THE PUBLIC MESSENGER

From the Yiddish of J. L. Peretz. Translated by HANNAH BERMAN

He goes, and the wind drives asunder his coat-tails and his white beard. From time to time, he catches hold of his left side by his right hand. Again and again, he feels a stitch there. But he does not wish to give in to it. On the contrary, he wishes to make himself believe that he is only feeling for his breast pocket.

"I hope I shall not lose the money and the agreement."

It was for them that he pretended to be anxious.

"And even if there is a stitch, it is nonsense. Thank God, I have still sufficient strength for such an errand. Other people of my age cannot walk a single verst. But I—blessed by His Holy Name!—I have not to depend on other people. I can still earn my bread myself. Praised be the Lord, people entrust their money to me.

"If I owned the money which people entrust to me," he thought further. "I would not have to be a public messenger in my seventieth year. But the Lord of the Universe wishes it to be so. And it is well."

Thick flakes of snow began to fall. He wiped his face continually.

"I have now, in all, only half a mile to go," he thought. "Oho! You call that a journey? It is much nearer than farther." He turned round. He could not see even the town clock any more, nor the monastery, nor the barracks. "Well, Shmarya, drive on!"

And Shmarya drove on through the wet snow. His old legs bent in all directions under him.

"Praised be the Lord, there is no big wind."

It seemed that a big wind was to him nothing less than a storm. As it was, the wind was strong enough and drove straight into his face so that, at each blast, he lost his breath. It drew all the tears out of his old eyes which felt as if they were being stung with needles. But he had always suffered with his eyes.

He decided that out of the first large money he earned he would buy himself a pair of road-glasses—big, round spectacles which would protect the whole of his eyes.

"If God wills it," he thought, "I will attain this wish also. If only I had an errand every day—a distant errand, a very far one. I can

BORN IN the township of Zion, county of Cork, State of Ignorance, Sunday, the 17th day of March, 1900. Educated in the Convent of Zion, 1906-1911. Zion City College, 1911-1915. Department of Geological Engineering, School of Reductive Science, United States Naval Rock College, Portsmouth, N. H., 1915-1918. Midshipman, U. S. N. R. S., 4th of July, 1918, until death do us part.

A stewed gent below the average, and a power player of marked ability. Has always maintained that the prime factor in good academic standing is grease rather than brains—grease, which includes first, the mental effort or coercive force to bone out the hours and letters revolve; second, the knowledge of one's own importance.

Unmarried. For further information see the "Who's Who in America, 1920-1921" under the name of those damned special privileges until their positive action on their part they show they merit further consideration.

This is the facsimile of the page from the Lucky Bag, the 1922 year book of the U. S. Naval Academy graduating class, which contained the caricature of Ensign Leonard Kaplan, of Weston, W. Va., a Jewish student of the graduating class, whose photograph is shown in the upper left hand corner. This last page of the book was perforated so that it could be removed without removing the photograph and sketch of any other member of the class. Kaplan is only twenty-two years old, and stood second highest in his class. Senator Sutherland, of West Virginia, is seeking punishment of those guilty of the offense against Kaplan.

walk, thanks be to His Holy Name! If I had an errand every day, I could save up the money for the spectacles."

It is true that he also needs a heavy overcoat. His chest would have felt stronger for being protected from the cold. He considered again, and decided that, for the present, his overcoat was still warm enough.

"If only it does not tear, it will be quite alright."

He smiled with satisfaction.

"This," thought he, "is not a coat of today, not a mere 'chew and spit,' not a cobweb, but an old-fashioned. And it has no vent. That also is a good quality. It does not fly apart like the overcoats of today. And in front it folds over nearly a yard the width.

"A fur coat," he thought, "is certainly better. A fur coat is warm, really warm. But still, spectacles come first. A fur coat is necessary only in the winter, but spectacles are always necessary. Because in the summer, when there arises a wind and the dust is driven straight into my eyes it is worse than in the winter."

And he decided that the spectacles must come first. Then, after them, a fur coat. Only, let the Most High help him to obtain the contract for the wheat. . . . He would surely get four gulden.

He dragged himself along. And the wet snow beat into his face. The wind grew stronger each moment, and slashed him more and more.

"If only the wind would turn round. But, no doubt," thought he, "it is better so. On the return journey I will be more tired. Then I will have the wind at my back. Oh, then it will be altogether different. Everything is provided for. My heart is lighter."

He had to stop for a second to catch his breath. This frightened him a little.

"What has happened to me? How many winter frosts have I lived through as a 'cantonist?'" he asked himself sorrowfully and half frightened.

And he recalled to mind his term of service as a 'cantonist.' Twenty-five clear years of service with his gun, along with the years of his childhood, he had spent in preparation for his soldiering. He had done enough of walking in his life-time.

He had marched over hills and dales, in snow and frost, and in all sorts of hurricanes. In what snows! In what forests! The trees used to split. The birds used to fall to the ground dead. And the Russian soldier marched along, fresh and lively, singing a little song, a folk-dance tune, or part songs, keeping time with their feet.

The knowledge that he had served the whole thirty-five years of the old-fashioned military service, survived all sorts of hardships, all the snows, the storms, the tyrannies, the hunger and thirst and deprivations, and had managed to return to his home in Poland in good health—this knowledge made him feel strong. He lifted up his head proudly and walked along with new vigor.

"Ha, Ha! What is such a little frost to me? In north Russia, I should think things were quite different."

He goes on. The wind abates a little. The day grows darker moment by moment. The night is falling.

"You call that a day," he thought. "It is just a dew-like rain."

And he began to go forward still faster so that he should not be overtaken by the night. It was not for nothing that he attended at the little synagogue every Sabbath to study the holy law. He knew that one must go forth in faith and return in faith.

He felt rather hungry. And his disposition was such that when he was hungry he grew lively. He knew that it was a good thing to have an appetite. His merchants, who sent him on their errands, were always bemoaning the fact that they were never hungry. Thank God, he had an appetite, excepting at such times when he was not himself, as had happened on the previous day. He was unwell, and had therefore imagined that the bread was sour.

"Go! Where was it sour? Soldiers' bread. Once upon a time it may have been sour, but not now. The soldiers baked such bread that the Jewish bakers might go and hide themselves."

And he had bought the bread new. It was a pleasure to cut it. But he had not been himself. Somehow, a cold blast seemed to have penetrated to his very bones.

But, thanks be to Him Whose Holy Name he was not worthy to remember—this seldom happened to him.

At the present moment, he has an appetite. It is true that he has bread and cheese in his pocket. The merchant's wife gave him the cheese. May she live long, in good health! She is really a charitable woman. She has a Jewish heart.

"If she did not curse and swear so much," thought he, "she would be a very fine woman indeed."

He remembered his dead wife. "Just like my Sprintze—peace be unto her! She also had a good heart. She also was in the habit of cursing and swearing. After every child whom I sent out into the world she wept and wailed, although, when they were at home she cursed them with deadly curses. Who speaks of the time," he recalled to mind, "when one of them died? For days she threw herself about like a serpent, beat her own head with her fists.

"Once she just wanted to throw a stone right into the sky.

"Well, you see," he thought, "God takes a lot of notice of a foolish woman."

But she had refused to let them take out the coffin with the corpse. She smacked the faces of the women and tore the beards of the men.

"There was a fine lot of strength in Sprintze. One thought that she was a fly, but she was so powerful, so powerful "Still, may she forgive me, she was a good woman. She did not hate me, either, although she never gave me a kind word.

"She shouted for a divorce—a divorce. If not, she said she would just run away. But she never really wanted a divorce."

He remembered something else and smiled.

The incident had happened long, long ago. At that time there was still smuggling going on. He was a night watchman and went about whole nights with a little iron stick, to see that no brandy was being smuggled in.

He knew the military regulations. The military keep good schools. He had had good teachers. At dawn—it was in the winter—he had to give his place to the day watchman, Chayyim-Jonah. He is already in the True World. And he went home frozen stiff. He knocked at his door and his wife called out to him from the bed:

"Go into the earth! I thought your name only would come home!"

"Oho! She is still angry from yesterday."

Now he could not remember what had happened on that yesterday, but something must have happened.

"Shut your mouth, and open the door," he shouted.

"I will open your head," was the firm reply.

"Let me in," he shouted.

"Go into the earth!" she answered.

And he considered the matter and decided to go into the House of Learning. He fell asleep beside the stove. To his misfortune, he was overcome by the fumes and he was carried home more dead than alive.

Was it a trifle—the excitement of Sprintze! Later on, he heard quite clearly all that she was saying.

People said to her: "It is only a swoon."

No, she must have a doctor. She would faint if the doctor was not fetched—throw herself in the water. And she shouted: "My husband! My husband! My ornament!"

He gathered together all his strength, sat up in bed and asked quietly: "Sprintze, do you want a divorce?"

"May you —!" She did not finish the curse; but let out a wail.

"Shramya, what do you think; will the Lord punish me for my curses, for my wickedness?"

But no sooner did he get well than she was again the same Sprintze—a mouth on wheels, a tongue on screws, and as strong as iron. She scratched like a cat. Ha! Ha! A pity Sprintze is gone. She did not live to enjoy any happiness through her children, either.

They should be doing well in the world. All were artisans. Artisans do not die of hunger in the world. They were strong, too. They had taken after him. They did not write? Well, what of that? They cannot write themselves, and to go and ask others to write for one is not pleasant. What sort of a flavor has such a letter? It is like watered-down soup. Then, too, in the course of time, young children forget. Surely, they must be very well off.

But Sprintze, poor thing, lies in the ground. It is a pity she is gone.

When the smuggling ceased she was a lost being.

"Really, before I got used to going public errands, to addressing the over-lord as 'Your exalted highness' in Polish instead of Russian—before the people trusted me with money and contracts, we were often short of a piece of bread.

"I—well, if I, a man, a one-time 'cantunist'—if I did not eat for a day! But she, one might say, had her whole life ruined by hunger. A foolish woman! She at once lost her health. She had not even the strength to curse any more. All the mischief left her. She only cried. "I got dead sick of everything.

It seemed as if she had come to be afraid for me. She was even afraid to eat lest I might go short. When I saw that she was afraid, I became more courageous. I shouted and swore at her. For example, I shouted at her, "Why do you not eat?" Sometimes I fell into a rage, and wanted to beat her. But go and beat a weeping woman, when she sits with her hands folded and does not stir. I flew at her with my fist raised—spat into it. She said to me, "You eat first. I will eat afterwards."

"And I had to bite the bread first and leave the rest for her.

"Sometimes she fooled me by sending me out of the house. 'I will eat when you are outside. Go, maybe you will earn something.' And she tried to smile at me, and sometimes fondled me.

"I went out and returned, and found that the same piece of bread was still there. She persuaded me into believing that she could not eat it because it was too dry. She must have porridge."

He bent his head, just as if a heavy burden were weighing him down. And his melancholy thoughts ran on.

"And what a lamentation she raised when I wished to pawn my Sabbath coat—the same which I am now wearing. She made a tremendous fuss, and ran of and pawned her brass candlesticks. And to the day of her death she stuck the Sabbath candles into potatoes. On her death-bed, she confessed that she had never wanted the divorce from me, that she had only had a wicked tongue.

"My tongue, my tongue!" she cried. "Lord of the Universe, forgive me for my tongue."

And she died in fear lest, in the other world, they should hang her up by her tongue.

"A woman is, after all, a fool. For a moment she is a Cossack, a fury, a wild thing; and again, she is more capricious than a child. You see what a difference it makes when one is dying, whether there is a chair in the house or not.

"Phew!" And he broke in upon his own reflections. "What things come into my head. Through all these empty foolishnesses I pass easily.

"Well, soldier's feet, carry me further," he commanded himself.

He looked about him, around and around. Above him, a grey sky patched with dirty rags. "But the ends of my coat-tails," thought he, "are trailing their ragged patches in the mud. Dear Father of the Universe, are you also refused credit at the shop?"

Meanwhile the frost became more intense. His beard and moustache are ice. But his body is still fairly alright. His head is very warm. On his forehead he feels the drops of perspiration. But his feet grow colder and weaker every minute.

He has not far to go now. He would like to stop and rest, but is ashamed before his own self. It is the first time for him to feel like resting on an errand covering only two miles of road. He would not admit it to himself that he was already a man of eighty, and it was time for him to feel the need of resting on the road.

No, he must go—only go. So long as one goes, one goes. One carries one's self. But so soon as one gives in to the bad angel and rests one's self, then one becomes a fine being, indeed.

"One may just catch cold resting," he said. And he was frightened. And all the while he tried to talk himself out of the strong wish to rest himself.

"It is not far, now, to the village. When I get there, I will have time.

"This plan I will follow," he thought. "I will not go straight to the overlord. At the overlord's one has to wait for an hour, outside the door. I will go straight to the Jew's house.

"Although I am not afraid of the overlord's dog," he thought, "yet, all the same, at night, when the animal is let loose, it is dangerous to go near it. It is true that I have my supper with me, and the dog loves cheese. Still, it would be better for me to rest my bones first. I will go to the Jews' house, warm myself, have a wash and something to eat."

And his mouth watered. He had not eaten since early in the morning. But that was a mere trifle. He did not care that he was hungry. He rejoiced in the fact. When one is hungry it is a sign that one is alive. But it was his feet which troubled him.

In all, he had only two versts to go now. He could already see the outlines of the overlord's big estate. But his feet did not see anything. They insisted on having rest for themselves.

"But on the contrary," he thought further, "what harm will it be if I do rest myself? A minute, half a minute! Maybe I should? Let me only try it. My feet have obeyed me so long that I might very well obey them now."

And Shmarya sat down by the roadside on a little ridge of snow. It was only then that he could hear his heart beating like a hammer. He felt stitches at his heart. And his head was perspiring.

He was frightened. Perhaps he was getting ill? He had other people's money by him. He might fall into a swoon, God forbid! He comforted himself with the thought that there was no one near him, and thanked God for it.

"And even if someone does come up, he will never think that I have money on me. Heavens above! Whom people entrust with money! He would sit there only another second and then he would be off

But his eyelids fell over his eyes as if they had been made of lead.

"No! Get up, Shmarya! Lift yourself up!" he commanded himself.

He could still give orders, but he could not carry them out. He could not move. But he imagined that he was going forward—that he was walking more rapidly every moment. He imagined that he was already seeing the little houses. Here lived Antik, there Vassili. He knew them all. He hired wagons from them. It is still far to the house of the Jew, but he would rather go to him. One sometimes came upon money there. And he imagined that he was going to the Jew's little house. But it kept moving off, ever farther and farther. No doubt it should be so. Surely a jolly little fire was burning in the chimney there. The whole of the little window was gay and red. The fat Mirrel is surely taking the scum off a big pot of potatoes. And she often gave him a potato. A hot potato is delicious. And he moved faster. At least he thought he was moving faster, but in reality he was sitting in the same place.

The frost was a little milder. Thick, large flakes of snow began to fall.

