His Best Friends Were Jews

A Vacation Story

By ELMA EHRlich LEVINGER

(Copyright, 1922, by Elma Ehrlich Levinger. All rights reserved.)

"The best summer hotel I've struck in years," declared Phil Horton enthusiastically. "Only two teething babies to wake me up in the morning and not a Jew on the place. Why, last year when I was in the mountains—" he stopped short, somewhat disconcerted at the look of quick scorn his companion flashed upon him.

"Yes—flies and Jews are two decided disadvantages at summer hotels," drawled Rose Friend, a hot flush creeping under her tan. She rose abruptly and swung her racquet over her shoulder. "I don't believe I feel like another set," she announced. "Guess I'll go home and tidy up for lunch."

Always sensitive to another's mood, Phil was not altogether at ease as he fell into step beside her. But it was not until they had left the tennis court far behind them and were approaching the hotel that he interrupted Rose's description of her walking trip through England with: "You know I didn't intend to hurt your feelings when I spoke of Jews back there. But you haven't lived in New York the way I have all my life and don't know what pests they are when they're under your feet all the time. Now in the South—"

"Yes, there are fewer Jews in the South," drawled Rose, "but we have a few and the ones I knew seemed rather nice to me. But maybe I'm prejudiced. Like so many Southerners I think there's nobody half so nice as my own family."

They had reached the wide verandah by this time and Rose was about to open the screen door, when he detained her. "Just a moment," he begged. "I never imagined—I never dreamed—"

"Never dreamed what?" Rose asked coldly.

"Your name sounded German," he floundered miserably, "and you don't look Jewish and—"

"Please say the rest of it." Her tone had taken on a sharp edge although discreetly lowered for the rocking chair brigade who lined the verandah, hungry for gossip. "You think I'm altogether too nice, too refined—that's the phrase for it!—for a Jewish girl. And now you're going to tell me that some of your best friends are Jews."

He flushed scarlet under her scorn.

"It does happen that they are, if his voice had grown, how tense his face. You'll forgive the bromide," he murmured resentfully. "But if you'll fool?" he asked himself disconsolately as he went up to his room. "I'll have a devil of a time explaining matters to her and maybe she won't look at me again, anyhow, if she's the kind who bears a grudge. Anyhow, I'll just have to try my luck and take the punishment."

Without appearing to avoid him, Rose managed to postpone both tennis and explanations. Phil was not a little irritated; above all he was angry at himself for resenting her attitude. Used to easy conquests, it was not a pleasant sensation to have a pretty girl tell him she had "loads of letters to write" or that she just had to finish her dress for the costume dance that evening. She was very pleasant for all her snubbing, but Phil sometimes felt that it would be easier to have her tell him what she thought of him and let it go at that.

So he encountered her on the verandah one morning, a determined look in his eyes, his mouth rather sullen. "We're going for a row," he announced abruptly. "Better put on a hat or take a sunshade as it's getting hot."

She shook her head. "Can't. I've promised mother to finish this centerpiece this week; she wants to send it off in time for my sister's birthday."

"Darn your embroidery! All right, I'll talk to you here." He settled himself upon the verandah rail, glowering at a group of old ladies, rocking and gossiping just a little beyond. "Now tell me why you won't forgive me."

"There's nothing to forgive." "You know what I mean—that fool remark I dropped about Jews that day in the tennis court. But if you'd let me explain—"

"I'm not at all interested in the subject, but if you think you can explain away your ridiculous prejudice, I'm willing to listen," she conceded.

"You've lived South," he began eagerly, "and you don't know how it is in New York. You meet the most undesirable Jews, not only a lot of dirt immigrants on the East Side, but a lot of the just-rich up on Riverside Drive. They wear too many diamonds and talk too much and too loud—it's disgusting."

"Like Mr. and Mrs. Douglas at our table," murmured Rose with seeming innocence. "She wears those dreadful earrings even for breakfast

JEWISH SETTLEMENT OF THE HOLY LAND

Since July, 1920, 18,000 Jews have flocked into the Holy Land, and there are now some seventy-two Jewish colonies in the land, scattered all the way from Dan to Beersheba. Our photo shows an encampment of newly arrived Jewish settlers near Kirjath-Jearim, and shows the temporary canvas homes. Many of the Jewish colonies in the Holy Land are worked on the co-operative principle, with marked success.

and the other day he bragged about one of his investments until I almost lost my appetite. I never knew they were Jews, but as they're so vulgar they must be!"

"Of course, there are some outrageous Gentiles, too," agreed the man, "but they are in the minority. And the Jews I meet in my business are pretty tough customers. If you knew what I've had to stand from them, you might understand why it's rather a relief to have a vacation from your people for a while."

"I think I do understand!" The underlying sharpness in her low voice made him feel vaguely uncomfortable again. "Only you can't expect me to feel the same way about the subject as you do."

"Of course not—and that's why I'm sorry—terribly sorry I hurt your feelings so. If I had known you were a Jewess, I—"

"You would have assured me the first ten minutes of our acquaintance that your best friends were Jews and let it go at that," she jested. Her eyes brightened and she rose quickly. "I think the boy's back from town with the mail. I wonder whether there's any for me," and she seemed about to leave him.

"Just a minute," Phil begged. "If you're not too petty and narrow-minded, say you've forgotten all about it and will play tennis with me again—will you?"

Her eyes narrowed with irritation, a little trick of hers he had found very attractive. "Oh—I'm a petty and narrow-minded person, am I?" she began angrily, then laughed.

"Just to show you I don't care what you think of Jews—or—or Chinamen, I'll play tennis with you tomorrow," she promised with seeming lightness.

Their game the next morning was the forerunner of a daily battle on the tennis courts; Phil also begged for rows upon the lake, tramps through the woods, excursions to the gypsy camp up the road or the battered old Round House half-way up the mountain. It seemed that Rose was slowly but surely falling under the sway of his charming manner, his manner so courtly and deferential that it always captivated women. Rose had to confess to her mother that he was the first real gentleman she had met since she left the South. It was on one of their hikes along the wooded mountain paths that he told her he loved her. They had stopped to rest—Rose leaned against a great boulder, Phil stretched out at her feet. There was no sound save the drowsy hum of insects and a far-away cowbell that seemed to belong to an ethereal and unreal world.

"Rose," he said, seeking her hand as it lay in the long grass and finding it. "Rose, I want you to marry me."

A mocking smile played about her mouth for a moment; then her eyes grew grave and very kind.

"I'm afraid I can't," she answered very gently.

"I know we haven't known each other very long," he stammered, "but I think I've loved you from the first day I saw you. Way back three weeks ago in the tennis court when I offended you." He broke off in sudden confusion. "Is that why you won't marry me—because I'm not Jewish?" he asked shamefacedly.

"I couldn't marry a man who wasn't Jewish."

"I—" it was hard for him to go on—"my name isn't really Horton," he told her. "My father's name was Hurwitz and he was a regular old Jew, if you know what I mean, and my mother was Jewish, too. But I broke away from it all—I didn't feel at home with Jews and—"

"And it was easier to get on in business and socially," Rose finished for him.

"Yes, I know it seems a low-down trick," he confessed. "But now that you know I'm a Jew, it will make some difference, won't it?"

Her eyes narrowed; she seemed to be keeping her temper with difficulty. "I might respect a Christian even if he was bigoted, as long as he wasn't afraid to sail under his true colors," she answered. "Besides I knew about you all the time—way back when you made the remark after our tennis."

"How?" He stared at her with unbelieving eyes.

"Remember Dave Levine who was in your class at Columbia?" He nodded, still mystified. "He went South to practise law after he graduated and I met him at dances and things. I was interested in you as soon as I met you—so you see it was mutual—and I wrote him all about you, more or less to tease him. And he said he'd gone to your house for Seder and your little brother's bar-mitzvah party. So I was rather surprised when you said you didn't like many of us even if your best friends were Jews."

"Say, do you hear from Dave Levine very often?" asked the rejected suitor with sudden suspicion.

"Yes—every day or so. You see as soon as his law practice picks up we're going to be publicly engaged." She rose to her feet, pulled her skirt into place, patted her hair. "Let's go back now," she suggested. "I bet there's a letter waiting for me at the desk this minute."

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

A pamphlet, "What Every Immigrant Should Know," has just been issued by the Council's Department of Immigrant Aid. It includes a brief summary of the immigration laws and regulations of the United States, and suggestions as to the most effective procedure for prospective immigrants. Two editions have been printed, one in English and one in Yiddish. It is proposed to translate it into several foreign languages eventually.

This pamphlet will be made available to prospective emigrants through European immigrant aid agencies and steamship companies. A limited edition will be at the disposal of persons in this country seeking information on the possibility of bringing relatives into this country. The Council Sections and their committees on immigrant aid are cooperating with the national department in disseminating the advice and helpful suggestions offered by this pamphlet.

This interesting booklet was prepared by Miss Cecilia Razovsky, secretary of the Council's Department of Immigrant Aid. It contains many excellent photographs illustrating the various questions discussed. It was expected that this pamphlet would serve as a reference book for workers in the field of immigrant aid.

The executive office of the Council of Jewish Women announces the organization of its 210th section. The most recent section was formed at Lancaster, O., through the efforts of Mrs. L. Lowenstein and Mrs. J. Kohn of Columbus, O. Its president is Mrs. G. Rothardt.

The Council of Jewish Women will be represented at the National Conference of Jewish Social Service at Providence, R. I., by Miss Florina Lasker and Miss Cecilia Razovsky of the Council's Department of Immigrant Aid. The sessions will be held June 18 to 21. The Providence Section of the Council is cooperating with local organizations in arrangements for the convention.

Mrs. Leo Schram of Dayton, O., has been elected honorary president of the local section. During her administration as president the Dayton Section has made splendid progress in the extension of its activities and in the growth of its membership. Mrs. Schram is a member of the Council's National Committee on Purity of the Press.

The president of the Cincinnati Section, Mrs. Sidney J. Freiberg, is setting aside distinct mornings and afternoons for conferences with the respective chairman and committees of her organization, in order to facilitate the success of the section's program.

At Cleveland, under the presidency of Mrs. Sigmund Herzog, special days have been set aside during the summer to visit various local philanthropic institutions. All officers and members are in this way urged to familiarize themselves with local needs.

Y. M. H. A. Confers Medals

The Young Men's Hebrew Association (Ninety-second street and Lexington avenue) set a precedent by awarding gold medals to nine of its members who did exceptional work in the departments of debating, oratory, music, art and drama during the last year. This is in addition to the all-round athletic championship, which carried a similar award for many years past.

The winners of the gold medal have been formed into a permanent Honor Society, to which not over ten persons will be added each year. Other associations will probably adopt this feature. For 1922 the medal winners are:

Debating, Adolph Frank, Arthur Markel, William H. Kusnick; drama, Louis Latzer; oratory, Jeremiah Berman; leadership, A. K. Deutsch; painting, Abe Kaplan; music, Samuel Tell, Mary Davidoff.

The meeting for conferring honors was held on June 8. Rabbi Lee J. Leviner, executive director of the association, presided. Mr. H. L. Glucksmann, executive director of the Jewish Welfare Board, awarded the honors. In addition to the gold medals, other awards were given to thirty successful club leaders in the association.

Mr. Polstein Going to Palestine

On the 27th of this month Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Polstein, of 115 East Seventy-eighth street, will leave on the Mauretania for an extended trip through Europe and Palestine, following the itinerary arranged by Mr. George M. Hyman, managing director of the Palestine pilgrimage. They expect to return some time in September.

Mr. Polstein has always taken a deep interest in all communal enterprises, and for the past thirty-four years has been an ardent Zionist. Mr. Polstein is a moving spirit in the Keren Hayesod and the Palestine Development Council, and it is because of his intense desire to help in the rebuilding of Palestine that he is making the trip to that country at this time so as to determine definitely in what manner the services and means of himself and his friends may best be devoted to the rejuvenation of Erez Yisroel. Mr. Polstein intends, as far as circumstances permit, to journey into Poland to ascertain Jewish conditions there.

American Jewish Congress Considers Jewish Emigration to Mexico

A proposal from the Mexican Government to receive Jewish emigration from Eastern Europe has been taken up for consideration by the American Jewish Congress, of which Mr. Nathan Straus is president and Dr. Stephen S. Wise chairman of the executive committee, and a special committee which has been appointed to investigate this offer has issued a public statement calling upon the Jewish public not to pass judgment upon the project before all facts have been ascertained, and warning Jewish communities abroad against the danger of premature action.

The statement issued by the special committee is as follows:

"At a session of the executive committee of the American Jewish Congress held on June 4, 1922, a press report was submitted to the effect that an offer of territory for settlement had been made to the Jews of Eastern Europe by the government of Mexico. Whatever be the basis of this report and the merits of the proposal involved, it behooves us to take counsel and to consider carefully all aspects of the project before any steps are taken.

"Until this report shall have been thoroughly investigated and the nature and character of the possible opportunity exhaustively considered, it is our duty to ask our fellow Jews throughout European and other lands to suspend action and even judgment with respect to the entire matter. Until such investigation shall have been completed nothing should be done or contemplated by Jews anywhere with respect to the utilization of the opportunity which the offer may imply.

"As soon as the investigation which we have already instituted shall have been completed it will be possible for us to give wholly disinterested counsel to our fellow Jews. In the pursuit of the investigation it becomes necessary to send a deputation to Mexico for purposes of investigation, this matter will be taken up by the American Jewish Congress through its executive committee."

The society is operating under the arbitration law of the State of New York, as amended in 1920. This law gives legal and binding effectiveness to the settlement of all disputes and controversies by arbitration. It endows an arbitrator virtually with the power of a judge, to summon witnesses and to compel their attendance and the production of necessary documents and books. The award of an arbitrator is enforceable precisely as if it were a decree of a court, which will confirm an arbitration award. It cannot be appealed from unless the defeated litigant can show fraud and corruption or an obvious abuse of power. It is thus apparent that the tribunal to be established by the Arbitration Society will not compete with the courts, since it will operate under and by virtue of the laws of the State. It will merely be a new arm of the law, supplementing the courts in a modern way and leaving them free to function and give better service to those causes rightfully coming before them.

