ON THE ROAD TO AMERICA

From the Yiddish of A. Farber Translated by HANNAH BERMAN

Motte is a water-carrier. He does not carry the water on his back, because the pump is on a hill. Summer and winter one needs a horse. But he does not fetch the water for his own benefit, because he has neither a nag of his own, nor customers of his own. He is an assistant to a master water-carrier. As his master says, he is a man of bones, who can eat enough for ten. And, although, as everyone knows, he works like a slave, he scarcely manages to earn enough for bread.

In the summer it was tolerable, although, before the nag managed to drag itself up to the pump, Motte's shoulders ached from pushing the cart, and he was hoarse from crying "Whoa!", and he had cursed the nag and himself to the year and the day on which they were born, and although the sweat poured down from him, from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet—despite of all these, it was still the summer time. He could rest and enjoy himself. But in the winter— Surely, one must not complain. Whatever it was, it was still a season sent by the Most High. But it was a dog's season.

You are already at the top, of the hill—yes? But the pump is frozen. And then the slipping up and down! "Et! There is no sense in it," thought Motte, "always working for someone else. It is time I had a nag of my own. I would get customers all right. But where is one to find the money?"

There was another thing which worried our poor Motte.

"In order to be a master for oneself, one also needs someone to be the mistress. . . ."

And, it is not so easy to get a wife, either, perhaps harder than getting a nag.

A common servant-girl, so soon as she has a few roubles, wants someone of importance—a shop-assistant, or at any rate, an artisan, even if he is only a shoemaker. Only not a water-carrier. And without money it is positively useless—to corpses going to dance!

To work for another man is bitterness itself. But to remain unmarried is to throw oneself entirely to the dogs. . . . At the age of twenty-six, to be still praying without a tallis, is enough to make one's gorge rise. . . . "I am dead sick of everything!"

come to an end. . . . Whoa!" The nag had stumbled.

"Good-for-nothings, fools and

"But," he decided, "to go off without a wife is worse. People say that over there women are altogether out-wisest for him to get married here—to get married, anyhow, and be off. He sighed. How was he to manage that?

Soshie is a servant-girl, works like a demon, cooks, washes, polishes and scrubs. She is very capable. And yet year after year goes by and no one comes forward who will appreciate her good qualities.

There are times when she does not sleep for many nights. Surely, many of her friends have already become wet-nurses, and many of them have already been divorced, but she has not stirred from her place yet.

"Father of the Universe," she wails when no one is near to hear her, "when shall I have my own little corner, my own master, my own peaceful spot? When shall I be cooking my own fish for the sabbath?"

She also wants to attain the glory of a married-woman's wig—to live as the Lord has commanded.

"But, what's the use?" she sighs. "Every good-for-nothing who earns ten gulden a week, every tailor and shoe-maker is looking for the daughter of a householder, otherwise, cover him with gold. Surely, fifty roubles is no money nowadays!"

She, too, knows that in America she would be a valuable piece of goods. But, how can a Jewish daughter go off all alone? Her hair stood on end in fear.

Thinking these heavy thoughts, she skimmed the soup. The tears stood in her eyes, but they were soon dried up by the heat of the English stove.

"Ah, if something good turned up—something good," she thought.

"I would be so kind, so kind to him . . . really, with my whole heart. . . ."

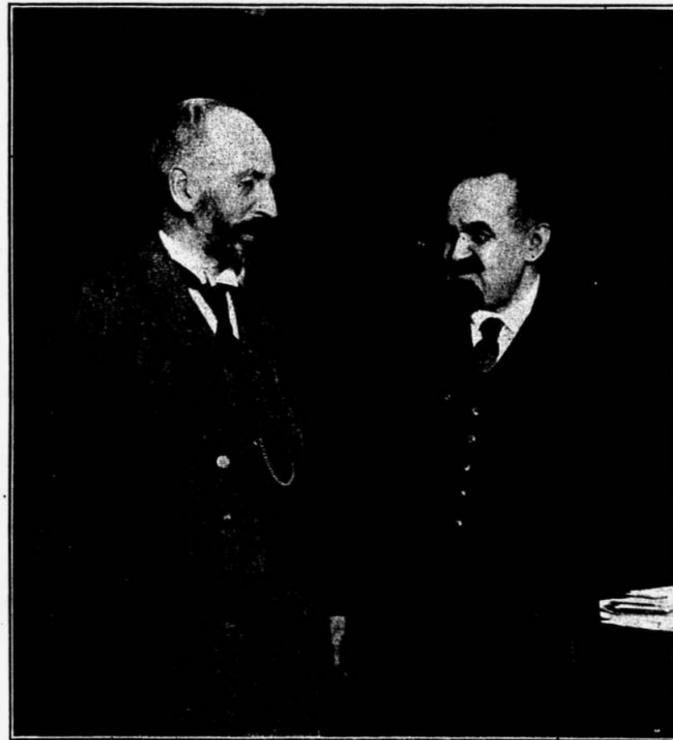

"Soshie, open!" cried Motte, knocking.

"Welcome unto Haman!" said Soshie, opening the door.

"Says Rashi," concluded Motte, "what devil has brought you here? Well?" And he laughed at the top of his voice. "But, I know something—eh"

"What is your joy about?" "I am going to America."

"A safe journey!" "Please God, the same to you!" was Motte's wish, as he poured the water into the waiting vessel. In the middle, an idea occurred to him. He threw a glance at Soshie. "Perhaps, yes," he thought. And he said: "Soshie, do you know what has occurred to me? Come with me." "Go to all the black years!" "Does it not please you?" said Motte. "Then there is no dancing with the bear." He took up his pail, and disappeared.

"Up to this, it never occurred to me," thought Motte, as he was leaving the house. "Soshie is not at all a bad piece of goods. . . . At the window I see a box. It is not empty. . . . She must have a few roubles also. And besides, she herself is all right, too—quite all right, as I live. . . . Above all, she is an honest girl. On the contrary! But, if she does not want to, then it is finished. I will not argue with her any more. I hate nonsense."

Meanwhile, the nag had unyoked itself, and Motte had to put all his thoughts aside, and attend to his business.

At the same moment, Soshie's mistress came in to her.

"Why were you laughing with Motte?" she asked in surprise.

"Ah, the scamp wants me to go to America with him."

"What do you mean?"

"He probably wants to get married. The devil knows what he means."

The mistress was satisfied, and asked Soshie about the dinner.

"How do you like that, mistress?" asked Soshie.

"What?"

"Motte, I mean."

"In the middle of your term of service, it does not please me at all. We shall see later."

"He is an honest young man," added the mistress, "and would surely treat a wife. Well. Do I know? But, what has America to do with it?"

"How then?" interposed Soshie.

"Would I marry a water-carrier here? Pshaw! Is Basse-Rochel better than I? And she got a husband of the highest class—a finished furrier."

"What business is that of yours?"

"It is my business. I would be ashamed to go into Shool."

"And in America?"

"Et! In America it is something different. There, all are alike. Dora the black one, the ugly thing, who disappeared with the Vienna tailor, she, too, writes that there all are alike. A servant may spit into the face of her mistress, and nothing! Nobody cares! That's what you call a life!"

The mistress left the kitchen, and Soshie thought.

"He is really all right. Well, we shall see."

The next day Motte again brought the water, poured it into the butt, and went away.

"The scamp is showing off," thought Soshie, in her heat, angrily.

The next day and the next—again the same. On the fifth day, she started a conversation with him.

"Well, when shall we be rid of you?"

"Not so soon. . . . I am planning to get married. . . . I will not go alone."

"With whom?" asked Soshie, throwing a glance at him out of the corner of her eye.

"That is my affair," he answered.

"A girl with money."

"A secret?"

"What then?"

"Oh, I know who."

"Perhaps—"

"She has one eye."

Motte looked at her.

"I think she has two," he said.

"No doubt a girl of good family," she sneered.

"All Jewish girls are of good family. Only, now she is in service through poverty. . . ."

Soshie smiled.

"Without a rouble?"

"Who talks of money? She is the main thing," he smiled again. "But, she surely has something. In the kitchen there stands a coffer. He threw a glance at hers.

"Like mine?"

"To the very hair."

"And inside of it what is there? Perhaps pieces of broken crockery? Motte fool."

"Open it, and I will see. . . ."

"Go to all the black years," cried Soshie angrily. "She will have a plague before she will have a coffer like mine. Do you really think everyone is like me?"

"My bride-to-be," said Motte, and smiled, "really lives like you."

"If the Lord wills it," thought Soshie, "then a broom shoots. He is now making jokes! A real plague."

Nevertheless, Motte went away satisfied.

"And maybe," thought she, "it is really the will of God."

It is Friday evening. Now, now the Sabbath is come. At any moment, the people will be called to Shool.

But, Soshie has been carried away, all day, to other worlds. The angel made the pudding. The bread was burnt. The food will not have a Jewish taste. May it be a sacrifice for her! But, she will be busy to the very last moment. There is not a drop of water in the butt. She will give him a good scolding. To keep her to the very last!

Motte knocked. She opened, ran into the kitchen, hid herself behind the door, and shouted:

"Wait, you American scamp! I will pay you out. Will you keep me to the very last, eh?"

"Do you see, Soshie," he answered patiently. "I have discovered that you often detain me. You wish to talk with me. And for days on end, I have no time. . . . Friday."

"May you get—"

"Soshie for a wife, you mean?"

"Pour out the water, and go. I cannot show myself in the light. I am filthy, and he detains me."

"Shall I come tomorrow?"

"You may come, or not come, but be off now."

On the Sabbath Soshie treated Motte to nuts, and showed him what was in her coffer. She had a whole outfit, and a receipt from a wealthy householder who was minding fifty roubles for her. They talked of America.

"And there," asked Soshie, "do you think that rolls grow on the trees?"

"One can get into a factory."

"For my part, you may go."

"But, listen, Soshie," said Motte, earnestly. "But, I ask you not to be too proud. As you see, I am a strong young man. I can work. . . . I am not a scamp either."

"And I? Eh?"

"You are a fine girl—may I have such a year! But. . . . You are an orphan. Time does not stand still. What? Of what use are your tricks to you?"

The engagement party took place on Saturday night, the wedding not long after. Everything turned out as had been arranged. But, the journey to America is not decided. It may yet happen that Motte may buy a nag for himself and her, and life may go on as "our fathers' fathers" have lived it.

Meanwhile, Pesach is drawing near. . . . Motte is working at the matzo bakery. And she. She is already thinking of other interests in life.

Ku Klux Klan Condemned by Protestants

Washington (J. T. A.)—Condemnatory resolutions said to be aimed at the Ku Klux Klan and other masked and secret bodies have been passed by the administrative committee of the Federal Council of Churches. While they mentioned no organization by name, the Rev. Samuel McCrea Cavert, one of the two general secretaries, declared that members of the Administrative Committee had the Ku Klux Klan in mind in particular. In making this resolution public Mr. Cavert said:

"This action was taken as a result of statements made from time to time that the Ku Klux Klan and other masked and secret bodies are acting in behalf of the Protestant churches of the United States. . . ."

"The Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America records its strong conviction that the recent rise of organizations whose members are masked, oath-bound and unknown and whose activities have the effect of arousing religious prejudices and racial antipathies, is fraught with grave consequences to the church and to society at large. Any organization whose activities tend to set class against class or race against race is consistent neither with the ideals of the churches nor with true patriotism, however vigorous and sincere may be its professions of religion and Americanism."

Zionist Persecutions in Russia

Kovno (J. C. B. Service).—The Yiddish Communist paper "Emes," just arrived here from Moscow, deals at length with the recent activities against Zionists, the Heholuz Organization and the Sports Federation "Maccabee." The Kieff trial against the Zeire Zion, it writes, and the suppression of the Heholuz have demonstrated that there can be no exception made in the case of Jewish counter-revolutionaries. The impudence of the Kieff Zionists and their threats that the persecutions would make a bad impression throughout the civilized world proved futile.

"Together with the Zionists, their allied organizations, Heholuz and Maccabee, must also disappear from the arena. The only favor which we can do to Zionism is to take part in its funeral and to do everything to speed it across to the other side, from which there shall be no return," the "Emes" opines.

Filming Jewish Solemnities—Soviet Agent's Contempt for Jewish Protests. Rathenau Murder Trial Reveals Anti-Semitic Motive—Anti-Jewish Trouble in Budapest and Pressburg—New Book on Israel in Egypt—German Anti-Semitic Films Forbidden—Russia Demands Extradition of Pogrom Organizers.

London, Oct. 7, 1922.

A good deal of feeling has been aroused by the action of the Bow and Bromley Talmud Torah in allowing a film to be taken of the congregation that assembled during worship on Rosh Hashanah. The film was shown at the variety theatres. The "Jewish World," commenting on the event, says: "We presume the permission to film the congregants was not given to the enterprising artist without a consideration, and so the incident was nothing less than a miserable exploitation of religious devotion and introduces yet another terror into the holy day trade to which Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur have so deplorably come in recent years in certain quarters of Jewry."

A similar occurrence is recorded as having taken place at the Philpot Street Synagogue during the Yom Kippur service, the congregation, from the minister downwards, posing for the purpose. The film was reproduced in several papers on Yom Kippur night and on Tuesday morning. The journal already quoted, commenting heatedly on the proceedings as a sign of regrettable Jewish degeneration, hopes that the competent authorities will inquire into them with a view to preventing their repetition. A similar though less ostentatious film operation was carried out at the Great Synagogue, but outside the building, and included only children.

A special prayer has been authorized by the Chief Rabbi in the form of a thanksgiving for the National Home on the occasion of the approval by the League of Nations of the British Mandate. The prayer or thanksgiving is couched in the language of the deepest gratitude and boundless joy, quoted mainly from passages in Holy Writ suitable to the occasion, to be used in all the synagogues.

Mr. Lucien Wolf, writing on behalf of the Joint Committee to the Official Agent in Great Britain of the Russian Soviet Republic, complained in very precise terms—and some think unnecessarily pointed language—first, of the laws and decrees recently enacted by the Soviet government prohibiting every kind of religious instruction in public and private schools and other cultural institutions, and of the harshness of their application against Jews, asking him to communicate the (somewhat critical) views of the letter to the government in Moscow, in the hope that the methods of the application of the exceptional legislation may be mitigated. Without seeking to suggest that the note might not have been couched in less irritating terms, the reply of the Official Agent of the Russian Republic is certainly surprising in its contemptuous decision "not to transmit the communication to my government or to enter into any correspondence in the matter owing to the false and baseless accusations," he says. "It contains and the insolent tone in which the charges are made." The "Jewish Chronicle" appears to be reasonably concerned to know whether the charges were false and baseless or whether the Russian Agent has made a brazen and lying denial of the charges.

The "Jewish Guardian" also, commenting on the extraordinary complexion of the correspondence, reminds its readers that the secretaries of the Emperor of all the Russias similarly refused to transmit a similar protest by the citizens of London against similar persecution of the Jews, and aptly quotes the French, "Plus ca change plus c'est la meme chose," and as aptly observes that the incident casts ridicule on the pretense of the "Morning Post" that Bolshevism is a Jewish movement.

Some extracts from the German press on the examination of the defendants in the Rathenau murder case appearing in the London papers expose clearly a phase of anti-Jewish mentality which is pretty widely known, but does not so frequently come into the light of day. One of the defendants, Tschow, who drove the assassins' car, in the course of his examination said that, according to Kearns, another defendant, harm had been done to Germany by the Rapallo agreement and the policy of fulfillment, adding a good deal of anti-Semitism with reference to the alleged influence of the "Elders of Zion" on the destiny of the world, all of which, says the report, brought the murder to its proper level as a pathological rather than a political crime.