It seemed that he, too, felt warmer under the mantle of snow. And he imagined that he was already inside the Jew's house. Mirrel was straining the potatoes. He could hear the sound of the water dripping down—zyur-zyur-zyur! And so the water dripped down, his great coat also. Jonah was going about and singing in a nasal voice. It was his habit to sing after the evening prayer because he was hungry then. And he kept saying, "Well, Mirrel?"

But Mirrel was in no hurry.

"One does better when one is careful."

"Am I asleep and dreaming?"

He was thoroughly but joyfully frightened. He imagined that the door opened, and that his eldest son came in. "Chono! Chono!" Oh, he recognized him. What was he doing here? Chono did not recognize him and he did not pretend to see him. Ha! Ha! Ha! He was telling Jonah that he was going to his father. He had not forgotten his father. And Jonah, the rogue, did not tell him that his father was sitting on the bench-bed. Mirrel has work to do. She is busy with the potatoes. She is mashing the potatoes with the big wooden spoon, and smiling.

Oh, Chono must be rich. Very rich. All his clothes are whole. And a chain. It must be made of something valuable. Surely it is gold. Chono would not wear a watchchain made of anything else but gold, God forbid! Ha! Ha! Ha! He is looking at the chest of drawers. Ha! Ha! Ha! He nearly split his sides laughing. Yekel, Berel, Zachariah—all three. Ha! Ha! Ha! They hid themselves behind the chest of drawers. They are rogues. Ha! Ha! Ha! It is a pity Sprintze is not here—a pity! "Chono, Chono!" Do you not know me? It is I." And he thought he was kissing Chono. "You hear, Chono? It is a pity your mother is not here to see you. Yekel, Berel, Zachariah, get out from behind the chest of drawers. I recognized you instantly. Come out. I knew you would be here. To prove it, I will show you the cheese I fetched with me—pure sheep's milk cheese. Just see! Come, children. Surely you love soldiers' bread! What? Perhaps you don't? Truly, it is a pity your mother is not here."

And he imagined that all his four children surrounded him, and took hold of him, and kissed him, and pressed him to their hearts.

"But be careful, little children, careful! I beg of you not to squeeze me so hard. I am not a young man any more. I am a man of eighty. Careful! You are crushing me. Careful, little children. Old bones! Be careful. I have money in my pockets. Thank God, people entrust their money to me. Enough, little children, enough!"

And it was enough. He remained stiff and staring, with his hand on his breast pocket.

CONGREGATION B'NEY ISRAEL OF LONG ISLAND CITY

Plans are under way and an active campaign has been begun for the erection of a new synagogue and community center for this congregation.

There are two hundred families now in Long Island City, and the erection of large industrial buildings and commercial developments that will come with them, is stimulating the building of more residences. The Jewish population here is bound to grow and the officials of the congregation are confident that their plans are forward looking and will succeed.

Last Tuesday evening a large and enthusiastic meeting of the members was held in the old synagogue. The principal speaker was Mr. Alexander U. Zinke, president of the New York branch of the United Synagogue of America.

Mr. Zinke discussed at length the Jewish situation in and around New York and the need of building up congregations for the young men and women who now, to a considerable extent seem to be uninterested in Jewish affairs. The laying of the cornerstone of the new synagogue will shortly be announced.

Jewish Community Wants to Cur-tail Rights of Foreign Jews—Government Won't Let Them

Berlin (Jewish Press Association).—The Jewish community of Erfurt has adopted a resolution to limit the electoral privilege of the foreign Jews, but the government rejected the resolution, declaring it illegal.

This defeat of the Erfurt community will surely bring good results to all foreign Jews living in Germany.

SENATOR LODGE PRAISES HOMELAND MOVEMENT AT DINNER IN HIS HONOR

New York Leaders of Movement Crowd Hotel Astor Ballroom to Honor Author of Lodge Resolution—Gratitude Voiced by Samuel Untermyer, Nahum Sokolow, Nathan Straus, Louis Lipsky and Others—Over $100,000 Raised for Keren Hayesod with First Contribution from Nathan Straus.

Addressing 1,000 representative Jews who filled to capacity the Grand Ballroom of the Astor Hotel at a dinner given in his honor on June 13, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts praised the movement to restore the national home of the Jewish people in Palestine and declared that the resolution expressing sympathy with the project which he had introduced into the Senate and which had been unanimously adopted by that body was in line with the best American traditions of religious liberty.

the United States for the past six months at the head of a special delegation of European leaders of the Palestine movement, expressed his satisfaction with the response of the Jews of America to his appeal and with the sympathy for the homeland movement which he met among all classes of the American people. "The success of the movement," he said, "depends upon two things: Firstly, the material response of American Jews, and, secondly, the moral support of the American people. We have now received both."

SAMUEL UNTERMYER

After recounting the circumstances under which the Balfour declaration in which Great Britain pledged its assistance to the homeland project was issued, Senator Lodge said: "In 1917 I gave public expression to my approval of the Balfour declaration, dated November 2 of that year, which, as you all know, set forth the policy of the British Government in regard to Palestine. It is under this declaration of Mr. Balfour in behalf of the British Government, and the further agreement of San Remo, that the question has arisen about the establishment of a national home by the Jewish people in Palestine. It is this proposition which is favored by the resolution which I presented to the Senate which was passed unanimously. It seemed to me that it was entirely becoming and commendable that the Jewish people in all portions of the world should desire to have a national home for all members of their race as wished to return to the country which was the cradle of their race, and where they lived and labored for thousands of years, running back to days just apparent in the dim dawn of recorded history. What could be more praiseworthy or more appealing than such a desire? Why should it not be gratified?"

"Complete religious tolerance is an American doctrine, and I think all Americans would deplore, and ought to deplore, any attempt to bring race or religion in any manner into our political life. It seems to me that religious freedom as we understand it in the United States must always be one of our most cherished principles. For this reason I was glad to propose the resolution to the Senate which favored allowing the Jewish People to have a national home in Palestine."

"There seem to be many mistaken ideas abroad in regard to this national home for the Jews in the land from which they sprang. Some people seem to think that it is a project to have all the Jews in the world go to Palestine. I cannot conceive that anyone who gives it a moment's thought should not see the utter impracticability of any such plan. There are twelve to fourteen million Jews, I suppose, in the world, according to the best statistics, and it would be physically impossible for them to go to Palestine and live there. It is a small country, not suited for a great industrial population. It has a population now of seven hundred thousand, and the prospect of development, which must be chiefly along agricultural lines, is necessarily limited."

"The Jewish people in the world generally have a very deep sentiment in regard to it, and it would be astonishing indeed if they did not have it, but as I understand it the idea is that this national home should be created and protected, and those of the Jewish people who desire to go there will then be able to go, find employment and establish themselves upon their ancestral soil. The great mass of the Jewish people will remain necessarily where they now are, taking an active and important part in the life of the countries in which they live, but they would be something more or less than human if they did not cherish and reverence this sentiment for the representation of their people in the ancient land from which they come."

"I am unable to see any possible objection to it, and, on the other hand, there ought to be great sympathy in the gratification of such a sentiment, at once so powerful and honorable, among the people who hold it. The United States has no direct interest in Palestine of a material kind, but its people have as Christians the profoundest feeling of veneration for the country which enshrined the holy places, the very holy of holies of all Christendom. This resolution of sympathy with the desires of the Jewish people neither threatens nor invades any rights of any other people. It says, to quote the words of the Senate resolution:

"That the United States of America favors the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of non-Jewish communities in Palestine, and that the holy places and religious buildings and sites in Palestine shall be adequately protected."

"That protection will, of course, be afforded by Great Britain, a great Christian nation, thoroughly devoted to the principles of religious freedom and toleration and all the rights and all the religious feelings of Christians and Jews alike, to whom the land is sacred, will be guarded as never before. The President of the United States has also recently given public utterance to the cordial sympathy which he feels for the wishes of the Jewish people to have in Palestine a national home."

To Marry Miss Rathenau and Come to America

Vienna (Jewish Press Association).—Local newspapers assert that the wedding between Karl Radek and the sister of Walter Rathenau, the German minister, will take place shortly, and that the couple will leave for America right thereafter for a short stay. Radek, the newspapers say, will travel incognito by arrangement with the American government.

SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE

Judge Alexander H. Geismer, of Brooklyn, offered a resolution, which was unanimously adopted, that a special Henry Cabot Lodge Honor Fund be created to consist of the contributions to the Keren Hayesod which would be raised at the dinner. Judge Geismer then made a stirring appeal and raised over $100,000 for this fund.

The first two contributions were from Samuel Untermyer, chairman, who gave $10,000, and from Nathan Straus, who gave $5,000. The contribution from Mr. Straus was an occasion for a great ovation, it being the first time Mr. Straus has contributed to the Keren Hayesod.

Samuel Untermyer, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Palestine Foundation Fund, who presided at the dinner, paid a glowing tribute in behalf of American Jewry to the statesmanship of Senator Lodge, and declared that the Lodge resolution, voicing the sympathy of America looking toward the re-establishment of Palestine as the Jewish homeland, has once more vindicated America's title as champion of the weak and oppressed. He also congratulated the workers for the fund with which the work in Palestine was being maintained, and called attention to the significance of the adoption of the Lodge resolution at this time when the Palestine mandate is about to come up for ratification at the coming meeting of the League of Nations. He expressed confidence that the resolution which is now pending before the lower House would be passed and would be signed by the President, whose recent message to the Palestine Foundation Fund, he stated, has inspired the Jews with even greater generosity and zeal for the cause.

Mr. Peter J. Schweitzer, chairman of the National Administrative Committee of the Keren Hayesod, announced that in the period of less than a year, during which the Palestine Foundation Fund has been in active existence in the United States, the sum of $5,000,000 was raised, of which $2,000,000 is in cash and the balance in pledges which will be collected in the course of a year.

He gave a detailed report of the various activities in Palestine which are being financed by the fund, including the maintaining of a system of schools, providing immigration services, medical and sanitation work, colonization, afforestation, etc. He stated that the fund was also promoting private enterprise in Palestine.

SOME INTERESTING LOCAL EVENTS

The Results of the Zionist Delegation—Its Failure—Jabotinsky the Cause—The Case of a Rich Uncle and a War Orphan—The Irresponsibility of the Jewish Youth.

By M. F. SEIDMAN
(Copyright J. P. A.)

The Zionist Delegation led by Nahum Sokolow, which has spent some months in this country, is getting ready to leave these shores. The sincere and thoroughly conscientious Professor Warburg left some time ago, and now Jabotinsky and Stone, the secretary of the delegation, have left, while Sokolow is getting ready to sail away.

The delegation's leaving is considered as a happy event by many American Zionists and, indeed, more joy is displayed at the farewells than at the receptions arranged in its honor.

Their leave-takings will not harm the Zionist Organization, and may even be of benefit to it.

And now that the delegation is leaving, we can be frank and tell what was in our mind all along, viz., that the delegation has met with scant success in America, that it accomplished but little (and that bit could just as well have been done without it), and that it even did some damage to the cause of American Zionism.

The entire delegation, with the sole exception of Sokolow, was not of the sort suitable for America. The "Parade Gentile," Colonel Patterson, was not needed. Our American Jews are sufficiently self-conscious not to be influenced by such tactics. We have already had a surfeit of compliments paid us by generals and admirals, as well as cabinet ministers and presidents. "Parade Gentiles" may be of use amongst Polish-German assimilators, but not in America.

The oratorical talents of the delegation were not overwhelmingly great. We possess right here far better speakers, men who exceed in understanding the American Jew and his psychology and exert a greater power. And among the delegates was Jabotinsky, who had so badly compromised himself in the Petlura affair. Besides this, he had committed many blunders while here, errors that have served to estrange many good Zionists. Thanks to his presence, the Jewish workingmen—even the Paole Zion—became estranged.

Our Jewish workingmen are mostly Socialistically inclined, but not according to the European pattern. They have a far more liberal outlook on Jewish questions, and at the time of the visit of Drs. Weizmann and Einstein there were signs of interest in the Keren Hayesod work. Even the "Forward" published detailed reports of the activities of the delegates, and there were hopes that the Jewish workers would help in this work, but Jabotinsky's presence drove these people away and, in many places, his meetings were either interrupted by demonstrations or entirely boycotted.

Weak as the delegation was, Jabotinsky's presence was nothing short of a misfortune. This is admitted even by those who do not condemn his Petlura alliance. They admit that the moment this scandal became known it was his duty to leave America, and he would have rendered a great service to the cause by doing so.

But this he did not do, and by it paralyzed the hand of the others. And the results were discouraging. Barely one million dollars were gathered, and such a sum could have been gathered by the local talent, without incurring the colossal expense of the delegation.

The only positive occurrence during the delegation's sojourn was the pro-Zion resolution of the Senate, but this could have been achieved without it.

It was obtained by Sokolow with the aid of some American leaders, whose aid was indispensable to him while his presence was not indispensable to them. Sokolow nevertheless is deserving of thanks for his tact, energy and his organizing ability.

Sokolow has indeed accomplished a great deal and, if the delegation failed in its endeavor, it was surely not his fault. One swallow cannot bring summer to us.

A rich Jew has brought over from Poland a nephew of his, a war orphan, who had lost both his father and mother. The children of this rich uncle didn't receive very graciously the unbidden guest. The uncle sought at first to take the part of the orphan, but seeing that it couldn't be done, he decided to return him to Poland, and notified the immigration authorities that he is unable to support the boy. And then a more distant relative came along, a poor workingman, and offered to care for him, and thereby saved him from deportation.

Now all the newspapers have much to say of the matter, are printing the rich man's picture and are giving him his due of well-earned abuse. But is he really to blame? Didn't he try to do all in his power to save his unfortunate nephew? The real culprits are his children, who declared war on the defenseless orphan, and also our educational system, which causes the children of the newly-arrived to lose respect for their elders. This is especially noticeable in the families where the parents are simple and uneducated people.

Guilty also is the lack of cohesion between the old and young who know nothing of Jewish woes, Jewish traditions and feelings. The behind-the-scenes doings of actresses are of more interest to them than all the Jewish problems combined.

This is our own fault, the fault of the American Jews who have not as yet discovered an answer, a remedy for the education ills, so that when a case like the above happens we are apt to blame the individual who, indeed, is but a victim of the system. He may feel the deepest pangs at the occurrence, as well as in the strangeness of his own children, and we have never sought to assist him in his problems, seen to it that his children shall be his own and not strangers, his children and not his masters.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN

New Jersey leads the States in the number of new sections organized during the present triennial period, beginning with November, 1920. It has just formed its eighth new section at Perth Amboy, N. J., with Mrs. Jacob Joselson as president. The extension work in New Jersey is under the direction of Mrs. Nathan Kussy of Newark, State supervisor.

A group of 157 children from the various schools of Brooklyn were the guests of the Brooklyn section at an outing on the Hudson River. The event was arranged by the Committee on Defectives, of which Mrs. Mortimer Brenner is chairman.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Elmira (N. Y.) Section was observed with a special program on June 18. The principal speaker on this occasion was Mrs. Nathaniel E. Harris of Bradford, Pa., national chairman of the Council's Committee on Foreign Relations. The successful work of the Elmira Section has been under the recent direction of its president, Mrs. B. Rosenfield.