NEW TRIBUNAL OF JUSTICE

ELIMINATING THE LAW'S DELAYS

A lawsuit, under existing conditions, is a battle of wits, the court room the arena, where, inspired with animosity, the parties advance against each other. No Goddess of Justice presides over this contest, where victory comes to him who has the greatest resources, the most patience and the most astute counsel. Indeed, so ineffective and cumbersome has legal practice become, with its endless rules of pleading and practice, procedure and evidence, its many devices which in the hands of the unscrupulous are available for delay, that men with righteous causes often choose to forego the assertion of their rights rather than endure the aggravation of protracted litigation, with its attendant severance of business and social relations. Under such circumstances, when it is conceded that it takes almost three years to bring a case to trial and the courts are so overworked that they can give but inadequate attention to the cases coming before them, when the Bar Associations of the country are bending all efforts to eliminate technicality and to simplify practice, any plan which would alleviate the present intolerable situation must meet with hearty approval.

A unique organization designed to meet and remedy the present conditions has recently been incorporated under the membership laws of the State of New York. The Arbitration Society of America, with headquarters at 115 Broadway, New York city, was established for the purpose of educating the public to a realization that there is a recognized method, sanctioned by law, for the determination of rights and the enforcement of remedies, by which a party may ascertain and obtain all he is entitled to from his opponent without instituting an action in a court of law. It aims to promote the general cause of arbitration in all disputes and to establish for the use of the general public the necessary machinery whereby parties may in an amicable manner, without undesirable publicity and at their own convenience settle their disputes before judges of their own selection in an inexpensive and expeditious manner.

The organization of this tribunal is heralded as the most constructive step taken in the past quarter of a century toward the more efficient administration of justice, and it is due to the untiring efforts, the vision and the idealism of a Jew, Honorable Moses H. Grossman, prominent New York lawyer and senior member of the firm of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, that the plan was made possible.

The high caliber of the men associated in the promotion of this enterprise is proof indeed that the organization is meeting an actual need and is bound to succeed.

Movements promising to be of real public service are of interest to men and women regardless of their religious beliefs. When, however, a movement is inspired and directed by a member of our own faith, we take particular pride and are anxious to be fully informed.

The first board of directors consists of the following men: Charles L. Guy, Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York; General Samuel McRoberts, president of the Metropolitan Trust Co.; Moses H. Grossman, former Judge and head of the law firm of House, Grossman & Vorhaus; James A. O'Gorman, former United States Senator and former Supreme Court Justice; Frederick Kernochan, Chief Justice of the Court of Special Sessions; William B.

HON. MOSES H. GROSSMAN

The Arbitration Society of America is an independent organization, affiliated with no one industry. It places its services at the disposal of the entire community. It may be said that there are now existing boards of arbitration in nearly every industry, and that consequently the Arbitration Society of America was uncalled for. However, even the arbitration boards now in existence are not utilized to the fullest extent, owing to the ignorance on the part of the general public of the great benefits to be derived from arbitration. Moreover, these existing boards and committees, although open as well to non-members as to members of the trade organizations, are naturally viewed with suspicion. A non-member knows very well that he can hardly hope for impartial justice in the adjustment of a dispute with a member. The non-partisanship of the new organization, the fact that it will indeed be a people's tribunal, is one of its big assets.

The society will open court rooms, prepare lists of arbitrators, experts in their lines, to be used by the disputants if they desire aid in the selection of their judges, and will make all necessary arrangements for the parties, who will only have to sign an arbitration agreement. The society will eventually be run on a self-supporting basis, clients paying a small fee for the use of court rooms, stenographic service, stationery, etc. In many instances there will be no charge beyond this nominal fee, since men are volunteering to act as arbitrators without reimbursement. However, the question of fees to be paid to the arbitrators will be settled in each case between the arbitrator selected and the parties.

Justice administered in this new tribunal will be speedy, eliminating the law's delays, which in so many instances constitute a positive denial of justice. Disputants can agree upon their arbitrators, set the case down for hearing at a definite time, convenient both to themselves and their witnesses, and secure a decision within a few days, whereas litigation of the same dispute would involve endless pleadings, dilatory motions, and a long wait before the case would be reached on the calendar. The arbitration award would, moreover, settle the matter finally. The arbitrator will hear all of the evidence, using his judgment as to what is material and relevant, making an award upon the merits and not ruling upon some technicality. There will be no new trials because of the admission or exclusion of evidence or the erroneous ruling of some judge on some technical question of law. Arbitration, too, will secure more mature judgment. Think of the absurdity in a court of law of forcing a jury to remain together until they arrive at a verdict. Sane business men do not act in this way, and the arbitrator will not make his decisions in this manner. He will give due and careful deliberation to the questions presented to him.

Arbitration, moreover, will cement friendships. A lawsuit naturally breeds hatreds. The entire atmosphere of a court of law is one of hostility. The defendant is brought into court against his will and, consequently, is unwilling to submit passively. An arbitration, on the other hand, does not destroy existing relationships. The parties agree upon a third person in whose ability, integrity and judgment they have full confidence, and in a friendly spirit present their claims. This friendly spirit is strengthened by the fact that they have selected their own judges and are not forced to rely upon a particular judge or a particular jury in whose selection they have had no choice. If the question is one involving expert knowledge, the parties know that the expert whom they have selected is more competent to mete out justice than if expert testimony were resorted to in a court of law and different theories were presented to a jury who had no background equipping them to properly judge of the truth of the theories presented.

Again, men will feel freer to arbitrate than to resort to litigation, since arbitration is not attended with undesirable publicity and disputants can bring their controversies to this tribunal knowing that if the hearing involves a revelation of confidential matters, trade secrets and the like, there will be no danger of notoriety. Their secrets will be safe, since the arbitrator will be a man upon whose judgment and integrity they rely.

It was at first believed that opposition to the plan of the society would be encountered on the part of the great mass of lawyers who would be jealous of what they believed to be an encroachment upon their field of endeavor. On the contrary, however, the plan has received the most cordial support and endorsement by the members of the bench and bar. To the lay public this may seem surprising, but a consideration of the question will readily reveal the fact that this movement will aid the lawyer instead of hindering him in his profession. The useless waste of time in courts of law, under present calendar practice with the vast amount of litigation and the fact that a lawyer must carry a case along for years, is extremely aggravating to a lawyer. He cannot fruitfully his efforts as rapidly as he wishes. And a young lawyer, handling smaller cases, although he must take precisely the same steps to protect the interests of his clients as a lawyer handling a more important piece of litigation cannot charge the fee which his time and effort really call for, owing to the smallness of the amount involved. It is he, especially, rather than the older and more experienced practitioner, who must suffer by the law's delays. Moreover, his clients are clients who have had less experience with courts and consequently are more apt to blame the delays to the inexperience and inability of counsel. He will be glad to be able to secure a prompt settlement of a difference for a client, collect his fee, and devote his time to other matters. And, on simple questions of fact, requiring no expert knowledge, or on questions of the law, the lawyer will make an ideal arbitrator, since he is accustomed to weigh evidence and make decisions. The lawyer thus sees his field of activity enlarged, and enlarged in a very desirable way, since all men like to act as judges between their fellowmen—there is no higher calling, nor one more noble.

THE PASSING SHOW

By HAROLD HERMAN

A Demagogue Goes to His Reward

Horatio Bottomley, brazen, defiant and sure of his sinister hold on the masses of unthinking people, the masses who, like the dumb ox, are led into the slaughter pen by a wisp of hay held in front of his nose, stood before his judges and delivered himself of this tirade: "The dear boys, whether they be sleeping or still with us, know that I have not betrayed them—and you shall scour the country from east to west, from north to south, and you will never empanel a jury which will say that Horatio Bottomley could be guilty of so cruel a crime against both God and man."

That jury, however, was found, and ere this fomentor of racial hatreds and animosities, this disseminator of Jew hatred, not out of conviction but cool, calculated gain, not out of love for a man-eating God but out of a love for wine, woman and song, quite realized what was taking place about him he was on his way to a felon's cell and the ignominy that attaches to it, if indeed ignominy can at all attach itself to such a vile creature as Horatio Bottomley, M. P.

The Jew hater of a bygone day usually was a fanatic or bigot. But in this age of democracy and freedom and the scramble that followed the freeing of the world from all thralls and shackles, even bigotry and religious and national hatreds must have an economic cause of being and must show a proper balance sheet and pay a fat dividend to be followed as a vocation in life, as otherwise a man may as well—and sooner—go into international banking or the manufacture of poison gases!

For this is a practical age, you know, and dreams that can't be minted into golden and clinking sovereigns must be thrown on the scrap heap.

Pink Tights and Sociology

A lady eminent for the shapeliness of her ankle, the roguishness of smile and the superlative exercise of that supreme deadline of the female of the species—so mournfully sung by the poet—in capturing a new male every other week, has gone to her rest mourned and honored by many of our accident-statesmen and near-statesmen.

Had the lady continued to charm men with her pink tights and nun-like smile the writer of these lines would have had no occasion to pen these obituary lines of the eminent lady, nor any inward urge to cause tears to flow out of the ducts of the readers of these lines in a Jewish newspaper. But this eminent lady had turned sociologist and immigrant student after the decay of her charms and her farewell to the footlights, goaded on thereto by the exponents of "normalcy" in politics, and she only recently returned from a trip to Europe with a report tucked away somewhere on her modest person that while Jewish husbands were not at all bad (she had a few of them, more or less), Jewish immigrants are decidedly bad and must be stopped at all hazards! Truly, this is a government of amateurs by amateurs, and we are well used to that, but government by pink tights is a novelty indeed!

The Jew in the American College

A great commotion has been raised over the recent inadvertent announcement by someone in authority at Harvard of the future exclusion or restriction of Jewish students from that famed seat of learning. A loud and indignant outcry came from many throats, even from some non-kosher Yankee throats here and there, where the traditions of the fathers had not been entirely forgotten or deliberately thrown overboard.

But to us there is news only in the bold announcement of that which has hitherto been hidden under the bland smile and courteous demeanor of the college authorities in most of the American schools of learning of late years. We all knew that a decaying cadaver was hidden under the rippling waters, and we need not therefore be surprised when the corpse came to the surface, as in all physical and mental laws it was bound to do soon or late. Ominous rumblings were heard all along, a sign of subterranean disturbance of the elements which are sure eventually to bring destruction in their wake. Perhaps it is better that they came and the strain of expectancy is over, while an enemy in the open is far easier to fight and an open battery is far less deadly than a masked or camouflaged one.

Oh, to Be a Banker!

Were one to ask me on one of these bright June mornings what vocation I would choose in my life, if the choice were left to me, I would unhesitatingly reply, "Let me be a banker."

A score or two years ago the most lordly creatures on God's earth was a kind, hedgedabout by majesty and even "divinity," according to Tennyson. But at the present day the majesty of the king-ship has devolved upon the great international bankers, who now hold the destiny of the nations in their itching palms. A representative of the Mexican Government comes here seeking recognition for his rule, and he sees whom? Not the President or the Secretary of State, but a group of bankers, to whose tender mercies it is left to decide whether his government will stand or be overthrown, while the question of whether there shall be war or peace now between France and Germany (and incidentally the entire world) is now being threshed out also by a group of bankers, while the statesman and nominal leaders of Europe are practically passive spectators to this international game of chess, played with millions of human lives as the pawns.

If there is any truth in the old adage that the pen is mightier than the sword, then it must surely refer to the pen that signs the check or the bond and the one that writes homilies and sermons, and surely not the one that wrote the Ten Commandments and the like obsolete things.

Polish Police Officers Toast Jewish Artist at Banquet

Wilna (Jewish Press Association).—At a banquet arranged by the local Jewish intelligentsia in honor of the Jewish deaf-mute painter Minkowsky, Polish police officers entered and took charge of affairs. They forbade the speakers to make more than ten-minute speeches and also demanded that all speeches be translated into Polish. One of them even spoke about a Polish-Jewish understanding.

Those present were enraged at the effrontery of the police, but had to suppress their feelings.

The painter Minkowsky is considered a leader in his field and is a brother of the former Vice-Minister Minkowsky.

The wedding of former Revenue Collector Mark Eisner of this city and Miss Helene Oettinger of Goldsboro, N. C., took place on June 7 at the home of the bride in Goldsboro. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Simon Schlager, of Temple Emanuel, New York City, and the Rev. Dr. Julius Meyerberg, of Goldsboro.

Rev. and Mrs. Joel Limon were tendered a surprise at their home, 1498 Crotona Park East, last Sunday, the occasion being the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Limon were married in Russia and came to this country about thirty-five years ago. They have eight children and twelve grandchildren, all of whom were present at the golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Turnansky, of No. 249 Eldridge street, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Goldie Turnansky, to Rabbi Henry B. Goldberger, of Harrisburg, Pa. Miss Turnansky has been very active with the Young Israel Sisterhood of New York, being secretary of that organization.

Rabbi Goldberger has been principal of the Harrisburg Hebrew School for eighteen months. He is a son of Rabbi and Mrs. Leo Goldberger, of New York, and the grandson of Rabbi Abram Goldberger, also of that city. His brother, Rabbi A. Goldberger, is well known in this city.

Borough President Julius Miller was married to Miss Diane Goldstein last Sunday afternoon at the Hotel Astor in the presence of their immediate relatives, Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, an uncle of the bride, officiating. In the evening there was a reception attended by over 400 invited guests. Miss Dorothy Miller and Miss Diane Seamon attended the bride, David Miller was best man, and the ushers were Al Miller, Dr. B. Goldstein, Joseph Levinson and Albert Levinson.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller will leave for a brief honeymoon trip, and later will go abroad. On their return they will live at 35 East Eighty-fourth street.

A pretty wedding took place Saturday evening, June 10, when Miss Kitty Silverstein, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Saul Silverstein, was united in matrimony to Mr. Harry Jaeger, at the synagogue of the First Independent Hebrew Congregation, North Washington street, Jamaica, by the Rev. Ezekiel Jacobson, in the presence of both families and a large gathering of relatives and friends. Following the ceremony refreshments were served in the large vestry room to the invited guests, who tendered their felicitations to the newly united pair. Mr. and Mrs. Jaeger will spend their honeymoon at the seaside. Later they will be at home to their friends at Long Island City, where they expect to make their home.

The Board of Directors of the Institutional Synagogue tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Blankfort a farewell dinner in honor of their departure for Europe. Mr. Blankfort is chairman of the Building Committee. The directors presented him with marine glasses as a gift. Among the speakers were Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, Congressman Siegel, Joseph Elias, Davidson, Hon. Samuel Marx, Rabbi Isadore Goodman, Mr. Sol Lamport, Mr. Abraham Bernstein, Herman Sacks, Mrs. William Friedman and Mr. H. Kesselman. Mr. Blankfort responded and announced an additional contribution of $250 to his gift of $2,500 towards the building fund of the Institutional Synagogue.