A message from Budapest on October 4 talks of great excitement in the local high schools owing to an alleged favoritism shown by a local business establishment, which warmly resents the charge. The malcontents require the withdrawal of certain categories of Jews from the high schools and require certain limitations to the rights of those who remain. The excitement ran so high at the technical high school that it had to be closed for a period, and the scholars will determine their future conduct only after learning the attitude of the Minister of Instruction on the subject. There was trouble also at the Pressburg University, where the Jewish students were compelled to leave the lecture hall. Here fighting resulted, which if continued, says the rector, will lead to the closing of the lectures for a period.

A little book barely more than a tract by W. M. Flinders Petrie, D. C. L., etc., issued by George Allen and Unwin, Ltd., embodies the fifth Arthur Davis memorial lecture and illustrates Prof. Petrie's gifts both as a scholar and a teacher. It is entitled "The Jews in Egypt." Unlike the majority of scholars, says the critic on the book in the "Times," he does not attempt to convey one fraction of his vast knowledge to his audience. What he aims at and succeeds in transmitting is the vision which his own mind has projected from its wealth of knowledge, with just enough dry fact to give the vision substantial fabric and firm base in the mind of the amateur. If only this gift were more general and specialists could administer education in this almost tabloid form, not as propaganda but as a means of widening the field of vision or, for instance, our rulers and politicians round a particular point, what blunders and perplexities, if not warfare, we might be saved! Here we are given a flood of illumination not only on the Jews in Egypt, but thereby on the Semitic question in general, concludes the critique on the brochure.

Perhaps the following German note may be quoted from the "Jewish Guardian" to add to the preceding Continental items. The German government has prohibited the production of anti-Semitic films. The editor of the anti-Semitic Bavarian organ, the "Volkischer Beobachter," has been fined for libeling the rabbi, Dr. Beerman.

The Sports Council of Vienna has decided not to give financial support to those clubs that exclude Jews from their midst.

On the other hand, there is an item of interest from Russia appearing to indicate a desire to be fair to persecuted Jews, if only for a moment, the Soviet Government having approached the Polish Government requiring the extradition of the Ukraine pogrom organizers of the raids on several Jewish towns, resulting in the murder of many Jews, saying that the Soviet troops had pursued the raiders, but that the leaders had escaped into Poland, where they were interned.

The Jerusalem Rabbinate has petitioned Sir Herbert Samuel that the Jewish religious courts be accorded the same privileges as those of the Moslems.

"THE RIGHT START OF LIFE" OR "SELF-REALIZATION"

By RABBI I. A. HADAD, M.A.

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."—Genesis 1:1.

Yes! In the beginning God created the heaven and earth for all men, but He left it for man to create his own heaven and earth, his own good or evils, his own weal or woe, success or failure, happiness or unhappiness. "Behold," God tells us in the Bible, "I have set before thee this day life and death, blessing or blight. Choose, thee, therefore, life, that thou mayest live, thou and thy seed."

One of the deep, wholesome admonitions connoted in this rich scriptural passage is the vital importance of a right start of life. Success or failure in your life depends largely upon the manner in which you begin your career. A mistake committed in the choice of your vocation may mean your ultimate rise or fall. And there are mistakes that cannot be rectified in later years, the contrary view of the optimist notwithstanding. The inception of your individual career, moreover, means the creation of a heaven or a hell, both in your own personal life as well as in the life of the community in which you dwell. You are to build a new world of good or evil, of progress or regress, of nobility or shame for your own self and for your fellow men. The Bible tells us that when Divine Wisdom had surveyed His work of the six days, "He saw that it was all very good." Surely it was a happy ending because of a happy beginning. Start right.

And, indeed, even with us mortals, a right beginning is half the success. A careful plan of campaign is half its victory. A problem found is half solved. And it is a law maxim that the principal part of everything is the beginning. Horace puts it this way: "What's well begun is half done." Hence the striking significance of the Hebrew saying: "All beginnings are difficult, since the rich harvest of your labor depends upon the right way of seeding. To misplant a crop is to cause a blight and hunger." Start right.

Success and honor are your birthright conferred upon you by the all-loving Father. To every man and woman is given the right of choice to accept or to reject prosperity, dignity, happiness and immortality. It is up to you to grow, to wax great, to win the good will, the confidence, the affection and friendship of your family, your friends and fellow men, and to render your memory a blessing to posterity.

But how secure success and nobility? By following the dictates of the following three fundamentals at the start of your career:

1. First, the choice of occupation. Not what seems to you a successful business that counts for your success, but rather what you are fitted for. Thoroughly grasp this fundamental. The unsuccessfulness of a professional is not determined by the unsuccessfulness of the profession he chose, but by his unfitness for the profession. This largely explains the presence of so many sorry figures in honorable callings. Know thyself, and thyself and success are identical. Carefully and painfully map out your scheme of life endeavor. Seek the counsel of the unprejudiced expert, not the sweet wish of your honored aunt or your venerable grandma! Above all pray God to reveal to you your special talents. Prayer works wonders. Then choose the good that is inherent in you, and thou shalt have chosen life.
2. The second fundamental is the idea of mission. You are not a straw that is driven by the wind of blind chance. God has sent you on earth for a purpose. Hold fast this idea in your mind. One-third of your success depends on it. Humble as you may be in your own eyes or in the eyes of your brother men, to God there is no humbleness of birth, rank or station, nor incapability of achievement. Realize your mission and obey its obligations and you shall surely thrive. You shall grow good and great. Feel deeply that God has sent you on earth as He has sent Moses, David and the prophets.

All serious men and women have craved a master as well as a task. Some call their master "Duty." Wiser people call their master "God." Be of the wiser.

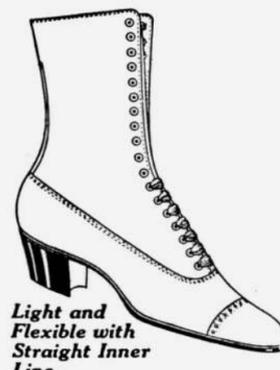

Mission means consecration. 'Tis the entrance of the soul in the deeper life with God. Shun frivolity; develop the habit of serious thoughts. Is it law that is to be your vocation? Your mission is to further the establishment of justice in God's just world. Is it medicine that is your calling? The relieving of suffering humanity is your mission. Is it commerce that is the chosen pursuit of your life? Your mission, then, is the development of and the agrandizement of earth's boundless resources and wealth.

Furthermore, do you believe in your mission? Then one-third of your success and nobility are yours. Believe it and it is yours. Do you not believe in your mission? Then one-third of your success and nobility is lost.

3. The third fundamental is concentration. No concentration, no success. Your high-purposed mission cannot be accomplished without that great distinguishing faculty. Concentration is the characteristic of genius. It is acquired ability to focus your mind steadily and seriously upon your selected calling. It is absorbed attention to that calling—no greater essential to genuine great achievement. Concentration can be developed. Moreover, cultivate cheerful interest in your work. The fulcrum of your mental power is found in the con-

On Saturday evening, October 28, the Indian Club will hold an entertainment and dance for the benefit of members and friends of the association. An excellent program has been prepared, and those who attend will be assured of a pleasant evening.

On Sunday evening, October 29, a concert will be given by Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Binder, assisted by Miss Rene Shieber. This is the first concert of the season, and Mr. Binder, who is well known as a composer of Jewish music and a leader of musical groups, has promised a very interesting program.

United Synagogue Activities

A series of talks on the United Synagogue and its work and co-related community problems is being given by the New York branch. By means of these addresses it is expected to bring the problems of the community directly to the attention of the members of the various congregations through the officials of the institution. This (Friday) evening Mr. Alexander U. Zinke, New York branch president, will address the Congregation Adath Israel of the Bronx, No. 551 East 169th street.

The work of religious instruction in settlement houses has been resumed under the chairmanship of Mrs. Samuel Spiegel, who is at the head of the Women's Activities Committee. This work is expected to be broadened during the present season.

At the Students' House, on Columbia Heights, the requirements of the resident and transient students are being cared for by the hostess and a committee of ladies headed by Mrs. Morris Lurie.

Congregation Agudath Sholom, of Jersey City, N. J., the largest in Hudson county, has inaugurated a drive for 1,000 additional members and will soon begin the inauguration of a Friday evening lecture course in English.

Rabbi Frederick Cohen has been re-elected by the Congregation of Israel, of Omaha, Neb., for another term of three years—the maximum permitted by the constitution—which will make twenty-two years of continuous service with the congregation.

Prison sentences of one year with hard labor have been imposed upon two men named Schechter and Riener, charged with having appropriated for their private use relief consignments sent by a Jewish "landsmanshaft" in America, says a report from Tiwrow, Podole province.

Four Jewish candidates have thus far been successful in the elections for Sejm deputies, incomplete returns indicate. The successful candidates are Dubin and Wittenberg, nominated by the Agudas Israel; Nurock, by the Mizrachi, and Fischman, by the "National Democrats."

The death has occurred at Frankfort, at the age of sixty-four, of Chief Rabbi Dr. Joseph Rosenfeld of Czernowitz. The deceased was a well-known communal worker, and was also prominent in the Zionist movement, being an active member of the Zionist Organization of Bukovina.

The Hebrew Women's Free Sheltering Home at 148 Wooster street, Hartford, Conn., has been completely remodeled. The home has 14 well-furnished rooms in charge of a superintendent and matron, and food, shelter and clothes are given to all who find need to call at the home.

Business was suspended and residents not only of Opelousas, La., but of many other places, attended the funeral of Dr. John A. Haas, financier and civic leader, which took place last week. Schools were closed in order that the children and their teachers might join the throng that gathered around the Haas home. There were no denominational lines at the funeral. Jews, Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics were there, each to add his tribute of love and respect to Dr. Haas. The local council of Knights of Columbus sent one of the most beautiful floral tributes.

On Simchath Torah the members of B'nai Israel Congregation of Rockville Centre, L. I., voted an increase of $500 salary to Rabbi M. Speier, who only assumed his duties a few weeks ago. Rabbi Speier was in charge of the Newport News (Va.) congregation for a number of years.

Elaborate ceremonies last Sunday marked the cornerstone laying of the new Beth Israel Synagogue, now being built at Bernard and Ainslee streets, Chicago. This is the first Jewish organization of Albany Park. It was started in 1917 and now has over 200 families affiliated.

A large influx of Jewish farmers to Montville, Mass., in the heart of the Berkshires, has resulted in the Baptist Society organized in 1779 going out of existence. The church and parsonage are now used as a synagogue by the Congregation Sons of Abraham, which numbers over 40 families.

Mr. Abraham Zevi Idelsohn has just completed the second volume of his musical thesaurus, entitled "Gesange der Babylonischen Juden," published by Benjamin Harz, Berlin. The author maintains that the melodies reproduced must have been popular songs before the destruction of the Temple.

During the service on Rosh Hashanah in the synagogue at Szegeidin, Hungary, a volley of stones was hurled through the windows of the women's portion, injuring several. The lights were extinguished by the attendants, so that the hooligans should not be able to see where they were throwing the stones.

London opinion is to the effect that the resignation of Lord Reading, Viceroy of India, is expected to result from the change in the British Cabinet. Reading, it is thought, may not remain to serve during the transition period, especially if the Cabinet should be composed of a majority of die hards.

The Congregation Ahavath Sholom, of Flatbush, celebrated its tenth anniversary last week and presented Rev. Samuel Pieper, who has been rabbi since the organization, with a sedan car. The congregation 10 years ago numbered 17 men, and now has a membership of 217 and a ladies' auxiliary exceeding 200.

The New Rochelle (N. Y.) Board of Education has decided to make religious instruction a part of the school work. One day each week the children will be excused from class work for the purpose. The movement has the support of all denominations, including the Jewish residents headed by Rabbi Richard M. Stern.

After a careful and thorough survey of the city for a suitable site for its new temple, Congregation Emanu-El has just consummated the purchase of the northwest corner of Arguello Boulevard and Lake street, San Francisco, Cal., where an imposing synagogue, one of the most magnificent in America, is to be erected. It is planned to spend fully $1,000,000 in the construction of the new building and actual construction will get under way before long.

The old Plymouth Street Congregation, Worcester, Mass., has consolidated with the Mercy and Truth Congregation and closed up its synagogue, the first to be erected in the city.

A meeting attended by several thousands of students has been held at Lemberg in order to protest against "Judaization" of the Galician high schools. A resolution was adopted to the effect that if the Ministry for Education withdrew the numerous clauses operating against the Jewish students, the Polish students would boycott the lectures.

Plans are under way in Newark, N. J., for the annual session of District Grand Lodge No. 2, I. O. B. B., which will be held the last Sunday of January next. The delegates and their wives, representing lodges of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and other seaboard States, will be entertained by the members of the local lodges.

The Labor Department of the Palestine Zionist Executive in reviewing the position of Jewish labor in Palestine states that Jewish labor has been a steadily growing factor in the economic life of Palestine. At the end of the year 1919 there were 1,880 Jewish workers in Palestine. At the end of 1921 there were 6,500; in 1922, 9,200 Jewish workers.

The Joint Distribution Committee is represented on the special Near East Committee appointed by President Harding to take action on the Smyrna emergency under the chairmanship of Will H. Hays, former postmaster-general. The administration of the relief is to be handled jointly by the Near East Relief and the American Red Cross.

Mrs. W. P. Kotkov, a well known social worker, has been appointed head worker for the new Jewish Neighborhood House, which is being established by the Federation of Jewish Charities at 1901 South Sixth street, Philadelphia, Pa. Mrs. Kotkov is the wife of the late Dr. Kotkov of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, who was murdered by four bandits last year.

Mr. Albert M. Friedenberg, of this city, has been appointed by the Grand Lodge of Hamburg, Germany as its Grand representative to the Grand Lodge of the State of New York. Mr. Friedenberg is a well known practicing lawyer, corresponding secretary of the American Jewish Historical Society, and a member of the editorial staff of this publication.

Two Jewish gentlemen have been adopted as candidates for the City Council at the forthcoming municipal elections in Liverpool, Eng., in November, Mr. Ellis K. Yates for the Low Hill Ward and Mr. A. M. Urding for the Everton Ward. Both are standing in the Conservative interest and have been officially adopted by the party. Mr. Yates is a prominent communal worker and a past president of the Princes Road Synagogue. Mr. Urding has been for some time a member of the Liverpool Board of Guardians.

The Polish representative in the Ukraine having declined to give visas to Polish Jews wishing to return to their country, the Ukrainian government has suspended the repatriation of all Poles. Until the anti-Jewish tendencies of the Polish representatives in the Ukraine give way to reason the Ukrainians will maintain the embargo on all re-emigration, it is declared.

David Gladstone, fifteen-year-old boy prodigy, has been admitted to the freshman class of New York University, the youngest student ever registered at that institution. Gladstone is a son of Rabbi Pincus Gladstone of B'nai Zion Congregation, Newark, N. J. At eleven he entered high school and last year he won the class C championship of the New Jersey Chess Association.

The closing of all religious schools where minors under eighteen years of age are taught has been ordered by the Department of Justice of Soviet Ukraine. Local authorities are directed to enforce the closing order and to punish violators of the ordinance. Among the schools included under the law are Jewish "Chedorim" and "Yeshiboth," to which special reference is made.

The "Awakening Magyars" continued their attacks on Jews during the High Festivals. At Szegeidin they broke the windows of the synagogue, and injured a woman. A bomb, charged with malodorous gas, was thrown into the synagogue at Nyrbator. When the Jewish leaders complained of the outrage, the police suggested that it was the work of a Jewish atheist. Similar disturbances are reported from Tapiosele.

William N. Loew, for the past half-century a practicing lawyer of this city, died at his home in Brooklyn last week at the age of 76. Mr. Loew was a native of Hungary and an authority on Hungarian poetry, and many of his English translations from the original Hungarian appeared in the columns of the Hebrew Standard. Mr. Loew was the father of Rosalie Loew Whitney, a well-known lawyer of this city, and a brother of the famous Chief Rabbi Loew of Szegeidin, Hungary, who was recently released after having been imprisoned for over a year at the instigation of the Hungarian anti-semites on a false charge of treason.

