constitution of the republic.

This assurance has now been fulfilled, and it can be recorded with gratitude that this is largely due to the personal efforts of President Masaryk and Minister Benesch, who have carried out the promise which they gave the Jewish people and its representatives in Paris. Soon after his return from Paris Benesch stated in the Czecho-Slovakian National Assembly that the protection of minorities should be applied to Jews also. A little while before the Government submitted the new constitution to the National Assembly, that body passed a resolution which showed that the Czech people was ready to recognize Jewish nationality spontaneously without any compulsion being applied by the government. At the sitting of Feb. 19th of this year the deputy Professor F. Kreici submitted in the name of the education committee a report on a petition presented by the Jewish Teachers' Congress of Olmutz for recognition of the right of the Jews to their own school system. The speaker maintained that the Assembly had no right to refuse the recognition of the Jewish minority demanded by the Jewish National Council on the principle of self-determination. Since as an actual fact a portion of the Jews declared themselves to belong to the Jewish nation, the existence of the Jewish national minority could not be denied in the sphere of practical politics, and therefore the Jews must be granted the right to create their own school system according to the provisions laid down in the Peace Treaty for all national minorities. A resolution to this effect was passed by the National Assembly.

More significant, however, is the fact that the Jewish minority has now been recognized as a Jewish nationality in the constitution which was submitted by the government to the National Assembly and accepted by it on Feb. 28.

The form in which the recognition is made is as follows: In the sixth chapter of the constitution are formulated the regulations for carrying out within the state the international obligations undertaken by the Czecho-Slovakian republic. Paragraphs 128-132 of this chapter deal with the protection of minorities. In these paragraphs the Jewish National Council and the Jews altogether are not mentioned, as the treaty of Versailles signed by the Czecho-Slovakian republic does Polish Drama Incites to Pogroms.

Warsaw (By I. J. P. B.).—A riot broke out during the opening performance of Zheromsky's anti-Semitic play, "Over the Snow." When the heroine, in a "patriotic" declamation of the third act, cried out, "Enough of the Jewish government!" the whole Polish audience got up and cheered. The protests of the Jews that were present were greeted with yells of "Throw out these Bolsheviks!" Immediately a panic broke out. The anti-Semites left their seats and rushed toward the Jews. A number of Jews were badly beaten and some Jewish women had their clothes torn off their bodies.

The Polish students recognized in the play a new means of satisfying their savage passions. Several hundred of them gathered before the theatre, formed a line and beat every Jew that passed. Then they marched to the Jewish theatre, where they attacked the unsuspecting people as they left the theatre.

Jews Excluded From Polish Tenant League.

Warsaw (By I. J. P. B.).—At a general meeting of the Tenant League of Miodova Street, Warsaw, it was decided to exclude the Jewish members. Since, according to the organization's constitution, members could be expelled for ethical reasons only, the Polish majority decided to change the name of the organization to the Society of Christian Tenants, and thus excluded the Jews.

Descendants of Spanish Marannos Found in Balearian Islands.

Madrid (By I. J. P. B.).—In Mallorca, one of the Balearian islands, a small colony of descendants of the Jews who were driven out of Spain in the latter part of the fifteenth century and fled to the island is still to be found. Although several centuries have already passed and their religious absorption into the Catholic faith has become complete, they are still a distinct element of the population and retain some of the ancient customs of their Jewish forefathers.

Somehow the tradition of their ancestry has followed not only them, but their neighbors as well, throughout the many generations. They are called "Chuetas" and are looked down upon by their fellow Catholics. Marriage with one of them is considered a mesalliance, and so they marry very largely among themselves. The "Chuetas" think themselves good Catholics and scorn any intimation of their Jewish origin. They are, in fact, more fanatical and bigoted than the other Catholics, and many of them become monks and nuns. In profession they are mainly jewelers.

Jewish Editors Imprisoned for Publishing Facts.

Lodz (By I. J. P. B.).—Israel and Lezer Kahan, brothers and joint editors of the Lodz Volkszeitung, have been sentenced to two months imprisonment by the local military court for reprinting an article from "Das Neue Leben" of Bialistok. The article, called "A Silent Pogrom," stated that the Food Administration of Bialistok was deliberately starving the Jewish community by not assigning it the proportional amount of food. "Agitation against State authorities" and the "incitation of one part of the population against the other" were the charges upon which the editors were convicted.