Mrs. Moses Ruslander of Pittsburgh, national chairman of the Council's Committee on Religious Schools, recently addressed the Uniontown Section on "Our State Needs," and the religious school of the Jeannette Section on "Mother."

Mrs. Carl J. Fehheimer, third vice-president of the Pittsburgh Section, delivered the message at the annual meeting of the Altoona Section on "Life and the Council." The Speakers' Bureau of the Council has assigned its speakers to sections in various States, and met the great demand for the recent annual meetings.

Mrs. Herbert E. Ottenheimer of Louisville, national chairman of the Council's Committee on Civic and Communal Affairs, has been invited to deliver an address on "Peace" at the University of Kentucky on July 3. She recently addressed the Kentucky State Federation of Women's Clubs at its annual convention on "Preparedness for Peace." Mrs. Ottenheimer was successful in defeating the plan for the federation's indorsement of the proposed anti-evolution legislation in the State.

The city of Washington, D. C., has been furthering a very extensive community program in the interest of music. A special music week has been designated. The local section, of which Mrs. Alexander Wolf is president, presented the famed Norfolk Trio of New York at the Masonic Temple.

Miss Goldberger an Honor Graduate from Hunter College

Miss Mollie Goldberger, a frequent contributor to the columns of The Hebrew Standard, received her Bachelor of Arts degree at the Hunter College commencement on June 15, 1922.

In addition to her degree Miss Goldberger was awarded the Bernard Cohen prize of $40 for excellence in short story writing as well as honorable mention in the competition for the Thomas Hunter Prize in History. Mention was also made of the fact that Miss Goldberger was recently awarded the $50 prize offered by the Port of New York Authority for the best essay on "Port Development" submitted from Hunter College.

Last June Miss Goldberger was

Miss Goldberger is a graduate of the Teachers' Institute of the Jewish Theological Seminary, June, 1919, and is now teaching in the Hebrew and Religious schools of Congregation Mt. Sinai, 305 State street, Brooklyn, of which Rabbi Alexander Basel is the spiritual leader.

In the fall Miss Goldberger expects to enter Columbia University, where she will work for her Master of Arts degree. She intends to specialize particularly in literary fields, in which she is greatly interested.

The Jewish Center School

A PRIVATE ELEMENTARY SCHOOL
131 WEST 86th STREET

The work of the school covers the complete elementary school course; its graduates are prepared to enter any public or private high school.

The extraordinary facilities of the Jewish Center make possible the inclusion of many unusual advantages for the children of the school.

Religion is recognized in the school as an educational force vital to the spiritual growth of the child.

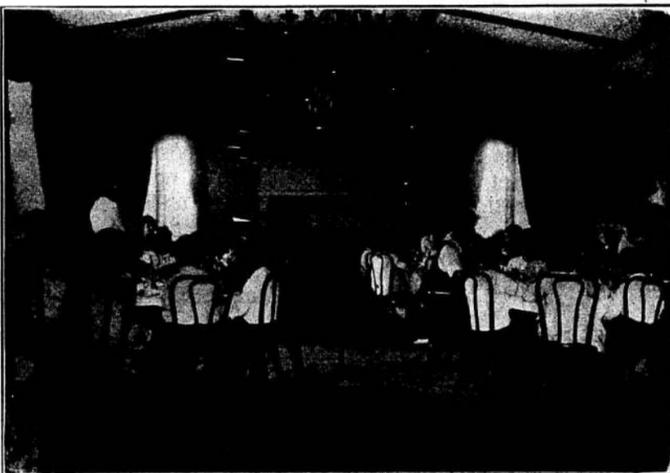

The principles and practices of Orthodox Judaism form an integral part of the every day school life of the child.

A school bus provides transportation for children whose homes are outside the immediate neighborhood.

A large swimming pool, a model gymnasium, rest rooms and a dining room are other features.

To provide the educational advantages of a diversified social atmosphere, registration in the school is open also to non-members.

We note that the Liberal Jewish Synagogue of London has by this time altered its arrangements for the holding of its services. This synagogue was opened and for some time maintained as a fane where the main services on the Sabbath were held in the afternoon. Now this service has been transferred to the morning, where it properly and traditionally belongs, and thus the main reason for the establishment of the congregation would appear to have ended in failure. For, when the Liberal Jewish Synagogue of London was started, those at its head prided themselves of their iconoclasm with respect to our Sabbath. The council states that "circumstances (?) have altered since we first began. An increasing number of business men (sic!) now stay away from their offices the whole of Saturday, so that a large number now could attend a service in the morning." Yes, the "circumstances" affecting the Liberal Jewish Synagogue of London have changed; the Anglo-Jewish radicals now see that it has not "profited" them to fly in the face of Jewish tradition. Our Reform brethren in this country will please take note!

Leopold Cohn, of Brooklyn, chief of the "knightly" meshummodim, has become the beneficiary of what may be best described as a windfall. A Christian lady of Westfield left her entire estate to him in trust for the specific purpose of converting the Jews to the dominant faith. We do not know what the size of the fortune is to which Mr. Cohn has thus fallen heir, but we must deeply regret it that additional sinews of war have been thus made available for the carrying on of this pernicious activity. It is timely, indeed, that a new edition of the valuable book by Samuel Freuder, in which the truth about the missionaries to the Jews is told by one who had unparalleled sources of information on the subject, has just been issued. Under the heading, "A Self-Styled ex-Rabbi," Mr. Freuder devotes an entire chapter to Mr. Cohn and handles him without kid gloves. Mr. Freuder exposes Cohn's money-getting schemes and shows that he has never made any endeavor to invoke the law in vindication of his name. In this connection, too, we may refer to the recent sermon about the perverters preached by Rabbi Joseph Krauskopf, in which the portentous danger to the community of this traffic in souls is effectively detailed. We have herein pointed out enough to put the community on guard against the wiles practiced by these gentry.

For whatever it is worth, we advise our readers that the suggestion has been seriously made that the operations of the modern Ku Klux Klan may be held to account for the recent tendencies respecting Jews of American institutions of higher learning, chiefly Harvard. A more serious and notable contribution to the discussion is made by a Harvard student who calls himself "An Orthodox Jew, '23," and who writes to a Boston daily newspaper to call attention to the spectacle presented by "the members of the select Jewish fraternities on the 'Gold Coast' who are accustomed to riot shamelessly in their clubhouses on the Sabbath of their forefathers. It is these men," he proceeds to point out, "neither Christians nor good Jews, who sulk and slander because unable to gain prominence at college." Such desecration of our traditions may be accountable for the anti-Jewish outburst at Harvard, although it would appear, from the reports concerning the matter which have fallen under our eye, that the Harvard anti-Semites "object" to the Jew who does not evince the proper amount of "class spirit," and who spends his days in the pursuit of knowledge "without 'cuts'" and his nights in poring over the books that contain the material supplementary to what his professors inculcate.

Sabbath begins at 7:14 p. m. (Standard time—Daylight Saving one hour later). Shelach. Num. 13:1—15:41. Prophetic reading, Joshua 2. Rosh Chodesh Tammuz Benschon.

WHAT ARE THE JEWS?

THANKS to Hilaire Belloc, and other persons like him, as well as Harvard University, the United States Naval Academy, and similar institutions and corporations, we have not ceased to be a problem—to the non-Jews, especially—even in this twentieth century of so-called progress and enlightenment. In the case of the Naval Academy the problem revolves around one "of Jewish extraction." And because we do constitute a problem in the minds of prejudiced non-Jews, different countries in this century have made various reactions thereto, in the guise of manifestations of anti-Semitic prejudice.

Germany, the classic land of anti-Semitism, gave vent to its hatred of the Jew by means of its military structure, particularly the officer caste. Russia showed its enmity toward Jews in the shape of the survival there of mediaeval religious bigotry. Austria-Hungary's anti-Semitism was of the economic variety, whilst that of France centered wholly about l'affaire Dreyfus. The anti-Semitism of England and America may best be described as social character, since politically and economically and religiously in both these countries the Jew stands on a complete equality with his neighbors of other faiths.

Such being the facts of the case, how comes it that Jews remain a problem? For, if they are attacked on the score of their religion, it must be that they constitute a danger as a religious community in the minds of those to whom Jews are anathema on any count. If the gravamen of the charge levelled against them is that Jews are acceptable religiously but taboo communally and racially, then it follows that we are not a religious community. What, then, are we?

Since we profess, and are presumed to exemplify, the teachings of the mother-religion of civilization, and since religious bigotry is an outworn engine of destruction, the hatred manifested against us wears an ethnological aspect. We are a race, as such making up a close and well-defined religious community, which has maintained its own traditions for centuries.

We Jews, then, are above all else members of one and the same race and, thanks to the hatred of the non-Jewish world even in centuries favored by the light of Western civilization, this membership of this race with its religious content we shall retain. At all events, it is well clearly and succinctly to know what we are.

The House of Representatives, the lower branch of the General Court of Massachusetts, triumphantly passed the bill providing for the taking by the right of eminent domain for educational purposes of John Singer Sargent's painting, "The Synagogue," now on the walls of the Boston Public Library. As is well known this painting represents the decline of a religious faith which is held by many citizens of the commonwealth, and thus its presence in so public a place amounts to a continuous affront to them and violates the law and the spirit of fair-play as practiced by Americans. The action of the House in the premises must be deemed wise and salutary; fortunately, it has been supplemented by that of the Senate, the upper branch, which has also passed the bill. The Governor signed it, so the measure has now become a law. Whatever may be said of the Sargent painting as a work of art, there can be no excuse for Massachusetts to give its imprimatur to a creation, the purpose of which is to wound and to instil poisonous thoughts in the breasts of the general public.

The English newspapers state that now that Sir Herbert Samuel is once more in England, it is plain to see that the alarmist reports concerning the state of his health were groundless. Indeed, he is described as quite fit. This circumstance lends an added element of mystery to the announcement made some time since that the High Commissioner's health left much to be desired and that, for this reason, he had been compelled to repair to London. Health and illness are, of course, relative terms in public life, especially in the field of diplomacy, and are frequently employed as euphemisms to disguise unpalatable truths. Now, with reference to Sir Herbert, our readers will recall that when the news of his "illness" first became known, we hazarded the prediction that this was a mere cloak and that the High Commissioner would never return to Palestine in his former high official position. We have no reason as yet to alter our prediction; in point of fact, the newest information from London enforces us in our opinion. Needless to add, we should regard it as an unmitigated calamity for the Holy Land to be deprived of Sir Herbert Samuel's splendid services.

Sir Herbert Samuel recently faced an audience of some one hundred and fifty members of the British Parliament, drawn indiscriminately from both the House of Lords and the House of Commons, and presented to them the facts concerning the operation of the British mandate over Palestine as derived from his experiences as the High Commissioner. Sir Herbert gave a clear and concise account of the work accomplished by the British administrators of the Holy Land, and, although the meeting was held behind closed doors, a fairly trustworthy report of its main features has appeared in the columns of The Jewish Chronicle. Sir Herbert was asked a large number of questions by his hearers, especially with respect to the incidence of the Jews on the Arabs in Palestine, and gave eminently satisfactory replies to all. In this way, better than by means of a further agitation by Arab lobbyists, and certainly better than through the medium of questions and answers in the House of Commons, the truth about Palestine will become widely known. For one thing we believe Sir Herbert Samuel thereby has effectively disposed of the unfounded charge that the recent Jewish immigrants into Palestine are Bolsheviks. Sir Herbert is entitled to the thanks of world-Jewry for his service here.

MEN WITH A MISSION

"Send thou men, that they may search out the land of Canaan." (Num. XIII., 2.)

MEN with a mission are the redeemers of the race. They are but seldom met with in any age, but, their small numbers despite, they exercise a power over the march of the race that is astounding. This feeling that a man is sent is in itself so rare, and requires such a peculiarly developed nature, that whenever and wherever it occurs it is bound to manifest itself in strange ways and call forth remarkable results. Invariably men whose actions are guided by this mystic sense of mission are regarded with suspicion as somehow not altogether normal and trustworthy. Nevertheless, the men who on this account are contemned as eccentric, or condemned as fanatics, or accused as impostors, are the men who have brought whatever little light there is in the dark life of mankind.

It takes courage to face the jeers and jibes of the populace with the sheer statement of the mission or call, of the "sending." What proof can a man with a mission adduce to convince the doubting-masses beyond the simplest statement of so mystic a fact? In olden times, men with a mission were expected to produce some supernatural feat, a miracle—something, as the very term denotes, to be gaped at by the crowd—but a miracle has never proved anything, either the worshipfulness of a god or the worth of a man; so much so that the Bible itself found it necessary to warn the people against false prophets, who might perform miracles just as wonderful as the heaven-sent messenger of God, without being for that reason able to share the latter's authenticity. Miracles belong to the child-age of both men and gods. When men cease to be satisfied with mere juggleries, then they ask for other than miraculous proofs of the "sending" of prophet or leader. They ask for moral proofs. Can men with a mission furnish such a proof?

The mere fact of the stir of the divine call within them should be sufficient; but such a fact will not be accepted as evidence by the crude minds who still hunger for miracles—miracles, of course, of the cruder type. For this fact of the divine call is in itself the greatest miracle, if rightly understood and reverently accepted. The greatest miracle is the appearance on the earth of a man heaven-sent. But how can such a man prove to the satisfaction of the masses that he has received his mission from a higher than human source? That is the question; and it is not easily answered. We might say that there must be something irresistible in the simple, sincere statement of a true man, who has the courage, no matter how bitter the taunts of his hearers, to announce that he is one of the few that are "sent." If such a statement cannot carry its own weight and furnish its own evidence, I do not know what will. The very manner of such an announcement, the voice, the mien accompanying it, the conviction welling up from it as if from awful depths, should be ample demonstration of its divine sanction. For, I do not think, that these things can be simulated. Not even the most consummate actor, or the most artful impostor, can successfully imitate the accents of a sincere, God-inspired passion. But, again, the ability to detect the note of sincerity and divinity depends on the state of the people's spiritual development; and the people, on the whole, are more apt to be fooled by the impostor than carried away by the prophet.

The people who lived in the time of Moses, listened to the ten spies rather than to Joshua and Caleb. Twelve men of Israel were chosen to go on the mission of exploring Canaan, but of these twelve men there were only two with a real sense of mission, with the genuine stir of the divine call in their breast. Yet, who had the ears of the populace? The ten, not the two. The high courage that spoke out of Joshua's voice, the prophetic fire that kindled in his eye, seemed scarcely sufficient to still the unbridled passion of the people that stood under the influence of the demagogues; and scarcely was a great disaster averted by a minor one. This is a telling example of how men with a mission fare in this unmoral world of ours.