Justice Harry Lewis in the Brooklyn Supreme Court has decided that a Jewish synagogue is not a charitable institution immune from liability for damage caused by negligence and declined to dismiss a complaint brought by Mrs. Beckie Golof, who sued the Congregation Ohel Moishe Chevra Tchelim for injuries she received Dec. 13, 1921. On that date she went to the synagogue to worship and was descending an unlighted stairway, she alleges, when she tripped and fell and received injuries for which she asks $25,000 damages. The congregation asked Justice Lewis to dismiss her complaint on the ground it was immune from liability. "The plaintiff received no gratuitous benefactions," Justice Lewis commented, and must answer her complaint.

OBITUARY

ROSENTHAL. — Dr. Louis Rosenthal, beloved husband of Elizabeth Kass Rosenthal, died Thursday, October 19th, at his home, No. 220 West 110th street. Dr. Rosenthal graduated from the New York University Medical College in 1898, and was attached to the staff of the Gouverneur, Stuyvesant and Lenox Hill hospitals. He was a member of Composite Lodge No. 819, F. & A. M., of the East Side Physicians' League, and director of the Grand Street Boys' Association, and a member of many organizations. Services were conducted by Rabbis M. S. Margolis, Herbert S. Goldstein and Rev. Shapiro. Interment was at Bay Side Cemetery.

Anti-Semitism in Italy
Rome (J. C. B. Service). — Signor Preziosi, one of the leading anti-Jewish journalists in Italy, publishes an article in his periodical, "La Vita Italiana," alleging that the Jews have packed the Italian government services. According to a table of statistics which he gives, there are 64 Jews in the Parliament (Chamber and Senate), 25 in the Privy Council, 54 in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, 11 in the Ministry for the Colonies, 317 in the Ministry for the Interior, 308 in the Ministry for Justice, 470 in the Ministry for Finance, 267 in the Ministry for War, 117 in the Ministry for Trade and 532 in the Ministry for Posts and Telegraphs, making a total of 3,259 Jews. Signor Preziosi contends that this is in flagrant disproportion to the number of Jews in the country and forms a serious danger to the Italian public life.

IN MEMORIAM

KOHN.—Mrs. Lazarus Kohns (Hermine Straus Kohns), "Give her of the fruit of her hands." The Bible always furnishes terse, appropriate words for every occasion. Any spoken appreciation of Mrs. Lazarus Kohns and her splendid life and work is literally "a giving unto her of the fruit of her hands."

With all the inducements to a life of ease, social pleasure and self-indulgence, she chose "to labor in the vineyard."

Like all the members of her gifted family, she was possessed of talent, great ability and of great capacity for work. "Work" was her shibboleth and beneficence. Charity, under its Hebrew name, "Zedakah," was its expression.

She had the power of leadership and the faculty for organization was hers in an eminent degree, coupled with the suavity of willingly compelling others to assist her in her multifarious undertakings.

Her heart and hand were ever open to answer the call of distress. She was a most generous and constant giver to every cause and appeal for aid, and an equally generous giver to private need. But she gave with her head as well as with her heart and hand and always aimed at future results in immediate assistance where it was possible.

But no worthy appeal ever failed of a ready response.

The welfare and prosperity of Temple Beth-El, to which she and all her family were attached, and all its affiliated associations and organizations were her primary interests.

Her achievements in making the Temple Beth-El Sisterhood one of the leading Sisterhoods in New York, in furthering its benevolent, industrial, social, educational and religious work, was the crowning glory of her many endeavors.

The Sisterhood claimed her time, her best and constant thought, her heart and always her purse. When in lack of workers she found them. When in financial difficulties she made it free with an abounding generosity so it could "carry on" unhampered in its work. And all this with a wide hand for all the community's many institutions as well. She was an unsectarian giver, too.

But philanthropy was only one side of this many-sided woman's life. She had all the family, household and domestic virtues and characteristics. She was a home maker and home keeper—a good wife, a good mother, a loyal sister, an estimable kinswoman. She had a gift for social friendship and had a host of friends who held her in affectionate and high regard.

But there still remains something to be told when all this has been recorded—something of utmost in worth—she was a true, ardent and ever loyal Jewess! She loved the synagogue and read her Bible. She held to the Jewish ceremonies and ceremonials and provided others with the means of observing them. She was always constant in attendance at divine service at her beloved Temple Beth-El. Perhaps she was all the other fine and noble things here accredited to her, for which she was beloved, honored and respected and for which she is now so truly mourned and will be devotedly remembered just because she was a good Jewess!

Perhaps, too, this was the finest and ripest "fruit of her hands that should be given unto her!" ANNETTE KOHN.

Institutional Synagogue to Open High School

The Institutional Synagogue announces the opening of its high school, which will further Jewish study among the grown up boys and girls and prepare them for teaching in the Talmud Torahs. The high school meets Saturday afternoons, Sunday mornings, Monday and Wednesday nights. The following are the courses for the first year:

Saturday afternoon, from 2.30 to 4.30, Chumash and Rashi, given by Mr. Savitzky; Sunday morning from 10 to 11, Hebrew grammar, and from 11 to 12, Chumash and Rashi, given by Mr. Savitzky; Monday evening, 7.30 to 8.30, course in Mishna, and 8.30 to 9.30, Bible interpretation by Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein; Wednesday night, from 7.30 to 8.30, Jewish history, given by Rabbi Isadore Goodman, and 8.30 to 9.30, "Introduction to Jewish Literature," by Dr. Nirenstone.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

Ethel Frank, soprano, will be assisted by the Rich String Quartet at her recital in Carnegie Hall on Wednesday evening, November 1. Miss Frank will sing arias and songs by Bach, Buononcini, Mozart, Rimsky-Korsakow, Ravel, Wolf, Lenormand, Vierne, Grieg, Strauss, Scott and Loewe, and a dramatic aria, "Le Berger Fidele," by Rameau, with string quartet and harpsichord accompaniment. Miss Frank discovered this work, which is new to American audiences, in an old library in France last summer.

The Rich String Quartet consists of Thaddeus Rich, concertmaster of the Philadelphia Orchestra; Harry Aleinikoff of the Philadelphia Orchestra, Roman Verney, first viola of the same organization, and Hans Kindler, 'cello. Mary Shaw Swain will be at the piano.

For her recital at Carnegie Hall on November 2 Florence Easton has chosen an unusually interesting program, ranging from the classic "She Never Told Her Love," of Haydn, and two arias by Gluck, to a modern English group by Rothwell, Griffes and Frank La Forge, who will assist at the piano. Four songs by Schumann, a like number by Wolf and modern French compositions by Ravel and Dalcroze complete her selections. As has just been announced, Miss Easton will sing several new leading roles at the Metropolitan this season, including the Marchallin in Strauss' "Rosencavalier," the title role in Carmen and Butterfly in the opera of that name.

Julia Claussen, the mezzo-soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will appear in recital in Carnegie Hall on November 6. Mme. Claussen will have the assistance of Frank La Forge, the well known American composer-pianist, at the piano. Her program will be an especially interesting one, comprising a wide variety of selections in Italian, German, Swedish, French and English, and will feature compositions by Florabel Blackwell, the American composer, who is also prominent in New York society. Following this performance, among other engagements the artist will appear in recital at Baltimore, Md.; Bradford, Pa.; Jamestown, N. Y.; Reading, Pa.; St. Louis, Mo., and Fulton, Mo. In February she will rejoin the Metropolitan Opera Company as usual.

The fourth annual production of the Greenwich Village Follies is now in its seventh week of a brilliant success at the Shubert Theatre, where it is presented by the Bohemians, Inc., A. L. Jones and Morris Green, managing directors. The entire production was devised and staged by John Murray Anderson. The book is by George V. Hobart, lyrics by Irving Caesar and John Murray Anderson, and the music by Louis A. Hirsch. Ballets and incidental dances were arranged by Carl Randall and Alexander Yakovlev under the direction of John Murray Anderson. The critics say the fourth annual production is away in the lead this year of all others of the Revue-Follies type, and call it the finest of all revues. In the cast are John E. Hazzard, Carl Randall, Frankie Heath, Lucille Chalfant, Savoy and Brennan, George Rasely, Ula Sharon, Yvonne George, Alexander Yakovlev, Fortunella and Cirillina, John Sheehan, Julia Silors, George Christie, Harriet Gimble and thirty famous artist models.

Mme. Adele Bliss, who has given several successful recitals, will give a concert of folk songs of all nations at the Institutional Synagogue, 37 West 116th street, on Saturday night, October 29, at 8.30. Her program will include songs in Russian, Yiddish, Ukrainian, Italian, French, Spanish, German and Indian.

A concert will be given by the faculty of the New York Conservatory of Music and the American Conservatory of Music at Carnegie Hall on Sunday evening, October 29, at 8.15, the entire proceeds of which will be appropriated for the endowment fund of the Master School. A students' orchestra, assisted by members of the Symphony Society, will play Schubert's "Rosamunde" overture and Victor Herbert's "American Fantasie." Mr. Dirck C. Holland will play the Bruch Violin Concerto, Mr. August Fraemke the Schytte Piano Concerto and William Ebann the Saint-Saens Violoncello Concerto. The orchestra will assist in the performance of the three concertos.

Marjorie Rambeau, one of the most beautiful and accomplished actresses on the American stage, will be seen at the Bronx Opera House week of October 30, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, in "The Goldfish," under the direction of the Messrs. Shubert. Gladys Unger, who is one of the most brilliant writers of present-day dramatists, adapted "The Goldfish" from the French of Armont and Gerbidon. Miss Rambeau was seen in this play all last season at the Maxine Elliott, Astor and Shubert theatres. Since coming from California seven years ago, Miss Rambeau has made many successes on the American stage, notably in "So Much for So Much," "Sadie Love," "Cheating Cheaters" and "Eyes of Youth." She made such a great success on her first appearance as a leading lady in New York that she was immediately given stellar honors. Miss Unger, who has made this adaptation from the French, has written many successes. Some of her better-known plays are "Inconstant George," in which John Drew appeared; "Love Watches," a stellar medium for Billie Burke; "The Marionettes" for Madame Nazimova; the libretto of "Betty," for Raymond Hitchcock; "The Marriage Market," for Donald Brian, and various plays done for the London stage in which Gerald du Maurier, Mary Moore and Ethel Irving appeared. Stuart Walker staged "The Goldfish," and the Messrs. Shubert have provided a splendid supporting cast for Miss Rambeau. The attraction for next week will be "The Bat."

The anticipated new piece of Henri Bernstein, postponed last season, entitled "Judith," was disclosed at the Theatre du Gymnase, Paris, October 14, and met with great success. It is in three acts and seven tableaux.

For his plot Bernstein follows the legend of the apocryphal story of the Old Testament. The first two acts deal with the Jewish heroine, Judith, visiting the tent of the invading general, Holofernes, and killing the Assyrian chieftain after a love scene. By the heroic act her people are able to put the besiegers to flight.

Madame Simone, as Judith, does splendidly. This is probably the best role she has ever undertaken. The drama is beautifully mounted. Bakst designed the costumes and the settings are by Soudeikine.

CHILDREN'S PAGE

HE IS THY BROTHER

Dear Children:

It has been often remarked that despite the terrible persecutions to which the Jewish people have been subjected for so many centuries they have always outlived their persecutors and are the only immortal race that the world can boast of. There are many supernatural reasons for their longevity, but in my estimation one of the natural reasons for their eternal life is that they do not harbor any hatred in their heart, for hatred destroys the lives of those that hate in a far greater degree than the objects of their venom, and the reason that the Jews possess that quality is the Divine command ever ringing in their ears, "Thou shalt not abhor an Edomite, for he is thy brother." Rashi says: "Do not utterly abhor him, although you ought to abhor him because he went against you with a sword."

Thou shalt not abhor an Egyptian, because thou wast a stranger in his land. Do not abhor them entirely, although they cast your male children into the river, for the reason that in the time of need they were hospitable to you; therefore, the children that are born unto them in the third generation may enter of them into the congregation of the Lord, but other nations are instantly admitted. However, the Ammonites and Moabites are never admitted, hence we learn that he who causes a person to sin does him more harm than if he would have killed him, for one who kills another only deprives him of life in this world, but one who causes him to sin deprives him of this and the future life. Therefore, Edom, who met Israel with the sword, were not abhorred, nor the Egyptians, who drowned their children, but the Ammonites and Moabites, because they caused Israel to sin, were abhorred.

When thou goest forth into camp against thy enemies, then keep thyself from every evil thing, for Satan is an accuser in the time of danger. If there be among thee any man, that is not clean by reason of an occurrence by night, Scripture speaks of what is usual (although the same law applies if the occurrence was in the day time—Sifse Chachomim), then shall he go abroad to without the camp. This is a negative commandment. He shall not come within the camp. This is a positive commandment, and he is forbidden to enter the camp of the Levites, and especially in the camp of the Schechinah (Divine Presence).

But it shall be that toward evening he shall bathe himself in water. Although he bathes himself he cannot be clean unless it is toward evening. And a place shalt thou have without the camp, etc. The camp where the cloud of glory was. Therefore, shall thy camp be holy, that he, the Holy One, blessed be He, see no unseemly thing in thee. Thou shalt not deliver unto his master the servant who may escape unto thee from his master, as Onkelos translates it: "A servant of other nations who seeks refuge in your land." Another meaning is this: "Even a Canaanitish servant belonging to an Israelite, who escaped from another country to the Land of Israel."

Rashi translates a warning to the borrower not to give interest to the lender, and the warning to the lender not to take interest is given in Leviticus 25. "Thy money shalt thou not give him upon usury." When thou makest a vow unto the Lord, thy Eternal, thou shalt not delay to pay it. Do not allow the three festivals to pass over it without paying it. This the rabbins have inferred from the Scripture. What is gone out of thy lips shalt thou keep and perform. Thus a positive commandment is added to the negative commandment.

AMERICAN PHYSICIANS ESTABLISH MEDICAL DEPT. OF HEBREW UNIVERSITY IN JERUSALEM

Commission Just Back from Palestine Reports Purchase of Large Site on Mount of Olives—Work Done With Special Fund of Keren Hayesod Raised in America.

A statement issued by the headquarters of the Keren Hayesod in America announces that the first steps in the establishment of a medical college in Jerusalem to form part of the Hebrew University, where all the instruction is to be given in the Hebrew language, revived and modernized, have been taken by three American physicians, who have just returned from Palestine, where, in the course of a month's stay, they purchased a tract of land for the purpose on the Mount of Olives. The plans for the erection of the first set of permanent buildings have been completed in consultation with expert advice in Europe and America, and the actual work of building, it is announced, will begin as soon as the rainy season in Palestine is over. In addition, in order to start certain pressing work immediately, a building has been rented as temporary quarters for a school for research of tropical diseases and a microbiological laboratory.

Physicians Go to Palestine

The physicians who carried through this work in Palestine with characteristic American enterprise were Dr. Nathan Ratnoff, Dr. David J. Kaliski and Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, all of New York city. They went to Palestine as a commission appointed by the American Jewish Physicians' Committee which, in co-operation with the Palestine Foundation Fund (Keren Hayesod), has raised among the profession in America the sum of $300,000 for the purpose of establishing the medical department of the Hebrew University. The committee includes also a medical and pharmaceutical section, and, while the fund raised is a trust fund and part of the general Palestine Foundation Fund, the appeal was made exclusively to the members of the medical profession in America.

