THE REKINDLED MENORAH

A Story for Chanukah. By ELMA EHRLICH LEVINGER

(Copyright 1921 by Elma Ehrlich Levinger. All rights reserved.)

In the days that the Syrian soldiers swept over the land of Israel, taking even Jerusalem and polluting the Temple there, young Daniel of Modin followed his townsman, Judas, son of Mattathias, into the mountains. There Judas assembled together his army, and, poorly provided with weapons, ill-fed and ragged, led them out against the trained hosts of Syria. And in the end he conquered by the aid of the living God in whose name he fought, but not until many brave Judeans had purchased the liberty of their country with their blood.

In the days that followed the battle of Bethhoron, Daniel, although rejoicing in the great victory of Judas Maccabeus over the Syrians, knew the darkness and the bitterness of defeat. He felt that it would have been far easier to have died upon the field of battle than to have been left wounded and blinded, no longer able to fight for his country and hardly able to help himself through the long years that still stretched before him.

A comrade had taken him to the home of Cyrus before rejoining the Maccabean army and there, Daniel lived in poverty and loneliness, hearing only rumors of the wonderful victories won by Judas and his soldiers. Cyrus was an old, old man, very helpless because of his age, so feeble and removed from the stirring times in which he lived that he hardly knew there was a great war raging, which was to bring peace and freedom to all of Israel. For he spent his days nodding in the sunshine; even when he was fully awake he never spoke of the present, but loved to tell tales of his own boyhood before the Syrians had swept over the land and polluted the shrines of Israel.

Daniel would surely have gone mad with loneliness and his own despair, had it not been for Reuben, a boy just grown to manhood, old Cyrus's grandson and the only one of his blood who remained in the world, for all the rest of Reuben's kin were dead. It had been the cause of great grief and disappointment to young Reuben that he had not been allowed to join the armies of Judas the Maccabee. In the early days of the war he had indeed run away from home and presented himself before the great soldier, begging to be allowed to fight against the hosts of Syria. But, although Reuben was tall and well-grown for his years and Judas was sorely in need of warriors, the great commander felt ple, "and should he fall into the hands of the soldiers of Antiochus, it would go hard with him. For they spare neither old age nor piety, if the may be given you to serve the God of Battles." So, with that kindly smile, which somehow seemed to accord so well to lead, hidden in the mountains with only the dreamy old man for company while all the rest of Israel seemed flocking to Judas's banner. But he became a little more reconciled when after the battle of Bethhoron, two soldiers dressed in ragged garments, knocked upon the door of his grandfather's hut and demanded shelter for the night.

One of them left early the next morning to rejoin his brothers in the field, but the younger man, being blinded and wounded, was obliged to remain. Now the days were not at all long for Reuben, for Daniel required many things and the boy took great delight in nursing one who had received his hurts while fighting in Judas's army. Then when Daniel's wounds were healed and he was able to grope about in the sunshine, leaning on his staff, Reuben became his constant companion, always eager to listen to the tales the blinded soldier told of camp life and adventures in the hills with Judas and his men. The boy's heart often filled with envy at the thought of what had been denied him; yet he was a little glad that he had remained at home, not only to care for his grandfather, but to serve this broken man who had served his country so faithfully and at such a terrible cost. And the two became like brothers, drawn together by their hopeless desire to serve upon the battlefield as well as their love for Judas who, they believed would drive out the Syrians in the end.

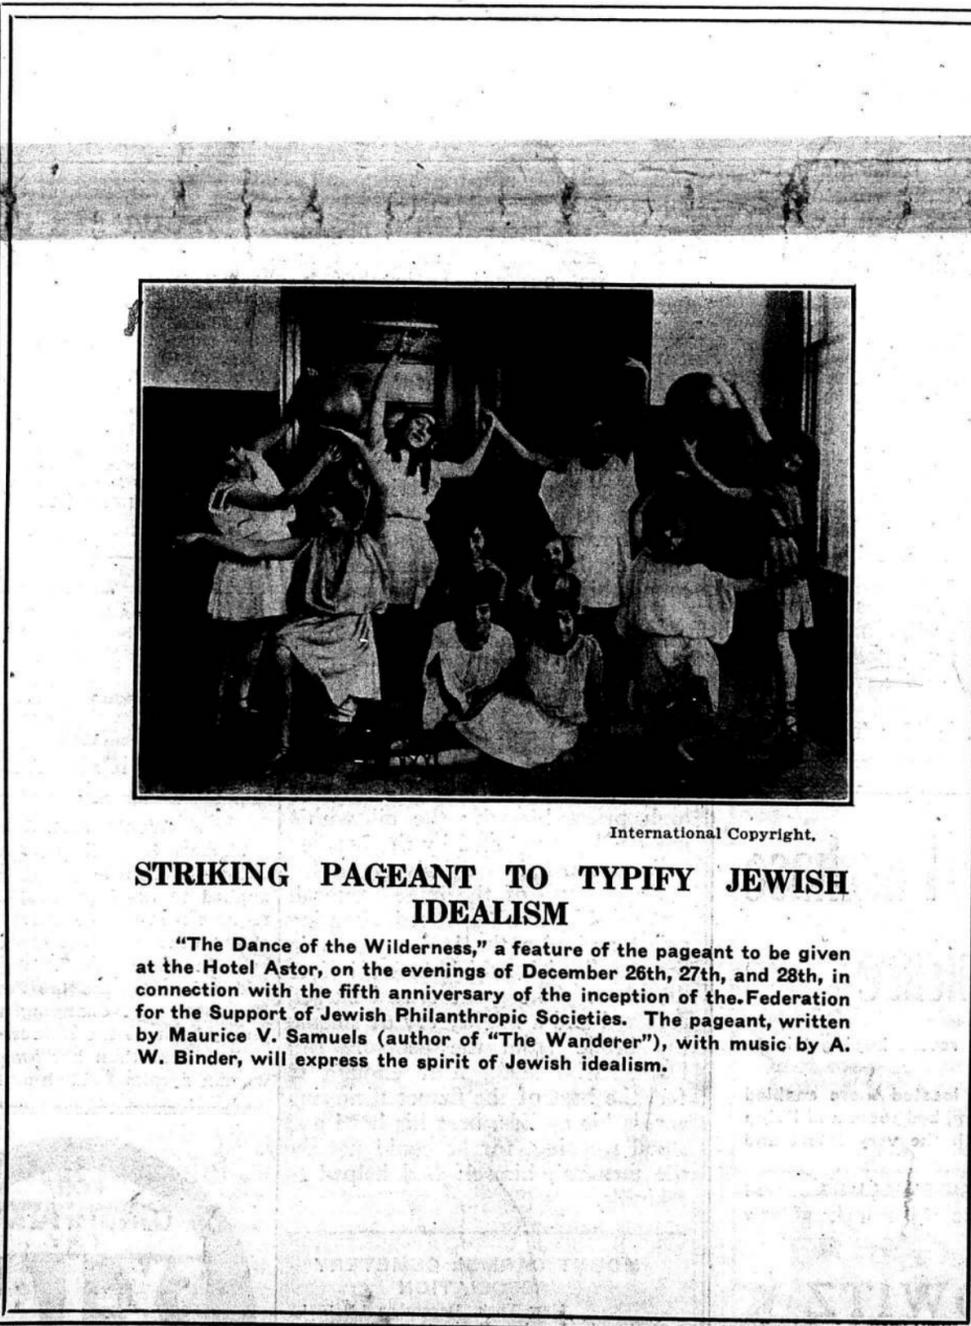

There came a day when Reuben could not rouse his old grandfather as Cyrus sat dreaming in the sunshine and he knew that Cyrus was dead. Now he was filled with a great longing to follow after Judas and serve in his army, but he knew that he had no right to leave Daniel, blinded and helpless, who had learned to depend upon him for his very life. So Reuben stilled the wild longing in his heart to take his place with the men who fought to overthrow the Syrian tyrant and remained with his stricken friend; and the quiet days in the hills went on as before.

Then the quiet was broken by rumors that Maccabeus had actually entered Jerusalem and had taken possession of the desecrated Temple. A few warriors from his army, permitted to return to their families, straggled past the hut in the hills; on another day several sturdy women from Modin traveled by on their way to forced to refuse the boy's prayer. "Your grandfather is an old man and helpless," he told Reuben, after questioning him of his home and peo-

Jerusalem that they might rejoin their brothers and husbands who had sent them word by swift messengers that it was now safe for them to come to the city which had suffered so terribly at the hands of the heathen foe. And, hearing them speak, Daniel had groped for his staff and said: "I will go to Jerusalem for it is my right to stand with the others when the Temple is redeemed and purified."

So the two set out together, the eager boy and the soldier who was little more than a youth in years, but bowed by suffering and affliction. In spite of Daniel's blindness, they traveled swiftly, for Reuben served as his eyes, and often when the warrior grew weak and weary, lifted him in his own strong, young arms and carried him upon his back. And when they neared Jerusalem, they met a wealthy merchant of that place, who had been forced to flee with his household during the persecutions of Antiochus of Syria; he was an old man, proud of his name and his wealth, but when he heard that Daniel had been one of Judas's men, he ordered him to be seated at his side in his litter, and bade his servants bring them wine and bread to eat, and water for their bleeding feet. Then when they set out for Jerusalem again, Daniel rested upon soft cushions in the rich merchant's litter, while Reuben followed with the rest of the household, rejoicing that the long, hard journey was almost over.

Reuben had never seen Jerusalem, for, until the war devastated the land he had not been old enough to be required to take the journey to the Temple for the three great pilgrimages each year. But he had often heard of the wonders of David's city, high upon the hill, for through his grandfather's eyes he had looked upon the stately palaces and fair gardens and the shining Temple, as the old man had seen them in his own youth. But looking upon his blind friend, Reuben rejoiced for the first time that Daniel would not be forced to gaze upon the city for which he had suffered, now laid waste and spoiled by the heathen, whose shrines still stood on every side, mocking the desecrated places once held dear by every son of Israel. Guiding Daniel along the uneven flag stones through which the grass had struggled, Reuben entered the Temple, now crowded with soldiers, who hurried hither and thither bearing the heathen statues and other unclean objects the Syrians had left behind them. While some staggered under the weight of the altar stones which had been polluted by heathen sacrifices and could no longer be used.

Placing Daniel in a safe corner, where he might at least hear the tumult which he could not join, Reuben at last joined the soldiers, not to fight, as he had once dreamed, but to help them prepare the desecrated Temple for its re-dedication. So for several weeks, he worked with the others helping to clear away the heathen symbols and the debris that had accumulated during the time the Temple had suffered from alien hands; later he aided those who built the new altar and bore new vessels into the cleansed shrine, to take the place of those the Syrians had made unfit for use. And though he often grew very tired, for he was still only a young lad and wearied sooner than an older man would have done, it was a great joy to Reuben to do his little share in cleansing the holy place; an even greater joy to serve as Daniel's eyes and tell him how fair the shrine was growing, how the quiet face of Judas glowed when he looked upon the work of his soldiers and declared that the Feast of Rededication might begin.

So the day came at last when the Temple of Jerusalem was again consecrated and the people from every town of Judea flocked into the holy city to take part in the great rejoicing. And because Israel celebrated the rescue of her Law, which her sages called her "Light," from the hands of the heathen, there was not a house which did not bear before its door a lighted lamp, in symbol of the Torah's rekindled flame. But when the people gathered in the Temple to fill the cups of the festal Menorah with oil, no oil could be found, save that polluted by the heathen. And all agreed with the priests that such oil could not be used to fill the Ner Tomid (Everlasting Light) which was to kindle the other flames of the great candlestick before the altar.

Judas at once sent forth swift messengers to bring forth pure oil and those gathered in the Temple courts waited in great impatience; for now that their long days of struggle and toil were over, it seemed hard to bear further delay. And the waiting seemed hardest for Daniel, for, although he stood among his old companions, the soldiers of Judas, his darkness made the hours seem very long, and his old wounds troubled him so that at last he was forced to beg Reuben who waited at his side to lead him where he might rest.

"I will sleep a little for I am weary," he told Reuben, when the boy had placed him upon a couch in one of the inner courts. "But call me the moment the messengers return with the oil. Although I can never see the great menorah blaze again, I wish to be there when the sacred lights are kindled."

So Reuben promised to come for him, and went back to the soldiers, grieving as he had often done before that the strong warrior had grown as weak as a little child. And Daniel lay upon the couch, tossing restlessly, weary yet unable to sleep, for he longed to be with his companions before the altar.

Several hours passed and darkness began to descend, even in the central court of the Temple under the open sky. But the messengers had not yet returned and the lights in the great menorah before the altar remained unkindled. The crowd stirred and murmured; here and there for tapers glimmered through the growing dusk.

Tossing on his couch in the inner court, Daniel did not realize that darkness had come upon him. He rose unsteadily and reached for his staff, but his foot caught in the draperies of the couch and he fell to the ground. He threw out his hand to save himself and touched a small object which lay hidden beneath the coverings of his bed. His fingers, which were slowly becoming his eyes, traced its outlines curiously; he frowned a little—yes, an earthen flask with a heavy seal. Thrusting it into his girdle and finding his staff at last, he made his painful way into the outer court.

Reuben came rushing to him, hating himself for his neglect. But before he could beg the blind man's pardon, he broke off astonished, for Daniel had slipped into his hand a small earthen flask still unsealed. "I found this where I slept," he said.

Reuben placed the little flask in the hand of Judas Maccabeus. The general looked at the stamp upon the seal and smiled his slow, grave smile. "You who dwell in darkness have brought the Light back to Israel," he said to Daniel. "For this tightly sealed flask has been stamped by the high priest himself; the oil within has not been polluted by the heathen and we can light the holy lamps."

So the cup of the huge menorah was filled by a white-robed, chanting priest and also the lesser places in the candlestick which stood before the altar. The great crowd surged forward and a mighty cry of solemn joy broke from the people. But Daniel who stood near enough to feel the heat of the flames flickering across his eyelids, bent his head and stood weeping, for he could not see the menorah himself had helped to rekindle.

Palestine Question Much in Evidence. Teaching the New Testament in the Schools—Chief Rabbi Felicitates King and Queen on Princess Mary's Engagement—Good Work of the Jewish Lads' Brigade—Moscovitch Addresses Jewish Organization.

London, December 2, 1921.

The Palestine question persists in creating interest in the press here. A continuous correspondence is observable in all the daily papers, and naturally it is one of the leading topics in the Jewish press. The Zionist movement, what it is, its object, and the like, are questions discussed at length. The persecution of the Jews in the East has, of course, led up to the present cumulative interest in the Palestine question, as the Jewish communities in Eastern Europe are anxious to escape to the land where their brothers are foregathering to meet them and where they will at least be less subject to the fanatical pogroms of uneducated peoples than they are at present.

The Balfour Declaration, which recently has had its fair share of comment and criticism both pro and con, was made the subject of a lecture the other day by Dr. Weizmann, who, as a Jewish weekly here says, "made clear, we hope forevermore, what exactly is the meaning of the Balfour Declaration, both as far as the government understands its terms and as they are understood by Zionists." Dr. Weizmann in the course of his speech said: "We are going to Palestine, not to build a few straggling colonies, to settle two, three or four thousand emigrants." He spoke of this as being interesting, but not what was meant by the Balfour Declaration. "What is meant," he continued, "is to reconstitute the ancient Jewish National Home. If it were not for the word 'reconstitute' in the mandate—this little prefix 're'—the mandate would be meaningless to Zionists." No language surely could be plainer or more to the point. The Jewish community in London will without doubt receive news of this communication by such a prominent man, who has been severely criticized even by a certain section of his own people, with great joy. The Jewish World, commenting on the attitude adopted by what it calls weak-kneed Zionists and anti-Zionists, says that the one should take inspiration and the other take warning.

The interest taken in the question of teaching the "New Testament" in synagogue classes continues unabated. The Rev. A. A. Green last Sabbath devoted his pulpit address to vindicating himself in connection with the part he has played in respect to this subject. His explanation does not appear to be received, at least as far as the Jewish press is concerned, with complete favor. In fact, it is considered that the matter has been left precisely where it was before he gave his address. Mr. Green in the address referred to criticized certain London Jewish papers on what he termed their attitude in this case. One of the journals complained of in its last issue replies to Mr. Green saying that "no paper that knows its business takes any delight in subjecting public men to criticism for what they have done or failed to do." They assure him that they think a great deal more of him, his work, his position in the community, as well as of the community itself than to imagine that he is an aggrieved party at the hands of the press. The Jewish press generally appears to take the view that he has been guilty of an error and they do not accuse him of faithlessness to his charge.