Nevertheless, the best of us must not give up hope. Men with missions, and with the urgent, irresistible sense of their missions, have never been wanting. And though their numbers were few, and though their individual fate was always sad, the wonder of it is that the mission was accomplished in God's own time: and that is all that men with a mission consider. Selflessness is among the high moral evidences of the authenticity of such men. Do you see a man, who possesses the supreme grace of obliterating himself, and who, regardless of danger to himself, engages all his faculties single-mindedly in the work of promoting the common-weal? There can be no doubt of the sending of such a man. The work of most men of ordinary stature is of such a nature that it leaves the largest part of their being untouched. Some one faculty is put to work, some one aspect of life emphasized above all others: this is the sure mark of self-seeking. The reason is that the self, in order to fulfil itself abundantly, goes necessarily beyond its own boundaries; or, let us say somewhat paradoxically, the Self is larger than the self. If then a man is seen who in his work identifies himself with the cause of mankind, and in so doing strains (as indeed he must) every God-given power of mind, heart and soul towards the accomplishment of his mission, giving evidence of a richly endowed and lavishly self-bestowing nature, be sure he is among those who came to this earth with a troubling call in their breast.

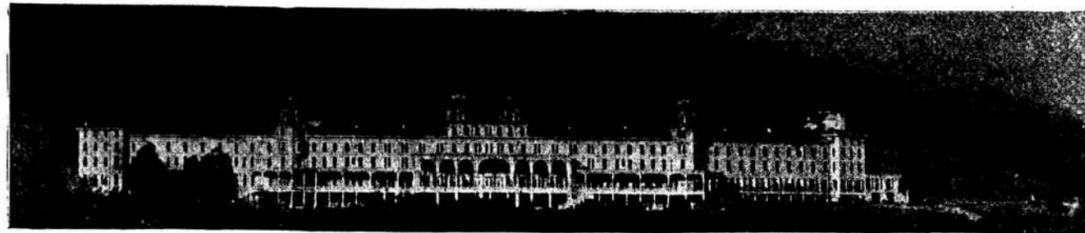

They walk among us, these rich natures, coruscating at every facet of their being, yet they are often unseen, or if seen, unconsidered, nay scorned. They bear on their forehead the mark of being fated. Who can tell of the pressure and passion of the divine "sending" in their bosom, which urges them forward, all odds despite, to tread the way of sacrifice in order to redeem the world? And if no one heeds the mark, and if no one cares, out of the pressure of the divine in their troubled heart will spring nevertheless the power that unlocks for man the gates of the Promised Land.

PERSONALITIES

OUR Friendly Informer was idling away some spare minutes by glancing through the out-of-town papers, retrieving them one by one from the waste basket. Suddenly he seemed arrested in his lazy scanning and murmured reminiscently: "Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith." And thereafter Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith formed the basis for a long chain of anecdotes, in which Arthur Hopkins, the noted theatrical producer, Elmer Rice, the playwright, Chazan Kantrowitz, the late J. P. Solomon, founder of the HEBREW STANDARD, Louis Mann, Robert Edeson, Clara Lippman, Ellen Burg, Gus Schlessinger, author of "Cohen at the Telephone," and Barney Bernard, each play a role. Let us therefore have Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith entertain you by proxy this week and if you are somewhat wearisome of our constant reiteration of things theatrical give thanks that only ten people of the theatre will be mentioned hereunder.

Our Friendly Informer leaned back in his chair and began:

"Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith is a woman you really should know more about."

Agreeing with him, he continued: "In acquainting you with Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith let me follow the method used by Elmer Rice who borrowed an idea from the movies and wrote a play backwards ('On Trial'). Incidentally, Rice, known originally as Riezenstein, was only twenty-one when he wrote the play that brought him his first real bank account, helped Arthur Hopkins on the way to fame, for 'On Trial' was Hopkin's first success as a producer. While speaking of Hopkins let me indulge in an aside and suggest that you look him up. Follow the Trail, young man follow the Trail!

"Well, to resume, about thirty years ago or more one of our most popular 'juveniles' was Charles Dickson. Dickson, whose real name is Doblin, was a New Yorker, and inaugurated a future custom by starting his career as a choir boy. He was a little red-headed kid and sang in the Chrystie Street synagogue, in the early seventies.

"Presiding over the choir in which young Doblin sang was the Rev. Jacob Kantrowitz, probably the best cantor New York has known. And I say this without hesitation, for as a singer Kantrowitz had a better and sweeter voice than our famous Rosenblatt or any of the other later day group of synagogue singers who have managed to commercialize what was once a strictly sacred calling. Crowds filled the schul when Kantrowitz sang and marvelled at his sweet tenor tones.

"This cantor was a tall, handsome man with a full black beard. He was actually saintly in appearance, as he was in his life and practice. He was pious to the 'nth degree and obeyed both the spirit and the letter of the Jewish Law. He was born in Russian Poland and as a youth appeared before the European royalty as one of the "Russian Court Singers" an organization which created a furore throughout England and the continent in those days. Here you may see that the "Chauve Souris," the present rage of New York, and the fashion for Russian art is a case of history repeating itself. Kantrowitz's father and several brothers were members of this company and while appearing in Manchester, England, on one occasion, he was the sabbath guest of Mr. Ephraim Solomon, the president of the local congregation. The singer fell in love with Solomon's daughter Jane, and later married her. Her younger brother was the J. P. Solomon who became the founder and editor of the HEBREW STANDARD. I have recently seen a clipping from the London Jewish Chronicle of 1846 describing the Solomon Kantrowitz nuptials wherein the reporter, stated that the feature of the wedding was the extemporaneous address of the bride's little eight-year-old brother Jacob. Even at that early age "Jay Pee" as his friends later called him, displayed those oratorical gifts which became so well-known in the New York Jewish Community in years after.

"While still in his prime Kantrowitz's voice suddenly gave out and he forsook his vocation. He died about thirty years ago, honored by all who knew him. His widow followed him about a decade ago.

"To return to Doblin. He became stage struck and got a small part with a stock company. He changed his name to Charles Dobson, but discovering that another actor already bore that name he became Charles Dickson. A few old-timers will recall that at the first fair held for the benefit of the Actors Fund of America at the Madison Square Garden in New York, Dickson was voted the most popular actor in America and received a diamond-studded watch as material token of the honor. He became a member of Daniel Frohman's Lyceum Theatre Stock Company when the Lyceum Theatre was located where the Metropolitan building now towers. Dickson appeared in 'Men and Women' and all the other Belasco and DeMille successes. Dan Frohman is still in the public eye. Dave Belasco was then a budding playwright and had not yet touched the directorial glory which is his today. De Mille died a few years ago, survived by his son, Cecil, who is the artistic head of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation. Incidentally this gigantic film producing corporation was organized by Frohman who was active in its councils until a recent merger.

"In time Dickson left the Lyceum company and became a star on his own account. For some seasons he appeared in 'Other People's Money' and then he produced 'Incog,' which was a sensational success. The theatre-goers of the present day who are awed by names may be surprised to learn that in Dickson's support were two young actors who were destined to achieve great fame. They were Louis Mann and Robert Edeson. These two, with Dickson played the parts of young lovers and opposite them were three very pretty young ladies, Lillian Burkhardt, Clara Lippman and Ellen Burg. Soon the matrimonial bee started to buzz actively in 'Incog,' for not only were the sextette stage lovers but they eventually went a step further and Lillian Burkhardt became Mrs. Dickson, Clara Lippman Mrs. Mann and Ellen Burg Mrs. Edeson. The last named had appeared some years earlier on the German stage at the Irving Place Theatre under the management of Heinrich Conried, who later became the manager of the Metropolitan Opera House.

"Mrs. Edeson died a few years ago. Clara Lippman Mann made a hit as 'The Laughing Girl,' and has since collaborated in many of her husband's plays, and recently with Samuel Shipman in 'Nature's Nobleman.' Dickson and Lillian Burkhardt appeared together at Keith's Union Square Theatre in a vaudeville sketch that became a classic, 'The Salt Celler.' They were one of the first teams to desert the legitimate stage and begin the great exodus to vaudeville.

"In the 'Incog' company there was a young man who played a comedy character part, that of an old German doctor in a lunatic asylum. He had been well-known to New Yorkers as an amateur entertainer under his real name, Gus Schlessinger. Schlessinger was a crayon artist by profession and whenever a fraternal organization held an affair in Terrace Garden—then the rendezvous of Jewish society—Schlessinger was requisitioned. He could tell a Jewish dialect story in an inimitable way and originated all the material he used. Schlessinger took 'Yorke' for a stage name and while playing in 'Incog' composed a monologue which described the experience of a certain Mr. Cohen who wished to inform his landlord that during a terrific windstorm the previous night his shutter had blown down. Yorke thought nothing of the thing and Louis Mann and the other members of the company memorized it for use in after-dinner stories while on the road. Yorke never thought of copy-righting his dialogue and some years later he was astonished to discover that a young Englishman had recorded his piece verbatim for an English phonograph company, under the title of 'Cohen at the Telephone.' Directly after Barney Bernard performed the same service for the American Victor Company, and to this day more records of 'Cohen at the Telephone' have been sold than of any other record made. The 'Cohen' record made a fortune in royalties for several artists, but not a penny was derived from it by the original author.

"Yorke in his amateur days had a confrere known as Ed Anspacher and these two doubled up as Yorke and Adams and appeared in 'Bankers and Brokers,' 'Playing the Ponies,' etc. and Yorke made a tremendous hit in England as 'Abe Potash' in the first of the 'Potash and Perlmutter' plays by Montague Glass. He is again in England where he is a prime favorite. Yorke was a prudent man and many years ago, when the Bronx was a village, he invested his savings in realty in that locality and so today he is in very comfortable circumstances.

"Lillian Burkhardt and Charles Dickson agreed to sever their matrimonial alliance some years ago and the former returned to Los Angeles, her birth place, where she married a well-known business man. That she evidences an attachment for things Jewish is shown by her activities in Jewish organizations—which accounts for her mention in this clipping and these memories of her.

"Dickson later appeared in comic opera and musical comedy. He played the tenor hero in 'Madelaine,' opposite Camille D'Arville, the Marilyn Miller of her day, and his early training in Chazan Kantrowitz school came in good stead now. He also appeared as the leading man with Elsie Janis in 'The Vanderbilt Cup.' He met Carl Hoshna and with his assistance made 'Incog' into the famous musical comedy, 'The Three Twins,' which is still played throughout the country with remarkable success.

"Dickson has also appeared in the movies, playing the father in 'Are You a Mason?' which brought John Barrymore screen fame and he has been a successful movie director. At present he is living in quiet retirement in New York City and spends much of his time at the Green Room Club, which he helped to found."

Now Lillian Burkhardt Goldsmith ought to reciprocate with her reminiscences. What do you say, Mrs. Goldsmith? We shall be pleased to do the honors of "Personalities" for you.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

TEACH YOUR CHILDREN

Dear Children:

"And ye shall teach them to your children to speak of them." "From the time that the son knows how to speak," says Rashi, "teach him the Torah commanded us, through Moses, that in this way you shall teach him to speak." Hence, it is said, when a child begins to speak his father speaks with him in the holy language, and teaches him the Torah, and if he does not do so, it is as though he buried him. For it is said, "And ye shall teach them to your children, to speak of them, etc., in order that your days may be multiplied and the days of your children." If you will do so they will be multiplied; if not they will not be multiplied, for the words of the Torah are expounded affirmatively from a negative rule, and negatively from an affirmative rule in the land which the Lord swore unto your father to give unto them. It is not written to give unto you, but to give unto them. Thus we learn of the resurrection of the dead from the Torah.

For if ye will diligently keep all this commandment. This is expressed by "shamor tishmeirum" or a warning of many. "Shemiroth," "keepings," in order that one be very careful not to forget his learning—"to walk in all his ways."

Just as He is merciful so be thou merciful; just as He performs acts of loving kindness, so perform thou acts of loving kindness, and to cleave unto him. Is it possible to say so, behold, is He not as the consuming fire, but cleave to the Disciples of the Rabbis and to the Sages, and it will be accounted unto you, as if you did cleave unto Him.

Then will the Lord drive out all these nations from before you. As ye have done what it devolved upon you to do, so will I do what it devolves upon me to do. And ye shall supplant nations greater and mightier than yourselves. Ye are mighty but they are mightier, for if Israel was a mighty nation what praise is that which he bestows upon the Amorites by saying, "and mightier than yourselves, but it means, ye are mightier than other nations, but they are mightier than you. There shall no man be able to stand up before you. This only speaks of one man, when do I learn that a nation or a family, or a woman in her sorcery are also included.

We are thus taught, because it is said, "There shall not stand up before you." Then why does it say "no man?" Even if the man is a giant like Og, the King of Bashan. The dread of you and the fear of you will the Lord your Eternal lay upon all the land, etc. The dread of you applies to those who are near, and the fear of you applies to those who are far, as He hath spoken unto you. And where did he speak? "My terror will I send before thee" (Exodus 23).

Behold I lay before you this day a blessing and a curse. That which has been said at Mount Gerizzin and Mount Ebal. The blessing, if ye will hearken, on conditions that ye hearken. And the curse if ye will not hearken, and ye turn aside out of the way which I command you this day, to go after other gods. Hence you learn that one who worships idols, turns aside from the entire way that Israel was commanded to go.

Therefore, they said, he who acknowledges idol-worship is as though he denied the entire Torah (Sifri). Thou shall put the blessing upon Mount Gerizzin, as the Taragum translates it, "those who bless." Upon Mount Garizzin toward Mount Gerizzin they turned their faces and began with a blessing of the man who would not make a graven or molten image, etc. Every curse in that section, they said first in the form of a blessing. They then turned their faces towards Mount Ebal and began with a curse. For ye are about to pass over the Jordan, and the miracles that will be performed at the Jordan should be a sign to you that ye go in to take possession of the land. Ye shall utterly destroy. Hence, we learn that when one uproots idol worship he should utterly eradicate it. All the places whereon they served there, etc. And what shall ye destroy? Their gods upon the mountain. And ye shall overthrow their altars, "mizbeach," of many stones, and break their statues "matzebah" of one stone, and their groves shall ye burn with fire. That is the "asherah," the tree that they worshipped. And ye shall destroy their name by calling them nicknames expressing contempt.

Ye shall not do so unto the Lord your Eternal. To offer incense unto Him in every place, except in the place which He will choose. This is also a warning not to erase the Divine Name, nor to break a stone from the altar, or from the court. Rabban Gambiel said, "Can you imagine that the Israelites would destroy the altars, but it means, Do not act as those nations have acted in order that your sins shall not cause the Holy Temple to be destroyed." But unto the place which the Lord your Eternal may choose, etc. Even unto His habitation shall ye repair. That is the tabernacle of Shiloh.

Jabotinsky Sails for Europe

Mr. Vladimir Jabotinsky, who was in this country for seven months as a member of the Zionist delegation, sailed last Saturday on the Homeric for London where he will again assume his duties as member of the World Zionist Executive. Mr. Jabotinsky was accompanied by Mr. Bernard Stone, secretary of the delegation.

On Thursday evening, June 8, prior to his departure Mr. Jabotinsky was given a farewell reception at the Hotel Astor under the joint auspices of the United American Jewish Legionnaires and the Keren Hayesod. In addition to the guest of honor addresses were delivered by Mr. Nahum Sokolow, Col. Patterson, Dr. Alexander Goldstein, Mr. Peter J. Schweitzer, Miss Sophie Irene Loeb, Mr. Herman Conheim, Rabbi Meyer Berlin, Elias Ginsberg and Mr. D. N. Mossesoff, who was chairman of the evening.