The wedding of Mr. Nat Garfinkel, a son of Mr. Morris Garfinkel of 1855 Seventh avenue, and Miss Doris Ullman, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Ullman of 920 Riverside Drive, took place on Sunday, June 4, at the Hotel Astor. Rev. Drs. Philip Klein and Bernard Drachman officiating. Miss Ullman was attended by her sister, Miss Minna Ullman, as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids, Misses Bessie, Hannah and Rosie Garfinkel, Dorothy Handler and Eva Kutinsky. Ushers were Dr. Bernard P. Sager, Messrs. B. Trubitz, Charles I. Cohen, Sydney Rothman and Max Ullman. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. S. Stanley Garfinkel, as best man. The young couple are spending their honeymoon at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Son Cohen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Son Cohen of Baltimore, Md., and 465 West End avenue, to Mr. William Biel, son of Mrs. Louis Biel of 885 West End avenue, New York city, and of the late Louis Biel, who was vice-president of the United Cigar Stores Company, was held at the Hotel Ambassador on Monday evening, June 12. THE BUILDING

To lay the foundation of a personality that shall be at home in the world, appreciative of spiritual values, and effective in meeting the practical problems of life—this is our aim.

"No better atmosphere could be conceived for the mental and physical health of children than is found in the Jewish Center School."

A new Jewish Board of Deputies for Anglo-Jewry being about to be chosen, the old board has issued its report and, as a feature thereof, lists such of its members as altogether failed to attend any of its many meetings. In fact, twenty-seven per cent. of the membership of the board failed to answer a single of the numerous roll-calls. This disproportionately large percentage of absentee members is very much to be deplored; at the same time, we must commend as heroic the treatment which has been accorded those who accept election to a responsible communal office and then completely fail in fulfilling its obligations.

We need not waste our thought or space on the scene before the Lockwood Investigating Committee in our City Hall on the second day of our holy Shabuoth festival, incidentally, also the Jewish Sabbath, the principals of which were Samuel Untermyer, the counsel to the committee, and Mortimer L. Schiff, the son of the late Jacob H. Schiff, and himself an influential banker. But we may express our deep regret that two members of the House of Israel, in the presence of an audience largely composed of non-Jews, should have indulged in such an acrimonious "passage at arms," accompanied as it was by an excess of vituperation.

Latterly a meeting under Jewish auspices was held in London to register the support of the idea behind the League of Nations by the Anglo-Jewish community. The Anglo-Jewish press, as is right, commends the proceedings had then and there, but expresses its surprise that not one word fell from a single speaker on that occasion concerning the present position of Palestine, a condition which was rendered possible only through the workings of the League of Nations. We confess we share this same feeling of surprise, and are equally unable to account for the omission of Palestine from references by speakers at a Jewish meeting on the subject of the League of Nations. Surely, our community, whether Zionist or non-Zionist, is vitally interested in the fate of Eretz Yisrael. Surely those persons, Jews or non-Jews, who support the principle of the League of Nations, are glad to have a concrete example of its operations to enforce the otherwise theoretical character of their remarks. And yet, on the occasion to which we allude, not one word was said about Palestine. We wonder why?

In its issue dated May 5, Israel's Messenger does us the honor to reprint in extenso one of our editorial utterances on a recent aspect of Zionism. We have no doubt the readers of our Far Eastern contemporary were greatly edified by their perusal. Our contemporary adds that "We are indeed pleased over our own efforts in this direction," intimating that it was due to the "efforts" of Israel's Messenger, that we were "converted" from a position of antagonism to, to one of support of, the Zionist movement. We shall not deprive Israel's Messenger of the joy it experiences over our "conversion," induced as it thinks this was by its own efforts. Never having altered our attitude to Zionism, concerning which we have ever occupied a definite and well-understood position, we must permit Israel's Messenger to continue to lay the flattering unction to its soul that it "converted" us. We are genuinely glad that our Chinese confrere now looks upon us so approvingly and finds us a useful member of the circle of Jewish editors; its reference, too, to our sainted founder is vastly appreciated. On this last point, perhaps, Israel's Messenger knows better than we ourselves what the late Jacob P. Solomon thought of Zionism. For our part, we forbear from enlarging on this aspect of the situation.

Sabbath begins at 7:12 p. m. (Standard time—Daylight Saving time one hour later). Behalosechu Num. 8:1—12:16. Prophetic reading, Zech. 2:14—4:7.

HENRY FORD FOR PRESIDENT

Of course, Henry Ford will run for President of the United States at the election in 1924 if he is able to secure a nomination from one of the main political parties. He may even be induced to run if nominated by a substantial group of his fellow-citizens without direct party affiliations, either spontaneously organized or created through the activities of those who are part of the Ford plant. The American people know enough of Ford by this time, and knowing him as they do they would not expect him to do otherwise than make the fight.

In a sense, it were well perhaps if Ford were a candidate. If only because on the result of his fight would depend the future of the anti-Semitic crusade, the campaign in behalf of warped prejudice in this country, his contest for this exalted office should be welcomed. Ford has become perpetually identified with a number of "causes" which have excited the derision and the burning resentment of right-thinking Americans. Nowhere better than through the moil of a presidential campaign can the moving force of these "causes" pass through the crucible.

As Jews, we are distinctly and vitally interested in the rumor now connected with the name of Henry Ford. He has made his name a household word of a sort among our people, and now intends to capitalize his "reputation" by placing himself largely and squarely in the public eye of America. We hope that Ford will carry out his intention; a man with his "reputation" should never be left in doubt concerning his "beneficent influence."

Ford for President would not be a formidable candidate, though it is more than likely that his candidacy would prove dangerous. For, inevitably, the forces of darkness, prejudice and reaction would rally to his support. These alignments deserve to be set out; the American people, and not merely the Jewish section thereof, are entitled to know how many of their fellow-citizens are receptive to the teachings of Ford's pernicious creed. The number of votes Ford for President would receive would be a tolerably certain indication of the sway and strength of his degrading propaganda.

Therefore, we hope Ford will make the run which rumor credits him with contemplating.

Executive ability, that much-heralded and greatly-praised modern manifestation of business acumen, must be "at a discount" in Harvard University, for, surely, it was an operation of executive ability which confided to a subordinate the recent promulgation by the Harvard authorities concerning the over-extended use of their facilities, and brought a hornets' nest of criticism about their heads through an anti-Semitic reference, parenthetically expressed.

Anglo-Jewry with the years is becoming more and more centralized as a community, and the recent creation of the office of director of education under the new central committee for Jewish education and the appointment thereto of Herbert M. Adler, a London barrister, are interesting bits of evidence of this tendency. The office on its merits has distinct possibilities, so distinct, as a matter of fact, as to induce us to hope that it were feasible to apply the position to our own needs. Of course this country is not so compact or so uniform as England, but a director of Jewish education for each state of this country which harbors a considerable community, and certainly for each large city thereof, would function very usefully and acceptably.

Isaac W. Bernheim, of Louisville, the promoter of the indefensible "Reform Church of American Israelites," has written under date of April of this year an "open letter" to Dr. Stephen S. Wise, the most outstanding of his opponents within Reform Judaism. Degrading and wholly improper and un-Jewish as Mr. Bernheim's proposal is, yet the force behind his latest production cannot escape the attention of him who reads as he runs. For this "open letter" does not so much amount to a new "argument" in support of the "Reform Church of American Israelites" as it does to an indictment of, Dr. Stephen S. Wise for his criticism of Mr. Bernheim's suggestion. Dr. Wise, the radical iconoclast, who himself would "renovate," that is, "innovate," the structure of our faith, is hardly the man to inadvertently the proposal of a yoke-fellow. In other words, those who are faithful to Judaism pure and undefiled may attack an iconoclast and an innovator; when he who attacks such is himself an iconoclast and an innovator the worm turns. We don't blame here Isaac W. Bernheim.

If the Roman Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem, as is plain from a recent utterance of his on the subject, believes that Palestine is being dominated at the present time by Jews, whose object is to establish there a Jewish State and to expel the Arabs, who wonders that the Vatican has decided to combat the British mandate over the Holy Land? The Patriarch strongly reminds us of his prototype in Nathan der Weise, Lessing's immortal drama. There the Patriarch, no matter what the extenuating circumstances, condemned the Jew, the wise Nathan, to be burned. Here the Patriarch shuts his face deliberately against the truth and believes that the Jews in Palestine seek to expel the Arabs therefrom. And his additional statement, to the effect that the Catholics in the Holy Land are deprived of the right to appear and be heard before the local courts of justice, is made out of whole cloth and was thus emphatically characterized by a representative of the British Government in the House of Commons. Mendacity of this variety, even from a high ecclesiastic, is easily combated, and is not calculated to serve the Vatican's cause.

VOICES AND ECHOES

"And the Lord spoke to Moses, saying, Make thee two trumpets of silver; of a whole piece shalt thou make them: that thou mayest use them for the calling of the assembly, and for the journeying of the camps." (Num. x, 1-2.)

THE trumpets which in clear silver notes called to Israel—say the rabbis—were miraculously hidden away, so that no man after Moses could ever use them. They were the instruments through which the peerless leader issued his God-inspired commands; and they were sacred to him alone. No lesser lips could, no lesser lips dared, touch these trumpets: and, to prevent the bare attempt of such desecration being made, God hid them away from the profane gaze and the profane touch. Now, silent are the lips that touched the silver trumpets; silenced the voice that resounded through them; and the great leader himself sleeps on Neboh's height, dreaming of the time when he would once more be called upon to rise in his might, and, hauling forth the hallowed bugles from their mysterious hiding place, rouse Israel again to action, to battle, to heroism!

Let us be at once fair enough to recall that similar stories are told also of other national heroes, whose instruments or tools are after their deaths in some dark supernatural way withdrawn from use by their unworthy followers. The sword gets so heavy that none can lift it, until the right man of true heroic mettle appears and breaks the spell; or the bugle bursts with one mighty blast, and the like. This similarity, however, does not lessen, but rather enhances the significance of our Jewish story, as it points to a universal human sentiment of adoration towards the great—of hero worship. Enhanced is it in the Jewish story still further by the fact that here the instrument put out of use is not an instrument of war—a sword; but a tool and mouthpiece of the spirit, a conveyor of the Voice. What moving thoughts does this fact arouse in us! For while the Voice itself is silenced, and the great sleeper of Mount Neboh sleeps his sleep in the bosom of eternity, does not the message of this Voice, does not its echo, still travel around the globe, making itself heard and felt wherever men thirst and hunger after righteousness?

Most certainly, the Voice, the Word, of the great man cannot be repeated as it emanated from him. Genius is unique. His work cannot be reproduced, though it may be weakly imitated. But the sincerest form of flattery is also the truest testimony of originality. History does not repeat itself—at least not in the Genius. Life itself—God—hides away the tools and instruments, the means and methods, by which Genius gains its ascendancy. Aye, the very source of the power of Genius is hidden: and try as a man might he could never discover the hidings of this force that rules the world, and traces the path of mankind's onward journeyings. No one else, after Genius has spoken, can speak as he did; at no time and in no age will the like ever be spoken, will such a voice ever reverberate through the hollow spaces of the world! In him for the nonce is concentrated all history; in him as much of thought and truth and beauty as he represents is absolutely completed and perfected. Should we deny, as those who get their history from books and not from a strange inward insight might well deny, that Time is not a weary old jade numbling toothlessly the same old silly words and rhymes she heard while Spring was yet upon the earth, that there is novelty and fresh zest in every newborn moment, even as there is novelty in every fresh ripple of the river which gathers the surprise of new songs in its onward flow seaward: here, in the work and worth of Genius, there is ample refutation for all such crabbed denials; for here life wells up constantly in new shape, with un hoped-for grace, and here are the new heavens and the new earth promised of old, and here is the secret of that eternal youth which we call God.

But if the voice of Genius can never reach us again in the fresh surprise of its original accents, and if the very mouthpiece through which it spoke is hidden from us, what splendor of the spirit reaches the generations of soul-hungry men from the hidden wellsprings of past revelation which once bubbled so freely, with such courageous song, but which is now doomed to darkness and silence? And though Genius of another sort (it can never be the same or even similar) burst from the same wellspring, can it compensate for the loss, and are the descendants of heroic ancestors never to share at all in the boon enjoyed by those who were privileged to witness the miraculous bubbling forth of Genius?

Surely it is no mere idle antiquarian interest that would like to haul forth the silver trumpets of Genius from their place of concealment, and perhaps by a desperate attempt try to charm back into being the very accents that once brought joy and strength to the world! Hearts are ever hungry for the word divine, eyes ever look longingly for the miracle of the great man's clarion voice. Are these never to receive satisfaction? It seems not.

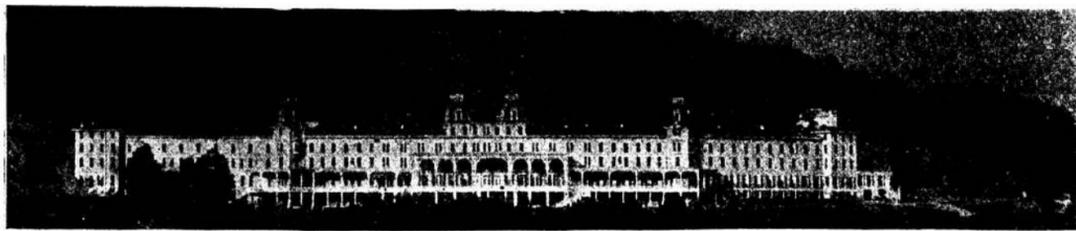

But there are compensations. What time takes in one form it gives back in another. The Voice cannot be reproduced exactly as when it first lived and thundered, but in the place of the Voice the succeeding generations perceive the Echo. And though the Echo is never as beautiful or as clear as the Voice, it sometimes is stronger when it rings down the caverns of time and is taken up and repeated by the rocky walls: nay, the very obstacles it meets in its way, render it mightier and more vibrant. Great men live on in the influence they create, and this second life of influence, though paler than the original life, is nevertheless more fruitful. Time mellows even the voices of the great, and the mellowing of these prophetic voices into echoes that travel onward is in itself a wonderful compensation. Therefore, let us not search vainly for the hidden trumpets, but rather listen for the reverberating echoes of the voices that once spoke, and so live as to make our own lesser lives nothing but echoes of the lives of the great.

PERSONALITIES

SUPPOSING for a change we speak of some personalities whom we have not met. It does not offer much exercise for the imagination, but it may afford a welcome relief for our readers from the monotony of our weekly parade of fame.