A message from Delhi says that Lord Reading, the Viceroy of India, paid a tribute to Mr. Montagu and Lord Chelmsford for their staunch and faithful support of Indian Moslem opinion, and said there must be sympathy for those seeking a remedy for what they conscientiously believed an injustice to their religion, but the problem was complex and international. The British Empire had every reason to wish peace between Turkey and Greece. The position of Great Britain was undoubtedly strictly neutral, but, despite malevolent rumor, she was ever ready to lend her good offices to terminate the war. There were indications that the time was not distant when a meeting to settle the peace terms must take place. Lord Reading welcomed the congratulations of a deputation of Delhi Moslems on the Anglo-Afghan Treaty, which, he hoped, would be enduring and would gain in strength.

Following the engagement of Princess Mary to Viscount Lascelles the following telegram was sent by the Chief Rabbi to their Majesties the King and Queen: "May it please your Majesties to receive the sincerest congratulations of the Jewish communities throughout the empire on the engagement of her Royal Highness, Princess Mary, and graciously to accept their best wishes for the future happiness of the affianced pair.—Chief Rabbi." The reply by telegram was as follows: "The Very Rev. the Chief Rabbi, Mulberry Street—It is with much pleasure that the Queen and I have received the message of congratulations which you have sent on behalf of the Jewish communities throughout the empire on the engagement of our daughter, and we warmly thank them for their good wishes.—George R. I."

On the suggestion of the honorary officers of the United Synagogue, the committee has had under review the emoluments and expenses of the Chief Rabbi's office. The salary attaching to the office is £2,000, and neither in 1919 nor in 1920, when the salaries of officials of the United Synagogue were raised, was the stipend of the Chief Rabbinate increased. The Executive Committee accordingly put forward that the salary of the Chief Rabbi be £2,500 per annum and that the allowance for riding expenses be increased to £250, and that the Building Committee be asked to arrange for the renovation of the residence of the Chief Rabbi and that the council vote the sum of £500 from the general purposes account 1922 to the building fund for the purpose. The recommendation of the Executive Committee was on Monday, November 28, carried unanimously by the council.

The excellent work done by the Jewish Lads' Brigade was pointed out in the course of the sermon at the Hampstead Synagogue last Sabbath and an appeal was made to suitable young men of the congregation to offer their services as officers. The brigade was by its records and achievements a source of pride to the community, and in view of the enormous amount of good work it performed among the rising generation, the Rev. A. A. Green hoped that the personal service it required—even more important than its need of funds—would be forthcoming. Last Sunday a meeting was held in the committee room of the North London Synagogue to inaugurate the new High-bury company of the brigade. The proposal to form the company was received with considerable pleasure.

Under the auspices of the Jewish Library and Affiliated Organizations a public welcome has been given to Mr. Maurice Moscovitch, the celebrated actor, in the Langside Halls, Glasgow. Last Sunday Mr. Myer Kisinisky, who presided over a large gathering, said that they were gathering to give a fitting welcome to one who had given great enjoyment to many people and who in the time of his greatness had not forgotten his Jewish origin and his duty to his fellow men. Mr. Moscovitch was then presented with a copper salver which had been worked out by the craftsmen of the Bezalel School of Palestine. Mr. Moscovitch, who spoke mainly in Yiddish, related his past experience as a Yiddish actor in the East End of London and his rise to fame within the last three years. Yet, notwithstanding, he was proud to regard himself a useful Jew rather than a great actor. He deprecated the fact that in a large center like Glasgow there was no Jewish amateur dramatic club, a project which, he predicted, if one started, would meet with wonderful success.

POGROM LEADERS ON TRIAL

A Chat With Senator Oscar Grusenberg
Special Berlin Correspondence

By F. LIDOR

(Copyright, 1921, by National Jewish Press Association, Inc.)

Leaders of Russian military divisions operating in White Russia, Ukraine and Wohlen, which have recently been dispersed or beaten, are now anxiously seeking to clear themselves of any pogrom records that may be attached to their names. Newspapers have recently carried a copy of a memorandum sent by Boris Savinkow, whose so-called anti-Bolshevist forces have wrought havoc upon countless Jewish communities, to Oscar Grusenberg, the noted Jewish advocate, in which Savinkow disclaims all responsibility for the cruelties perpetrated by his soldiers.

Learning that Advocate Grusenberg was spending a few days in Berlin, I decided to utilize the opportunity and ascertain his attitude toward the above and other questions affecting Jewish life.

My first question was, of course, relative to the Savinkow memorandum, to which Advocate Oscar Grusenberg made the following explanation:

"A few days ago Boris Savinkow asked me per letter to grant him a secret audience, declaring that he had something of urgent importance to discuss with me. I refused to see him on the ground that I do not favor secret conferences. Several days later he again made an effort to reach me, this time through Mr. Gurewitsch. He came on the date designated and presented the memorandum referred to, which declared that a number of Balachowitch's militia were punished for looting and murder, that Balachowitch himself granted permission for the founding of a Jewish gendarmerie under the leadership of a certain Zeitlin—in other words, that both gentlemen were anything but unfriendly toward the Jews. In addition, Savinkow argued that, being a Socialist, it would be treason to his own principles to instigate pogroms. 'My son,' Savinkow said, 'is of Jewish extraction. (Savinkow's wife is a Jewess.) How can you accuse me of anything so preposterous? I want you to judge whether I am guilty or not.'

"Having calmly listened to Savinkow's contentions, I answered: 'I have no right to render a verdict here instantaneously. The blood that was shed was not mine, but that of my whole people. How can I assume the responsibility of telling you in a word whether you are black-marked or not. This, however, I do wish you to know: that I am investigating the records of a number of pogrom instigators; I am gathering data and information on that subject and am preparing an indictment of all guilty. Should you be one of those, you will be punished along with the rest.' Smiling, Savinkow left my office."

Mr. Senator, I heard that you are at the head of the juridical commission of the Committee of Jewish Delegations in Paris, whose purpose it is to take action against leaders of pogrom bands. Can you enlighten me on activities of this commission?

"Last May, when I came to Paris and was elected a member of the Committee of Jewish Delegations, it occurred to me to call responsible pogrom leaders to account. For this purpose a juridical commission was established, of which I am chairman. I encountered discouragement, doubt in the undertaking, fear of arousing the anti-Semites, but I nevertheless proceeded to the work, just as if each pogrom were a matter of a day or two ago, and in the same manner that I tackled my cases 40 years ago. I was deeply convinced that Jews must combat pogroms by means of physical and juridical self-defense. All those responsible in pogroms must be punished accordingly and must be brought to realize that there is not a corner on this earth where they might escape from their righteous deserts. The first step in our work was to call the attention of Lord Curzon, to the atrocities of Ataman

Statistics show that one out of every five children of school age have either sagging ankles or weak arches. These conditions, if taken care of in time, need not cause alarm, but if neglected, very troublesome foot-ailments will likely result in later years.

The Coward Arch Support Shoe corrects these tendencies in a scientific manner. The weight of the body is properly distributed, thereby relieving the ankles of much strain while the arch of the foot is held securely in place. For men and women also.

Angel who was at that time still in Constantinople. Lord Curzon's secretary, Gregori, replied that the matter was referred to the English commander in Constantinople with the order that an investigation be made at once. In connection with unearthing pogromists in Turkey, a juridical committee was formed in that country. During the first few months of its existence this committee rendered good service, but later slackened in its work. As chance would have it there were two men by the name of Angel in Constantinople and the English authorities did not know which was meant. In the meantime the right man did not find it convenient to remain there any longer. In Paris, Patek through whose efforts the Polish Government acquiesced to our prosecuting the pogromist Bulak Balachowitch. The Polish Minister of the Interior announced some time ago that Balachowitch cannot be deported because he is awaiting trial, which reaffirms our contention that action may be taken against a pogrom leader residing abroad.

My next question was: Have you the necessary points of law to which you can refer when the occasion arises, that is, when you institute legal action against a certain pogromist?

"Yes. The work of finding the statutes of law applicable to these cases was indeed difficult. I spent two months in preparing it, with the result that now I am in a position to call to account any pogrom leader, no matter where he may secrete himself."

I asked Senator Grusenberg to cite an instance of how he would apply a law of a certain country to a given case.

The Senator replied: "I shall try to make this clear. Let us say that a certain individual arrived in Germany who had in his own country incurred prosecution for some criminal act. Permission will be asked from Germany to prosecute that individual, which will not be granted on the ground that its legal statutes have no application to such a situation. He would nevertheless not be permitted to remain there any longer. Should that criminal, upon deportation from Germany, arrive in Austria, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria or any other country where laws dealing with such cases are in existence, action would immediately be taken against him. In this manner we could reach a pogrom leader no matter where he might keep himself."

Mr. Senator, I asked, how do the various commissions under the Committee of the Jewish Delegations in Paris function? Do they do their share in preparing the necessary data on pogroms?

Senator Oscar Grusenberg made the following reply: "I regret very much to confess that I am deeply disappointed with their work. The committee has delegated them to gather information incriminating pogrom leaders, but they have remained inactive. Have the Jews entirely forgotten all those horrible occurrences? Are they not conscious of the fact that by allowing the guilty to go about freely they risk the recurrence of similar unfortunate events? This indifference demonstrates Jewish helplessness and unprotectiveness and instigates the bloodthirsty to action. The graves of our dead call to us to take vengeance, vengeance through the hands of justice!"

The Executive of the Carlsbad Relief Conference has considered a scheme submitted to it by Advocate Bramson for the settlement of 10,000 Jewish orphans. Five to six million francs are required annually for the scheme.

Thirty thousand dollars was raised at a dinner last week given by the Federated Loan Association of Philadelphia, Pa. Last year 825 Jewish families, representing 4,200 persons, were aided by loans issued by the association.

Rabbi Joseph Kornfeld, who is now on his way to fill the post of United States Minister to Persia, was tendered a farewell banquet by his congregation at Columbus, Ohio, prior to his departure. Besides numerous personal tokens he was the recipient of a purse of $10,000 from the members of Temple Israel.

The work on the Lynn (Mass.) Hebrew Free School is rapidly progressing and the building will probably be finished within the next two months. The structure, which is the first of its kind to be erected in Lynn, will cost over $50,000.

The more important educational institutions in the hunger districts of Russia have closed, due to impossible living conditions. All the high schools as well as the universities in Smolensk, Orlov and Vitebsk have ceased to function.

Rev. Dr. Louis Grossman, for many years rabbi of Congregation B'nai Jeshurun of Cincinnati, O., has been retired as rabbi emeritus, owing to ill health. Rabbi Grossman is a son of the late Rabbi Ignatz Grossman and a brother of Rabbi Rudolph Grossman of this city.

S. Herbert Wolfe of this city, who was a colonel during the recent war, has been appointed Brigadier General in the Reserve Corps. General Wolfe is a well-known actuary and devised the system of insurance used by the government in the war. He is honorary secretary of Mt. Sinai Hospital and active in the I. O. B. B.

The Jewish Deputies in the Warsaw City Council drew up a protest resolution against the mayor of the city, who authorized the anti-Semitic organization, "Razvio," to use the City Hall as headquarters for its conference. The main object of the conference, as well as of the organization, is to combat the "Jewish influence" in Poland.

Mrs. Francis Topfitz of this city has been awarded by the French Government the Reconnaissance Medal of the third class in recognition of the work she did for the Red Cross during the war. Mrs. Topfitz, who has just completed relief work for children in Poland, is now in Vienna, where she plans to organize an agency for child caring.

Elizabeth Goodman of Baltimore, Md., who has gained fame on the concert stage as a lieder singer, made her operatic debut at Philadelphia, Pa., last week with the San Carlos forces appearing as Michaela in "Carmen." Miss Gutman, who is a pupil of William J. Henderson, the famous music reviewer of the New York Herald, was a pronounced success.

At Baltimore, Md., the ministers of the various denominations are delivering "wireless sermons," which are sent out from Baltimore all over the country. The second of these sermons was delivered recently by Rabbi Louis Bernstein of Har Sinai Temple, taking as his topic, "What Constitutes a Great People." The general tenor of these sermons is to urge arms reduction.

Temple of Israel, Amsterdam, N. Y., which has been without a rabbi for some months past, has tendered a call to Rev. I. J. Sarasohn, formerly of Cumberland, Md., and Rockford, Ill. Rabbi Sarasohn is a graduate of Clark University and the Hebrew Union College. He received a master's degree from University of Cincinnati and during the late war served as a U. S. A. chaplain.

A conference of Zionist delegates from all provinces in New Roumania took place in Klu. An official representative of the Roumanian Government greeted the gathering. In his opening address Dr. Fisher, chairman of the conference expressed the high regard of Roumanian Jewry for their fatherland and emphasized that the purpose of the conference was to further the rebuilding of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

Replying to a memorandum submitted by the Christian and Moslem members of the Haifa Chamber of Commerce demanding that Hebrew shall not be recognized as an official language, pending the ratification of the Mandate for Palestine, Sir Herbert Samuel stated that the League of Nations had asked Great Britain, as the Mandatory for Palestine, to proceed along the provisions laid down in the Mandate, and that in accordance with those provisions Hebrew is an official language, side by side with Arabic and English.

A Jewish resident of Haifa presented a Hebrew document to the municipal judge with the request that the latter legalize the signature. The judge refused to do so on the ground that the document was written in Hebrew. A protest against this was thereupon sent to the High Commissioner, but the latter reaffirmed the action of the judge with the assertion that as long as the ratification of the Palestine mandate is still pending, each municipality may follow its own local ordinances unhampered by the laws of the State.

Ben Austrian, noted painter, died suddenly last week at his mountain studio, Cloverly-at-the-Pinnacle, Kempton, Pa. Apoplexy was the immediate cause of death. He was fifty-one years of age. Austrian's paintings of "Chicks and Farm Animals" attracted country-wide notice. He was born in Reading in 1870 and was a salesman in his father's store for some time, later becoming a traveling salesman. Painting pictures for customers as a special reward for purchases of merchandise eventually led him to study art and abandon his business. Austrian maintained three studios, one at Mount Penn, Reading; another at Kempton, and a third at Palm Beach.

Dr. Minkowsky, Vice-Minister of the Polish War Department, has offered his resignation to the government because of constant anti-Semitic attacks directed against him in the Seim. His resignation was accepted. Dr. Minkowski is one of the foremost physicians in the country. He was appointed as head of the Medical Department of the Polish General Staff quite recently.

At a council held by the King at Buckingham Palace on November 24 the Hon. Isaac Alfred Isaacs, a justice of the High Court of Australia, was sworn in as a member of His Majesty's most honorable Privy Council. The Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice Isaacs, who is a native of Melbourne, has held office as Solicitor General and Attorney General of Victoria and as Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Australia. He was appointed a justice of the High Court in October, 1906. During his parliamentary career he was for a brief period (in 1897) acting Premier of Victoria.

Victor Jacobi, composer of many successful light operas, died in this city December 11th, after a short illness. Jacobi, who was born in Budapest 37 years ago, collaborated with Fritz Kreisler on the score of "Apple Blossoms" and was the composer of "Sybil," "The Half Moon," "The Love Letter," "The Marriage Market" and "The Rambler Rose." Before coming to America he wrote the scores of "The Proud Princess" (which he completed at the age of 21), "The Brave Hussar," "Yes or No," "The Queen's Gown" and "Johnnie," all of which had successful runs.

Peni-El Notes

At the last meeting of the congregation, which took place on Thursday, December 15, the old board was re-elected, with Mr. Emanuel Friedman at its head. This marks the ninth year of Mr. Friedman's devoted service to Temple Peni-El.

A Parents Association has been formed in connection with the Religious and Hebrew School, to provide a form of closer co-operation between the school and the parents of the children. Mr. S. Markowitz, ex-assistant district attorney, is the president of this new auxiliary body.

Next Sunday afternoon the Religious School will hold its Chanukah entertainment at 2:30 p. m.

The services are extremely well attended. The late Friday night services draw "capacity houses," with every seat occupied. Temple Peni-El, the first congregation on the Heights, is looking forward to expansion in the near future, beyond its present limits.

Haifa City Council Boycotts Jews

Haifa (By Mail, Jewish Press Association). — The local municipality built several stores near the post office, the first of which was rented to a Jew for a very high price. Some time later the City Council so maneuvered that the stores were no longer rentable to Jews. The date for rental was set for Saturday, and that was made known only to Arabs; the Jews were in this manner eliminated. The result was that the entire chain of stores is now in the hands of the Arabs and at a much lower rate than the first offered to the Jew.

YOUNG JUDAEA NOTES

The Board of Trustees of National Young Judaea is now practically completed. It consists of a very distinguished group of business and professional men whose help and guidance will be of the utmost benefit to the Young Judaea Organization. The following is a partial list: Chairman of the Board of Trustees, Hon. Nathan Straus; honorary vice-chairmen, Rabbi Elias L. Solomon, president of the United Synagogue; Judge Irving Lehman, president Jewish Welfare Board; Adolf Kraus, Judge Aaron J. Jevy, grand master Independent Order B'rith Abraham; Judge Jacob S. Strahl, Nasi of the Order of Sons of Zion. Members of the Board of Trustees, Peter J. Schweitzer, treasurer of the Zionist Organization of America; Mr. Israel Matz, Judge Henry J. Danenbaum, Miss Sarah Kussy, Harry H. Leibowitz, Louis Robison, Rev. H. Z. Masliansky.