The statement further says that the faculties of law, engineering and education for the Hebrew University are to be provided in the same manner as the medical department. There are now in process of organization committees of jurists, engineers and educators, who are following the road laid out by the committee of physicians.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the statement that all the instruction is to be in Hebrew. In answer to a question as to the adaptability of Hebrew for such a purpose, Dr. Nathan Ratnoff, chairman of the American Jewish Physicians' Committee and of the Commission to Palestine, said:

"It was this feature of our work which caused a good deal of skepticism among members of the profession whose interest was sought. How, they asked, is it possible to teach the medical sciences in Hebrew? The question was answered for us who went to Palestine the moment we stepped off the railroad station in Jerusalem. There everything linguistic that we saw or heard was in Hebrew. The signs on the street corners and above the shops were in Hebrew. We were greeted by our friends in Hebrew. We heard the people converse and the children play and quarrel in Hebrew. It was as though the pages of the Bible rose up and lived before us. The only thing that broke the illusion was the modern bustling and progressive aspect of so much of the life that we saw there.

COMMITTEE OF PHYSICIANS WHO ESTABLISHED MEDICAL SCHOOL OF HEBREW UNIVERSITY IN JERUSALEM

Great Need of Medical College

"Our mission to Palestine was," continued Dr. Ratnoff, "to make a thorough investigation of present conditions in the country, with a view to determining whether or not they were ripe for starting the medical department of the Hebrew University, and, second, to inaugurate the work if we found conditions favorable. With regard to the first, we found that the need for a medical college was urgent, because a considerable number of young men and women with the necessary preliminary education for matriculation in a medical university were being sent abroad by their parents, if the latter are rich enough, in order to receive their medical education. The children of poor parents who may have the ambition to enter the profession are, of course, deprived of the opportunity. The other reason which convinced us that no time should be lost in establishing the medical department was the great need in Palestine of research work in the endemic diseases and for the education and training of expert sanitarians. The problem is very much similar to that which faced our own government in Cuba, Porto Rico and especially in the Canal Zone.

"Our first important action was the purchase of a site for the medical college, with its dental department and pharmaceutical laboratories. The site covers an area of approximately thirty acres on Mt. Scopus. We then rented a building, which is now used as a Pasteur institute, for the microbiological laboratory and school for research in tropical diseases. The school will begin to function as soon as the proper directing head and assistants have been appointed and the necessary equipment purchased and delivered. The work of building will start when the rainy season in Palestine is over. We also started an up-to-date medical library and we hope, in addition, to provide in the very near future suitable apparatus to enable Palestine to take care of its own radiographic work as well as to begin research and instruction along these lines. We expect the complete medical school to be a gradual development, from the first departments devoted to medical research to post-graduate instruction for the physicians in Palestine, up to the eventual establishment of schools for instruction in the fundamentals of medical science."

Fund Part of Keren Hayesod

The American Jewish Physicians' Committee was organized on the initiative of Dr. Nathan Ratnoff and Dr. Joseph Bakst, who made the first contribution of $1,500 to the cause at the time of the visit of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization, to this country in April, 1921. Simultaneously the Palestine Foundation Fund was established and a decision reached to regard the work of the Physicians' Committee as an integral part of the fund.

The Medical College is to be governed by a Board of Governors consisting half of members to be appointed by the Physicians' Committee and the other half by the World Zionist Organization.

The following American physicians are included in the Board of Governors: Dr. S. S. Goldwater, Dr. Israel Strauss, Dr. Leon Luria, Dr. Samuel J. Kopetzky, Dr. David J. Kaliski and Dr. Nathan Ratnoff. The men representing the World Zionist Organization are Dr. Chaim Weizmann, Prof. Otto Warburg, Dr. R. Solomon of London and Dr. M. D. Eder. There is

Political and Cultural Status of Jews in Eastern Europe

"The Present Political and Cultural Status of the Jews in Eastern Europe" will be treated in a lecture by one of the foremost Jews of Europe, Dr. George Leiken. Dr. Leiken was a professor in Heidelberg University and at the Khazan University. He served as Chief Rabbi of the Khazan district and was in charge of 126 Jewish communities. He has also been a devoted Jew and a Zionist.

The lecture is to be the first this year in the series given under the auspices of the Hurwitz Educational League. It is to be delivered in the auditorium of the West Side Y. M. H. A., 225 West Thirty-fifth street, Saturday evening, October 28, at 8:30 p. m. A musical program will also be rendered. Cards of admission, which are free, may be obtained either at the headquarters of the Hurwitz Educational League, 121 Nassau street, or at the "Y."

The Hurwitz Educational League aims to encourage Jewish learning through prizes, scholarships, etc., as well as to aid poor students. It was inspired by the memory of the late Dr. Solomon T. H. Hurwitz, who gave his life in the cause of the Jewish student in America.

Modern Jewish Quarter in Tel-Aviv

Jerusalem (J. T. A. Correspondence).—Considerable progress is being made in the completion of the new Jewish quarter in Tel-Aviv. The building of the quarter is in the hands of the Association of Homeless, which was founded after the May pogroms in Jaffa. Hundreds of Jewish families from Jaffa and the Arab districts escaped to Tel-Aviv, where it was impossible, however, for them to obtain housing accommodation. Temporarily, the refugees made their homes in tents and barracks. They then formed their association and obtained the assistance of the Jewish National Fund, which purchased the site, and of the Keren Hayesod, which made a loan to the association of £E24,000. Eighteen thousand pounds have already been paid out by Keren Hayesod. And now on the sands of Tel-Aviv, just by the sea, where hitherto there has been a desolate waste, a new settlement is growing up equipped with all necessary cultural and other institutions, including a children's home. Electricity has been installed in all houses and water pipes have been laid.

We see that Dr. Stephen S. Wise is only the "acting" president of the Jewish Institute of Religion. This must be because he wishes to be in the company of Dr. Cyrus Adler and Rabbi Julian Morgenstern.

The late William N. Loew, who frequently contributed translations of Hungarian poetry to our columns, was a well-known lawyer of this city. He died last week, aged seventy-six. He was a brother of the famous Chief Rabbi of Szegedin.

We learn that the reason why Yiddish plays are not popular in England is that all, or nearly all of them, center about scenes of Polish-Jewish life, and that British Jews do not like to be reminded of their origin. Well, we did not know that British Jews went to see Yiddish plays.

The disorders in Eastern Germany recently were not due to anti-Semitic causes. In fact, the plight of the East European Jews in Germany has notably improved latterly, for the German and B'nai B'rith Order has taken them under its protecting wing. This is a welcome sign that this Jewish fraternity continues Jewishly active.

The great house of Rothschild, the Jewish bankers of Western Europe, exerts a considerable influence on writers. At least once every ten years some literary work dealing with this celebrated family must be launched on an unsuspecting public. About ten years ago we beheld the then new play, "The Five Frankforters." Now, times having vastly altered, we are to have a new biography of the "tribe,"—in how many volumes has not yet been determined. At all events the first volume deals with Mayer Amschel, the founder of the dynasty.

"If it weren't for the Irish and the Jews." These words of the old, almost forgotten song recurred to us when we read that the Veteran Corps of the Sixty-ninth Regiment, a militia organization preponderatingly recruited from the Irish element of our citizenry, had recently unveiled a tablet at Salem Fields Cemetery in memory of the Jewish soldiers in the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth United States Infantry (the old Sixty-ninth). This exemplification of the ancient ideal, all men are brethren, is distinctly heartening. "If it weren't for the Irish and the Jews."

When a synagogue fails to dispense gratuitous benefactions to its members, it fails to come within the legal definition of a charity. This is the decision of Justice Lewis, in the Supreme Court of Brooklyn, and he seems to be quite correct in his interpretation of the law. As a matter of course, no synagogue exists to provide pecuniary aid to those belonging to it; it is founded and maintained as a place of worship for such persons as consider themselves members of the House of Israel. So, from this reasoning, no synagogue may ever raise the question whether it is a charitable corporation.

In England "The Merchant of Venice" has been produced as an opera. Presumably the score was not composed, as a means of evading the current tendency whereby Shakespeare's drama is presented as innocuously as possible. As an opera "The Merchant of Venice" has possibilities, but not much more. To what anti-Jewish sentiments will the music give expression? Or, will the production leave a philo-Semitic impression on those who hear it? We really wonder that Richard Wagner, that sterling "lover" of the Jews, did not utilize this play for his own purposes against the Jews.

Sabbath begins at 5.03 p. m. Noach. Gen. 6:9—11:32. Prophetic reading, Is. 54:1—55:5.

REFORM PRETENSIONS

THE paper "Early Religious Activities in the United States," by Rabbi Joseph Leiser, which appears in another part of this issue, was supplied as news to the Jewish press by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. Presumably, then, the paper was produced at the behest of the officials of that organization. Under this inspiration (?) its author was in duty bound to exhaust the stock of superlatives in the dictionary to embalm the outstanding "accomplishments" and figures of Reform. From this aspect of his task he was successful and is entitled to the "recompense" of the faithful "workman."

But enough of this. Mr. Leiser frankly admits that latterly Orthodox synagogues have been increasing in number and ascribes this wholly logical and appropriate manifestation in American Jewish life to the well-worn spirit of cleavage between the Russian and the German section of the community. He goes further and offers the gratuitous suggestions, in the nature of a prophecy, that when the children of these Orthodox parents, of Russian birth or origin, come within the orbit of the influence of Reform Jews, of German origin or antecedents, the doom of Neo-Orthodoxy in America will be sounded. Until that time comes the Union of American Hebrew Congregations will "mark time" and attempt to set the community by the ears.

In this division of his lucubrations Mr. Leiser is not so faithful a "workman." True, he is here acceptably serving the Union, the provider, but he is here also sowing the seeds of discord between Jew and Jew and mendaciously prognosticating a state of affairs which we do not believe will ever come to pass.

Where the children of Orthodox parents receive diligent training in the path they should follow, not the slightest chance exists that they will depart that path for such a one as Reform presents to them. Reform disgusts the true Jew by its innovations, its iconoclasm, its departures from hallowed traditions. Not a union which is a hundred times better and stronger than the present Union, and all its scribes, is sufficiently powerful to wean Orthodox Jews, in this country or elsewhere, from the object of their devotion, a Judaism pure and undefiled.

RESORT CONQUESTS

WE heard much, in years gone by, of the petty prejudice to which Jews were subjected at various health and summer resorts in this country. This prejudice and the disabilities accompanying it have not altogether disappeared, but there has been evident latterly a welcome change in some respects herein. Whether a strengthened civil rights law, as in the State of New York, has helped in this direction we are unable to say. But the alteration has undoubtedly been assisted by another circumstance.

Years ago, at Lakewood, the Laurel-in-the-Pines rigorously barred our people as guests. Even when the number of co-religionists sojourning there increased by leaps and bounds this hostility pursued the even, anti-Semitic tenor of its way. Now it has passed into Jewish control and not only will be henceforth a hotel at which Jewish guests are welcome, but one where our dietary laws will be strictly observed. Thus one by one the anti-Semitic hotelkeepers succumb, as is right, to the inevitable. Thus one by one we behold fresh proof that prejudice is not a commercial or a humanitarian policy.

Now, the anti-Semites may be heard to say: Oh, well, Lakewood has become a Jewish resort! Assuming, but by no means conceding, that only Jews frequent its balmy, health-giving piny-woods, the resort has been ridded of a debasing disfigurement. For there cannot be any defense for the attitude which would exclude a man from the benefits of a hotel or of a resort simply because he happens to belong to a particular race or religious community.

No, the business of exhibiting prejudice in the conduct of resort hotels is ended. Jews are just like all other inhabitants of the land and, as all public facilities are open without let or hindrance to the entire population of the country, so no part thereof may be insouciantly barred from any hotels.

In fine, we behold in this Jewish conquest of the base resort-prejudice a welcome and the proper sign. Prejudice of this or any other kind has no place in American life. Only by thus conquering it, by eliminating its root and branch, is life rendered more enjoyable. No matter how the anti-Semites rage, this way lies our freedom.

The ex-Kaiser, in his memoirs, blames the Freemasons for having been a contributory cause to the outbreak of the World War. He refers in terms only to the "Great Orient" lodges, which is rather an indefinite allusion. Presumably he intends the Grand Orient of France, of which Isaac Adolphe Cremieux was at one time the grand master. This French body is accused of having been and being the embodiment of a Jewish "conspiracy" aiming at world-aggrandizement, the culmination of which was documented through the "Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion." Now, as the "Protocols" is proved to have been a mendacious and unblushing forgery, it would not have been discreet for the ex-Kaiser to have followed out his condemnation of Freemasons by a reference to the specific Jewish aspects of the situation. Someone must have "edited" his racy narrative. The exile of Doorn, the chosen, by himself would never have stopped short at this point.

THE ETERNITY OF LIFE

"And, behold, I, even I, do bring a flood of waters upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life. . . . But with thee will I establish my covenant." (Gen. vi, 17-18.)

ALL the living were to be destroyed. The end of all flesh had come. The last breath of life was to vanish in one dying sigh. For life had missed its purpose, and its creator has doomed it. But, curiously, while the Maker of life pronounces the terrible doom upon all life, He establishes His covenant with Noah—at least one representative of life. Life, then, cannot and must not be destroyed. If but a single spark remain of the sacrificial fire of life on the face of this earth, out of it a new altar can and should be fanned into flame. Thus, rightly understood, the story of the flood spells a prophecy of the perdurance of life on this globe. It contains the assurance that one spark of this vestal fire will always be found glowing somewhere, somehow. For life is the quenchless fire, ablaze with the love great floods cannot extinguish. Life is eternal.

Life is immortal while lives are mortal. Life may not reckon of numbers, but it shows a great concern for the spirit which is itself. Life seems wasteful, for it is so lavish; but out of its lavish wastefulness it never leaves its own altars untended, and whatever it wastes—according to our own estimation, for we know not its vast plan—is but the fuel which replenishes the burning. From form to form, in sheer riot of manifoldness, life leaps onward, clothing itself now in one now in another guise, but always true to its own insistent purpose of self-perpetuation. Flung across our earth in a green belt of fields and forests, ranging through nature's vast domain on myriad feet, singing out passionately in every bush of myriad frail-throated birds, but most passionately out of the human heart, whence it rises into thought and vision and the desperate unreaching of the finite to the infinite, where did it come from? Where, in what primal yearning of the Eternal Father, did it have its source? We know not; only this we dare to infer, that the Father being eternal and existence being of His eternal essence, the Child—whom we name Life yet understand but little nonetheless—must be eternal too.

If naught else, it is the sheer joy of living, the rollicking rhapsody of its gladness, which is the earnest of life's eternity. For joy cries for eternity, nay, joy is eternity: eternity's brimful overflow. Notes of gladness thrill through the world from end to end, carrying before them all the wild weird accents of grief. The universe is too vast for grief's momentary burst; and in the long sweep of God's thought through timeless time, while life rolls over the earth in alternating tides of births and deaths, all that denies life is cleared away. What remains is the divine ecstasy that wills to live and breathe, that wills to die in order to live again, and live abundantly. All that denies life, and all that defies life, all that would cause it to shrink with sorrow and disappointment, must in the end flee before the victorious tides of life's passionate eternity. The human heart, which in its own systole and diastole hears the echo of life's eternal undulation, can but feel that in this world, finite though it is, all losses are compensated and assigned their fitting place in the harmony of the infinite whole. Here error is but truth's foil; here evil is partial good—the good that is ever on the way. Here is the sin that regenerates and purifies; here love loses and agonises only to become purged of its own dross; and here men and women fall only to rise. Here one Noah is worth a whole generation of godless men. Are joy and victory not the ultimate notes of the world-song, the last exultation of nobly triumphant souls? Do not the best of us feel in their heart of hearts a sense of the worth and wonder of life in itself, for its own sake? Surely, life is its own excuse and its own warrant eternally. This perishing heart of ours feels the throb of imperishable life, of some everlasting inherent namelessness—inherently good, inherently godly—which goes out beyond itself to the invisible fringe of being, where all things merge inexpressibly into the All: and this unmistakable sense of infinitude in the mortal heart is a sufficient assurance of life's eternity.