Summer Resort Accepts Anti-Semites Only.

Vienna (By I. J. P. B.).—A record in anti-Semitic fanaticism and bigotry was scored by a summer resort at Mattsee, near Salzburg. This summer resort advertised in the newspapers that only professed anti-Semites of non-Jewish descent would be accepted as guests. In other words, it excluded not only Jews, but also all Christians who were not avowed anti-Semites, and all apostate Jews of anti-Semitic tendencies.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

ELAZAR AND ITHAMAR.

Dear Children:
 You have noted and admired Aaron's noble resignation and silence in the great calamity that befell him and the loss of his two beloved sons, and how the Lord rewarded him for it by speaking to him alone. After that occurred Moses spoke unto Aaron and unto Elazar and unto Ithamar, his sons, that were left. Rashi says the words "that were left" are significant, and teach us that they survived from death, for upon them, too, the decree of death was pronounced because of the sin of the golden calf. As it is said, "And with Aaron was the Lord very angry." "Chashmido," to destroy him, and where "hashmada" is mentioned it means the destruction of the children and it is said "voashmid pirio," "but I destroyed his fruit from above" (Amos 2), but the prayer of Moses nullified half of the decree, as it is said, "And I prayed also for Aaron at the same time" (Deut. 10). Moses said to them, "Take ye the meat-offering." Although ye are mourners and the holy offerings are forbidden to a mourner (the meat-offering of the eighth day and that which Nachshon brought) and eat it unleavened, inasmuch as it was the meat-offering of the congregation and offered for this special occasion only, as such an offering was not to be brought by the coming generations. It was necessary to explain in reference thereto the law of other meat-offerings. And ye shall eat it in a holy place, because it is thy fixed portion, and the fixed portion of thy sons (but the daughters have no fixed portion in the holy offerings), for so have I been commanded that ye shall eat it though in mourning. "And the breast which hath been waved, of the peace-offering of the congregation, ye shall eat in a clean place." And the previous offerings, did they eat in an unclean place? How be it the previous offerings, which were very holy, it was peremptory upon them to eat them in a holy place, but these were not required to be eaten within the curtains but they were required to be eaten within the camp of Israel which was clean inasmuch as lepers were not allowed to enter there, hence it is inferred that offerings of mihor holiness are eaten in the entire city, "thou and thy sons and thy daughters with thee." Thou and thy sons, as their fixed portion, but thy daughters, not as their fixed portion, but if ye will make them gifts thereof, they are permitted to eat of the breast and the shoulder. Or perhaps the daughters too should have a fixed portion. The Torah teaches, "For as thy fixed portion and the fixed portion of thy sons have they been given." A fixed portion for the sons but no fixed portion for the daughters. "The shoulder, which is waved, and the breast, which is lifted up, shall they bring with the fat of the fire-offering." Hence, we learn, that the fat is underneath during the waving. "And the goat of the sin-offering." Moses sought diligently and behold it was burnt. That means the goat of the additional offerings of Rosh Hodesh. For three goats as sin-offerings were offered on that day. The goat of the eighth day and the goat that Nachshon offered and the goat that was offered for Rosh Hodesh and of all of them, none but the latter was burned, and the Sages of Israel are divided in their opinions as to the cause of the burning. Some say that it was burnt because something unclean had touched it. Other say, because they were in mourning they burned it, inasmuch as they were holy offerings that would be brought also by future generations. However, concerning the holy offering that was brought for this special occasion they relied upon Moses, who told them concerning the meat-offering that they should eat it unleavened. "Darosh dorash," he sought diligently; two "derishoth," or searchings. Why were these burnt and why were these not eaten? "And he was angry with Elazar and Ithamar." In deference to Aaron he addressed himself rebukingly to the sons, "leimor." And he said, he demanded that they answer him and explain, "Wherefore have ye not eaten the sin-offering in the holy place?" Have they eaten it outside of a holy place? Did they not burn it? Why, then, does he say "in a holy place?" But he said to them, perhaps it was taken outside of the curtains and became invalid. "Seeing that it is most holy." Therefore it becomes invalid when taken outside of the holy place. To this they answered "No." He then said to them, seeing that it was the holy place, why did ye not eat it? "And that he hath given it to you to bear the iniquity of the congregation." Wherein the priests eat and those who made the offering are forgiven, hence we learn that it was the goat brought for a sin-offering on Rosh Hodesh, as that atones for the sin of the defilement of the sanctuary and the holy offerings, but the sin-offering of the eighth day and of Nachshon were not for that atonement. "Behold, its blood was not brought within the holy place." If it were brought there you should have burnt it, as it is said in Leuiticus, chap 7, par. 23. "Ye should then have eaten it," even though you are in mourning, as I commanded concerning the meat-offering. And Aaron spoke unto Moses, "Vaydaber," this indicates that he spoke sternly. It is possible that Moses was angry with Elazar and Ithamar. And Aaron spoke, But it is clear that it was out of deference that they were silent. They thought it is not right that our father should sit and we should speak before him. Nor is it right that a disciple should answer his teacher. Wouldst think that Elazar was not able to answer? The Torah teaches us that he was, as it is said, "And Elazar, the priest, said unto the men of the army" (Numbers 31). So that if he wished, he spoke before Moses and the Princes (this, says Rashi, I have found in the Sifri), "Behold this day have they offered their sin-offering." This was in reply to Moses who queried, "Perhaps you have sprinkled the blood whilst in mourning, and a mourner who serves defiles the offering." Aaron answered him, Did they offer it, being ordinary priests? I offered it, who am a high priest, and permitted to make an offering though in mourning. And things as these have befallen me, even if the dead were not my sons but other relatives whom I am required to mourn (as those concerning whom the priests may defile himself to perform their last rites). And if I had eaten the sin-offering today (but a mourner at night is permitted to eat, for the Onan, or mourner, is only on the day of the burial) would it have been pleasing in the eyes of the Lord? If you heard concerning the special holy offering, you must not relax the law concerning the offerings for future generations. "And when Moses heard this it was pleasing in his eyes." He was not ashamed to admit that he was mistaken.