Young Judaea has always had a strong hold in Connecticut. Under the active supervision of Miss Esther Zalkind the organization is being extended. At the Connecticut State Regional Union convention in New Britain, Young Judaea received full recognition. Every district was asked to co-operate with Young Judaea clubs.

Mr. Nat Cohen, supervisor of Young Judaea in Middletown, is organizing three new clubs in Ansonia. Miss Zalkind addressed a special Young Judaea meeting and as a result the following Young Judaea clubs were formed: Buds of Zion, leader Mrs. M. A. Aaronson; Blossoms of Zion, leader Mrs. Franklyn Cohn; Sons of White and Blue, leader Mr. David Levin; Sons of Zion, leader Mrs. Herman Salvin; Young Maccabees, leader Mr. Louis Kreiger. The leaders have been organized into the Ansonia Council, of which Mr. Louis Kreiger is president and Mrs. Franklyn Cohn secretary.

Farewell Reception to Judge Rosenblatt

Judge Bernard A. Rosenblatt, president of the American Zion Commonwealth, was tendered a farewell reception on Sunday, December 11, at the St. Regis Hotel, on the occasion of his departure for Palestine where he will assume his duties as member of the World Zionist Executive, resident in Palestine.

The reception was attended by about one hundred and fifty guests. Brief addresses were made by Louis Lipsky, Hon. Julius Miller, Borough President-elect Morris Rothenberg, Prof. Otto Warburg, Cecil B. Ruskay, Colonel Patterson, Emanuel Neumann and S. J. Weinstein, chairman of the evening. The reception was arranged under the auspices of the Directors and Trustees of the American Zion Commonwealth. Judge Rosenblatt is scheduled to sail for Palestine tomorrow.

Banks Founded in Pinsk with American Relief Money

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association). — Two banks were opened in Pinsk with the money sent by Pinsk Jews in America through the Joint Distribution Committee. A bank for Jewish business men and a special bank for Jewish artisans and small traders will aid in re-establishing Jewish trade in that city.

New Fabrics

for the

Winter Resort Season

The Winter season, when one is looking Southward, is emphatically a season of joyous effects — sartorially, at least. Therefore it is quite in order that many of the new fabrics destined for Southern wear present color tones that are as vivid as the plumage of a tropical bird.

There are white woolens, too, in a great diversity of attractive weaves; and lovely, natural-tone camel's-hair cloths, that will develop into the most practical and charming travel and sports cloths imaginable. And besides these, there are wool suitings and "frockings" in endless variety, as well as smart coatings for every possible need.

IN MEMORIAM.

MONNESS.—Hyman. In sad and loving memory of my dearly beloved father, who departed this life Dec. 1, 1920, 20 days in Kislev.

One year has gone, my heart still sore;
As time passes on I miss you and ma still more.
No one can fill your vacant places,
Lonely I am without you both.
How I miss you, no one knows!
My thoughts are always with you both
From early morn till evening's close.
I mourn the loss of my dear ones,
I did my best to save, beloved on earth.
Regretted, gone, remembered in the grave.
Never shall your memories fade.
My fond love shall linger in the spot
Where you both are laid.
I always sit and think of both of you
When I am all alone,
For memory is the only friend
That grief can call its home.
Friends may think you both forgotten,
But the wound is as fresh today
As the day you both, dear pa and ma,
Left me broken-hearted—just a year,
And ma twenty-three months today.
Your loving daughter,
DORA SHAPIRO.

MONNESS.—In memoriam of Hyman Monness, of the firm of H. Monness & Sons, 628 Broadway, in everlasting memory of our dear and beloved father, grandfather, and great grandfather, who passed away December 1, 1920, 20 days in Kislev. Gone but not forgotten. May his soul rest in peace.

461 Jewish Refugees Saved From Being Sent Back to the Ukraine

Refugees from the Ukraine to the number of 461, who received their Polish passports after having signed a guarantee that they would never come back to Poland, have been saved from being deported from Canada to the Ukraine inferno. This happened after they were all ready to seek a grave in the ocean rather than again undergo the terrible miseries from which they had escaped. After a long struggle they have been permitted to land in Canada.

This fight was waged by the aid of a few of the most prominent Jews in Canada, who were interested in the sad plight of their co-religionists by the well known communal worker, the Hon. Joseph Baroness, by the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society of Canada and by the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of America.

Some idea of the desperate condition of the refugees may be gauged from the fact that prior to their leaving Poland the Canadian consul warned them against going to Canada and warned the steamship companies, too, from taking them. The refugees, homeless and countryless, had no other alternative but to seize hold of the straw which meant to them the only possible rescue. The officials of the steamship companies were so touched that they took upon themselves the risk of transporting back the wanderers.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

The Junior Sections of the Council of Jewish Women will hold their next convention in Indianapolis on April 16, 17 and 18, it has been announced by Mrs. Isaac Halpern, of St. Louis, Mo. Mrs. Halpern, as national chairman of the Committee on Junior Auxiliaries, has already launched a very elaborate program in preparation for this event, which will be a significant one in the Junior calendar. At the annual meeting of the Board of Managers, Mrs. Halpern reported the organization of nine new Junior Auxiliaries.

At the Pennsylvania State Conference of Council Sections, which met in Pittsburgh, a very unique health exhibit was presented by Doctor Luba R. Goldsmith, national chairman of the Committee on Public Health. The exhibit included wax models representing a home nursing class, a life-size reproduction of a baby clinic, pictures, posters and charts. All materials served to emphasize the motto: "Health Is Your Fortune, Begin Building It Now." Doctor Goldsmith is planning to present the exhibit in many cities throughout the country.

The National Child Labor Committee of New York City is making a national appeal for funds toward its work. It has investigated labor conditions and finds many children of tender age employed in beet fields and in many other occupations, a great number of whom are under ten years of age. Contributions may be sent to the National Child Labor Committee at 105 East Twenty-second street, New York city.

The Executive Board of the Pennsylvania State Conference of Council Sections met at Philadelphia, and the following representatives attended and were entertained at luncheon by the State president, Mrs. Eugene Springer, Mrs. Moses Ruslander and Mrs. J. de S. Freund, of Pittsburgh; Mrs. William Weil, of Altoona; Mrs. Abraham Walker, of York; Mrs. S. W. Rose, of Indiana; Mrs. M. K. Arnold, Mrs. Morton Kohn and Mrs. Edward Brylawski, of Philadelphia.

The following new State chairmen were appointed: Mrs. J. de S. Freund, finance; Mrs. Morton Kohn, religious schools, and Mrs. Edward Brylawski, press. Plans were presented for financing the extension of work which consists of work among the inmates of State institutions, particularly among the feeble minded and the tubercular. The most interesting work to be inaugurated includes an effort to serve and organize Jewish women on Pennsylvania farms and to provide religious instruction for Jewish children in unorganized communities.

It was decided to hold the next annual conference at Philadelphia in October, 1922. A letter was received from the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, inviting the State conference to convene in that city.

SHOULD THE UNION OF ORTHODOX JEWISH CONGREGATIONS AND THE UNITED SYNAGOGUES CONSOLIDATE?

Dropsie College's President Favors a Union

Editor Hebrew Standard:
Replying to your letter of December 14, in which you call my attention to an editorial entitled "An Opportunity for Co-operation," suggesting a consolidation between the United Synagogue of America and the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations, I beg to say that now, as in past years, I favor such a consolidation.

When the United Synagogue was formed it was with the hope that a platform had been secured that would render possible the union of all congregations essentially loyal to traditional Judaism. This hope was expressed in the following phrase: "It shall be the aim of the United Synagogue of America, while not endorsing the innovations introduced by any of its constituent bodies, to embrace all elements essentially loyal to traditional Judaism." In other words, it was recognized, as you correctly indicated in your editorial, that the points of contact between these congregations are many and the points of difference slight.

It seems to me that just at this moment, when the great differences between the nations of the earth which seemed almost irreconcilable are in the course of composition, some method should be found whereby the congregations which call themselves orthodox and the congregations which call themselves conservative could work together for the general good of traditional Judaism.

The real point of cleavage in American Jewry was based upon the so-called Pittsburgh platform (1885) of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, containing practically a denial of the validity of the Jewish law. It was this act, which many believed to be an axe at the very roots of Judaism, that caused Dr. Sabato Morais to effect a combination of men like himself, Dr. Drachman and Dr. Mendes, who had in no way departed from the tradition, with men like Dr. Jastrow, Dr. Kohut and Dr. Szold, who had taken certain steps in this direction, but recoiled at the attitude of the Pittsburgh Conference. This combination laid the foundations of the seminary out of which the United Synagogue grew to carry to the people the ideals of the seminary.

It has been, to my mind, an error on the part of traditional Judaism to accept such labels as orthodox or conservative, because we represent the main stream of Judaism as developed in all lands where it was allowed free scope, and we are entitled to be known as exponents of Judaism without adjective or qualification. Only those who have departed from this main stream need to qualify their Judaism. A variation here and there from the customary development may be set down as the local minhag which Judaism has at all times in the course of its long history developed. There are differences between the minhag of the Sephardim and the Ashkenazim, and among them there are differences between the West and the East. The Sephardic prayer book used in Amsterdam, London, New York, Philadelphia and Montreal differs somewhat from that used in Constantinople or Tunis or Jerusalem, and the same is true of the Ashkenazic prayer book.

These and other differences should not be allowed to obscure our essential likeness and prevent a union when union is so badly needed. Those who believe in traditional Judaism ought to have the wisdom to unite if they want to make their own cause what I believe it should be, the norm of Judaism in America.

CYRUS ADLER,
President Dropsie College,
Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 15, 1921.

Rabbi Drachman Favors a "Get Together" Policy

Editor Hebrew Standard:—

You have asked me to give you for publication my views on your editorial of the 16th inst., in which you advocate the union of the United Synagogue and the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America. According to your request I beg to put before you my views on this question very briefly, as follows:

It is an axiomatic truth that every intellectual or spiritual movement, political or other school of thought, is entitled to its own representative organization to defend its principles and that it is not, generally speaking, safe to unite with other organizations pursuing different tendencies or ideals. There are in Judaism three distinctly recognizable differing schools of thought, known as radical reform, moderate reform or conservative and Orthodox or traditional. The differences between these are well known to every Jew and need no elucidation. Logically, therefore, every one of these differing elements is entitled to its own representative organization. Such has hitherto been the case. Three organizations exist which represent these three different wings, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, the United Synagogue and the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America. A priori, therefore, I should say that this condition is the correct one and that these organizations cannot coalesce without sacrificing their individual character. In particular the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations could not combine with either of the others without yielding the point which is vital to its existence, the insistence on the binding character of Rabbinical precepts. This has been my view throughout the past.

But I am free to confess that in recent years this view of mine has been considerably modified. Conditions in Jewry are not today the same as twenty-five years ago or earlier. Then all Jews were united in the view that the term "Jew" denotes a religious concept, that "Judaism" is the name of a religion, except that we differed, unfortunately, as to how this religion was to be conceived or carried out. Today this concept of Judaism or Jewishness is boldly and openly denied. There are those to whom "Jew" signifies merely the adherent of a certain nationality, others to whom it means persons who speak the Yiddish jargon, who are opposed to both the nationalistic and religious concepts of Judaism and largely favor the extreme of radical, social and political views. There are those particularly deplorable individuals who recognize perhaps in Judaism a religion but do not find in it sufficient spiritual uplift and Divine consolation to satisfy their religious cravings and who have therefore gone over in such deplorably large numbers to Christian Science.

Under these circumstances Reform and Orthodox Jews have been naturally and inevitably drawn much closer together. They are today brethren and fellow believers in a much stronger and more real sense than ever before, for they stand together for Judaism as a faith and against the heresies of irreligious nationalism, jargonism and the spineless stupidity of those who are blind to the spiritual wealth of the religion of Israel and seek pabulum for the souls in alien fields. Today the thoughtful Jew, be he personally Reform or Orthodox, must welcome any movement which tends to strengthen the religious idea among Jews and to convince them that Judaism is a religion capable of satisfying even the finest and loftiest spiritual aspirations.

I heartily favor, therefore, a coalition of all the religious forces in Judaism for united warfare against the common foe and, indeed, if for no other purpose than to demonstrate to the world that those who look upon themselves as Jews in the religious sense are still the overwhelming majority of the Jewish people. In the particular matter under discussion the question of the amalgamation of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America and the United Synagogue. I certainly favor co-operation and even some closer form of union, provided adequate guarantees be given that the standpoint of Orthodox Judaism be fully recognized and no official action taken by the greater association in opposition to the principles of its Orthodox constituents.

Yours very truly,
BERNARD DRACHMAN,
Rabbi Ohab Zedek Congregation
New York, Dec. 19, 1921. 5682.

Proposes a "Joint Distribution Committee" of Synagogues

Editor Hebrew Standard:

Referring to your editorial in last week's issue, it seems to me that the problem could be solved by uniting all religious institutions in the United States for the purpose of collecting funds for religious purposes with the understanding that each organization is to maintain its autonomy. The moneys as collected should be entrusted to a committee of men representing the different affiliations and the money should be so distributed that the organizations represented should each receive the necessary amount for carrying out this work. Men of different religious wings should be invited to a conference to work out a practical plan in order to carry out these duties so that the best results may be obtained for the public welfare and to prevent overlapping.

Co-operation should be sought in every possible way where there is no question of religious principle involved.

M. ENGELMAN,
Secretary Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations,
New York, December 19, 1921.

Rabbi Drob Commends Proposed Amalgamation

Editor Hebrew Standard:

I have read with great interest your editorial entitled "An Opportunity for Co-operation." I desire to congratulate you on the sentiment expressed therein. To my mind the suggestion is one of the most constructive ever made by a Jewish journal. It is about time that those who are striving to make traditional Judaism prevail in America get together, and work unitedly for the realization of their cherished ideal. Their forces are feeble, enough as it is, without further weakening them through dissensions within the camp. As chairman of the Religious Observance Committee of the United Synagogue I realize how little can be done for Kashruth, the observance of the Sabbath and the ceremonies, even by a united orthodoxy, and I can therefore only deplore the disruption which makes even that little impossible.

To be frank, I have never been able to account for the bitterness of feeling displayed by the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations against the United Synagogue. I have been with the latter organization since its very founding, and can truthfully state that throughout its career it has been unequivocally and unswervingly loyal to traditional Judaism, its beliefs and practices. Its record has been one of continuous effort to implant

Dear Children:
 You have all heard of Eliyahu Hanabi, the angel of peace, the angel who visits every Jewish home on the Seder nights of Passover and for whom a special cup of wine is placed upon the table, the angel for whom a special seat is assigned as the "Kisay shel Eliyahu" on every occasion when a Jewish son is entered into the covenant of Abraham. It is he, Elijah the Prophet, whom all Israel expects to bring them the glad tidings of the coming of the Messiah. This angel of peace was Pinechas, of whom the Torah says as follows: And the Lord spoke unto Moses saying, Pinechas, the son of Elazar, the son of Aaron, the priest, hath turned away my wrath from the children of Israel, while he was zealous in my stead in the midst of them. That I consumed not the children of Israel in my indignation. Therefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace. Rashi quoting the Talmud, treatise of Synhedrin, says, "Inasmuch as the tribes were insulting him saying, 'Do you see this son of Puti, whose father-in-law, 'pitern', fattened calves for the worship of idols, it is he who slew a prince of a tribe of Israel.'" Therefore, the Holy Scripture ranks him as a descendant of Aaron. While he was zealous in my stead—he executed my vengeance—he was filled with the wrath that I should have felt. Therefore say, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace—my covenant, which shall be to him a covenant of peace (Talmud Synhedrin), as one who gratefully reciprocates a favor done to him. Thus did the Holy One, blessed be He, also stipulate here his gifts of peace. And it shall be unto him this, my covenant, a covenant of an everlasting priesthood; for, although the priesthood had already been given to the children of Aaron, it was given only to Aaron and his sons, who were anointed with him, and to their descendants whom they would beget after they were anointed. But Pinechas, who was born before and was not anointed, was not included in the priesthood until that day. And thus we learn in the Talmud, treatise of Zebachim, Pinechas was not invested with the priesthood until he had slain Zimri. "And the name of the man of Israel that was slain, etc." Where Scripture ranks the righteous man for praise, it ranks the wicked man for infamy. A prince of a family division amongst the Simeonites—one of the five family divisions of the tribe of Simeon. Another reason for giving his full pedigree to make known how laudable was the act of Pinechas, that, although, this one was a prince, he did not refrain from avenging the Profanation of the Divine Name, therefore, Scripture tells us who was the slain one. And the name of the Midianite woman that was slain, etc. This illustrates the hatred of the Midianites, who have wantonly abandoned the daughter of a king to prostitution in order to cause Israel to sin. He (her father) was head of tribes, one of the five kings of Midian, namely Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Chur, and Reba, and he was the most important of all, because it is said "head of tribes," but because he so disgraced himself by abandoning his daughter, Scripture counts him third of a family division in Midian. The Midianites had five family divisions, namely, Ephraim and Ephraim, Chausch, and Abidah, and Eldaha, and he was a king over one of them.