On Friday a luncheon was tendered to Mr. Jabotinsky by the Zionist Organization of America at the Hotel Brevoort, at which were present members of the Administrative and National Executive Committee of the Zionist Organization of America and the Keren Hayesod. Addresses were delivered by Messrs. Louis Lipsky, Morris Rothenberg, Abraham Goldberg, Peter J. Schweitzer, Emanuel Neumann, Herman Conheim, who was toastmaster, and Mr. Jabotinsky.

Victory Conference in Middle West

Chicago, June 12.—Prominent Jewish bankers, lawyers, business and professional men and educators from Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Kentucky, comprising Zone 7 of the American Jewish Relief Committee fund-raising plan, met at the Standard Club yesterday to pay tribute to the leader of Zone 7, Charles Rubens, and join in a victory conference.

Jacob M. Loeb, chairman of the Chicago committee, called the conference to order and extended greetings to the delegates. After his introductory remarks he called on Mr. A. L. Saltzstein, chairman of the Wisconsin committee, who presented Mr. Rubens with an especially designed book-plate, the original etching by the well-known Chicago artist, Frederic M. Grant, and a silver paperweight. In presenting the gifts to Mr. Rubens as an expression of appreciation of his endeavors from his co-workers, among other things Mr. Saltzstein said: "I feel that in a sense I am responsible for this conference. The thought occurred to me at the conference in Detroit, and in talking the matter over with the other chairmen of Zone 7 we realized that we could only repay Mr. Rubens in a small measure for the active part he took in the Fourteen-Million-Dollar Appeal. In appointing a State chairman he pointed out to us our duties to our fellow beings in Europe who are less fortunate than we are, and I feel certain I am voicing the sentiment of every State chairman when I say that, having performed our duty, we are now better men and women."

Mr. Rubens, in accepting the gift, said: "To me this is one of the most impressive moments of my life. To see before me men and women from the ten States in Zone 7 is a sight that will long linger in my memory. I wish to express my deep, heartfelt thanks to each and every one present for this kind remembrance."

Mr. Jacob M. Loeb turned the chair over to Mr. Rubens, who presided during the rest of the conference.

Chairman Rubens asked the State treasurers to report the amount of cash realized up to date. The following was reported from the ten States:

Jewish Chaplaincy Association of New York

Hon. Louis D. Gibbs, of the County Court in Bronx county, has accepted as one of the vice-presidents of the Chaplaincy Association. His work will reach all over the Greater City.

Judge Gibbs' long experience in Jewish affairs, particularly in Bronx county, renders him an especially fit representative from that borough.

A vice-president to represent Brooklyn is still to be chosen. President Nathan J. Miller announced Sunday that plans for the incorporation of the association were proceeding, but that the actual meeting of the first Board of Directors will likely not take place until early in September because of the absence of so many from the city.

The Chaplaincy Association represents every element in Jewish religious life and will seek to accomplish a thorough regulation of the needs of persons in public hospitals as well as inmates in reformatories and penal institutions.

BROOKLYN NOTES

Closing Exercises of Congregation Mt. Sinai Schools

Very impressive exercises marked the adjourning session of the Hebrew and Religious Schools of Congregation Mt. Sinai, 305 State street, Brooklyn, last Sunday.

One of the features of the exhibition of work done by the pupils of the school was the reading of an essay on Jewish history written by a student of the post-confirmation class. All who heard the paper read agreed that it bore the marks of a scholarly and analytical mind. Other appropriate recitations were offered and musical exercises were led by the cantor.

Rabbi Alexander Basel, under whose able and efficient leadership the school was conducted, reviewed the work of the year and exhorted all the workers of the School Board to increase their efforts for the coming year. Gold and silver medals and certificates of honor were presented to the most worthy pupils by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Congregation Mt. Sinai, and refreshments were served as a fitting conclusion to the morning's program.

CUBA WOULD WELCOME JEWISH IMMIGRATION

By LOUIS JURICK

President United Hebrew Congregation of Havana

Mr. Louis Jurick, who for the last twenty-three years has been a resident of Havana, Cuba, was a recent sojourner in this city, having come for the purpose of attending the wedding of his daughter, which took place a few weeks ago. Mr. Jurick is a native of Jassy, Roumania, and is at present a successful merchant in Havana. During his stay in the Antilles he has never lost his love for Judaism nor his interest in his less fortunate brethren. He is president of the United Hebrew Congregation of Havana, and as Cuba's chairman of the Employment Bureau of the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society of New York he comes in close contact with the many Jewish immigrants constantly arriving in that country. In view of the present muddled immigration conditions here and the fact that large bodies of immigrants are constantly being landed in Cuba a reporter of the Hebrew Standard thought it well worth while to obtain a first-hand statement of actual conditions in Cuba and what were the possibilities of absorbing more consignments.

"Cuba pursues an open-door policy and welcomes every Jewish immigrant," was Mr. Jurick's first statement. "Cuba," he continued, "is an ideal place for them on account of the kindness of its people, its climate and its commercial possibilities, and it offers unlimited possibilities for the future, but the immigrants today in Cuba, and mainly in Havana, are going through the hardest time any immigrant ever went through on account of not finding a Jewish community, as they would find in other places, where there are Yiddish-speaking people. Cuba has no organization that can count 100 members of all classes that must supply relief for more than 2,000 immigrants. There are perhaps from ten to twenty people in all who are willing to do some work for them, and the few that are doing any work have their hands full.

"The only New York organization that has a representative in Cuba and is at present helping them with immediate limited relief is the Joint Distribution Committee of New York. But Cuban immigrants present such a problem that not only relatives must take an interest in but also every organization in the United States that is doing such work. Organizations in other parts of the world should also not forget these immigrants.

"As those immigrants land in Havana they have no relatives or other people that speak their language to give them first aid they find no facilities for following their customs in regards to religion. There are hundreds of children that are in need of preparation for the municipal schools. There are no facilities for Kashruth such as they are accustomed to. Many young girls need to be prepared for work at a trade to earn their own living. There are many women that give birth to children in the different hospitals who are not able to speak the language of the people around them, and men and children also find themselves sick and in the same conditions. There are physicians, dentists, lawyers, etc., that must do manual labor on account of not being able to speak the native language and get the right of that country for the practice of their professions.

"The United States has always had organizations for helping such people, and now, while immigrants are limited in coming into America, they concentrate themselves in Havana, where it would only be proper that each organization have a representative in that city and establish branches there as well as their established branches in Europe. As soon as they would make those immigrants self-supporting they would help the relatives in Europe direct.

"There are charitable institutions like the Baron Hirsch Society and other similar ones which would find a great deal of work in our country at present by establishing schools for agricultural and industrial enterprises that would benefit those immigrants in becoming self-supporters, as well as those who are investing with them, because Cuba offers the best of commercial opportunities for the future. Due to the present crisis those immigrants must have relief at once, and if it were not for the Joint Distribution Committee supplying some limited relief the situation would have been worse.

"Even those immigrants that arrived with sufficient funds to support themselves also need assistance on account of not being able to speak the language of the country and not finding any of their countrymen to assist them.

"Cuba never had a population of Jews, and it would be an ideal place for 500,000 of them, providing they receive assistance at the beginning, especially at the present time, when Cuba is going through a crisis on account of the drop in sugar from 24 cents to 1½ cents per pound.

"We need a few good Schochtim," continued Mr. Jurick, "and it is strange that we are unable to get them. And speaking of Schochtim," he went on, "I think chicken farming offers about the best opening for newcomers. Chickens bring good prices; they are not hard to raise and there is always a ready market for them. We need an organization like the Industrial Removal Office or the Baron de Hirsch Society not only to locate these people on farms, but to provide them for the first year or so until the first crops mature and they can get a good start. If that eventuates, then I am certain that Cuba will eventually have a large and prosperous colony of co-religionists who, like their forefathers of old, will again be tillers of the soil."

THE WELL-NOURISHED CHILD IS LEAST APT TO CATCH DISEASE

It is the undernourished child that is most apt to catch one of the many diseases to which children are susceptible. Your child may have all he can eat but still be undernourished. That is because he may be eating food which does not properly nourish him. If he is not growing as fast as he should—if he is not filled out—if his eyes are hollow and dark—if he is not making the progress in school that he should make—the chances are that he is lacking in nourishment. It is the well-nourished child that is free from disease and is able to make the best progress.

Thousands upon thousands of children need special attention between the ages of four to sixteen. They need food which is particularly nourishing. They need food which will bring them to normal and enable them to become strong and vigorous and resist disease.

To the parents of these children we strongly recommend Borden's Eagle Milk. The finest of milk and the best of sugar scientifically blended and prepared, it enables the undernourished child to rapidly take on the weight which it must have to be normal and healthy. It is real economy for all parents to see that their children are properly built up to resist disease because it is cheaper to keep a child well than to get it well.

Borden's Eagle Milk is wholesome, nourishing food. Children like it. It is very wholesome spread on bread or toast. It makes a wonderful drink, mixed with the right amount of water. Some like it hot. Some like it cold. Some like it mixed with a little cocoa or chocolate. It makes wonderful cakes and ice cream. You can prepare it in many, many ways, all of which will help you bring your children into a condition of perfect nourishment.

For three generations Borden's Eagle Milk has been the one great American milk. It is always pure and wholesome. It is especially suited for the infant feeding and for the development of the undernourished child. Cut out the coupon in this advertisement and mail it to The Borden Company, and they will send you, free of charge, what you want, either instructions in your own language for feeding your baby, a baby book, or a recipe book telling you how to make tasty dishes with Eagle Milk. Ask for by name what you would like to have. This service is for you, merely for the asking.

Joint Distribution Committee with American Relief Administration in Adult Feeding Program in Ukraine

Seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars have been appropriated by the Joint Distribution Committee for the feeding of adults in the Ukraine, which it will do jointly with the American Relief Administration in accordance to an agreement between the two organizations. The agreement provides that one-half of this sum, $375,000, is to be devoted exclusively to the feeding of Jews. The balance is for the combined work of both organizations in certain sections of the Ukraine without regard to race or religion, so that the Jews in those sections will receive their proportionate share of relief.

The adult feeding program is to be carried on in addition to the child feeding program, also conducted by these two organizations, and under which the daily needs of 850,000 children in the Ukraine will be met by July 1.

The principles of the adult feeding program were agreed upon by Secretary Herbert Hoover, chairman of the American Relief Administration, and Lewis Strauss, acting chairman of the Russian Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee, and was developed in detail at a conference in London between Edgar Rickard and Walter Lyman Brown of the American Relief Administration and James Rosenberg and Dr. Joseph Rosen of the Joint Distribution Committee. Mr. Rickard, American director of the American Relief Administration, and Mr. Brown, European director, are to proceed at once to Russia together with Dr. Rosen in order to begin this work immediately. Dr. Rosen is the author of the seeding program in the Volga which has done so much to eliminate the danger of future famines in that district by the substitution of Indian corn for wheat. His plan, among other things, affected a saving of $16,000,000 to the Russian Government and reduced the freight demands on the crippled railways of that country by 200,000 tons.

The agreement provided that the American Relief Administration shall contribute a sum equal to that appropriated by the Joint Distribution Committee for adult feeding in the Ukraine, making the total sum available for that purpose $1,500,000; the Joint Distribution Committee is to have a special organization, the Ukraine under the supervision of the American Relief Administration, which will purchase and ship food as required by the Joint Distribution Committee.

Reports from the Ukraine indicate terrible conditions, especially among the refugees who are filling all the principal cities, and this new feeding program will make possible, immediately, a great relief effort among thousands of these unfortunates.

In addition to the $750,000, the Joint Distribution Committee appropriated at its last meeting $250,000 additional for clothing and $75,000 for institutions, making the total appropriation at that

Lithuanian Jews Victims of the "Black Hand"
 Kovno (Jewish Press Association).—Rich Jews of Lithuania are constantly receiving threatening letters in which they are asked for large sums of blackmail. One Jewish estate owner received such a letter and the police advised him to place the named sum at a certain place, and one young peasant was arrested. The arrested one refused to talk, but in the meanwhile the Jew had received another letter, in which he was informed that he had been sentenced to death. This letter was signed "The Black Hand."

CORRESPONDENCE

Denying the Jew a College Education Editor Hebrew Standard:—

Day by day the bitter truth is revealed that the Jew, not only the common, ordinary Jew, but the intellectual Jew, or the one aspiring to intellectually and education, is being ostracized by the majority of the snobs in the gentile world of our United States.

The young Jew and Jewess, after having qualified to enter the arena where the war for existence is being fought, find that they are discriminated against. Witness the many "ads" to which the qualifications "Christian" or "American" is appended. This discrimination goes so far as to deny to the born American Jew or Jewess the title "American."

The same discrimination is being felt in clubs, summer resorts and lately, too, in colleges and halls of learning.

The Jews, while keenly feeling and resenting this discrimination, have nevertheless taken the matter philosophically; nay, have heaped coals of fire on the heads of gentiles by giving preference to gentile girls or gentile young men, seeking positions, rather than to those of their own! I am also informed that more Fords are being bought by Jews than by gentiles. And as to hotels, the Jews have succeeded in buying off those hostleries where formerly they were not wanted, and are enjoying themselves and feeling more at home in their own company.

But when it comes to refusing the Jew admission to the halls of learning, he is touched to the very core, and his resentment knows no bounds. Of course, there are enough Jewish scholars and Jewish money to build universities of their own, but the Jew reveres "history." He knows that a new-baked college or university can not compete in prestige with Yale, Harvard and Columbia. And have not rich Jews, too, contributed to, and have they not helped to endow, these colleges? And shall their children or those of their kin be barred from claiming one of these cherished universities as their alma mater?

If it were not for these "prestiges," I would say to my brethren, the Jews, do as the Catholics! Build colleges of your own! Let these "venerable" colleges alone! Leave them to their own decay. For deteriorate they must. Antiquity is indeed a prestige, provided its brow is adorned by the garlands of youth and progress.

Where did all this pronounced enmity to the Jews come from in this country so suddenly? I believe it is the outcome of the chaos engendered in the late World War. It was brought over to America by the "Russian" refugees of the old "czaristic" regime, who, finding themselves penniless, have laid their misfortune at the door of the Jews.

Because Bolshevism has among its votaries some Jews, ergo, all the Jews are Bolshevists! And the credulous American, pitying and helping those refugees, has unconsciously lent his ear to their slandering of the Jews, and thus has the soil been made ready for anti-Semitism in our glorious land of liberty!

Shall we countenance it? Shall we permit it to go on? Shall a Jewish midshipman at the Naval College of Annapolis suffer the indignity of having his name omitted designedly from its class-book? Shall the navy of the United States be in the hands of a "society" clique, or be officered by men of merit and competence?

This last-mentioned outrage reported in the newspapers, caps the climax! It is the duty of every American in whose veins runs red blood to protest against it.