First, then, let us introduce you to a gentleman who occupies the post of director of a big charity. He is a serious looking man with furrowed forehead and eyes shadowed with care. His back is slightly bent from constant bending over a desk, and his head aches from constant overwork. This gentleman comes forth to greet you and gives you a warm handclasp, gripping your fingers firmly. "No," he replies in answer to your queries, "I am not at all interested in Greenwich Village or Broadway. Furthermore, what Gallucurci does is none of my business, and the next show Ziegfeld puts on can very well do without my presence. Neither does my heart burn for the latest in literature. I like to read, of course, and do somewhat, but I abominate cafes where the intelligentsia foregather. Bobbed hair has the most superficial interest for me, and I don't know how women tweeze their eyebrows. I like to wear a palm beach suit for the sake of coolness, but I can never keep it in proper shape. My ties are of whatever kind comes to my hands at the furnishing store, but I generally prefer a black to a yellow checked. I have never spent more than seventy-five cents at a barber shop, and have never had my nails manicured nor my locks singed. I would like to indulge in sports, but I feel I am getting on in years of discretion, and so I do not go in for tennis and boating with company, and I would not know the difference between Benny Leonard and Jack Dempsey. I am fond of walks, but I do not walk in the moonlight nor do I join in moonlight excursions. I would like to be known as a wit, but I am not, and I am no good as a raconteur. I am a married man and like home life. Right here in the office I have a few assistants who do a great deal more work than I, and I am grateful to them for it. All these elaborate systems that you see here are due to my taking the advice of my help. I don't get all my ideas for advertising campaigns from the newspaper and subway ads, and my chief study here is not the next annual report. What takes up most of my time is to gather as much money for the institution as I can, and see that it is run on efficient basis, and if I were to be offered a better job I would not dream of leaving here, for I could not change my interest so quickly."

From this gentleman we progress to the president of the institution. He is a big, hearty man with a cheery voice and kindly manner. "Am I a real estate man?" he repeats your question. "Not at all. I make soda water. Will it surprise you if I say that I am a very religious man? I go to synagogue on the Sabbath as well as on the High Holidays, and I do not allow my son to eat chop suey. My daughter does not think of intermarriage, and we do not believe in Christmas presents. Furthermore, my wife does not buy Easter bonnets.

"I am president of this charity because I am really moved by a desire to be of service to Jewry and to these poor people who are not as fortunate as I am. I don't give a brass button if my name never appears in the papers, and I don't try to edge into the spotlight on every occasion. I give generous hints to guests at dinners that I could not make a speech without sending them off to sleep, and so I am never asked to make an address. On such occasions, when it becomes absolutely necessary for me to speak in public, it causes me the greatest agony of mind to think that the speech was prepared for me by a secretary or some poor devil of a struggling student who thinks I can be of use to him some time. I have given strict orders to the director of our institution not to send out statements in my name unless I really make them. The same applies to plans and undertakings. I don't want to get the credit for something unless I actually do it myself."

"I really don't know why they selected me to be president of this institution. I have had very little education and know nothing of the social problems. For the life of me I could not outline a policy of action unless I had my executive committee to tell me how. I suppose I have some money because people do drink quite a lot of soda during the hot weather, and I don't think thrice before I make a donation; if I see a blind man I always try to accommodate his box as well as the committee that calls upon me, but otherwise I am a most insignificant man. I know all about soda water, and I may be able to tell you something about Herzl, but there my man-of-the-world knowledge ends."

The Yiddish theatrical season has now altogether ended and all the tag ends of the season have been gathered in. New York's leading Yiddish theatre, the Yiddish Art Theatre, has now passed its fourth milestone, and it is announced that with the close of the season Maurice Schwartz, the director of the Yiddish Art Theatre, will have given his 1,500th performance.

The case of Schwartz and the new Yiddish theatre movement in New York forms one of the most curious pieces of theatrical history. Undoubtedly the Jewish stage is in Mr. Schwartz's debt, for he was practically the first professional Yiddish actor to break away from the old standards of the Jewish dramatic production and strive to give something better and more worth while. Yet Schwartz is one of the least important personalities in the Jewish theatre. He is a good actor, speaking of acting as the ability to mimic, but Schwartz as an actor has brought nothing to the Jewish stage and will leave nothing to it.

Here we have a mystery: an artist of everyday talents creating the best Yiddish theatre in America. And this is how the mystery is unraveled. Four years ago Maurice Schwartz was an actor on Second avenue. By dint of his youth, his ability to copy personality, and great ambitious impulse he had reached the leading-man stage. In acting, Schwartz was on the lower levels, but he was blessed with a most insatiable ambition to become his own producer. The war had driven out the German players from the New York Irving Place Theatre, and Schwartz saw an opportunity for another Yiddish theatre. In association with Max R. Willner, whose only interest in the theatre is from the business angle, he leased the Irving Place Theatre.

Now, aside from his ambitious spurrings, Schwartz's greatest virtue is his deference to the opinions of celebrities, and once the news of a new theatre got around, every suggestion for a good theatre brought about by the revolt against the miserable state of the then Jewish theatre, was showered upon Schwartz. Schwartz suddenly found himself elevated from an ordinary actor to a useful personality from whom great things were asked.

Under this influence Schwartz was moved to heed every counsel given him by the Yiddish literati and eminent well-wishers of the Jewish theatre. He assembled a personnel which has not yet been equaled in a Jewish theatre in New York. Every young artist thought here was a haven of refuge, and flocked to the Schwartz banner. In his first season at the Irving Place, Schwartz had with him Celia Adler, Ben Ami, Ludwig Satz, Bertha Gerstin—practically the cream of Jewish theatrical art as it turned out later. Schwartz's first season was a sensation. Then Schwartz's own personality predominated, and he became less reliant on advice. The second season saw a split in the personnel. Celia Adler, Ben-Ami and Satz left. Schwartz could not keep them. The Garden Theatre opened, with the idea of being all that Schwartz was told he could make of the Irving Place. With the opening of the former theatre, the Irving Place Theatre declined to a level of Second avenue. Schwartz himself taking part in a musical comedy. The Garden Theatre was in the ascendancy and would have remained so if it were not that there was no responsible artistic personality in whom the players could place confidence and respect. Reicher, the first director, was a goy, to all intents and purposes, and a temperamental one at that, and harmony was impossible. The owner, Schmitzer, was by profession a manufacturer of feathers, whose wife was ambitious to become a great actress, and he certainly could not control his theatre. In less than two seasons the Garden Theatre collapsed and Schwartz, who had been in the background all this time, seized his chance and took it over, together with Celia Adler, smoothing over contritely his former differences with her.

Again Schwartz became amenable to advice and gained favor. His first production, "Der Dibbuk," was a success. Thereafter practically failures were the rule at the theatre, with the exception of "Rags," which ran for six weeks by virtue of the enthusiasm of the Forward.

At the Garden Theatre Schwartz is the sole owner, having severed connection with Willner. Left to his own responsibility, Schwartz was faced with the inability of choosing plays that were theatrically adaptable. Anxious to defer to critical opinion, he chose a variety of plays, "literary" in every respect, and did not see their incompleteness as stage productions. Without the necessary editing they failed.

So, while Schwartz glories in completing four seasons of "art theatre," everything is not as glorious as it should be. Talented folk come to him because he owns the only theatre in New York which has a policy of good drama. But the head of the theatre cannot manipulate his forces, and so the fifth season of the Yiddish Art Theatre promises more doubts than anything else. It may be said with some surety that were another Yiddish theatre to open in New York with the aim of producing good drama Schwartz would find himself as deserted as when the Garden Theatre opened in opposition to the Irving Place.

At least, this is our view of the solution of the Maurice Schwartz question in the American Jewish theatre. JOSEPH KAYE.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

MOUNTAINS AND VALLEYS

Dear Children:

Moses continued to speak in praise of the Holy Land of Israel as follows: "For the land whither thou goest in to possess it is not like the land of Egypt, from where ye came out, where thou sowest thy seed and interest it with thy feet as a garden of herbs." Rashi says, "In the land of Egypt it was necessary for the people to bring water from the Nile, with thy feet." In order to irrigate it you were required to lose sleep and to work hard, and you were able to irrigate the low land only but not the high land, so that you had to carry up the water from the low land to the high land, but in the land of Israel, from the rain of heaven doth it drink water.

You are sleeping in your bed and the Holy One, blessed be He, irrigates the low land and the high land, that which is visible and that which is invisible, all together, for it is not like a garden of herbs for which rain is not sufficient, and it is irrigated with the foot and with the shoulder.

But the land, whither ye go over to possess it, is a land of mountains and valleys, the mountain is preferable to the plain, as on the plain, in a space measuring a Beth Kor, you can only sow a Kor, but on the mountain, from one Beth Kor, you can obtain five Kor, four from its four sides and one on top. A land which the Lord, thy Eternal, cometh for. Does He not care for every land? As it is said, "To bring rain on a land void of men" (Job 38). However, he cares only for that land, and incidentally takes care of the others also. Always are the eyes of the Lord thy Eternal upon it, to see what it requires and to issue new decrees sometimes for good, sometimes for evil. As the Talmud Treatise Rosh Hoshanah says, "From the beginning of the year it is judged what shall be at the end of the year." And it shall come to pass, if ye will hearken. This refers to the previous promise. From the rain of heaven shall it drink water, which will be fulfilled only if ye will hearken. "Shamwauig tishwauig." If you have hearkened to the old teaching you will hearken to the new teaching. That means you will always learn something new from the old teaching if you study it diligently (Sise Chachomim).

It is said likewise, Vehaya im shoechoach tishkach." If thou shouldst forget part of it, in the end you will forget all of it, for thus it is written in the Talmud Nuggillah, "If you will forsake me one day I will forsake you two days." Unto my commandments which I command you this day they shall ever be as new to you as if you first heard them on that day. To love the Lord. You shall not say, "I am going to learn in order that I become rich; in order that I be called 'Rabbi'; in order that I receive a reward." But whatever you do, do for the love of the Lord, and in the end honor will come to you. And to serve him with all your heart—the service of the heart. That means prayer or with all your heart and with all your soul. That has been said already. It was said previously in the singular, a warning to the individual;

here in the plural, a warning to the congregation. That I will send rain for your land. Ye have done what devolved upon you. I will do what devolves upon me. In its due season, at night, not to discomfort you. Another meaning is this, on Friday nights, when every one is in his house, that thou mayest gather in thy corn. Thou shalt gather it in thy house and not thy enemies. As it is said, "I will not give thy corn any more as food for thy enemies, but they who gather it shall eat it" (Isaiah 62). And it shall not be as it is related, "And it was when Israel had sown that the Midianites came up, etc." (Judges 6). And I will give grass in thy field for thy cattle, so that you will not be required to lead them in the wilderness. Another meaning is this, You will cut your crop the entire winter and throw it before your cattle, and will refrain therefrom thirty days before the harvest, and it will not yield less corn. And thou shalt eat and be satisfied. This is another blessing, that there be a blessing in the bread as it is digested in the stomach that thou shalt eat and be satisfied. Take heed to yourselves, inasmuch as ye will eat and be satisfied; take heed to yourselves that ye do not rebel, for no one rebels against the Holy One, blessed be He, except through satiety. As it is said, "That when thou hast eaten and art satisfied, and when thy herds and thy flocks multiply," what does it say after that? Thy heart be then not lifted up, and thou forget the Lord (Deuteronomy 8). And ye turn aside, that is you abandon the Torah, and this will lead you to serve other gods, for when one leaves the Torah he goes and cleaves to idol-worship.

And thus did David say, "Because they have driven me out this day so that I cannot attach myself on the inheritance of the Lord, saying, 'Go, serve other gods' (1 Samuel 26). Who told him so? But, since I am driven from the pursuit of the study of the Torah, I am prone to worship idols—other gods. They are others to those who serve them. They cry to them and they do not answer them. And ye shall perish quickly. Besides the other punishments I will drive you from your land which has caused you to sin. It may be compared to a king who sent his son to a feast and told him do not eat more than you require in order that you come home clean. But that son paid no attention, but ate and drank more than he required, and vomited and made all the guests dirty, whereupon they seized him by his hands and feet and threw him out of the palace, quickly.

I will not give you any reprieve, and if you will say, Did not the generation of the flood obtain respite, as it is said, "Yet his days of grace shall be a hundred and twenty years" (Genesis 6). They did not have from whom to learn, but ye have from whom to learn. Therefore shall ye lay up these, my words, in your heart. Even after ye are exiled be distinguished by keeping the commandments, put on "Tephilin," Make "Niezuzoth," so that they be not new to you when you return, and thus said Jeremiah (31), "Set thyself up waymarks." And ye shall teach them to your children, to speak of them, as soon as the child can speak teach him. The Torah commanded us through Moses, hence, a father should teach his child to speak the Holy Language as soon as he begins to speak. And also teach him the Torah, otherwise it is as though he denies him, as it is said, And ye shall teach your children to speak of them in order that your days may be multiplied and the days of your children.

The new Cincinnati Orthodox Jewish Home was formally opened Sunday afternoon at 1406 Myrtle avenue, Walnut Hills, in the building formerly used as a home for the aged. Most of the $25,000 for the purchase of the institution was raised by a group of Jewish women through donations of small coins. The place has been renovated and remodeled and the children to be housed will have plenty of sunshine, air and gardens.

Hebrew Technical Institute Commencement

The thirty-sixth commencement exercises of the Hebrew Technical Institute were held on Wednesday evening, June 7, at Cooper Union Hall, in the presence of over 2,000 guests and visitors. The graduating class consisted of seventy-five young men who completed the three-year day course and eighteen graduates in the evening class work in tool-making, instrument making, pattern making, automotive engineering and mechanical drawing.

An essay on "The Automobile Electric Starting and Lighting System" was delivered by Harry Rosenbaum of the senior class, while Elias A. Goldberg demonstrated and operated the engine on the platform before the audience.

"A Summer Walking Trip" essay was presented by Morris Adler, who was one of the senior class students to go on the summer walking trip last year out into New Jersey and Pennsylvania, on which trip the boys visited the pottery works and brick yards of Trenton, the steel works at Bethlehem, Pa., and other manufacturing plants. The essay was illustrated by many lantern slides of photographs taken on the trip.

The principal address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Arthur D. Dean, professor of education in Teachers' College and former chief of the Department of Vocational Education of New York State. Dr. Dean strongly emphasized the value of technical training and the great need of young men who can combine theory and practice in science and mechanics, especially in this period of reconstruction.