And the Lord spoke unto Moses, saying, "Attack the Midianites and smite them for they are enemies unto you * * * in the matter of Peor, when they abandoned their daughters to prostitution in order to make you err in the idol-worship of Peor."

But He did not give the command to destroy the Moabites because of Ruth, who was destined to be descended from them, as it is said in the Talmud, treatise of Baba Kama.

And it came to pass after the plague that the Lord spoke unto Moses and unto Elazar, the son of Aaron, the priest, saying, "Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel." It may be compared to a shepherd whose flock was attacked by wolves, who killed a number of them, and he counted them to ascertain how many were left. Another reason for counting them is because when they went out of Egypt and were given in the charge of Moses, they were delivered to him after they were numbered.

Now that he was about to die and return his flock, he returns them also after they are numbered, by the descent from their fathers. They were ranked according to the tribe of their fathers and not of their mothers. And Moses, with Elazar the priest, spoke with them concerning the command of the Lord to number them, saying, They said to them, "Ye ought to be numbered." From twenty years old and upward shall they be numbered, as it is said, "Every one that passeth among those that are numbered, from twenty years old and above" (Exodus 30).

CHANUKAH LIGHTS
 By MOLLIE GOLDBERGER

A thousand thoughts they hold for me,
 Those brightly gleaming lights,
 Of Israel's struggles to be free—
 His soul's attaining heights.

Of courage speaks the first fair light
 With tongue of flashing flame;
 Of fortitude in darkest night,
 When blasphemed was His Name.

A tale with strife and conflict fraught
 It tells—that second light;
 How Israel's hosts, outnumbered, fought,
 And triumphed with the right.

The third light here takes up the tale
 Of Judah's dauntless band;
 And how they purged both hill and vale,
 Of idols cleared the land.

Of martyrs bold, whose dying breath
 The name of God proclaimed,
 The fourth light tells of their brave
 Death.

Whose spirits e'er remained.

The fifth light is the one that glowed
 In Temple courts so long;
 When Israel's hosts triumphant strode,
 To worship God in song.

But 'tis not all a tale of war,
 The story of the Jew;
 The sixth light tells of poet's lore,
 And fancies dreamed anew.

The seventh light is search for truth,
 That e'er sustained the heart,
 That kept Jews' souls in endless youth,
 Though cruel the foeman's dart.

Talmudic tales, Rabbinic laws,
 Are all reflected there;
 The eighth light shows for scholars' cause,
 Preserved traditions rare.

Eternal faith in God and right
 And triumph of His Love—
 The message of the kindling light
 Whose gleam is caught above!

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Hanky Panky Land is announced by the Columbine Producing Company for a special holiday attraction at the Century Promenade Theatre. This holiday frolic will be for old folks, young folks, and all sorts of folks, and will be a special treat for the youngsters. It is the intention of the Columbine Producing Company to make Hanky Panky Land the first of a series of annual holiday performances. The engagement will begin with the matinee Monday, Dec. 26, and there will be daily matinee and evening performances with Friday and Saturday morning performances at 10:30.

Following Ben-Ami's phenomenal success in "Samson and Delilah" last season, there were those who uttered ardent desires to see him in a different role before affirming their judgment of his greatness. Among the cognoscenti were those who had seen Ben-Ami at the Jewish Art Theatre in the "Idle Inn," in which play instead of an anaemic poet such as he showed us in "Samson and Delilah," he portrayed a swaggering Gypsylike horse thief.

Arthur Hopkins, who saw Ben-Ami play in the "Idle Inn," discerned its possibilities for the English stage. He at once obtained the English rights and had Isaac Goldberg make an adaptation. "The Idle Inn" received its Broadway premiere last Tuesday evening, and the Plymouth Theatre, which has seen some of the most remarkable first nights in this city, set a new standard. Never were so many people turned away and never was such a gathering of the arts and the professions and society gathered in one playhouse.

The staging of the "Idle Inn" was done under the personal direction of Arthur Hopkins. The settings are by Robert Edmond Jones.

"The New Disciple," which is said to be a very original and extraordinary photoplay founded on John Arthur Nelson's book of the same name, with an interpretation of Woodrow Wilson's "The New Freedom," began a limited engagement of two weeks at the Lyric Theatre. If the prophecies of those who have seen the previews come true, this novel picture will be the talk of the town, and the theatre will not be big enough to hold the audiences that will flock there. It relates the love story of a boy and a girl in a rural town, who find happiness—and a lot more—in a singular way. It is not alone their happiness, but the things they find that count and are expected to startle the community. The cast includes the Messrs. Pell Trenton, Alfred Allen, Walt Whitman, Arthur Stuart Hull, Walter Perkins, Charles Prindley and the Misses Norris Johnson, Margaret Mann and Alice Smith. A spoken prologue will precede the picture and a special musical setting has been arranged by Jacob Altschuler, who will conduct the orchestra.

Scarcely a play in years has been so much discussed as Eugene Walter's "The Easiest Way," in which David Belasco will present Frances Starr at the Bronx Opera House next week. It has always created an absolute sensation wherever it has been seen, and the reappearance of Miss Starr in her original role of Laura Murdock has brought renewed distinction to this young artist. The play was revived this season by Mr. Belasco at the Lyceum Theatre for a limited engagement of eight weeks, and the critics of the metropolitan dailies proclaimed it a masterpiece of dramatic construction and the best play the stage has offered in years. Miss Starr, too, was spoken of by the reviewers as giving the best performance of a most exacting role, the most difficult she has ever been called upon to portray in her entire career.

The supporting cast is the same one that appeared with Miss Starr at the Lyceum Theatre. Joseph Kilgour and Laura Nelson Hall are two members of the original company that were in the first production of the play. The other members of the company are Robert Kelly, Marion Kerby, John P. Brawn and Teris Loring.

The suggestion has been made that the Cecils of England, the patrician family among the members of which Arthur J. Balfour is numbered, are of Jewish origin. The statement is as yet only an unverified assertion. If it may be indisputably proved it will throw an interesting sidelight on Mr. Balfour's activity on behalf of the Zionist movement, not to mention the cause of world peace. Among the members of this notable group in times that are gone were the Minister Balfour of Elizabeth's day and the Marquis of Salisbury, the great Victorian premier.

Chanukah almost coincides with Christmas this year, so those of our own community who copy the non-Jewish practice of giving Christmas presents may camouflage their acts by bringing them within the charmed circle of the Chanukah gift. The racial and national significance of the festival of the Maccabees is thereby, of course, not minimized in the slightest degree and, perhaps, the givers and recipients of such gifts will thereby come to drink of the well of true Jewish inspiration for this and all future Jewish years.

In permitting the corpse of one who in life was an Orthodox Jew to be disinterred from its original place of burial, Justice Lydon of the local Supreme Court, in a decision recently handed down by him, followed established legal precedents in this State. In the case before the justice there were circumstances tending to prove that the burial in question was but temporary, and therefore came within the permissible exceptions for disinterment under Jewish law. Apart from this, however, the law of this State seems to be now that disinterments are permissible, regardless of the orthodoxy of the applicability of Jewish law of those concerned.

As if to prove that the Hebrew Union College is reaching a respectable age, attention may be called to the circumstance that within the past few months several members of its earliest graduating classes have retired from the active rabbinate. Rabbi Joseph Silverman and Henry Berkowitz may be recalled in this connection. The latest recruit to their rank is Rabbi Louis Grossmann, of Cincinnati, whose congregation has just retired him at the full amount of his annual salary. Rabbi Grossmann was impelled to take this step out of consideration for his health. We assume that all these rabbis, although no longer burdened with the active cares of the ministry, will long have abundant opportunity to work in and for their community.

One after the other the "old guard" of modern Jewish scholarship is being called to the Academy on High. A few weeks ago we recorded the death of David Hoffmann, one of the most erudite Talmudic students and the rector of the Orthodox Juedische Lehranstalt, at his home in Berlin. Now Ignaz Goldziher, of Budapest, the world's greatest Islamic scholar, has been called hence. Both men reached a great age and both produced many notable literary works which will constitute their monument for future generations. Both, too, had some connection with this country. A daughter of David Hoffmann is the wife of Prof. Alexander Marx of the Jewish Theological Seminary; Ignaz Goldziher visited this country at the time of the St. Louis Exposition and then made hosts of friends among American Jewry.

TEACHING THE NEW TESTAMENT

MORE light has now been thrown on the recently reported news to the effect that in a religion class of the Hampstead Synagogue of London a course of instruction in the New Testament has been provided. A number of those concerned in the matter have made explanations; the executive of the United Synagogue, which controls its Hampstead constituent, have met and debated the subject without reaching, we are sorry to have to add, a clear-cut and definite position. So it appears that the New Testament has become "habilitated" as a subject of instruction in a religion class of one of the constituents of the Orthodox United Synagogue of London. It is just this fact which surrounds the issue with great and grave implications for the future well-being of our faith and which renders our discussion thereof both appropriate and apposite.

The plea offered in extenuation of the action of Hampstead is on all fours with the plea which has been offered in the past and may well be set up again in the future in this country by Jewish iconoclastic radicals who wish to "flirt" with the dominant religion. The insistent demand for the course in question on the part of "mature" adolescents; the presentation of the "differences" and "distinctions" between Judaism and Christianity for the purpose of "strengthening" the faith of "Jews"; the rationalized (?) consideration of the New Testament teaching; these are the "arguments" advanced to justify such a degrading departure from the bedrock traditions of Judaism on the part of a religion class of a synagogue. We think these "arguments" present in and by themselves their own refutation.

For a religion class in a synagogue exists to teach the Jewish religion to its pupils, whether they be just above the infant age or the "mature" adolescents beloved of Cincinnati and now also, it would seem, of Hampstead. The beginning and the end of the task of such a class is to teach Judaism, and by such means and such alone to strengthen the hold our ancestral religion has, and ought to have, on its pupils. Religion classes of the churches exist to teach Christianity, and thereby to strengthen the hold that faith has on the pupils. A missionary duty of the kind outlined devolves neither on the followers of one faith nor on those of the other. We best panoply our people against the snares of alien outlooks by equipping them with an armory of defense within their own faith and traditions.

The generation of Anglo-Jewish scholars is being renewed, or, rather, we have reached the point in communal development where it is proper to speak of the present upholders of this tradition as the second generation. Just as Schechter and his peers constituted the company of these men who have passed into the Great Beyond, so Professor Samuel Alexander, Dean Hartog and Professor A. Wolf may rightly be looked upon as their successors. The last-named has just been appointed to the chair of logic and scientific method in the University of London. This university has always been quite closely knit to the Jewish community, and the newest appointment to its faculty pleasantly continues this interesting tradition.

Pennsylvania has in its Constitution a provision forbidding the grant of any moneys of the commonwealth to eleemosynary institutions falling within the rubric "sectarian." A recent decision of the Supreme Court of that State, to which we have already alluded, held that the Jewish Hospital of Philadelphia, a worthy charity dispensing its benefits to all without regard to race, creed or color, falls within the inhibition of this constitutional provision. The public officials of Pennsylvania have just carried this decision to its logical conclusion and cut off a number of philanthropies from their share of the public funds. Theoretically no other course was open to them. Practically the work and development of useful institutions are thus greatly impeded.

In the eighteenth century important rabbis "enjoyed" only beggarly stipends. Thus the head of the Ashkenazim of London, a predecessor of the present Chief Rabbi, received an emolument of 200 pounds sterling per annum. For the sake of completeness we may add that the rabbi who was thus requited for the performance of his spiritual tasks was none other than David Tebel Schiff, an ancestor of the late Jacob H. Schiff of this city. Perhaps our late communal leader, who all through his useful life diligently sought to improve the material position of our underpaid rabbis, knew of this niggardly treatment of his ancestor, an outstanding Jewish scholar and a man who left a profound impress on the community which nevertheless he faithfully served.

Seizing upon the detailed directions for his funeral of the late Gotthard Deutsch, Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, in The Reform Advocate, returns to the old phillipic against the necessity of having "ordained" rabbis conduct the burial ceremonies of members of the community. With a wealth of Jewish learning the spiritual guide of Chicago Sinai Congregations demonstrates the inutility and the lack of all Jewish precedent in the case of this practice. The method was contrived by practical rabbis and developed by a community which consisted largely of Yom Kippur and Jahrzeit Jews. Hence for this very reason it will be found difficult to eliminate it. Among Orthodox Jews this condition of affairs does not prevail nearly as much as among Reform Jews, but even Orthodox Jews exist to whom the honeyed praise of a rabbi spoken over the mortal remains of their dear ones is most acceptable.

ALLEGORY OF A BLOOD-STAINED COAT

"And they sent the coat of many colors, and they brought it to their father; and they said, This we have found: know whether it is thy son's coat or no." (Gen. xxxvii, 32.)

AND the Great Father had a large contentious family. Children of one blood, they nevertheless quarrelled and bickered among themselves. Envy, jealousy and strife constantly ran riot among them; and there was no end to the brothers' unbrotherliness to brother. The Great Father looked down upon them with infinite pity and watchfulness; but all His tenderness could not soften the passions of hatred and intrigue that rent the family asunder, threatening the divided world-house many a time and oft with utter collapse. But there was one son, upon whom the All-seeing Eye of the Father fell with particular solicitude. He was the least powerful among his brethren, the least influential and least considered. Nor was he without fault, nay, he had, at any rate in his earlier years, displayed serious defects of character. Ambitious, headstrong, an egotist whose pride was prolific of irritation in the family circle, he notwithstanding all these unlovely traits attracted to himself a larger share of the favor of the Divine Father than fell to the lot of his more powerful brothers. And these hated him all the more for this distinction.

The Great Father alone knew why He loved the younger brother more than all His children, for not as man judges doth He judge. He knew that in the impetuous, spirited bosom of the weaker son, beneath all that was repellent, there dwelt a soul shot with light from the world-soul—a soul pensive and dreamy, a visionary soul, future-bent. The Great Father, longing to find His image on earth and be it never so imperfect, yearning to mirror Himself in His children and be it never so dimly, saw in this Dreamer of Dreams more of Himself, more of His own pain and passion and peace, more of His own Spirit of Wisdom and Venture, than in all the warring and sparring children, whose courage spelt brutality, whose very forthrightness meant a heart undaunted by conscience. Imperfect, indeed, was the divine likeness as shown in the Dreamer, much distorted in parts: but what can you expect from a faint reflection, a shadowy semblance? The Father knew this, and understood, and forgave; and He loved the Imperfect for its very inability to do more than barely shadow forth the Perfect. Wherefore, as a mark of His favor, He made for the Dreamer a coat of many colors, a right royal garb, symbol of the royal distinction conferred upon him: for the Dreamer must ever walk as a king, uncrowned, nay, dis-crowned, among men.

Miserable colored-coat with its many gay stripes and checks!—it proved the Dreamer's undoing. This symbol of a royalty men would never recognize, this outward token of a reality too deep for surface acclaim, did but excite the ire and suspicion of the less favored sons, so that what had been meant as a sign of honor became a badge of shame and a stigma full of menace for the wearer. A sorry distinction indeed, this wearing of the divine dreamer's robe, which, by its very brightness (his dreams, too, were colorful!), served as a target for ribald jests and ruthless poisoned shafts. Through the ages the Dreamer wore this robe; and no hair-shirt of flagellant or ascete ever proved such torment to the soul and such weariness to the flesh as this strange garment; and no martyr or saint ever wore and bore the like of it with such pain and passion and peace as did he—with something of the pain and passion and peace wherewith the Great Father wears about Him the colored garment of the material universe.

And what did the warring and sparring brothers mean by coveting the doubtful distinction of wearing the Dreamer's robe? Could they have followed the Dreamer's destiny? Could they have trodden the same road while wearing the same robe? Could they have endured the dark misery which comes to every breast that has chosen to be robed in the colors of dreams and airy fancies? Or did they think that the lure of the symbol could be had without the burden of the reality? Were they satisfied with the empty trappings, wearing the royal robe without bearing the royal responsibility? Is it the surface glory they desired—the garish glitter of golden cupolas when the sunbeams play waywardly upon costly cathedrals: and not the still inward radiance that suffuses faces with a shining whose deep-lying source is in the spirit—as when a subdued glow settles around hidden altars, come who knows whence? Why did they ask for the glory of the garment, if they refused what went with it—the shame, the contumely?