The Washington Heights branch of Isaac Gellis, delicatessen and provisions, 3514 Broadway, has been enlarged and fitted up in circassian walnut, and decorated in the best manner. Everything about the place is in good taste, and the public appreciative of kosher food will find the new restaurant and lunch room a model of excellence; cooking of the highest order and service equal to the best. The new restaurant is open until 2 a. m. Sunday dinners are served as a specialty. The proprietor, Mr. M. Rosenbloom, is thoroughly conversant with the business and confident of making this place a great success, and it certainly looks that way from the patronage thus far.

Real estate experts maintain that the housing situation, instead of easing up this fall, will get worse and will continue so for some time, as the amount of new building is practically nil and not keeping pace with the natural increase of population. Under these circumstances one does not have to be farseeing to consider the advisability of owning his own home. Contrary to report, there are many bargains still to be had in suburban real estate, and particularly so in New Rochelle, and if you are interested it would be worth your while to consult the Gaul Realty Co., No. 264 Huguenot street, or, if you desire property in Yonkers or vicinity, see Messrs. Gaul and Kampfer, No. 346 South Broadway.

Dr. Berkowitz Granted Year's Vacation. At a well attended meeting of the Board of Directors of Congregation Rodeph Shalom, Philadelphia, held June 29, 1920, a year's leave of absence was tendered to their minister, Dr. Henry Berkowitz.

Dr. Berkowitz, during the thirty-seven years of his ministry, has been one of the most ardent and untiring workers in our cause. He has served the Congregation Rodeph Shalom nearly twenty-eight years and has been absorbed in many spheres of public activity throughout his career in Philadelphia. Previously he had ministered to congregations in Kansas City, Mo., and Mobile, Ala. As founder and chancellor of the Jewish Chautauqua Society, he has traveled extensively and addressed all the leading communities and many of the smaller ones throughout the country.

Polish Anti-Semites Advocate Jim Crow Cars for Jews.

Warsaw (By I. J. P. B.).—The anti-Semitic newspaper, "Dwa Grosche," has come forward with the project that the Jews should be limited to separate cars on the trains. It proposes, further, that special ticket offices and station entrances be established for them.

This proposal was made in a "friendly" spirit as a solution—so it alleged—to the problem, which, according to it, must result from the government order to bar all unclean persons from traveling on the trains. If this order is strictly applied, jests this journal, "the whole Jewish national minority" will not be allowed to travel on the railroad. Therefore, the best thing to do is to establish Jim Crow cars for the Jews.