Mr. Joseph L. Buttenwieser, president of the directors of the Institute, addressed the graduates briefly, emphasizing their responsibilities to the community and the necessity for co-operative efforts at all times.

The exercises were concluded by Dr. Edgar S. Barney, principal of the institute, who reviewed the growth of the Institute, especially in recent years, and told of the new electrical laboratory, which is being installed and equipped entirely by the graduates.

A most agreeable feature of the graduation was the music furnished by the Hebrew Technical Institute Orchestra.

Several prizes were awarded, as follows: Chester Fields Memorial prize, to Julius Meyerson; Clara Buttenwieser Unger prize, to Sidney Lebot; Abraham Bernheimer prizes, to Morris Adler and Jacob Solzberg; Fred M. Stein prize, to Benjamin Mordkofsky; Samuel Hirsh prize, to Irving Bayane; alumni prize, to Alexander Menke Memorial prize, to Samuel Reavin; Stella Steinam Housman prize, to Frank Kapp; Bertha Black prize, to Morris Stern; Elvin J. Schwarzbaum Memorial prize, to Elias A. Goldberg; Stella Mayer prize, to Rubin Seligman; David Belais prize, to Abraham Siegelofsky; Lucas A. Steinman prize, to Isidore S. Grossman; Carl Schurz prize for the best essay on "Technical Education," to David H. Davidovitz; Esther Herrman prize, for best essay on "Theodore Roosevelt, a Typical American," to Harry Rosenbaum.

Frankel Heads European Commission

Headed by Dr. Lee K. Frankel, third vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, a commission of leading Jewish business men, scientists, bankers and social workers will sail for Europe, Tuesday, June 20, on the Berangaria to study Jewish conditions in the war-stricken countries.

DR. LEE K. FRANKEL

The other members of the commission, appointed by Louis Marshall, president of the American Jewish Relief Committee, are David A. Brown of Detroit, who was national chairman of the recent war relief campaign which raised $17,000,000; Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine at Harvard; David M. Bressler, chairman of the New York city campaign that raised over $4,000,000; Mr. Morris Wolf, prominent Philadelphia attorney, and Herbert H. Lehman, New York banker, chairman of the Reconstruction Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee, who is already in Paris.

The commission, which was established at the "Victory Conference" of the American Jewish Relief Committee at Detroit on April 9, will study at first hand the further need for palliative relief among the 300,000 orphans and 400,000 refugees, and to what extent the $50,000,000 raised prior to the last campaign has started the Jews of Europe on the road to rehabilitation, reconstruction and self-support.

Reports from the Joint Distribution Committee workers in Europe indicate decided improvement in many sections of Europe, particularly Poland, Lithuania, Latvia and Roumania, but, on the other hand, there is extreme suffering and a great need for palliative relief among 4,000,000 Jews in the Ukraine and Soviet Russia.

Central Jewish Institute Honors Its Treasurer

At a special luncheon meeting of the board of directors of the Central Jewish Institute Talmud Torah, held last Thursday noon at the Broadway Central, Mr. Jacob Wener was signally honored by the board.

JACOB WENER

Mr. Wener has been treasurer of the institute for the past five years. As is well known, this period was a very trying one for the financial stability of philanthropic institutions. "Federation," with which this institution is affiliated, was not able at any time to allow the full budget needed by this progressive community to carry on its numerous and extensive educational and recreational activities. Each year the board has been confronted with the problem of meeting a deficit of from $10,000 to $15,000. It speaks well for the communal spirit of the members of the board, and for their love of Torah, that they preferred to make good this huge annual deficit rather than to curtail the educational work of the institute. Indeed, the contrary is true. The institution has been permitted to grow, to expand and to progress. This devoted, self-sacrificing service by the board of directors, as well as the enlightened and efficient management of the institution, have brought the Central Jewish Institute to the foreground of American Jewish Educational influences.

And to Mr. Jacob Wener, in a very large measure, is due the credit and honor of having directed the finances of the institute so successfully. In this he had the generous and whole-hearted support of the board, of which Mr. Jacob H. Rubin is president.

At the special gathering on Thursday, the board and the Women's Auxiliary of the institute honored Mr. Wener for his efforts and presented him with resolutions of appreciation beautifully engrossed. Warm words of well-earned praise were expressed by all members of the board, among them Messrs. Jacob Rubin, Israel Unterberg and Edward Epstein, also Mrs. Samuel I. Hyman and Mrs. E. Epstein, president of the Women's Auxiliary.

SOKOLOV'S DAUGHTER IS WOMAN PHYSICIAN

Dr. Celina Sokolow Studying American Hospitals and Sanitation

With Nahum Sokolow here in the interests of the restoration of Palestine is his daughter, Dr. Celina Sokolow. She goes in the capacity of her father's private secretary, but while he is speaking in lecture halls throughout the country or conferring with groups of his countrymen she steals away to the hospitals. She talks with the head physicians and nurses and inspects the operating rooms in the wards, storing up knowledge of medicine as it is practiced in America to take back to Palestine with her when she sails for the Near East on July 4.

"Sanitation and knowledge of health and hygiene are the foundation on which the future of Palestine must rest," said Dr. Sokolow, when recently interviewed. "Without them there can be no bright future. American hospitals and American nurses can well be the model for Europe."

Dr. Sokolow was born in Warsaw, Poland. She studied in the University of Zurich, Switzerland, specializing in children's diseases. She practiced for two years in a Paris hospital during the war and there came into contact with many of the French refugee children.

Dr. Sokolow has done a great deal of experimental work on the effect of sunshine and movement on children's temperature. "Mothers are apt to worry unnecessarily," she said, "when their children run up a temperature after they have been playing actively in the open. Many times their fever is but a result of their moving about."

"If mothers would only keep their children in the sunshine all the time they can," she exclaimed, "so much sickness would be avoided."

Dr. Sokolow went to Palestine in March, 1921, with her father, and with him investigated conditions there and the needs of that country. "There are fine hospitals now in Palestine," she said. "The Hadassah Society, an American society of Jewish women, sent a medical unit to Palestine the last year of the war, and it is doing splendid work in the hospital which it established there. Preaching sanitation to the great population and establishing nurses' training schools for native girls, so that Palestine will not have to depend alone on American missionary nurses, are helping the cause. The American nurse is the symbol of all that is humane, beautiful and good to Palestine. "There is a need and a great opportunity for doctors over there. It is fascinating work, like pioneering. Everyone likes to create something new, and there is abundant chance for doctors to create great ideals of health and teach the following of those ideals over there. Interesting research work is open to them there, too."

New American Jewish Colony in Palestine

Jerusalem (Jewish Press Association).—Fifteen Jewish farmers are now employed in the new American Jewish colony now in process of organization. There are also four watchmen, one of them an Arab. The colony is under the supervision of the American agriculturist, Joshua Jaruchi. A water system is in process of installation. The colony occupies about 15,000 dunams of land, and is in the vicinity of Jaffa.

American Jewish Medical Men Best in Palestine

Jerusalem (Jewish Press Association).—The American Jewish doctors, especially those of the Hadassah, are considered the best in the land, and enjoy the confidence of the entire population. In many centers these Americans demand a relatively high fee for their services and, though there are the missionary doctors who give their services gratis, the people prefer to consult these Jewish doctors.

$80,000 MORE FOR RECONSTRUCTION IN LATVIA

How the Jewish population of Latvia, which before the war totaled approximately 157,500, has been reduced by over one-third is revealed in reports from the Joint Distribution Committee's representatives in that country, on the basis of which that body has just been allocated an additional sum of $80,000 further to stimulate the splendid efforts which are being made by the survivors to return to a self-sustaining basis.

The Jews of Latvia were among the first in all Europe upon whom the war visited its horrors. Hardly had the first great German offensive against Russia been launched when by Czaristic ukase they were expelled from the three provinces of Liffand, Courland and Letgallen, which were directly in the path of the devastating legions led by Hindenberg and Mackensen.

Almost en masse, these exiles joined that cortege of Jewish refugees which wended its tragic way across Russia, through bloody Ukraine, to Constanti-nople, even across Siberia as far east as Harbin and Vladivostok. When in the summer of 1917 they were at last permitted to return to the scenes of devastation which they called home, thousands of them, victims of hunger, cold, typhus and all of the horrors which accompanied them in their plight, tens of thousands had perished. According to a recent census, the present Jewish population of what is now Latvia is 100,000, of whom 30,768 are in Riga, 12,776 in Dvinsk, 10,000 in Liban. The significance of these figures is brought out in a report by a J. D. C. worker on housing conditions in Latvia. He writes:

"If the entire Jewish pre-war population of Latvia had returned the housing shortage would be even more acute and the task of reconstruction greater. But many have not returned—many will never return. Dvinsk, for example, contained before the war 40,000 Jews. Today it has less than 15,000." Not all of those who have not returned have perished. Some have made a home for themselves elsewhere and others are prevented from returning because their documentary evidence of previous residence is deemed insufficient by the government.

But even so the task of reconstruction is appalling. In the province of Dvinsk 1,920 private buildings were destroyed and 101 communal buildings, such as synagogues and schools; in the province of Letgallen, 1,124 private buildings and 92 communal buildings. Liffand fared best, with the destruction of only 10 communal buildings. The sum total of destruction in the three provinces is 3,064 private buildings and 203 communal buildings.

Previous expenditures by the Joint Distribution Committee for relief and reconstruction in Latvia have amounted to 16,000,000 Lettish roubles. Of this sum 3,000,000 roubles were paid over to various loan organizations, 2,700,000 roubles went for immediate relief, 1,700,000 roubles for orphan care. Other large sums were spent for medical aid and sanitation. Of the $80,000 just allocated, $60,000 will go to the credit loan organization of Latvia and $20,000 for the trade schools in Dvinsk and Riga.

The Jew at Harvard

If Harvard University does not disclaim the strange theories pronounced recently the institution may lose the good will of the community. The day has passed in Massachusetts, particularly in Boston, when the black flag of racial or religious mania can be floated.

Harvard, if the hints in the news are founded in fact, wants to limit the number of Jews entering the institution. She intends to make way for the so-called select classes, and the Jew, apparently, is not included because he springs from an immigrant father.

Gradually Massachusetts snobbery is becoming brazen and bold. Ku-Klux-ism is becoming open. No one, however, thought that Harvard would become the champion of the narrow, the petty and the small.

If Harvard feels she must restrict the numbers of those who seek to enter her halls, she should bar the worthless idlers, sons of rich fathers, who go to college, not to seek an education, but to waste time. College to them is one respectable method of evading the tramp law.

These worthless birds are the fun providers in Back Bay orgies, in chorus girl scandals, in drunken automobile revels, in hideous debauches at roadhouses.

If someone must give up his seat in the Harvard classroom, why not toss out the rich bum?

Instead, the Jew must go, because he is the son of the immigrant, because the money he offers is made by hard toil, because he is striving to get ahead, and because the Jew does get ahead.

The fact about anti-Semitism is that the young Jew, given an opportunity, rises quickly, while the rich man's son can do nothing but guzzle liquor and loll in a limousine. The Jew has behind him centuries of persecution and horror and hate. He realizes the opportunities in a democracy and he seizes them.

The rich man's son sees the Jew climbing upward, and, unable to defeat him in a fair fight, he attempts to beat him back by foul means. At the request of "The Telegram," Representative Stephen C. Sullivan has submitted an order in the Legislature expressing the regret of the Commonwealth at Harvard's proposed action, and ordering, should Harvard persist in her folly, that the name of the university be stricken from the Constitution.

If Harvard is going to bar Jews, then Harvard should not be recognized in the Constitution of the Commonwealth as a representative Massachusetts institution.

It will be interesting to see what the legislators do with this order. Their action and their attitude will prove who among the lawmakers is a Jew-baiter and who is a real American.—Boston Telegram.

Y. M. H. A. Official Gets Law Degree

Mr. Jack Nadel, assistant executive director of the Young Men's Hebrew Association, was awarded the degree of Bachelor of Laws by New York University on June 2. Mr. Nadel has been connected with the organization for many years, and felt that it would be an aid to his work to obtain a legal training. He will remain in social work.

Judge Ryttenberg Heads Probation Society

The Jewish Probation Society, which supervises the conduct of persons convicted of crime and placed in its custody and obtains relief for destitute families of convicted persons, has elected the following officers:

Magistrate Moses A. Ryttenberg, president; Louis Surut, first vice-president; Mack Kenner, second vice-president; Samuel Moskowitz, third vice-president; General Sessions Judge Otto A. Rosalsky, treasurer, and Louis Fabricant, secretary.

During the last year the society investigated 400 cases.

Bernard A. Rosenblatt Returning to America

A cablegram to the Zionist Organization announced the departure from Europe on the Olympic on June 14 of Bernard A. Rosenblatt, former president of the American Zion Commonwealth, and American member of the World Zionist Executive Committee. Mr. Rosenblatt is returning to America in connection with the $80,000 municipal bond issue for Tel Aviv, the Jewish garden city of Palestine, which it is expected he will place on the market.

The Jews of Algier and Morocco Help Their Brothers in Europe

Paris.—A few days ago the Paris branch of the "Ort" Association, together with the Paris relief committees, undertook collections among the Jews in the French colonies in Algiers and Morocco for the relief movement.

It was the first effort to arouse the Jews of those countries to the common all-Jewish relief task. The result was quite successful 62,000 French francs being collected.

WHAT IS MORE PRECIOUS THAN OUR HEALTH?

Not in the glittering metal known as gold can true happiness be found. Find me a contented man, commanded an ancient despotic ruler, but wise with the wisdom of the world. His emissaries went forth in search of such a man in obedience to the king's command. They sought out the rich and the mighty, whose bodies were bedecked with the finest of silks and hand-woven cloth, who sported the costliest diamonds and the rarest of sapphires.

Were they contented? Lo and behold, each and every one of these rich and mighty men concealed within his breast the worm of discontent. Not one amongst them was either happy or contented, and most of them were ready to give their all, to part with the glittering gold, with the glistening diamonds and the rare sapphires to know just a single day of perfect happiness.

In despair the emissaries of the king went out among the poor and the lowly to search for that which they expected to find among the rich and the mighty of the land. It was a very hot day, with the sun at broiling heat beating down on field and wood. The king's emissaries, exhausted and completely tired out, picked out a spot in a wide field where they lay down with tired bodies and drooping spirit to rest and devise some plan to save their necks on their return from what they thought was a fool's errand. While lying close to the grass they observed a farmhand, without as much as a shirt to cover his back from the scorching rays of the sun. And there he was, plowing away and singing, as happy and contented as though he had not a care in the world.