And to my brethren, the Jews of America, I say, forbear! Trust the good sense of the American people to do justice! No use to get overexcited! Of course, it hurts. It touches the very core of our hearts. For in God we trust, and education is our inheritance, and shall the halls of American institutions of learning be shut against our children? And when they are admitted, shall they become objects of ridicule and derision? It hurts to the very depths of the soul; nevertheless, I say, let us trust the American people to deal with this hydra of anti-Semitism. I have faith in their good sense and integrity. For, as the immortal Abraham Lincoln is supposed to have said: "You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can not fool all of the people all of the time."

Anti-Semitism in German Resorts

Editor Hebrew Standard: Is it not about time that the flood of printed foolishness concerning Germany cease? Anti-Semitism in that country is bad enough in all conscience without such a wild exaggeration as that published in an editorial in your esteemed paper of last week, wherein it is stated that "before the war each summer hundreds of German resorts and watering places advertised their advantages as 'Judenrein.'" I have resided in Germany off and on for twenty-five years at various summer and winter resorts and during that time encountered just two hotels where Jews were not wanted. That feature of anti-Semitism prevailed in our blessed America before the war, during the war and continues unabated to this day. As a matter of fact, there are more hotels refusing Jewish patronage in the State of New York alone than in all Germany put together. J. M. Newport, R. I., June 14.

THE PASSING SHOW

By HAROLD BERMAN

(Copyright, 1922, by National Jewish Press Association, Inc.)
Sculpture and Pigs

A Polish sculptor, who has gained well-deserved fame through his ability of giving embodiment to the past sorrows of his nation by means of contorted figures in marble and bronze, a man blessed by a bountiful nature with the rare gift of giving tongue to stone and convert bronze into a living elegy of a nation's sorrows and despairs, has now become married to an American woman and, simultaneously with that romantic act, has announced his intention of another and more prosaic one.

This poet who, in the manner of the ancient Egyptians, has written his elegies in enduring stone, is, according to his newly-made plans, about to renounce his exacting mistress, Art, and turn to the raising of pigs for the American glutton. "Sculpture," said this artist, "isn't very profitable, but those who raise pigs make a lot of money," which is neither a new discovery nor a very artistic sentiment.

The pig plays a respectable part in the repertoire of the nation's economy, plays the first violin in the orchestra of the world-power at the present day. In the early stages of the World War Mr. Hoover predicted that "the pig will win the war," and he proved to be a prophet who, as ever, goes without honors in his own country. For didn't the French politician and American profiteer win everything that was to be won in the war and the days following it? Pig-killers on a large scale have bought an endless number of foreign counts and barons for their daughters, have endowed opera houses, art institutes and have had themselves elected to board of education and ambassadorships while the screeching squeals of their victims could be heard in the hubbub and clamor that follows everyone who chooses to follow a path not blazed by these arbiters of our thought and action.

All this our sculptor friend no doubt beheld with his gifted vision, and he, the dreamer, evinced for once the grasp of the practical man by letting go of the brush and taking a firm hold of the porcine, cloven foot, which is both the symbol of a delicacy as well as of wealth. And there being no further need of hanging Poland's lyre by the waters of Babylon, why may not an honest sculptor turn an honest penny in a thoroughly honest, if prosaic, way?

But there is still one puzzle left in my brain after all this cogitation. Were the dreams of the Jew to be realized in the near future, would some of our own poets and artists go and do likewise? I am beginning to think that it would not at all be an unbearable calamity!

He Whom God Loves, Etc.

Hot on the heels of the Harvard kiss comes the affectionate hug of the Annapolis Naval Academy. After the "no more Jews" order (decided on in secret conclave, of course, but which became known to the outside world through the clumsy spilling of the beans by some underling of a great, world-famous university, has come the open and brazen insult heaped upon a Jewish youth who admittedly stood near the head of his class and did not even give the excuse of his behavior all through his four-year residence at the academy for being socially objectionable or, as it is delicately termed in clubland, "not clubable."

He was a native American, of good, quiet ways and average manners, and in his studies he ranked above the average. But the budding officers of the War College and Naval Academy are exhorted to be both "an officer and a gentleman," and how in the world can a Jew be either? In the time of war, when danger threatens, or is supposed to do so, he may be good enough to do the job, and then, in the stress of the common danger, you may for the moment overlook the fact of his low social status and associate with him and even mess with him. But how can you be oblivious of his pariah level in the piping times of peace, when your life is one round of parades and social lionizing?

Personally I am inclined to lose but little sleep over this latter episode, and if it were a toss-up between being excluded from Harvard or the Naval Academy (that is, if Jewish boys were compelled to give up the one of them), I'd cheerfully vote to be denied the privileges of the latter and enjoy the uncircumscribed run of the school where the arts of peace are taught and where the humanities flourish.

But these weak, sentimental animadversions I am quite certain do not burden the cranial cavities of the pupils who so love to echo the loving tones of the Polish anti-Semites—"On to Jerusalem!"

Belloc Once More

I must apologize to my readers for dragging this name, so reminiscent of our ancient friend Balaak, the consort of Balaam and his famous talking ass (where was Barnum in those days?), once again into our columns. But on re-reading his latest screed on "The Jews," my eye alighted on another gem of sparkling beauty, and I cannot simply forego the pleasure of quotation verbatim.

Says our friend: "If a man said, 'What a poet Heine was, and how thoroughly Jewish was his irony,' and the adjective Jewish acted like a pistol shot in a room full of people, could anything be more absurd, when you can talk to the Irish about the Irish and to the German of the Germans?"

But Mr. Belloc has overlooked the fact—or wished to overlook it—that there is a distinction with a difference between the two. The name German or Irishman has not been—at least not up to the outbreak of the great war—a term of reproach. The bearer of the name has not been hounded, pounded, proscribed or persecuted. He has not

Always Up to Date

The Antlers, Haines Falls, N. Y., expects a big season this year, having many improvements that have brought the house into the forefront of up-to-date mountain hotels. Its splendid situation, its spacious veranda and grounds add to its attractiveness. Hot and cold water in all rooms properly furnished and an excellent Kosher cuisine make for comfort and happiness. It is the fourth season under the management of the owner, Mr. I. Schneeweiss, who has been extremely successful and made the Antlers as famous as in the past, and it certainly has enjoyed an honorable history. Mr. Schneeweiss has made large expenditures to keep the Antlers in the pink of condition and his patrons appreciate his progressiveness. He will continue to show every courtesy and attention to his guests whose welfare are his first consideration.

been made the target of the arrows of the persecutor and professional hater, while the Jewish cognomen was ever a symbol for the letting loose of the floods of all that is evil in the human heart. And the history of the Jew for the past 2,000 years is written in torrents of red human blood.

$50,000 Additional for Trade Schools in Poland Appropriated by J. D. C.

Fifty thousand dollars appropriated by the Joint Distribution Committee at its last meeting will make possible the opening of from 12 to 15 additional trade schools for Jewish lads in Poland.

This appropriation, which supplements $25,000 already given for similar purposes, was made in compliance with a recommendation by Herbert H. Lefman, and in accordance with an agreement made by him on behalf of the Joint Distribution Committee with the Jewish Colonization Association (J. C. A.) of Paris.

By this agreement the $50,000 appropriated by the Joint Distribution Committee will be utilized for the establishment of these schools, and the J. C. A. will maintain them for the next three years.

The courses at these schools are subject to the approval of the Reconstruction Committee of the Joint Distribution Committee.

Oldest American Congregation to Build Community Centre

The Congregation Jeshuat Israel, which, as our readers doubtless know, is the oldest in America, has been planning for some time past to establish here a Jewish community center. It is intended to erect a building occupying a lot opposite the Touro Synagogue, a lovely locality in this loveliest of American cities.

The congregation, in spite of a limited membership, has raised about $35,000, but requires $10,000 more. There is a great need for such a center, not only for the benefit of the young men and young women of the community, but also to provide a resort for the Jewish soldiers and sailors who frequently sojourn for a longer or shorter period in Newport.

Further details concerning the project may be obtained by addressing the president of the congregation, Nathan David, Newport, R. I., or Samuel Adelson, secretary.

Welfare Board to Reopen Training School for Center Workers

The Jewish Welfare Board will again conduct a training course for Jewish Center workers similar to the one which was so successfully conducted by the board in the summer of 1921.

There are a number of vacancies at present in Y. M. H. As. and other institutions affiliated with the board and, pursuant to its policy, only men with the necessary training will be recommended. The board is now recruiting suitable men for the course, and applications are being received at the national office, 352

Fourth avenue, New York city. It is seeking primarily those who have already had some experience in Jewish communal work and have strong Jewish sympathies and who intend making social work their profession.

Sessions will be held in New York city and will begin July 31 and end September 19. In addition to the regular students, the course will be open to others who are at present engaged in Jewish center work. There will be no charge for tuition and every effort will be made to place in positions those completing the course satisfactorily.

Prof. Julius Drachsler, who conducted the course last year, will again act as director through the courtesy of the Bureau of Jewish Social Research, of whose staff he is a member.

Hungarian Jews of America Honor Bishop

Bishop Desider Balthazar of the Presbyterian Church in Hungary was the guest of honor at a meeting of the Federation of Hungarian Jews in America held last Wednesday evening at Little Hungary, 257 East Houston street.

It was because Bishop Balthazar had shown so much interest in the welfare of the Jews at home that American Jews thus honored him. Delegates from more than one hundred Jewish organizations throughout New York State were there to greet Dr. Balthazar, who is known in Hungary as "the Fighting Bishop." It is said of him that he "never faltered or failed to defend the innocently oppressed Jews or laborers in Hungary." The bishop is also known as "the soldier-priest."

Bishop Balthazar came to America to get help for the establishment of a new college in Debrecen, which is his own town. There the three per cent. restriction of Jewish scholars will be abolished.

The bishop is also combatting the present system of elections in Hungary and certain features of the administration of government affairs. Dr. Samuel Buchler was chairman of the meeting.

SEMENOV'S BANDS STILL TERRORIZING JEWS

By G. A. KARMITZ

(Note.—Gen. Semenov's bands, headed by Merkulov, have taken possession of a great stretch of territory in the Far East. The position of the Jews inhabiting that territory is a dreadful one, as will be seen by the reader of this most interesting correspondence.—Editors.)

(Special Correspondence of the Jewish Press Association)

The Jewish population of the Wladi-wostok region where now for a space of two years the reactionary hordes of Merkulov and Semenov have held sway is living in a state bordering on terror, as well as an eternal fear of pogroms.

Before the Easter holidays of 1921 when the Reactionary generals made preparations to seize the reigns of government in this part of the former Russian Empire, the Jewish inhabitants of the region passed many days in abject terror and uncertainty.

Simultaneously, and as if by a pre-arranged signal, all the reactionary organs of the region began a pogrom agitation and a call to annihilate the "murderers of Russia" who have brought misery upon the fatherland, desecrated the faith, assassinated the God anointed Czar, etc., in the old approved style.

Similar proclamations were posted all over the streets, a pogrom agitation was carried on in the public bazaars, and all other places where masses of people usually congregate.

The feelings of the populace become strained and abnormal—the proclamations were quite explicit in naming the day of reckoning of the people against their enemies—so that heroic means had to be adopted to avert the threatened catastrophe.

Then revolutionary government, despite the acknowledged weakness, yet possessed certain measure of power which was justly feared by the but-partly organized bandits, and its categorical declaration that it will mercilessly suppress all counter-revolutionary attempts had the desired effect.

The official Jewish bodies—the local community and the representatives of the American Joint Distribution Committee—on their part did whatever was possible. They approached the consular representatives of the foreign powers and asked for their help. Thanks to these timely means, the Passover passed off without any untoward incident and nothing more serious than anticipated fears.

But the situation became much worse since the revolutionary government was overthrown and the power passed into the hands of Kappel and Semenov and their adjutants, amongst whom the Black Hundred representative Spiridon Merkulov was the leader and head; one of the main tenets of this new government—which exists only thanks to the Japanese intervention and not by the wish of the Russian people—is anti-Semitism which it considers as the strongest weapon in its fight on the Bolsheviks.

Since the day when Merkulov has seized the power (May 26, 1921) the Jews of the region have had no rest, and have ever stood in fear of threatened pogroms and Hooligan outbreaks.

The representatives of the Jews do attempt from time to time, when their position becomes especially threatening, to appeal to the government. There were also cases when the government had actually made the promise not to permit any excesses against the Jews. But these promises were never of much value and no one took them seriously; neither the Jews whom these words were supposed to pacify nor the reactionary military men under the control of these officials.

At best, a quibus would be put to the agitation for but two or three weeks when it would be renewed once more, and with renewed vigor.

The anti-Semitism in the Wladiwostok region, or to be more exact, in the Wladiwostok Government circles, is so widespread and so deep-rooted that even the highest officials make no secret of it; on the contrary, they are making serious attempts to inoculate with the anti-Semitic virus the local Japanese, which agitation leads to serious results.

As an illustration the following facts, of most recent occurrence, will serve very well.

A few days ago the chief of the Wladi-wostok Government, P. Merkulov, granted an interview to the correspondent of the Japanese newspaper, "Aladiva Nipa," and in the course of the conversation delivered himself of the following sentiments:

"The Jewish Government (of Chita) is losing the confidence of the populace, and I can safely predict that the power of the Jew-communists will crumble within three months."

Over the 2d of May Merkulov came out with an open incitement to a pogrom in a speech delivered in the so-called Parliament, a speech which ended in a flamboyant peroration in which the speaker called upon his followers "to free the suffering fatherland from the yoke of the criminals, the power of embattled Israel." On the 5th of May the Wladiwostok newspapers announced an edict issued by the same Merkulov in which he forbade the designation of the Red Soviet Government as "Russian" but ordered that it must hereafter be termed the "Power of Braunstein and Lenin, the power of murderers and fighting Jews." In this edict we find among others, the following: "As the essence of the power of these universal criminals the Bolsheviks consists of Poles who are not Russian but Jews, their actions are not Russian and as far removed from her interests.

"Similar phenomena appeared of late also at Nikolak-Ussuraisk where at Easter-tide proclamations were widely distributed calling upon the people to save Russia by means of good-sized pogrom on the Jews."

There are about five or six thousand Jews in the realm ruled over by Merkulov, and these had up to about a year ago a well-organized and substantial community, with many economic as well as cultural institutions.

They took an active part in all Jewish movements, helped the war victims and refugees who passed through the country on their way to America, and so forth and so on.

During the past year, however, since the reactionaries assumed power, the Jews are living under the constant menace of pogroms, in an atmosphere thickly charged with anti-semitic savagery and inhumanity. Under such circumstances there can be no prospect of an organized or systematic communal work, and it is therefore no surprise to find all now in ruins, and the communities as well as Jewish cultural institutions have fallen into hopeless decay.

The Jews of the Far East, small in number as they are, are entirely defenceless. With their own limited resources they cannot even hope to offer an adequate defense against the ever-threatening danger.

Their despair is really indescribable. They cannot run away—for lack of means and a place of safety—and yet cannot stay and face the slaughterer. Their only hope lies in American Jewry. These can, by employing their political influence at Washington, do much for the amelioration of their unhappy lot.