Despite Pogroms, Hungarian Jews Still Serve Fatherland.

Budapest (By I. J. P. B.).—While the demagogues of Budapest are continuing their incitation to pogroms and are spreading hatred of the Jews, the latter have not lost their equanimity, and remain loyal citizens of their fatherland. In America, as well as in Europe, Hungarian Jews are appealing for the relief of Hungary and for the amelioration of its peace terms.

The still youthful son of the Erzbetsalva (a suburb of Budapest) Cantor Turtlestaub has lectured before the citizens of the United States and, by describing the wretched conditions of the Hungarian capital and the dismal effects of the treaty that was forced upon his country, he has made many friends for Hungary. Similar service has been rendered Hungary by the Jewish editor of "Amercai Magyar Nepszava," Mr. Gezo Berko, who boldly stood up for the rights of Hungary, and by the Pittsburgh Jew, Ignatz Roth, who brought before the Speaker of the House of Representatives the stand of the Washington Magyars on the peace treaty. Mr. Hahn presented to the Secretary of State the protest of the Hungarians in the United States against the harsh terms of the Neuilly treaty. In England it was Mr. Foldiak, a Jew, who informed Lloyd George of the true situation in Hungary.

Out of the Hungarian Hell.

Budapest (By I. J. P. B.).—There is hardly an issue of a Hungarian newspaper which has not its accounts of more outrages upon the defenseless Jews of Hungary.

In Szeged a number of Jewish homes were plundered and the chief surgeon, Dr. Stephan Bokor, was murdered. Dr. Bokor served at the front throughout the whole war and was awarded the highest distinction for bravery.

Dr. Edward Szekulz, the president of the Jewish Kehillah of Kecskestet, was kidnapped by the military. When his friends in the local assembly attempted to learn of his whereabouts they were thrown out by drunken army officers.

The Kecskestet soldiery plundered all the homes of the Jews of Abony and in a most perverse manner mistreated men, women and children. Indescribable tortures, unknown even to the demons of the Inquisition, were applied to the victims. Many of the Jews were crippled for life. Among these were the old physician of the community, Dr. Martin Hirn, one of the foremost ear specialists of Hungary, who used to serve the poor without charge, and First Lieutenant Rudolph Palstay-Polizer, who during the Communist regime had to flee from Hungary, and returned when the new "Christian" regime came into power.

The Albert medal of the Royal Society of Arts, which is given annually for "distinguished merit in promoting arts, manufactures and commerce" has been awarded to Dr. Albert Abraham Michelson, professor of physics in the University of Chicago. Professor Michelson was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1907. He is a foreign member of the Royal Society, which awarded him the Copley medal, and he is also Rumford medalist of the Royal Institute.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Dining upon a lake of real ice is a novelty afforded the patrons of Thomas Healy's Golden Glades Roof Theatre, Broadway and Sixty-sixth street. This innovation bids fair to become the favorite indoor sport for warm summer nights. Tables are placed upon the huge ice rink and guests participate in a splendid dinner in a most cool spot, and simultaneously enjoy a remarkable performance contributed by the world's greatest skating stars in the Summer Ice Carnival and the entertaining musical melange, "Around the Town," which is interpreted by a cast of musical comedy favorites and a bewitching bevy of Broadway beauties. New features are added weekly, so that repeaters may enjoy a second or third visit to this unique show place every whit as much as their first. During the intermissions guests are permitted to dance upon the glazed surface of the ice pond or the regular ballroom around the rink.

A Sunday newspaper states that Arthur Bodanzky laments the absence of a national conservatory of instrumental music. Now, be it known far and near that the opinion of a conductor of the Metropolitan and New Symphony orchestras certainly must be respected. However, Mr. Bodanzky is not the only eminent musician who keenly realizes this paramount need in America's musical life. Majro Salvini, grand opera tenor and coach, has been preaching the need of a national conservatory for vocalists for several years. There is something about the musical temperament that very often savors of jealousy, but it is a pleasure to note perfect unanimity in this instance. This instrumental conductor says: "There are few American symphony orchestra players. Twenty per cent. American for the big orchestras would be a large figure." Is not this fact accentuated when it comes to American singers of capability and note? If anything, possibly, the need is more acute for good operatic vocalists than for orchestral players, for an orchestra man simply has to know technique and how to produce a fairly good tone, whereas an operatic vocalist, man or woman, must have stage presence and be able to put his part over with dramatic fervor and interpretation of compelling interest. When one is under hypnotic influence or control, how natural one acts! That's just the point. Until one is able to do that one's efforts can be of no avail. Salvini believes in operatic "atmosphere," and that is why he now has classes of virtuosos—artists under direction of a staff of professional coaches, preparing for the presentation, in costume, and in regular opera houses, of many standard operas, in the fall.