Sings the Psalmist: "The river of God is full of water." To which our rabbis add: "God's river has been pouring forth from the dawn of creation, yet is still full of water, still of undiminished flow." We may add that not alone is the flow undiminished but steadily increases through the ages. Through ever-widening banks does Life stream onward everywhere, where men dwell and have their being; and the tide swells with God's ever-increasing purposes. So truth grows into limpid clarity; so love deepens into greater tenderness; so beauty is sublimated into purest delight, leaving behind the lust of the flesh, as when the sheer blue veilings of the twilight fall gently upon the hard materiality of the earth and soften all harsh outlines into a vast spreading panorama of divine peace. And there is no nook or corner of this world whither God's river of life does not flow with its rich deposit of truth and love and beauty; and there is no nook or corner which is ever completely filled with this divine forthpouring of the glory and grandeur of existence. God pours and pours, through ages untold of constant unfolding; and who shall say that in all this lavishness of the divine grace there can ever be a permanent loss or such fatally final gain as would spell satiety and stagnation?

Still men ask, Will the flow last forever? Will life not cease at some far off date, when all things cool off and the world's last breath vanishes in one dying sigh which no ear will hear in that vast emptiness? All we can say to them is that life is too much alive ever to die. If we die life lives. Our civilization may be a frail bark, yet will we float it over the deep with such trust as only faith can inspire. Never will our ark be empty. Someone will always be there in whom our aspirations will live again. And he will peer through the window to watch for the first sign in the sky. JOEL BLAU.

PERSONALITIES

WE are welcoming at this time a new singer to our shores. She is Isa Kremer, and if we are to put faith in reports, she is a prima donna of the folk song. To our regret, we have heard only sparse reports of Mme. Kremer from the other side, else we would play the host to the singer's talent with more

In her native Russia Isa Kremer achieved an enviable reputation as a singer and was very popular for her rendition of folk songs and the intimate songs of the nations. But, being a Jewess, her rights of traveling and living in various parts of Russia were restricted. To overcome this handicap she secured a passport gallantry. But what we can safely tell you regarding her are some facts about her career. When her manager sends us two tickets for her debut in New York then we can tell you if you may doff your hats to a new genius.

Mme. Kremer's manager informs us that she is an expert linguist, and in Italian, especially, she has a flawless intonation. This is an achievement worthy of consideration, and something altogether different from most linguists, who must content themselves merely with fluent speech. What, however, is of more interest to us, and in accord with the chief aim of this page, is, is Isa Kremer a member in good standing?

She is. And in her possession is a Sefer Torah to attest to that fact. The story is as follows:

as a dressmaker and so was able to concertize.

During the war, it is related, Mme. Mouronitzeff, wife of the president of the Duma, organized a benefit concert in Moscow in aid of some war charity. The concert was to represent the Russians on the front. The artists were obtained and the affair was prominently advertised, but no customers appeared for the tickets. Thereupon the committee wisely decided that a revision in the program was necessary and they asked Isa Kremer, who happened to be passing through Moscow, if she would participate in the concerts, knowing that her songs were popular.

As it was a concert symbolical of the soldiers, the singer consented, saying that she would sing in Yiddish, in honor of the Jewish soldiers who were fighting with their Russian countrymen. The delegation demurred. Any language but Yiddish, they said; to which Mme. Kremer replied, no language but Yiddish. The delegation departed in ill-humor and a conference was held to discuss Isa Kremer's stiff-neckedness. The decision was prompted by necessity and Isa Kremer was invited to sing on her own conditions. Then the customers came, the concert was a success and Jewish songs were heard in Moscow.

As a reward for her staunchness, the Jews of Moscow sent her the Sefer Torah, an extraordinary gift and one to be prized above any other possession. National martyrs and heroes could hardly hope for a greater reward.

Last week we introduced you to Willie Auerbach-Levy. This week we will acquaint you with Victor David Brenner, another artist who works sometimes in a rather specialized field. Without actually knowing him, you probably have come in contact with his work many hundreds of times a year. He enjoys the unique distinction of being with you at all hours of the day and in the most familiar places, for Victor David Brenner is the designer of the famous Lincoln penny.

From Shavly, a little village in what was Russia when the gentility ruled and the people worked, a boy of sixteen, bundle in hand, set out to win fame. He was the grandson of a blacksmith and the son of a metal worker and maker of family seals. This was the beginning of the first chapter of the story of Brenner. From that little obscure town he was setting out on a mission that was to result in the bringing of art ideals home to even the poorest home, for it is to be supposed that it is poor people who pay most attention to the pennies. In the Lincoln penny Brenner made radical departures from uninspired designs on current coinage and produced a neat work of art.

Up to his sixteenth year young Brenner was employed in his father's little shop and learned the trade of die cutting. Now he wanted work bigger than catering to Russian aristocracy. He traveled about from village to village, taking orders as they came to him by chance or soliciting work at the inns he passed by. Coming to a large town he entered an establishment which made line engravings for publishers and cut rubber stamps. For nine months the young man remained in this place, learning a new branch of his craft. In his eighteenth year he halted at Riga long enough to learn jewelry engraving, exchanging for this knowledge his own of die cutting. At nineteen he returned to his native province and set up in Kovno as an engraver of musical instruments, jewelry and seals.

Still his ambitions were not satisfied. America at this time loomed large in the horizon of aspiring youth, and the vision was fame, fortune and idealism. Without money, but armed with fine skill in a highly paid profession, Brenner came to New York.

Ignorant of the language and customs of the new land, he did not find his fit place as an engraver, and had to be contented with work in a little shop on Essex street, on the East Side. There he engraved badges for neighborhood clubs and societies and cut dies for jewelers and engravers. Two years later he was sufficiently versed in the ways of America to open a little shop for himself in the jewelers' district of New York, and with his savings to send for his parents and his brother. His business prospered, and so ended the first chapter of Victor David Brenner.

The second chapter began when Professor Ettinger, a well-known collector of coins, one day came across in an East Side shop a little badge with the head of Beethoven, used as the emblem of a local singing society. The badge interested the professor so much that he made inquiries and soon located the designer of the badge. The artist interested the collector even more than the badge, and he took him to the president of the American Numismatic Society, who showed Brenner the society's collection of coins—a wonderful collection, which revealed to the eager eyes of the artisan a broad field for his talents. It was then that the idea was born in Brenner's brain that coins can be made a medium between art and the people. He saw the value of an artistically designed coin in awakening a love for the beauties of the sculptor's and the painter's art.

Through the influence of the Numismatic Society he obtained several commissions for the designing of medals for various purposes. One of these commissions was for the execution of the medal that was presented to Nansen and Peary.

These commissions were naturally not enough to enable Brenner to make a living from his new work, and he kept his business and did so well that he began to amass a comfortable bank account. Then the artist in him interfered. It made him close up his shop after four years of commerce and transported him to Paris, to the Academie Julian, where the pupils enjoyed the tuition of Roty, then one of the most celebrated medalists in Europe. Brenner became a pupil of Roty's and also studied sculpture under Alexandre Charpentier, an adherent of the Rodin school.

After a period of study in Paris Brenner returned to New York and hung out his shingle as a medalist. His ability was quickly recognized, and the National Academy of Design placed him on its teaching staff.

Brenner had climbed, but he was not yet satisfied. Three years after his return to New York he went back to Paris and resumed his studies at the Academie, with the definite aim of finally breaking with commercial art. After this second period of study he returned to New York and opened a studio and has since then established for himself a solid reputation as sculptor and medallist.

In 1908 he was chosen to design the medal that was to be awarded to every workman on the Panama Canal who remained at his post for a period of two years. Considering the dangers and difficulties of the work on the canal, this medal was a reward for no mean effort. Then the Republic of San Domingo commissioned Brenner to execute a series of coins, and at this time also President Roosevelt recognized the mediocrity of the design of the old penny (the Indian's head) and Brenner was chosen to design a new coin. The result was the coin now known as the Lincoln penny and won for Brenner nation-wide renown.

In the last decade Mr. Brenner has executed many portraits in bronze, bas-reliefs, sculptural works for public institutions, medals, many works not executed to the order of man or governments but to the order of inspiration; and all these productions Brenner has endowed with the idealism which timidly budded in Shavly and blossomed in the free and spirited atmosphere of America.

If you live in New York City a familiar reminder of Brenner is the seal of the New York Public Library. You will see it on that magnificent building on Fifth avenue, the main branch of the library, which is the pride of New Yorkers and the beloved of every student and literary worker in America.

Here is an amusing anecdote. You may remember some time ago we told you about Louis Zeltner, who is the local Republican nominee for Congress in opposition to Meyer London, the Socialist. The district which will elect or defeat Mr. Zeltner naturally sees a good deal of the candidate, and he is welcome wherever he comes, for his is the reputation of a good fellow. Last week he strolled into a hall where Mr. London had just addressed a gathering. The audience was still there, but Mr. London had left. Zeltner was told that his opponent had declared himself in favor of beer and light wines. "Do you favor them?" he was asked.

"Favor them?" he gasped. "Why, I drink them." JOSEPH KAYE.

EARLY RELIGIOUS ACTIVITIES IN UNITED STATES

By RABBI JOSEPH LEISER

In a casual review of the early religious activities of the Jewish people of the United States the feature that stands out like a promontory along a seashore is the launching of the Reform Movement. This movement, known as Reform Judaism, inextricably identified with the Jews of America though it be, is a historical development of the prophetic destiny of the Jewish people, which came to fuller consciousness in this country because in America they enjoyed more freedom and exercised a larger degree of self-determination.

It was not until 1729 that the first synagogue was dedicated in this country. This edifice was erected on Mill street in what had by that time become New York and is the pre-colonial progenitor of the present Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue of New York, which enjoys the distinction of being the oldest Jewish congregation in this country. This congregation was not a Reform congregation, nor were those that followed in the course of the century in Philadelphia, Newport, Charlestown, Lancaster, Savannah and Baltimore. The Reform Movement came later.

Not until the middle of the nineteenth century was the cleavage between the old and the new age discernible. Previous to that period there had been projected in Germany religious constructions that prepared Jewry for a new interpretation of Judaism. But in the Jewish communities that stretched along the Atlantic seaboard at that time this movement which was to influence the Jewish people of America in an untold degree had not yet taken root. The congregations then established functioned along traditional lines and depended wholly upon the spiritual heritage of their forefathers. They had not responded to the new scientific spirit which had begun to unlock the treasure houses of Biblical and rabbinic lore and to read the cryptic inscription of Israel's marvelous career in terms of continuous growth and unceasing revelation.

The first reform congregation organized in the United States is credited to Beth Elohim of Charleston, S. C. In the year 1824 forty-seven members of that congregation, dissatisfied with the prevailing order of service, memorialized its vestry to have the ritual reformed. In their petition they referred to the religious agitation at that time stirring the Jews of Germany.

With the exception of this congregation in Charleston, steps were not taken anywhere in the United States in the interest of Reform Judaism before the year 1840. After that date societies were formed among German Jewish settlers, the avowed object of which was to stimulate interest among their members in the study of Jewish history and literature from the academic standpoint. In several instances these societies were the forerunners of reform congregations. The most conspicuous American congregations tracing their origin to these "Reform Vereine" are Har Sinai of Baltimore, Keneseth Israel of Philadelphia, Emanu-El of New York and Sinai of Chicago.

To grasp the significance of Reform Judaism one must consult history. Towards the middle of the eighteenth century the Jewish communities of Europe had reached their lowest depths, culturally at least. The minds of the Jewish people had become cramped by the casuistic and pilpulistic methods of Talmudic study. The religion of Judaism was, according to the version of that period, a legalism, and the Jew an exile. Socially the Jews were regarded as pariahs and politically they were degraded to the ranks of aliens or considered as non-existent. These intolerable circumstances engendered a corresponding debasement of mind and spirit. They gradually became uncouth in manner and unkempt in their dress and appearance. The language they spoke was a jargon, a conglomeration of terms that had accumulated from their sojournings through the various countries of Europe.

In its initial stages the reform movement was concerned with the form and manner of worship. Services in the majority of synagogues were noisy and lacking in devotional attitude and in decorum. The object of Israel Jacobson, who initiated the movement, was to estheticize the service. In his private synagogue which he opened at Berlin in 1815 he introduced the organ, the sermon in the vernacular and a decent regard for decorum. There was no deviation in the liturgy from the prescribed order of service handed down by tradition. This innovation was the development of a later day, together with the recasting of Judaism in view of the historical mission of the people as contrasted with the national and legalistic conception which then held sway.

But the Prussian government did not favor the prospect of private synagogues of this sort and, following an appeal to suppress them made to the Prussian government by the rabbis of the old school, private synagogues were ordered closed in 1817.

Following this attempt, a reform society was organized in Hamburg in 1818 by progressive Jews who had come under the influence of Jacobson's private reform temple in Berlin. This project encountered the bitterest opposition from rabbis who feared that in establishing a reform temple the authority of the Talmud as the absolute rule for Jewish practice would be abrogated, as indeed it was in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

The opposition of the old school was directed against these departures from traditional ceremonialism which were illustrated in the Hamburg temple. The distinctive features that marked the opening of this reform temple were deference to decorum, prayers in the ver-acular, a German sermon and certain minor changes in the liturgy, notably in prayers for the coming of the Messiah.

To give Judaism its true interpretation not merely as a memory and replica of the past but also as a proclamation of truths and duties for those living in the new age it was necessary to obtain a definite statement of religious conviction, a philosophy of Judaism, or at best a theology of Judaism. This statement was obtained after a series of conferences held by the German rabbis of reform and liberal tendencies in Brunswick in 1844, Frankfurt in 1845 and Breslau in 1846.

These conferences and the influences radiated by them were the most significant in the history of Judaism since the establishment of the rabbinical schools at Sura and Pumbeditha. The details of these sessions of the master minds of Israel do not interest us. The general deductions alone arrest our attention because these conclusions are the theological cornerstones of our American Judaism.

This and other conferences brought out the conviction that more than birth in a Jewish household determines the affiliation of the Jew with the community of Israel. The Jews are assigned a particular role among the families of earth. The Jew is a priest of God, chosen to carry into the world the assurance of the One God and to spread this knowledge of God among men.

This providential design of a priestly mission set aside the national factor of a restoration of the kingdom in Palestine and put in its place a religious construction of universal import which gave cogency to the concept that the Jews are a religious people instead of a Jewish nation.

The particular interpretation of his destiny involves the Jew in a peculiar obligation of service. He is obligated to identify himself with this covenantal obligation before the eyes of all men. The unique burden is laid upon the Jew to teach the knowledge of God unto all men and to illustrate it by a life of service in accordance with these ideas.

There are today in round numbers some two hundred and fifty Reform congregations in the United States. Without defining terms, these congregations have in the main developed a ritual and evolved a theology which is the direct result of the influence of the German reform rabbis. Some of the German reform rabbis, like Abraham Geiger, remained in Germany and others, like Max Lillenthal, David Einhorn, Samuel Adler, Samuel Hirsch, Bernard Felsenthal and the immortal Isaac Mayer Wise, migrated to this country after the middle of the last century and reshaped the ceremonial of the synagogue in accordance with the progressive spirit of the age. The order of worship instituted in their synagogues by the reform leaders was thoroughly in accord with American standards of decorum and, what is more vital, compatible with American attitudes and the spirit of American democracy, which is drawn in part from the very soul of Israel.