It is to be earnestly hoped that the Jews of the Far East will not be disappointed in their hopes, and that American Jewry will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to protect their unfortunate brothers of the Far East, and to see that the disgraceful episodes of Ukraine do not repeat themselves there.

Bucharest Jews Spurn City Support for Their Schools

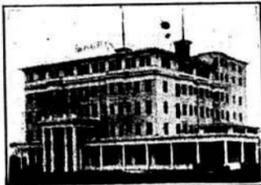

Bucharest (Jewish Press Association). —The local Jewish community has refused to accept the support for the Jewish schools offered by the town council. The council made a pretense of recognizing Jewish equality by offering support to the Jewish schools, but offered only a yearly subsidy of 6,000 lei (about $35) to all the Jewish schools. Such "support" the Jewish community rightly considered as an insult, and refused it.

An Open Letter to Dr. Robert Watson, Pastor of Second Presbyterian Church, New York City

The daily papers reported your sermon on Sunday, June 18, as follows: "We have a right to expect of the Jews in America many things, but tonight we deal principally with one thing. We ask the Jews to be sincere. Nothing can be done without sincerity." Allow me to ask you, Why have you a right to ask of the Jews many things? Why shouldn't you expect many things from Christians as well as of Jews? Why do you ask sincerity from Jews and not of Christians? Has a Christian the right to be insincere?

You say, "The Jew must be square with himself and with his neighbor and with God." Has the Christian the right not to be square with himself, with his neighbor and God? As a minister of the gospel, why don't you practice what you preach? Why do you accuse the Jewish race of insincerity? Are you square to your neighbor the Jew? Jesus, the Jew whom you call Christ, said: "Judge not lest you be judged." You say "Judaism is an incomplete religion and these things were turning Jews to Christianity." Judaism, the religion of Abraham, Moses David and Jesus, you call incomplete. If the mother religion, the religion of Jesus, whom you call Christ, is incomplete, if the religion of which Jesus said "I did not come to destroy" is incomplete, how can Christianity be complete, by destroying Judaism? You say "If the Jew at any time thinks anyone is wronged or injured because he is a Jew, then let him investigate carefully and sincerely," etc. Did you ever hear of your friend Henry Ford, the Christian, using forged documents against the Jews, and the Jews carefully and sincerely proved before the world that the documents were forged, and has Henry Ford to the present day retracted his false accusations? And your friend Henry Ford is a Christian!

You accuse the Jews openly of being insincere. You wrong them; you injure them. Is it necessary to investigate you? You declare it publicly. The Jew does not think you wronged him; he knows it. It is for you, dear Christian, to say "I wronged you; I made a mistake, my friend Jew," and you will see the Jew will be charitable and will say to you, in the words of the prophets, "Solachti, I forgive you."

The Jew will say to you, in the words of Jesus: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they are doing." But as long as you will keep up teaching un-American principles, as long as you will preach hatred against the Jew, don't tell us Jews what we have to do!

You accuse the Jews of not being reasonable because they say Kaplan, the Jew, was not treated right at the Naval Academy.

Is U. S. Senator Sutherland, from West Virginia, a Jew? Is U. S. Senator King, from Utah, a Jew? Are all the other U. S. Senators who condemned the outrage in the U. S. Senate Jews?

As a matter of fact, we Jews knew nothing about it until the Senate took it up. Is it fair for you to accuse the Jews because the Senate of the United States took it up?

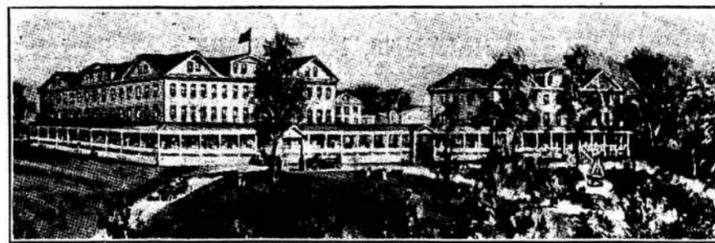

To you preachers of hatred against the Jew I say, You are sowing the seed of hatred, and you will reap the whirlwind! You are creating a monster—a Frankenstein—that you will not be able to control.

We Jews fear not, in the words of the Psalmist: "Hinei lo yonum, v'lo Yishon Shomer Israel." The Almighty does not slumber; He does not sleep; He watches over Israel. DR. L. ZWISHOHN, New York City, June 20, 1922.

U. OF A. H. C. TO SPEND $620,000 NEXT YEAR

Building of Dormitory to Begin Shortly—A Fully Equipped Gymnasium to Be a Memorial to J. Walter Freiberg

Approximately $620,000 will be spent by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations for the maintenance of its various institutions and in building activities next year. To this will be added a sum, as yet undetermined, which is to be used for the construction of an up-to-date fully-equipped gymnasium, donated by Mrs. J. Walter Freiberg as a memorial to her deceased husband, J. Walter Freiberg, late president of the union. The above budget, which calls for the largest outlay of money ever appropriated for a year's program of work by the union was adopted at the annual meeting held Sunday, June 11, at the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, Ohio, and represents a financial summary of the multifarious undertakings of the largest Jewish religious organization in this country. Some of the more important decisions arrived at during the deliberations of the Executive Board are the authorization of the expenditure of not more than $250,000 for the erection of a dormitory for students at the Hebrew Union College, the permanent establishment of a Teachers' Institute in New York City, the calling into existence of a National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods similar to the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods and the reaffirmance of the stand taken by the special committee and the president of the union in the matter of the Institute of Religion proposed by the Free Synagogue of New York City.

Because of the far-reaching effect of the decisions made the meeting of the Executive Board was the most important held within the last decade. A large number of both resident and out-of-town members attended and devoted a whole day to the consideration of the questions presented.

Appropriations for the separate departments of the union for the fiscal year beginning November 1, 1922, were apportioned as follows: Hebrew Union College, $141,300; Department of Synagogue and School Extension, $65,462; Synagogue and School Extension in Metropolitan Centers, $53,293; Executive Board, $48,318; National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods, $27,662; Union Bulletin, $24,862; National Federation of Temple Brotherhoods, $6,000, and Board of Delegates on Civil Rights, $3,600.

A report of the Hebrew Union College Dormitory Building Committee was presented at the meeting by Mr. Alfred M. Cohen, and the plans submitted by Mr. A. Lincoln Fehhheimer, architect, were discussed and subsequently adopted, with a few minor changes. According to these plans the dormitory is to be a four-story building without basement, divided into three units. The main building facing the east is to consist of two units, the third unit to be in the shape of the letter "L" on the south side of the building. The dormitory is to be placed on the south and east of the administration building. Heat is to be supplied from the basement of the administration building. The exterior building is to be designed to harmonize with the present buildings, but has purposely been made irregular in its composition in order to give it a more homelike and informal character. It is to be fireproof in construction, with the exterior walls of brick, and terra cotta trimmings, similar to the present style. The floors in the corridors, toilet rooms, bathrooms and kitchen are to be finished in cement or composition flooring. The floors in the bedrooms, living room and dining room are to be of wood. The interior finish, such as doors, baseboards, etc., are to be of yellow pine, stained.

The first floor is to contain in addition to bedrooms for eighteen students a dining room and kitchen, also a suite of rooms for the superintendent. The remainder of the building is to consist of bedrooms. Eight of these are to be double rooms for the accommodation of two students each. The remaining rooms are to be single rooms. There are to be four rooms with private baths for the use of proctors. The four floors are to accommodate 119 students, and if only three floors are finished they will accommodate 94 students. Under the portion of the building occupied by the dining room and kitchen there will be a basement for the accommodation of a laundry and two storage rooms.

The president of the Union was authorized to appoint a committee to carry out the architect's plans, empowering it to expend a sum not to exceed $250,000. Mr. Maurice J. Freiberg, who had secured the various building estimates, contributed to the final shaping of the construction plans. A resolution was adopted extending the Union's thanks and congratulations to the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods upon the splendid manner in which the latter conducted the national campaign for funds for the college dormitory and expressing the hope that it would be brought to a speedy conclusion so that the building could be erected without delay.

 A most welcome proposal and one wholly in harmony with the spirit of a great departed leader in American Judaism came in the form of a letter from Mrs. J. Walter Freiberg, which we quote here in full:
 "Cincinnati, O., June 5, 1922.
 "My Dear Mr. Shohl, President of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations.
 "The Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Hebrew Union College were foremost among the organizations in which my dear husband was always vitally interested. He was a firm believer in the thought that a healthy body is a great asset to a student.
 "Following this thought and belief of his and in his memory I desire to offer to the Executive Board of the Union a gymnasium building completely equipped, to be erected on the college grounds. This building is to harmonize in architecture with the present buildings and to the new dormitory which is to be erected."

The offer was gratefully accepted and the thanks of the Executive Board were extended to Mrs. Freiberg.
 The question of the Institute of Religion in New York, the establishment of which had been advocated by the Free Synagogue of that city, and with regard to which it had made some proposals to the Union, received the most careful attention of all present and was the subject that was in many respects the most important as well as the most interesting discussion of the meeting.
 Judge Julian W. Mack of New York had specially come to Cincinnati to represent the Free Synagogue at this meeting and to state the position of that body in the matter of establishing the Institute of Religion. Though eloquently presented, the argument of Judge Mack did not convince those present of the necessity of such a project as was contemplated by the Free Synagogue and failed to reveal any reason for a revision of attitude on the part of the Union.
 In order to help in the campaign against anti-Semitic propaganda in English speaking countries, the Executive Board authorized the bringing out of an English translation of a pamphlet dealing with the classic accusations made against the Jews, written by Dr. Herman Stack, professor of Christian theology at the University of Berlin. Dr. Jacob Z. Lauterbach and Prof. Solomon B. Frenkel, both of the Hebrew Union College, will prepare the translation.

 A proposal to amend the constitution so as to permit a change in the date and manner of meetings of the Executive Board was considered and approved. The recommendation will be submitted for action at the next biennial council of the Union.
 The consideration of the report on the synagogue pension fund was postponed till the next meeting of the Executive Board.
 The following were elected to fill the vacancies on the Executive Board: Mr. Felix Vorenberg of Boston, Mass., to take the place of Mr. Jacob R. Morse of Boston, Mass., term to expire 1923; Mr. Arnold Folk of New Orleans, La., to take the place of Mr. Sigmund Kohlman of New Orleans, La., term to expire 1923; Mr. Ben Lowenstein of Cleveland, O., to take the place of Mr. Baruch Mahler of Cleveland, O., term to expire 1925.
 Interim appointments to the Executive Board made by President Shohl during the current year were approved. They were: Mr. Ben Altheimer of New York, to take the place of Mr. Felix Warburg of New York, who declined to serve; Mr. Meier Steinbrink of Brooklyn, N. Y., to take the place of Judge Jacob Brenner of Brooklyn, deceased.

Medical Center Opened for Treatment and Prevention of Diseases

Announcement is made of the recent opening of the Medical Center, located at No. 231 West Fifty-first street, where under the supervision of competent medical authorities treatment is given to those who cannot afford the customary fees of specialists. In addition one of the aims of the Medical Center is to prevent disease as well as the spread of disease. At present two departments are operating, namely, one for the treatment of skin diseases and one for genito-urinary diseases, and other departments will be added as soon as possible.
 There will be a continuous service from 9 a. m. to about 6 p. m., and the medical profession and social service workers are requested to send to the Medical Center such patients as it can serve and are also invited to co-operate in this needed work in every manner possible.
 Dr. Joseph Broadman, editor of "The Modern Health Advocate," is one of the leading spirits in the Center, and a number of well known members of the community, including Mr. Edward R. Cohen, president of Mt. Nebo Temple, are actively co-operating.

Rabbi Julius J. Price Heads Sinai Congregation

RABBI JULIUS J. PRICE

The announcement that Sinai Congregation of the Bronx, which worships at 951 Stebbins avenue, has elected Rabbi Julius J. Price, formerly of Plainfield, N. J., as successor to Rabbi Max Reichler, recently resigned, will be hailed with delight by the many coreligionists who attend that synagogue.

Rabbi Price is a well-known scholar. He was born in Worcester, Mass., June 14, 1887. He received his elementary education in Worcester, graduating from the Classical High School. He won scholarships to Yale College and the University of Pennsylvania, but chose the latter, where he took the arts course, completing the regular course of four years in three years and receiving the A. B. degree. He then went to Johns Hopkins University, in Baltimore, where he studied Semitic languages under Professor Haupt and philosophy under Professor Baldwin and history under Professor Johnston.

In 1910 Rabbi Price came to New York City, where he received a scholarship at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America and also attended the Graduate School of Columbia University. At the same time he was associate rabbi of Congregation Anshe Emeth, which position he held for the next three years. In 1911 he received his master's degree from Columbia University, writing a thesis on "The Laws of Barter and Sale According to the Talmud." He then pursued studies at Columbia University and in 1914 received his doctor of philosophy degree from Columbia, and also graduated from the Jewish Theological Seminary.

Doctor Price, on graduation, received a call to Toronto, Canada, where he officiated for four years, returning to the United States in 1917 to continue his studies in New York City, when he was invited to occupy the pulpit of Temple Sholem of Plainfield, N. J., where he has been ever since.

Doctor Price, while in Plainfield, cleared the mortgage on the synagogue, raised funds for repairing the interior, and was instrumental in raising funds for the new parish house. The synagogue today is free and clear, as well as is the parish house. Dr. Price increased the membership from six to eighty members.

Doctor Price is a contributing member of the American Jewish Historical Society, the Jewish English Historical Society of London, the American Oriental Society, the Society for Biblical Literature and Exegesis, the English Folklore Society, the York Historical Society of Canada, as well as member of other societies.

Doctor Price is the author of the following works: "The Yemenite MS. of Pesachim," "The Yemenite MS. of Megilla," "The Yemenite MS. of Mo'ed Katon," "Jews of China," "The Laws of Barter and Sale According to the Talmud," a volume of Masonic essays dedicated to the Grand Lodge of Canada, and "Medicine in the Talmud." Doctor Price has contributed articles to the Encyclopedia of Religion and Ethics, the Open Court and Monist, of Chicago; the Expository Times of Edinburgh and a number of other scholarly magazines.

Czecho-Slovakian Pogrom Victims Demand Damages

Prague (Jewish Press Association).—The Jewish National Council of Czecho-Slovakia has demanded of the government the long-delayed payments for the pogrom victims.

At the time of the organization of the Czecho-Slovakian republic anti-Jewish outbreaks occurred at many places, when thousands of Jews were ruined. The government had then promised to make restitution, but so far has not done so.