Interesting Federation Statistics.
 Two hundred and thirty-eight men and women have contributed more than $1,000 each to the Federation for Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies this year. This and other equally interesting statistics can be gleaned from the list of Federation subscribers in the 1920 edition just off the press. This list form an interesting index to the support of Jewish philanthropy in this city. Approximately 30,000 names appear on this list. The contributions for which they are pledged range from $1 to $100,000. Thirty-eight hundred persons give less than $10 annually and 250 give more than $1,000. The total of all contributions is approximately $3,000,000, threefourths of the total sum required for the support of the ninety-one prominent philanthropic institutions that are affiliated with Federation and supplied with funds by it.

The name of Smith, which appears the greatest number of times in the city directory and telephone book, appears only twenty-two times upon this list. Nevertheless, 329 Levys help to support Federation, 306 Cohens contribute, in addition to 191 others who vary the spelling to "Cohn" and "Kohn." The name of Strauss also appears prominently on the list, with 100 donors of that name. Surprising as it may seem, there is one subscription from an "O'Flaherty" and one from an "O'Donnell." "Goldsmiths" numbering 125 subscribe, and there are thirty contributors by the name of "Silverman," and seventeen "Diamonds."

The Young Men's Jewish Charities, of Chicago, Ill., has reopened its summer camp for boys. Last summer over 500 boys, between the ages of 11 and 18 were cared for.

JEWISH CALENDAR. 5680 1920 Rosh Chodesh Ab...Friday, July 16 Fast of Ab...Saturday, July 24 Rosh Chodesh Elul...Sunday, August 15

(Continued from page 16) not contain the special paragraphs about the rights of the Jews. But the explanatory memorandum prefixed to the constitution (sitting of the National Assembly, Vol. 920, No. 2421) contains the following: Chapter 6.—"The regulations of the sixth chapter of the constitution concern the carrying out within the states of the national obligations undertaken by our republic.

enjoyment of equal civic and political rights. This is a logical consequence of the principles laid down in paragraphs 106 and 124.

"The constitution document does not recapitulate the national minorities, as in order to do so it would have to solve certain questions on which scholars are at variance. The expression 'nation' itself has not yet been adequately defined (Slonimsky pointed out with great force in the 'Vestnik Evropy' in 1889 the difficulties in the way of framing such a definition). For instance the question whether the Jews are a nation is still undecided. By choosing the expression 'without regard to race, language or religion' (race, language or religion), the constitution document leaves it to every individual to decide for himself what he regards as the distinguishing mark of nationality, and to choose accordingly. If anyone, therefore, regards the Jews as a separate nation he is entitled to declare himself as by nationality a Jew, even though he professes no religion and though his mother-tongue is Czech or German. The Jews are, therefore, not compelled in filling up census forms, in elections, etc., to declare their adherence to any ethnic national minority other than the Jewish."

The National Assembly of the Czechoslovakian republic accepted the proposals of the government with the explanatory memorandum, and thus recognized the Jewish nationality. This recognition has both a positive and a negative bearing.

In future it will be impossible as far as the constitution goes, for a Jew in Czechoslovakia to be compelled against his will to declare himself of any nationality other than the Jewish.

On the other hand no Jew can be compelled to declare himself of Jewish nationality instead of German, Czech, or any other.

The recognition granted by the constitution has also a positive significance, namely that the Jewish minority are legally assured of all those rights which by the treaty of Versailles are granted to national minorities in general and the enjoyment of which is placed by this treaty under the protection of the League of Nations. This applies first and foremost to the claim of the Jews to have their own schools. The Jewish schools would train a Jewish generation determined to live a Jewish life, the existence of which will be the best guarantee that the assurances given in the Peace Treaties and in the constitution will not remain a mere scrap of paper but will have practical fulfillment.