Reform congregations, however, are by no means in the majority. The ascendancy of Jews of German birth was interrupted by the arrival at these shores of large numbers who are not sufficiently familiar with the purpose and intent of Reform Judaism to accept it outright and to practice it in their synagogues. Orthodox synagogues are increasing. There is no denial of the fact, however, that many of their members, after living in this country for some time, affiliate with reform congregations. Their children do not follow the traditional ceremonialism of their parents. Frequently they forswear the religious heritage of their fathers entirely and align themselves with measures and movements which are not merely antagonistic to religion in general and to Judaism in particular, but which are purely materialistic in character—forgetting that man does not live by bread alone.

As Reform Judaism becomes better understood among the generation now growing into manhood and womanhood in this country, the intent of this movement so fully adapted to the spirit of the age along historical, scientific and social lines will be received by them with greater sympathy and promoted with greater devotion. The children of orthodox parents will be quick to realize that as Americans they are a religious people who believe that not only is God ever present, but that God is in them and makes His ways known by the manner in which each one conducts himself towards his brother.

In 1885 a rabbinical conference of American rabbis met in Pittsburgh and drew up a platform which gave succinct expression to the theology of the Reform Movement. This platform stands to this day as the embodiment of the central concepts of Reform Judaism and serves to assure the open-minded among the youth of Israel that Reform Judaism is a deepening of Jewish consciousness rather than a means of evading duties and obligations. "Into Judaism, not away from Judaism," was its preamble.

This platform asserted that in every religion there is an attempt to grasp the infinite and that Judaism has sought amidst continual struggle to preserve the God idea as the central religious truth for all humanity to embody in conduct. To this end the Jewish people were summoned of old as teachers of the law of God, which is not undermined by modern discoveries in the domain of nature. Much that the Jew has inherited from the past, including the Mosaic legislation and the rabbinical codes regarding diet, priestly purity, dress and the like, originated in ages and influences foreign to our present mental and spiritual state. When Israel was a nation his national customs were acceptable.

Thanks and Smiles of Happiness are waiting for YOU

HE who gives to his destitute brethren, reaps his reward in his own happiness and in the smiles and happiness of little children, of the sick, the feeble and the old.

Does A "Happiness Pledge Receipt" Hang on Your Wall?

It pictures these smiles of happiness—it means that you have pledged your fair share. We want to send you one.

Perhaps you have not yet given — possibly no Federation worker has been able to visit you. IN THAT CASE—

BE YOUR OWN SOLICITOR. Ask yourself:—"How much can I give?" Remember there are thousands of handicapped Jews in New York City, homeless, sick, lame, widowed, orphaned, aged—some starving. In their name, this is our last call. Give! You may be saving a human life.

Fill in and mail this pledge:

"To aid and help the thousands of sick, poor, crippled, orphaned, aged, needy and destitute Jews annually requiring assistance of all kinds, the undersigned hereby pledges himself to subscribe (or increase his annual subscription) to American Jews no longer consider themselves a nation but a religious community and therefore look to America and devote themselves, in common with their fellow American citizens, to the establishment of the reign of truth and righteousness in which all men will share. Filled with the spirit of their ancestors, the Jews, faithful to their covenantal obligations, deem it a duty to participate in the great tasks of modern times and to help solve, on a basis of justice and righteousness, the problems, social and moral, presented in our modern industrial era.

The ideas contained in this platform have characterized Reform Judaism during the last half century. To make this construction of Judaism effective in the lives of the Jewish settlers of early days was the inspiring effort of the pioneer leaders of reform. The tasks initiated by them have not been finished nor have all their dreams been fulfilled. The work awaiting the tireless activities of those of us who are alive this day must be a fulfillment in part of this platform drawn up thirty-eight years ago. While later years enlarged it, the cardinal ideas representative of Reform Judaism obligates us to say, "All that was then spoken we will do," as in the days of old our fathers answered Moses at the foot of Sinai's thundering heights, when he gave unto them laws and statutes in the keeping of which there has been the reward of love and service.

This modern interpretation of the message and mission of Judaism was evoked by circumstances that had regard for the full expression of Jewish genius. Political reforms released the Jew from many restrictions. He became a citizen of the world and in America he was fully franchised to participate with his fellow men in the duties incumbent upon him as citizen and as Jew. The synagogues and organizations created under the influence of Reform Judaism are an integral part of the religious life of America. Sons have now succeeded fathers and grandfathers as presidents of congregations, thus assuring the perpetuity of these synagogues. Intensely Jewish, they would draw all who enter these courts of the Lord nearer to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and thus make modern worshippers realize that the spirit of God placed upon their fathers has not departed from them, neither will it depart from their children.

New Rabbi for Young Women's Hebrew Association

William S. Malev was elected rabbi of the Young Women's Hebrew Association at 31 West 110th street on Tuesday, October 10, by the Religious Committee, among whose members are Mrs. Samuel I. Hyman, chairman; Mrs. Morris Golde, Mrs. Moses Hyamson, Mrs. Edwin Kaufman, Mrs. Alfred Kornfeld, Mrs. Benjamin Marshall, Mrs. David de Sola Pool, Mrs. Israel Unterberg.

Rabbi Malev received his B. A. at City College in 1919 and his M. A. at Columbia University in 1921. At present he is pursuing his studies at the Jewish Theological Seminary of America. Besides his work at the Young Women's Hebrew Association, he is president of the Jewish Teachers' Association and is affiliated with the Bureau of Jewish Education, with Teachers' Institute, the Central Jewish Institute and Young Israel.

Services will be held at the Young Women's Hebrew Association every Friday evening at 8.30 and every Sabbath morning at 9. Rabbi Malev will speak at both services. People of the neighborhood, as well as visitors, are cordially welcomed.

Two courses will be given by Rabbi Malev on Wednesday evenings at 8 p. m. An hour will be devoted weekly to the reading and interpretation of the Bible in English. The ideals of that greatest of all books will be explained in terms of modern life. At 9 p. m. the hour will be given to reading and discussion of the Hebrew prayerbook, to easy conversation in Hebrew and the easier portions of the Bible will be read and translated from the original. All who are interested are invited to visit these classes and present their point of view on the subject under discussion.

Dr. Grant at Sinai Congregation

One of the largest crowds that ever congregated in the new Sinai Synagogue of the Bronx welcomed the Rev. Percy S. Grant as the first speaker at the Brotherhood open meeting at Sinai Congregation of the Bronx last Monday evening. Dr. Grant's topic was: "Liberalism the Necessity of the Times," and he pointed out that if the world would not do away with the prejudices that it had acquired in time, that the true spirit of brotherhood would never exist. He spoke in glowing terms of the Jewish contributions to world civilization, and urged all his hearers to join the brotherhood and help carry on the splendid work.

At the conclusion of the address Dr. Price announced that he would be glad to receive applications for membership to the brotherhood and 56 were received.

Mrs. Lillian Solomon has formed a post-confirmation class under the leadership of Dr. Price. The class meets every Thursday evening at 8 p. m. in the vestry rooms of the temple.

The Young Folks' League of Sinai is reorganizing. It intends to hold an open meeting in the near future. Dr. Price is organizing a Woman's Bible Class, and any Jewish woman is eligible to join. The classes will meet Wednesday night at 8 p. m.

Give Your Baby the Best

Best of Care—and Best of Food will make the Best Baby. Every mother wants her baby to be the best baby, and there is no reason why, by utmost care and proper food, her baby should not be strong and robust. If a fairy godmother were to ask a mother what she most desired for her baby, the answer would surely be GOOD HEALTH.

Your baby will thrive properly and grow steadily, bigger and stronger, if you give him the best care and the best food. Robust and sturdy health has come to thousands of children who have been fed on Eagle Milk as their grateful mothers have testified. For these mothers there is no food so universally used and with as successful results as Eagle Milk. It is safe to say that more babies have been reared successfully upon Eagle Milk than all other forms of artificial foods combined.

Don't experiment with your baby by giving him foods of which you are doubtful. Borden's Eagle Milk is the natural food for babies, for it contains nothing but pure milk and pure sugar. There are no doubts about its purity or its splendid results. Doctors have recommended Eagle Milk for thousands and thousands of babies who are puny and underweight. Eagle Milk is easily digested, safe and dependable for baby feeding.

Buy a can of Eagle Milk today and use it on your table and in your cooking, for coffee or chocolate—in fact, for every purpose that you usually use milk and sugar. Eagle Brand is cheaper and goes much farther, and because it is of such high quality and uniformity it is the BEST for your table. Place a regular order with your grocer for Eagle Milk now. Every grocer has Eagle Milk.

Cut out the coupon in this advertisement and mail it to The Borden Company and they will send you, free of charge, what you want, either instructions in your own language for feeding your baby, a baby book, or a recipe book telling you how to make tasty dishes with Eagle Milk. Jewish National Catholics

The Age of Wonder, hitherto confined to the unripe period of childhood, has now spread to all periods of human life and no age is free from its incubations and callow banalities.

The age that has now become distinguished for its superlative wisdom and canniness in a Pragmatic sense, is truly a very ass in matters spiritual and ideal. In a state of society that is distinguished by its madcap exploits, kaleidoscopic transformations and topsy-turvy values and appraisals it need not surprise us to see hogs soar gracefully through the empyrean or strong-pinioned eagles dragging heavily laden carts along the rutted highways. The fall of Divine Right, Majesty-hedged kings, the rise of new nationalities, and the submersion of the old, the ostentatious display of wealth by vulgar profiteers propelled in gilded mechanical chariots—all these and more do not leave on us the impress they once-on-a-time, in the not-so-long-ago, would have made. The race has put on mental (or, shall I not rather say, "sophistical"?) seven-league boots and bounded, in one short jump over a many-leagued distance in its development. It sprinted all at once from youthful callowness to cynical old age and the wisdom that inheres not in acquired knowledge but disillusionment, a wisdom that leadeth not to the portals of a fuller life but rather to that of an emptier, as well as speedier, death and dissolution.

Such being the state of perfection to which civilized, European society has achieved in the years of its post-war glories, we need not wonder if a number of Jews of the venerable, tradition-encrusted city of Prague, the city that had once on a time boasted its galaxy of genius and has become the matrix on which so many legends were born and tales of incomparable grandeur spun, have declared themselves during a recent census as "Jewish Nationalist Catholics."

It occurred to me that these worthies may be the descendants of that "Golem" which the famed rabbi of Prague had fashioned out of clay many, many centuries ago!

Peter the Hermit in Spats

"Good Christian people of America! Good citizens, beneficiary of our Occidental civilization, center your attention on the war in the Near East. This situation in the Near East may be the beginning of a great race war, the great, truly great war of the world; a war of Oriental races against Occidental races, a war of strange religions, strange standards of living and standards of morality and strange social castes and customs against civilization and the standards of life which determined our existence. It may be the beginning of another tide of Oriental invasion and yellow peril, a tide of terror, slaughter and devastation such as menaced Europe when the Turks carried the banners of Mohammed with cruelty and fanaticisms to the gates of Vienna. When the World War crisis comes we shall be unable to protect our civilization, our religion or even ourselves."

The above gems are not taken from dusty tomes reposing, unread and possessing, but an antiquarian interest, on dusty library shelves. It is not an excerpt from the call of Peter the Hermit, Pope Gregory or Richard the Lion-Hearted. Rather is it composed of gems culled from the recent call to arms issued by the valorous William Randolph the Worst in his most un-American of "American" sheets with which he plasters breakfast-food fashion or a la Munyan, the length and breadth of our loved land.

This hero of many and numberless fireside battles and boaster of endless catspaw political Waterloos (having been defeated for more offices than a thousand Methuselahs in their cumulative long lives could possibly fill) now proposes, as a last and desperate measure, the inauguration of an Eighth Crusade to be fought by well-tempered fountain pens and whittled goose quills.

"Goose quills" did you say? Ah, there is the creature the mention of whose very name carries a "homey" recollection, the creature with which I can claim some affinity! "On with the crusade! Ho, for the merry, merry show!"

A War Casualty

A well-known Jewish-American educator has recently expressed it as his opinion that the recent outburst of prejudice against the Jewish students at American colleges is not really due to the Jewishness of the student, but rather to the lack of same.

In the words of the writer, we now have a totally-new genre of Jewish student in the American school of higher learning. Whereas hitherto the Jewish academic youth was usually poor in worldly goods, but inversely rich in mental curiosity, and the insatiable hunger for learning that had ever been a characteristic of the race, the young man now comes to these hallowed halls, not so much to satisfy his mental hunger, but rather a snob's morbidity and the obsession for "fun" and indulgence.

Pa has prospered during the war and can well afford this "lark," the conferring of this badge of distinction upon the youth who has not grown up in an atmosphere of learning and the search for the "good, the true and the beautiful." Pa can sign checks for liberal figures and without quibbling as to the use they will be put to. And usually they

Simchas Torah

No madder spectacle could be imagined than the one that presented itself to my ken when I visited a certain Orthodox synagogue on Simchas Torah night. Bearded men of ample girth, all of them dressed in the conventional American garb, a garb than which nothing less smacking of the romantic and the primitive ages can be imagined, were clasped in each other's arms as they whirled seemingly endlessly around and around the brightly-lighted room. Their voices now rose to a shrill falsetto, and now fell to a faint pianissimo with the rise and fall of the melody which they intoned as they skimmed over the unpolished boards of the House of Prayer. Their fingers snapped merrily, their eyes rolled, while the ungainly-looking limbs seemed to gain in grace and swiftness in proportion as the dancing waxed more absorbing and eloquent. Their limbs acquired rhythm, spirit and elan, while their entire beings became as if transformed, as if transfused with a holy joy and ecstasy.

I recalled the early history of religious worship. I became aware of the fact how all the religious services of early man were accompanied by mad dancing, whirling and juggling, of body or extraneous objects. I minded me of the dancing dervishes that may even now be met in all lands where there is no God but Allah and Mohamed is His prophet." I recalled the religious dances of the Eastern and semi-Eastern peoples, of the rugged mountain-villages of the Caucasus, the Caspian Sea, as well as the villages of the semi-Oriental Russians. I was well aware that civilized man does not worship his God in that manner, and that it was exotic, strange, outlandish, backward and what not.

I know that it was entirely out of harmony with the clanging trolley cars without, the radiator coils, electric lights and a thousand of other things within. And yet I plead guilty of having enjoyed this brief reversion to an earlier and less sophisticated age and state of society!

A Low Rating

"No," said the Chief Mogul of the local charity society in confidence to the one who came to sound him out on an interesting proposition, "we can't nominate Cohen for the presidency. He's rated only at $40,000, and it's an unwritten law with us that no one worth under $100,000 shall occupy this office."

When the words of the Chief Mogul had been duly repeated into the ears of the would-be candidate for office by his accredited eaves-dropper. Mr. Cohen did not flinch nor rend his garments in despair. He immediately set to work cornering up the supplies of some everyday necessities in the town—shoes, bread, meat and the like—caused the wages of his factory "hands" to be properly "deflated" and their hours "inflated" proportionately. Made profitable "adjustments" in his tenement rentals, with the result that at the end of a year's labor his ledgers showed an $80,000 balance on the right side. Out of his earnings he donated $5,000 to a fund for the aid of indigent widows and orphans, $5,000 more to a hospital, and $2,000 for a fund to buy shoes for bare-footed boys and girls. When his accredited and official eaves-dropper dropped a gentle hint once more, had recited his chief's accomplishments and the Chief Mogul had duly verified his altered standing in the accredited commercial directory. Mr. Cohen was duly and properly elected to fill the honorable office of president of the charity organization in the town of B—, which is situated less than one million miles from the metropolis, as the crow flies.