And the day came when they encompassed their design—the design of wearing the garment, destroying its original wearer, while themselves escaping his fate. Oh, it was clever! They sold the Dreamer into exile, they killed his kith and kin by the thousands, they spilled his blood from thousands of wounds for thousands of years, they assumed his garments; and thus clad they swaggered through the world in the wake of the blood they were spilling. And they boasted that the garment they held was the same garment that they had taken from the Dreamer's back. The more they repeated this boast, the more they forgot that what they were holding was merely the empty robe, under which there throbs no longer the same heart, the same love. Theirs was but the outward seeming, not the inward being. Yet they dared to say that the garment they held was covered with even greater glory than before; that it was garnished with the dreams of all the prophets and visionaries of the East. Here is the fulfilment of all prophecies! they cried; and though the Dreamer's coat was stained with the Dreamer's blood, they dared with murderous hands to raise it up to the Great Father and ask Him: Know now whether it is thy son's coat or no?

Foolish boasters! Do ye not know that the only thing genuine about the coat is its first wearer's blood?

PERSONALITIES

It is interesting, and saves stimulus to the imagination, to arrange a group of personalities under one index. We did so last week at the unconscious instigation of Bide Dudley. We do so now at the equally unconscious prompting of David Belasco. Mr. Belasco recently was tendered a famous party by his friends in honor of his four decades of stage activity, and among his guests was Otto H. Kahn. Mr. Kahn was seated next to the lovely Elsie Ferguson at the guest of honor table and his polished, immaculate and dignified appearance caused us immediately to reserve him for this week's text. Therefore have we for our present pleasant reading some gentlemen who are an eternal cause of grievance for our anarchists.

First Mr. Kahn. Otto Herman Kahn is the aristocrat of Wall Street. He is a peculiar compound of art and business, idealism and practicality, the like of whom it is, we believe, impossible to find in this stage of America's development. He holds his unique position by reason of his perfect familiarity with artistic elements as with business ingredients. As one writer has remarked of him, he does not need an expert when he goes to buy a Franz Hals painting for half a million dollars, nor a guide when he attends the opera. One might add, nor a secretary to prepare his speeches when he goes lecturing. More than any other man in America has Mr. Kahn identified himself with artistic projects, while at the same time keeping strict and methodical control over his share of executive responsibilities at Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

When Mr. Kahn took over the task of putting the Metropolitan Opera House on its feet it was in a sad way as regards finances. "Aida" glittered in a blaze of jewels and Eastern sumptuousness, but the opera bookkeeper was regular in his reports of enormous annual deficits. Today Mr. Gatti smiles benignly at the financial reports. His worries are confined to other matters.

The beautiful undertaking of the New Theatre in New York, a home of stage art more or less approximating the national theatres of Europe, was built with much of the Kahn inspiration. That it today is the Century Theatre and houses

Shubert attractions is due purely to unavoidable circumstances.

The Century Opera House, where opera was to be presented on a proper scale, in English, and at popular prices, was Kahn's plan.

The French Theatre, where Mr. Coppeau attempted to transport his Paris Vieux-Colombier to New York, was backed by Mr. Kahn.

Each worthy musical or artistic enterprise to promote artistic culture in America is sure to have Mr. Kahn among its directors. Even the East-West Players, a remnant and reminder of the Little Theatre fashion in vogue some years ago, which is distinguished from its contemporary organizations by an occasional production of a translated Jewish play, reported that it had received a promise of substantial help from Mr. Kahn in its project of a permanent home for its activities.

Here is Mr. Kahn's artistic creed:

"Art can be as educational as universities. It has elements which, to a great part of our population, can make it as nourishing as soup kitchens, as healing as hospitals, as stimulating as any medical tonic. Maecenases are needed for the dramatic stage, the operatic stage, the concert stage; for conservatories and art academies; for the encouragement and support of American writers, painters, sculptors, decorators—in fact, for all those things which in Europe are done by princes, governments and communities. There is vast opportunity here for cultural and helpful work. To strive towards fostering the art life of the country, towards counteracting harsh materialism, towards relieving the monotony and strain of the people's everyday life by helping to awaken or foster in them the love and understanding of that which is beautiful and inspiring, and aversion and contempt for that which is vulgar, cheap and degrading—this is a humanitarian effort eminently worth making."

A remarkable creed to have been enunciated by a man who is one of a group of the world's leading financiers and one of America's greatest railroad experts. Perhaps not so remarkable to have spoken these words, some business men will say, as to have had the time to think of them.

In this connection there is an interesting anecdote about Mr. Kahn and Edward H. Harriman. Through the affairs of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Mr. Kahn was associated often with Mr. Harriman in various enterprises, and he once timorously expressed to the famous railroad king his desire to interest himself in art in a practical way.

"Go ahead and do it," said Mr. Harriman, "if you don't let it interfere with your application to business. If you keep it in its place it will do you no harm, but good. It will be exercise and practice for imagination. Don't you ever let your imagination get rusty."

Otto H. Kahn was born in Mannheim, Germany, one of eight children. His father was a banker, and, like the home of many other European financiers, the Kahn home was a gathering place for members of the artistic fraternity, and young Otto began to conceive an ambition for a musical career. He went through a course of music study and mastered several instruments, but when it came to choosing a vocation his father put him in the bank, permitting only Otto's brother to be a musician, the latter eventually being appointed to a professor's chair at the Royal Academy of Music, Berlin.

Mr. Kahn came to America about twenty-eight years ago, and soon after married Miss Addie Wolff, daughter of Abraham Wolff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co.

* * *

If few financiers can claim the idealism of Otto H. Kahn, how fewer still can claim the self-sacrificing breadth of character of Paul M. Warburg?

Paul M. Warburg gave up affiliations that netted him $500,000 a year to accept a position on the Federal Reserve Board at $12,000. In addition to sacrificing about half a million a year for the privilege of serving his adopted country he was subject to investigation as to his entire sincerity in accepting the appointment.

When Warburg came to America around twenty years ago to marry Nina J. Loeb, daughter of the late Solomon Loeb, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and after his joining his father-in-law's banking house he was impressed with the looseness of the United States currency system. He was an expert in banking and currency; his training had taken in years of experiences in all parts of the world, as was befitting a son of a Warburg of the great Hamburg banking house of Warburg & Warburg, whose antecedents date back to the time of Washington, and he saw that there was much he could say and offer to improve and stabilize his new country's banking system. But Warburg is a quiet and studious man and he hesitated to impose himself, a newcomer, on the public attention of America.

After the 1907 panic Mr. Warburg's opinions naturally had to come out, and they were received enthusiastically. He was one of a party of great American bankers that evolved the plans for the Federal Reserve System, and he was eventually appointed by Wilson a member of that board.

Mr. Warburg has been more a student of banking than a banker. The problems of banking and currency have interested him more than the subjects themselves, and this trait has shown itself all through his career.

Born in the lap of bank notes, so to speak, Mr. Warburg has never had to fight to make his way, and the trend of his nature and abilities are therefore the more remarkable. When he graduated from the gymnasium at eighteen he was placed with a firm of exporters. His work called for general usefulness and his labor was more manual than mental. After two years of this cutting of his practical wisdom teeth he was taken into his father's banking house in Hamburg, where he learned how the merchandise he had formerly seen shipped was financed. Then he was sent to the London money market. After this came France and then back to Hamburg. In 1893 he was sent on a trip around the world, and it was at his American stopping-off place, New York, that he met his future bride.

When he returned to Hamburg he was at last made a member of his father's firm, and after he had married Miss Loeb, two years later, his annual visits to America paved the way for his eventual settling here in 1902.

As you doubtless know, Paul M. is the brother of Felix M. Warburg, who has done so much for the Jewish war sufferers, and in his brother's work of mercy Paul has been no little help.

America next to the Rockefellers. Their holdings are tremendous. The American Smelting & Refining Co. and the American Smelters' Security Co. do a business of three hundred million dollars a year. And they have other interests besides.

The Guggenheim family is said to control half the copper supply in the world and they are one of the most powerful operators in silver ore, gold, lead and zinc.

The history of the family's accession to wealth and power reads like a fable. Simon Guggenheim came to the United States in 1847. His son Meyer built up a successful manufacturing business here and in course of everyday transactions he had occasion to help out a friend who was in difficulties with a mine in Colorado. Through this friend Meyer Guggenheim became interested in mining and smelting and saw great possibilities in this field.

Meyer had seven sons, the elder of whom had engaged in the lace business in Switzerland. He called his sons to the paternal home in Philadelphia and after reading them a lecture on the theme "In Unity There Is Strength" he outlined to them the potentialities of mining and smelting and offered to help them get a foothold in the business if they all were willing to work in a united cause. The sons were willing and they worked.

In the acquisition and development of mining property the Guggenheim sons, under the leadership of Daniel, the present head of the family, toiled like trojans. Seldom does one meet a case of such hardy pioneering by Jews. They invaded wilderness and mountain fastness; they wrung the treasures of the earth by prodigious labor and daring.

They not only acquired and developed mines; they devised new methods of smelting and refining and revolutionized these industries. Today their properties are located in Utah, Chile and Alaska. The Chile property is situated in what was a barren desert, 9,500 feet above sea level, where moisture and vegetation were unknown. Providing transport and necessities for human existence was a marvelous engineering feat in itself. The Alaska mine is atop a hill which defied operators for years until the Guggenheims took it over.

Mr. Daniel Guggenheim now has leisure to indulge in the appreciation of the arts and to engage in some hobbies. But it took over forty years of toil to enjoy these privileges.

Thus we have briefly sketched the activities—and perhaps the men themselves—of three of the powers of money who sit on thrones on and around Wall Street—and who belong to us. If their careers will have proved inspiring to our readers and resultant in the way of increased material effects, we beg of them to remember the source of their affluence. Journalism, alas, is one profession which is immune to benefit from the panaceas it introduces.

To turn to more cheerful subjects, familiars with the Metropolitan Opera have at length discovered that Marie Jeritza, the "blonde thunderbolt" who caused amazed enthusiasm to run amuck this season among music lovers, and made the pulse of Jerry Farrar quicken somewhat, is really not a German or Austrian, but hails from Russia. Perhaps we may not be too bold in thinking that here lies a new trail for us. We found out that Pola Negri was Anna Schwartz. Is it a far cry from Marie Jeritza to—well, this story will be continued.

Conrad Bercovici, the writer who blossomed forth into real fame these days through his gypsy stories, has now reason to rail at fate. Bercovici hates the theatre, and it was just his luck to have two impudent persons dramatize his story, "Fanutz," and to produce it in London. By the by, Edward J. O'Brien has chosen this story for his anthology of best stories for 1921.

And to finish up, Eva Le Gallienne, who is playing opposite to Joseph Schildkraut in "Liliom" and is scoring a great success thereby, has, in a talk before dramatic students, classed Ben-Ami with Bernhardt and Duse, not to speak of Nazimova.

Polish Notables at Jewish Exhibition
Vienna (Jewish Press Association).—An exhibition arranged here by the Jewish Institute "Relief Through Work" has called forth the admiration of the entire non-Jewish community. General Zeligowski, accompanied by many other notable men of his administration, spent hours at the exhibition, while the Department of Education has sent out a circular to all schools advising teachers and pupils alike to visit the remarkable exposition of Jewish art and labor.

Hias Taking Census of Immigrants for Next Year

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—The local office of the Hias has commenced to register all emigrants who wish to immigrate to America during the coming year. The names of their relatives and friends in America are taken note of and all documents are being prepared in order to facilitate their departure.

UNITED SYNAGOGUE CHANUKAH FESTIVAL

Arrangements are practically completed for the Chanukah reception which the affiliated sisterhoods of the New York branch of the United Synagogue will hold Wednesday afternoon, December 28, at 2 p. m., at the Hotel Pennsylvania.

It is planned to have a hostess at every table to help engender that genial spirit of sociability which makes such functions so enjoyable. The names of the hostesses are as follows: Mmes. Goodman A. Rose, Jacob Kohn, H. Levy, Abraham Hess, D. D. Abrams, Hirsch, Isaac Polack, David Kass, T. Levy, R. Weinberger, Israel Goldstein, Greenberg, Hodes, S. Hemley, S. J. Frieden, A. G. Weinstein, M. Barkp, D. Schneider, Greenberg, E. Weinstein, Propper, E. Epstein, M. Moses, J. A. Sachs, E. Lowenthal, S. Woolman, M. S. Hodes, I. Goldfarb, S. Seiderman, Zimmerman, C. Cohn, Marcusson, Dorothy Rosenberg, Adlerstein, Irene Sarnoff, Samuel Greenbaum, S. M. Cohen, S. Klein, Scaison, Oberwager, Samuel Soloff.

Mrs. Max Margolis, president of the Council of Jewish Women of Philadelphia, will deliver an address on "Meeting Conditions." Due to the kindness of Mr. Jacob Friedman, Jr., a noted patron of music, a number of artists will render a musicale. The rest of the program will be as follows:

Greetings, Mrs. Charles I. Hoffman, president Women's League of the United Synagogue; remarks, Mrs. Samuel Spiegel, chairman Women's Activities Committee; piano, "Dance Negre" (Cyril Scott), Scherzo C Sharp Minor (Chopin), Rita Maginet; "Amarilla" (Ciccini), Aria from Opera "Werther" (Massenet), Bernard Olshansky, baritone, with Irene Varley at the piano; address, "Meeting Conditions," Mrs. Max Margolis; Slavonic Dance, E. Minor (Dvorak-Kreisler), "Der Nussbaum (Schuman-Auer)", "Malaguena" (Sarasate), Nina Wulfe, violin; kindling of the Chnukah lights Dr. E. L. Solomon, president United Synagogue of America; Hatikvah; "Star Spangled Banner."

Central Jewish Institute Activities

The Sunday Evening Neighborhood Social Dance, conducted weekly at the Central Jewish Institute, 125 East 85th street, was preceded Sunday, December 18, by a basketball game between the Institute and the College Settlement. The hosts were severely beaten by the Settlement Five, the score being 26-11.

A large group gathered to witness the contest and participate in the dancing after the game. The amiable character of those present and their refined behavior is very encouraging to those who look to these dances as a means of developing a healthy sociability among the Jewish youth of the neighborhood.

At the council meeting of the Junior and Intermediate Leagues, December 18, it was decided that the intermediate organization publish a bi-weekly paper. An editorial board, consisting of Miss Anna Kapelowitz, Miss Rebecca Schmuckler, Miss Ethel Masliansky and Mr. Israel Frank were elected. The first number will appear January 9, 1922.

The Lillian Hat Shop, at 258 Huguenot street, New Rochelle, just at present is offering some special bargains in hats at greatly reduced prices. These are exclusive Parisian models and are the latest creations and the extreme moderation of the prices must appeal at once to the feminine heart. Prospective patrons are assured of a hearty welcome at the Lillian Hat Shop.

$55,000 More for Poland, Russia and Palestine

The sum of over $550,000 for relief work in the countries that suffered from the war, particularly in Russia and Palestine, was appropriated by the Joint Distribution Committee at its last executive session last Thursday. Besides the leaders and officials of the Joint Distribution Committee, the following people participated in the session: Messrs. Marshall, Lehman, Bernheim, Dr. Adler and Sulzberger, from the American Jewish Relief Committee; Messrs. Fischel, Kamaiky, Rabbi Teitelbaum and Engelman, from the Central Relief Committee, and Mr. Morris Rothenberg, from the People's Relief Committee.

The larger part of the appropriated sum, $350,000, was assigned for relief work in Soviet Russia, to be used as follows: $200,000 for immediate relief in foodstuffs, clothing, medicaments and other things for the vicinity of Minsk and other Jewish regions of White Russia. The money is to be submitted to the American Society of Friends, which society has already distributed for the Joint Distribution Committee's relief products for the sum of $100,000. This last distribution was made under the supervision of Dr. Joseph Rosen, representative of the Joint Distribution Committee in Russia, who had recently visited Minsk, Vitebsk and Bobruisk and had personally directed the relief distribution among the Jewish population.

To the American Relief Administration $100,000 is to be given for emergency relief to the Jewish population in certain regions in Ukraine; $50,000 is to be used for seeds for the Jewish colonists in Ukraine.

Next to Russia in the relief sums appropriated is Palestine, for which the Executive session has confirmed the loan of £50,000 (over $200,000) to the Co-operative Bank, which is being founded by the Palestine Development Council and the Palestine Economic Council in London, with the aid of the Joint Distribution Committee and the ICA.

Special funds for the refugee relief will receive $3,500, divided as follows: 2,000 to help the Jewish refugees who recently arrived in Cuba and $1,500 for medical instruments for the refugee physicians in Poland.

The Executive session also resolved that the Joint Distribution Committee adopt an additional thousand children in Poland, Lithuania and Austria.