A thought flitted through the heads of the king's emissaries and, acting on the impulse of the strange thought, they approached the singing farm laborer.

"My good man," said the leader, "Art thou so poor that thou canst not have a shirt on your back?"

"A shirt?" he replied with a genuine outburst of golden laughter. "That will not make me happy nor contented."

"Are you happy and contented?" cried the emissaries in unison.

Instead of an answer, the laborer continued with his song which was interrupted by the strangers. It wasn't long before they made the discovery that the man who stood before them without even a shirt to his back was in reality the most contented man in the world.

This man was happy because he had what millions lacked—good health, which is more precious than the costliest stones.

Good health means happiness and happiness means longevity. Ponce De Leon in his search for the elixir of life might have attained his object had he journeyed to the spot now known as Mount Clemens, and famed throughout the world as a health restoring and health giving resort. Thousands of persons from near and far come to Mount Clemens on account of its beneficent climate, its invigorating air and healing springs, which are known to cure such diseases as rheumatism, nervousness, headaches, stomach and kidney troubles, constipation and numerous other ills to which the human flesh is heir to.

The cures effected by "mother" nature at Mount Clemens are truly miraculous. There is no better resort for afflicted and disease suffering human beings than Mount Clemens, Mich., which is only 20 miles distant from Detroit, and within easy reach either by railway or trolley lines.

As for those in health, there is no better place to spend a pleasant vacation than at Mount Clemens. There are many fine hotels in the town, and among these the Riverside Hotel, of which Mr. Leon Krim is the proprietor, ranks probably as the finest. This in a measure is due to Mr. Krim and his personality. The genial and affable proprietor of the Riverside Hotel has gained an enviable reputation for his hospitality, which is known and appreciated by thousands of the better class of Jewish people who patronize the hotel. The Riverside is conducted as a strictly Kosher hotel. Its cuisine is of the kind that makes lasting friends. The rooms are spacious and well lighted with electricity and running water.

There is an additional advantage not found in other hotels or boarding houses. The Riverside Hotel has its own sulphur baths, so that it does not inconvenience the guests at the hotel as is the case when they have to take their baths outside of the hotel.

The affable proprietor, Mr. Krim, personally looks out for the comfort of each of his guests, and that is one reason why the Riverside Hotel, with its homelike surroundings, genuine hospitality and distinctive atmosphere, together with its other advantageous qualities, is known as the most popular Jewish hostelry in Mount Clemens.

For health or for pleasure—go to Mount Clemens, and when in Mount Clemens—go to the Riverside Hotel.

Patients of National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives at Denver, Colo., Express Appreciation

Only too often do we hear complaints from social workers about the dissatisfaction and ingratitude on the part of those whom we are trying to help, and it is rather the exception when acts of gratitude and appreciation are being recorded.

Recently at the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, two of the patients, Mr. Morris Berry and Mr. Abe Faust, voluntarily contributed $50 each, to be used for the purchase of something that would be of benefit to the patients of the institution. For this money a new edition of the International Encyclopedia was purchased and placed in the patients' library for their use. The relatives of another patient, Miss Edith Kantrovitz, contributed $150, and of Miss Jennie Horwitz $25. Several of the ex-patients are now annual contributors.

These are only a few of the larger contributions made by the patients, while it would fill columns to enumerate all the smaller ones. Considering the poor circumstances of the patients, it is indeed gratifying and inspiring to see them make contributions to the institution.

Columbia Religious and Industrial School for Jewish Girls

The graduation exercises of the Columbia School, of 133 Eldridge street, were held Sunday afternoon, June 11, at the Girls' Hebrew Technical Building. Among the interesting numbers of the program were several Biblical tableaux, accompanied by Hebrew songs, given under the direction of Miss Fannie Goldstein.

Rabbi Max Arzst delivered the address. There were twenty-five graduates. The alumae medal was presented to Lillian Krause; the valedictorian, by Miss Hadassah Levine. Mrs. Frances Wolf, Mrs. Hendricks, and Mrs. William Wolf assisted in awarding prizes and Bibles which each graduate received with her diploma.

MOUNT CLEMENS MOUNT CLEMENS
WHERE DO YOU PLAN TO GO FOR YOUR VACATION?

HEARKEN TO THE VOICE OF NATURE. SHE BECKONS YOU TO COME AND REST IN HER LAP; TO BATHE IN HER HEALING WATERS WITH WHICH MOUNT CLEMENS IS MOST BOUNTIFULLY SUPPLIED, AND GATHER THEREFROM THE VERY PRECIOUS THINGS—HEALTH AND LONGEVITY.

Mount Clemens is the wonder-spot of America. From the depth of its soil come gushing and spurting the miraculous waters that cure Rheumatism, Nervousness, Diabetes, Headaches, Women's Ills, Bladder and Kidney troubles, Constipation, etc.

The Baths of Mount Clemens are universally recognized as the most wonderful in the world. Not a day passes but some miracle occurs. Cripples on crutches, sick persons on stretchers and in ambulances who are brought here, quickly regain their health and leave happily in possession of the knowledge that they have been cured. They are the happy messengers who carry the gladsome tidings to the world that nature has generously and profusely blessed the soil of Mount Clemens with the healing power to lessen pain, reduce suffering and cure the ills of humankind.

Outwardly as inwardly, on its surface as well as beneath its surface, Mount Clemens is truly wonderful and enchanting. A distance of only 20 miles from Detroit, Mount Clemens is strewn with glittering flowers and shadowed by mighty trees. The sweet fragrance of sublime nature, together with the exhilarating and stimulating vapors of the salt and sulphur streams, make Mount Clemens the most charming of Summer Resorts, not alone for those who are sick and therefore in need of health, but also for the perfectly healthy person who values his health. Mount Clemens is rich in mineral waters that are beneficial and truly miraculous.

The owners of the Hotels, Bathing and Boarding Houses, the Municipal authorities and the thousands of Jews sojourning here, are ready to welcome you and extend to you a royal reception in an effort to make yours a truly enjoyable vacation. If you are ailing, take your vacation at Mount Clemens, in order to regain your health. If healthy, go to Mount Clemens and thus insure the maintenance of your health and the prolongation of your life.

Mount Clemens will accord you all the pleasures and benefits that one seeks while enjoying a vacation. For further information and details address any of the following Jewish Hotels, Bathing and Boarding Houses of Mount Clemens:

French Attack on British Policy

Paris (Jewish Press Association).—The Journal des Debats has launched a savage attack upon the British Government's Mesopotamian program. It charged the London Foreign Office, with planning to give up the League of Nations mandate in Mesopotamia and, by bargaining with Feisal, the English made King of Irak, to gain a hold between the Tigris and Euphrates which could not be obtained under the mandate system. The newspaper smells a British attempt to corner Mesopotamian oil.

"England," it says, "will renounce the mandate held under the Treaty of Versailles and the Treaty of Sevres over the territory between the Tigris and Euphrates and will sign a separate treaty with the Arab government of Irak, that is to say, with Feisal, whom Great Britain crowned King. By this accord, concluded on a basis of equality between two sovereign states, Irak will be admitted to the League of Nations for the purpose and England will quickly recover all the advantages the surrender of the mandate would cost her."

Under the new British army regulations, the Rev. Michael Adler, D. S. O., has been placed on the reserve list of chaplains, with general supervision of duties relating to the regular forces, and the Rev. David Hirsch has been gazetted chaplain to the territorial army. Mr. Hirsch is well known in connection with the Hutchison House Club and the Jewish Lads' Brigade, and served for two years in France as a chaplain.

BROOKLYN NOTES

Federation to Have District Organizations

A meeting was held at the home of Mr. Israel Lack, 354 Wyona street, Brooklyn, on the evening of June 8, for the purpose of organizing a permanent district organization in East New York. Mr. Lack, who presided at the meeting, spoke on the place the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities should occupy in the minds of the Brooklyn Jewry in relation to their charitable endeavors. He thinks, and rightly so, that the federation should assume a larger breadth and greater magnitude for the best protection of the Brooklyn poor. Following Mr. Lack's address, Mr. Aaron William Levy, the president of the federation, spoke of the greater economy and efficiency achieved in charitable organizations through federation as compared with the results obtained prior to their alliance. He then outlined in his usually interesting manner the work of the affiliated institutions and, working on the "I come from Missouri" theory, suggested that special days be set aside for the visiting of the various institutions by the committees, in order to better acquaint themselves with the work actually done by each individual institution.

Mr. Max Abelman, executive director of the federation, presented an organization plan good enough to have had the immediate approval of all present. The New Lots section of Brooklyn is to have a district federation organization, and a meeting to begin activities toward that end will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Paulson, 639 Georgia avenue, Brooklyn, in the very near future. Meetings for the district organizing of Arlington and Brownsville will be held shortly. Mr. J. H. Cohen will represent the Arlington division. Soon after these are organized into a zone bureau each section will have a credited representative. Dr. Oswald Schlockow, the chairman of the sub-committee of the plan and scope committee of the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities, held an interested audience when he addressed the meeting on the humane aspects of federation work and broadcasted the name of Mr. Aaron William Levy as an example of an untiring worker for the alleviation of suffering humanity. A sociable social hour followed and the meeting adjourned. Among those present were Mr. Horowitz, Mr. and Mrs. K. Lewish, Mr. Harry Lebau, Mr. and Mrs. P. Paulson, Mr. Julius Josephson, Mr. J. H. Cohen, Mr. Meyer Aronson, Mr. Burstein, Rabbi Warshofsky, Mr. H. Godoff, Mr. and Mrs. Elia R. Crespi, Rabbi Gallanter and Mr. Bernard Austin.

Arab Sultain May Spoil British Plans

Cairo (Jewish Press Association).—The Syrian Executive Committee in Cairo has shown the J. P. A. correspondent a document said to be a copy of the treaty signed in the latter part of May by the French Government and Ibn Saud, Sultan of Najd. The treaty binds the French to supply money, arms and ammunition to Saud, who in return will oppose the projected formation of an Arab confederation under British influence and also lend military assistance to France in Syria if an attack is launched from Mesopotamia or Transjordan.

It is not possible to confirm the authenticity of the document, but an American traveler who has just arrived here from Syria says he heard before his departure that a treaty was being prepared.

Messages from Jerusalem say that the Wahabi tribes, under the sovereignty of Pon Saud, recently attacked the Shaalan tribes near Transjordan because the Shaalans had just concluded an agreement with the British representative in Transjordan to join Transjordan. Dispatches report that the Wahabis were signally defeated, 400 of their force of 1,000 having been killed.

The importance of this news lies in the fact that it is apparently strong confirmation of the evidence of a treaty between the French and Ibn Saud.

Six Graduates at Hebrew Union College

Cincinnati.—The graduation exercises of the Hebrew Union College took place last Saturday afternoon. Upon Ferdinand Myron Isserman of Newark, N. J.; Julius Mark of Cincinnati, Samuel H. The degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred on Prof. Solomon B. Frechot. Honorary degree of Doctor of Hebrew Law was conferred on Prof. Moses Buttenwieser, Ph. D., and Prof. Louis Grossman, D. D.

The Greatest Problem for Every Mother

When her own milk fails, is just what food to give her baby in order that he will keep well and grow strong and robust. Borden's Eagle Brand Milk has solved this problem for thousands and thousands of mothers during the past sixty years. More babies have been reared upon Eagle Brand than upon all other prepared foods combined.

Eagle Brand, on account of the high quality and uniformity, is ideal for any purpose where you usually use milk and sugar. Try it for sauces and cookies.

If your baby is not gaining in weight, cries or is fretty and irritable, something must be the matter with it.

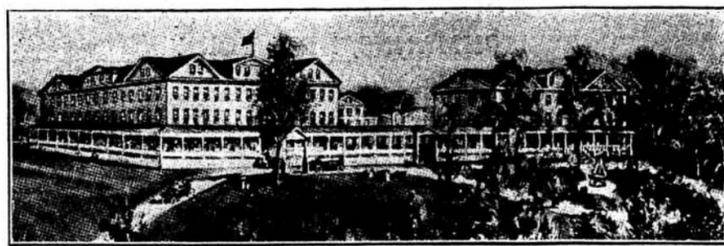

In this paper from time to time you will find an advertisement of Borden's Eagle Brand Milk, a food that has raised more healthy babies than all the prepared infant foods combined. Cut out the advertisement and mail it to The Borden Company, New York, and they will send you, free of charge, what you want, either instructions in your own language for feeding your baby, or a baby book, or a recipe book telling you how to make tasty dishes with Eagle Brand. Ask for by name what you would like to have.

The Development of Palestine Art

Reports from Palestine show that in the near future a great development in the fine art industry may be expected. This is in no small measure due to the initiative of Professor Boris Shatz, the founder of the Bezalel School, which for the last fifteen years has been training young Palestinians in arts and crafts. Following his suggestion, schools for work in laces were also established by various persons in Palestine for girls and women.

Several hundred young men and women who have attended these classes have banded themselves together into small co-operative groups, each specializing in a different kind of work. There are special groups for batik work, various hand made laces, antique jewelry in silver and gold and for pastels and oil paintings. Last year Mr. Lewin Epstein conceived the idea of organizing a company in England and in America with suitable capital to act as direct selling agencies of the groups in Palestine, and by this means it was hoped to furnish considerable employment in Palestine, besides facilitating the development of art. There are now in Palestine about 600 to 800 families who are supported by this industry.

Tobacco Cultivation in Palestine

The Jewish Colonial Association, in addition to granting financial assistance to its farmers for tobacco cultivation, has provided them with free seeds from Salonika and with the services of an expert in tobacco planting, according to a report from Palestine. There will be about 300 dunams in all planted with tobacco in its settlement.

The Jewish Colonial Association has already experimented in tobacco planting with these seeds in the years 1896-99 in Roseh-Pinah and Metullah, and later in the Lebanon, and are of the opinion that the prospects in some districts of Palestine are good.

The Commercial Bulletin of the Palestine Government reports that Rishonle-Zion has set aside 58 dunams for the purposes of tobacco cultivation; Nachlat Yehudo, 25 dunams; Beer Yacob, 10 dunams; Hartov, 2 dunams; Gederz, 48 dunams.

A new tobacco factory, Kitora, owned by Messrs. J. Ben-Israel & Co., was established on January 1, 1922, at Safed. The factory is now operating with fifteen employees.