Palestine a Good Clothing Market, Jerusalem Consul Reports

Washington (J. C. B.).—"At present there are no factories for ready-made clothing in Palestine, and such tailoring shops as exist are very small," reports Vice-Consul George C. Cobb from Jerusalem to the Department of Commerce. "Textiles form a very important item of Palestine imports, since the country is entirely dependent upon foreign made goods for its supply. The import of textiles for the year ending March 31, 1921, amounted to the high figure of £E1,300,000. Climatic conditions create an active demand for cotton goods, though these are outranked by woolen manufactures, it being estimated that of the total imports 45 per cent. are woolen goods, 35 per cent. cotton goods and 20 per cent. silk and other sorts.

"There are 700,000 potential consumers of manufactured goods within the frontier of Palestine, and a definite increase of this number will be made by several thousand adults arriving each year through immigration. From Palestine can also be directly supplied the demands of a neighboring population which, with increased trade efforts and communication development, should easily grow shortly into a total of three or more million people, mainly in the long strip of territory east of Syria and Palestine which merges into the Arabian Desert.

"At present clothes of occidental styles are worn by Europeans (mostly Jews) numbering at least 100,000, and a certain percentage of the Arab population living in the towns, numbering approximately 60,000. The former class is constantly increasing through immigration into the country, whereas the latter is being augmented through the gradual betterment of living standards and the adoption of occidental styles.

"Great Britain exports to Palestine more textiles than all other countries combined, and British standards, grades and prices have gained a strong hold on the population. Imports from England consist of ready-made clothing, woolens, worsteds and cotton goods. India supplies a cheap grade of cotton goods, Egypt largely Arab clothes and Japan silk goods. America's share in the import trade is negligible."

Rabbi Louis Wolsey has just completed 15 years with the Euclid Avenue Temple Congregation, of Cleveland, O. Rabbi Wolsey came to the congregation from Little Rock, Ark., when there were 185 members. Today the membership list numbers 1,165.

Poale Zion Sukkoth Meet Resented by Canadian Zionists

Toronto (J. C. B.).—A protest against the Poale Zion of America for arranging to hold their annual convention here on October 14, the eighth day of Sukkoth, has been issued by the Zionist Organization of Canada. Such disrespect for Jewish tradition, the Zionists maintain, will injure the cause. The socialist Zionists are reminded that when they last held their convention in Montreal on a Jewish feast day sentiment in Canada suffered a serious setback. The local arrangement committee of the Poale Zion is, however, going on with its preparations, which include a number of public meetings to be addressed by Colonel Wedgewood, the British M. P.

New York Jews Acclaim Their Veteran Hebrew Author—Committees That "Don't Get Out and Work"—Whose "National Farm School"?—Whose Child Is 'Hias'?

By GERSHON AGRONSKY

(Copyrighted, 1922, by Jewish Correspondence Bureau)

There is nothing unusual, perhaps, in the fact that a few thousand persons sought admittance to Carnegie Hall to pay tribute to Reuben Brainin, the dean of Hebrew writers, on the occasion of his sixtieth anniversary. Mr. Brainin is still in his prime, an impressive figure in the Jewish life of the metropolis, a passionate participant in all that is constructively and nationally Jewish, and for these reasons extremely popular. The hosts that gathered to acclaim him last Sunday evening may not all have followed his works, from his revolutionizing essay written forty-odd years ago to his recent analysis of the personality of the martyred Walter Rathenau on "What Is to Be Done?" The vicissitudes of this venerable author, who has wrought beautifully in all languages, but creatively and in a style peculiarly his own, in Hebrew, may not have been known to all who came to celebrate and to applaud. The very language which Mr. Brainin uses to express his choicest sentiments and ideas is a closed book to at least part of the vast audience. But the presence of that audience was in itself a living testimony of the reverence in which this author is held. Among the first of the school of new Hebrew writing he may be one of the last of the group which included many, many makers of books that will endure so long as there remain a striving to perpetuate the language symbolizing the pure, the aristocratic, if you will, of Jewish creativeness.

That the celebration was accompanied by a program peculiarly American and Jewish—"American" because it was thought necessary to hitch the celebration to the stars of the "Bimah" and the concert stage; "Jewish" because of the speeches which may or may not have exactly suited the occasion—was not Mr. Brainin's responsibility. He was there as the guest, partaking of the feast his hosts had provided. But the "feature" of the evening was probably none of the music or the oratory, but the outpouring of Jews of all classes. They assembled to testify to their abiding faith in the tongue in which the guest of honor had composed critical essays and biographical sketches enough to fill thirty volumes. Their presence was an earnest sign of their determination that Mr. Brainin's writings scattered over the seven seas be collected and preserved. They were there also to give expression to their gratitude to Mr. Brainin, who has never lost touch with the people, who labors in their midst day in and day out. Sharing their distress, he is always pointing upward and leading outward—to the eventual, the lasting solution, to the coveted spot in the East where, and perhaps only place, Hebrew will thrive with the Jewish people. For it was Brainin the indefatigable Zionist sage, who was celebrated on Sunday last as much as Brainin the veteran Hebrew publicist and author.

A welcome departure in the million dollar campaign of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropies, which was begun this week, was the frankness of its managers in publicly castigating the committees who would not "get out and work." Truths like these can do no harm to anybody, least of all to the volunteers. Those in charge were very wise in not chastising the community for failure to respond when at the end of the third day of the campaign it was found that only a quarter had been raised of the needed million. It is unthinkable that New York Jewry will decline to provide about 66 cents per capita for the support of ninety-one institutions, for that is about what a million dollars from a million and a half New York Jews amounts to. The trouble appeared to be that the committees had not tackled their job properly, and indications are that, following the public rebuke, the million dollars will be found without any difficulty.

IRISH REGIMENT HONORS JEWISH HEROES

Last Sunday the Veterans' Corps of the old 69th Regiment of this city unveiled a memorial tablet on the grounds of Temple Emanu-El cemetery at Salem Fields (Cypress Hills), in honor of the soldiers of the Jewish faith who served with the regiment and made the "supreme sacrifice" in France.

ers may be forgiven for showing some curiosity in the matter. The goal is, of course, one million dollars, a million being a nice, conveniently round figure. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf of Philadelphia, president and founder of the Doylestown school, announced at the twenty-fifth succoth pilgrimage that the drive for the silver jubilee fund had been started. One-half of the money is to be expended on greatly enlarging and improving the plant so as to teach, house and care for a student body many times the number hitherto enrolled annually. The other half is to be placed in the endowment fund, the interest of which is to lessen for the founder the necessity of going about for money to keep the Farm School going, as he has been obliged to do during the past twenty-five years.

All this being as it should be, one question pertinently obtrudes itself: The National Farm School is a Jewish farm school. The founder had a Jewish object in organizing it, the object being not merely to train Jewish young men as agriculturists, but to demonstrate that Jews are capable of success in farming. Why, then, not call the child by its name? Why "National Farm School"? Why not "Jewish Farm School, for example? Whose National Farm School is it, anyway?

There is yet another nation-wide "drive" which needs to be mentioned. It is that of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society, briefly and popularly known as the "Hias." The society modestly enough asked for a half million dollars, reporting the beginning of this week that one-fifth had been collected. The drive then ceases to be a whirlwind affair and becomes a sustained effort to raise enough money to keep the shelters on this side going and the welcoming fires on the other side burning for the refugee and the Jewish wanderer generally. But whether it is because the appeal has been purposely localized "downtown" or whether "uptown" Jewry does not care much for the kind of work the "Hias" is doing, the money has come so far principally from Jewish labor organizations, including even such as have Italian members, and not from the "upper classes." Which is obviously not the fault of the "Hias" or the Jewish trade unions and "downtown" Jewry as a whole.

Sixteenth Annual Meeting of the American Jewish Committee

The sixteenth annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee will be held at the Hotel Astor, Broadway and Forty-fourth street, in the city of New York on Sunday, November 12, 1922. The Executive Committee will submit a report of its activities during the past year and matters of vital interest to the Jews of America will be presented for discussion.

Successors to the following will be chosen: Officers to serve for one year, President Louis Marshall, Vice-Presidents Cyrus Adler, Julius Rosenwald, Treasurer Isaac W. Bernheim. Members of the Executive Committee, to serve for three years from January 1, 1923, Irving Lehman, Louis Marshall, A. C. Ratshesky, Isaac M. Ullman.

Successors to the following members are also to be chosen: Leonard Haas, Atlanta; Marion M. Travis, Tulsa; Harry Block, St. Joseph; Ben Selling, Portland, Ore.; Isaac Summerfield, St. Paul; Nat Stone, Milwaukee; B. Horwich, Chicago; Isaac W. Bernheim, Louisville; Ephraim Lederer, Philadelphia; Edward N. Calisch, Richmond; Louis M. Raffel, Waterbury; Charles H. Shapiro, Bridgeport, Conn. (deceased); Henry Lasker, Springfield; A. C. Ratshesky, Boston; Eugene Warner, Buffalo; Milton M. Adler, Newark; Isaac Alpern, Perth Amboy; Lewis Straus, Newark; Isaac W. Frank, Pittsburgh.

Members will also be chosen to succeed the present incumbents in New York city and to fill existing vacancies.

New Home for Aged Dedicated

The formal dedication exercises of the United Home for Aged Hebrews, located at No. 391 Pelham Road, New Rochelle, were held last Sunday afternoon in the presence of nearly 1,000 persons, most of them members affiliated with the United Krakauer Charity and Aid Society, under whose auspices the home will be maintained for the care of aged and indigent Hebrews.

The principal address was made by Borough President Julius Miller. Rabbi Israel Goldstein opened the proceedings with prayer, followed by an address of welcome by President S. J. Manne. Alexander Pfeiffer made a short address, as did Magistrate Edward Weil. Ferdinand Jacobson then turned over the keys of the building to Mr. Manne.

BROOKLYN NOTES

Brooklyn Section, Council of Jewish Women

Brooklyn Section, Council of Jewish Women, Mrs. Abraham H. Arons president, held its first meeting of the 1922-1923 season at Temple Beth Emeth, Church avenue and Marlborough road, Flatbush, on October 24. This meeting was "National Day" and Mrs. Oswald Schlockow was chairman. The chief topic of discussion was "Relationship of Local Sections to the National Council." Officers of the national organization were present, as well as presidents of nearby sections. A reception and tea to members and guests followed the meeting. Prior to the meeting the officers and directors entertained the national officers at luncheon at the Capitol Club of Flatbush.

Through its various committees the Brooklyn Section has planned to carry on its work on a greater scale than ever under the leadership of Mrs. Abraham H. Arons and the following committee chairmen: Americanization, Mrs. Edw. W. Everts; Big Sisters, Mrs. Joseph A. Seidman; Blind, Mrs. Arthur Mayer; Civic and Communal Affairs, Mrs. Jesse Wasserman; Crippled, Mrs. Victor W. Filler; Deaf and Defectives, Mrs. Mortimer Brenner, assisted by Mrs. Jerome D. Brooklyn Jewish Center to Resume Friday Night Lectures

The Brooklyn Jewish Center on Eastern Parkway and Brooklyn avenue will resume late Friday evening lectures this

Friday evening at 8.15 o'clock, when Rev. Dr. Alexander Lyons, minister of the Eighth Avenue Temple, who has returned from an extensive tour through Palestine, will speak on the subject, "Forward to Zion."

A class in the study of the Talmud will be held in the Center chapel on Saturday afternoons at 3 o'clock. Mr. B. Hirsh will be the instructor in this class. Beginning next Wednesday evening, November 1, at 8.30 o'clock, a course in the study of Jewish history will be given every Wednesday evening at that hour, under the instructorship of Mr. Joshua Goldberg.

A special children's service has also been instituted in the Center, and beginning this Sabbath morning the children will conduct their own religious services in the Center chapel in charge of the instructors of the Hebrew school. They will have their own cantor and officers, and be in full charge of the services.

Young Israel Aids "Join Week"

Direct results of the "Join Week" campaign conducted by the Friedlaender Education Conference were seen this week in the announcement of the Young Israel Synagogue, of Brownsville and East New York, that it will conduct classes in Hebrew, Jewish history, prophets, psalms and ethics for all who desire to pursue them. A Friday night forum will be conducted at the Hebrew Educational Society building. A new branch of Young Israel Synagogue is being formed at the Brooklyn Jewish Center.

The Young Israel Synagogue has elected the following new officers for the coming year: William M. Raphael, president; Reuben Weinstein, first vice-president; Blanche Flinker, second vice-president; Sarah M. Gross, treasurer; Sadie Englander, secretary; Cecelia

FUNNY, ISN'T IT?

By GEORGE LESTER

Don't you think this world is funny,
With its silly human race?
People, for a little money,
Risking ruin and disgrace.
Nearly everybody feeling
That his treatment is unfair;
Cheating, gouging, grafting, stealing,
Needless trouble everywhere.

Envy driving people crazy,
Gambling bringing fools to grief;
Men so careless or so lazy
That their children need relief;
Mothers from their babies turning
To enjoy forbidden things;
Few with patience to be earning
The reward contentment brings.

Men and women telling others
What they should or shouldn't think,
Sons who cause their gray-haired mothers
In the depths of grief to sink;
Laws and rules and regulations,
Wrangling, jangling, curses, tears;
Men in high and humble stations
Haunted by unholy fears.

Ignorance and superstition,
Robbing, riots and regret;
Many ills that no physician
Cures or can subdue as yet;
Jealousy, suspicion, lying,
Slander, sorrow and despair,
Hatred, hunger, sobbing, sighing,
Gallows and electric chair.

Evil aims, dark apprehensions,
Foolish haste and sad mistakes;
Sordid motives, false pretenses,
Needless pains and cruel aches;
Honor kicked aside for money,
Love lost for a little chink;
Don't you think the world is funny—
That is, if you ever think?

Rid Palestine of Anti-Zionist Officials Editor Hebrew Standard:

In your issue of The Hebrew Standard the 13th inst. there appeared a report from the Jewish Telegraph Agency that seventeen Jewish policemen were dismissed from the service in Palestine on account of failure to report for duty on Yom Kippur. It is easy to understand that there still exist many anti-Zionists in the Palestine government, and their object is to discourage the Jewish masses from helping to rebuild their National Home. As Palestine has been registered by the League of Nations as a "Jewish National Home," I fail to see why the Jewish agency in Palestine cannot get the power of the British government to discharge all anti-Zionist officials in Palestine. The foundation stone of our New-Zion must be solid until all anti-Zionists must be made to understand that what we have commenced must be finished. If any doubt these words let them study the Jewish past and they will understand that our future must bring us success in all our undertakings. "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper; and every tongue that shall rise against thee in judgment thou shalt condemn." (See Isaiah 54:17). HARRY GREENBERG. New Haven, Conn., Oct. 20, 1922.

A Plea for the Rothschild Hospital Editor Hebrew Standard:

May I ask you to be good enough to give liberal space in your paper to the following plea for the Rothschild Hospital, quoted from a letter from Dr. Rubinow, the director of the Hadassah Medical Organization, dated September 18, 1922?

"Of course, I do not for a moment mean to imply that the H. M. O. has a monopoly upon the generosity of Jewish contributors nor has it any intention of establishing a monopoly of medical work in Palestine. The important thing is that first of all it is criminal to undertake to establish new institutions so long as the existence of the old and efficient ones is not at all guaranteed. The establishment of another hospital side by side with Hadassah at this time would make the existence of both less certain. Secondly, the private interests involved in the creation of a gynecological hospital under Dr. Biskind's patronage are so obvious as not to require any proof. Thirdly, the very necessity for a special women's hospital of this size is very badly exaggerated and surely the need of such a hospital cannot be compared with the need of maintaining Jewish hospitals in other cities. At the time when other hospitals in Tiberias and perhaps in Safed may have to be closed, when the existence of a hospital in Haifa is uncertain, it is criminal to establish an additional hospital in Jerusalem, which, of all the cities, is best provided with hospital facilities." ROSE G. JACOBS, Chairman Publicity. New York, Oct. 21, 1922.