One of the finest appointed restaurants in the city is Reed's Restaurant, at No. 42-46 West 33d street, located right in the heart of the garment centre and adjacent to the 34th street retail shopping district. But Reed's location is not all that commands it, for it is a restaurant where only the highest grade food is dispensed and where the service has attained the highest degree of perfection. Reed's Restaurant is decidedly popular in price and those who have to stay down late or on Sundays will welcome the fact that Reed's is open at those times.

THE LITTLE SHAMESS

DR. GEORGE H. COHEN

(Editor Hebrew Record, Hartford, Conn.) Little Simchah was but seven years old and possessed the intelligence natural to boys of his age, and yet, one evening he asked his father—a man of forty—a question which the latter admitted was logical, one which he attempted to answer as well as he could, but which utterly failed to satisfy the child. The reason for Simchah's dissatisfaction was that his sense of fairness—inborn in the American child—was offended. The answer given him by his father increased the pity which he felt in his heart for a certain object; made him feel more keenly than ever before that the treatment accorded it was unjust, and almost made him promise himself to do all he could to remedy this state of affairs.

A youthful but important question had been asked; an unsatisfactory answer had been given, and this is how it happened. It was Chanukah. Simchah's father had returned from his day's work, and the other members of the family were also at home. No one dared to leave the house before the Chanukah candles had been kindled, as this ceremony had practically become a family ceremony. During the week of Chanukah special pains were taken by everybody to be at home when the symbolic candles were to be lighted.

This particular evening was of special importance, however, to little Simchah. It was the fifth night of the holiday and his father had promised him that if he would be a particularly good boy during the first part of the festival he would let him himself kindle five real wax candles. Yes, he had told him that he would let him do it all himself right in front of the whole family, and of course, it goes without saying that Simchah was very eagerly looking forward to this wonderful occasion.

At last it had arrived, and before performing his part of the ceremony himself, his father said to Simchah: "Well, Simchah, since mother tell me that you have been a good boy so far during this holiday, I am going to let you light your five candles first. You have seen me do it up to now. Do you think that you will know how to do it yourself?"

Of course, Simchah knew how. He flew to the closet, took out the candlestick and the little box of wax candles, picked out five of them and placed them carefully in the candlestick. "See, I have them all ready," he said proudly.

"Oh, but you need another candle," said the father. "You have forgotten the little shames—the little service candle which we use in order to light the others. Now then, get one quickly, light it with a match, and then use it in order to light the other candles."

"Of course," and little Simchah proudly rubbed a match on the match box, lighted the shames, carefully put out the match, to show that he appreciated the responsibility with which he had been entrusted, then slowly lighted the five candles one after the other and with a loud and firm voice repeated after his father the holiday blessings over the little dancing flames.

"Now, my son," said the father, "let the shames burn a little while and then put it out."

"Father," said little Simchah, "why do you put out the little shames? I should think that you would let it burn with the other candles. It is just as good as they are, isn't it?"

"No, my son. The little shames must be put out because its light detracts from the glory of the other candles. They are the holiday candles and their number designates the night of the festival. Nothing must be permitted to interfere with them. So put out the little shames. It has already burned long enough."

And then came the question that received an answer which failed to satisfy and which filled the child's heart with the feeling that a grave injustice was being committed. It was simply: "But, pa, do you think it is right to put out the little candle which gave the light and the fire to the other candles? What harm does it do the other candles if it does keep on burning? Isn't it lighter if an extra candle is burning. Do you think it's right, pa?"

"You are only a child, Simchah," said his father, caressing his head. "Some day when you grow up you will understand and you will not ask such foolish questions. You have done very well tonight, and now take a Jewish history and read about the heroes of the Chanukah story, and when you go to bed tonight, pray that you, too, may grow up to be as good a Jew as Judas Maccabaeus."

Little Simchah obeyed, but as he read he would raise his eyes to the little candles, and within he felt—well, he did not know just what it was. He knew, however, that something was wrong. The little shames was not getting a square deal. And in his childish mind he wished he could help to right the wrong.

Years passed. Simchah's father had gone the way of the world. The members of the family were scattered, and Simchah now had a household and family of his own, and when Chanuka arrived he, too, like his father before him, lighted the little candles and blessed them.

One Chanuka night Simchah gathered his children about him and told them of the events giving rise to the story of the holiday. He related how the wicked King Antiochus had tried to make the Jews give up their religion; how he had ransacked the Temple and polluted everything but the little jar of oil which, through a miracle, burned eight days; and he described the wonderful deeds of the Maccabaeans. The children were listening with great interest.

"And now, children, did you just see me put out the little shames? When I was a child I always considered it an injustice to do so, and I still consider that it is wrong, but I have one great consolation, and I want you always to remember it.

"It was the Jews, your ancestors, that first gave to the world the Ten Commandments—the light and fire of civilization. They were the little shames that lighted the candles that drove away the fog and darkness of heathenism, barbarism and polytheism. And since then, wherever these new candles burn and shine, every effort is made to put out forever the little shames that made their light possible. Everybody has, throughout the ages, tried to exterminate the weak little shames—the Jew. It is wrong; it is as unjust as can be, and it is not a fair and square deal, but nevertheless it is so.

"There is, however, one great consolation that we have, and this is something that I hope you children will always remember. The Jewish people have lived through ages of oppression and persecution because their national and racial feeling has kept their religion and them alive, and vice versa, and if only they will continue to remember that they are Jews; if only they will do all they can to strengthen both their Judaism and themselves as Jews, they will be as indestructible in the future as they have been in the past, and all the efforts of their enemies to put them out of existence will be unavailing. Do you want an excellent proof of this, my children? It is furnished us by the little shames itself in the Chanukah ceremony.

"Remember, that in spite of the fact that the little shames is despised and is not allowed to show its light as it should, each year when it comes time to have the other candles show their light, the first thing that is always done is—what? Why, it is a simple performance. Before the other candles can get any light, they, the honored and beloved and revered carriers of flame must get their light and fire over and over again from year to year from that wretched, despised and hated, but in spite of all, the everlasting little shames."

58 Enrolled at Jewish Theological Seminary—133 in Teachers' Course

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America was held at the residence of the chairman of the board, Louis Marshall, Esq., Sunday, December 11.

Dr. Cyrus Adler, the acting president, reported that the enrollment of the present academic term of the seminary is 58—43 in the four years of the regular department, 11 in the evening courses, 3 in the course leading to the Hatorath Horaah, 1 in the post-graduate course. The course leading to the degree of doctor of Hebrew literature has a registration of 21.

The enrollment in the Teachers' Institute teachers' training course is 133, 71 of whom are new students. Of these, 54 are men and 79 women. The extension department of the Teachers' Institute has an enrollment of 150 students, 39 men and 111 women, and the post-graduate course has 16, 1 man and 15 women. The total registration is 299. In accordance with their own offer the students of the Extension Department are this year paying a tuition fee. In view of the large number of students and the overcrowding of the present classes, some of the courses have been transferred to the Central Jewish Institute, 125 East Eighty-fifth street.

A special course of lectures on "The Practical Work in the Ministry" has been arranged by the United Synagogue in consultation with the seminary faculty for the students of the seminary.

The following scholarships were awarded to the Seminary students: The Lewis W. Steinbach scholarship, for the highest marks in the annual examinations; Joseph M. Marcus; the entrance examination scholarship, Benjamin Cohen; the Cleveland scholarship, Nachman Arnoff; the Derech Emenah (Arverne) scholarship, Max Davidson; the Israel Friedlaender Memorial Scholarship, Herman Heilprin; the Joseph Blumenthal scholarship, Alter F. Professor Mordecai M. Kaplan, principal of the Teachers' Institute, has given a donation of $2,000 for the establishment of a loan fund for the use of the students of the Teachers' Institute. Individual donations amounting to $850 have also been received for the scholarship fund of the Teachers' Institute.

The report of the librarian, Professor Alexander Marx, who has recently returned from abroad, shows that the library of the Seminary has acquired 892 new books and 9 manuscripts, making a total of 64,865 books and 1,907 manuscripts. During his visit to Europe Professor Marx secured groups of original documents relating to the history of the Jews of Frankfurt, Prague and Norden in the eighteenth century, twenty documents from the Ehrfurt archive from 1688-1709 and documents about the assumption of family names in 1813 and naturalization papers of the nineteenth century. The greater portion of the documents secured relate to the Jews of Frankfurt.

A branch of the Contributors of the Seminary has been established at Newark, N. J., through the efforts of Rabbi Charles I. Hoffman, and similar branches are now being contemplated by members of the alumni in various parts of the country.

BROOKLYN NOTES.

Big Brothers to Have Benefit

A monster benefit performance is being arranged by the Jewish Big Brother Committee of Brooklyn Lodge No. 753, of the Independent Order B'nai B'rith, to be held on Sunday evening, February 5 at the New York Hippodrome. The program will be made up of Broadway headliners and prominent opera and concert singers. The proceeds of the affair will be applied toward the Big Brother work of the organization.

For the past three years the Jewish Big Brother Committee has handled 3,000 cases of delinquent boys, 90 per cent. of whom were eventually discharged by the children's court and other agencies.

Samuel Stark is chairman of the Big Brother Committee, and the other officers are Gaston Koch, chairman General Arrangement Committee; Ben S. Michaelson, secretary; Elijah J. Levy, financial secretary; Jacob I. Krause, treasurer; Sam Neuwirth, chairman Committee on Tickets; Ben S. Michaelson, chairman Committee on Programs; Paul Gold, chairman Committee on Publicity; Maurice P. Davidson, Patrons and Guests Committee; and the committees are: Abraham Aaron, Irving Applebaum, Clarence G. Bachrach, Alfred Burke, Dr. A. L. Cardozo, Murray Ehrenhaus, Benjamin J. Friedman, Irving Gambert, Rabbi Louis D. Gross, Rabbi Harry Halpern, Rabbi Samuel J. Levinson, Eugene H. Levy, Jr., Mark G. Levy, Rabbi Alexander Lyons, Jean Mathias, Albert Mook, David Morgenstern, Commander Albert Moritz, Dr. Joseph M. Nassau, Hugo H. Piesen, Max Rockmore, Herbert T. Rosenfeld, Wm. Schlansky, Louis A. Stern and Harry Tracey.

Jewish Big Sisters Dance

The Jewish Big Sisters of the Council of Jewish Women, affiliated with the Brooklyn Juvenile Probation Association, held a dance on Saturday evening, December 17, at the St. George Hotel.

The character of the work of the Jewish Big Sisters is twofold: 1. The preventive work, looking after the welfare of those children who are in danger of becoming delinquent and saving them from commitment to an institution. Often more than that, the child is saved from a record in the Children's Court. 2. The "after care" of children who have been in institutions and on probation. A large percentage of the children discharged from those institutions are returned to their homes and to the same conditions which caused the commitment in the first place.

The work of the organization is accomplished through trained workers who make all preliminary investigations and reports, and through the Big Sisters, who take up the work with the individual child. It is all a highly specialized form of service.

The officers are: President, Miss Edith Bernstein; secretary, Miss Sophia Kaplan; treasurer, Helen Gottsegen. The committees are headed by the following chairmen: Temporary Relief, Miss Bess Levin; Dental and Clinical Care, Mary E. Waldman; legal adviser, Mrs. C. Steinfeld; Clothing, John Arenstein; Dance Committee, officers of the organization; field worker, Miss Dushkin.

The proceeds of the affair will be used to defray the expenses of the Jewish field worker, the scholarship fund and the vacation fund.

$70,000 Result of Sokolow Meeting in Bensonhurst

Several thousand Jews of Bensonhurst, Bath Beach and Mapleton turned out on Wednesday evening, December 14 to greet the Sokolow delegation. As a result of the meeting there was raised $10,000 in cash and $60,000 in pledges. Addresses were delivered by Vladimir Jabotinsky, Dr. Goldstein, Professor

Educational Sisterhood

The annual installation of officers of the Educational Sisterhood of Congregation Sons of Israel, Benson and 21st avenues, Bensonhurst, took place at the Colonial Mansion, Bath avenue and Bay 22d street, last week.

Mrs. Nachman H. Eben, who is an eloquent speaker, installed the officers in the following order: Mrs. E. Friedrich, president; Mrs. S. Bendheim, vice-president; Mrs. Weissman and Mrs. Gelles, secretaries. Mrs. J. S. Colman, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. H. P. Pasternick, treasurer. The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Rabbi Nachman H. Eben, of the Congregation Sons of Israel, who commended the Sisterhood on the excellent work it has accomplished and pointed out the still greater opportunities for service before it.

A burlesque show built for speed and comedy is to be offered when the Monte Carlo Girls Company opens a week's engagement at the Star beginning with a matinee Monday. A galaxy of principal performers, each a star in her or her particular line, makes up the personnel of the Monte Carlo Girls Company and among these who stand out prominently are Miss Sarah Hyatt, Jessie McDonald, Johnny Hudgins, Joe Stanley and Lew Marshall. Two grand gala performances will be given on New Years Eve, Saturday evening, Dec. 31. The first show starts promptly at 7:30 p. m. and the Midnight Jubilee and fun frolic at 10:30 p. m. Many entertaining features will be introduced.

Temple Petach Tikvah

The Sisterhood of the temple is arranging a theatre party for the 16th of January at the Shubert-Crescent Theatre.

The Sisterhood of Temple Petach Tikvah will hold a whist December 25 at Reiser's Hall, Rockaway and Pitkin avenues. Prizes will be awarded. The hostesses are Mrs. A. Lercher and Mrs. S. Spiegel.

Rabbi Weilerstein has organized a Junior Congregation.

Temple Petach Tikvah now has four Young Judaea Clubs. They are under the leadership of Mr. Arthur Mus and Mr. Herbert Wasserman.

Hebrew Home Enjoined

Judge Norman S. Dike has granted an injunction applied for by the Brooklyn Hebrew Home and Hospital for the Aged restraining the Hebrew Jewish Home for the Aged and Infirm, formerly of Mt. Vernon but now of Brooklyn. The injunction will stay the latter organization from using its title, which is held confusing, until the actual trial of the issues which will take place at an early date.

Temple B'nai Israel of Bay Ridge

Mrs. John Ginsberg has donated a Sefer Torah which will be accepted by the trustees at an open meeting to be held at the synagogue, 54th street and Fourth avenue, on Sunday evening, Jan. 8.

On Sunday evening, Jan. 29, the Ladies' Auxiliary Society will give its regular monthly entertainment.

Gates of Prayer Chanukah Concert

The pupils of the religious school of the Congregation Gates of Prayer will give a Chanukah concert on Sunday, January 1 at 2 p. m. in the synagogue, corner of Sumner avenue and Van Buren street.

Pageant for Fifth Anniversary Celebration of Federation

The fifth anniversary of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies of New York City will be celebrated in the Hotel Astor on December 26, 27 and 28. For the occasion Maurice V. Samuels, author of "The Wanderer," prepared a special pageant entitled "A Pageant of the Strong," to express the spirit of the Jewish idealism. Performances will be held in the evenings of those three days, free to the public.

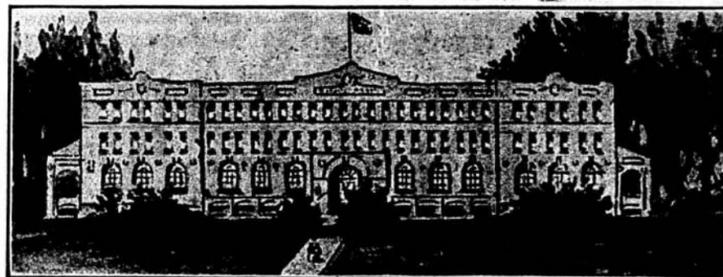

Original music has been furnished by Abraham W. Binder, reputed to be the only outstanding composer of Jewish music. Mr. Binder also has established a reputation for his leadership in music at the Young Men's Hebrew Association, Lexington avenue and 92d street.

In the afternoons of the 27th and 28th children of the various institutions affiliated with the federation will perform in pantomime and interpretive dancing. A chart and living exhibitions also have been arranged for the two afternoons and evenings to show the accomplishments and activities of the ninety-one federated societies.

The Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, of which Arthur Lehman is president, is depending for the success of this undertaking on the work of the Women's Division of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies, of which Mrs. Sidney C. Borg is chairman. Mrs. Julius Bernheim has undertaken the difficult task of presentation, with the assistance of Mrs. Benedict Erstein, chairman En-

Leader of Brooklyn Jewish Center Says Amalgamation Would Be Great Blessing for Israel

Editor Hebrew Standard:
I beg to acknowledge receipt of your request for an expression of opinion with reference to the suggestion you propose in your this week's leading editorial, and I hasten to offer you my sincerest congratulations for taking this step.
The task of the Shadchan is not an easy one, but in a Shidduch of this kind it is a task worth while. God, according to our rabbis, spends a great part of the day in uniting two harmonious souls—and it is indeed gratifying to see that The Hebrew Standard is endeavoring to accomplish this God-like work of bringing about a union between two bodies that ought to become one.
The time has long arrived when all of us should realize the value of a united front in the battles for Judaism. It was Zangwill who bitterly lamented the fact: "Hear O Israel, the Lord our God, the Lord is One!" But we, His people, are twain, and therefore undone!"