Zionist Executive Expended $1,000,000 in Six Months

The Palestine Zionist Executive has issued a statement of expenditure for the period from October 1 to March 31, 1922. According to this statement, £201,337 was spent on the various items of the regular Palestine budget. Out of this sum about £36,000 was devoted to immigration, about £35,000 to education and £34,000 to agricultural colonization. Labor loans and supplies and expenses on experimental stations and on the Haifa College account together for over £34,000. Salaries and administrative expenses for the period under review amounted to £10,775, i. e., 5 per cent. of the total expenditure. Hadassah Medical Unit has spent about £47,000, of which over £35,000 was received on the special account of the Hadassah in America, which constitutes a specially reserved part of the Keren Hayesod collections in America.

A Conference of Polish Rabbis on the High Prices

Warsaw (J. P. A.)—The local rabbis have sent out an invitation to all the Polish rabbis to attend a special conference on the high prices and as to the best means of fighting them.

The rabbis will propose a whole series of means of fighting this evil.

This enterprise on the part of the rabbis is of great political importance, because the Polish government has appointed a commission for the same purpose and it was feared in Jewish circles that this body's work will be usual end in a struggle against the Jewish business men, and it is sought to confine it to proper limits.

Almost a Pogrom on Account of a Zionist Speaker

Lublin (J. P. A.)—Dr. Leon Reich, leader of the Calician Zionists, came here to address a meeting to which the local anti-Semites objected. Their paper, "Zemia Lubelska," said that, at the Peace Conference Dr. Reich had opposed the Poles and favored Trotsky and Bolshevism. The agitation bore fruit so that many young Poles, especially students, gathered at the meeting place and threatened a Pogrom if Dr. Reich will be allowed to speak. The meeting did not take place and Dr. Reich spoke a few days later at the synagogue. It is interesting to note that the police didn't interfere at all in the matter, and allowed the disturbance to go on.

Zionist Organization to Gather Immediate Funds for Rutenberg Plan

The Zionist Organization of America, by virtue of authority vested in the administrative committee by unanimous action of the national executive committee, will forthwith begin systematic and concerted action to secure funds on an investment basis for the financing of the Rutenberg project for the electrification of Palestine.

This decision was taken at a special meeting of the national executive committee of the Zionist Organization of America, held on Saturday night and Sunday morning, June 3 and 4, at the Hotel Astor, New York, following a report by the administrative committee of negotiations conducted by it with Mr. Rutenberg leading to the appointment of the Zionist Organization as the agency for the collection of investment funds in the United States for the Rutenberg project.

Following the decision of the executive committee, the administrative committee issued an official order to the chairman of the Zionist districts urging the immediate appointment of committees who, under the direction of the Zionist Organization, will begin work at once to secure the necessary funds for the promotion of the Rutenberg plan.

The Natural History Museum in Jerusalem

The popularity of the Natural History Museum of the Palestine Zionist Executive is increasing rapidly. Since its inception, about two years ago, until the end of 1921, the number of visitors totaled 4,700.

During the first three months of 1922 there were 1,300 visitors, including 100 tourists from all parts of the world, and 900 pupils with their teachers from the schools of the towns and colonies of Palestine.

In April, in one week—the Passover week—there were over 3,000.

Leader of Jewish Anti-Semites Expelled from Jewish Meeting

Berlin (J. P. A.)—At the meeting of the Jewish ex-soldiers, Dr. Neumann, leader of the "National German Jews," or, to give it its more proper title, "Jewish Anti-Semites," was unceremoniously expelled. Dr. Paul Nathan, well-known Jewish leader, declared that a man of that type, who is a base informer, ought not to be allowed at a Jewish meeting. The meeting of the Jewish veterans had been called for the purpose of protesting against the anti-Semitic accusations made against the German-Jewish soldiers.

Polish Soldier Murders Jew While at Prayers in Synagogue

Warsaw (Jewish Press Association).—A Polish soldier entered the synagogue at Horodie while the people were at prayer and without any cause murdered a Jew, Hirsch Korn by name, wounded two others and made his escape. The police succeeded in finding the murderer and placing him under arrest.

Celebrated Jewish Artist Very Ill

Berlin (Jewish Press Association).—The celebrated Jewish painter Professor Max Liebermann is dangerously ill, and the worst is feared by his physicians. Mr. Liebermann is seventy-two years of age. His seventieth birthday anniversary was celebrated by both the official as well as artistic Germany, and was deeply noted in many foreign lands.

Wilna Jews to Collect 20,000,000 Marks for Jewish Sufferers in Russia

Wilna (Jewish Press Association).—A committee composed of Jews of all parties was formed here for the collection of 20,000,000 marks for the Jewish famine sufferers of Russia. The campaign is to last six weeks and work will be carried on in Wilna and the neighboring regions.

Gas Bomb Cache on Premises of Austrian Anti-Semites

Vienna (Jewish Press Association).—The local police have uncovered a secret arsenal, the property of the Austrian Monarchist and anti-Semitic parties. In the arsenal were found 1,500 gas bombs, guns, revolvers, bullets, etc. The police are conducting an energetic investigation of the matter.

Jewish Trade in Wilna

Wilna (Jewish Press Association).—During the past year the Wilna region and local governments have collected about 750,000,000 marks as business taxes. Of this sum, Jewish merchants have paid about 600,000,000 marks.

Two Enterprises in Palestine
 The Palestine Development Council announces that both the Credit Union Bank and the Jerusalem Building Loan Association have opened offices in Jerusalem and have started business.
 In a letter from Jerusalem, dated May 18, the treasurer of the Palestine Development Council, Mr. Sol Rosenbloom, of Pittsburgh, informed his associates that the manager of the Credit Union Bank, Mr. Easterman, who comes from Scotland, had arrived to take up his duties and decided to open an office before the end of May.
 In the same letter Mr. Rosenbloom reported that he had appointed Mr. Samuel Mohl formerly of New York, manager of the Building Loan Association for Jerusalem, and both enterprises would probably be housed in the same office in Jerusalem.
 On Friday Mr. Rosenbloom cabled New York for a heavy remittance with which to begin the business of the Building Loan Association. This request, which was immediately met, points to the existence of a larger demand for building loans in Jerusalem than was originally anticipated. As the building loans will be based on the possession of a 40 per cent. equity by each borrower, Mr. Rosenbloom's message indicates that quite a large number of persons are in possession of some means for home building purposes.
 During the next few months, among others, Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Mr. S. S. Bloom of Philadelphia, and Mr. Joseph Poolstein of New York will be in Jerusalem, studying problems in which the Palestine Development Council are particularly interested.

Daily Pogroms at Sedlice
 Warsaw (Jewish Press Association). —At Sedlice outbreaks against Jews take place almost daily. They especially assault the Jewish workers on leaving their shops. There are a great many seriously wounded Jews. The locksmith, Samuel Jablonka, is in a dying condition as a result of the blows received from soldiers. The local police are making attempts to stop the rioting, but are too weak to do so.

A Tombstone for Bread
 Warsaw (Jewish Press Association). —The widow of a rich Jew, just returned from Russia, has addressed a plea to the local community asking permission to sell the expensive monument over her husband's grave and to replace it with a cheap one, and to turn the proceeds into means of support for herself and children.
 The Kehillah has rejected the plea, but gave the widow as a gift the value of the monument.

Midrashic narrative tells of David's father, Jesse, his mother and all his brothers, that they were killed by the henchmen of the King of Moab (Numbers Magnae xiv, 1). The serpent, then, is not responsible for the killing, and the entire Talmudic structure may fall flat? The rabbis are certainly wise in all generations and their wisdom is essential, indeed. The Zohar on Genesis eliminates Jesse, introducing Joshua instead, and the rabbinic quarter may be accepted in all quarters.

Jealousy Prompts Anti-Semitism
 The proposal to discriminate against Jews at Harvard will probably be dropped. It was suggested here that the matter could be attended to, inasmuch as any public institution discriminating against any class of citizens might, and should be, deprived of tax exemption.
 Attacks on Jews are largely based on jealousy that touches the pocketbook. That kind of jealousy can be counteracted by another "touch" on another pocketbook—that of the taxpayer.

Noted Journalist Marries American Nurse in Palestine
 Jerusalem (Jewish Press Association). —The Jewish journalist, Zalman Kotler of New York, who came here about a year ago, has married Miss Rachel Malin, also of New York, at present a nurse for the "Hadassah."
 Many "Hadassah" officials, as well as the local Jewish journalists, were present at the meeting.

The Big Four
 Four men departed from this world because of the insinuations of the serpent, namely, Benjamin, the son of Jacob; Amran, the father of Moses; Jesse, the father of David, and Kilab, the son of David. There are no authentic data to substantiate this statement for any of the mentioned worthies but one, Jesse, the father of David, of whom the subsequent passages relate unequivocally that his demise resulted from no other cause but the excessive verbosity and the treacherous outbursts of the serpent in the beginning of creation. Thus the Scriptures say: "And Amasai was the son of a man whose name was Ythra, the Israelite, who had come to Abigail, the daughter of Nahash (2 Samuel xvii, 25). Why, Abigail was not the daughter of Nahash; she was the daughter of Jesse, as it is said: "And their sisters (the sisters of David and his brothers) were Zeruyah and Abigail" (1 Chronicles ii, 16). But then Nahash appears to be a cover for Jesse being given this cognomen in addition to his own as a manifestation of the potential agency that was responsible for his death, Nahash in Hebrew signifying serpent (Sabbath f. 55, b). The fall of man, that caused death, because of the transgressions of the triumvirate, Adam, Eve and the serpent, the rabbis maintain, caused but the death of the chosen few; the rest of humanity is punished by the means of death as a retribution for sins and iniquities.
 One, however, may doubt the Talmudic postulations and the lucubrate speculations, since three of the given personalities lack corroborative authority, while Jesse's demise can never be attributed to the serpent's platitude. A anti-Semitism has always been the hand-maiden of reaction, stimulated by despotic government. It is always the extreme right which is anti-Semitic. One of the men said he had seen in Chicago a check drawn by Ford to Boris Brasol.

The latter had been a secret service agent under the Czarist regime and was connected with the Beilis affair. This man Brasol is working openly to bring the Romanoffs back to Russia. It was this man who furnished Ford with material and made him his tool. He gave him the so-called Protocols, which are supposed to prove that the Jews want to erect a Jewish oligarchy in the world.
Ford had influential Jews hunted up by his detectives. He even went so far as to say that Wilson, Taft and Harding were tools of Brandeis, and that there was a secret telephone wire between Brandeis and Wilson. The information concerning the check drawn by Ford to Brasol was the starting point of my present expose."

NORMAN HAPGOOD

"HENRY FORD NEGATIVE SIDE OF JEWISH QUESTION—PAL-ESTINE HOMELAND THE POSITIVE SIDE"

By NORMAN HAPGOOD

"In the fight of the Jewish people for a broader life, Ford is of importance only as a symptom and owing to the size of the weapon which he can wield. He represents the negative side of the Jewish question, and neither he nor my crusade against him compare with the constructive side of it, which is represented by the movement to restore the Jewish Homeland in Palestine. Zionism presents the consummation of the gospel of democracy. It is the best, noblest and most uplifting conception of liberalism and freedom."

In these words Norman Hapgood summarized his views on the anti-Jewish activities of Henry Ford and the movement for restoring the Jewish Homeland in Palestine.

Mr. Hapgood declared that his interest in the success of the restoration of the Jewish Homeland was even greater than his desire to drive out of American life such reactionary and baseless propaganda as Henry Ford has been duped into conducting. In answer to a question, Mr. Hapgood recounted the beginning of his interest in exposing the Ford propaganda.

"Not long ago," he said, "at a luncheon at the University Club, the question of liberalism in its original sense came up in the course of the conversation. Among those present was the head of the Russian government in Omsk after the revolution and the head of the foreign affairs of Russia under three administrations.
We talked about public opinion in general, then we talked about Ford, and speculated on why he carries on his crazy campaign. We were all aware that

Polish Editor Sends Jews to Pales-

Warsaw (J. P. A.)—At the gathering of the All-Polish Tenants' Union a Jewish delegate made the request that the organization's organ should be published in Yiddish, also as there are many members who do not understand the Polish language. The editor of the newspaper, however, felt deeply insulted by the suggestion and made a strong speech, in which he suggested that the Jews' proper place is in Palestine, at which the Jewish delegates left the hall.

This action on the part of the Jewish delegates had the desired effect. The officials of the conference offered an apology and the Jews, on their part, withdrew their request.

When the Jewish delegates returned to the meeting, the editor, on his part, left the hall.

Mandate Postponed—Lord Balfour's Speech to League Council—Sir Herbert Samuel in House of Commons—Arabs Address Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Churchill—"Spinoza" Lecture—Jewish Antiquities.

London, May 26, 1922.

We have to thank Mr. Balfour with regard to the Palestine Mandate, that we may now not have to wait until the month of September before something definite is settled. Happily, thanks to this gentleman's splendid efforts, it has been arranged that a special meeting shall be held in July for the purpose of considering the Mandate. It is not likely that by the time this matter is finally brought forward the present opposition will have died down, and it is very unlikely that the present draft terms will be accepted without modification. The opposition to the Mandate is, of course, very widely placed. One might mention the Arabs who wish Palestine to remain Arab and, for that matter, not only do not wish the present Zionist policy to be maintained, but also object to the British yoke. But the most important obstacle appears to be placed by the Vatican, which raises many a quibble which really should be quite easily brushed aside. They call for the security of the holy places, as if they would not be as secure from degradation under the Mandate as they were under the Turk. Indeed, this question of the holy places has been pressed so hard recently that Lord Balfour in his address to the Council of the League last week, did not hesitate to show the absurdity of the alleged fear. He said:

"Doubtless a wave of anxiety has invaded a certain section of public opinion which fears a repercussion in the religious domain. This surprises me infinitely. How can one believe that religious interests can be endangered by the transference of authority from a Moslem power to a Christian power, especially when this Christian power is Britain? No power has shown itself more fair in regard to different religious beliefs; no power has done more to insure justice and avoid wounding different opinions. Britain has had great experience in these questions. The world will admit that it has proved its generosity to most diverse religious opinions. Britain is a Protestant country, and in no Catholic or Protestant country are Protestants and Catholics more free. In these circumstances any fear that the transference of the guardianship of the holy places from a Moslem to a Christian power is devoid of foundation. . . . The public is often mistaken concerning the limit and substance of the exact powers of the League and the Council in regard to the question of a mandate," he said. "Mandates are not the creation of the League and cannot be modified by the Council. The role of the League is exclusively to see that the clauses agree with the decisions of the Allies and that their application is made conformable to their intentions. A mandate is essentially a restriction which the conquerors impose on themselves in the general interest of humanity. The League's only role is to aid the Allies to apply the measures they have adopted. It results clearly that those who fear or hope that the terms of the Balfour Declaration will be modified are mistaken."