The credit for this great success belongs not only to the Jewish National Council in Prague and the nationalist Jews represented by it nor even to the Czech statesmen and the Czech nation. It is to be ascribed first and foremost to the Committee of the Jewish Delegation, which is the living embodiment of the idea of Jewish solidarity, and which has thrown the power of the whole Jewish people into the scales on behalf of the interests of the Jews of the individual states. The Czechoslovakian republic has set an example which stamps it as a genuinely democratic and progressive state anxious to deal justly with all minorities.

The Polish Parliamentary Committee and the Chamber rejected the Jewish resolutions providing for a complete scheme of national and religious minority rights. According to the scheme, Jews were to administer their own religious, educational and charitable affairs, including the emigration problem, under the direction of a special ministry for religious and national minorities. The scheme also made provision for compulsory taxation of members of the religious and national minorities by the organizations of the minorities.

Demonstration of Vienna Anti-Semites.

Vienna (By I. J. P. B.)—The local anti-Semites arranged a monster demonstration at the square before the Vienna City Hall, in which more than 10,000 took part. Inflammatory speeches were made by popular agitators and the crowd was induced to adopt the following resolutions:
"1. That all the immigrated Eastern Jews be immediately interned.
"2. These Jewish 'parasites' should be deported to the countries from which they came, and the boundaries should be closed to all further Jewish immigration.
"3. All their money capital should be confiscated.
"4. Jewish children born in Austria should be admitted to the schools according to a per cent. norm."
After the meeting the demonstrators tried to break into the Jewish quarter. Fortunately, the city administration took sufficient precaution to send to the Jewish section a police guard, which prevented the impending pogrom.

Picturesque Water Carriers of Palestine Passing Out.

Water carts are now being used in Jerusalem as a sanitary measure, which threaten to drive the "fellaha," for centuries an institution in the Holy Land, into oblivion, and the picturesque water carrier of the Holy Land, gliding gracefully along the streets in her colorful costume, with a vase of water balanced on her head, may soon be but a memory in Palestine.
In addition to the introduction of water-carts in Jerusalem, the water-supply system installed by the British and the work of cleaning out cisterns and making them fit for use, carried on by the Zionist Commission, are also threatening the existence of the picturesque water-carrier, whom modern methods, now so rigidly applied in the Holy Land, are forcing off the Palestinian scenery, where she has been a central figure for centuries.

The success of Morris Moscovitch, who played Shylock in London last year, has prompted a well-known firm of New York managers to negotiate with Jacob P. Adler, and doubtless the famous Yiddish tragedian will appear in a Broadway house next year, giving Shylock in English for the first time. Adler did Shylock in Yiddish several years ago, with the support of an English speaking company. In the meantime, Moscovitch is coming over here to confer with Leo Ditrichstein, whose role of "The Great Lover" he is to assume in England next season.

"Delawaxen?"

Mr. H. Trotzky of the famous Broadway Central Hotel restaurant is at it again. This time it is the newest thing in vacationing for men and young men. He has acquired the wonderful Delaware estate on the beautiful Delaware and Lackwaxen rivers, consisting of 250 acres, and has turned it into a camp for grownups, where men and young men who desire to forget for a while the steady grind of business can get back to themselves once again.

Overlooking a broad reach of water stands Camp Delawaxen, as it is called, nestling comfortably on the margin, commanding a view of both luxuriant valleys, with their scenes of woodland stream and mountain, painting pictures in nature which make Camp Delawaxen an ideal camp for him surfeited of city's smoking paves.

Camp Delawaxen offers varied inducements to all sportsmen and pleasure seekers. The gamey wall-eyed pike, the agile black bass and other fresh water friends furnish rare sport for the angler. Good boats are always at the service of the campers for river fishing, rowing, etc. Bathing, baseball, basketball, tennis, handball, etc., are only a few of the pastimes that are to be found at Camp Delawaxen.

While at camp one may live either in a bungalow, tent or hotel.

The table at camp is of the highest order. It is supplied with the season's delicacies from the city, and from the farm connected with the camp come fresh eggs, milk, butter, vegetables, etc. Dietary laws are carried out to the fullest extent under the personal supervision of Mr. Trotzky.

Camp Delawaxen is 110 miles from New York and is reached via the Erie railroad. Particulars may be obtained from Mr. H. Trotzky, 673 Broadway, Telephone Spring 1066-6700.