Disunion—the division of our ranks into small parties and petty factions—yet all seemingly working for the same end—that has been the real cause for the little progress that has thus far been made in strengthening our faith in this land.

The United Synagogue, as far as I know its past record, has ever held out the hand of fellowship to every congregation that wanted to serve and to help perpetuate traditional Judaism. That some of the congregations within that body disregard certain laws or customs, held binding by their more orthodox brethren, does not speak against the organization, but rather in its favor, because the United Synagogue has thus saved many a congregation from wandering away still further from the ancient landmarks of our beloved faith. As long as it is the desire of a congregation to keep alive the essential features of traditional Judaism it should be our aim to win its support, and unitedly to battle against that portion of American Jewry that wantonly desires to break away from the mainsprings of historic Judaism.

There is no reason, to my mind, why the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations should have a separate existence, especially since the fact is well known that the great majority of the congregations aligned with the United Synagogue are as strict in their orthodoxy as are the congregations aligned with the Orthodox Union. As a matter of fact, the Union of Orthodox Congregations was itself unable to win within its folds the great mass of old-time orthodox congregations, many of whom regard even the institution of the sermon in the vernacular as a step towards reform. The Orthodox Union, as you well note, though it did accomplish something, has felt its limitations in funds and in workers, and therefore could not become a virile force for the strengthening of our faith. The United Synagogue, though a younger organization, has already enlisted the support of a large and active body of our people and has become a power that is achieving untold good for Judaism in this land.

There is no doubt in my mind that could a union between the two organizations, as you suggest, be achieved, that it would be the greatest blessing to historical Judaism. Unitedly we could accomplish everything, and there is no end to the amount of good work that we could accomplish if we worked together. The details of such a union could be worked out to the satisfaction of both organizations, and should certainly not stand in the way of bringing about this much-desired aim.

I am happy to see that the Hebrew Standard has taken the lead in this demand, and I trust that it will keep up this plea for union until the "Shidduch" is actually accomplished. This January the United Synagogue will celebrate the tenth anniversary of its founding. The anniversary would indeed be a momentous one, if at this time the announcement could be made that all the forces in America working for the advancement of traditional Judaism are now one, and, as a United Synagogue, are working unitedly, harmoniously, enthusiastically and effectively for the glorious ideal so dear to us all.

ISRAEL HERBERT LEVINTHAL, Rabbi, The Brooklyn Jewish Center, Brooklyn, Dec. 15, 1921.

A Founder of Orthodox Union Favors Co-operation

Editor Hebrew Standard:
The suggestion contained in your editorial of December 16 that the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America and the United Synagogue should join their forces, comes at a very opportune time.

I am heartily in sympathy with the idea that the Jews of America, no matter what may be their affiliations with either a synagogue or a temple, should unite against the common enemy of irreligion. I believe, too, that all the forces within the Jewish ranks should ally themselves against attacks by outsiders.

As I write, I recall the added strength that was given to my protest against the Christianizing influences in the New York Public Schools, by the wholehearted support that I received from several of the rabbis of Reform temples in New York. I could cite a number of similar instances. For instance, the assistance given to the officers of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations by leaders of Reform in the many cases where Jews were interfered with, because it was alleged that they had been guilty of some breach of a police regulation through working on Sunday, etc.

Your editorial, however, does not seem to imply such a co-operation between the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and the United Synagogue. I am afraid that you mean that the two organizations should be merged. This would not be desirable.

I am in favor of co-operation between all Jewish religious forces in America, allowing to each representative organization absolute autonomy within its own sphere.

Yours very truly,
ALBERT LUCAS,

Shearith Israel's President Thinks Consolidation Not Practical

Editor Hebrew Standard:
In reply to your editorial requesting opinions in respect of the proposed consolidation of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations with the United Synagogue of America, it seems to me that it would be difficult, if not impossible, to form a coalition of these two bodies for the reason that it would be disconcerting for our orthodox brethren to concede an alliance upon the promise of traditional Judaism with an organization comprising within it congregations which have in practice mainly departed from traditional Judaism as orthodox Jews understand it.

It may indeed be well claimed that the United Synagogue has done some excellent work in behalf of our people, especially in restraining conservative congregations from going still further in the direction of reform, but it is very doubtful whether the acrimony which a discussion of a coalition could engender would not outweigh any benefit which might be derived from uniting the two organizations in an unhappy alliance.

As matters stand now, those orthodox congregations which feel that they are not sacrificing their principles by joining the United Synagogue readily do so, and in this way the conservative congregations in that organization are no doubt beneficially affected from the orthodox viewpoint, but it seems to me that it would be a mistake to attempt to force a union upon those congregations in the Union of Orthodox Congregations, which have heretofore, for one reason or another, deemed it a sacrifice of principle to affiliate with the United Synagogue. There may perhaps be some lost motion in the two organizations continuing as separate bodies, but in the last analysis the conclusion seems well founded that this is the wisest course to be pursued.

N. TAYLOR PHILLIPS,
President, Shearith Israel Congregation.
New York, Dec. 15, 1921.

Bronx Rabbi Fears Extremists

Editor Hebrew Standard:
I have read with close attention your editorial recommending amalgamation between the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and the United Synagogue of America.
Theoretically, your suggestion is admirable. Duplication of effort should always be avoided, particularly in the field of traditional Judaism, which has always suffered from poor organization. And it is also true that the points of contact between the two organizations in question are more numerous than their points of difference, and can well support a platform which should be acceptable to both institutions.

Practically, however, I am afraid the plan will meet with much opposition. There is no organization which has not its "chauvinists," and it is from this quarter that there will arise, I fear, obstacles to Amalgamation which will prove insurmountable. Furthermore, the attempt to compose differences and mollify extremists contains the danger of intensifying the former and enraging the latter, netting results which will only weaken each organization and force them further apart.
I have given my opinion in the spirit in which it has been asked, frankly and honestly, and am sorry that its result has been no more positive than to rec-commend the continuance, at least for the present, of the status quo.

With sincerest wishes for the continued success of your loyal efforts for the advancement of traditional Judaism, believe me to be,

Faithfully yours,
NORMAN SALIT,
Rabbi Cong. Adath Israel, of the Bronx.
N. Y., Dec. 16, 1921.

Congressman Siegel Sees Hope in Unity

Editor Hebrew Standard:
I can see no real reason why the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and the United Synagogue of America should not be united into one organization, so that the important communal problems may be taken up and tackled fearlessly. We are suffering in this country today from too many organizations trying to do the same work.

In unity and harmony can be found the solution.
ISAAC SIEGEL,
Washington, D. C., Dec. 19, 1921.

Jewish Legionnaires Found National Organization

Approximately three hundred former Jewish Legionnaires and American soldiers gathered Wednesday evening, December 14 at New York to listen to an address by their former leader and organizer of the Jewish Legion, Vladimir Jabotinsky. At that meeting a foundation was laid for a national organization of Jewish Legionnaires and soldiers. Steps will be taken to hold a convention shortly, which will launch the organization.
Mr. Jabotinsky said that the British Government was sympathetic to the project for a permanent Jewish Legion.

Adath Israel Notes

Tomorrow (Saturday) evening the newly organized Young Folks' League of Temple Adath Israel will hold a dance for members in the vestry rooms of the synagogue.
Sunday afternoon, Dec. 25, at 3 p. m., the children of the religious school will hold a Chanukah celebration in the synagogue to which the public is cordially invited.

within the hearts of its adherents a love for the ceremonial law, and a determination to lead a truly Jewish life. Why such an organization should arouse the ire of Orthodox Jews, I have never been able to fathom, unless it be that these Jews imagine that the only way they can convince the world of their piety is by their hatred of all other Jews! Until this "holier than thou" spirit is eliminated from our midst, there will be no unity in Israel.

It was therefore refreshing to read your editorial urging wholehearted co-operation between the two organizations. I have no right to speak for the United Synagogue, but as one who has been closely connected with it, I can safely predict that it will welcome with open arms any arrangement which will make for a united front in our battle against indifference, disloyalty and irreligion. Should the Union of Orthodox Congregations be of a like mind, there is no reason why your suggestion should not be carried out.
MAX DROB,
Rabbi Washington Heights Congregation, New York.

Look for Shalom

Editor Hebrew Standard:
Any movement tending to bring together Jewish forces working separately must receive the encouragement of every Jew interested in the welfare of his people. While the Union of Orthodox Congregations has thus far shown few signs of vitality, its members would, I believe, work more effectively if they were part of the United Synagogue, which has already a well-defined organization and much experience. Although I am not an officer of the United Synagogue, and can therefore not speak with authority, I feel certain that the splendid work of the organization must need more workers and more funds than have thus far been raised. That is the experience of every active organization. So that a priori I can only second the spirit of your editorial in the hope that some amalgamation and union of all those interested in the maintenance of Traditional Judaism can be brought about. Whether the present time is opportune for such a union, whether the United Synagogue could accept the other organization as a body or would prefer to have the members join individually are questions which can only be decided by those in charge of the work. Those who are on-lookers will be only too happy to see a new evidence of the spirit of Shalom which seems to be encompassing the earth today.

LOUIS FINKELSTEIN,
Rabbi Cong. Kehillah Israel of the Bronx.
New York, Dec. 20, 1921.

Representative of Orthodoxy Pleads for Unity

Editor Hebrew Standard:
I have read your editorial very carefully, and in response to same will say that I have always been a great believer in unity, because "Where there is unity there is strength." However, experience has proven that a unity of two different opinions is sometimes detrimental to both, unless both sides are willing to meet half way, and with orthodox Judaism there can be no compromise.

There are many phases in Jewish life that would supply enough activity for both, the Union of Orthodox Congregations and the United Synagogue. I would therefore respectfully suggest that the question affecting religion, such as the Sabbath observance, Kashruth and Jewish education, as well as services in the synagogues be left entirely to the orthodox rabbis and laymen; all other problems affecting the social, philanthropic, as well as numerous other activities, be left to the ministers and laymen connected with the United Synagogue.

I have no doubt whatever that the leaders of the Union of Orthodox Congregations will agree to a proposition of this kind. I also hope that those of the United Synagogue, who claim to be orthodox, if they are honest to themselves, will agree to a proposition of this kind. If a plan of co-operation on these lines could be adopted, I am strongly of the opinion that it will be of great benefit to Judaism in general.

HARRY FISCHEL,
New York, December 16.

Institutional Synagogue's Head Sees Much Good in Proposed Merger

Editor Hebrew Standard:
Let me congratulate you upon your timely editorial. I believe in a merger of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and the United Synagogue if it be possible. Logically, from the Jewish point of view, barring (wishy-washy) sentiment, it is possible, in my judgment, in this way:
The two organizations should merge into one and the name of the United Synagogue be adopted. All the orthodox congregations (congregations where the sexes are separated, where there is no organ, and where the traditional prayer-book is used) become voting members, and that all non-orthodox congregations become members without voting power. In this way we are safeguarding orthodox, or historic, or loyal Judaism in America. The present constituency of the United Synagogue, where both non-orthodox and orthodox congregations are members equally, certainly tends to strengthen the non-orthodox congregations but weakens the orthodox.

I firmly believe your editorial has created the proper impetus for an attempt at an amalgamation between the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations and the United Synagogue. I suggest, therefore, that a conference be called to work out, if possible, some plan whereby unity and concord may be established.

Editor Hebrew Standard:
I am very much interested in your editorial entitled, "An Opportunity for Co-operation."
In so far as the question involves the United Synagogue of America, with which I happen to be affiliated both individually and officially, I would rather leave it to the organization to speak in my behalf and in behalf of all its constituencies.

A Voice from the West

Editor Hebrew Standard:
Any union of constructive forces making for traditional Judaism in this country ought to be hailed with joy. And if extremists and personalities could be obviated a junction of the United Synagogue and of the Union of Orthodox Congregations should prove to be a great blessing to the cause.

The Palestine Supplies Department

Costing the Zionist Organization of America on an average of a dollar a day, they have sent to Palestine during the period from November 1, 1920, to November 14, 1921, supplies to the value of $67,182.93. They have clothed more than half the orphans of Palestine and have shipped, ready for use since the middle of September, a complete winter supply of blankets and warm pajamas for the Chaluzim and Chaluzoth. And next year, with a little additional effort, they expect to clothe all the Jewish orphans of Palestine.

Such is the record of the 380 sewing circles with the Palestine Supplies Bureau of the Zionist Organization of America, of which Mrs. A. H. Fromenson is the director. These sewing circles have not only contributed finished garments for Palestine, but have sent soap, linens, shoes, blankets, stockings, hospital supplies, victrolas, and even toys for children who through years of war and misery have almost forgotten how to play. Realizing the need of giving employment to hundreds of Palestine women and girls who have no other means of becoming self-supporting and self-respecting, they have sent 8,077 1/2 yards of uncut materials and 100 pounds of wool to be made up in the Holy Land. In addition to this they have contributed $1,400 for toys, with which a small toyshop was opened in Jerusalem, giving employment to some of the older orphans who are engaged in making simple playthings.

Speaking of her plans for the coming year, Mrs. Fromenson said "The growth in the number of sewing circles this year has been healthy and normal. We have increased from 300 to 380 groups, and we expect to do at least as well this year. Everywhere the response to the crying need of Palestine has been eager and generous, and it has been more than a pleasure for me to be able to work with the splendid women who have made it their proud duty to devote themselves to the comfort of our people."

Beth Abraham Home Members Meet

The annual meeting of the members of the Beth Abraham Home for Incurables was held on December 13 at Westminster Hall. The president, Mrs. A. Alperstein, delivered an address sketching the history of the organization and express the hope of seeing the cornerstone for the new building laid by next spring. Mrs. B. H. Schnur, the treasurer, reported and Mrs. S. A. Wittenberg read the report of the building fund. During the course of the evening addresses were made by Hon. Otto A. Rogalsky, who disobeyed his physician's injunction and left a sick bed to keep a promise to address the meeting. Rabbis Edward Lissman and Gustave N. Hausmann and Hon. Clarence Y. Palitz also spoke.

An election of officers and directors took place and the old officers were unanimously re-elected. Announcement was made that a bazaar will be held during Purim week to terminate with a masked ball.

Zionist Organization Starts Membership Campaign

Three hundred and fifty-three Zionist districts through the country are making intensive preparation for a membership campaign of the Zionist Organization which will begin on January 1, 1922, and continue until March 1. Sixty thousand paid-up members by March 1 has been set as the goal in this campaign. At National Headquarters of the Zionist organization, 55 Fifth avenue, New York, the preparations for the campaign are made on an extensive scale. A district order has gone out to all the districts in the country in which they are to set the district machinery at work for the renewal of old members and the securing of new members for the year 1922. Regular membership dues are $6 a year. Side by side with the campaign to enroll 60,000 regular members by March 1, preparations are also being made for an intensive drive for sustaining members to the organization. Sustaining members are those who pay to the organization annually from $25 to $250. The Zionist Organization of America is maintained solely out of the funds received for regular and sustaining membership dues.

Danzig Kehilla Criticized for Its Attitude Toward Women

Danzig (Jewish Press Association).—The local Kehilla devoted its last session to a discussion on the various points of its constitution. No agreement could be reached and the suggested rules were passed on to a special commission for consideration. The local publication, Folks-Tag, devotes considerable space to a discussion of the suggested constitution. The communists severely criticize those who framed the Kehilla regulations for its passive attitude toward the question of the right of women to vote.

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—Andrei Nemoyevski, one of the leading spirits of the anti-Semitic movement in Poland and a writer of note, died suddenly from heart failure.

Joint Distribution Committee Cares for 15,000 Refugees in Poland

About 15,000 Jewish refugees are being cared for monthly by the Joint Distribution Committee in Poland, and the work among the refugees is much harder and more complicated than any other phase of the relief work in that country. It is an activity that extends, for the condition of the refugees has not improved as yet, but just the reverse, it goes from bad to worse. Their number is growing daily in the various regions of the Polish territory, and their condition, both juridical and economical, is growing worse from day to day.

The relief work among the refugees compels the Joint Distribution Committee to turn back to immediate emergency relief work. Again kitchens must be opened, clothing distributed and lodgings provided. The entire apparatus of immediate relief which has been discontinued with the transition toward reconstruction work, must be re-established for all the thousands who arrive naked, hungry and homeless. But the very first task in connection with relief for these refugees, is to provide for them a legal right to remain on Polish soil, so that they should not be driven back to the places from which they fled. And this is one of the most difficult tasks the relief workers have before them.