On Tuesday last Sir Herbert Samuel addressed a meeting of about 150 Members of Parliament, representative of all parties, at the House of Commons, on "The Position in Palestine." The proceedings were private and were presided over by Lord Robert Cecil. Sir Herbert, in the course of his address, is said to have stated that, on the whole, the situation in Palestine was satisfactory. Immigration was proceeding satisfactorily. He denied that the new Jewish population, who were "making good" and of whom he spoke extremely highly, were Bolsheviks. Palestine was going to be a National Home for the Jews, but not the kind of National Home that the full-blooded Zionists had in their minds. As time went on, the Jews were bound to increase their numbers, and must ultimately be in the majority. Mr. Asquith moved a cordial vote of thanks to Sir Herbert Samuel.

The Palestine Arab delegation now in London, according to a Reuter message, has sent a letter to Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Winston Churchill to the effect that they learn with great surprise that the Council of the League is considering the Mandate with a view to ratification. They continue to state that they object to the Mandate question being continued while they are still negotiating with the British Government on the future of Palestine. They say the Arab population can never accept the Mandate in its present form. They also state that the ratification of the Mandate will not pacify Palestine, and appeal to the gentlemen in question to stop consideration of the Mandate until such time as they have been able to thresh the matter out with them.

A course of lectures was recently arranged by the Jewish Historical Society on "Jewish Philosophers," to be delivered by Professor Alexander of Manchester University. In the third of his course of five lectures he spoke on Spinoza. Dr.

M. Epstein presided. In the course of this lecture Prof. Alexander said that the specific position which Spinoza occupied in European philosophy was that of a successor to Descartes, but he retained, European as he was, a marked Jewish psychology. He displayed a combination of two things—a thorough-going rationalism and an equally thorough-going spiritualism. Spinoza was best remembered for his pantheism, for his extreme absorption in the idea of God and for being an atheist. Nobody would call him an atheist today. On the contrary, he was more often known by the phrase "the God-intoxicated man," but an equally marked characteristic of his teaching was the scientific spirit with which he approached every subject that he touched, and which had earned him the name of a materialist. He gave particulars of the life of Spinoza and proved that, while he may have been a stoic, he was not an ascetic.

At a meeting held in Manchester University on May 17, Dr. N. Slouzsch, keeper of Jewish antiquities in Palestine, delivered an address on his recent excavations in the north of Tiberias. This place was for over 1,000 years the intellectual center of the country and it flourished until its destruction by the Moslems. Various marble objects have been found by excavators engaged on public works, including a Menorah (seven-branched candlestick) and a Shofar. The lecturer hence believed that the ruins of an old synagogue had been discovered. The further discovery of a wall and the lower parts of a building and a marble terrace of Judaeo-Corinthian style confirmed this supposition. Later excavations showed sarcophagi and a Byzantine column. A small chamber contained Byzantine mosaics and also a stone chest which seemed likely to have been the Ark. Under this chamber were found various stone Menoroth and a lintel which bore a design showing that the vase was probably used for holding the holy oil. The cemetery found to the north gave many inscriptions in Greek and Hebrew, and these date it between the eleventh and twelfth centuries. The doctor hopes in future to find Hebrew MSS. A diagram explaining the excavations was shown and various views and photographs were shown by the lantern.

U. S. Government Donates Plot to Leo N. Levi Hospital

The eleventh annual report of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital, Hot Springs, Ark., has just been published, and gives a detailed account of the activities of that institution for the year ending March 31, 1922. The report shows that the hospital treated 752 patients, who remained in the institution 13,374 days, or on an average of 18 days each, at a cost of $43.20 per patient, or $2.40 per day per patient. In addition, the clinic of the Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital took care of 4,500 persons during the same year. These patients came from every section of the country. Of the 752 patients treated in the hospital proper, 201 were cured, 284 improved, 15 died. The receipts for the year were $42,092.80 and the expenditures $41,144.79.

The Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital is largely a B'nai B'rith institution and is maintained partly by the Independent Order of the B'nai B'rith and partly by subscriptions from charity organizations and generous individuals.

The officers of the hospital are: Emil Nathan, St. Louis, Mo., president; Dan Daniel, Little Rock, Ark., vice-president; Rabbi A. B. Rhine, Hot Springs, Ark., secretary; Gus Strauss, Hot Springs, Ark., treasurer.

The Leo N. Levi Memorial Hospital is a free institution strictly and admits no pay patients. It is open to all who are unable to pay, whether members of the B'nai B'rith or not, and who are in need of the special treatment afforded by the institution in connection with the hot springs bath with which the hospital is provided. Patients are admitted only upon applications indorsed by their charity organization or local B'nai B'rith lodge, and must be provided with return transportation. Application blanks may be obtained from the secretary.

The United States Government has just donated a plot of ground 150x150 which adjoins the hospital site. The interstate conference of the Southern sections of the Council of Jewish Women has undertaken to raise in the near future the sum of $25,000 for the erection of a nurses' home, which the hospital needs urgently, and there is no doubt that the council's enterprise will be crowned with success.

In addition to having recently devoted the sum of 300,000 francs to the aid of the starving Jews of Soviet Russia and the Ukraine, the Alliance Israelite has just placed 200,000 francs at the disposal of the charitable organizations of Warsaw. This gift is destined for the relief of the Russian refugees (to the number of 5,000) who are actually in Poland waiting to embark for America, of Jews who have been repatriated from Russia and of orphans.

UNUSUAL RITUAL OF CLOSING AND REOPENING A REPERTORIAL SEASON

Odd Symbolic Ceremony Is Added to the Host of Theatrical Superstition

This is a new kind of superstition, involving a ritual by a whole company of actors, scene painters, carpenters and electricians, not to mention house ushers, which must be credited to the repertory theatre.

The particular ceremonial has only taken place three times, and will be repeated for the fourth time in the presence of visitors on June 28, when the Jewish Art Theatre "ends and begins" the fourth-fifth season.

The curious goings-on are somewhat as follows: When the last performance of the season has taken place, superstition or racial tradition fears the dropping of the curtain. There can be no "end" to a theatrical season in a repertory house. Consequently the hoodoo must be removed by immediately commencing the next season, even though the house is about to close for the summer.

Actually the curtain is never fully lowered. At the last performance of the current year the fly man is instructed to bring the curtain down, at the end of the performance, but only within six inches from the floor. As soon as the audience has gone, the curtain is again raised. All the members of the company and the augmented cast who have been engaged for the next season are assembled on the stage. The entire scenic and technical staff of the theatre are also on hand, and ushers are in their places in the empty auditorium.

The director, Mr. Schwartz, then brings on the manuscript of the play with which the next season of the theatre, in the early fall, will be opened. Parts for the actors are distributed, and each member of the cast is ready for the first reading rehearsal.

According to the usage, which three years of dignified observance has made a tradition, the star director reads the first few lines of the script. Each one of the actors then takes up the reading of his part in the next season's play until the last character has already "appeared" on the scene and spoken at least one-half dozen lines. There the inauguration of the new season only began. The scenic artist, who has previously prepared the models, stands ready with paint brush and puts the first few strokes of color on the first piece of canvas which will go to make up the scenic production. The carpenter drives a nail into some lumber from which the scenery is to be built, and the property man brings on some distinctive bit of the new production.

"During these goings-on the participants observe and take part with the utmost seriousness. The director then declares that the first rehearsal is over and that the new season has begun. The session is adjourned for the summer, and the players come again early in the fall to continue the rehearsal begun in this curious way after midnight of the old season.

Mr. Maurice Schwartz, the director of the Jewish Art Theatre, was not willing to comment on this bit of symbolic superstition. The reporter ventured a guess that this was bringing into the theatre the idea of the "Slym Haschalah" of the old Jewish sages, who always celebrated the completion of one course of study by reading the first chapter of the next book.

Mr. Schwartz laughed and said: "I do not know to what extent this has unconsciously influenced us. Three years ago, when I ended my first season with the Jewish Art Theatre, I was loath to feel that our work was over for a time. Our whole outlook in the repertory theatre is such that the continuity of the theatre is of greater importance than the continuous run of any one play. We do not stake everything on the long run of a hit. No matter how successful any one play is, it is only part of our whole repertoire. Plays of one season go over into another and are continually kept on the boards, just as operas of the Metropolitan are given so many performances each year.

"It was this which made us all feel that there was never an end to our work, even if we disband for a short summer period. We always think of the beginning of our next season as being a few moments after the close of the current one."

This year's end of the fourth and be-

A Week of Internal Struggles—The Caucas Politics of the I. C. B. A.—Lefts Need Money, and Protest—The Noise About Mexico—The Irresponsible "Activities" of the Congress Committee.

By M. F. SEIDMAN
 (Copyright, 1922, by National Jewish Press Association, Inc.)

A scandal in the great Jewish fraternal order, the Independent Order Brith Abraham, has been amicably "settled" during the course of the present week.

We say settled in quotation marks, because we are not by any means certain whether it is really settled or is just beginning. At any rate, it has just come to the surface.

The case is as follows: The Grand Master of the order, Judge Aaron J.
 Levy, was not pleased with the Grand Secretary of the order, Mr. Max Hollander, and rumors were spread that Hollander had been using his responsible position in the order for personal advantages.

These rumors spread until the matter reached a court of honor appointed by the order, and then it was proven that the rumors were baseless, and that this old and faithful servant of the order was absolutely above reproach. On the side of Hollander there were two leaders of the order, both of them ex-Grand Masters, former Judge Leon Sanders and Judge Gustave Hartman. They helped Hollander to uncover the source of the intrigue against him, and during the course of the trial even Levy declared himself convinced that the accusation was baseless, and the trial was abruptly ended.

But this did not end the scandal. Hollander's friends are intelligent people and are well aware of the underlying causes of this trouble. There will surely be an investigation as to who had forged the check that formed the evidence against the accused, as well as other matters.

Nor will Hollander's opponents let things rest there. They had achieved something—talk and innuendo—and that is much in a case like this one. It serves, anyway, to sow suspicion among the unthinking, and that will surely find its echo at the coming convention of the order.

There will surely be plenty of agitation, and if Hollander is to be re-elected, which is a foregone conclusion, then Judge Levy will have to be re-elected in order to show to the world at large that unity and confidence rule within the ranks of this order. In brief, the shrewd political move of the Grand Master has succeeded admirably.

For the present the reputation of an honest and sincere public worker was besmirched and dragged in the dust, made a target for evil tongues, and all for no reason whatever.

There is another plot that failed.
 The "Lefts" within the greatest Jewish workers' order are dissatisfied; at the last conference of the workmen's circle they had lost and the "Rights" were elected to office, and a resolution had been adopted not to support the "Left" newspaper, the Freiheit.

Now the Lefts are angry. They need money. Their enterprises are in dire need, while the arbeiter ring has the money and won't give it to them.

So they called a protest conference.
 To protest against whom? That will be seen at the conference. Meanwhile, not finding it dignified enough to speak of such base matters as money and personal interests, the accused the "Workmen's Circle" of being antagonistic to the Soviet regime and of seeking its downfall.

It may sound like a jest, yet it is a truth that much noise was made over the circle's resolution to ask the Russian Government to free its political prisoners. And it is this dreadful "crime" that has called forth such an outpouring of anger among the Lefts, necessitating the calling of a special protest conference for their membership all over the land.

And they were fortunate in this.
 There is much idleness just now so there was a pretty good attendance, but very few delegates and those not very prominent personalities. But strong speeches were made and still stronger resolutions were adopted.

So this "scandal" also failed to come to a head, but it is not by any means over, and can't be over as long as the "Lefts" need the money which the workmen's circle refuses to furnish them with.

The new executive body of the Jewish Congress has begun its work. It has appointed a special commission to look into the offer of the Mexican Government to the would-be Jewish immigrants.

What is that offer? Nothing so far.
 Mexico has much idle soil which may or may not be good for settlers, and new settlers were invited—even Jews.

Propaganda had previously been made among the Germans and other European nations, but these refused to come, so now Jews are invited. By whom?
 By a government that has not been recognized by its strong neighbor, the United States, and will sooner or later have to go.

To whom was this invitation given?
 To a few unknown and irresponsible people who had not so far displayed any grasp of the great social or national problems, and we have, the report of the "Halias" before us. The commission had already declared that Mexico for the present does not constitute a suitable place for Jewish immigration.
 Beside all this we have very few trained Jewish agriculturists, as well as no money for any big scale enterprise.

At any other time this entire business would interest no one. But at the present, when thousands of Jews are homeless and wandering all over Europe, there is danger in dangling this false hope before their eyes and the danger as well in catastrophe that is sure to follow among these unfortunates.

The leaders of the Jewish Congress ought to know it, and if they are really desirous of doing something they should issue a warning to the people not to go to Mexico and not to awaken any false hopes in the hearts of the unfortunates.

But the congress committee has adopted a "diplomatic" tone. It announced itself ready to "investigate the case" and thereby made it seem important and awakened false hopes in the refugees, hopes of a newly discovered golden land, and the rush will surely begin—for the graves.

This will surely be the result of all the work done by an organization whose stock in trade consists only of phrases and whose very name is also no more than an empty phrase.

City's Higher Schools Proud of Jewish Pupils

The discussion of the number of Jews among the students at Harvard calls attention to the fact that in two famous Boston institutions, the Boston Latin School and the English High School, a very large percentage of the pupils are Jews.

The Latin School was founded in Boston in the seventeenth century. Each year in the last score of years has seen an increase in the number of Jewish pupils until now a large part of the honors for athletics, military drill and scholarship are captured by Jews.

In English High School an even larger percentage of the pupils is Jewish, and the majority of the honors are taken by students whose parents were immigrants or the children of immigrants.

Charles Le Bon, a well known instructor of French at English High School, who was held in high esteem by every boy who ever attended his classes, and who is now retiring, once laughingly made the remark:

"There was a time when almost every boy in the room stood up when I called for 'Murphy.' Times have changed. Now they all stand up when I call upon 'Cohen.'"

Both the English High School and the Latin School are preparatory schools for boys and are public institutions. The masters are proud of the success of the students whose parents came to America from the Ghettos of Europe.—Boston