NEWS FROM ENGLAND

Exclusive Correspondence to the HEBREW STANDARD

Sir Herbert Samuel Guest of Honor—
"The Much Chosen Race" in Court—
Kapp Caricatures—Rutenberg Scheme
Widely Discussed—Dr. Weizmann's
Great Welcome to Leeds

June 2, 1922.
The High Commissioner for Palestine, accompanied by Lady Samuel, was the guest of honor at an informal dinner at which about twenty-five of the Zionist leaders were present, on Tuesday evening last. There was little speechmaking—it was really more of a conversation. A ball was arranged in the room below by the Zionist organization, at which there was a large assembly. After the dinner Sir Herbert and Lady Samuel, Sir Alfred Mond, Bart.; Dr. Chaim Weizmann and Mrs. Steff took their seats on the platform. Dr. Weizmann occupied the chair, and he at once introduced the Minister of Health, Sir Alfred Mond said that they could justly congratulate the High Commissioner on the extraordinary success of the difficult task he had undertaken and so ably conducted. Sir Herbert Samuel said, "I consider myself fortunate and privileged to have a hand in the great undertaking of rebuilding the Holy Land." He touched on a few signs of material progress, and stated that Trans-Jordania is in a greater state of tranquility than it has been since the great war. He further expected great things from the future, but concluded by quoting Anatole France: "No man can foretell the future—not even those who make it." The Chief Rabbi was unable to be present.

An interesting case has just come before the courts in this country in which Mr. Sydney A. Moseley sought an injunction to restrain Messrs. Stanley, Paul & Co., until judgment or further order, from publishing his book, "The Much Chosen Race," in a paper cover to which he objects. The cover portrays a Jewish peddler, having four hats on his head and a tray slung from his shoulders from which he is vending toy pigs. He is holding one of the pigs in his hand, offering it for sale, and winking. The plaintiff objected that it was vulgar and offensive and likely to injure his reputation as an author, and that it was calculated to offend many of the Jewish race, to which he belonged, and to hold him up to hatred, ridicule or contempt; by the public generally and those belonging to the Jewish race in particular. Mr. Davey, for the defendants, said that the cover corresponded with the contents, which were of a satirical nature holding up the Jewish race to ridicule, and submitted that a Jew who wrote this sort of thing about his own race could have no ground of complaint about the cover. In judgment, Mr. Justice Sargent said it was impossible to describe in too strong terms the offensiveness and vulgarity of this cover, and for the plaintiff to have his name associated with it would be scandalous. He granted an injunction, as asked for, until the trial of the action or further order, and the plaintiff's costs must be his costs of the action.

An exhibition of the works of Mr. Edmund X. Kapp is being held at the Leicester Galleries this week. The works are mainly caricatures, but include some twelve very excellent drawings, in which class is "An Arrangement of Lines," which amply demonstrates the power of a single stroke of the pen, and in which he proves that it is possible to obtain an effect without the introduction of shading work. Some bolder work is shown in which charcoal is used in conjunction with the pencil. Among these one may mention as typical "The Jewess," a not altogether pleasing study; "Einstein," "Israel Zangwill" and others which all show clearly the firm stroke of the master. It is really as a caricaturist that one most admires him, and really an element of this enters into the majority of his work. In fact, there are some which are essentially caricatures of his sitters, without any claim to direct drawing. An illustration of "pose" in "Harriet Cohen at the Piano" is of this type. He has concentrated on "pose," and has arranged everything to suit: He makes the keys of the piano form a semi-circle to illustrate the point that all the notes are within equally convenient reach. To add to this he exaggerates the arms, which emphasizes his point to such an extent as to be positively ridiculous, but nevertheless conveys an immediate impression. Max Beerbohm is credited with once having said that H. G. Wells was an impossible subject for a caricature. Kapp has caricatured Wells, and gives the impression of a heavy-eyed but somewhat complaisant and corpulent figure. Some of his work is practically portrait work, excepting for facial exaggerations, but are all excellent in black and white. The exhibits, I am informed, are for sale after the show.

The Rutenberg scheme has created intense interest in all circles in this country, and practically the whole press is flooded with articles on the subject and letters are written in favor of its adoption as well as criticisms both wholly against or against parts of the scheme. The question of the concessions is being widely discussed, and in the House of Commons questions have been asked by various members. Mr. L'Estrange Malone (Labor candidate for Leyton, London E.) asked the Colonial Secretary whether he would issue a White Paper on the particulars of the concessions in Palestine granted to Mr. Rutenberg. Mr. Churchill expressed the view that he thought the expense incurred was unwarranted, but promised to place copies in the library. Mr. Malone referred to some malicious opposition organized in certain anti-Semitic circles as good ground for issuing the paper. Another member asked if the paper in the library would make it clear that the terms of this concession were negotiated between Mr. Rutenberg and the Colonial Office, and what terms specifically the Colonial Office had agreed to and are responsible for? Mr. Churchill was ready to face this matter. Colonel Wedgwood (a Labor member) asked if the right honorable gentleman had read the attack on this contract in the "Daily Mail." In reply, Mr. Churchill, amid laughter, declared that he read nothing else but attacks upon everything and everybody. Apparently the severe and absurd criticisms appearing in many journals in connection with the scheme and concessions is an organized attempt by the anti-Semite section of the public to overthrow the Zionist aims but, like other obstacles, seems to be already half overcome.

During last week end remarkable scenes of enthusiasm were witnessed in Leeds, when Dr. Weizmann visited that town. The doctor was met at the station by a guard of honor composed of Zionist Boy Scouts, and the Leeds City Prize Band played "Hatikvah." Dr. Weizmann said that words almost failed him to express his gratitude for the reception which he had received from the Jewish community. He felt that it was not he personally that deserved it, but perhaps it was due to the fact that he had the privilege of representing their cause. At the Town Hall, where a demonstration was held in the evening, the lord mayor took the chair. A letter was read from Commander Kenworthy, M. P. of Hull, who wrote expressing regret at being unable to be present, saying that "With Egypt in a state of unrest, it is more than ever necessary to insure a settled and friendly Palestine to the north of the Suez canal, and only the Zionists, I believe, can do this." Since the armistice, said Dr. Weizmann in an address, 25,000 new immigrants had entered Palestine, and they had contributed greatly towards the development of the country. £4,000,000 had been spent on the upbuilding of the country. They had put under the plow land to accommodate 2,000 settlers. They had built fifty miles of roads, two or three small railways, laid telegraph and telephone lines, built bridges, planted millions of trees and seedlings. On education over £100,000 per year was spent on 137 schools of different types, in which 13,000 children were taught by 500 teachers. He declared it the destiny of the Jews and Arabs to co-operate. They had done so before, and they could do so again. The following day he addressed a meeting at the Hotel Metropole.

Ohab Zedek Talmud Torah
The thirteenth annual examination of the pupils attending the Ohab Zedek Talmud Torah, West 116th street, New York, was held last Sunday in the presence of the rabbis, officers, members of the congregations, directors of the Talmud Torah, parents of the children and many visitors. The Sisterhood was especially well represented because the classes were originally organized under its auspices. After the various grades had been thoroughly tested in Hebrew reading, translation of the prayer book, Bible, Hebrew conversation, grammar, Bible history, religious knowledge and ceremonies of the home and synagogue, Mr. Moritz Neuman, president of the congregation, delivered an address, in the course of which he said that there is no Talmud Torah which is able to compete with Ohab Zedek for its thorough Jewish efficiency. And this he attributed to the systematic mode of teaching. Others who spoke were M. Solomon, M. Bernheim, Herman Frank, Lazarus Shapiro and the actual founder of the Talmud Torah, Morris Engleman. Medals, Hebrew books and certificates were awarded by Messrs. N. Neuman, Mr. and Mrs. M. Solomon, Mr. and Mrs. H. Frank, M. Engleman and Miss Goldie Engleman. The Ohab Zedek Sisterhood contributed special anniversary prizes. The officers of the Talmud Torah are Moritz Neuman, president; Herman Frank, chairman; Simon Kaplan, vice-chairman; Morris Solomon, treasurer; Lazarus Shapiro, secretary.

Reception to Mizrahi Delegates
A reception was given at the Broadway Central Hotel on Wednesday, June 21, in honor of Rabbi J. L. Fischman and Dr. Vigdor Schoenfeld, recently arrived in this country from Palestine. Rabbi Fischman is well known to all members of the Mizrahi throughout the world, and Dr. Schoenfeld is the inspector of all the Mizrahi schools in Palestine.

FAR ROCKAWAY NOTES

The topic of Dr. Melamed's sermon at the Shaaray Teffla Synagogue Sabbath morning will be the "Sin of Being a Jew." The discourse will deal with the dangerous anti-Jewish symptoms behind the Harvard University and the Naval Academy incidents.

The Sisterhood of the Congregation Shaaray Teffla held a delightful luncheon meeting last Tuesday at the Kensington Gardens Hotel at Far Rockaway. A very fine musical program arranged by Mrs. Blanche Bobrow was presented. Instrumental selections by a trio composed of Mr. Maurice Horodes, Mr. G. Loran and Mr. Ambrose Horodes. Several beautiful songs were rendered by Mrs. A. Hutter and Miss Rosemond. The business part of the meeting was presided over by Mrs. J. Scheinberg, president of the Sisterhood. Mrs. Cecil B. Ruskay presented a report of the year's activities. Mrs. R. H. Melamed made an appeal for the war orphans' fund, to which there was a generous response. The Sisterhood has adopted six war orphans last year and this year. Mrs. Jacob Marcuson, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, reported splendid success at the theatre party recently held.

The chairman of the luncheon was Mrs. I. Ozdoba, who was assisted by the following hostesses: Mrs. D. Feldman, Mrs. L. J. Goldberger, Mrs. Louis Roggen and Mrs. J. Scheinberg.

The Talmud Torah of the congregation continues to hold sessions every afternoon during the month of June and will establish its summer school during the months of July and August. In connection with the religious school an outdoor athletic camp will be established under the auspices of the congregation for boys between 7 and 12 years of age for the months of July and August. Children will be called for and returned home by bus daily and will indulge in all outdoor sports, including swimming, baseball and nature study. This camp is under the direction of Mr. Theodore Kaplan and several other university students.

Zionist Convention Program Completed

A special meeting of the National Executive Committee was held on Wednesday afternoon at the office of the Zionist Organization of America, 55 Fifth Avenue, New York, for the purpose of considering the program of the Philadelphia convention.

In behalf of the Administrative Committee, Mr. Lipsky presented the program which includes:

Saturday evening.—A reception to be tendered to the delegates by the Central Zionist Committee of Philadelphia at the Hotel Adelphi, registration of delegates at the Hotel Adelphi, and a meeting of the National Executive Committee.

Sunday.—Registration of delegates will continue on Sunday morning at the Hotel Adelphi from 9 to 10. The first session of the convention is scheduled to be held at the Broad Street Theatre at 10 o'clock, instead of 2 o'clock, as previously announced.

The first session will be devoted to a report of the Credentials Committee, the election of a permanent chairman, greetings by the local Jewish representatives, the presentation of special resolutions, greetings by Mr. Sokolow in behalf of the World Zionist Executive Committee, and greetings by Mr. Bernard A. Rosenblatt, member of the Palestine Zionist Executive Committee. The first session will adjourn after the election of a Committee on Committees consisting of fifteen delegates.

The second session is scheduled to be held at the Broad Street Theatre on Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The first business on the agenda of the afternoon session is the report of the Administrative Committee, submitted in printed form, to be introduced by brief summaries presented by Peter J. Schweitzer, Abraham Goldberg, Morris Rothenberg and Louis Lipsky, and a report of the activities of the Keren Hayesod by Emanuel Neumann. A discussion will follow this report. The Committee on Committees will then render its report.

The third session of the convention is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. at the Broad Street Theatre. It will be devoted to greetings by representatives of the American Jewish Congress, Independent Order Brith Abraham, Independent Order Brith Shalom, and other Jewish National organizations. A discussion will then be held on the report of the administration, to be concluded before adjournment by a vote on acceptance of the report.

Monday.—All standing committees will hold sessions from 9 to 1 at the Hotel Adelphi for consideration of resolutions to be presented to the convention. A conference of persons interested in the Intercollegiate Zionist Association will also be held during the same period.

The fourth session is scheduled for Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Hotel Adelphi. This session will be devoted to a report of the activities of the Jewish National Fund by Mr. Senior Abel, and a report of the activities of Hadassah by Miss Alice L. Seligsberg, as well as a report of the activities of the Order Sons of Zion. Resolutions will also be submitted at this session by the Committee on Organization for action. Resolutions will be submitted by the committee to formulate recommendations to the Zionist Conference at Mannheim, and by the Committee on the Keren Hayesod.

The fifth session will be held Monday evening, at 8:15, at the Hotel Adelphi. This session will be devoted to a report by Dr. N. Ratnoff of the activities of the Jewish Physicians Committee for the National Hebrew University, a report on the Rutenberg concession by a member of the Administrative Committee, resolutions reported by the Committee on Palestine, and a report of the Nominations Committee.

Tuesday.—The sixth session is scheduled for Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Hotel Adelphi. On the agenda for this session is a report of the activities of Young Judaea by Mr. Borowsky, a report on the activities of the Zion Commonwealth by Mr. S. J. Weinstein, resolutions by the Committee on the Medical Unit, and resolutions by the Finance and Budget Committee. The convention will adjourn at 12 o'clock to allow for an intermission of two hours, during which the election will take place.

The seventh session of the convention is scheduled for 3 o'clock at the Hotel Adelphi. The agenda includes resolutions by the Committee on Periodicals, general resolutions, a report of the Elections Committee and concluding addresses.

For Tuesday evening, a mass meeting is scheduled to be held in one of the theatres in Philadelphia at which the following speakers are scheduled: Mr. Nahum Sokolow, Rabbi Hirsh Masliansky, Col. J. H. Patterson, Dr. Alexander Goldstein, Mr. Bernard A. Rosenblatt, Mr. Morris Rothenberg and Mr. Abraham Goldberg.

Goldman Concerts Continue to Grow

With each succeeding night of the season the Goldman Band, under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman, seems to attract larger audiences. The audiences so far this season have never been below 7,000 a night.

The programs for the coming week, which is the third of the season, will appeal to all music lovers. A particularly interesting program has been arranged for Friday evening, June 30, when the first half of the program will be devoted to the music of Schubert. The soloist on this occasion will be Alveda Lafgren, soprano.

When Are Glasses Needed?

EYE troubles do not always manifest themselves by actual pains of the eye. The general manifestation usually is an occasional headache, a nervous feeling which the afflicted cannot seem to explain or attribute to anything in particular.

One should not wait until things actually appear blurred before seeking relief. Eyeglasses, properly fitted, not only improve the eye sight but also improve the appearance and the disposition of the wearer.

If your eyes give you the slightest trouble it will pay you to pay us a visit. Our expert optometrist will fit you with correct glasses if you need them, and our highly skilled optical department is sure to produce the right kind of glasses.

THE HIGHEST CHOICE Do not let it be merely a question of initial cost when you make your choice of pianos. The matchless music of the Steinway has lifted it above the "price" atmosphere for all time. It is true, the Steinway does cost a little more. But no one who owns a Steinway has ever a shadow of regret for the price paid. It is but little higher than the cost of other pianos, and the Steinway carries within its perfect mechanism the guarantee of a satisfaction beyond all price. For more than three score years it has been the ideal of the greatest music masters of their day. So the Steinway must command your respectful attention before your choice is made.