Paris (J. T. A. To Lay Cornerstone of Beth Israel Hospital

Elaborate preparations are being made for the laying of the cornerstone of Beth Israel Hospital Sunday, October 29. The cornerstone of the old building will be transferred to the foundation of the new structure at Seventeenth street and Livingston place.

The hospital, which is being erected at a cost of $3,000,000, will accommodate 500 patients, with private rooms for all. Every room will be wired for X-ray, electro-cardiography, physiotherapy apparatus, Alapine sun lamp, suction, pressure and high frequency. There will also be outlets and inlets for portable baths.

One floor will be given over to attractively furnished rooms, arranged en suite, to accommodate members of the patients' families. There will also be ten large operating rooms and a floor devoted to laboratory and research work.

Among those prominently associated with the hospital are the following: Joseph Cohen, president of the hospital; I. L. Phillips, chairman of the building committee; Louis J. Frank, B. K. Marcus, Reuben Sadowsky, David A. Ansbacher, Morris Asinof, Harry Fischel, William Fischman, Isaac Gilman, Raphael Hurwitz, L. J. Ladin, S. C. Lampport, Adolph Lewisohn, Abraham Rothstein, Otto A. Cabinet Change Will Not Affect British Policy in Palestine, Says Colonel Wedgwood

Col. Josiah C. Wedgwood, M. P., vice-president of the British Labor party, who is now touring the United States in the interests of the Palestine Foundation Fund (Keren Hayesod) in a statement issued through the headquarters of the fund on the present political situation in England, says that the change of government will produce no change in British policy in Palestine. He believes further that the Palestine issue will not figure in the campaign in case there should be a general election at the present time.

"The Balfour Declaration," said Col. Wedgwood, "has become an integral part of British foreign policy and no party will declare itself against it. In any case such opposition would find no support in the English electorate. The Labor party is firm for the complete and speedy realization of a policy which shall enable the unhindered development of Palestine as the national home of the Jewish people. The party is opposed to all restrictions on immigration and is in favor of a liberal constitution which shall be in the interests of the general population and of the Zionist cause."

Jewish Chaplaincy Association

On Thursday evening an important meeting of the Committee of Twenty-one was held in the Central Jewish Institute. The president, Nathan J. Miller, presided and besides him there attended Rabbis Ephraim Frisch, Nathan Stern, Clifton H. Levy, Hon. Samuel D. Levy, Mrs. Joseph Mayor Asher, Mrs. S. K. Glauber, Messrs. N. Taylor Phillips, Alexander U. Zinke and Joseph Lyon Andrews.

By invitation of the president, Dr. Maurice H. Harris and Mrs. Mortimer M. Menken also attended, so as to confer in relation to the Jewish Board of Guardians.

The meeting addressed itself largely to the question of whether it was best in the community interest to merge all chaplaincy work or to organize the work in welfare and kindred institutions independently of the correctional and penal institutions now under the jurisdiction of the Jewish Board of Guardians, of which Mr. Mortimer L. Schiff is president.

From surveys submitted to the meeting it developed that in the non-penal institutions alone there were upwards of 4,500 Jewish persons to be cared for. At the conclusion of the meeting it was resolved to arrange for a further conference with the Jewish Board of Guardians.

Demand Britain Clear Out of Palestine

London (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—Outlining the policy of the new administration, the Daily Express, always an opponent of the British Zionist policy, demands that Britain "cease to protect the Jewish Republic autocracy by means of British bayonets."

The Daily Mail underlines that the main issue is whether the Conservatives will clear out of Mesopotamia and Palestine.

These and similar views notwithstanding, it is understood on high authority that no change is contemplated in the foreign policy until after the elections.

That the question of Britain's adherence to the Mesopotamia and Palestine mandates will be an issue in the approaching elections appears to be indisputable. What will happen in the meantime under Bonar Law's premiership is a matter of conjecture.

The Zionists take courage in the fact that Andrew Bonar Law is not unfriendly to Zionism. Some apprehension is felt, however, in Zionist circles over the reported inclusion of Sir Joynson Hicks in the Bonar Law Cabinet, and that Lord Balfour resigned from the government out of loyalty to Lloyd George.

Rabbi Wise to Address Harvard "Liberals"

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise will address the Harvard Liberal Club at Boston, Mass., during the last week in November. The meeting will be open to the public, and Dr. Wise will take as his subject, "The Race Question."

An opera entitled, "In and Out," written by Edwin R. Meiss, of Cincinnati, O., has been accepted by the University of Michigan Union to be staged by its opera company in various cities during a tour of the United States. Joseph Cowen, Zionist Leader, Resigns

London (J. C. B.).—Joseph Cowen, veteran English Zionist, has resigned as a member of the Executive of the World Zionist Organization, it is announced. Mr. Cowen, it is learned, offered his resignation several weeks ago, but was induced by Dr. Weizmann not to press it until after the "Little Congress" which was held at Carlsbad. It is stated, however, that Mr. Cowen will remain in touch with the Zionist leaders, and that he has not relinquished the chairmanship of the Keren Hayesod in England.

Dr. M. D. Eder, a member of the Palestine branch of the Zionist Executive and one of the first members of the Zionist Commission to Palestine, is not returning to Jerusalem.

Mr. Cowen's resignation and the fact that Dr. Eder is not to return to the Palestine office have given rise to disquieting speculation about another crisis in the Zionist Executive. The further fact that these two were, besides Dr. Weizmann, virtually the only Englishmen on the Executive, is also referred to with some misgiving.

Congregation Kehillath Israel—Mr. Polack Resigns Presidency

The winter work of Congregation Kehillath Israel has already begun. The school registration is continuing till November 1 and promises to pass 100. There is being held a weekly class for adults in Pentateuch with Rashi under the guidance of Mr. Hailperin. The boy scout troop held a bazaar on the lawn of the synagogue on Saturday evening, October 21, and on Sunday, October 22, which was very successful. A girl scout troop is now being contemplated. The Sabbath morning services of the school have again been organized under the able leadership of Mr. Eisenberg.

At the last meeting of the Congregation Mr. Isaac Polack, who had been president of the congregation for five years, refused to accept renomination. Mr. Joseph Rosen was thereupon elected president, while, on the motion of Mr. Noot, Mr. Polack was unanimously chosen honorary president. The other officers are Mr. Max Zissman, vice-president; Mr. R. Sacchs, treasurer; Mr. William Goldman, financial secretary; Mr. Emanuel Kutz, recording secretary.

Mudania Agreement Cancels Mandate, Arabs Tell Samuel

Jerusalem (Jewish Telegraphic Agency).—That Mudania armistice agreement abolishes the Turkish treaty signed at Sevres, which is the foundation for the British mandate for Palestine based on the Balfour declaration, is the statement submitted to Sir Herbert Samuel by the Arab Executive Committee. The Palestine Arabs cannot accept as fundamental any government measures before the new treaty is signed, they declare. They are consequently sending a delegation to the approaching peace conference in the hope that the conference may reconsider the mandate.

Meanwhile many Arabs are refusing to fill out the census forms, preferring to pay the fine imposed for non-compliance with the registration law.

Contributions of Jews to Hygiene

The Jewish Publication Society of America announces that the time limit set for the delivery of manuscripts dealing with "Contributions of Jews to Hygiene" expires November 1, 1922.

In March, 1921, the society offered a prize of $1,000 for an original study in the English language dealing with "Contributions of Jews to Hygiene." This sum was placed at the disposal of the society by Mr. Jesse W. Gitterman of Boston and Mr. Joseph L. Gitterman of New York city, who established a trust fund in memory of their parents, Henry and Diana L. Gitterman, for the purpose of offering a prize from time to time for the best essay or study upon some subject connected with the history of the Jews or their contributions to the general purposes of modern civilization.

This competition is open to the members of the faculties and the students of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, of the Hebrew Union College and of the Dropsie College for Hebrew and Cognate Learning, and the members of the faculties and the graduate students of universities of the United States.

The study is expected to be thorough, popular in presentation and expressed in good English. The work must contain not less than 40,000 words nor more than 60,000 words.

It must be an original work and one not printed or published heretofore.

Jews of Rovno Give 40,000,000 Marks for Russian War Relief

One of the most extraordinary items in David M. Bressler's diary of his investigation of Poland as a commissioner of the American Jewish Relief Committee is the discovery he made that the Jews of Rovno subscribed over 40,000,000 marks for the relief of Russian famine sufferers.

Ten thousand refugees have poured into the town, which is the largest business center in Poland near the Russian border. While it escaped pogroms and war-wreckage, it was caught in the general disaster. Most of the refugees are widows and orphans from other towns and suburbs where pogroms occurred. The influx of these refugees have rendered the housing facilities inadequate; the hospital has had to be rebuilt and re-equipped by the Joint Distribution Committee and barracks and food stations set up for re-immigrants. A bathhouse is greatly needed, and the boycott against Polish goods adds to the depression.

Yet the appeal for the Russian famine sufferers did not fall on deaf ears when it was made in Rovno. "They will pinch themselves to give bread to others less fortunately circumstanced, particularly as they leave those terrible war days behind," is Mr. Bressler's comment.

Dr. O. M. Shere, 44, one of the founders of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society and for many years chairman of its medical advisory board, died Wednesday at Denver, Colo., following an operation. An immigrant to the United States from Russia at 18, he settled in Denver in 1893, worked his way through college despite hardships and imperfect knowledge of English and soon became one of the foremost surgeons of Colorado. He advanced the theory and demonstrated in practice that surgery could be used successfully in tuberculosis of the lungs. Several operations of this kind were performed by him.

Labor Exchange in Palestine
 Berlin (J. C. B. Service).—Messrs. David Yellin and Tchernowitz of the Waad Leumi (National Council of Jews in Palestine), who are now in Berlin, have submitted a memorandum to the Executive of the Jewish World Relief Conference stressing the importance of establishing an up-to-date labor exchange in Palestine. The memorandum states that for this purpose the Waad Leumi founded an organization bureau, in whose work various organizations of employers and workers in Palestine are taking part. It is intended to open branches in all towns and colonies, especially devoted to finding employment for the newly arrived immigrants. The rate of immigration into Palestine being based on the amount of unemployment in the country, the memorandum points out, the successful working of an effective labor exchange will, by decreasing unemployment, aid immigration into Palestine.

The Executive of the Jewish World Relief Conference, after considering this memorandum, has decided to grant material support to this undertaking of the Waad Leumi and to direct the attention of all organizations in touch with the Jewish World Relief Conference to the importance of the Palestine Labor Exchange in the work of reconstruction in Palestine.

Sees Restraining Hand in Kaiser's Omission of Jews
 That the former Kaiser must have submitted to the judgment of some "cautious friend" in omitting any reference to Jewish influence with Masonry in bringing on the war, as is usually the case with all expounders of this "familiar theory," is the opinion of Elmer Davis, reviewing one of the concluding chapters of the Kaiser's memoirs in the New York "Times."

"One is inclined to suspect that the imperial manuscript has in this passage been edited by some cautious friend," writes Mr. Davis, "for it omits any mention of the Jewish influence which is coupled with international Masonry in all other expositions of this familiar theory. A number of reports, some of them quite direct, have represented William as believing that the war was at bottom a great Jewish conspiracy against monarchy and Christianity. The absence of any reference to the Jews and the caution shown in the treatment of Masonry are so unlike William as he has shown himself in the rest of the volume that the restraining hand of some reviser in his own circle is the most plausible in-

Jewish Temporary Shelter at Yonkers Dedicated
 The dedication of the new home of the Jewish Temporary Shelter for Friendless Children at 523 Riverside avenue, Yonkers, was formally dedicated last Sunday afternoon. Mayor Walter N. Taussig delivered an address of welcome.

Judge Samuel D. Levy, Benjamin B. Greller, Dr. Nathan Krass and Mark Eisner were other speakers. The Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band furnished music.

Rabbi Simon Heimlich Enthusiastic Over Food and Treatment of Jews on "Berengaria"

When Rabbi Simon Heimlich arrived from Hungary on the big Cunard "Berengaria" the things he was most enthusiastic about were the kosher food served in the Cunard's immigrant hotel in Cherbourg, the kosher service aboard the ship and the courteous treatment accorded the upward of 200 Jewish passengers by the stewards and crew.

"I was treated like a king," he declared.

In speaking of his trip Rabbi Heimlich said:
 "Because I was a Jew, more than anything else, Cunard Line agents saw that I met with no difficulties on my way from Hungary to Cherbourg. At the France port I met one of the directors of the line and he enlisted my services in establishing a perfect kosher kitchen in the Atlantic Hotel, where travelers on the Cunard and other steamship lines undergo quarantine examination, the stop-over compelling a delay of several days in accordance with the law. Jewish passengers were housed and fed gratis here by the Cunard Line. This is the rule of the company.

"With the assistance of another rabbi I managed to get the Jewish section of the hotel in perfect working order. Everything asked for was immediately supplied by Cunard representatives. The co-operation of the company made it possible for us to celebrate our holidays in the hotel without hitch or hindrance and many passengers will look back to that time with joyful gratitude toward the Cunard Line. It was the first time such services were held in Cherbourg. Orthodox Jews would have starved during the quarantine delay were it not for the establishment of the kosher kitchen, for they would not eat other than kosher food. You can imagine their happiness at being properly fed and at being treated with the kindest consideration.

"On the 'Berengaria' every effort was made to satisfy our people. The meat was kosher. There was an abundance of all kinds of fruit. My meals were cooked in the third class kitchen and sent up to my stateroom. Not wishing to impose upon good nature, I went down to the third class for many of my meals instead of having them sent to me, and found my people enjoying their meals with great relish and all getting as much as they wished to eat.

"It is highly commendable, this effort of the Cunard Line to cater to the religious regulations of the Jews. I am going to scatter broadcast my advice to my people to use this line either to or from Europe. The Cunard Line has a great name in Europe and carries more of our people from Cherbourg than any other line.

"In addition to the big, clean, comfortable hotel in which the line houses passengers in Cherbourg, ground for a synagogue is to be broken and an imposing edifice erected at once. Ground will also be set aside for a cemetery for Jews who die in transit or in the port. Of course, the use for this will be only occasional, but it shows the kindly foresight of the Cunard Line."

While in New York Rabbi Heimlich will reside with his friend, Mr. M. Webberman of 238 Rivington street. He is listed for lectures in many big cities and towns throughout the United States.

The expulsion of Deputy Hirschhorn from the Jewish Litterateurs' Society has been reconsidered at a general meeting of the association at Warsaw, Poland. A resolution was adopted, 42 to 7, censuring the deputy for his attack on the minorities election bloc, but readmitting him to membership. Deputy Hirschhorn is warned, however, that should he continue to attack the bloc, with which a majority of the Jewish parties have fused, he will be expelled for good.

After considerable discussion and negotiation, it has been decided between the three Jewish groups contesting the elections to the Lithuanian Sejm (Zionists, Achduth and Folkists) that there shall be a unification in all constituencies with a view to preventing Jewish votes being lost. The unification will apply chiefly in the matter of pooling the votes cast for the Jewish candidates who have failed to secure election. Under the system of proportional representation, under which the elections are being held, this decision means that the Jews will be represented in the Sejm practically to their full strength in proportion to their numbers among the population of the country.

THE HIGHEST CHOICE Do not let it be merely a question of initial cost when you make your choice of pianos. The matchless music of the Steinway has lifted it above the "price" atmosphere for all time. It is true, the Steinway does cost a little more. But no one who owns a Steinway has ever a shadow of regret for the price paid. It is but little higher than the cost of other pianos, and the Steinway carries within its perfect mechanism the guarantee of a satisfaction beyond all price. For more than three score years it has been the ideal of the greatest music masters of their day. So the Steinway must command your respectful attention before your choice is made.