No Taxes Without Sunday Work, Jewish, Workmen in Poland Avow

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—At a conference gathered to consider the new national revenue of the Polish State, the representatives of the Jewish artisans Hassner, declared their determination to refuse to pay any taxes unless the compulsory Sunday rest laws were abolished. The reason for their opposition is the fact that under the present rest laws Jewish artisans are enabled to work only 35 hours per week, the earnings of which are insufficient to make it possible for them to contribute to the new national revenue.

EDUCATIONAL REFORMS AND REFORMERS

The theme of Educational Reform and Reformers ought to interest the Jewish people especially, because the Jews have been the leaders of reform in religion, politics and education. In religion they overthrew polytheism with its immoralities. In politics, they established the first republic. In education, they suggested or initiated many of the reforms that modern educational reformers have fought for for centuries.

The softening of discipline was suggested by the Talmud, which advised the dismissing of teachers that were too free with the rod.

Universal elementary education for poor and rich alike, which the modern world owes largely to the influence of Pestalozzi, the greatest of educational reformers, was introduced into Judea eighteen centuries ago by Rabbi Joshua ben Gamla.

Vocational training, the educational reform of the present generation, was suggested by the Talmud in its saying "If one does not teach his son a trade it is as though he taught him to be a robber."

A reform suggested by the Talmud which has not yet been adopted is that no teacher should have more than twenty-five children in a class. Small classes would make possible the paying of more attention to the individual child, and that is the reform most needed today, as in large classes it is hard to bring out the individuality of the child.

Respect for teachers, who are called 'the guardians of the city,' should lead to the paying of better salaries to teachers, another crying need of the day.

Universal education of some kind for adults was likewise suggested by the Talmud, which gives the instances of Hild, the poor woodchopper, and Eliezer, the rich merchant, to show that we are all in duty bound to continue learning, no matter how busy we are.

An educational reform needed especially in America is a better educational system for immigrant adults. They should not have textbooks put in their hands which deal with subjects meant only for little children. The contents of their books must be made interesting for adults.—Rabbi P. Israeli, Woonsocket, R. I.

Roumania Delays Expulsion of Refugees
 Bucharest (Jewish Press Association).—As a result of the efforts of Rabbi Zirelson of Kishinev, the Roumanian Government has consented to suspend the order for the expulsion of many thousands of Ukrainian Jewish refugees until November 20. Most of these refugees are in Bessarabia and the government has ordered that they leave those parts for certain districts in Old Roumania or else be sent back across the border to Ukraine.

Bessarabian Activities of Joint Distribution Committee Being Transferred
 Kishinev (Jewish Press Association).—As a result of the expulsion by the Roumanian Government of nearly all Jewish deputies at present in Bessarabia and neighboring districts, the local activities of the Joint Distribution Committee are being transferred to a point in Old Roumania, that being the destination of the greater number of refugees.

"Ort" Branch to Be Established in Danzig
 Danzig (Jewish Press Association).—Davidowitch-Lwowitch, a representative of the "Ort" and a gentleman said to be well known among American Jews, is now in this city, where he is taking steps to establish a branch of the "Ort." He is conferring with various representatives of Jewish institutions and organizations.

Polish Kehillas Will Confer in December
 Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—The conferences of representatives of all Jewish Kehillas in Poland, it is now announced, will be called for December 5 and 6 and will take place in this city. Among other matters to be taken up by the conference, consideration will be given to additional taxation which is imposed by the government upon sundry Jewish institutions. A permanent body which should be able to speak in the name of all Kehillas in the country will be chosen at the conference.

Austria Discriminates Against Jewish Teachers
 Vienna (Jewish Press Association).—The Austrian Commission for Public Instruction has adopted the decision that all Jewish teachers now instructing in schools where the majority of the pupils are Christian be relieved from their duties and dismissed. If adopted, this will be the first instance of its kind in modern European states.

Jew Punished for Praying in a Train
 Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—Traveling from Warsaw to Lemberg, A. Finkel saw no harm in donning "Tephillin" and offering a prayer in the good old-fashioned way. The Polish passengers, however, thought otherwise of the act and Finkel was fined 400 marks, besides being admonished, for his grave offense.

Israel and the Pine Tree

When do we know that a pine tree is evergreen? In the summer, when the forests are filled with trees of all sizes, thick with gorgeous foliage, when the orchards are heavy with arboreal denizens groaning beneath the weight of ripened fruit, when the zephyrs blow gently and agitate almost imperceptibly the leaves and branches, one cannot tell how the wintry winds will transform this wealth of wood and what will be the fate of the decorations that lend majesty and beauty to the outstretched boughs. It is only when the crystalline flakes begin to cover the trees, when the seared and yellow leaves have been blown from the branches and the limbs are bare and cold, it is only when the fierce blasts of frigid power smite the shivering boughs, it is only when the erstwhile panorama of green is changed to a blinding whiteness or to a chilling bareness that one can distinguish which tree is evergreen. Then the pine, put to the test, refuses to change its color and maintains its perennial identity.

Israel, too, can be told only in times of trial. Tried by adversity, tempted by suffering, smitten by the blight of oppression, stung by the pangs of privation, tested by the storms of tribulation, Israel has shown its unchanging fidelity to an eternal ideal, its ineluctable loyalty to its faith and its God. It is easy to go on when all is well. In the summer of prosperity it is not difficult to wave a thank offering, but to maintain one's integrity in the midst of "the winter of discontent" is the highest test of character. That European Israel has not faltered though it has fainted, that it has not succumbed though it has suffered, that its soul has remained evergreen though its body has been bared that is the test that should thrill us whose lot has been cast in pleasanter places and kindle within us the great desire to carry on with power and zeal the labors of the ages the tasks of righteousness we have inherited from our forebears!—Rabbi Nathan Krass.

Contract Awarded for Temple Israel

Galician Diplomats Beseech Arms Conference to Recognize Independence of Galicia—Say Poland Organized Pogroms

Washington (Jewish Press Association).—A lengthy memorandum was submitted to all delegates to the Disarmament Conference by the diplomatic representatives of Galicia praying that the conference recognize the independence of Galicia. Among the arguments enumerated is the statement that the Jews of Galicia agree to the request that Galicia's independence from Poland be recognized and that the Jews of Galicia will always endeavor to free that country from Poland. The memorandum calls attention to the fact that Poland organizes military pogroms upon Jews.

A separate memorandum deals with the coercion used by Polish officials in forcing Jews and Ukrainians to participate in the Polish census and register as Poles. As a protest of this attitude of Polish authorities not a single Jew registered in the city of Dobrusin. In the town of Pidhorodie census officials whipped a woman by the name of Freda Altman and cut the beard of Abraham Roten, who refused to register as Poles.

When asked their opinion on the memorandum the Polish legation refused to make any comment on it, saying that this question will not be handled by the Washington conference. Unofficially, however, members of the Polish delegation averred that the memorandum on Galicia's independence contains many untruths, first and foremost of which is that the Jews are not in favor of separating Galicia from Poland. The Polish representatives in Washington feel that to discuss this question is merely stirring up trouble, and they are ready to abide entirely by the decisions of the League of Nations and the Versailles treaty.

Government Not to Authorize Visas per Cable

Washington (Jewish Press Association).—The State Department announced that hereafter it will not send any cables to consuls authorizing the granting of visas to aliens desiring to come here. It was formerly the practice of the department to authorize visas by cable when the necessary expenses were paid by relatives here. Hereafter such authorization will be sent by mail only, the State Department declaring that the sending of cables gave an advantage to persons who were in a position to pay the cable expenses.

Churchill Sees Arab-Zionist Peace Immediate Possibility

London (Jewish Press Association).—Winston Spencer Churchill, Minister for the Colonies, in a statement today, said that the conference taking place between members of the Arab delegation and Zionist leaders have terminated successfully and that there was every reason to hope for a thorough understanding on Arab and Jewish rights in Palestine.

This statement from Mr. Churchill caused astonishment in Zionist circles, where the impression was prevalent that much cannot be expected from these conferences.

New Markets for Palestine Products Sought

Jerusalem (By Mail, Jewish Press Association).—Palestine colonists have delegated Messrs. Levin and Niderman to sound the possibilities of Japan, China and India as markets for Palestine products, particularly of wine. Until recently the larger part of Palestine's famous beverage was disposed of in Russia and America, but due to well known reasons these countries are no longer in a position to consume that product, it was therefore found necessary to find new channels for export.

Is Our Present Synagogue Mode Out of Date?

When we read of empty pews and annual visitations, when we observe that young people no longer or not yet take that interest and share that responsibility in the work of the congregation that is essential to vital growth, we wonder if there be not some truth in what we recently read somewhere that the community center feature will prove the great agent for a deep concern in all that affects Judaism and will achieve the Jewish salvation of our youth. Can it be that the synagogue mode of the present time is out of date? The situation is urgent, though not serious. Junior congregations are splendid innovations, but they are not renovations. They will not solve the matter. They are merely a palliative, out of which the pall must be taken. We need something more dynamic, and we have such in the organization of the synagogue. Unfortunately, the synagogue became merely a prayer house, especially when the ghetto walls fell and the varied activities found vent in institutions apart from the synagogue. We need again to make the synagogue all-comprehensive of everything Jewish. And in this reorganization of Jewish endeavor we need to make the rabbi, as such, owing to his particular training therefor, the director of Jewish activities. Of course, this would allow rabbis to prepare themselves for the department of their particular choice, to fit the job to the rabbi as well as the rabbi to the job. In this way all rabbis would not be preachers, nor would all rabbis visit, teach schools, attend to charities, social services and so forth. Furthermore, the rabbis would need workers, and more than we now often so speciously designate the mere handful. This could be supplied by lay men and lay women, who would be classed as deacons and deaconesses. The great spirit of Jewish service is not dead. It is just slumbering. Can we awaken it? Can we, by our Jewish earnestness, Jewish sympathy and Jewish co-operation bring it to vigorous life and blessing?—Rabbi Montague N. A. Cohen.

Do You Read a Jewish Newspaper

The province of the Jewish newspaper is to keep its readers informed of everything that matters to Jews, whether these are Jewish happenings or happenings that are of special interest to Jews without being specifically Jewish. More especially it is the object of the Jewish press to keep its readers informed as to all Jewish movements, to keep them in touch with the body of Jewry, especially in the smaller towns where no congregation or Jewish organization exists. It is, therefore, not only the duty but to the advantage of every rabbi to impress upon the members of his congregation the need of having a Jewish paper in their homes. This not only for the benefit of Jewry at large but the rabbis must know that the reading of Jewish papers tends to increase the interest of the readers in congregational work and in fact to make better and more active Jews of them.—American Israelite.

$350,000 Additional Pledged for Palestine

Approximately $350,000 was pledged for rehabilitation work in Palestine at a "founders' dinner" which members of the American Palestine Company held in the Hotel Astor last Monday evening. Eight subscribed for the maximum of $10,000 and almost 100 subscribed $1,000 or more.

Resolutions expressing gratitude to Sir Herbert Samuel, High Commissioner of Palestine under the terms of the British mandate, were adopted. Judge Otto A. Rosalsky presided. Samuel C. Lamport, president of the company, and Dr. Samson Benderly, secretary, spoke of the rehabilitation work which is to be undertaken in Palestine.

Fresh Pogroms by Petlura's Forces Danzig (Jewish Press Association).—The local publication "Danziger Zeitung" publishes a report that Petlura's followers have made a pogrom upon the Jewish community of Husiatin. Jews were beaten and some suffered fatal injuries. Houses and stores were pillaged. The report gives no further details.

Mt. Vernon Y. M. H. A. Celebrates Tenth Anniversary

The tenth anniversary of the Mount Vernon Young Men's Hebrew Association was fittingly celebrated in the auditorium on Saturday night, December 11. A dinner was served to a large assemblage and during its course popular songs were sung.

Mr. A. Colish, the president of the association, presided at the post-prandial exercises and briefly sketched the history of the organization.

Mayor Kincaid spoke of the Jews of Mount Vernon, who have given and are still giving unselfish civil service to the community. Dr. Joseph I. Gorfinkle told of the growth of the association and the good effect it had on the juvenile groups in the city, citing facts that in the past ten years the percentage of delinquency of young Jewish boys had fallen from 17 per cent. to less than 4 per cent.

Jacob Billikopf, executive director of the Federation of Jewish Charities of Philadelphia, was the principal speaker of the evening. He gave a splendid talk on the field of Y. M. H. A. work and told what other cities had done and what Mount Vernon could do. He was warmly received and gave an excellent address.

Mayor-elect Piske told of his intimate knowledge of the growth of the Y. M. H. A. and expressed his pleasure at being present. Dr. Elias Margolis in the concluding address made an eloquent appeal for the continued upkeep of the Jewish spirit and religion, to fight the anti-Semitic influences through the Y. M. H. A. and kindred organizations and "to mind our own business—the business of Jewishness—and mind it well."

Mrs. Arthur L. Solomon of Crestwood, speaker on behalf of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. H. A., presented the board of the Y. M. H. A. with a beautiful gavel holding a silver inscription of good wishes.

After the dinner dancing held sway.

Zionist Organization Opens Palestine Information Bureau

A bureau to co-ordinate all available information concerning agricultural, commercial and industrial possibilities in Palestine, and to supply that information to those who are interested in investing in Palestine, has been opened by the Zionist Organization of America at its headquarters, 55 Fifth avenue.

The bureau has already established connections with Palestinian technical institutes, which are under the supervision of either the Zionist executives or the Palestine Government. It is under the direction of Ab Goldberg, member of the Administrative Committee of the Zionist Organization of America, who has been in Palestine and is keeping in close touch with the most recent developments.

In order to avoid waste of energy and splitting of forces, the bureau will make every effort to co-ordinate the activities of persons who wish to invest in similar enterprises.

Sisterhoods to Raise $250,000 for H. U. C. Dormitories

The National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods has launched a national drive to raise $250,000 for the erection of a dormitory to house rabbinical students at Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati. Mrs. Abram Simon of Washington, D. C., honorary president of the organization, is chairman of the campaign and local chairmen have been appointed in the various cities where the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods has branches.

Hebrew Union College has no halls of residence among its buildings, and students must reside with private families in the Y. M. C. A. S., hotels and boarding houses. The new dormitory will not only provide proper housing for students, but will help in the creation of school social life which has hitherto been lacking. It is believed that the erection of a dormitory will greatly stimulate enrollment in the college.

"Does New York Strangle the Soul?"

By Rabbi Louis I. Newman

The influence of cities—whether small or large—upon character is independent of the environment they offer. Given reasonable scope for worth-while and expansive activities, enrichment of soul grows from the initial equipment of taste and heart with which the individual approaches his opportunities.

The big city, with its variety and richness of interests, is an open door through which only those enter whose appreciation has been developed by discipline, by the cultivation of the power of choice, by instruction in the knowledge to select the best in drama, art, literature, music and companionship. New York will strangle the soul if the latter be coarse-grained and weak; it will magnify and ennoble the personality, possessed of keen sensibilities, of instincts toward the beautiful and satisfying values of life.

Is not our own Broadway a grandiose "Main Street" for thousands who parade it or live near it? The pettiness which corrodes character, the desire for things gaudy and ostentatious, for the meretricious in speech, manner and dress, the adherence to false standards of success, threaten to make life for hosts of our youth as vapid and submerged as for inhabitants of provincial gopher prairies. Just as we attract and hold the friends we merit, so we win from New York the satisfactions we seek and deserve. To live hectically, excitedly and vulgarly is not truly to live. Our youth with personality in process of formation must determine for themselves whether they will sink into the slough of mediocre natures, or whether they will devote their thought to the cultivation of taste, to the quest of the beautiful, to the conquest of insight into the permanent qualities and interests which our great city offers in such abundance to its initiated and finely-attuned spirits.

Hias Will Aid Families in Finding Deserters

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—The local office of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant A. d Society will endeavor to trace the husbands and fathers of needy families who have not replied to the appeals made by their kin. The Hias requests the photographs of such "deserters" which will enable her to identify them and induce them to do their duty toward their wives and children.

Polish Government Will Prosecute Anti-Semites

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—It became known today that the Polish Minister of the Interior has asked the Prosecuting Attorney to take up the case against those responsible for the "Razvov" conference. The conference was called in order to study the Jew and his culture and to use that information for anti-Semitic purposes.

THE HIGHEST CHOICE Do not let it be merely a question of initial cost when you make your choice of pianos. The matchless music of the Steinway has lifted it above the "price" atmosphere for all time. It is true, the Steinway does cost a little more. But no one who owns a Steinway has ever a shadow of regret for the price paid. It is but little higher than the cost of other pianos, and the Steinway carries within its perfect mechanism the guarantee of a satisfaction beyond all price. For more than three score years it has been the ideal of the greatest music masters of their day. So the Steinway must command your respectful attention before your choice is made.
